Coghlan sues school, fraternities after fall

A former sorority pledge paralyzed by a fall after rush week activities has sued UI, the state Board of Education and Greek organizations. Rejena Coghlan, 20, and four family members filed suit Friday in 4th District Court in Boise. The complaint comes almost exactly two years after the accident involving the Spokane freshman. School officials said Coghlan, then 18, was served alcohol at two fraternities during parties, and later fell intoxicated from a fire escape at the Alpha Phi sorority house. "Plaintiff Rejena Coghlan prior to Aug. 19, 1993, was a vivacious, happy 18-year-old who was energetic and outgoing," the suit reads. "Today, Plaintiff Rejena Coghlan sits in a wheelchair, paralyzed from the waist down." "The university was expected to provide a reasonably safe education in a reasonably safe environment for paying students such as Coghlan," the lawsuit says. Defendants also include the national and local chapters of Beta Theta Pi, Sigma Alpha Epsilon and

Pi Kappa Alpha fraternities, and Alpha Phi sorority. Linda M. Wilson and Chris Wuthrich, university employees and Greek advisers, also are listed. The suit said Coghlan went to a "Jack Daniels Birthday" party at the Sigma Alpha Epsilon house, co-sponsored by Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity. She later attended the "50 Ways To Lose Your Liver" party at Beta Theta Pi fraternity. Wilson and Wuthrich were at the parties to monitor them. Wilson saw Coghlan and congratulated her for pledging Alpha Phi, the suit said. The advisers knew or should have known that Coghlan was intoxicated and should have taken action at the time, according to the complaint. Coghlan was helped back to her sorority and put to bed, but was discovered the next day in the bushes below the fire escape. The damages for medical expenses so far are more than $150,000 and the loss of past wages is over $25,000. All other damage amounts are to be set at trial. At UI, Coghlan's accident prompted sanctions against two fraternities, a reform movement in the Greek system and school-sponsored dry activities during the week before classes. "We do not discuss personnel or student-related issues related to potential litigation," said Vice President for Student Affairs Hal Godwin. "Today's the first day I've heard of it," said Mike Larsen, the state Board of Education's attorney, on Monday. "We'll be obtaining a copy of the complaint and then making the board aware of it."

Rush '95 brings new crop of students to campus

Jennifer Eng
Staff

Women and men have been roaming the streets of the University of Idaho's campus since the 18th of August. To the untrained eye the onslaught appears to be a melee of nervous young people searching for something unknown to the onlookers. However to the experienced observer, it is the traditional first signs of school starting-fraternity and sorority rush. Rush has been a tradition on UI's campus for almost a century. Sorority rush which ended on the 23rd of August saw one of it's largest number of women going through rush in several years. A total of 251 women participated in rush with 241 pledging one of the seven chapters on campus. This number was almost 100 more than the previous year. Fraternity rush which ends on Aug. 26, is having an average year with about 300 men going through the process. Many of the fraternity men feel confident about this year's numbers even though they are not up significantly for them this year. Overall, sorority members felt that rush went very well. Pi Beta Phi rush Chairperson

Tandy Lartz commented that even though rush is a difficult process, everybody did quite well. Lartz said, "Panhellenic Council did a wonderful job. Individual houses only really need to concern themselves with one chapter while Panhellenic Council must deal with all seven." Despite some complaints that women's rush is too organized, many feel very strongly that the organizational skills of Panhellenic Council are largely responsible for how smoothly the process went this year. Chris Wuthrich, the assistant Greek adviser, commented that rush went very well for the sororities. Wuthrich explained that the increase in women may be due to the more thorough recruitment process that the Greek system implemented just a few years prior, as well as some policy changes regarding alcohol. In the past two years the Greek system has developed a new focus in regards to alcohol and other wellness issues. Wuthrich commented that rushees may feel more comfortable with the shift that the Greek system has made away from the dominance of alcohol. Vandal Fridays brought young people to

Job hunting made easier with new placement programs

Student job seekers can stop running around campus and around town, thanks to the new Student Employment Program and the Job Location and Development Program. The SEP office opened Monday in the Student Union, where it provides service to students seeking on-campus employment, said coordinator Patty Houle. Campus employment information and paperwork, from job listings and applications to I9 and W4 forms, is becoming centralized at the SEP office.

"I want the students to know that we are here—that we are here for them," Houle said. Positions available in various university departments are posted on the SEP job board. Students fill out one application and specify all the positions of interest to them. SEP sends the application to the departments offering the positions the student has selected. The departments then review the applications and contact the students they are interested in hiring. SEP is also putting job information into a homepage, which students can access from any computer on campus. The homepage should be ready for student use by the first week of classes, Houle said. She also hopes to provide mini-workshops for students this semester. The workshops will deal with topics such as work ethic, success and career plans. The Job Location and Development Program serves students seeking off-campus employment, said Darcy Gorgas, who coordinates the program. Off-campus job listings are posted at the west entrance of the Student Union. Students can fill out a registration form with JLD in the Financial Aid Office, where they can obtain employer information. Applicants are pre-screened by JLD, but the employer does the actual interviewing and hiring, said Gorgas. The registration forms enable JLD to contact students about other openings which may be of interest to them. "It's exciting, it's challenging and it's rewarding to find employment for a student," said Gorgas. The SEP office can be reached at 885-4500 from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Friday. JLD is open Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. (special arrangements can be made if necessary), and appointments can be made by calling 885-2778. Both Houle and Gorgas will be at Palousafest tomorrow to provide students with information about their programs.

Students now have more resources to find jobs on and off-campus. The SEP and JLD have listings of available jobs.

Dole 'willing to talk' about delaying Ruby Ridge hearings

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP)—Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole on Thursday said he's "willing to talk" about delaying hearings into the deadly standoff with white separatist Randy Weaver at Ruby Ridge, Idaho.

At the same time, Dole said he was impatient with the sluggish pace of the Justice Department's review of the case and what he said "has probably been a massive coverup" of the incident.

"We may be able to coordinate something, but they've had all this time to investigate and nothing's happened," said Dole, at a news conference. "They wouldn't be investigating now if the Senate hearing were not imminent."

The 1992 incident saw Weaver's wife and son and a deputy U.S. marshal killed. Weaver moved back to Iowa after being acquitted of murder and conspiracy charges in connection with the marshal's death.

A panel headed by Sen. Arlen Specter is set to begin hearings Sept. 6, but earlier Thursday Justice Department officials asked that the hearing be delayed while an internal investigation is conducted.

"I'd be willing to talk to the attorney general and to Senator Specter," said Dole. "Obviously, we're not trying to discredit anybody's investigation. We're not trying to, in effect, interfere with some judicial process that might impact on some individual."

Specter was in Iowa last weekend for a private meeting with Weaver, who is set to be a witness at the hearings.

"I don't think you'd have any Justice Department investigation if the Senate hadn't threatened to get into it," he said. "Now they want to continue what has probably been a massive coverup and never let the public know precisely what happened."

Sentencing set for former BSU basketball player

BOISE, Idaho (AP)—Sentencing will be Sept. 20 for former Boise State basketball player Bernard Walker, who pleaded guilty to forging a signature on a credit card to buy $337 worth of merchandise.

Walker, 22, pleaded innocent and trial was scheduled to start Monday. But he changed his plea and admitted one count of forgery. A second count was dropped.

Walker faces up to 14 years in prison and a $50,000 fine, but his attorney said he expected Walker to get a suspended sentence.

Walker, a 6-2 forward for Boise State, was in his second season with Boise State when he was charged with forgery and dropped from the squad. The school's roster showed his hometown as Roland Heights, Calif. He played two years at Rio Hondo Junior College in California and was the school's all-time leading scorer.

Walker averaged 8.3 points per game in the 1993-94 season with a high of 24 against Idaho State that year

Retired UI professors donate land to benefit College of Education

MOSCOW, Idaho (AP)—Two retired professors of physical education have donated 40 acres of timberland on Moscow Mountain to establish a unitrust to benefit the UI College of Education's Division of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance.

Edith Betts and Hazel Peterson, both now living in Salem, Ore., have each donated their interest in the land, which currently is valued at $191,650 to create the Edith Betts and Hazel Peterson Charitable Remainder Unitrust. Upon their deaths, income from the unitrust will benefit HPERD students or graduate students by helping cover the cost of tuition, textbooks or attending professional conferences. Proceeds from the unitrust also will be used to help faculty in improving the teaching and learning process.

The retired professors said they made the gift "in light of our nearly 50 enjoyable teaching years associating with students, faculty and staff at UI."

Betts retired as a professor emeritus of physical education at UI in 1983 after 32 years at the university. She served as chair of the physical education for Women Department from 1969 to 1974.

Peterson retired as a professor emeritus of physical education in 1987 after 16 years on the UI faculty.

Texas soldiers begin to head out for Kuwait

FORT HOOD, Texas (AP)—The waiting ended Tuesday for soldiers headed for military exercises in Kuwait.

About 1,300 soldiers of the 1st Cavalry Division were being airlifted overseas from Gray Army Air Field. Four chartered flights departed Tuesday and a fifth was scheduled to leave at 9 p.m., the Army said.

The deployment for exercises in the Mideast, known as Operation Intrinsic Action, was originally planned for October, but was moved up because of reports of pending military activity by Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein.

"Once again you've shown the greatness of the American soldier, and his and her ability to react to any situation," Gen. John Tilelli, Forces Command commander, told the troops minutes before one plane left about noon.

The planes were originally slated to move out Sunday, but a Clinton administration spokesman said anonymously that bureaucratic delays coupled with flight crew rest rules held up the flight plan.

The first planeload of materials with its advance party of 80 soldiers has already arrived in Kuwait, Lt. Col. Randy Schoel said.

U.S. deaths won't halt search for peace in Bosnia

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP)—Robert C. Frasure, the envoy to Bosnia who was killed last weekend, received a tearful eulogy from his 16-year-old daughter on Tuesday and a tribute from Secretary of State Warren Christopher.

"I took him for granted. ... I never told him I loved him," said Sarah Frasure in farewell to her father.

"One question I will always ask myself is, Why," she said, speaking before Frasure's flag-draped coffin at a military chapel near Arlington National Cemetery. "I know I will never have the answer to my questions."

Frasure, a Morgantown, W.Va., native, was one of three American diplomats killed on Saturday when their vehicle plunged off a treacherous mountain road into a ravine in Bosnia. They were on their way to peace talks in Sarajevo.

Christopher vowed to keep up pressure for the elusive Bosnian peace the career diplomat was seeking at the time of his death.

"I promise we'll keep working on it until we bring all the cows home," Christopher said in funeral services at Fort Myer, Va.

Announcements

Non-traditional student reception

The Women's Center will be sponsoring a reception for new and continuing non-traditional students from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. today in the Student Union Vandal Lounge.

The purpose of this reception is to welcome new and returning students who are not attending the university immediately following high school to the university, and give them an opportunity to meet members of the faculty, staff, administration and each other.

The partners and children of non-traditional students are welcome to attend.

Parks and Rec. taking registration for fall youth, adult sports

The Moscow Parks and Recreation will be taking registration for youth flag football and youth soccer through Sept. 1.

Flag football is offered to children grades 3 through 6. The program runs from mid-September through the end of October. The fee is $14.75 for city residents and $15.75 for non-city residents.

Soccer has separate leagues for boys and girls. The girls league is offered for grades 1 through 6; the boys league is offered for grades 1-4. Seventh grades and boys grades 5-7 will be placed in a combined league. Third grade girls will have the option to play in either the Girls Elementary League or Boys Middle League. Fees are $8.50 for city residents and $9.50 for non-city residents.

Volunteer coaches and paid officials are needed in both sports.

An adult recreation volleyball league organizational meeting will be held at 6 p.m. Aug. 30 at the Eggan Youth Center, 1515 East D Street. A team manager or representative should attend this important meeting in order to be ready for team registration on Sept. 6. For more information contact the Parks and Recreation Office at 883-7085.

Volunteer Fair to be held August 31

Bridges: Community Service Learning will be sponsoring a Volunteer Fair from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Aug. 31 in the Student Union.

The Fair will provide a chance for community agencies to present information on the services they provide to the Moscow area, and an opportunity for UI students, staff and faculty to assist their efforts through volunteer service. Bridges will also begin its campus-wide United Way Campaign at this time.

Tables, electrical hook-ups, and volunteer assistance for set-up will be available as well as a limited number of VCRs and monitors. The Student Union will provide popcorn and sno-cones to fair goers.

To reserve a table at this event contact Tanya Atwood Hoover, Coordinator, Bridges at 885-5756.

Humane Society Rummage Sale today through Sunday

The Humane Society of the Palouse is holding their 18th annual rummage sale from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. today and Saturday and from 10 a.m. to noon Sunday at the Latah County Fairgrounds.

Proceeds from the sale will benefit the society and specifically the new shelter on White Avenue in Moscow. Volunteers are needed to sort items and staff the sale. For more information please contact Cindy Phelps at 882-1110.

Fossil class offered

"Fossils and Geology of the Clark Fork Area" will be offered Sept. 1-4 at the College of Forestry, Wildlife and Range Science Clark Fork Field Campus. Classes will begin at the field campus in Clark Fork, with an introduction to the day's field trip, followed by a car caravan to geologic sites.

Deadline for advance registration is Aug. 29 and enrollment is limited. The fee ranges from $14 to $24. Participants may stay overnight at the field campus for a nominal charge. Optional academic credit is available. For complete information or to register, contact the field campus at (208) 266-1452.

DIAL PREREG available to students

Correct student addresses and telephone numbers will not be in the Campus Directory (Blue Key) if they are not updated on the on-line registration/address update system.

The address update system is available throughout the year, not only during pre registration. To comply with the UI Student Records Policy, addresses are to be updated/changed by students, not by departments or colleges.

Students wishing to restrict access to local and/or permanent address in the Campus Directory should submit a written request to the Registrar's Office prior to Sept. 11. For more information, contact the Registrar's Office Admin Annex 104 or call 885-6731.

Staff Appreciation and Information Fair set

A Staff Appreciation and Information Fair will be held from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sept. 8 in the Student Union Ballroom. The event is free of charge and will feature information booths with representatives of various campus activities, groups and offices that offer benefits to staff members. Door prizes, gift certificates and refreshments will be offered.

Budweiser Clydesdales to visit Pullman

On Aug. 29, the world-famous Budweiser Clydesdales will visit Pullman. The team will be harnessed and hitched to the famous red beer wagon at the Hitchcock Research Track horse barn on the southeast edge of the Washington State University campus. The team will then begin a parade at 4 p.m., ending at the Cougar Plaza on Grand Avenue. The public can expect to see the eight-horse hitch from about 5 p.m. to 7 p.m.

UI offers faculty/staff weight control program

UI faculty and staff members can now enroll for LEARN (lifestyle, exercise, attitudes, relationships, nutrition) Program for Weight Control. The 16 group sessions will be held Wednesdays from 4 p.m. to 5 p.m. beginning Aug. 30 in the Student Health Center conference room.

Men and women on the UI faculty and staff are welcome to enroll, and men over 40 and women over 50 should do so with doctor's approval. The class is recommended for those who are about 25-30 pounds overweight or greater.

A $120 non-refundable fee for the class is payable in advance. Maximum enrollment per class is 15 persons. Pre-enrollment interviews are required to ensure readiness for participation. For reservations or more information call 885-6693.

New Student Tradition Night set

New Student Tradition Night 1995 will be held at 6:30 p.m. Aug. 27, at the UI Shattuck Arboretum. The event will offer UI's new and transfer students the opportunity to participate in a variety of activities, and free soda and pizza from Pizza Hut will be served. A new compact disc player will be given away to one student, and more than 400 students will go home with T-shirts commemorating their attendance.

The newcomers will hear from a variety of university guests including interim President Thomas O. Bell, head volleyball Coach Tome Hilbert, head football Coach Chris Tormey, members of the football and volleyball teams and the UI Marching Band.

All new or transfer students are invited to attend. In the event of bad weather, festivities will be held in the Student Union Ballroom.

Bell decides to take one last adventure with UI

Shelby Dopp

Thomas Bell was appointed University of Idaho interim president in late May of 1995 and will serve until June 30, 1996. He follows UI President Elisabeth Zinser, who took over her duties as chancellor of the University of Kentucky-Lexington on July 15.

Bell is married to Martha Grace, who is also known as Jody. The couple has four children, all of whom are alumni of UI except one.

