In the meantime Davis commented that the Greek system must rely heavily on themselves to keep UI's Greek system as strong as it is now. Davis continued to say individual chapters must take pride in what goes on to ensure that the Greek system doesn't lose any ground it has already crossed.

"Nothing should change our commitment to the Greek system." A great source of pride for UI's Interfraternity Council and Panhellenic Council is the consideration by many other college campuses that UI has one of the strongest Greek systems nationwide.

tudent families can now take advantage of a program similar to the Early Childhood Center on a more flexible, part-time

The Taylor Avenue Children's Center opened Monday offering full-time, part-time, and hourly care for 2-and-a-half to 5-year-old chil-

"It was basically born out of a need-we've had as many as 300 on a waiting list," said Jan Reed, director of both centers.

ECC offers only full-time care. TACC provides a resource to parents who want the same program as ECC provides, but need only parttime or occasional care.

While TACC is open to all families, it was designed with students in mind. "Students will have preference. We're here as a service to the students," Reed said.

Bonnie Fisher, TACC program director said, "Parents can use the facility when they have study groups. They could use it to go to lunch, or when they have a hair appointment.'

TACC is located at 502 Taylor Ave. in the old child care building, which is shared with the South Hill Community Center. TACC grew from a dream to reality in just a matter of months.

"We made the proposal in March. To get the equipment here, we had to really move. We worked night and day," said Reed.

Parents must pre-register their children before using the center. The one-time fee of $25 is good for both TACC and ECC.

Families also must pay in advance for times they reserve at TACC. There are several rate until 5:30 p.m.

schedules from which parents can choose. When they enroll a second child, they receive a ten percent discount, Reed said.

The pre-school program at TACC stresses developmental skills. Multiple-purpose toys help children develop matching skills, motor skills, and hand-eye coordination. "This is not just a place to playit's a learning environment," Reed Storage rooms hold toys which are rotated because children have short attention spans and get bored with the same toys. The toys are also sterilized every day to reduce the spread of disease, said Reed.

Children receiving care at TACC must have current immunizations. They also need to be potty-trained. For more information, call ECC at 885-6414, or TACC at 885-885-3668. Office hours are 7:15 a.m.

Majority of students surveyed want new recreation center

Sean Tetpon Staff

Tearly 2,000 University of Idaho students surveyed last spring said they would support the concept of a comprehensive recreation center.

The Campus Recreation Department conducted the survey in order to obtain input on student recreation interests and facility

Of the 2,001 students who responded to the survey, 1,597 favored the construction of a student recreation center, 302 were neutral and 102 were opposed.

The need for a new student recreation area was addressed when the university hired a national consulting firm to look at student activity and recreation needs for the future.

"The sport management group came onto campus several times over the last two years and interviewed a wide variety of people in the athletic department, and anyone who dealt with activity space and programming," said Dr. Cal Lathen, director of Campus Recreation. "They said UI does not have enough facilities to handle the campus population now, much less that of the future."

Lathen said the sport management group recommended that UI "look into a student recreation cen-

Seven UI representatives, including Lathen and former ASUI President John Marble, attended a student recreation center symposium in Cincinnati last fall.

After touring several facilities in Ohio, Lathen said a decision was made to get student input concerning a new student recreation center for UI.

"In late fall of 1994, the campus recreation staff began writing the first draft of the survey to be conducted with UI students," Lathen said.

The final draft was completed by the Social Survey Research Unit in spring of 1995. The SSRU mailed the surveys to 3,000 randomly selected, full-time and part-time

Of the 3,000 students surveyed, 2,001 usable surveys were returned and analyzed. The survey revealed 42.9 percent of the students who responded feel that existing recreation facilities are too crowded, and 42.4 percent would pay a reasonable fee for construction and maintenance of a comprehensive student recreation center. The survey further indicated no particular demographic group was opposed to construction of such a center.

Survey results reflect the most and least used recreation areas in current facilities. The top five mostused facilities include eating areas, indoor track, weight rooms, locker rooms and lounge areas.

The top five least-used facilities are the video area, theater, indoor tennis courts, climbing wall and ball room.

Vice President for Student Affairs and University Relations Hal Godwin said, "If we do proceed with a recreation center, it will comprise of those aspects which students want most. We are not going to build anything without solid student input."

Godwin said a recreation center would be built as part of a larger project called the "University Center" project.

The proposed project calls for removing the Theater Arts and Psychology buildings and connecting the new building to the University Classroom Center. "We would put a new building in there and connect the UCC to it." said Godwin. "The recreation center would be part of the project.'

Lathen said the next step in planning the proposed student recreation centeis the implementation of 26 focus groups that would provide input in specific activity areas. The groups will form this fall.

Sportsmen angered by bear hunting initiative

POCATELLO, Idaho—Idaho sportsmen charge a statewide petition drive against three bear-hunting practices eventually will put all species off-limits.

The Idaho Citizens United for Bears is trying to gather 42,000 signatures statewide to put the initiative on the 1996 ballot. It would ask voters whether they want to ban use of bait or hounds to hunt bears, or abolish the spring bear hunt.

Southeastern Idaho hunters David Capell and Jerry Meyers said passage would be the first step to hanning all hunting step to banning all hunting.

"Clearly it's ignorance and paranoia that's feeding the belief that we're out to ban all hunting," said initiative chairman Greg Brown of Moscow.

"Hunting is here to stay in Idaho. Our agenda is to bring ethics and sport back to hunting. Clearly that means reforming black bear hunting laws."

"We feel no matter what Greg indicates, that if we lose one type of hunting, we'll lose another and another and there's nothing left," Capell said.

Capell is chairman of the Region Five Wildlife Council, advising the Idaho Fish and Game Commission. He also is president of Safari Club International's Idaho chapter.

In baiting, a hunter places food such as pastries, vegetables or fruit in a spot to attract bears. From a tree stand a few yards away, the hunter waits for the bear to come and feed.

"Baiting is the sporting and moral equivalent of shooting a caged animal in a zoo," Brown said. "They've got to haul those doughnuts in and wait. It's pretty tough."

He also objects to hound-hunting where a pack of dogs tracks and trees a bear before the owner either shoots the animal or photographs it.

The final item on the petition would ban a spring black bear hunt. Brown's group contends too many nursing mother bears are killed at a time when the cubs cannot survive without them.

Fuhrman returns to Los Angeles

SANDPOINT, Idaho—Mark Fuhrman was back in Los Angeles on Tuesday, far from his new north Idaho home, on the day his racially explosive tape recordings were played at the O.J. Simpson trial.

"There's nothing going on here," said Drewe Dickson, who gained a famous new neighbor when Fuhrman and his wife, Caroline, moved into a home across the street in this northern Idaho community of about 5,200."I haven't seen anyone over there and I've been here all day."

Late Tuesday, Officer Manny Valladares, a spokesman for the Los Angeles Police Department, confirmed that Fuhrman was in Los Angeles and had been met by a representative of the District Attorney's office at Los Angeles International Airport.

After retiring from the LAPD, Fuhrman moved to Idaho, in part to escape the scrutiny he has faced in the O.J. Simpson trial.

Logging law challenged under NAFTA

WASHINGTON—Two dozen environmental groups are filing the first formal complaint under the North American Free Trade Agreement, challenging a new U.S. logging law they say violates a side pact on the environment.

The groups want an international panel to take the first step toward blocking the logging law, which exempts some timber-cutting in national forests from regulations protecting fish and wildlife.

The U.S. conservationists say the logging law that President Clinton reluctantly signed last month violates the NAFTA side agreement that the administration demanded out of concerns that Mexico would try to gain an unfair trade advantage by skimping on environmental protections.

"It is ironic that the first complaint would be filed against the United States," said Patti Goldman, a lawyer for the Sierra Club Legal Defense Fund in Seattle.

The Sierra Club and the other groups were filing their complaint today with the North American Commission for Environmental Cooperation in Montreal.

The logging provision suspends the Endangered Species Act and other laws to expedite harvests of salvage timber in an effort to reduce wildfire threats in federally owned forests.

It also directs the Forest Service to log—free from the normal environmental constraints—some of the Pacific Northwest's oldest forests that are home to threatened northern spotted owls and marbled murrelets.

Further, the logging is insulated from administrative appeals or court challenges.

Clinton has said he would not take advantage of those exemptions and would authorize only logging that is consistent with existing laws.

"As a result, many environmental violations will be left unredressed and a great deal of on-the-ground environmental harm will occur," the environmentalists said in their complaint.

The logging law "offends the spirit of the NAFTA admonition to avoid waiving or derogating from environmental measures to attract or retain investment," the groups said. Besides the Sierra Club they include the National Audubon Society, The Wilderness Society, Friends of the Earth and the Natural Resources Defense Council.

The three-member commission, composed of Environmental Protection Agency Administrator Carol Browner and her counterparts in Canada and Mexico, will be asked to investigate the new U.S. law to determine whether it complies with NAFTA's environmental side agreement, the Sierra Club's Goldman said.

The agreement "is peppered with requirements of adequately and effectively enforcing environmental laws," she said.

The panel itself has no power to strike down the U.S. law. But a 2-1 vote that a violation had occurred would open the door for Canada or Mexico to launch a trade complaint that could result in sanctions against the United States, Goldman said.

There was no comment on the complaint from the administration.

NATO air strikes on Bosnian Serb positions

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina—NATO fighters launched a fresh attack on Bosnian Serb positions early Wednesday, their third assault over several hours to retaliate for the the deadly shelling of a Sarajevo market, the United Nations said.

News of the new air strike was announced by Lt. Col Pierre Briere, a U.N. spokesman. He said Serb positions around Sarajevo were struck in the 9 a.m. (0700 GMT) raid.

Earlier, two waves of NATO warplanes struck between about 2 a.m. and 5 a.m. (midnight-0200GMT). U.N. sources said NATO jets also targeted Bosnian Serb air defenses near the towns of Mostar in the west, Gorazde in the east, and Tuzla to the north, but there was no immediate NATO confirmation of that.