In 1953, he received his bachelor's degree in Secondary Education and his master's degree in Educational Administration in 1957 at Idaho State University. He went on to receive his doctorate in Educational Administration at Utah State University in 1966.

Bell has served half of his 42 years in education at the university. To name a few of the administrative positions, he has served as the dean of the College of Education from 1980-1984; vice president for academic affairs and research from December 1984 to June 1991; and then as provost of UI from July 1991-1994. In 1994, he retired from his position as provost, but he is back again to take on the university for one more round.

Argonaut: Why did you come out of retirement to act as interim president for the university?

Bell: Basically because I was asked to by the Board of Regents. I've invested probably half of my 42 years in education to Idaho. I believe in the institution. I believe it's a great resource. It's a very exciting time to have in my retirement to go on one more adventure with my university.

Argonaut: Are you going to put yourself in the running as the actual president?

Bell: Definitely not. This is a one year total commitment by Jody and myself. Come June 30, 1996, we have other engagements. We'll always be a part of the university. It's always been a part of our lives.

Argonaut: As interim president are you able to create new policies, or are you only allowed to make decisions on current ones?

Bell: Let me answer it this way. I didn't come off the ski slopes and fishing streams to answer telephones and shuffle papers. We Argonaut: Therefore, what is the top issue that you wish to tackle as interim president?

Bell: Actually it is hard to take just one single issue.

First and foremost it is to promote and enhance quality academic and research programs. Serving the students has to be the ultimate focus of what we're about. I genuinely believe that, or I wouldn't be in the business. It's one of the most exciting dimensions.

have issues before us. My philosophy in the administration is that we get things done. We have some incredibly talented deans and faculty. We're going to move ahead and meet issues and move this institution toward its goals. If policies are needed in the process, then policies will be done.

dimensions, because we serve a broader constituency with our land-grant university mission.

From that statewide responsibility, there's three specific areas that we're going to focus on. Others will take care of themselves.

We service the Idaho Falls area, Idaho National Engineering

Laboratories, and we have for a good long time. There's a change of direction down there, and it's important that education and research programs in support of the Idaho National Engineering Laboratories stay in place.

We're in cooperation with Boise State University and delivering engineering in Boise. The expansion and growth of that program needs more attention.

Finally, we will continue to develop the University of Idaho Coeur d'Alene Center.

I think another significant focus, that's important to the campus, is the selection of the president. This office will assist the campus, search committee and faculty in selecting another first rate president.

Through the year we will be working to develop and implement a more effective and efficient and responsive system to bring the university expertise directly to the people of the state.

Again, we are here first and foremost to provide educational opportunities to the students. Not only on our campus but throughout the state.

Argonaut: What about the move to the Big West?

Bell: That decision I thought was very thoughtfully considered. We made a decision. It's time to get excited about it, get behind it and make it work.

I've had several briefings in terms of our preparation for the move in the fall of '96. The challenge has already increased our financial support without tapping state resources, without substantially increasing student fees and to get a little more commitment and excitement on-campus and off-campus to build a stadium. We need to do that. I am very impressed, at this point, with what the athletic department is doing and what the Vandal Boosters are doing.

The only regret that I have is that I grew up with the Montana rivalry. It's fun to play the University of Montana and Montana State. Now we'll continue to do that, but I wish they were in the Big West, too.

Argonaut: How do you feel about perhaps moving to a single university system?

Bell: Here's my view: Idaho has a system of governments which combines the most effective elements of a university system. We have a university system with a single board. We have four institutions that each have their own diverse roles and missions, very efficient if its carried out. This is under one board.

Here's one government's function when you say system, and it generally means you have a chancellor and you have universities at different locations. You have

I didn't come off the ski slopes and fishing streams to answer telephones and shuffle papers. My philosophy in the administration is that we get things done.

University of Idaho-Moscow, University of Idaho-Lewiston, University of Idaho-Pocatello, and University of Idaho-Boise. And each of those, in some setting, would have their own government board. Then you would have another super board and a fairly good sized staff. That is five boards.

In my view, that is not very efficient, and I think it's a bureaucracy that is unnecessary. The system that we now have has its roles and missions well defined, within a single board operating those systems. It has the support of a president's council where the presidents of each of those four institutions coordinate with the executive director of the board with a very lean staff and carries it out.

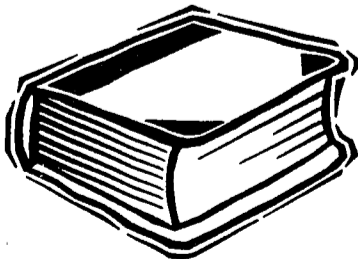

I think we, in Idaho, rely now on a well informed board, a legislature that has historically, within the limits of resources, supported our education. I just believe the system works when the presidents, through their roles and missions of Parking on campus this year will feature a "pit crew." Permit stickers will again be required, with minimal changes occurring around the university.

"Pit crew," is a service provided free of charge to all who have purchased permit stickers. The service includes relief to those who need help with a flat tire, keys locked inside a car, an empty tank of gas and much more.

No new parking lots will be available for the immediate school year.

Construction sites do exist, which limits some parking.

Sophomore Mike Finnigan said, "There is hardly anywhere to park and every time you turn around it's going gold (faculty). Parking on campus is really bad."

Pamela Alsterlund, manager of Parking and Information confirmed parking will again be limited.

"If you can do without a car, please do so," Alsterlund said. Car pooling, van pooling, etc. will again be an alternative to owning a car.

Additional information can be obtained from Parking and Information Services.

Students may obtain parking permit stickers from Parking and Information located in the North Campus Center on 3rd street. On Aug. 27, during registration, parking permits will also be available at the west ticket booth at the Kibbie Dome. The west ticket booth will be open to students all day.

Parking restrictions at the Student Union will be changed to allow all who have permits to use the lot. Only daytime parking will be permitted.

The park down system will be used again, featuring five different colors.

Silver, gold, green, red and blue will be used as identifying colors. The silver permits are for university resident hall students. Gold permits are reserved for faculty and cost $140.00. Green permits are for family housing which run $25.00. Blue ($30.00) and red ($70.00) permits are reserved for students.

Students who have red permits may park in both red and blue parking designations.

Students may park in any parking lot, excluding gold and handicap spaces, until the first day of classes without being subject to a violation.

Palousafest kicks off school year with entertainment, food

Mike McNulty
Staff

The University of Idaho will offer a food and entertainment festival this weekend on campus for all who feel the end of summer slipping away beneath them and the stressful shadow of school bearing down above.

Palousafest '95 kicks off Saturday on the Memorial Gym lawn welcoming UI students, friends and families to Moscow with live music, food and games.

The festival will run from 3 p.m. to midnight and will include local and regional musicians and entertainers as well as over 75 food and merchant vendors.

Seattle rock band The Posies will headline the festival at 10 p.m. Other groups include the Six Million Dollar Band from Vancouver B.C. (formerly the Clumsy Lovers) and local favorites Dan Maher, GQ, U.S. 95, Circle Of Knots, The Bedheads and UI's very own Vandal Marching Band.

Since its inception in 1994, the festival formerly known as LollaPalousa has grown and should be bigger and better than ever said Travis Quast, the head of public relations for the festival.

"We changed the name to gain our own identity," said Quast. "It was just too close to Lollapalooza (a popular traveling music festival)."

Quast expects more than 10,000 people to attend Palousafest which will exceed last years attendance of about 6,000.

Other performers include roving musician Scott Kim and magician Brad Byers famous for his sword swallowing act.

An alumni women's volleyball team has been constructed to scrimmage the UI volleyball squad in the Memorial Gym at 4 p.m., followed by a hoop shoot

“It's going to be better than Woodstock, man. A culturally uplifting experience.”

—John Frincke, musician who will perform at Palousafest

sponsored by the women's basketball team.

Pigskin players from the Vandal football team will challenge the Moscow Police Department in the first annual Pig Pull tug of war at 7:45 p.m.

The more adventurous can get their thrills by climbing into the popular rubber Sumo wrestling outfits and thrashing their favorite friend or parent, or going for a spin on the gyrosphere.

The festival seems more organized this year said John Frincke, a local musician who will perform with The Bedheads.

"It's going to be better than Woodstock, man," said Frincke. "A culturally uplifting experience."

Rayburn Street from the Idaho Avenue extension to Perimeter Drive above the dome will be closed to traffic from 6:30 a.m. to 10 p.m.

Parking will be enforced Saturday at the Administration Building gold permit parking lots, a vendors permit will be required to gain access.

Theta Chi extends 'helping hand'

Andrea Lucero
Staff

Theta Chi fraternity at the University of Idaho has developed a program that is applicable to their motto, "extend a helping hand."

To give action to their words, the fraternity is offering rent refunds to members who behave and perform well academically. For members who do so and graduate 50 to 100 percent of their rent will be refunded the day they graduate from UI.

Brian Peterson, co-rush chairman said the refund has helped a lot during rush because it convinces rushees to not just pledge the house, but to graduate from it.

"The refund promotes graduation, good grades and brotherhood; everything Theta Chi stands for," Peterson said. The refund consists of an unsecured promissory note withholding 5 percent interest to the holder. Beginning the year after graduation the note will be paid in 10 equal annual installments.

In 1985 Theta Chi moved into a new 47 man house on the UI campus. There are 10 years left on the 20 year loan. Instead of dropping money from rent, they will use the money saved on mortgage payments to finance the refund program.

To obtain the refunds members must live in the chapter house for three academic years, fully pay rent for the term of occupancy and remain in good standing with the fraternity and university according to the resolution by the Theta Chi alumni board.

The amount of the refund is determined by the member's cumulative grade point average during his UI career. To earn a 100 percent refund a member must maintain a 4.0 grade point average, a 3.75 to 3.99 GPA earns a 75 percent refund and a 3.49 GPA or less earns a 50 percent rent refund.

According to Peterson members pay approximately $3,600 in rent per year, so members could receive up to $10,800 in refunds. If members choose to stay longer than three years the additional rent is recorded and will be included in the total amount of the refund.

Peterson concluded, "If I get the money refunded, I would donate it back as an alum. I would want to help the house out."

Tight housing market loosening up in Moscow

Associated Press

After several tight years of few residences for students or even professors, the rental market in the Moscow-Pullman area appears to be opening up.

There are more dormitory vacancies and open apartments than at any time this decade.

But while students returning to the University of Idaho and Washington State University this fall will have more options, the prices have not eased.

"My waiting lists for apartments are lower this year than in four years. The market has definitely softened," said Roger Oetli, director of housing and university residences at UI.

There are a lot more apartments being built and students are filling them up.

Declining out-of-state enrollment has fewer students moving into the dormitories, Oetli said.

"There's no doubt we are suffering in the kind of volume we'd like to have. I'll have over 200 spaces available for women when we open."

Four years ago, a housing task force projected a need for 750 rental units.

That goal has almost been met.

"Between the university and the private sector, we have probably done 200 a year for three years, and as a result we have been able to respond to that need and we are getting back to a normal rental average," said Don Mackin, co-owner of Palouse Properties.

The normal rental vacancy rate is 3 to 5 percent, said Mackin, who helps manage more than 600 units. For the last four years, it has been about 1 percent or less.

"Now it's getting back to possibly a 3 percent vacancy, which is good," he said, "because there's always something available but now there is more choice."

The downside, however, is that has not meant lower rents —yet. The average is $500 for a two-bedroom apartment and $400 for a one-bedroom, Mackin said, a significant rise over the last four years.

There may be some rental relief on the horizon, however.

"What has typically happened in both Moscow and Pullman is there's been a seven- or eight-year cycle and we go from tight to normal to overbuilt," Mackin said; "because once we get the bankers talked into loaning money, they sometimes continue to loan after it's no longer needed."

Vandal card will soon double as calling card

Sean Tetpon

Staff

It may be something to phone home about.

Vandal Card Office Manager Tim L. Taylor said Monday that a long distance calling card option will be available to Vandal Card users.

UI and Idaho State officials will decide Aug. 28 between AT&T or MCI as long distance providers for UI and Vandal Card users.

"We want to expand services offered to Vandal Card users. With UI being a large long distance customer, better long distance rates may be negotiated," Taylor said.

Michael Lasher, assistant director of telecommunications said Tuesday, "UI will essentially deliver between 11,000 and 15,000 Vandal Card users to a chosen carrier, with their calling card information encoded on back. We will look for a preferential rate as opposed to rates offered to individuals."

Lasher said Vandal Card long distance rates will "at least be competitive."

"UI has traditionally been a part of the states' long distance contract," said Lasher. "The state is currently with AT&T. However, we have the option to go our own way. We may end up with a different carrier than the state."

Lasher said they will "do what is best" for UI in deciding which carrier to use.

New Vandal ID Cards are on hold pending the decision. According to Lasher, two months could pass before students receive their new cards.

Once a carrier is named and service is implemented, students can obtain new Vandal ID Cards.

Applications for the calling card option will be available Aug. 26 at Palousafest '95, and during registration Aug. 27 at the Kibbie Dome and UI Bookstore.

Carey Powell

Emotions run high during Rush festivities Wednesday morning.

has been established in the Wallace complex to accommodate the overflow.

Last year Panhellenic Council looked into the possibility of requiring new Greek women to live in the residence halls with their pledge class for the first year. The policy which works well at other universities such as Washington State was only discussed last spring. With the rising numbers in sorority rush the policy may be brought up again for discussion.

While sorority rush may be over with, fraternity rush, which begins the last day of sorority rush, is still in process. Members of the twenty different fraternities felt confident about their rush.

Dave Brown of Tau Kappa Epsilon was excited about this year's rush but concerned that the Greek system is not as self-sustaining as many would want it to be.

Other concerns stemming from fraternity rush revolve around the organization that assists and binds together the fraternal organizations, InterFraternity Council (IFC). Several anonymous members of the Greek system are concerned that IFC is not being taken seriously enough. Regulations which have been made with the betterment of the Greek community in mind are at times not taken seriously which may lead to conflict later.

Stuart Chamberlain of Delta Chi was concerned about the barrier between residence hall students and Greeks. Chamberlain said, "We need more interaction with the residence halls. It's wrong to keep everybody separated."

A new Greek orientation which was held on the first day of fraternity rush emphasized the purpose of belonging to a fraternity or sorority. Matt Meyers, the president of IFC said fraternities and sororities were developed for academic advancement, developing lasting, sincere friendships and assisting the community around them. "These friends become the most important friends of your life."

the campus and has given them a chance to explore the different housing options that they have, as well as an opportunity to register for fall classes.

This year the large number of women going through rush forced some chapters to look to the residence halls to house the overflow of women. A Greek hall

Bell nixes pay delay

Associated Press

University of Idaho interim President Thomas Bell has rejected a proposal that would have delayed employee paychecks by two weeks.

Bell on Friday notified teachers and staff the delay that would have aligned the pay system at Idaho with other state agencies for greater efficiency will not occur.

The two weeks' pay, which Idaho employees currently are paid immediately after two weeks of work, would have been collected at the employees' retirement or leaving the school.

"After due consideration, I decided the pay lag will not be implemented at the university. The major consideration is that implementation of the process would have been a great financial sacrifice for the faculty and staff," Bell said Friday.

He said there may be other ways to correct the situation, such as shifting the eight-day deadline for notification of changes in personnel status to 15 days.

"It's a matter of tightening our payroll procedures to better accommodate the needs of our reporting system to the state," he said.

School staff affairs committee chairman Michael West said while there is speculation the issue may resurface, most employees are pleased with the decision.

"I think some of us wonder if this isn't going to rear its head again, but at the moment everybody's pretty cheered," he said. "It's nice to dodge the bullet this time."

their institutions, work as part of a team in overseeing the system's planning.

My hunch is that the decision makers are beginning to recognize the value of the system we now have and are looking at improving it.

Argonaut: You've traveled to some rather exotic places. Where's the most interesting place you've been and why?

Bell: The place you are, if it isn't exciting then something's wrong with your life. It's exciting to be at the University of Idaho in 1995.

As I look back, in my time I think the most interesting place and experience were during the time when I had the opportunity to work in the South Pacific. We were migrant. We were home-based on Guam and islands such as Yap, Ponape and Saipan. We were working with people in areas of educational issues. I also had the opportunity to work, in the same time frame, in Australia and American Samoa.

Argonaut: In parting, do you have a few words of wisdom for the students in the academic year to come?

Bell: Yes. I would say realize that you are attending an institution of higher learning. Learning is exciting. Learning is hard work. Learning is a result of exhaustive, intensive investigation of commitment.

I will share a profile of what I think a successful student looks like. By and large, a serious student takes responsibility for their own learning. They have a good work ethic. They understand it's a do-it-yourself world. They are well organized and efficient with their time. They ask questions in class. They challenge position and are persistent and assertive in gaining knowledge.

The final word is that we're all striving for success. Find time to have fun.

Attorney wants to bar questions to jurors about death penalty

Associated Press

The attorney for a University of Idaho graduate student accused of murdering two fellow students from China wants to bar any questions about the death penalty when a jury is selected.

Public defender Michael Henegen, in a motion filed in 2nd District Court, said questioning potential jurors on how they feel about the death penalty could produce a jury that favors the death penalty.

That jury would be more likely to convict Wenkai Li of murdering doctoral student Ning Li and his wife, Xia Ge, last Memorial Day in Moscow.

Wenkai Li has pleaded innocent. Trial is scheduled to begin Nov. 6.

Prosecutors said they would resist the motion, since normally the jury in a capital case is selected in part on a juror's stance on the death penalty.

Any juror opposed to the death penalty likely would be excluded by the prosecution, said Robin Eckmann, deputy Latah County prosecutor.

Henegen also wants to bar statements made by Wenkai Li to officers when he was arrested in Wyoming.

Police said the bodies of the two victims were taken to Wyoming and dumped there, and Wenkai Li was arrested by officers in that state.

"I certainly feel as though we have a legitimate argument to make on (accepting the Wyoming evidence)," Eckmann said.

"The state is certainly going to oppose those motions."

Meanwhile, a cousin of Ning Li wrote a letter to Moscow residents calling for the death penalty and expressing indignation over what he described as the defendant's lack of remorse.

"It is a great shame to defend or even help such a person or to say that he is a nice person," Yuanzhang Li, a mathematician who works in Maryland, wrote.

"If he had a little humanity, he would regret what he did, not smile in the court like he's enjoying the attention."

Yuanzhang and Xia Ge's sister, who lives in New York, have been collecting signatures they hope will persuade the court to pursue the death penalty.

He said they hope to deliver them sometime in October.

Moscow, UI attract foreign students

Despite registration frustrations, culture shock, and language anxieties, new international students are eager to begin their adventures at the University of Idaho.

A community wide welcome picnic sponsored by the International Friendship Association last Tuesday eased many fresh students' fears as they conversed to each other in a diversity of foreign accents.

While some still don't know what to expect, several foreign students zealously expressed what they thought so far.

"The campus is beautiful and everybody is so friendly," says Alberto Fernando Moncayo from Ecuador. Even though Moncayo feels comfortable in his new surroundings, there are still adjustments he has to make to the differences in America. For example, in Ecuador you would think nothing of greeting women with a kiss on the cheek-something he has to suppress himself from doing now.

Taking the TOEFL (Test Of English as a Foreign Language) exam this weekend is a much bigger concern to many students. Passing the test means getting into the program of study they want-not passing means intensive study of the English language.

Most of these students will be living on campus and studying a variety of programs. Cost was once a large determinant for students to choose UI. "That's no longer the case," says Mary Furnari, Coordinator for International Students and Scholars.

Furnari says that many choose Idaho because of the physical environment and comfort of safety.

"Many foreign students hear of the violence that exists on other campuses and want a safe place to go," states Furnari.

their institutions, work as part of a team in overseeing the system's planning.

My hunch is that the decision makers are beginning to recognize the value of the system we now have and are looking at improving it.

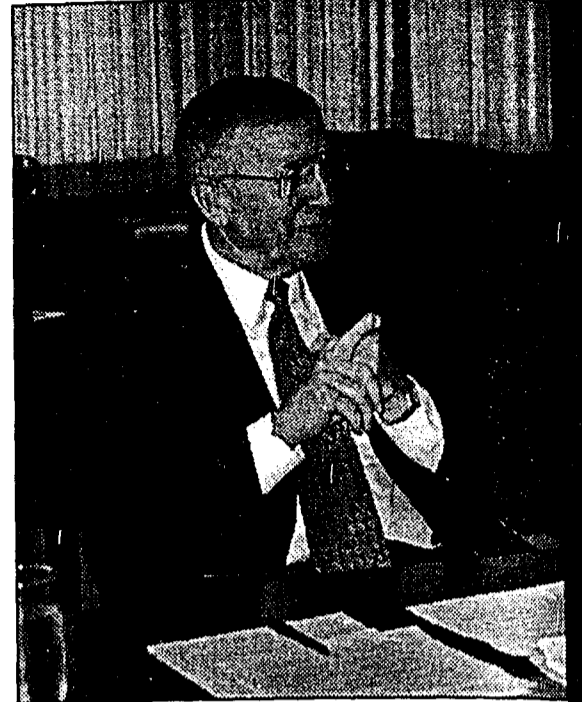

Argonaut: You've traveled to some rather exotic places. Where's the most interesting place you've been and why?

Bell: The place you are, if it isn't exciting then something's wrong with your life. It's exciting to be at the University of Idaho in 1995.

As I look back, in my time I think the most interesting place and experience were during the time when I had the opportunity to work in the South Pacific. We were migrant. We were home-based on Guam and islands such as Yap, Ponape and Saipan. We were working with people in areas of educational issues. I also had the opportunity to work, in the same time frame, in Australia and American Samoa.

Argonaut: In parting, do you have a few words of wisdom for the students in the academic year to come?

Bell: Yes. I would say realize that you are attending an institution of higher learning. Learning is exciting. Learning is hard work. Learning is a result of exhaustive, intensive investigation of commitment.

I will share a profile of what I think a successful student looks like. By and large, a serious student takes responsibility for their own learning. They have a good work ethic. They understand it's a do-it-yourself world. They are well organized and efficient with their time. They ask questions in class. They challenge position and are persistent and assertive in gaining knowledge.

The final word is that we're all striving for success. Find time to have fun.

Upscale residence halls supply more privacy, amenities

Marco Buscaglia
College Press Service

Due to a larger-than-anticipated freshman class, about 200 students at New York University began the school year in style last August at an off-campus hotel.

"They were living in the lap of luxury," says Virgil Renzulli, NYU's director of public affairs. "They had their own kitchens, big televisions, a health club and maid service. They didn't want to leave."

As rooms opened up on campus, however, the NYU students were transferred to residence halls, giving up their fresh towels and clean sheets for the laundry piles and temperamental showers of dorm life.

Still, although NYU students' luxurious living situation was temporary, many of today's college students experience similar creature comforts all year long. On many campuses, upscale residence halls, complete with more privacy, nicer furniture and better food, have ushered in a new standard for student living.

"Finding the right housing for students today is like anything else on the real estate market," says Tim Massie, spokesperson for Marist College in Poughkeepsie, NY. "Students are interested in the quality of living, and they're interested in location."

To appeal to those students,

Marist officials planned a series of residence halls with private bathrooms, shared living areas and complete wiring for voice, data and cable and had them built on the Hudson River shore.

Like Marist, many colleges are trying to redefine the concept of residence halls by creating new, apartmentlike facilities.

A recent report on new campus residence halls by American School and University magazine shows that schools are spending $25,991 per student for new residence space, up from $19,765 in 1990.

The report states that there has been a 20-foot increase in square-footage per student, up to 272 feet, since 1989, as well as an influx of amenities.

Of the 28 new residence halls opening this fall, 93 percent will have air conditioning; 86 percent will have laundry facilities; 64 percent will be carpeted; 63 percent will include kitchens; 57 percent will include TV rooms; 54 percent will have wiring for computer access to all areas of campus; 43 percent will be guarded by electronic security systems; 14 percent will include dining halls; and 7 percent will house fitness rooms.

Like the rest of the region, Georgia Tech and Georgia State University stand to benefit from the Olympics in Atlanta in 1996. After a month long stint as the housing for Olympic athletes, the newly constructed residence halls will be used by students.

Terry Sichta, Georgia Tech's director of housing, says the buildings will offer students all the amenities of apartment living, including private bathrooms, new furniture, a common suite and a kitchen—complete with a dishwasher, a refrigerator and a sink.

"This is the standard for which college students will soon settle," says Sichta. "We will have to look at campus housing in an entirely different way. It will be more like housing for young adults, less like housing for students."

Students who live in the residence halls at United States International University in San Diego, Calif., get to take advantage of the maid service. "It can be a great perk for someone who is worried about living in a mess," says Dale Bonifield, spokesperson for the university. "It's always nice to come home to a clean room."

Officials at Kansas State University figured one way to keep students on campus was to give them the same housing situations they could get from off-campus living. Currently, the school is remodeling certain floors within each residence hall to attract more upper-classmen.

"We want to create environments for students who may be getting tired of the dorm experience," says Bob Burgess, KSU's associate director of housing. "We want to give them every opportunity to stay on campus."

KSU is converting its current dorm space into bathrooms and part of the living area, while the other two rooms are given access to a larger living space and the newly built bathrooms.

Although the residents may enjoy their new living space, each new suite means one less room for KSU students.

"In doing projects like this, you ultimately lose space," says Burgess. "We won't be able to renovate on a campus-wide scale, so we have to look at other ways to create a better campus living experience."

One way, Burgess says, may be to increase the privacy in dormitory bathrooms.

"There may be a way to create private space in public places without major renovations," he says. "The traditional freshmen dormitory system can remain in place for some time, provided we make adjustments that address students' concerns."

And privacy, especially in the bathroom, tops most students' wish lists. In fact, a recent survey at Florida State University revealed that 80 percent of all freshmen have never shared a bathroom in their lives.

"I want my own bathroom in my own room where I can lock the door," says Stacy Markuson, a sophomore at Illinois State University who lived in Wright Hall, a coed dorm, last fall. "You have to adjust to living with one bathroom on the floor. People would shower late at night or in the middle of the afternoon so they wouldn't have to stand around with other people getting ready in the morning."

Markuson, who will be living in

Appeals force Forest Service to revisit White Pine Creek

Associated Press

Old-time loggers went for the big trees in the White Pine Creek area 40 miles north of Moscow, but a rewritten timber sale plan addresses concerns from both the timber industry and environmentalists.

Forest Service planner Suzanne Lay stood within the southern edge of the sale recently and pointed to the huge stump of a tree cut decades ago.

"They went in and took the big old pickles out," Lay said.

Given time, nature would reclaim much of the drainage.

But human demands are such that the Palouse Ranger District has spent years trying to write a plan that strikes a balance.

Foresters thought they had a good solution last year when the environmental assessment was made public. But conservationists charged that one of the last strongholds of old-growth trees on the district was in danger. The industry charged valuable timber was being wasted.

Their legal appeals were heeded by the Forest Service regional office in Montana.

"The whole reason we're out there is because of a lot of old, dying trees," said Lay, explaining insects and disease have done their damage.

The draft timber sale plan did not adequately address the cumulative effects on water quality and wildlife, officials said. That forced the district back into the woods for more data.

The district released its new findings two weeks ago. The original plan called for 6.7 million board feet of logging, with 10.6 miles of road and 350 acres of clear-cuts.

Four alternatives now include a high of 9.3 million board feet of timber to a low of 6.2 million, with up to 11.3 miles of road down to no road construction.

"Where we can, we're going to leave clumps of trees standing," Lay said. From five to 15 trees per acre will be left on the so-called clear-cut acres proposed, she said.

The draft impact statement is anticipated in early October, followed by a 45-day public comment period before a final proposal.

House Republicans vow to end direct student loans

Elissa Leibowitz
College Press Service

WASHINGTON—House Republicans no longer want to limit President Bill Clinton's pilot direct student loan program. They want to scrap it altogether.

With a mandate to cut $10 billion out of the budget within the next seven years, Republicans on the House Economic and Educational Opportunities Committee said on July 27 that Clinton's direct loan program is a good place to start.

"Direct lending can work, and in some ways it is working," said Rep. Bart Gordon, R-Tenn., a member of the committee. "The question is not, 'Can it work?' The question is why go to direct lending unless you can make significant improvements in the current system. Just to say it works is not enough."

The year-old direct loan program allows colleges to bypass banks and other lending agencies when students seek loans from the federal government.

Without the middlemen, students receive their loan funds much more quickly and save money in interest, say proponents. At the same time, colleges benefit by cutting back on paperwork and by receiving tuition payments faster, which improves cashflow.

Originally, the Congressional Budget Office (CBO) had estimated that direct loans would save taxpayers $6.8 billion by the year 2000 by eliminating reinsurance fees and other subsidies now paid to banks and guarantee agencies under the Federal Family Education Loan Program.

But Republicans have charged that the Department of Education misjudged the amount of money that the program saves taxpayers. Instead of saving money, direct loans will cost the nation $1.5 billion over the next seven years, according to a new CBO study.

"They used smoke and mirrors to determine the savings," said the House committee's chairman, Rep. Bill Goodling, R-Pa., of Clinton administration estimates.

However, Sen. Paul Simon, Dan off-campus townhouse this fall, says when she returns to her parent's house now, she looks forward to something she never dreamed she'd miss: "I get to use my own bathroom," she says. "It's much better."

However, colleges appear to be adapting to students' request for more privacy. The most notable change in new residence halls, according to the American School and University report, is the inclusion of more bathrooms. Nearly 54 percent of the new dorms include individual bathroom facilities rooms and suites while 39 percent have separate bathrooms for a cluster of rooms.

In January 1994, Rockhurst College in Kansas City, Mo., opened the Town House Village, an apartment-like complex for students who wished to remain on campus but were tired of the dorms.

"Whenever we heard complaints about the residence halls, it was always about privacy," says Liz

Kramer, Rockhurst's dean of students. "We're talking about kids who had a tough enough time sharing a bathroom with four or five people at home. Going away to school and sharing one with 42 people can be culture shock."

With a new housing facility in mind, Kramer says Rockhurst officials began surveying students on what they really wanted in their place of residence. "When we came up with a final list, the preferred residence looked a lot like an apartment," Kramer says.

The new split-level facilities—which include two bedrooms, a kitchen, a living room, a dining room and a common area—have quickly become the most popular residences on campus. In an effort to make the application process as fair as possible, Rockhurst officials use seniority, then GPA, as criteria for acceptance.

Needless to say, the Village has become the final living place on campus for seniors—and the smartest juniors.

"If you're at Rockhurst for four years, you'll end up living here by process of elimination," says Kramer, adding that the Village's 143 occupants currently account for nearly one-fourth of the student body. "But even with all the seniors placed, we still have room for juniors, so it has definitely become an incentive for students to get better grades."

In addition to the improved facilities, Kramer sees a definite "real world" benefit to the Village.

"Our graduates used to complain that we wouldn't prepare them for life out of college," she says. "Now you're buying your own groceries and cooking your own food. It becomes a good transition."

Fifty-three students at Muhlenberg College in Allentown, Pa. will be doing a little transitional living of their own this fall, as part of the school's Independent Living Experiment—an effort to free up campus residence space by placing qualifying juniors and seniors on university-owned private property off campus.

"We're still committed to being a residential college with students living on campus, but in lieu of a new residence hall, we have to look at other ways to house our students," says James Steffy, vice president of planning and administration. "This may only be temporary. We have to wait and see what the benefits are."

To students who have been chosen to live in one of the renovated houses or apartments, the benefits already are evident. "When I was living in the dorm, I could never get any studying done," says John Hodge, a Muhlenberg senior who lives with two friends in a university-owned apartment off campus. "Once I moved here, I was able to spend a lot more time doing work."

Beginning this fall, the majority of residence hall rooms at Western Illinois University will be single occupancy, and each room will be fitted with new furniture, satellite television access, new carpeting and a nearby washer and dryer.

"We want students to experience the lifestyle options that most clearly reflect their preferences and needs," says Garry Johnson, WIU's assistant vice president for student life, adding that recent surveys indicated that students preferred individual housing.

But some wonder what impact this secluded sense of living may have on future college graduates.

"Dorms provide students with the opportunity to learn how to deal with each other on both a one-to-one and a group basis," says Sarah Riechart, a Chicago social worker and former resident of Seminole Hall at Florida Atlantic University. "You learn how to deal with conflicts like loud stereos and missing food head-on because your parents aren't there to help you fight through it. Living with other people makes you figure out how to survive in life after college."