Police fire on university students

PRETORIA, South Africa—Police on Wednesday fired rubber bullets at students, breaking up a protest on the main campus of the University of South Africa in Pretoria.

The clashes came after about 300 black students pelted police and university security staff with stones. One student was arrested for malicious damage to property, police spokesman Capt. Dave Harrington said.

The protesting students' main demand was a leading role in reforming the university, long a white-dominated institution now trying to serve the country's black majority.

LSAT and GRE prep courses offered

The University of Idaho Community Enrichment Program is offering both Law School Admissions Test (LSAT) and General Record Exam(GRE) preparation classes. The LSAT Prep Course, a series of classes taught by legal and writing professionals, provides real-world expertise to help students reading, writing, and reasoning skills tested on the law admissions exam.

The LSAT series is offered by

Wynn Mosman, a Moscow Attorney; D'Wayne Hodgin, UI English professor; Doug Wilson, an expert in classical studies and logical reasoning; Mark Anderson of the UI College of Law, and Erik Bjorkman, a law student.

The seven sessions will be held from 7 to 8:30 p.m. on Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays beginning Sept. 5, in room 105 of the Law School. The fee for this course is $67.

The GRE Prep Course, offered Monday and Wednesday evenings from 7 to 9 p.m., begging Sept. 18, in room 12 of the UI Niccolls Building

This seven session series will be taught by Dusty Sabo, a teaching associate and Ph.D. candidate in the UI Mathematics Department, and Melynda Huskey, director of Independent Study at UI and former English professor. The fees for this series are $62 if enrolled by Sept. 4; $64 if enrolled later.

For more information contact the Community Enrichment office at 885-6486.

Student fellowship starts meetings

Student Evangelical Fellowship is a new Christian ministry focused on strong Bible teaching and worship. The group is meeting at Redhawk Crossing on Wednesdays at 7 p.m. SEF plans to have small group Bible studies and other activities. For more information call 882-2034.

Coca-Cola pulls out of Iran

NICOSIA, Cyprus—The next time Iranians reach for a Coke it won't be the real thing.

The Coca-Cola Co. has stopped delivery of its secret formula following a U.S. ban on trade with Iran, the company's local subsidiary, the Nushab Co., said Tuesday in a newspaper advertisement.

Coke spokeswoman Kathryn Norton at the company's Atlanta headquarters confirmed Coke has not shipped concentrate to Iran since President Clinton imposed the boycott.

The ad in the Farsi-language Kayhan daily said the local firm would continue to use the trademark Coke bottles for the time being. But they will be filled with locally-made orange sodas until new bottles could be produced.

Clinton imposed a trade embargo on Tehran in June after accusing the Iranians of sponsoring international terrorism and trying to manufacture nuclear weapons.

Wimer resigns from ASUI Senate

Shelby Dopp Editor in Chief

Scott Wimer resigned from his position as ASUI senator Monday. He will now serve as director of high-end technical support for Earthlink Network, Earthlink is a company based in Los Angeles, Calif. The company provides Internet connectivity to businesses across the country that wish to get on-line. Wimer works "with really big corporate accounts" that wish to use Earthlink's services.

"I make sure their (big corporations) accounts stay up and online," he said.

Wimer found the job with the year old company after browsing the World Wide Web last spring. He thought the job sounded interesting and decided to apply. Earthlink hired him on, and he has been working in Los Angeles all summer. He intended to come back to the University of Idaho this fall, but Earthlink wanted to keep him on staff. He will continue to take correspondence courses through the university, and the company will cover the cost of his educatoin on top of his salary.

"Basically, I'm having a blast and they're paying me to do it,' he said.

Scientist shows chaos in nature

Justin Oliver Ruen

University of Idaho Professor Brian Dennis has co-authored a study published in Nature magazine utilizing chaos theory to explain wildly fluctuating wildlife populations.

Dennis, a professor of Fish and Wildlife Resources, collaborated on the ongoing study with Robert Costantino, a zoologist at the University of Rhode Island; Robert Desharnais, a biologist at California State University at Los Angeles and James Cushing, a mathematician with the University of Arizona.

"We are an inter-disciplinary group, my background being statistics applied to ecology," Dennis said. "The chaos theory in ecology and other sciences deals with the effect of time-lags and feedback in systems. Whatever happens in the future depends in a non-simple way on what happened in the past."

Such a system can be "highly unpredictable," Dennis said. "That is, a tiny change in the initial state of the system could cause a wildly different change in the future course of the system."

An example of a system would be a thermostat, providing feedback regarding the temperature of the house to a furnace. When the temperature drops below a certain level, the thermostat provides feedback to the furnace to turn on and increase the temperature.

"Suppose we have a temperature recorder in the home, and the thermostat trips on or off the furnace depending on what the temperature is not now, but was yesterday. So no matter what the temperature is now, the system would be doing whatever was appropriate yesterday," Dennis said. So if a hot day followed a cold day, the furnace would come on, producing a wildly erratic system. This is how wildlife populations react to changes in the environment.

"What is happening today depends on what happened previously: how many predators there were, what the state of the foodsupply was, and so on," Dennis said.

"We took populations of flour beetles in the laboratory, and they were a simple feedback system as an unusual source of feedback: they eat their young. Because of that, the number of eggs in the culture today depend on how many adults there were last week. So this feedback system has the potential of producing wildly erratic, unpredictable populations sizes through time," said Dennis.

Dennis further explained a set of control populations had a natural, unmanipulated death rate, and then a set of treatment populations had different adult death-rates, and had wild fluctuations in egg populations. The highest death rates among adult beetles produced the most unpredictable egg population

"Predators, disease, competition for resources, and food supply are all elements of the feedback system in which wildlife thrive. These have the potential for producing unpredictable responses to our management actions," Dennis said.

The magazine Nature published Dennis' and his collaborators findings in the May 18, 1995 issue and was critiqued by University of Washington Zoologist Peter Kareiva in the same issue.

"We might think that ... pesticide application would simply reduce the populations affected...but increased mortality could actually cause beetle populations to shift from stable equilibrium to irregular fluctuations," Kareiva said.

"The scientific community has been very excited by this series of experiments," Dennis added.

Dennis said, "The experiment points out that the future of wildlife management will become increasingly quantitative and will use tools such as mathematical modeling and statistical analysis in a greater fre-

University of Idaho students, staff and faculty are now more knowledgeable on how to bridge the gap between themselves and their community thanks to the Volunteer Fair held Thursday in the Student Union

Phi Gamma Delta honored at summer conference

Jennifer Eng

Over the summer while many people were out enjoying the sun or trapped behind a counter at the same old summer job, fraternities and sororities from across the nation met at their annual conferences.

Many of the fraternities and sororities on the University of Idaho campus came back with impressive awards that prove to everybody that the UI Greek system is one of the best.

The men of the Mu Iota Chapter of Phi Gamma Delta fraternity came back from the fraternities' 24th FIJI Leadership Academy with two major awards and two honorable

Jeremy Chase of Phi Gamma Delta said, "We are always excited to receive accolades from our nationals."

The biennial leadership school, held in Lexington, Kentucky once a year, set the UI chapter apart from 128 counterparts located at universities internationally. The leadership school is held to recognize chapters that have gone above and beyond the expectations of a fraternity chapter.

The Mu Iota Chapter of Phi Gamma Delta received second place in the Brightman Trophy, third place in the Cheney Cup and Honorable Mention in both the Baker Cup and the Zerman Trophy.

The Brightman Trophy is awarded to the chapter which has done the most to maintain and improve relations between its chapter and the graduate members of the fraternity in the last year.

Student Counseling Center offers support

Mike McNulty

A recent explosion of on-campus alcohol offenses has kept the University of Idaho Student Counseling Center busy offering help for people dealing with the stress and pressures associated with college drinking.

As students flocked to school last weekend, the Moscow Police Department had more than 25 reports of alcohol related crimes on campus, five of which were public urination complaints. This week, students have been filling the office of the Counseling Center to take time out from their busy schedules and talk to trained stress managers.

The Student Counseling Service, located in room 309 of the University Classroom Center, operates in compliance with the Drug Free Schools and Communities Act Amendments of 1989. The center provides a confidential place for students who want to learn more about themselves and the choices available to them, and help them cope with the problems, fears and pressures of campus life.

A plan to improve Moscow city bike paths, and decrease traffic congestion, and pollution is nearing the construction stage, said Kenton Bird, chairman of the city's Sixth Street advisory com-

According to an Aug. 27 press release, the plan consists of three parts. On-street bicycle lanes will be put on both sides of Sixth Street, extending from Main Street to Deakin Avenue. A new sidewalk will also be constructed on the south side of Sixth Street from Jackson Street to Asbury Street.

There will be a bicycle and pedestrian bridge built over Paradise Creek south of West Park Elementary, west of the two existing bridges.

Extending north from Line Street to Third Street, an offstreet bike path will be constructed. The path will be constructed along the north side of the University of Idaho Facilities Management complex, and will connect to an existing bicycle/pedestrian path at Rayburn.

Despite debt, Chenoweth trails in fundraising

BOISE (AP)—Despite having one of the largest third-party debts of any freshman Republican in the House, Idaho's conservative Congressman Helen Chenoweth is trailing her colleagues in fund-raising this year.

A new analysis of campaign finance reports for the first half of 1995 showed that the average amount of campaign cash raised from January through June by the 50 House GOP freshmen was $142,000, $20,000 more than Chenoweth managed to generate.

The largesse showered on freshman who catapulted the GOP into the majority for the first time in 40 years was largely a result of special interest political action committees trying to compensate for years of investing huge sums in

Democrats over the past four er this month when her campaign

"Now they are playing catchup, unashamedly," said Steven Stockmeyer, a Republican who runs an association of business PACs. "That's one reason you're seeing the big numbers."

The $122,000 Chenoweth did raise was substantially greater than the amount raised by either Republican Rep. Michael Crapo, Idaho's other congressman, or the man she defeated, two-term Democrat Larry LaRocco, during his first six months in office.

But much of that cash was plowed into fund-raising and little progress was made on retiring Chenoweth's substantial debt to creditors other than herself.

That debt rose dramatically earli-treasurer, Wayne Crow, acknowledged that $40,000 misrepresented on federal reports as a personal loan from Chenoweth was actually a loan from West One Bank.

The last reports on which the loan was misrepresented also indicated that it was neither secured by collateral or guaranteed by any individuals—a requirement under federal law for campaign loans made by banks. Without one or the other, the loan could be viewed as an illegal corporate contribution.

Crow said three weeks ago that a new financial report would be filed, correcting the lender's identity as well as numerous other flaws in the midyear filing. But a copy of that amendment report has yet to be received by the secretary of state's

With that additional $40,000. Chenoweth still owed third-party creditors nearly $100,000 from the 1994 campaign. She also owes herself $55,500.

Only five other freshman Republicans had larger campaign debts than Chenoweth, but hers is the exception to the general rule that those debts are primarily owned to the congressmen themselves or were just carried over from previous-and unsuccessfulpolitical races.

And two of those five freshman-Greg Ganske of Iowa and Frank Cremeans of Pennsylvania—made major financial programs during the first half of the year. Ganske raised nearly $300,000 while Cremeans generated almost $270,000.

Michigan schools faced book censorship challenges

WASHINGTON (AP)—There were a dozen challenges from parents to censor books in Michigan public schools during the 1994-95 academic year, a group advocating constitutional liberties reported Wednesday.

People for the American Way said nationally there were 338 attempts to remove or restrict books in public schools, often because they contain profanity or sexual scenes. About 50 percent were successful, the group said in its annual

In Michigan, the group documented three cases in which a book was pulled from the library shelf:

-In Grosse Pointe, a parent objected to sexual references and violence in The Chocolate War by Robert Cormier, which was available in middle school libraries and on the district's approved reading list for eighth-grade language arts classes. The assistant superintendent removed the book from library shelves, the recommended book list and one language arts class. Use of the book in the language arts curriculum is under review.

-In Kent County, the principal removed the books In the Night Kitchen by Maurice Sendak and The Stupids Die by Harry Allard after a parent objected to Allard's use of the word "stupid" as a put-down and a nude drawing of a boy in

In Williamston, the then-middle school principal told the librarian to remove the book Fade by Cormier after a parent complained about its sexual content and violence.

Most of the other challenges were denied, but at least one case led to restrictions on the use of -A parent in Battle Creek wanted two books removed from the elementary school library for frightening descriptions of monsters and ghouls. The books, by Jack Prelutsky, were Night: Poems to Trouble Your Sleep and The Headless Horseman Rides Tonight: More Poems to Trouble Your Sleep. The school board voted to uphold a review committee's recommendation to retain the books.

-A parent in Battle Creek objected to Alvin Schwartz's books, Scary Stories to Tell in the Dark, More Scary Stories to Tell in the Dark, and Scary Stories 3: More Tales to Chill Your Bones, which were available in an elementary school library. The parent said the books taught witchcraft and displayed a cartoon of a beheaded woman. The review committee voted unanimously to retain the children's stories.

-A parent in Bloomingdale asked that the three Scary Stories books be removed from elementary school libraries, complaining they contained violence and caused children nightmares. The school board decided to restrict library access to the books to fifth- and sixth-graders and to forbid teachers to read aloud from the books in elementary school classrooms.

-In Harper Woods, another parent objected to the second book in the series, More Scary

Thirteen-year-old who killed father listened to violent music

RUSSELLVILLE, Ky. (AP)—A 13-year-old Logan County boy was listening to heavy metal music with lyrics that referred to Satan and the occult just minutes before he fatally shot his sleeping father, state police said Wednesday.

Detective Bill Jenkins said investigators had recovered "a drawing this boy made within a minute of the shooting and some writings made within a minute of the shooting.'

The writings contained some lyrics from the compact disc the boy was listening to just prior to the shooting, Jenkins said. The lyrics referred to Satan and the occult, Jenkins said. The drawings depicted "the way some people think the devil looks, the grim reaper looks."

"He obviously had some interest in the occult," Jenkins said, holding up a case of the rock group release newest Danzig's "Lucifuge."

"Whether he understood these drawings and writings, we don't

Washington sheriff calls law unconstitutional, won't enforce it

OKANOGAN, Wash. (AP) — Sheriff Jim Weed says it's unconstitutional to require federal agents to get written permission to conduct investigations in the county, so he won't enforce a resolution by the Okanogan County Commission.

The commission cannot change federal law with the stroke of a pen, Weed said.

"If they want to make a political statement, which I think this is, that's fine," Weed said Wednesday.

"But the concern is that if they really want this to be the case, they need to work through the appropriate arenas and change federal law by lobbying Congress.'

The commission adopted the resolution earlier this month, giving the sheriff ultimate jurisdiction over any federal law enforcement activity in the county.

"We are sending a message," Commissioner Spence Higby said. "We are sending a message that we aren't going to sit idly by anymore, but we are going to take control back. Some may call that radical, but I call it responsible."

The commission said it wanted a legal basis to try to prevent in Okanogan County a federal siege such as the ones that occurred at the Weavers' cabin at-Ruby Ridge in Idaho or at the Branch Davidian compound at Waco, Texas.

Eighty-one people died at Waco and three at Ruby Ridge. Since then federal agents have been harshly criticized and investigated for their handling of the standoffs.

"I don't intend to get Okanogan County embroiled in a multi-million dollar lawsuit that would bankrupt the county, nor do I intend to get into combat with federal

Audit finds travel savings for state changes and negotiating with major airlines could trim at least $400,000 from the state's yearly travel budget, the new legislative Office of Performance Evaluations reports.

But the first thorough evaluation conducted by the office, released on Monday, offered little evidence of major problems in the way the state handles government travel.

"State government is pretty well managed despite the fact that the public doesn't seem to know it," House Appropriations Chairman Kathleen Gurnsey of Boise said.

Nancy Van Maren, director of the office, said the $400,000 estimate was the minimum savings to the state if all the recommendations were implemented.

The annual amount could be greater, she said, if the state centralized travel management.

Still, even with the likely maximum savings, the state's annual travel budget would still exceed $20 million, based on figures compiled for the budget year that ended June 30, 1994, the most recent year that full information was available.

Travel expenses account for only a fraction of a percentage point of all the money the state spends each year -including endowments, receipts and other non-tax revenues secured by the state's universities.

And centralizing travel management would appear tenuous at best, based on past history. During the 1994 budget year, state agencies dealt with 84 individual travel agencies around the state and a quarter of them received at least $20,000 each in state business. An attempt to consolidate state business with one travel agency several years ago this one based in Utah—was torpedoed by those Idaho travel agencies.

Specifically, the evaluation called for restrictions on meal reimbursement that would preclude state workers being paid for breakfast on the day their travel begins and for lunch on trips that do not last overnight.

Van Maren said the lunch reimbursement recommendation was based on the fact that state workers are not reimbursed for lunch when they stay at their regular work stations.

The evaluation also called for adoption of the federal reimbursement rate for lodging that sets ceilings on the nightly payment depending on the city and requiring more airline tickets to be purchased at least seven days ahead of departure.

The evaluation found that 38 percent of the tickets for instate travel were purchased less than a week ahead of time, precluding discount fares. If discount fares were sought on just a fifth of those, the savings would total nearly $23,000 a year.

The state spent $5.6 million on commercial airfares during the evaluation period.

Ted Turner weighing a takeover bid from Time Warner

NEW YORK (AP)—Ted Turner is weighing an $8.5 billion takeover bid from Time Warner Inc. that sources said would make the brash and fiercely independent Turner second-in-command of the biggest media and entertainment company in the world.

Time Warner and Turner Broadcasting System Inc. confirmed Wednesday that they were talking about a stock swap that would bring together Turner's cable networks, including CNN and Headline News, with Time Warner's publishing, music and film businesses.

Sources said Time Warner offered $8.5 billion in stock to make Turner Broadcasting a wholly owned subsidiary. Ted Turner would become a vice chairman of the new company, said one source close to the deal.

'Ted would not be the kingfish, but he'd still be a very significant fish in a much larger pond," said of anonymity.

Such a deal would continue a merger frenzy in the media and entertainment industry this summer. Many program producers and distributors are teaming up in the belief that bigger is better.

Just weeks ago, Walt Disney Co. struck a $19 billion deal to buy ABC, and Westinghouse Electric Corp. bid $5.4 billion for CBS.

Turner, a showman who built his father's billboard company into the cable industry's showpiece property, is said to support the deal. That suggests he has abandoned his desire to own one of the Big Three networks, such as CBS.

Some analysts said Turner, a brash businessman dubbed the Mouth of the South, would have a hard time being second-in-command.

"I don't see Ted Turner being interested in sitting through fourhour board meetings at Time Warner in New York," said John Reidy, a media industry analyst at Smith Barney. "You can't work for the source, who spoke on condition a company after you've owned it."

Before the deal goes through, Turner must persuade Tele-Communications Inc., Turner Broadcasting's No. 1 outside shareholder, to approve the deal. The Englewood, Colo.-based company, headed by John Malone, wouldn't comment.

Turner holds a majority of the stock in Turner Broadcasting.

But TCI owns about 21 percent, and Time Warner owns about 18 percent. They each have three seats on the 15-member Turner board and individually can veto major

Time Warner had until recently been negotiating to sell its Turner stake back to Turner Broadcasting in an effort to reduce its $15 billion debt. Time Warner had also blocked an earlier effort by Turner to bid for NBC.

Analysts said the Disney-ABC deal drove home the realization at both Turner Broadcasting and Time Warner that they needed to get bigger to compete.

Time Warner's chairman, Gerald

Levin, visited Turner at Turner's ranch in Montana earlier this month and outlined his plan to combine the companies.