Sebastian Kraemer of Germany looked for a place near the Rocky Mountains. "I came for the skiing," he says. Many of the new students expressed outdoor recreation as an intention for their choice.

Although we have new students from all over the world including countries such as Turkey and Russia, the demographics of this year's students has changed with a larger number of students from developed countries.

Furnari has noticed the advanced sophistication of international students which she attributes to the rapid westernization of countries such as China.

The advancement of international students is "a direct reflection of what's happening in other countries," says Sheila Schulte, the new International Student Advisor.

Many activities are planned through the International Programs Office including an African night and an Islamic Cultural Evening. A warm welcome to these students to our community and the University of Idaho.

Ill., one of Congress' main supporters of the direct lending program, accused the Republicans of using "concocted formulas" to skew the congressional budget report in their favor.

"Direct loan opponents are trying to cook the books when it comes to student loans," Simon said in a statement. "Write a recipe for mush, and mush is what you get."

Goodling and other Republicans will try to cancel the direct loan program in a reconciliation bill in September.

But not so fast, said financial aid officials. Dan Mann, associate financial aid director at Southern Illinois' Carbondale campus, said the Republicans are rushing to end a maturing program that has not yet shown its fullest potential.

"It would be a real mistake to eliminate the program because it is a much easier process for everyone involved," Mann said. "I don't think they've given it a chance."

The Clinton administration kicked off the program last year at 104 schools and expanded it to 1,400 colleges for the 1994-95 school year. That number represents 40 percent of the college students who receive federal loans.

Republicans said instead of improving the guaranteed student loan program, which still serves the majority of colleges, the Clinton administration is rushing to phase it out so that officials can institute the direct loan project at all universities nationwide.

"It wasn't our idea to move that rapidly," Gordon said. "The problem is they got too greedy. They couldn't be satisfied with just a test."

But Madeleine Kunin, deputy secretary of education, said the guaranteed loan program benefits from the direct loan project.

"What they are proposing to cut would affect both programs," Kunin said. "If you know something is working, why not make it available to a large group of students and institutions?"

She accused the Republicans of bending to the banks and other lending agencies, who lose business when the federal government sends the funds directly to the colleges.

"This is too vital a subject for people to play politics with," Kunin said.

And it's too vital to colleges participating in the direct loan program, according to a study this summer by the Education Department.

Ninety percent of the schools surveyed said they would recommend the program to other colleges.

Lincoln University, a predominantly black college in Jefferson City, Mo., was one of those singing the program's praises.

Spokesman Dan Diedrich explained how the direct loans ease Lincoln's financial aid process, which processed almost $4.1 million in direct federal loans last year.

"Under the old system, a student comes in, says 'I want a loan,' and the financial officer hands out a form," Diedrich explained.

"The student fills out the form, and it goes to a bank, which accepts it or rejects it and sends it back. That can take up to six weeks. The decision is now made on the spot. The process might take six days. The disbursement of funds to students is an advantage."

Proponents say the program saves the government money by eliminating the subsidies it pays lenders to administer the loans. The government also can borrow money directly from the Treasury at a lower rate and turn that money over to students. Students then benefit from lower interest rates.

But a July study by the Washington-based Coalition for Student Loan Reform states that 72 percent of Americans interviewed believe student loans should be offered through private institutions and not through the federal government.

They share the sentiments of those House Republicans who want to end the program altogether.

Other critics on Capitol Hill, including Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., want to limit the number of colleges allowed to participate. If left uncapped, the program would put too much of a burden on the government and would cause lending agencies to lose money.

"The direct lending program is very new," Kassebaum spokesman Mike Horak said.

"It's easy to make calculations on the savings at this point before loans become due. Clearly it's too early to tell what the longterm fiscal impact on direct lending will be."

Kassebaum and other Republican leaders in Congress have introduced legislation to cap the program at 40 percent of new loan volume.

They also want to force students to pay the interest on their loans while in school, rather than defer it until after they leave.

Goodling introduced a similar bill in the House, but he said he would scrap that bill in favor of ending the direct loan program altogether and restoring the in-school subsidy.

Another year, another Argonaut

Here we all are once again. Ready to take on another semester or two of academics, and the Argonaut is revving up to provide everyone with news and exciting goings-on around campus.

As with every new editor there are some changes to the paper this year. We have axed the Lifestyles section and replaced it with our new entertainment guide called Diversions. You will find this guide inserted into the Argonaut every Friday. Diversions will cover everything from what's going on around campus to what bands are playing at local bars. It will also contain a week-long TV listings guide for those of you who do not wish to go out and buy the Sunday paper or spend 99 cents on the TV Guide. In the Argonaut, it's free! Everybody loves free things. At least I do.

Another addition to the paper will be a Campus Life section. Reporters will write stories on student organizations, and hopefully we'll find some students who are willing to share interesting stories with us. That's a goal of ours anyway. We will also run a Campus Community Calendar listing events happening among student organizations and other student groups. This section will begin running next Friday.

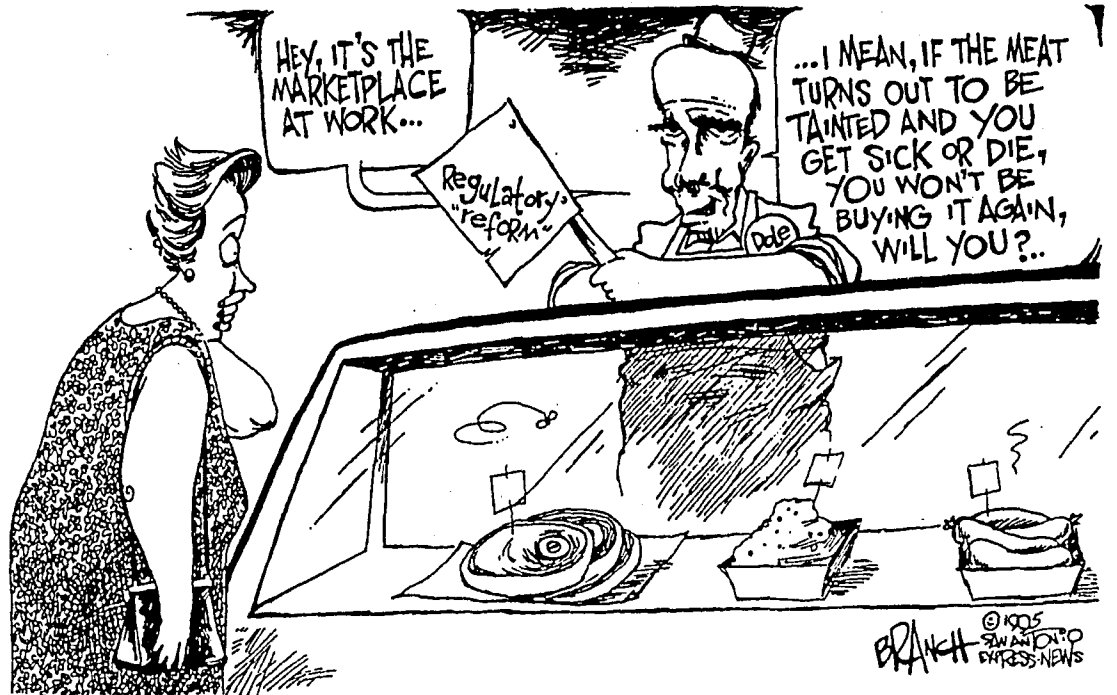

We have also moved the Opinion Section from the back page to the inside-center pages again. This way we have more space to print your letters to the editor and run guest columns that we can pull off of the Associated Press Wire when we find something extremely interesting.

And for those of you who are outdoor fans, no, we have not thrown out this section. You will now be able to find it in Tuesday's edition of the paper. The editorial board decided that we would run it on Tuesday rather than Friday, so that way people will have more time to ponder what kinds of outdoorsy-type things they can do over the weekend.

Something we at the paper are looking forward to this year is our 98th birthday. Our first publication was printed somewhere between Nov. 5 and 9 in the year 1898. So, around these dates (in the year 1995) I hope you will all be looking forward to seeing our special birthday issue. In this special issue we will explain the history of the paper and why it's called the Argonaut, among various other treats.

One last thing, the Argonaut is the student's voice. We are here to serve you, so if there is anything you would like to see more of or less of then let us know. We will definitely work on catching spelling errors, typos and any factual errors before we go to press. Feel free to call me anytime at 885-7845 with constructive criticism or news tips.

Dear interim President Bell

Hello and welcome, or welcome back to the University of Idaho. Congratulations on your new position. I hope your summer went well and you are well rested and ready for rigors of the job as president.

I am certain you will do everything in your power to make the university a better place. In advance I applaud your efforts. Good luck.

There has been a mistake made in university policy, one that I am certain you will do your best to rectify as soon as possible. In a single stroke of the pen you could forever banish this ill thought out rule.

It is time to abolish prohibition. The UI alcohol policy accomplishes little and costs the university more than it benefits it. To call this policy idiotic would be a great understatement. No one wants any more of the terrible accidents that precipitated this rule but this policy was, and remains a knee jerk reaction to a terribly unfortunate situation.

My understanding of this policy tells me people cannot drink at any university function and alcohol cannot be allowed on campus or at any university sanctioned event. Perhaps this ridiculous rule explains why I have never gone to see a Vandal football game.

There are responsible ways to drink, just as there are responsible ways to drive, work and have sex. It is doubtful that drunken fans would strip off all their clothes and run out onto the field late in the fourth quarter—at least not during a close game. Even if there were drunken fans galloping naked through the Kibbie Dome, what is the harm? It would surely boost attendance because everyone loves to see a spectacle. It is also doubtful that Joe Vandal would become alcoholic forcing him to miss the big game because of an AA meeting.

There has been concern lately about the lack of attendance at Vandal football games. It amazes me that top administrators cannot see the unplanned side effects of the no-alcohol policy. Just as an aside, rumor has it alcohol was served at a party for top university brass just one week after the adoption of the no alcohol policy. Word on the streets is that former UI President Elisabeth Zinser even had a beer. I find it incredible that your predecessor would have a drink at a university sanctioned event just one week after approval of the new policy, but that is what I am told.

But I digress, perhaps one of the reasons attendance at football games is lagging involves alcohol or, rather, the lack of it. A game is an event, a weekend adventure for many people. The experience involves tailgate parties, visiting old haunts, dinners and more. Often alumni will come from Boise or Portland to see the Vandals play—they not only make these trips to see the game but also to reminisce and visit with old friends.

I am not sure I can think of a day more pleasurable than one spent visiting with old friends over a cold beer.

Our students and alumni are cheated out of one of life's simple pleasures because of an insipid mistake made in haste. I am sure you will give this matter the attention it deserves.

Once again good luck in the new job.

Did anyone see 'Manners 101' in the course catalog?

Welcome back. Welcome back to waiting in long lines for financial aid disbursement, fee payment, books, etc. I'm not a patient person (and I know I'm not the only impatient person in this world). Long lines irritate the hell out of me, so I can sympathize when others begin to get grumpy.

What I cannot sympathize with is when people become rude or begin to cut in line. It seems to me that this happens with much more frequency than it used to. What ever happened to common courtesy? Are people so busy these days that they forget to say "excuse me" when they bump into someone? I don't think we're any busier on the whole than people were 50 or 100 years ago.

So what happened? Here's my theory: we've become selfish, and we're afraid of crime. America is a society of consumers, and, as a result, it's finally gone to our heads—everything should be done for me first and others later. Look out for number one. Check out a few advertisements some time—chances are you'll see quite a few which suggest that selfishness is a good thing.

Crime has had its toll on courtesy as well. Have you ever thought about picking up a hitchhiker? You probably have, and you probably decided against it. My dad used to pick up the occasional hitchhiker when I was a kid. I wouldn't even consider it today. There are too many crazies out there. But I can't help but feel a little sorry for the people I see walking in the rain down the side of the highway. It's too big of a risk to be nice sometimes.

Because of the increase in crime (or, perhaps, our increased awareness of it), people seem to be more afraid of strangers these days—especially if the stranger happens to have tattoos on his forearms and weighs 210 pounds. I've had more than one experience where strangers have looked somewhat unsettled when they first meet me or store clerks follow me around the store pretending to be helpful. This bothers me. I don't want people to think of me as some crazed criminal psychotic killer. Anyone who knows me can verify that I'm only half-crazed.

Perhaps my expectations about common courtesy are a bit old-fashioned. But so what? What was ever wrong with manners? Manners never hurt anyone. For instance: if a 210-pound guy with tattoos on his forearms walks into your store and intends to rob you, are you going to avoid being robbed by being rude to the guy? No. In fact, maybe if you show some manners he might be nice and decide not to rob such a courteous person. You never know.

Quite often I find that my own manners have gone AWOL.

Sometimes I forget to say "thank you" or "please." But I'm going to try harder to be more polite. For instance, I made sure I sat down and wrote thank-you notes to the people we stayed with after my wife and I returned from our vacation.

I know people used to observe common courtesy a lot more than they do today. Go talk to anyone over 50 years old, and chances are they'll tell you things were quite different twenty or thirty years ago. Back then, it was not uncommon for children to address their elders as "sir" or "ma'am." Today, we're lucky if a driver will actually stop at a crosswalk to allow a pedestrian to cross—and it's the law.

There were drawbacks, I'll admit, to having such rigorous social standards. People were often afraid to question authority, and intolerance to difference was commonplace. But is a complete backlash the answer? Do we have to swing 180 degrees from traditional standards to prove that some traditions had flaws?

Call me silly, but perhaps if people started smiling again instead of avoiding eye contact in grocery store aisles or saying "hello" or "how are you" (and showing some actual interest in the answer), we might find ourselves with a more friendly disposition. Perhaps there would be fewer crazies out there as a result. People tend to become less despondent if they think someone cares about them—even if it is a total stranger.

You might even try talking to your neighbor face-to-face rather than pounding on the wall trying to get him to turn his music down. If he knows you, he's more likely to keep the music at a more tolerable level.

And while you're standing in line waiting impatiently for your financial aid check, take some time to smile at that 210-pound guy with the tattoos on his forearms. You never know—he might smile back.

Cheap Shots

Here are excerpts from editorials in newspapers in the United States and abroad.

Daily Tribune, Wisconsin Rapids, Wis., on teen smoking:

President Clinton has taken a bold and extraordinary move to get the tobacco industry to help curb teen-age smoking.

He deserves credit for taking action that goes beyond tough talk. Clinton's tactic involves a threat of sorts to the tobacco industry and an invitation to come back with a compromise that would avoid years of costly litigation.

His first step is to order the Food and Drug Administration to propose rules targeting the industry.

The proposals are being published in the Federal Register, opening a 90-day period for public comment.

If an acceptable compromise is proposed by the industry, it appears that Clinton would abandon the tough rules.

If not, he needs to show he means business.

Star Tribune, Minneapolis, on teen smoking:

For more than three decades, the federal government has known that smoking causes more deaths and robs more lives of vitality than perhaps any other voluntary human behavior. But in all of that time, Washington has made no serious attempt to discourage smoking among adults and prevent it among young people. President Clinton's new campaign against teen smoking is the first effort that actually matches deeds with strong evidence of smoking's bad effects.

Clinton clearly would like company on this. He has invited Congress to do legislatively what he seeks to do by executive action. He also has invited the tobacco industry itself to get involved.

Don't bet the tobacco farm on either one is taking up his offer. The tobacco industry's reluctance is understandable. Congress, however, has no excuse but bipartisan hypocrisy. Tobacco kills. Yet Congress subsidizes the killer, and government at all levels makes billions of dollars from tobacco taxes.

If federal, state and local governments put even half the money they make from tobacco taxes into well-structured anti-smoking activities, this nation could be smoke-free within a very few decades. That's not about to happen, which is why Clinton's general initiative is welcome.

The Clarion-Ledger, Jackson, Miss., on teen smoking:

It is not just the Marlboro Man standing tall in the outfield of the local baseball stadium that may have to go with President Clinton's move to ban cigarette advertising at sporting events. It is much more serious.

R.J. Reynolds has been a main sponsor of NASCAR's Winston Cup series. Estimates are that sponsorships run as high as $10 million. That will be a big chunk out of NASCAR.

Race fans are very brand loyal. The same probably goes for politics. If his ban holds, the president shouldn't expect to find a lot of votes at Talladega next year.

Times Advocate, Escondido, Calif., on Mickey Mantle:

He was a frail god. The oxymoron made Mickey Mantle more human. As the nation mourns his death, The Mick is celebrated for his Hall of Fame exploits as a New York Yankee but also honored for his tragic flaws.

Dole Suffering from frontrunner syndrome

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole's setback in last weekend's straw poll came as a big surprise to everyone, most of all Dole. In retrospect, it should have been predictable.

In explaining the jolt, loyal Dole backers like Gov. Terry Branstad may have done a better job than they thought. They not only explained the setback, they underscored what could be some troubling weaknesses in Dole's bid to seek the Republican presidential nomination.

Branstad is a politician with instincts that are beyond question, and who has a bone-deep feel for the state's political currents. Asked how a politician with Dole's long history and blue-chip list of endorsements in the state could have ended up in a dead-heat with Texas Sen. Phil Gramm, Branstad had a simple answer.

"It's becoming more of a Republican state and we've got more of a diverse Republican Party," said Branstad.

While Dole played by the rules and turned his people out for the straw poll, "you had a much bigger universe," Branstad said.

That's a sobering thought for Dole, who is hoping to use Iowa's first-in-the-nation precinct caucuses as a springboard to his party's nomination.

Associated Press Mike Glover

Dole's assets in the state are legion, his weaknesses far more subtle.

His backers point to a solid win in the 1988 precinct caucuses, and a campaign history that dates to at least 1978 in the state. He's from neighboring Kansas, and can talk in the kind of code that rural folks in Iowa understand very well.

Virtually all of the state's political elite are in Dole's camp, including savvy political types like Branstad and U.S. Sen. Charles Grassley.

So why isn't it all over?

A lot of reasons. First, Dole's victory in the 1988 precinct caucuses—as impressive as it was—was eight years ago. In those intervening eight years, a lot of water has flowed under the bridge.

Branstad's point that the Republican Party is more "diverse" says a lot. Religious conservatives have built their clout in party circles, and a lot of blue-collar former Democrats have followed that path into the GOP.

As the Republican Party has been increasing its strength, it has added voters who come to the ranks based on ideology and passion. They are unimpressed with Dole's long record of public service, and may well hold it against him.

That's particularly true among caucus-goers, who are the most ideologically driven of the party activists.

Most of those new voters could care less about the comings and goings of the U.S. Senate, which is the gist of Dole's stump speech.

At bottom, while Dole has kept intact the formidable organization and network that boosted him in 1988, the party has moved beyond that.

Politicians who succeed in the state understand the trend. During the Republican National Convention in Houston, many Republicans were lamenting the growth of new factions in the party and some were boycotting the event.

Grassley went and was blunt about his reasons. If these are the new folks in the party, Grassley said, it's time to get to know them.

Another thing that's contributed to a new perception of Dole's weakness is a certain complacency. Since winning the 1988 caucuses, Dole hasn't been in the state much.

Caucus-goers like to see their candidates, and they've been seeing a lot more of Dole's rivals in recent months. It's fine to assemble a crack organization, but the troops need the fire of a candidate every now and then.

"There are some areas where I think we can do a better job organizationally," said Branstad.

There may also be too much emphasis placed on the big endorsements Dole has received in the state. Endorsements by tradition don't play a major role in Iowa politics.

Voters in the state are notoriously independent, and there's no history of a popular politician being able to transfer that popularity to another.

Dole may well be able to shake off his weekend jolt. After all, it was just a straw poll in the silly season of summer.

To do that, however, he must find ways to solve the troubles which led to his setback. That is a far tougher chore.

Withering away from the liver cancer that killed him Sunday (Aug. 13), Mantle said recently, God gave me everything. For the kids out there, don't be like me.

I want to be like Mike, the Michael Jordan advertising slogan goes. Don't be like Mick, at least off the field. What set Mantle apart from other deeply flawed sports heroes—Babe Ruth, Ty Cobb, Magic Johnson—was his deeply felt contrition for wasting his gifts on booze.

As a father, Mantle believed his life to be a failure. Mantle's first-person confession in a Sports Illustrated interview last year will go down as his most heroic feat. On a spiritual plane, it was a World Series-winning home run.

La Stampa, Turin, Italy, on the plight of children in the former Yugoslavia:

Are we exaggerating with images and stories of Bosnian children mutilated, deported, abandoned, starving in a war about which they know nothing and which will severely mark their successive life?

It is a legitimate question given the propensity of newspapers and televisions to insist mainly on this aspect of the Yugoslav war, with a behavior which both exploits the victims—by making spectacles of them—and continuously shocks readers.

Portraying this war through images of suffering children is not only an easy way to move the audience, it is a simple way of admitting one's incapacity to understand.

It remains true, however, that an emotive reaction to a child's face pleading for help is both legitimate and correct.

The face of a suffering child erases any difference between Bosnians, Croats, Serbs, Christians, or Muslims, and therefore does not ask us to take sides or take up arms for one or the other.

It simply demands recognition of the total irrationality of every war.

The News Tribune, Tacoma, Wash., on Sen. Bradley:

All of a sudden, New Jersey's U.S. Sen. Bill Bradley is being widely described as "the thinking man's Ross Perot."

Until this week, few would have thought to compare the intellectual Democrat, one of the Senate's most respected members, with the maverick, folksy billionaire from Texas.

That changed Wednesday when Bradley announced he would not seek a fourth Senate term and then, on Thursday, refused to rule out making an independent bid for the presidency next year. Now the pundits are mulling over a whole new set of election scenarios for 1996, factoring in Bradley's possible candidacy as well as potential bids by Perot and former Gen. Colin Powell.

This week, Bradley was certainly sounding a lot like Perot, only with a better haircut and the physical ease of the professional basketball player he once was. "The little people and the middle class are frustrated and feel left out of the system," the senator declared.

"There is real fear among millions of people over their future."

Many Americans no doubt share those sentiments. Recent polls show substantial numbers of voters are still disenchanted with both major parties. The question is whether Bradley, who is widely admired as one of the best minds in Congress, is the sort of candidate who can connect with "the little people." One reason Bradley had only narrowly survived his 1990 re-election bid was a perception in New Jersey that he spent too much time on the Big Picture and not enough on the concerns of folks back home.

Yet an ability to deal with the Big Picture is one of the things that qualifies politicians for the White House. Bradley's independence of mind and his capacity for leadership on complex issues made him one of the Democratic Party's best people. The party and the Senate itself will be much poorer without him.

Valley Daily News, Kent, Wash., on DSHS:

Demotion of a child-services manager and possible disciplinary action against three other employees involved in the Lauria Grace case is a positive first step in this tragedy, but there's much more to do.

Grace is the 3-year-old whose death is being blamed on her mother, Rochelle Grace. Prosecutors have charged the woman with homicide by abuse, saying she restrained the girl with belts and stuffed a sock in her mouth at their Tukwila home. The girl died three days after the alleged sock incident. After reviewing the case, state Department of Social and Health Services officials decided that the child services manager, Bob Doupe, failed to adequately pursue allegations of child abuse prior to the child's death.

Doupe complains he is being made a scapegoat for the system's failings. We don't buy that. Doupe, who received a reprimand in 1994 for failing to follow up complaints about a foster home in which four infants died, was out of touch with the Grace case.

But he is right that the state's child welfare system has many failings. It does need a major overhaul; demotions or reprimands of employees aren't going to change things.

For starters, caseworkers who deal with child abuse issues have far too many cases to juggle. Caseworkers handle 40 to 50 cases, when the industry standard is about 25.

Then there's the hodgepodge of parties involved, including two caseworkers, the courts, attorneys, psychologists, and volunteer advocates for the child. Oh yes, let's not forget the parents and foster parents.

And third, the system has competing goals. One is to protect the child; the other is to reunite the family whenever possible. Sometimes, those competing goals result in tragedy, as in the Lauria Grace case.

We're a long way from solving the child welfare problem. Legislators and state bureaucrats have much to do to straighten out an overloaded, underfunded system that is at best limping along.

Mariners not only game in town

Dan Eckles

Is male bonding a sport? If nothing else it's a pastime or a hobby so we can discuss it in the sports section.

My friends Greg, Bob, Mike and I made the trek to Seattle last weekend to take in some Mariner-Red Sox baseball action, kind of an end of the summer vacation from the mental grind and physical labors of an office job. There was definitely strategy involved in this three-day testosterone fest, so I can qualify it as a sport.

You have to plan out your offensive scheme to get off the freeway, into a parking lot and in your seat in time to see the heralded On Deck Show. It was kind of second rate this time around though; because the giant big screen jumbovision was broken and all Dome officials substituted was a cheeseball 12-TV screen picture thing. Oh well I guess we can't complain too much, no ceiling tiles came crashing down on us.

But back to the story, a lot of people from rural areas get freaked out driving around in our country's modern metropolises.

I've found, in a lot of occasions, these are the same people that can't follow arrows, read signs or understand maps. Darting between cars, gunning the engine to enter the lane from the on-ramp and at the same time jamming out to whatever fills your stereo are just givens in the system.

For those who don't like being cut off on the freeway while some schmuck gives you the courtesy hand wave like he thought you were letting him in, push over into the passenger seat and call "Shotgun." There are those of us who like to navigate in the traffic of Interstate-5 in Seattle or Interstate-84 in Portland.

I'll drive. It's fun, if ... you take it all in stride like a game. So what if you got cut off, get even with the yutz. Greg understands this philosophy of aggressive urban driving and pulled off his best Emerson Fittipalid imitation, wielding his Ford Bronco around like a Formula One race car.

After getting off at the KingDome exit and passing all the clueless drivers in the right lane, who must not have known that the closest parking lot can be reached from the left lane, we proceeded to the concession stand to get our KingDogs, KingCones and KingCokes.

At Saturday's game we got seated behind some visiting Red Sox fans. One of these visiting fools placed an open bag of peanuts right in front of me. I don't even like peanuts but when Greg chimed in with, "steal some peanuts for me," I couldn't resist the challenge, especially after successfully switching programs with a fellow the night before because some not-so-graceful kid spilled his KingCoke all over Bob's program.

I thought I'll just wait till the guy turns to watch Jose Canseco hit, then I'll slyly reach a hand over and steal a few peanuts. Our adjacent Red Sox lover must not have been much of a Canseco fan because as soon as I delved into his peanut bag he turned and gave me one of those, "What the hell are you doing?" looks. Of course my friends thought it was one of the funniest things ever while I was caught red handed like a kid who just got walked in on by his girlfriend's father.

Peanutgate blew over, but we needed

Vandal coaching staff untested

Damon Barkdull

Staff

Believe it or not Vandal pigskin followers, the football season is rapidly approaching and there are many new questions to be answered about the newly hired coaching staff.

Rookie head coach Chris Tormey may have many concerns about his team but thanks to the addition of coaches George Yarno, Kasey Dunn, Todd Hoiness, Jeff Mills and Paul Skansi things may be looking a bit brighter.

Last January Tormey was hired as the new UI coach after the sudden departure of John L. Smith to Utah State. After Smith left, athletic director Pete Liske almost immediately hired Tormey away from his assistant coach job at the University of Washington.

The former UI player and assistant coach always knew he would return to his alma mater and after serving 11 years under UW coaches Don James and Jim Lambright, Tormey was ready for a jump in the coaching ranks.

"This job has been a professional goal of mine since I started my coaching career in 1978," Tormey said.

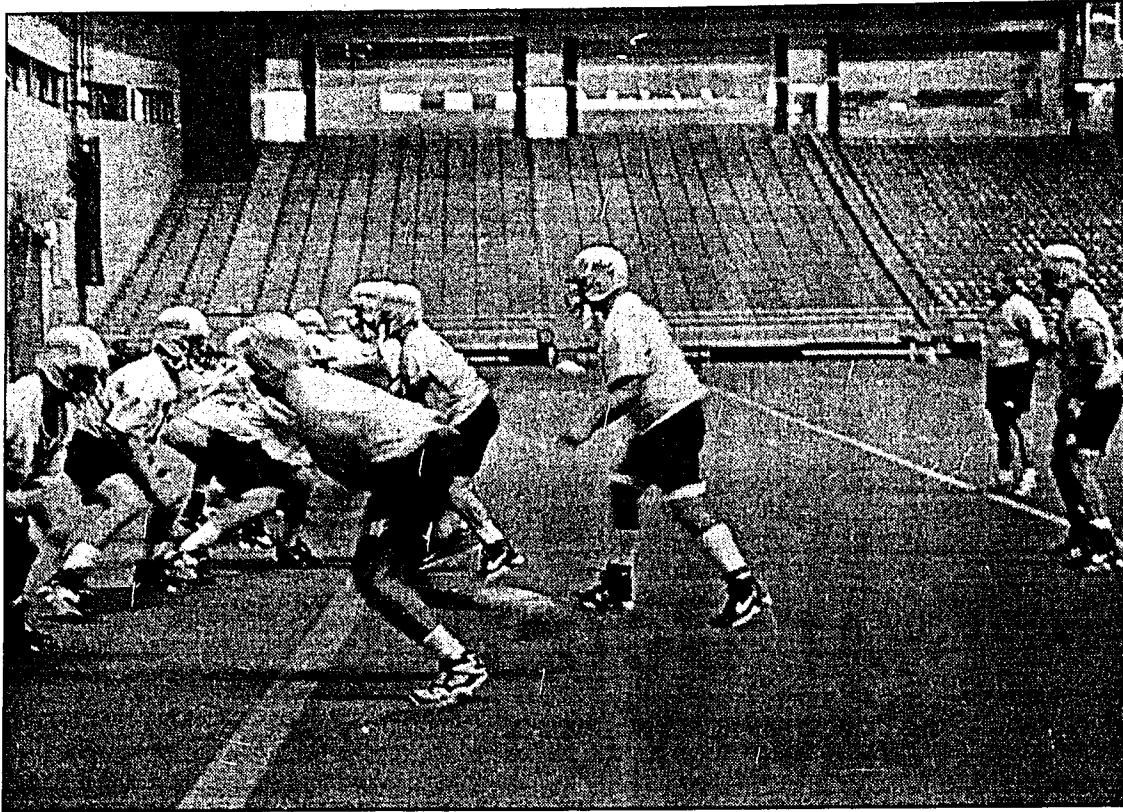

Once hired, Tormey began filling voids in his coaching staff and has since added the likes of coaches Yarno, Dunn, Hoiness, Mills and Skansi.

Yarno joins the UI coaching staff after completing four years as the Washington State University offensive line coach. During his time spent at WSU, Yarno's Cougars won in bowl games against both Baylor in the 1994 Alamo Bowl and Utah in the 1992 Copper Bowl.

"The chance to coordinate the offense and get some experience is something that can't be passed up," Yarno said.

The Spokane native and Ferris high school graduate also spent 11 years in the National Football League playing for the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, Atlanta Falcons, and the Green Bay Packers.

Yarno feels that his NFL experience has helped him to become a better player's coach.

"I know what goes through a player's mind. I know what they feel and expect as a player," Yarno said.

Joining Yarno on the offense will be returning alum Kasey Dunn.

Dunn is arguably one of the best offensive players to come out of Idaho and he currently ranks second in NCAA I-AA career receptions and career yards, only being bettered by NFL Hall of Fame bound Jerry Rice.

After completing a successful college career, Dunn went on to play two seasons with the British Columbia Lions and Edmonton Eskimos of the Canadian Football League.

The Poolsbo, Washington native left the coaching staff at the University of San Diego to coach the secondary at UI.

Coach Skansi may be the most familiar name to football fans in the northwest.

Skansi was a four-year starter at UW and finished as the Husky's all-time receiver with 138 catches for 1,723 yards and 15 touchdowns.

Later Skansi road a nine-year tenure with the Seattle Seahawks and ended his pro career with the Ottawa Roughriders.

Last season Skansi finished as an unofficial volunteer coach for UW.

Unlike Skansi, coach Mills has more coaching experience and knows the Big Sky as well as he knows his own mother.

Mills was responsible for the secondary at Montana State for the past three years and served as a graduate assistant at UW, Drake, and Western Washington University. The Des Moines, Iowa native will certainly have his hands full when he works with a UI secondary that struggled throughout the 1994 season.