Some analysts said other bidders could appear for Turner Broadcasting, now that Turner has signaled his intention to sell. Among those mentioned are General Electric Co., the parent of NBC, and Rupert Murdoch's News Corp., which owns the Fox network.

Turner built his empire on an outdoor advertising business he inherited from his father.

His 1970 purchase of a single UHF station in Atlanta grew into a global empire that includes the cable channels CNN, Headline News, TNT, TBS Superstation and the Cartoon Network; movie studios New Line Cinema and Castle Rock Entertainment; and baseball's Atlanta Braves and basketball's Atlanta Hawks.

Time Warner owns the nation's second-biggest collection of cable systems; the Home Box Office and Cinemax pay-TV channels; Warner Bros. studios; and Time, People and Sports Illustrated magazines.

Last year, Time Warner was the world's biggest media and entertainment company with revenue of about $15.9 billion.

The Disney-ABC deal would create a company with combined revenue of about $16.5 billion, Time Warner-Turner would have about $18.7 billion.

Sources familiar with the deal said Time Warner is discussing offering 0.7 to 0.8 of a share of its stock for each Turner Broadcasting

At Time Warner's closing price of $42.37 1/2 on Tuesday, the value of the stock swap would be about $35 a share.

Time Warner stock fell $1.12 1/2 to $41.25 a share in midafternoon trading Wednesday on the New York Stock Exchange. Turner Broadcasting's widely traded Class B stock was up $6.37 1/2 at $30.37 a share on the American Stock Exchange.

footing poured for the bridge over Paradise Creek sometime in late Sept. or early Oct., when the water in the creek is at its lowest." said Bird. The rest of the construction would occur next spring, between late April and June.

"What we're doing is we're filling a couple of gaps in the system, and when this project is finished, you'll be able to start out at Perimeter Drive, west of the intramural field riding offstreet all the way to Deakin Avenue," Bird said. "Then from Deakin Avenue you can ride to main street on what we hope will be a safer and better marked on-street."

In 1993, the city of Moscow received a grant from the Idaho Department of Transportation under the Congestion Mitigation and Air Quality program.

"The rationale for those kinds of grants is that any time you've got traffic building up, there's air pollution given off," Bird said. "The goal is if you can get more people to use Sixth Street to get to and from campus, to either walk or ride their bikes, then you can decrease the number of vehicles. So the goal is to have cleaner air by getting people out of their cars and onto a bike to walking."

The project, without engineering or design costs, will cost $311,000. The grant will pay for 80 percentof the costs, with the city council paying about $61,000 and the university reimbursing the city $50,000. The university will also donate land on the north side of the UI Facilities Management complex.

This is a good example of a cooperative project between the city and the university, because really without the university's cooperation, we wouldn't be able to do it," Bird con-baby-sitters."

Although drinking seems like a normal part of life for many students, the problem doesn't exist only on the college level and among specific living groups said Chuck Morrison, a licensed psychologist who works at the Student Counseling

"Drinking is a broad social problem," said Morrison. "It's a cultural problem which has been accepted as the norm."

Morrison said that events such as all-night sports facilities and pool halls on campus would give the students something else to do besides drink.

"It puts pressure on students when they don't see alternatives to drinking," he said.

Morrison said that the UI does not have such programs because of a lack of funds which usually come from federal grants.

Vietnamese-American leaders criticize governor's trade mission

SEATTLE (AP)—Vietnamese-American community leaders are divided over Gov. Mike Lowry's plan to lead a trade mission to Hanoi next month.

Aides to Lowry confirmed last week that he was planning to make the trip Sept. 23 as the first leg of a 12-day trade and investment mission. He would be the first U.S. governor to visit Vietnam since relations between the two countries were normalized.

Dong Vo, editor of Dhuong Dong, a weekly newspaper with 15,000 readers in Washington and Oregon, wants Lowry to cancel the trip.

"We want to send a message to the Communist government that they must first have political freedom and human rights in my fatherland," Vo said.

Kim Long, president of the Vietnamese

Friendship Association, said Lowry's visit could be used to help generate social change.

"We respect the decision of Gov. Lowry to go, but we also think the mission should be a tool to promote human rights," Long said. "They should be part of the discussions."

Lowry has yet to say whether he'll raise the subject in Hanoi but "has never shied away from raising tough issues," said Jordan Dey, his press secretary.

"The governor is keenly aware of the concerns in the Vietnamese community, but he is also keenly aware of the need to promote trade and create jobs in this state," Dey said.

Lowry also believes the best way to promote social and political change in countries like China and Vietnam is as a trading partner, he added.

The mission is favored by the 3-year-old Greater Seattle Vietnam Association, onethird of whose members are Vietnamese-Americans, president Norma Mohr said. One goal of the group is to establish sister-city relations with the port city of Haiphong.

Lowry's visit will "help on many levels," including trade, business, personal relations, communications and promotion of commercial opportunities for minority-owned businesses, Mohr said.

Debate over relations with Vietnam has been intense within the state's 60,000 Vietnamese-Americans, many of whom entered the United States as refugees fleeing from the Communist government.

Participants in a Vietnam trade mission organized by the Seattle-based Asia-Pacific Chamber of Commerce last year reportedly received death threats.

"It's an emotional issue," said Mick Matsuzawa, the chamber's executive director, who is helping to organize Lowry's visit. "A lot of Vietnamese Americans lost property and personal relations during the war.

"Younger (Vietnamese) people want to participate in the mission, but many still fear intimidation."

He and other supporters of the trade mission tout Vietnam's potential as a market for Washington businesses.

Last year, after a trade embargo was lifted, businesses in the state sold $2.3 million worth of farm, food and industrial products to Vietnam. During the first quarter of this year, the value of Washington exports had jumped to nearly $1.1 million.

"The trade mission can try to pressure the communist government, but it won't make any difference," said the Rev. Minh Chieu, a leader in the Vietnamese Buddhist Association of Washington.

"We were born in Vietnam and we know about Communists," Chieu said. "They trick you. They lie to anybody. They say one thing and do another."

Please don't call me Dad!

In my whiniest Andy Rooney voice, let me ask, "Why is it that... when faculty, staff, administrators or students have a problem with the Argonaut... why do they call me?" As manager of Student Media, is it my job to spank the little children charged with the daily affairs of the campus newspaper and the GEM yearbook or the station manager at KUOI when they go astray?

I think not.

My job description properly labels my responsibility as adviser, not parent. In this role, I provide the best possible advice and judgment of which I am capable and defend the rights of students to make the decisions.

I haven't "fathered" any of the students fulfilling the tough jobs of editor-in chief, advertising manager or station manager. Yet, whenever an Argonaut blurb is misinterpreted, a GEM photo is judged obscene or KUOI airs lyrics deemed un-American, who gets the call? Enraged members of our collective Student Media audiences call me.

The "children" are out of control again. Let's call their "adult adviser," and he'll give them the "whuppin" they deserve. Let's hope he uses his belt, too, cause a "switchin" ain't nearly enough! (Those darn kids invariably select the wimpiest little branch on the bush.)

The right numbers to call are clearly shown in the campus directory and in the Argonaut staff box. These student leaders continually invite reader/listener feedback in order to better serve the campus community and grow as professionals. A pretty mature attitude I think; yet their phones remain still and silent

Now I'll admit to you, since leaving my banana republic of Louisiana, the Big Sky country has given me many surprises, but this one beats the cake (Southern folk talk this way).

Even though the editor-in-chief of the Argonaut is legally responsible for all content material—including ads—and can be sued for libel, irate students—even ASUI senators—have called me with complaints rather than communicate directly with a peer and fellow-student! I find this truly amazing.

It's equally disappointing when upset faculty call me. Ingenuous, I assumed teachers would understand best of all the value of empowerment and welcome the chance for positive, instructive dialogue with students.

So this semester, please don't call me. If you've got a problem, first talk to the students in charge. Their knowledge of the situation is first hand, and trust me, they're mature enough to handle it—remember, the average age of the UI student is over 25 years. If not, then call me.

Each fall I tell the new staffers at our Student Media orientation: "...this 'ain't' high school, it's college; I'm not here to make you do your homework and change your drawers (Southern undergarment)...and, I'm not your Dad!"

—David Gebhardt

Price gouging a Vandal tradition

elcome back (or Welcome, if that may be the case), to the University of Idaho, "Home of the Vandals." Most students do not realize the actual reason our mascot is a Vandal. The explanation is simple: the only way most students can afford the ever-skyrocketing costs of going to college is by looting and pillaging small villages in western Europe, and, of course, selling our mothers and unborn children into slavery. However, "The UI Students Who Sell Their Mothers and Unborn Children Into Slavery" just doesn't have the same ring as "The UI Vandals."

The things that really get my goat are not large-item costs, such as tuition and housing, but the little things that add up quickly, like textbooks and, well, soda pop.

The prices for textbooks at the University Bookstore are beyond outrageous and quickly approaching Rockefellian proportions. The moment a student walks into the Bookstore, they will notice the distinct smell of "price fixing," a stench that abounds on this campus. Most books cost at least fifty dollars now days, and they are edging closer and closer to the century mark every year. At my current rate, I will be paying as much for books as for tuition within two years.

To my mind, the costs for these "textbooks" (quotations added because some of them have dubious worth as an actual text) do not even make logical sense. In my own case, I paid about sixty-five dollars for Geography Today, a scientific textbook a bit over an inch thick. Yet, I paid ten dollars less for The Complete Works of William Shakespeare, a book nearly seven inches thick and far more interesting. It seems to me that the production costs for Geography Today would be far cheaper than for Shakespeare, and thus Geography Today would cost less for the consumer. But we obviously aren't paying for production costs. We're paying for how many PhD's, MS's, etc. that are tacked onto the credits of the book. Since more eggheads had to work on Geography Today, it costs more. Plus, scientific books are usually horrifyingly dull, so the only way they can make you get fired up about the subject is to piss you off by charging an inflated price. And let's not even talk about how they use a new edition of the textbook every year...

As if gouging us for room and board, tuition, parking privileges, and books isn't enough, the Pepsi Company has also seen fit to raise the price of soda pop from fifty cents to fifty-five cents, obviously just to see, if they could inconvenience us a little bit more. I would consider paying fifty-five cents for a beverage if they would do us the favor of installing some Coke machines (so I could drink Dr. Pepper) instead of forcing us into this Pepsi monopoly on campus (there actually is one Coke machine on campus, but it is hidden in the Psychology building where no one can find it, and you must have a secret password to use it).

The solution to the University Price-Fixing/Gouging is simple. We need to do what the United States Government did to Rockefeller's Standard Oil earlier this century, and to AT&T in the 1980's. We need to use anti-trust legislation to break up these monopolies. The UI Bookstore should be broken up into several "Baby Bookstores" dotted around campus and forced to keep their prices down. Then, for extra incentive, Costco and Wal-Mart should be allowed to sell textbooks on campus for The Right Price (Always). And there should be a Coke machine next to every Pepsi machine. No more of this "exclusive contract" baloney. And to keep the price of pop down, a "Sam's Choice" or "Simply Soda" machine should be installed next to every Coke or Pepsi machine.

Our nation was founded on principles of a free-market economy. It is time that this university joined the real world and faced some competition.

Earth First!ers: heroes, idiots or Three Stooges reincarnate?

ou have to shake your head and wonder, sometimes, at the somewhat comic, sometimes irritating and potentially deadly tactics used by misguided Earth First! activists.

The environmental group is trying, once again, to protect the Cove-Mallard area from any kind of logging or road building. This time activists stuck their arms in barrels of concrete strung across a road. Unfortunately for them—or fortunately, depending on your view—the U.S. Forest Service arrived before the concrete had had a chance to set properly and promptly cuffed the protesters after yanking their arms out of wet concrete.

Earth First!ers earned their fame several years ago by destroying logging equipment, pounding sixteenpenny nails into old growth timber to discourage loggers from sawing them, and some other just plain old obstructionist tactics.

Russ Wright

In a twisted sort of way, you have to admire their stick-to-itiveness. However, attacking the property of private corporations and endangering the lives of loggers is not a good way to earn a lot of sympathy for a cause.

Pounding nails into old growth timber can easily kill a logger trying to saw the tree down because of the danger of the chainsaw suddenly kicking back. Anyone who would put the life of a tree above the life of a human should be locked up for a long, long time. Those loggers aren't out there purposely trying to destroy the environment—they're just trying to make a living and support their families.

In addition, the Earth Firstlers' attempts to protect old growth forests in the northwest are based more upon a silly kind of nostalgia rather than actual facts. Ever been to an old growth forest? There isn't much in them except for the trees. There's no underbrush and little wildlife because the old growth trees block out the necessary sunlight to ensure the growth of undercover which wildlife need for shelter and food. Before man came along, Mother Nature had a way of taking care of situations like these-it was called disease and wildfire.

I'll be the first to admit that mankind has, at times, gotten carried away with natural resources such as forests. Sometimes, good old fashioned greed has gotten in the way of common sense. But sensible, well-thought-out management plans for our forests can provide and sustain the kind of plant and wildlife diversity sought after by environmentalists while still providing the necessary natural resources we all need to build our houses, read our Sunday papers, etc.

Sometimes clearcutting is a necessary evil—as in the cases where trees become infested with pine beetle or disease. Mother Nature never made any bones about clearcutting when it was necessary.

Leaving the entire Cove-Mallard wilderness area untouched and roadless will only put it at risk for a clearcutting by Mother Nature after drought, disease and deadfall provide ample tinder for a lightning strike—anyone who knows anything about the great fire of 1910 can testify to this. We do need to set aside some areas as wildlife refuges (as we already have), but not areas as big as Cove-Mallard.

The Earth Firstlers come to Moscow a few times during the year to raise money through benefit concerts and the like. I would urge you to not support them or their tactics. There are better ways to accomplish the goal of protecting the environment from abuse without endangering the lives of innocent people and without destroying their means of livelihood. It's the reason why we have a democratic government, and I daresay that tactics such as those used by Earth First!ers have partially resulted in the backlash against extremist environmentalism and have enabled more conservative representatives to gain control of our state and national governments.

We can all do our part (and much more effectively than the Earth Firstlers) by recycling paper, making wise consumer decisions and playing an active, sensible role in our democracy. Don't dance to the tune of extremism. All it does is divide and antagonize, and then, soon, we'll all be paying the piper.

UI better off with dry campus

Whether deliberate or a fluke, I found it wonderfully ironic that Dennis Sasse chose to send a message to interim President Bell requesting the ban on alcohol be lifted in the same issue in which your headline story was that Rejena Coghlan had filed a lawsuit against the University for an alcohol-related incident.

It is obvious that although there are responsible ways to drink, not everyone acts responsibly. Whether it is rush week, a Vandal football game or any other University-sponsored event, there will always be those who do not set limits for themselves. These are the same people who are only too willing to place the blame elsewhere for their irresponsible actions. If the University had to defend itself against very many lawsuits brought by irresponsible people, the cost would be extremely detrimental, even if the University won. I'm sure this prospect was one of the many reasons for the no-alcohol

Regarding Mr. Sasse's comment that he doesn't go to Vandal football games because no alcohol is served, I would say that if he can't last the length of a football game without having a beer in hand, then he probably needs to seek chemical dependency counseling. If he wants to visit with old friends over a cold beer, there are plenty of places offcampus that he and his friends can go both before and after the game that would be more than willing to accommodate him.

I personally applaud the fact that this is a "dry campus," and I hope that students realize you don't have to drink alcohol to have a good time during your college years.

If there is one word that summarizes college life it is probably "choices." Students are faced with hundreds, maybe thousands every day. As a student who has made a lot of good and bad decisions when faced with all the choices university life gives us, I would like to encourage every student on both campuses to attend the church of your choice. There are dozens in the area offering just as many different formats, and there is certain to be one that is perfect for you. There are several great youth groups on the campuses as well offering a wide variety of excellent programs.

Along with approximately 200 other college students and friends, I attend Campus Christian Fellowship and Living Faith Fellowship. Together they have been among the best influences in my life. In a world that sees 7 out of 10 students who are Christians lose their faith when they go to college, I am truly blessed. Thanks in part to a local church, I am pursuing my degree with more focus, living life with a purpose, walking strongly with my God, and growing daily in my relationship with Jesus Christ more than ever before. I am free to live for Him and truly happy.

When all is said and done, we will look back on our experience here with regret or gratitude. And in the midst of the overwhelming array of opportunities it gives us, college can be very confusing. It is not easy at all. But if we will make each decision on the basis of its eternal impact, college will be the best experience of our lives.

See for yourself.

-Joeseph W. Fitzgerald

Beware of bogus churches

The beginning of the school year is also the time for preachers and their puppets to prey on students by claiming to offer them joy and fellowship now and everlasting bliss after they die. But these promises come at great cost to those who are taken in by them.

First of all, what they really want is your money—to build huge churches that rival the Crystal Cathedral in California. And in order to get your money they first get your mind by making false claims about the Bible.

1) That the Bible is the inerrant Word of God. Facts: a) Christians cannot yet agree on how many books are supposed to be in the Bible; b) No Bible claims to be the "Word of God"; c) All Bibles are filled with errors and contradictions from cover to cover (yes, even in the original Hebrew and Greek).

2) That the Apostle Paul was a married man. Fact: Paul was a lifelong bachelor by choice. He makes this crystal clear in his letter, 1 Corinthians 7. Just ask yourself, "Who's lying? Paul or the preach-

3) That Christians should tithe as much as 22 1/3 percent of their gross income. Fact: Nowhere in the Bible does it say that Christians should tithe at all. The only references to tithing in the New Testament refer to Jews.

So look out for liars. Watch out for wolves in sheep's clothing. When so-called Christians ask you to believe lies about the Bible or to tithe in any way, don't walk, RUN!

(P.S. Try the Campus Christian Center instead. Dr. Bruce Wollenberg won't demand either your mind or your money. He really knows the Bible, too.)

Lawsuits against Microsoft unfair

Well, Aug. 24 has arrived and departed with just the effect that was expected. Software outlets across the country (and indeed across the globe) were besieged with people clamoring to be the first on their block to own Windows 95. Many would-be 95 users lined up well before midnight on the twenty third, awaiting the toll of the bell and rushing to the all-night cashiers waving stacks of twenty-dollar bills.

But there was someone else waiting for the release of Windows 95: the US Justice Department. It has been common knowledge for quite some time that the Justice Department has been investigating Microsoft's new On-line Service, The Microsoft Network. MSN, which was also officially launched Aug. 24, will compete strongly with other, established services such as Prodigy, CompuServe, and America On-Line.

The problem the Justice Department sees with MSN is that it is bundled with Windows 95. That means that every user of 95 will have the option of installing and using MSN as their primary online service. This has the other online services, most notably America On-line, calling foul. The Justice Department has not officially condemned Microsoft for including MSN in Windows 95 but may in the coming months.

The Justice Department is worried that, since MSN is included with 95, it will appear to be the only option for on-line services available to 95 users. At the very least, it will be the easiest option for them. It is the latter that seems to have the other on-line service providers quaking in their boots. America On-line's president and CEO, Steve Case, called for a "level playing field" in an appearance on CNN's Moneyline the evening of the 24th. Seemingly to Mr. Case, MSN has no place with other Microsoft products as the huge user base of Windows would undoubtedly reduce the users of AOL.

Apparently, however, the Justice Department and Steve Case sees no problem with the America On-line service shipping with virtually every new machine and modem sold in the USA today. In fact, it is difficult to find many computer-oriented magazines which do not or have not recently shipped with an AOL disk cellophaned to them. I find it interesting that the modem manufacturers, publishers, and system manufacturers are not being investigated for offering only one on-line package with their products.