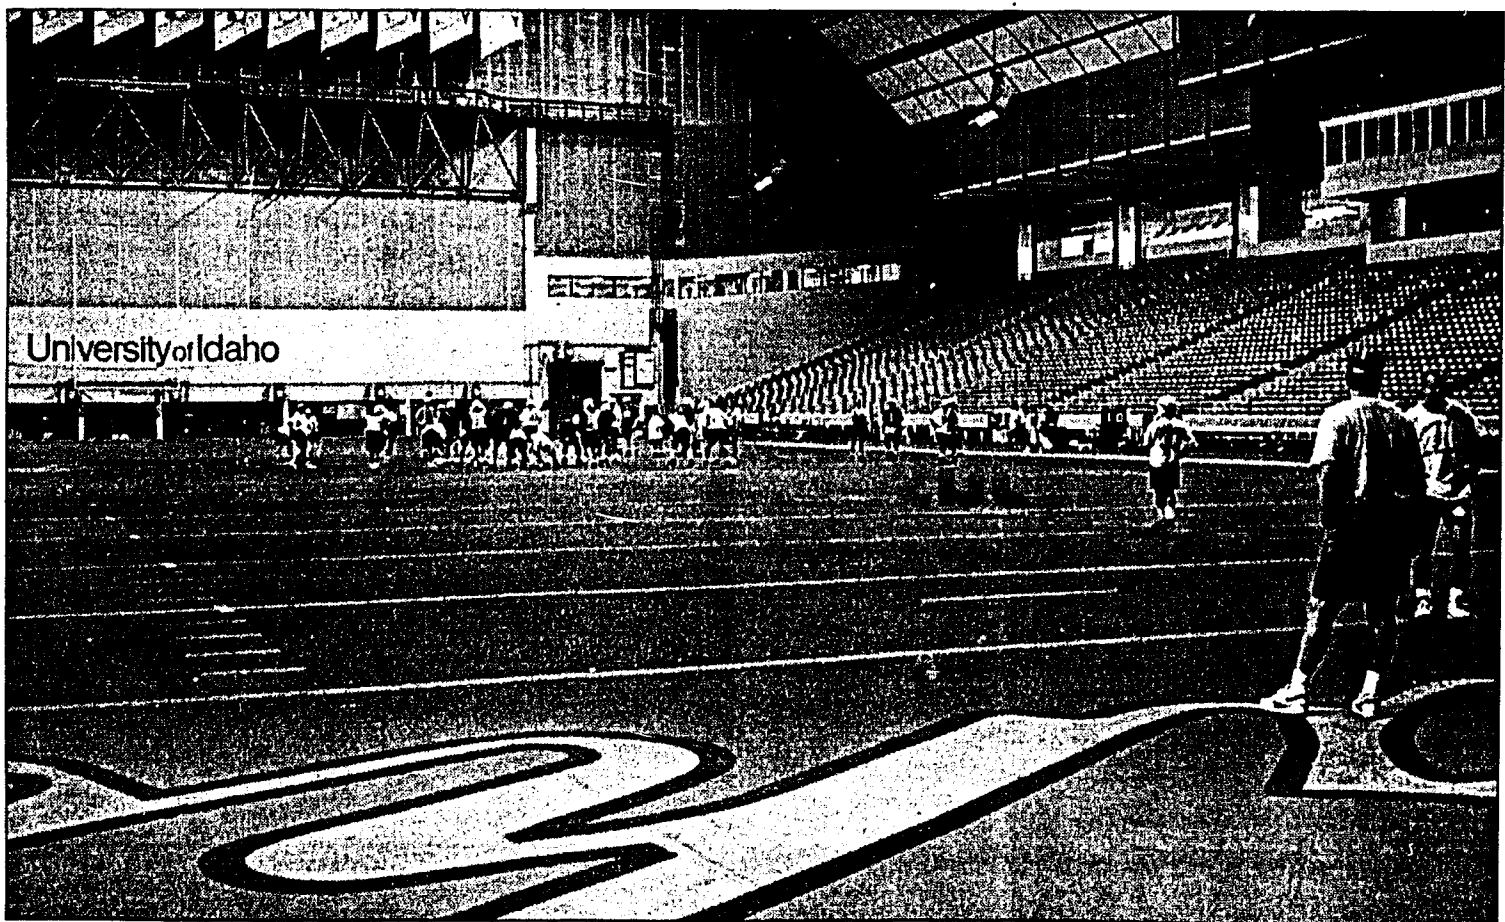

Although there is some fresh coaching blood in the rejuvenated Vandal coaching staff, four remaining Vandal coaches do return under Tormey, including: Jim Senter (assistant head coach/defensive line), Nick Holt (defensive coordinator/linebackers), Todd Hoiness (running backs), and Greg Olson (quarterbacks).

Nobody is questioning the credentials of this free agent coaching staff, but does Tormey have what it takes to get things done?

"We're not going to change. You won't see a big difference in our coaching scheme. I want to be myself. A lot has been done right around here for a long time and I want to keep continuity," Tormey said. "You must keep a winning edge and I believe that they are found in the kicking game, discipline, and conditioning."

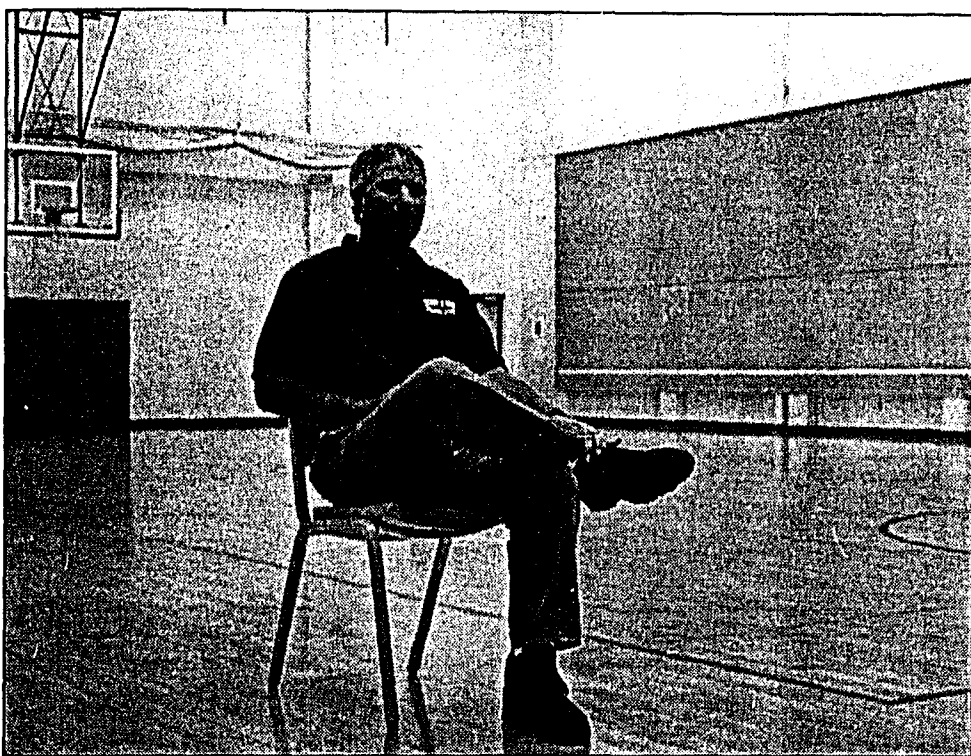

Coming off a 9-3 season and getting picked No.14 in the pre-season poll is tough to live up to if you consider a Vandal booster's expectations. Certainly time will only tell what Tormey and his band of juggernauts can do.

Idaho football coaches, right, oversee drills at practice Thursday.

Sportsmanship rules, hockey highlight IM changes

UI Intramural Director Greg Morrison scans the confines of the P.E. Building's small gym, where co-ed hockey will be played later this year.

Mark Vanderwall

Staff

With the coming of a new school year, also comes a new handbook for the Intramural season as well.

Greg Morrison, Intramural Director at the University of Idaho, expects this to be another great year for the intramural program here at UI. Morrison also expects the changes in the handbook to be for the benefit of the students and the intramural program equally.

To accommodate those who think they are going to win the championship shirts this season, or those who need an extra fifty bucks, the intramural program has put together a T-shirt design contest in which the winner will earn a hefty $50.

The only rules for the contest are that the T-shirt be laid out in a maximum of four color design and in by October 6th.

Among the changes in the new handbook is the adoption of the sportsmanship grading system for all intramural sports, as it was an evident success during basketball last spring.

"Only one person was ejected during basketball, and there were no fights. So I think the new rules did what we intended for them to do and that was increase the level of play, but at the same time keep the game clean," said Morrison.

Another change that was made for the benefit of the students was the addition of co-rec floor hockey to the list of sports offered intramurally here at UI.

"Washington State offers it over in Pullman and they fill it up within a couple of hours, so I hope it will become that popular here," said Morrison.

"It should be a lot of fun and eventually we might be able to have men's and women's divisions as well, but we'll have to see how things go first," added Morrison.

Again this year the intramural program is in need of officials for all sports and if you are interested, it is a good way to make a little extra money and meet new people while doing so. If you want more information or are interested in becoming an official give the intramural office a call at 885-6381 or stop by Memorial Gym room 204.

The entry deadline for Flag Football is September 5th, followed by Co-Rec Soccer on the 6th. The managers meeting will be held on the 7th at 4:30 p.m. in UCC 110.

The deadlines for Ultimate Frisbee and an Officials Clinic will be held on the 12th followed by the Soccer deadline on the 13th.

The new handbook will be discussed at the captain's meeting on the 7th, so all captains should plan on attending at the designated time.

If there are any questions about deadlines or being an official, contact the Intramural office at the number listed above.

Mills, Phillips named preseason all-Americans

The Big Sky Conference football race should be a tough one.

So tough in fact most national publications have Idaho picked in the top 15 in the country, but league coaches and media have the Vandals third in preseason polls. Last season Idaho was picked to win the conference championship and tied with Montana for second behind national runner-up Boise State.

• The Sporting News, Street and Smith's and College & Pro Football Newsweekly have all tabbed Idaho senior offensive tackle Jim Mills and junior defensive end Ryan Phillips as preseason all-Americans. Mills was a first team all-america pick last season while Phillips was a second team choice. Both players were first team all Big Sky selections.

• Big Sky coaches and media have chosen Phillips as the league's preseason defensive player of the year. Phillips, who helped anchor an Idaho defense that ranked first in the nation against the rush, picked up 13.5 sacks in his sophomore year and broke the school record for most tackles behind the line of scrimmage with 28.5.

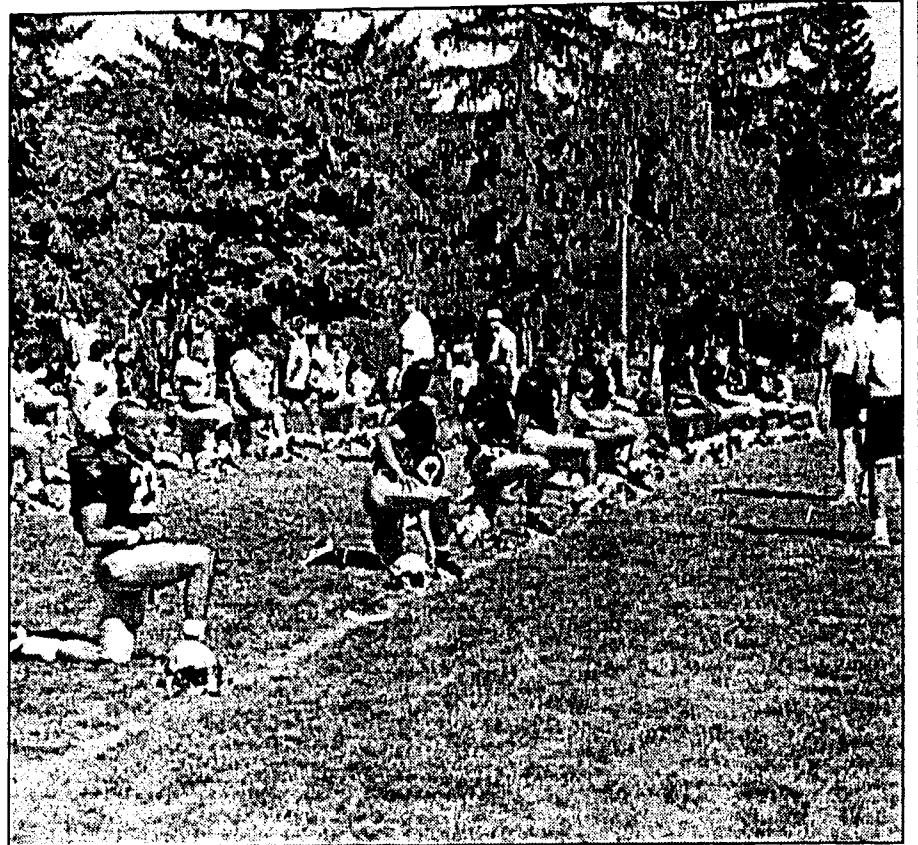

• First-year Vandals coach Chris Tormey didn't take the summer off from recruiting. Tormey has added junior college wide receiver Thomas Gamelin to the roster. Gamelin caught 53 passes for 719 yards at Palomar Junior College in San Marcos Calif. Gamelin, a Carlsbad (Calif.) High School grad, also totaled more than 1,000 all-purpose yards.

Pay-per-viewers get shaft

As Mike Tyson returns to the ring, so to comes the return of controversy surrounding his name.

Only this time the controversy is surrounding his less than brainy counterpart Peter McFly (McNeely). In what looked like Back to the Future IV, Finally Out of Jail, Tyson showed that he could still throw a punch and take one as well. THE END.

The White Sox scandal of 1919, Pete Rose's banishment from baseball, and Tonya Harding's Disney on Ice, don't hold a candle to the embarrassment this incident has put on the entire sports world.

For a guy that can't memorize a 20 word speech or the last time he got paid to fight, McFly was anything but deserving of a fight with Tyson. This idiot became a household name at Tyson's expense, when really he is the one that should be in jail for rape.

He is guilty on every charge of raping the 16,000 people that payed good money to watch this cantelope fight by not providing the show he got paid for. Any guy that could read 20 words off of a piece of paper, and flex his muscles would have been adequate for the Hair (Don) King's promotional tactics.

Hair Vision has once again let down the millions that bought Pee Wee's first 90 seconds on pay-per-view at $45.00 a shot, as well as his prize fighter Tyson at the same time. King has never been known to have any brains under that skunk pelt of his. This time there is evidence to back this claim up.

If King was going to pay McFly to intentionally throw the fight, why would he make it look so obvious. A manager who steps into the ring while his fighter is still standing and ready to fight is going to be awful hard for the Hair King to cover up. This last gasp fight King staged was like robbing a bank and leaving your business card on the vault when you're done. The fight officials in Nevada found it pretty fishy as well, as they are holding $179,000 from McFly's corner until they figure out why the Tiddy Winks entered the ring before devastation was complete.

In a profession that is becoming more and more criticized due to lack of talent at the top, McFly versus Chicken Guy makes things even worse. McFly was ranked number seven in the heavyweight division at the start of the fight, but number seven made him look more like the Jackass on Grizzly Adams than it did a man worthy of stepping into the same ring as Tyson.

When McFly came out swinging like a kite in the wind, Tyson was just waiting for the wind to die down so he could bring McFly down to the ground. With Tyson's next fight scheduled for the same night as the Holyfield vs. Bowe fight, Hair Vision will have a hard time capturing the entire pay-per-view audience.

With more stars filling the MGM Grand Casino in Las Vegas than there is in the Milky Way, seats ranged in price from ungodly to purely stupid.

Money was no object for the Tyson comeback, and the money made from Pay-per-view will likely increase The Hair King's Salon fund as well.

Granted it was Tyson's first fight after four years, but he is still capable of beating the best and I think that is what the people wanted to see, not the Mike Tyson that gets the job done in 90 seconds and goes home untarnished. If Mike Tyson is going to lose the glow surrounding his name, he must keep the same low key attitude from the McFly fight and at the same time get a Title fight before the end of the year.

O'Neal, Olajuwon to face off

Associated Press

Forget the NBA Finals. This time it's a one-on-one, pay-for-view hype event. Oh, yes, and this time, there's a cool million on the line.

Shaquille O'Neal of the Orlando Magic and Hakeem Olajuwon of the Houston Rockets, who went face to face in the NBA Finals swept by Houston, will play each other Sept. 30 at Trump Taj Mahal Casino Resort, it was announced Wednesday.

The purse: $1 million.

The event at the Trump Taj Majal Casino Resort will be part heavy-weight prize fight, part skins game, part pickup game dubbed "War on the Floor."