So why is Microsoft being singled out? I can only offer jealousy and fear as reasons. Corporate America envies Microsoft for its phenomenal success, and with envy comes the feeling that the successful companies should be stifled to bring about a fair, even business community. If another company comes out with a product better than Microsoft, that product will prosper. But until then companies will continue to try to bring down the leader.

A big problem for America Online is that, in almost all ways, MSN appears to be a better product. Microsoft has had several years to learn from the mistakes made by other on-line services and a group of software developers among the best in the world to bring MSN to life. The strongest area of MSN is in its Internet access. MSN was designed from the ground up with the Internet in mind. It includes full access to all common Internet services as a foundation, not a added graft-ons as in AOL. Most users who do not switch to MSN will probably refrain only because they don't want to go through the problems of switching their e-mail addresses and billing information.

The worst I see the Justice

Department requiring, if they proceed fairly (a big if) is a simple sticker added to Windows 95 boxes: "Free MSN Software Included." It would separate the MSN from 95, showing it was an add on, and be no different than including an AOL or Prodigy diskette with a modem.

Oh, and to Steve Case: The new, interactive medium of communication you are supposedly creating with AOL is already in place, and has more users than AOL will ever see. It's the World Wide Web and MSN includes a full function, integrated browser, not a crippled viewer.

Advertisers have us pegged ver notice how you can't pick up a magazine off a newsrack without half of it falling to the floor in the form of subscription notices, advertisements and exciting new perfume samples with glamorous names like "Eau de Newsprint?" Maybe it's just me, but the same thing has happened to my textbooks.

It's got to be a new sort of alarm system or something. I figure when a person picks up a textbook, tiny sensors hidden in the binding and cover send messages to a Pentiumlike processor, which, through software developed by a secret Microsoft lab somewhere in Outer Oregon is able to zero in on the sex, age, annual income, shoe size and other vital statistics of said person. A spring-loaded mechanism then burps flyers and pamphlets custom-fitted to your personalityout of a secret compartment somewhere in the glossary of the book.

No, this isn't the Twilight Zone. We've just been target-marketed.

Note to advertising students, fac-ulty and staff: what is about to be said is not highly complimentary of advertising in general. Any complaints about this column should be sent to: Ted Turner, Ted Turner Ranch, Ted Turner, MT 00001.

Brian Davidson

Having taken an advertising course in college a few years ago, I feel qualified to offer an open and frank critique of the advertising industry: They take us for a bunch of saps who will buy any crappy, useless thing they tell us to.

And they're right. How else could you explain the massive consumption of designer underwear, raisin-oatmeal cookies and any music written and performed by Michael Jackson?

What these savvy savants have done is to tap their campaigns into our deepest feelings of insecurity, jealousy and gullibility. We're hawked $115 subscriptions to the Wall Street Journal not because we have massive amounts of money we're dying to invest and not because we want to stay abreast of the latest in news. We're sold them, and we buy them, because having a Journal on the bathroom floor is going to make us look more like big stud artichokes than, say, the Moscow-Pullman Daily News.

We have Sprint telephone cards shoved down our throats because some marketing fool told Sprint they're the "coolest" of the Big Three telephone companies. College students, wanting to be cool so badly they're willing to actually grow goatees and listen to only alternative, scoop them up like those trendy salty bagel chips.

We're also convinced we absolutely have to have at least two subscriptions to those news, fashion, sports or dirty magazines that offer such incredible prices you expect Ed McMahon to pop right out of the advertisement and kiss you on the lips. I won't even mention that tape club (that offers three hundred overpriced tapes and CD's over and over and over...) that somehow got space inside our course selection catalogs.

So here we are. We've spent what seems like thousands on textbooks, and there are people lined up to the horizon waiting to scoop up the change. All this leads to two questions, and, darn-tootin' we deserve answers: "How much was the university's cut?" and "Where did I put that MasterCard application?"

The Festival also boasts a daily art market featuring over 30 different artists and numerous food vendors.

Bumbershoot takes place at the Seattle Center with tickets running $25 for a full four day pass, $16 for a two-day pass and a single day pass for $10. Ticket information is available by calling (200) 682-4-FUN.

From one Moscow to another

Valaree Johnson

lexander Zaitsev is experiencing a different kind of Moscow at the University of Idaho.

Zaitsev, 22, is from the Karelian Republic ruled by Russia.

When he first packed his bags to come to the United States, Zaitsev's suitcase contained a couple of nice suits, starched shirts and loafers to wear to school. After seeing his friend return from Kansas clad in jeans and a T-shirt complete with a backwards baseball cap, Zaitsev repacked his bags. The attire isn't the only thing changing in Russia.

"My main problem now is to find my place in society," says Zaitsev. With the breakdown of the Soviet Union also came the deterioration of the middle class. Zaitsev explains, before the breakdown people didn't have the responsibility of finding good prices or worrying about future careers.

"That's the price of democracy," he says.
"Now you have to take part in business and make your own decisions. People who want to survive work a lot."

Russia is not devoid of morale, however, says Zaitsev "you don't have time to be depressed.

Zaitsev came to the states to further his education in history after graduating with an emphasis in Soviet-American relations. He isn't one bit sorry he was sent to Idaho.

As a child of Perestroika, he represents his generations' desire to have a fulfilling career and become a part of popular culture. Like other students, Zaitsev enjoys Metallica and movie titles such as The Mask.

"American culture has influenced culture around the world," he said. Popular culture in Russia includes a lot of alternative music, psychological thrillers, new technologies and the opening of young minds.

Even though technology is advancing in Russia, learning computer skills will be a new experience for Zaitsev, who wrote his entire dissertation by hand.

His passion for politics is evident as Zaitsev discusses United Nations policies, the changes in international relations after the death of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, and his observations of the brutal actions of soldiers while living in Chechnya. All this conversed in proficient English.

A fascinating culture lies in the face of every international student. Exploring these cultures makes us appreciate our own. Welcome to all new foreign students...share your culture.

Shelby Dopp

Editor in Chief

Editor's Note: I would like to answer the above question. Who the hell am I? I am the Editor in Chief of the Argonaut and a full time student at the University of Idaho. Basically, why I am writing a story about myself is to show readers exactly what the paper intends to do with this section. We want to find people—students, faculty and staff in the university community—who have interesting stories to share with our readers. I have a story to tell, so I thought I would be the first to break the ice.

Over the summer, I took a trip to Philadelphia, Pa. for an American Collegiate Press/College Media Advisors conference. I went by myself to this very big city during the first weekend in August. It was also my first time visiting the East Coast. I arrived in Philly on Thursday evening and left Sunday afternoon. I won't discuss my entire weekend, because I did a lot of stuff. Unfortunately, I only have so much space to tell my story, so I will just narrow it down to one day: Saturday.

But before I go on any further, I must say that I met about ten of the nicest, coolest people I have ever met in my entire life. This all happened on Friday evening.

Okay, back to the story.
Philadelphia is a city full of our nation's history. It was the first capitol of the United States, and it is also known as the "City of Brotherly Love." Unfortunately, the city and the people who live there get a bad rap for being rude. I am here to set the record straight. I never received better service or hospitality than when I was in this wonderful city.

My friends—from Atalanta, Ga. to Allendale, Mich.—and I toured Independence Hall, where the Declaration of Independence was signed, on this hot, humid, rainy Saturday. We hurried to get to this magnificent piece of architecture, and we made it just in time before it closed for the day. Actually, the tour guide wasn't supposed to let us in, but he did anyway.

After touring the building and getting a great narrative from the tour guide, we ran over to take a carriage tour of Independence

Historical National Park—I hope that's the right name. We had a really cool tour guide named Muhammed. He was friendly and funny. He took pictures of all of us sitting in the carriage, so we made sure to give him a nice tip.
His horse, Barney, was pretty cool, too.

After the carriage ride and seeing the beautiful side of Philly, we booked it on over to see the Liberty Bell before it closed. I could just feel the history and symbolism moving through my soul. It was truly a great experience.

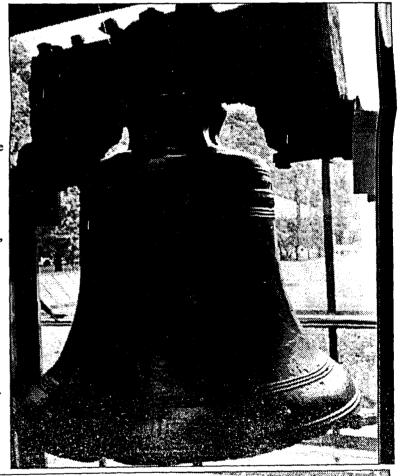

To make a long story very short, Philly is a wonderful place to visit. On my ride back to the airport on Sunday, the driver was very nice. He gave me tips on how not to look like a tourist if I ever decide to go back—which I more than likely will. I will share them with you.

• William Penn is known as Billy Penn in Philadelphia.

• There is no downtown or uptown in Philly. It's Center City.

• The best place to eat a Philly Cheese Steak is at a place called Jim's.

That's my story.

Idaho faces PAC-10's Oregon St. Saturday

Sports Editor

f Vandal football coach Chris Tormey wanted to make his Lcoaching debut with relative ease, he should have found another

Tormey's Vandals open the 1995 football campaign against the PAC-10's Oregon State Beavers in what is expected to be a raucous Parker Stadium as Beaver fans have high expectations for their first winning season in 27 years.

The Division-1 Beavers took the Rose Bowl bound Oregon Ducks down to the wire last fall before falling in the waning moments of the "Civil War." OSU also dropped UCLA and Washington State, which captured an Alamo Bowl victory last season. Many national prognosticators think the Beavers can get above the .500 mark for the first time since most UI students were born as their first three opponents are Idaho, Pacific and North Texas.

However if OSU officials thought they could cakewalk to a season opening win by scheduling a Div. 1-AA team, they shouldn't have scheduled Idaho. The Vandals annually schedule a D-1 program and have come away with wins in each of the last three years, knocking off Colorado State, Utah and "We are not going to concede anything," Tormey said. "Obviously we are going to be huge underdogs, but we're not looking at this as a preseason game. We are going in there to win a football game."

1995 marks the fifth year for the Beavers in the Jerry Pettibone era, meaning the OSU coach has recruited all of his own athletes to run his triple option wishbone offensive scheme. Oregon State was fifth in the nation in rushing last fall, averaging 279 yards a contest. In addition Pettibone has talked throughout the offseason about his commitment to pass the ball 10-15 times a game, hoping to keep opposing defenses honest.

"It appears they are committed to throwing the ball. They have gone to a double slot formation and we expect them to come out and try to establish that against us," Tormey Pettibone knows the Vandals won't walk into Corvallis and roll over to get run over.

"The thing that concerns me most about Idaho is its winning tradition," Pettibone said "They have a tradition of playing and winning under pressure ... We think we are going to face an excellent team in our first game."

Idaho should have a slight advantage with Tormey at the helm as the Idaho head has seen the Beavers throughout recent years as an assistant at Washington. Tormey admitted stopping the rushing game is a huge key to success, but said he did not want to overcommit to the run and give up the big play.

"If you overcommit to the run are regarded as two of the best and give up a 60 or 70-yard touchdown pass, you put yourself in a hole real fast. The secondary is what stops the big play," Tormey said. "Our (secondary) guys have to be in position to make the play at 10 to 15 yards and not give up the big play.

The emphasis on the secondary has forced Tormey to make some changes in his defensive backfield. Sophomore cornerback Arnold Gunn is the only secondary starter in the same position he was a year ago. Jason O'Neil will start at the other corner while Tommy James and lightning-quick Montrell Williams start at the safeties.

Senior halfbacks Cameron Reynolds and Shayzar Hawkins will get the bulk of the carries for the Beavers, but OSU fullback JD Stewart gained 512 yards on the ground last season and can break the big play as well. Not to be forgotten is junior quarterback Don Shanklin and freshman high school all-American Tim Alexander, who option signal callers in the land.

One Oregon State weakness is likely to be the offensive line where the Beavers replace four of five starters from last year. If the Vandals win Saturday it will likely be due to success in the trenches. Idaho left defensive end Ryan Phillips was a second team 1-AA all-American in 1994 and his counterpart on the right side, Barry Mitchell should rack up honors of his own this season. Junior runstopper Jason Shelt was a preseason all-American at linebacker in 1994, but was lost in the second game of the year last season and is finally back to full health after a year of rehab.

"We hope to have some success up front and hopefully be able to stand up to them," Tormey said. "That's the strength of our team and a weakness of theirs.'

Idaho's offense, perennially one of the best in the nation, has been anything but sharp this fall and a solid running game would certainly open up the gameplan. Junior running back Joel Thomas is likely to see the ball 20 times Saturday and is a sure key to success. Thomas finished sixth in the Big Sky in rushing in 1994 with 653 yards despite playing behind all-American Sherridan May.

Wide receivers Dwight McKinzie and Robert Scott will go up against a tough OSU secondary, including preseason all-American Reggie Tongue. The six-foot senior from Fairbanks, Alaska picked off five passes last season, returning three of them for scores and has already been selected to play in the Senior Bowl in December.

OSU is likely to throw the book at the Vandals showing Idaho senior quarterback Eric Hisaw a variety of blitzes and formations. Hisaw was named the starter Friday after winning the competition with sophomore Brian Brennan. Tormey said Hisaw had better statistics between the two, but more importantly handled bad tanding at only 5'4", Sarah Toomey is used to looking up to others, but after last season roles were reversed and people started looking up at her. 100mey, a senior from San Juan Capistrano, California, ended up at Idaho due to a poor coaching decision at her former University of Connecticut, Toomey started the 1992 season as a true freshman for the Huskies and went on to become the Big East Conference Freshmanof-the-year after leading the nation in digs. After her coach there decided not to give her a full scholarship, Toomey relied on a trip back home for the next year to play at Grossmont JC to get her Division I-A eligibility back, as she was never eleased by the UCONN coaching taff before she left.

Toomey came to the University of daho with the understanding the he would be a defensive specialist ere and understand is an undertatement after the hurt she put on the rest of the league last year by digging anything within the confines of Memorial Gym.

"I could have gone other places and been an outside hitter, but I've always enjoyed defense and I really wanted to go to a winning program as well, so I came to Idaho," said Toomev.

Another concern of Toomey's was that after leaving UCONN some schools might overlook her because of her height, but luckily for Idaho there is no clown holding a yard stick standing in front of Women's locker room here, with a sign saying, "You must be taller than this to play," as there is at many of the local area carnivals.

After a good showing in the Alumni game and a lighter schedule than last season, Idaho looks good to repeat the same glory as they produced with a 31-3 record last sea-

"I think we look as good if not better than we did last year at this time," said Toomey. "We have really good balance offensively and defensively this season, whereas in the past we might have gotten the label as being a stronger offensive team," added Toomey.

While attending the University of Connecticut, Toomey also participated during the indoor track and field season for the Huskies along with tending to her court duties with the volleyball team.

season because of another coaching disaster," said Toomey.

Hisaw earns starting job, wants more

Damon Barkdull

It wasn't nasty. It wasn't dirty. But low and behold, it was a quarterback controversy.

University of Idaho coach Chris Tormey did finally settle on his starting quarterback: Eric Hisaw.

Last season Hisaw's outstanding performance was cut short when he tore an anterior cruciate ligament in his right knee against Eastern Washington University. Coming into the EWU game, Hisaw was ranked second in the nation in passing efficiency (176) and third in the nation in total offense (342 yards per game).

Reconstruction on Hisaw's knee began on January 6 and eventually after rehabilitation the knee healed. The only problem was now a new coaching staff was in place and two other quarterback candidates, Brian Brennan and Robert Scott, were gunning for Hisaw's starting job.

The 6-foot 3-inch quarterback sat out during spring practices and had to watch his competitors show their stuff to the coaching staff. In fall practices, Scott was moved to wide receiver and Hisaw showed a strong performance to land him the starting quarterback spot.

Although Hisaw does have the starting spot, that hasn't stopped him from implementing his strong work ethic.

"I can't quit worrying about it. Brian Brennan is a very talented quarterback and if I slip up or don't play well I know he'll be there to take my spot," Hisaw said.

One may speculate that such a competitive tryout may lead to some harsh feelings between the quarterback candidates.

On the contrary, the two main contenders became good friends.

"Actually, me and Brian are closer now than we ever have been, which is great. I know its tough on him 'cause I know what it's like," Hisaw said.

The toughest part of spring and fall practices for Hisaw wasn't the fact that he had to compete for a starting spot, rather, it was just trying to become healthy.

"It was just a matter of time. The little intricacies in my game were off, like my timing and my reads and stuff. I was hoping to come back in time. That was the big thing," Hisaw said. "I think it takes a lot of determination and will. Those who want to come back will. Those who aren't willing to excel won't get back as fast."

Now that Hisaw is starting at quarterback, he can honestly say he achieved one of his three goals set last spring.

"The big goal was to get back to starting. The next goal was to win the Big Sky, no matter what. If I was to back up Brian or play defense or somewhere else—so win the Big Sky. And last is to win the thing that's never been won here before: a national championship," said Hisaw with an intense look upon his face.

Even though Hisaw doesn't have time to sit back and enjoy his success, he does however feel more comfortable stepping it up as a leader.

"Once I got the starting nod I've been trying to be a leader. It was real tough when Brian and I were going for it 'cause the team didn't know who to listen to. The position of quarterback is a leadership position and I think it's my responsibility to help the team stay up," Hisaw said.
With Vandal quarterback legends such as

With Vandal quarterback legends such as John Friesz and Doug Nussmeier you'd think that the Cheney, Washington native might be feeling the pressure.

Not on your life.

"I don't feel the pressure to be the next great quarterback here. The pressure is to win. If you win here, hopefully the boosters and the community will be happy," Hisaw

Mathison excells on track, in class

For most students at the University of Idaho sports include football, basketball, and volleyball, end of list.

Vandal students will change their minds when they meet Angie Mathison, 20, a junior cross country runner majoring in nutrition and dietetics. One of many stars on the Vandal cross country team, Angie's talent and intensity makes her one of Idaho's stellar student athletes.

The junior personifies the student athlete, maintaining a 4.0 GPA with 19 credits while while competing. Sometimes she feels regret being a collegiate athlete without a life but takes it in stride.

"I love the travel, the team and my friends on the team. I like to compete, I like to beat people," said Mathison admiting her motivation as an athlete. The same motivation won Angie an invitation to the NCAA national cross country championships her first year at the University of Idaho, running a 17:11 in the Big Sky championship to qualify.

Few people know this fact though because running lacks the glamour of football or basketball. Angie says that "we all feel it, other sports get so much more attention," but she does not feel bitter, adding "we don't run for the press."

Coming from Winchester, Idaho, Angie's background in sports included basketball, volleyball, and running. However, with the increased challenge of collegiate athletics, Angie focused on her running, where she has excelled. College has been the biggest challenge for Angie so far, as she remarked that college "is a lot more intense. School and running takes more time than in high school where you don't really have to study much."

As the challenge increased, Mathison's intensity increased. Mathison's miles per week have almost doubled, yet she still has maintained a 4.0 GPA into her third academic year. Angie looks toward the future when she will develop other facets of her life, but running will always have a place in her life. "I can't imagine not running."

Despite her intensity to be the best, Angie remains realistic, focusing on her goals of academic excellence and regaining her number one spot on the team. This season Angie returns to the Vandal team prepared to correct last season, when a case of bronchitis limited the talented runner.

Mathison's intense nature helps drive her current goals.

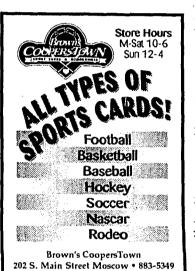

"I want to be the best at everything I do."