The NBA, which has no collective bargaining agreement with players and is in the midst of a lockout, is taking a hands-off approach, said deputy commissioner Russ Granik.

The format will be 10 rounds, or games, of 2 minutes apiece under "winner's out" rules. That is, the player who scores gets the ball again at the top of the key.

The winner of each round will get $100,000. In the event of a tied round, the money will roll over to the next round. Whoever takes the most rounds wins. A tie-breaker will decide the winner if there's a tie.

It's not the first once-in-a-lifetime basketball showdown in Atlantic City. In 1992, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Julius Erving played the same kind of exhibition here. Jabbar won 41-23.

some other sporting affair to quench our appetite for entertainment after watching John Valentin's homer crush all Mariner hopes for victory. Our fearsome foursome ended up entertaining the late night crew at Jack-in-the-Box and then moved on to Charlie Mac's Sports Bar. However, I will point out the Sports Bar only won out over the showgirls at the Extasy Club because we didn't figure it was safe for the four of us to go to a strip club then go back and share a single small hotel room.

Sunday morning started off with a bang when the Formula One Bronco blew a heater hose and groovy blue smoke came billowing out of the hood as we cruised down the freeway. We picked the wrong exit to get off on and we ended up in southwest Seattle. To be politically correct I'll just say it wasn't the nice part of town. I called the Napa auto parts store to ask if they had some hose and could bring it to us.

The worker asked where I was. When I told him he asked if there were any addresses or if they had all been shot off. That's not a good sign. After a two mile jaunt to the auto parts store, Rich the friendly attendant told us we should be glad our escapades occurred during the day because we would not have made the walk at night without being mugged. That was a good sign to get the heck out of Dodge. Although we got no help from any of the clueless gas station clerks in the area we still made it to the KingDome just in time for the On Deck Show.

Luckily we had left the hotel three hours before game time. The old sports adage says an ugly win is better than a pretty loss. Bottom line: we made it for game time so our Mariner marathon-male bonding-heater hose disaster was a win.

New equipment puts needs of students first

Michael Stetson
Staff

Students frustrated by seeing their fitness and recreational needs placed second to Vandal athletics will be excited to see new improvements to the ASUI Kibbie Dome's student recreation facilities.

This summer the management team of the Kibbie Dome took student interests to heart, purchasing six new exercise bikes and six new stair-stepper machines for student use.

Assistant Manager of the Kibbie Dome Terry Rivers said, "Kibbie is ASUI, we should promote its use for all students."

Students visiting The Dome should enter from the East Side, closest to the library and take either the stairs or elevator to the third floor concourse.

On the third floor, students may use any of the 12 exercise bikes, 12 stair-stoppers, or six Nordictacks free of charge with their student ID.

For students looking for something besides the stair-stoppers and bikes, the third floor concourse hosts a quarter mile walking and jogging track and stretching mats.

New windows, placed in the third floor concourse, will allow students to exercise during events and enjoy a game or show.

"Everyone on this campus should enjoy the Kibbie Dome," said Rivers.

The Dome offers students eight racquetball courts, a weight room with nautilus style equipment and free weights, stair-stoppers, exercise bikes, Nordictacks, and a 290-meter running track, free for students.

The main floor holds a 100-yard playing field that will be replaced by tennis and basketball courts following the Football season, all open for student use.

Open recreation hours for the ASUI Kibbie Dome are Monday through Friday 6 am to 10 pm, Saturday 8 a.m. to 10 p.m., and Sunday noon to 10 p.m.

The main floor will be closed for practices from 3p.m. to 6p.m., Monday through Friday and for special events.

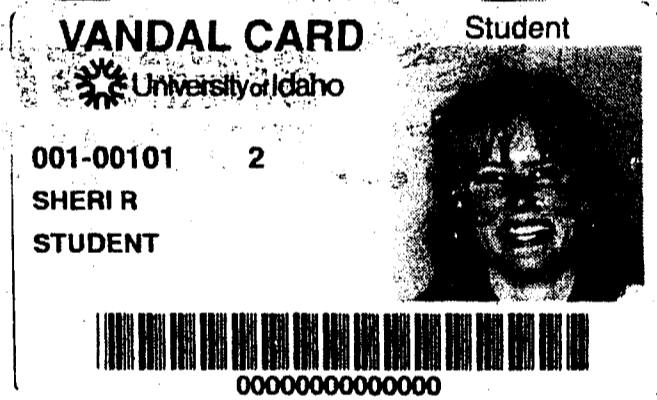

Carey Powell

UI students work out Thursday on the Kibbie Dome's new athletic equipment, installed over the summer on the east concourse.

Former Jets' coach Ewbank living history

Andrew Longeteig

Two-percent milk, peanut butter cookies and listening to stories of "the way it used to be" or "back in my day" are always highlights when visiting the ol' grandparents.

During a summer stay in Oxford, Ohio, I was privileged to interview Weeb Ewbank — a walking, talking and intriguing National Football League history book.

Although I never digested any milk or cookies, Ewbank rejuvenated his memory files dating from his collegiate years to his induction into the Football Hall of Fame in 1978.

Ewbank, 88, invited me into his quaint, one-story house about a Dan Marino toss from the Miami (Ohio) University campus, home of 17,000 students in the Moscow-sized town — not to be confused with the Florida school (campus stores sell T-shirts reading: Miami is in Ohio, Dammmit). He and his wife, Lucy, have been married for 69 years. They met after Ewbank's sophomore year in high school.

In the basement, Ewbank boasts hundreds of trophies, plaques, game films and other sports memorabilia — a miniature football museum.

Perhaps Ewbank is best known for coaching the AFL underdog New York Jets to the Super Bowl III victory over the Baltimore Colts in 1968 — the team that fired him in 1962. However, before there were Super Bowls, he won two championships as head coach of the Colts in 1958 and 1959. He is the only coach to win both NFL and AFL championships.

"Broadway Joe"
Ewbank coached nine Hall of Famers; among them, Johnny Unitas, Raymond Berry, Art Donovan and Joe Namath.

During Namath's rookie year, according to Ewbank, he said after a tough practice, "I thought I knew everything." This is a mere glimpse of Namath's ignorant, '60s lamb-chop lifestyle.

Talent-wise, Ewbank described him as clever, quick and blessed with a strong arm.

Off the field, though, Namath wasn't easy to catch up with.

According to Ewbank, Namath amassed 60 speeding tickets in the state of Alabama.

In the championship year of 1968, he missed the bus for the media's picture day because he couldn't get out of bed, resulting in a $50 fine.

At the stadium, Ewbank asked Namath's roommate, "Where's Joe?"

"I couldn't get him up. He can stand $50 — I can't."

Namath ended up hailing a cab and arrived before the team bus.

Ewbank said, "Joe, $50 fine."

Today, Ewbank and Namath still remain in contact, evidenced by Ewbank's collared shirt with "Joe Namath Golf Outing" inscribed on it.

QB luxuries

"You can't name any quarterbacks without naming (Otto) Graham, Namath and Unitas," Ewbank said. "There might be someone as good, but none better."

He said it's difficult to compare today's quarterbacks with those of the past because of rule changes and game strategies.

Ewbank and the Colts snagged Unitas after he was cut by the Pittsburgh Steelers. The Colts had no film footage of Unitas — only photographs. However, they liked his follow through and decided to sign him.

He said Unitas wasn't graceful, but he knew how to win.

In the 1958 NFL Championship, Ewbank's Colts faced the New York Giants in Yankee Stadium. It has been called "The Greatest Game Ever Played" by NFL's Legend magazine.

Just before regulation, a Giant field goal tied it at 17 apiece. In the sudden-death overtime, Unitas directed a 13-play, 80 yard drive capped by a 1-yard plunge by Alan Ameche for a touchdown.

Attitudes and egos

Football has undergone many changes since the '50s and '60s. The use of face masks, rules promoting the forward pass and free agency have put new twists on, and created new facets of, the game.

One change Ewbank cannot tolerate, though, is the egotistical attitudes of today's players.

"It's tougher to have teamwork today because it's a 'me' world," he said. "They (players from his era) were more dedicated. They're spoiled with their money now."

He thinks taunting and trash-talking, an increasing problem in college and professional football, is "ridiculous."

"At one time, if a player was playing dirty, the other team would waste a play and get him," Ewbank said, implying that the team would often humble the rebelling player with a ruthless tackle.

Ewbank also frowns upon "spiking." Generally, this occurs when a player scores a touchdown and then aggressively throws the ball into the turf. "Why the league doesn't have the nerve to stop it, I don't know. It's no longer a pat on the fanny."

According to Ewbank, ludicrous salaries have also soured the game. "I think you play a little better when you're more hungry. They had to do that to make a living." People—Shula, Al Davis, Buddy...

Through professional and collegiate athletics, Ewbank had the privilege to meet many people, both benevolent and evil.

He respects Al Davis, the furtive and controversial owner of the Oakland Raiders. Ewbank said Davis always tries to get an edge, ethical or not.

"Check your fingers after you shake his hand because he may keep one of them," Ewbank said.

The first game as head coach of the Colts, Ewbank started Don Shula, now legendary coach of the Miami Dolphins, at right cornerback. "He was a good student of the game."

However, Ewbank released Shula. "I said, 'Don, I hate to do this, but I need somebody with speed out there.'"

Shula's playing career never took off, but his coaching did. Shula replaced Ewbank in 1963. Ironically, they went head-to-head in Super Bowl III—Shula's Colts versus Ewbank's Jets. Amidst the Jets' 16-7 victory, their relationship never faltered.

Years ago, Ewbank also teamed with outspoken Atlanta Falcon head coach Buddy Ryan, who is known more for punching an assistant in Houston a few years ago, than his ingenious defensive strategies.

"I don't blame him for doing that," said Ewbank of Ryan's incident in Houston. "That guy (assistant) didn't know what the hell he was doing. It was a bad thing to do and it wasn't a place to settle it, but the assistant thought he was a God."

However, Ewbank doesn't enjoy criticizing or demeaning current NFL coaches. "I'm too old to get into fights," he justified. He added, "Football is the best citizenship laboratory if the coach is doing what he should be. That's life, really."

Reflection

Although Ewbank's record was an ordinary 130-129-7, he still boasts three championships as a head coach. He still wears his starry, stout Super Bowl ring, sprinkled with diamonds, but rarely in public. Ewbank said he is afraid someone will cut off his finger for it.

He is recognized around Oxford, especially at Miami football games where he is a staunch supporter. Although Indianapolis, where the Colts moved in 1983, is only a two hour drive, Ewbank remains loyal to the Jets.

Hip to be square

Ewbank maneuvers around his house slowly but surely. He sports two artificial hips; one implanted in 1978 and the other in 1984. He suffered the injuries when his players tried to hoist him on their shoulders. But, something got caught on the way up, and after some awkward aerial configurations, his hips were severely damaged.

In 1984, another accident happened. While on his John Deere riding lawnmower, which he received as a gift after he retired from coaching in 1973, his foot slipped and he crashed, breaking his right leg, resulting in 11 months of therapy.

The lawnmower, like Ewbank, is still running.

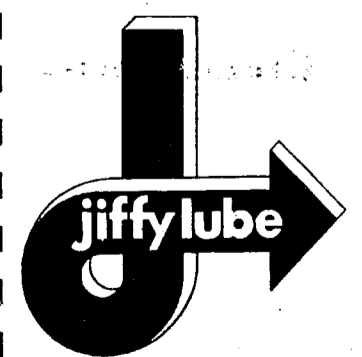

I just hope if I ever visit the Ewbank household again, he'll have the cookies and milk waiting. Maybe I'll have to mow his lawn as compensation.

Taco Bell®, Burger King®, TCBY® Yogurt (?), a SUB Connection®, a new Student Employment Center

...we're doing it!

Whatever it takes to give students a better life outside the classroom and inside the Student Union, we're doing it...and we've been doing it all summer. Soon the dust will settle, the new paint will dry, and all the noisy, dirty reconstruction will be done. Sorry for all the hassle, but it'll be worth it.

The new Taco Bell® should be ready to serve you very soon with the Burger King® opening close behind.

Yogurt (maybe TCBY!) and a SUB Connection® are on the menu, too.

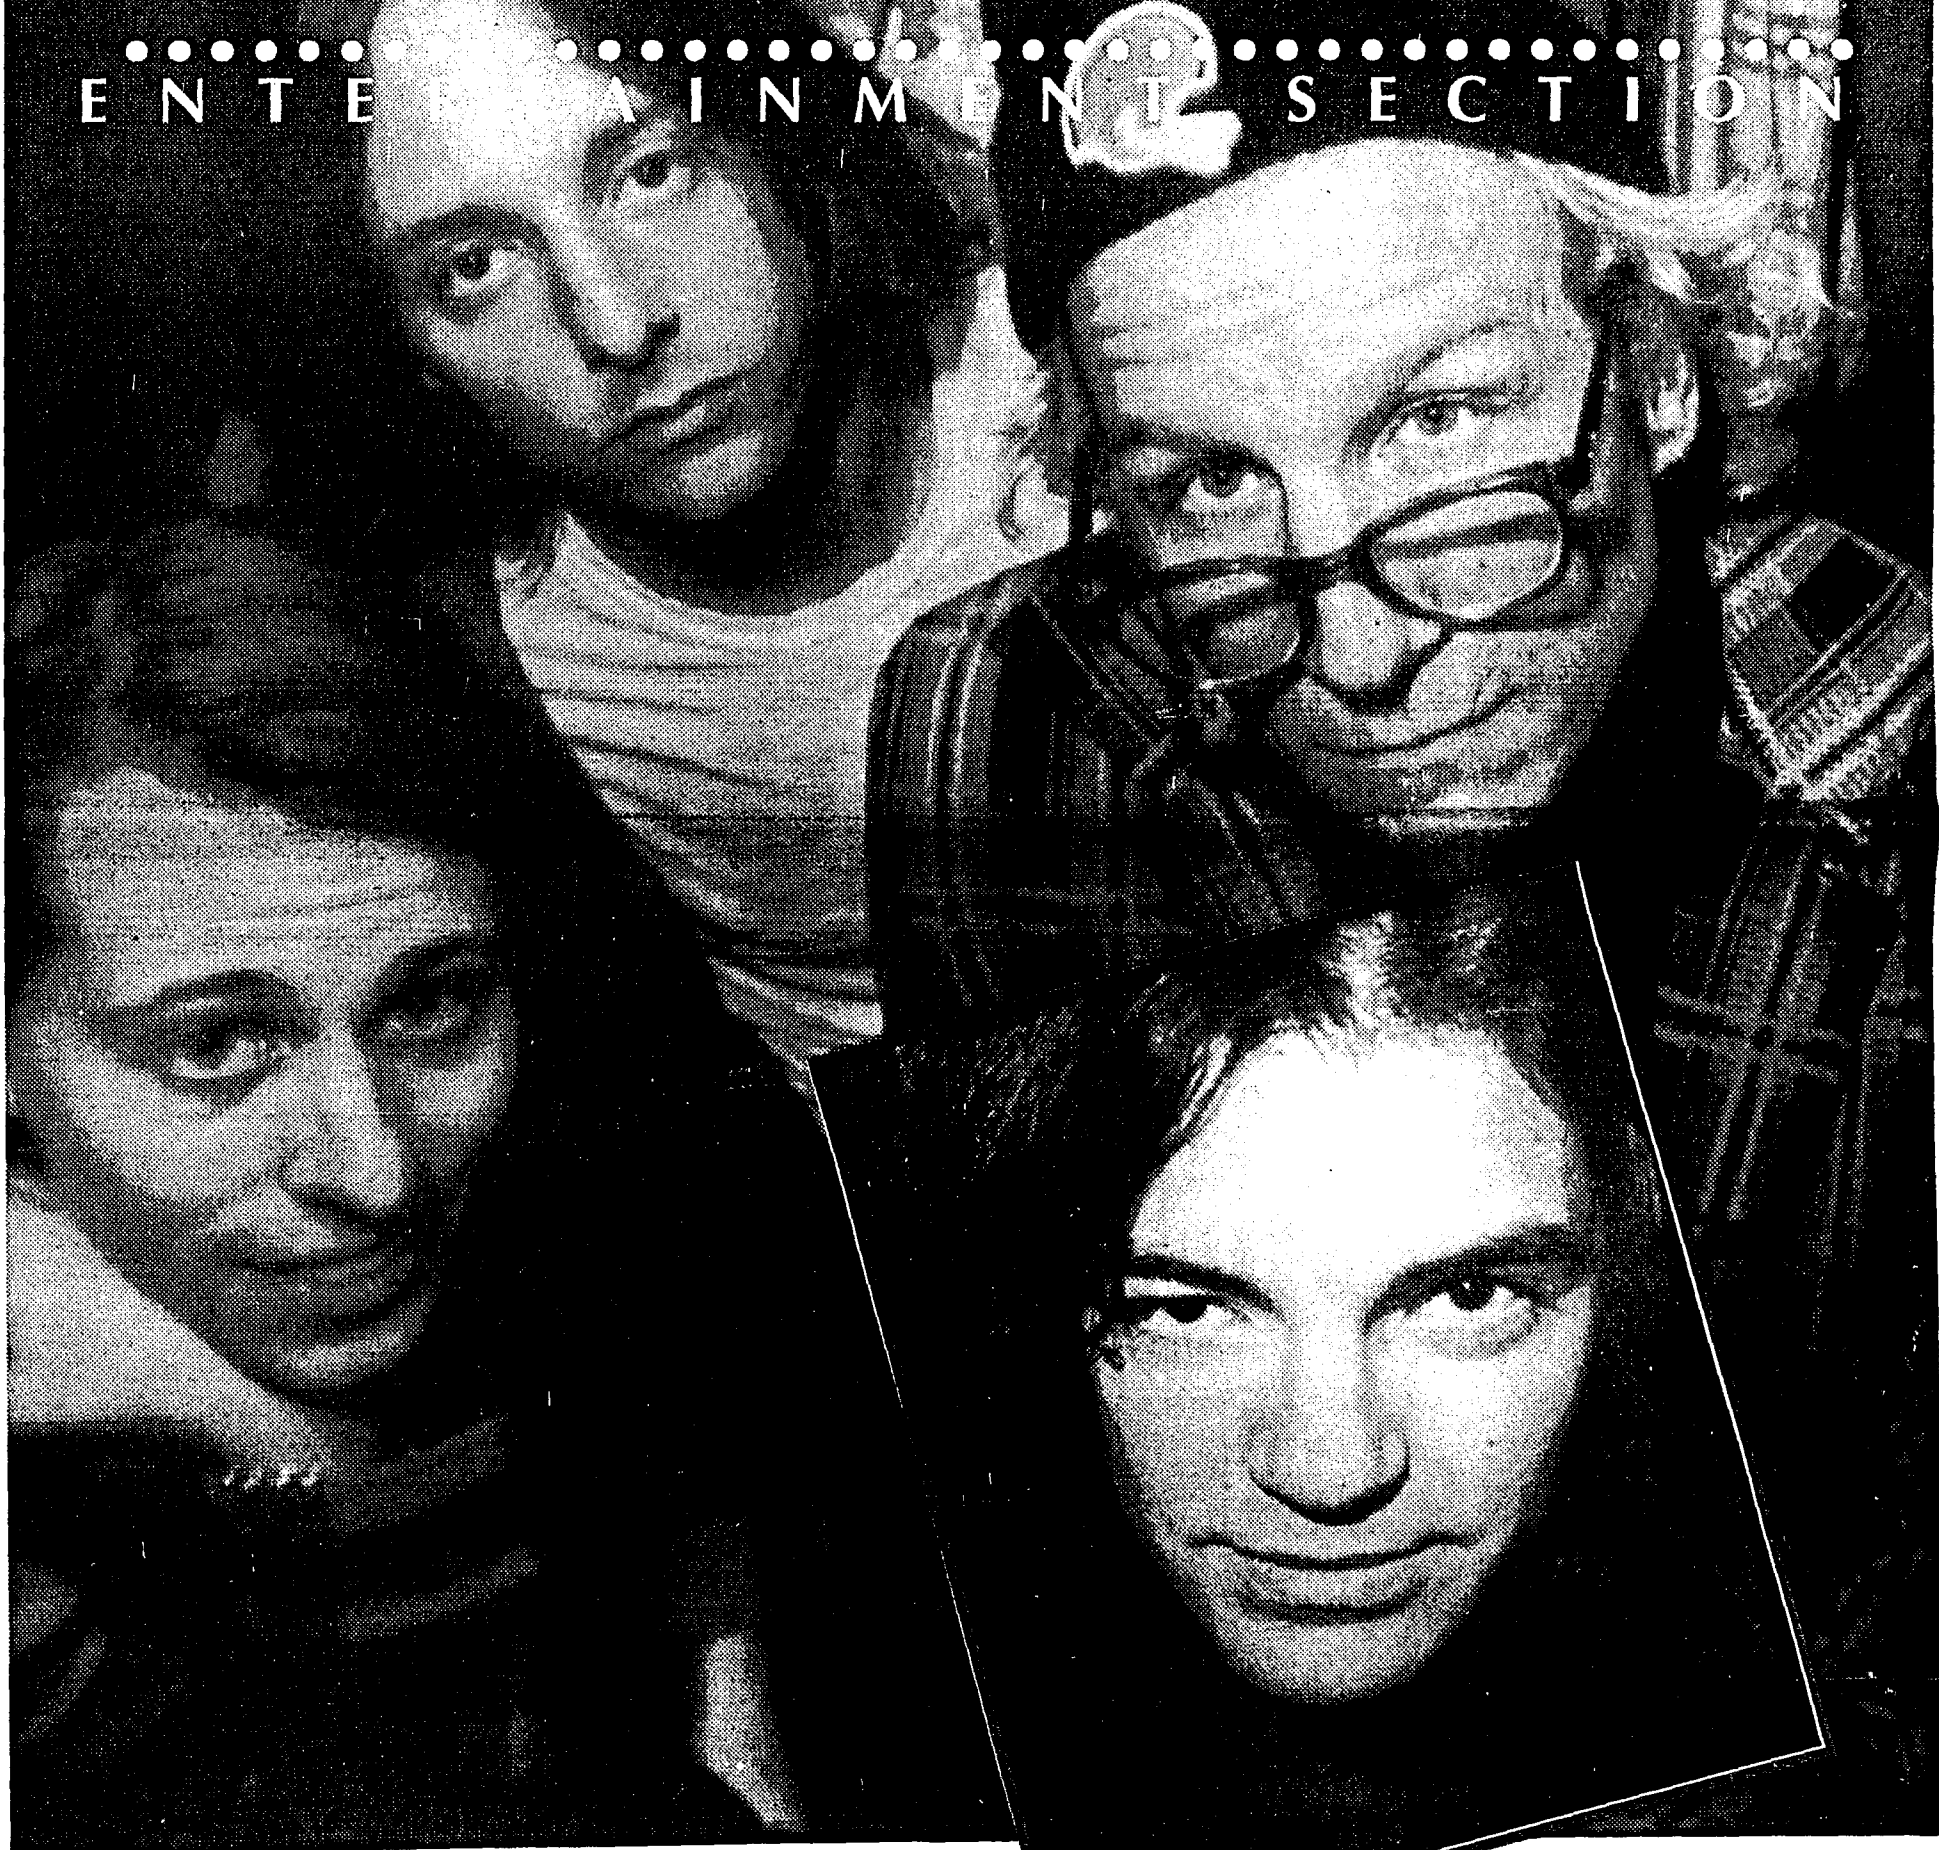

Expanded study areas, more office space for Student Organizations, ADA accessible ramps and elevator, a new Student Employment Center and many more exciting changes are on the way. If you have any questions just ask anyone in the Union and they'll be happy to explain "whatever" we're doing to make your student life better...in your Student Union.

we're doing it.

Plethora of events on tap for Palousafest

Jeremy Chase
Staff

If you like a wide variety of music, food and activities, be sure to drop by Palousafest '95, located on campus this Saturday from 3 p.m. to midnight.

Sponsored by the university, Palousafest '95 will feature free events ranging from local and regional bands, over 75 food and vendor booths, and a variety of other entertainers.

Shana Plasters, coordinator of co-curricular learning and student activities, said that Palousafest '95 is set to top last year's LollaPalousa. "I think we took the success of LollaPalousa and built upon it for Palousafest," she said. "The key to it is the variety of activities we'll provide to the students." Palousafest '95 also follows LollaPalousa in the spirit of providing safe weekend activities before school begins.

Chief among the activities is Palousafest '95's musical line-up. Headlining this year are The Posies, a nationally known band from Seattle. Defined as "Seattle's best band for creating the most glorious power-pop," The Posies have enjoyed success with their albums and have long been on the forefront of the enormous Seattle scene. The Posies will take the stage at 10 p.m. and close the show at midnight.

Supporting The Posies will be six other local and regional acts.

“ I think we took the success of LollaPalousa and built upon it for Palousafest. The key to it is the variety of activities we'll provide to the students.

—Shana Plasters

From Moscow, The Bedheads will be playing at 7 p.m., Circle of Knots from Pullman are at 8 p.m., and The Clumsy Lovers (renamed the Six Million Dollar Band), will be playing at 9 p.m. In the afternoon, Palousafest attendees will be able to see Dan Maher at 3 p.m., GQ at 5 p.m., and U.S. 95 at 6 p.m.

Plasters said that the music aspect of Palousafest '95 encompasses a variety of different music. "We've got local musicians who do folk and country to The Posies," she said. "People will find something for their musical tastes."

Besides the music, Palousafest '95 will also feature a variety of activities for attendees to participate in. Volleyball will be available at 4 p.m., a 3-on-3 hoop shoot at Memorial Gym will take place at 6:30, and sumo suits and gyrospheres will be available throughout the evening.

As for other entertainment, those interested can also see Brad Byers perform sword swallowing, object juggling and other feats of wonder at 4 p.m. Byers performed at last year's LollaPalousa, and has also been regular entertainment over the years during fall fraternity rush.

As a final part to Palousafest '95, booths will be set up across the campus to provide merchandise, food and soda.

For people across campus, Plasters said that Palousafest '95 will be able to provide enough entertainment to satisfy people. "The activities will constantly be changing," she said. "There's something for everybody."

Plasters also said that if you're willing to go, you won't be alone. More than 10,000 people are expected to see the sights and hear the sounds of Palousafest '95. Last year, up to 8,000 people attended LollaPalousa.

Summer spawns major label life for local band

Matt Baldwin

Staff

Pull the skeletons from the closet; climb into the storage rooms and yank out boxes of CDs and stereos. Pile into the ol' truck, head off to Seattle, pay for tickets and go through the gates into a show with lucid dancers on stage and watch translucent, hazed blue and red light beams streak through a clogged arena filled with artificial smoke. This is the life of music. Its will; Its testament. And this summer the music industry has much to talk about and much to mourn over.

Lets see here. From the Boise area we have seen some bands form. Of course some of these bands were here before the summer season began, but for those who are ill-informed of things happening in the local Boise music scene then here is a roundup. Boise has a great new band known as Luscious Fuzz. Luscious Fuzz's lead man, Larry Bishop, has also taken over the infamous Crazy Horse. For those who don't know the Horse is the local hangout out for concerts in the Boise area.

Other news from the home front. Boise band Built to Spill this summer was signed to a record deal with Warner Bros. Records. Built To Spill and it's creator Doug Martsch had previously released Ultimate Alternative Wavers on Seattle's C/Z records as well as the follow-up There's Nothing Wrong With Love on Seattle's Up Records. Built to Spill has also found some limelight on the Eastern leg of the Lollapalooza tour. They performed on the second stage there and will soon be performing at Bumpershoot in Seattle Labor Day weekend.

Page and Plant will be appearing in Boise sometime this year. We'll keep you posted on Page and Plant happenings.

This summer the industry has also lost a great performer: Jerry Garcia from the Grateful Dead has passed away at the age of 53.

The industry as well as the Dead's hordes of fans will be mourning the passing of Garcia. His music will be remembered. Concerning his music, which spans several decades, two of the Dead's discs have just entered into the top selling bracket again.

BLINK CHESHIRE CAT

Sometimes I get in the mood to hear some crazy, fast punk rock. When I heard Blinks track entitled M + M's on a compilation Compact Disc, I realized that it fit my mood perfectly and I was immediately hooked.

With this in mind I decided to hear their full length release, Cheshire Cat, distributed by Cargo Records.

I bought the album, listened to it, and was blown away. Those three boys from San Diego, Calif. know how to Rock n Roll and make you laugh at the same time.

Sixteen fast paced catchy punk rock tracks get you up and dancing! The guitar rift during Peggy Sue alone makes you hyper. You will find yourself bouncing off the walls in your room.

Blink's sound is comparable to other bands such as, NOFX and Guttermouth, whose vocal and guitar anthems are almost identical. However, Blink still manages to have a unique style all their own.

They combine witty lyrics about girls, being broke; girls, being alone; and oh yes girls. There really aren't any songs about depressing political disputes, just pure fun.

I found the album to be enjoyable from start to finish, which is tough to say about most releases these days. Because their sound is so similar to NOFX, Blink are definitely not pioneers of this style of punk rock.

Perhaps I like them because I can relate to their lyrics. Then again, it could be because it is just plain fun.

If you find that this sort of music is something that your stomach can handle, make your way to the local record store and buy it.

If you don't do it soon, it may be gone before you can Blink.

Rice's latest book falls short

Matt Baldwin
Staff

With the words "Lestat here" Anne Rice takes us on another sojourn into the world where night never ends and the body feasts upon the blood of life in her new book Memnoch the Devil.

Unlike her other books Memnoch the Devil fails to deliver us into the world of majestic darkness. Yet Rice still displays the natural talent for history and Romanticism.

As with a majority of Rice's work Memnoch the Devil is a dry piece of writing; it fails to entertain the reader.

There is hardly a plot line to the book. And what there is of a plot is just the basic premise of Lestat the Vampire being offered to the position as Memnoch's (Satan, Lucifer, call him what you will) Lieutenant.

The story begins with Lestat telling us about himself and it goes on into his next adventure which will take him to Hell, Heaven and Purgatory; Rice explores our own theology with her own views of what the afterlife will be like.

As the story proceeds Lestat reveals to us, in a conversation with David, the person who is following him. Baffling as it is Lestat for the first time begins to feel fear. Soon that shadow reveals itself as Memnoch, proffers his proposition to Lestat and allows Lestat to contemplate the deal.

Within the story we are introduced to the angels: Gabriel and Michael. And from Memnoch we are told the story of how Creation came about, how and why God cast Memnoch out of His court and what their war is over.

In Memnoch the Devil some of Rice's old characters come back: Louis, Armand and David.

Towards the end of the novel

Lestat has met God, has drank the blood of Christ and has lived what Memnoch has gone through. Essentially Lestat must make the choice to either serve God or serve Memnoch.

As far as Rice's horrific element in Memnoch the Devil there is none. She fails to deliver the horror reader any sense of that type of genre.

She may be a best seller, but she is not a master of the art like Stephen King or Clive Barker. Rice re-uses the old vampire myth to help sustain her stories.

Through her knowledge of history and other worldly things, though, she sometimes successfully pulls off a novel. She did not do this in Memnoch the Devil.

If you would like to read Rice's newest addition to the Vampire Chronicles it is available from the Knopf publishing group. Memnoch the Devil is available in hard cover only and costs $25.

Weekend provides many local activities

Anyone looking for something to do this weekend before classes begin can look forward to the following events:

Starting last Thursday and continuing through Saturday, US95 will be performing at Cadillac Jacks/Moscow Social Club. For those new to campus, Cadillac Jack's is located in Moscow at 112 N. Main.

On Friday, The Clumsy Lovers will be performing at John's Alley beginning at 9 p.m. Cover charge is $3. On Monday, Portland's Royball will also be at John's Alley. Once again, the cover will be $3. The Alley is at 114 E. 6th in Moscow.

Tuesday the Seattle based Sweet Water will be stopping in Lewiston, Idaho to perform at the Lewis-Clark State College Williams Conference Center.

The all-ages show starts at 7:30 p.m. with former Moscowites Royball opening. Tickets are $10 and can be purchased at Paradise Ridge Records in Moscow, Budget Tapes and Records in Pullman also at Granny's Music, Dr. Rocks and Pepperland Records in Lewiston. For more details contact Pepperland at (208) 746-8829.

Finally, on a non-musical note, The Beanery is in the process of beginning a pasta "all you can eat" meal on Monday nights throughout the fall. The first of these will begin Monday, Sep. 11, and the price will be in the neighborhood of $4.99. The Beanery is located at 602 S. Main in Moscow.