This attitude will drive Angie this season, and the entire Vandal cross country team as they compete in the Big Sky. The Vandals will open their cross country season Sept. 9, at 9:00 a.m. at the U of I golf course. The meet will feature the Vandals and Washington State University

Just like the ageless Robert Plant of Led Zeppelin fame, the University of Idaho volleyball squad is "going to California." The Vandals open their season today at the University of San Francisco PowerBar Collegiate Invitational in—drum roll please—San Francisco.

UI will play San Jose State and San Francisco today and Eastern Michigan and Cal-State Northridge Saturday in the round-robin tourna-

Amid the optimism of a new season, UI head coach Tom Hilbert was realistic. "When you're rebuilding and you're in transition from one corps of players to another, we can't go into this thing thinking we're going to win every match this weekend."

Idaho is coming off of a recordsetting 31-3 season in which they reached the quarterfinals of the NCAA Tournament. However, All-American Mindy Rice graduated, along with star spiker Brittany Van Haverbeke.

Hilbert, who boasts the highest winning percentage of any current Big Sky coach, has recruited seven freshmen, three of which will redshirt. One of the youngsters, outside hitter Beth Craig, will start.

"She (Craig) needs to get out and play a lot with this group of kids, get rid of the jitters and find a comfort zone for her to play in," Hilbert

With the loss of last year's big hitters, Hilbert said the offense is "a tiny bit faster provided we can pass the ball. Our passing can be real good and it can be real bad."

Perhaps the best setter in UI history, junior Lynne Hyland, assumes this responsibility. In 1994 she had the most productive season for a setter in UI and Big Sky history, tallying 1,729 assists. Hyland's 14.53 assists per game average was the third best ever in the NCAA.

"We want to keep it fast and get it to our outside hitters," Hyland said, "especially Lina."

She referred to 6-foot senior Tzvetelina Yanchulova, who averaged 5.2 kills per game last season - second on the team only to Rice. Yanchulova also amassed a schoolrecord 34 kills a year ago versus Oklahoma.

The only other senior is 5-foot-4 defensive specialist Sarah Toomey.

"The seniors get the most respect from the team," Hyland said. "They do provide a lot of leadership and we look to them for that leadership.

"Because we're a younger team, we might not play as maturely and how that composure improves on the court-that's something that will come with time."

At 9:30 a.m. UI, ranked No. 27 nationally in the pre-season poll, clashes with SJSU. The Spartans compiled a 23-12 record in 1994 and Hilbert said they should have participated in the NCAA Tournament. The Spartans' main weapon is 6-foot-1 outside hitter Paola Paz-Soldan. The Peruvian averaged 5.06 kills per game in 1994. Hilbert described her as 'powerful."

"Their team is relatively onedimensional," Hilbert added, "at least they have been in the past.'

SJSU, of the Big West, is moving to the Western Athletic Conference next season when UI joins the Big

The Vandals' final opponent Saturday, Cal-State Northridge, makes UI's squad elderly by comparison. The team is comprised of five freshmen, four sophomores and two juniors. The Matadors visit Memorial Gym Sept. 16.

"If we consistently pass the ball, we're going to be fun to watch,' Hilbert said. "My goal for this weekend is to get those kids out there playing, see what they can do, so we can start jelling our lineup."

Following the tournament, UI hosts New Mexico State on Monday in Memorial Gym. Game time is 7:30 p.m.

Palousafest '95 hailed a success

Jeremy Chase

tarting at the University Classroom Center, across to the Physical Education Building, and finally to Memorial Gym, last Saturday's Palousafest wasn't only big in size, but big in terms of success.

From 3 p.m. to midnight, thousands of new and returning students. Moscow community members, and even children attended Palousafest. With food, drink, music, activities, and free merchandise, it had something to offer everyone. Palousafest was a university-sponsored event to provide students a chance to celebrate the end of summer and the beginning of fall semester.

For many people, the chance to see a variety of musical acts brought them to Palousafest. Demetrios Palavos, ASUI Demetrios Palavos, ASUI Concerts Chair and member of SUB Systems, agrees. "I think things went quite well," he said. "It hit a wide spectrum of people."

Palavos, who helped coordinate and book the entertainment for the event, said this year's effort was better than last year's because of previous experience. "Last year (LollaPalousa) was put together so quickly," he said. "I think it was better this year."

Another positive aspect of Palousafest was the number of people involved. Chris Wuthrich, assistant Greek advisor, said that the booths and vendors tended to be spread out more, which let more areas of campus be involved, as well as spreading out the people that were there. "We were on the mark with last year in terms of number of people attending," he said.

For new students, Palousafest also was a chance to see a glimpse of what Moscow was like. Kevin McCollum, a freshman at the University of Idaho, said that the event allowed him to see what Moscow had to offer and to meet people from the community. "For a university organized event, it went well," he said. "I was very impressed."

Despite the efficiency and smoothness of how the event ran.

Palousafest wasn't without its low points, either. Demetrios Palavos said that the weather turned out a lot cooler than was anticipated, and may have caused people to leave earlier than they could have.

"By around 10:30 p.m., it's cold, people are tired, and it caused the crowd to diminish," Palavos said. "I think the event going late was the problem. Instead, maybe starting later would be an option.'

Despite the loss of attendees as the night carried on, Wuthrich said that the total number of people was still high. "Last year, there were only about 100 people around for the last act," he said. "This year, we estimate it was closer to 1,500."

Even with a blemish or two, Palousafest '95 turned out to be a handsome success. Palavos said that he was satisfied with this year's effort, even if it's still a young event. "From my point of view, it went off well in its second year," he said. "It takes a couple of years for it to take off, but it will get better and better in years

And as for next year, Palavos couldn't quite say what was in the works, except that he hopes the tradition continues. "With feedback and input from students to improve it, it could be even better next year," he said.

David Gebhardt Members of the University of Idaho football team match strengths in a tug of war at Palousafest.

Artist explores cyberspirit in contemporary culture

Valaree Johnson

n a world where conversation is electronic and words are processed, you'd at least think art would be safe. Now art has turned cyber as "Cybermorphic Technodreams" opens Washington State University's Compton Union

The exhibition in general is about the televisionization of our society and the "prevalence of the media in our day-to-day lives," says Andi Olsen, creator of the phenomenal collages and assemblages.

"We are bombarded with images every day," Olsen said. She asserts that her work shows a healthy skepticism of the technology that surrounds us.

Several of her collages and assemblages are done in collaboration with her husband Lance Olsen, director of creative writing in the University of Idaho English Department, who also has written books on the thematics of technol-

Ólsen explains the difference between collages, which are twodimensional works that piece things together using language and imagery and assemblages, which are three-dimensional collages.

One of her assemblages, whimsically entitled "Remote," represents the media as a modern day religion. The sculpture shows a remote control wired to a head with a Buddha spinning on an old record player.

Her work provokes such questions as "Where does the human end and the machine begin?" and "Do we create our histories or does the media create them for us?

From mannequins to bird cages, disk drives to shark fetuses, Olsen's imaginative exhibition exposes what she declares as "a celebration of the media and the potential of the media to take over our thoughts."

The inventive works are intended to display a humorous skepticism of the "idealized and idolized concepts of family, technology, and the environment."

"Come with an open mind,"

The exhibition continues through Sept. 15, Monday-Friday from $1\bar{0}$ a.m. to 3 p.m. Olsen will be at the Gallery on Thursday, Sept. 7, from 11-2 p.m.to discuss her work with visitors.

Olsen's work has appeared in galleries across the country and she has also published numerous collage illustrations. Olsen received her Master in Art History from the University of Virginia. She now lives and has her studio near Deary, Idaho.

TALES FROM THE PUNCHBOWL

They are like a prosthetic limb gone awry; a beach volley ball deflated till it is holding only enough air to support its weight and no more; nor no less of design to intrigue the player of the game. Primus succeeds in filling our lungs with the ludicrous and blatant fun which is lacking in most other bands.

It is frivolous music-no point is contained within the main context of the lyrics. Yet, the old anthem coined by the band themselves is true "Primus Sucks", in a good way. In their new album, Tales from the Punchbowl, lead man Les Claypool takes us on another trip into the charming and sometimes stupefied world of lyrics and his band's skilled playing.

From the first song, Professor Nutbutter's House of Treats, to the last song, Captain Shiner, Primus amuses us with their lyrics. "Mrs. Blaileen," the second track on the album, starts out with lines which could hit home with some people: "Mrs.. Blaileen—she was his sixth grade teacher / and she controlled the chil-

Each song from Primus though features one of the industries top bassist, Les Claypool. On the album he uses a four string, six string fretted and fretless, upright basses and a bass banjo. Tim ### "Herb" Alexander and Larry Lalonde are also back into the groove.

Primus' third song on the album,
"Wynona's Big Brown Beaver" was the first to be released. Accompanying it as always is a video. The video nevertheless was directed by Claypool and features Primus dressed in giant rubber suits like the family out of the Duracell commercials. The cartoons in the video were drawn by Claypool and Lalonde.

Primus compares to no band in the industry. They are their own flavor: Style mixed with the laughable, all jumbled in with masterful bass playing by Claypool. The bass in the band is the most outstanding feature. Rarely do other bands use their bass as much as Primus.

In all of the songs the bass can be heard. Primus can be found at all record stores.
The new album is called Tales from the Punchbowl and is available on the Interscope label. If you want to see what real bass playing is and what real musicians sing, go and buy the Primus album. Then you can say proudly and boldly, "Primus Sucks."

SLIPSTREAM

Being a fan of the band called Spiritualized, formed from the ashes of Spaceman 3, I am always trying to get any side projects the members of the band may

The latest project is called Slipstream, headed by ex-Spiritualized member Mark Revoy. The first impression I had of this band is that I would be hearing the same trance rock sound that Spaceman 3 and Spiritualized are known for. Instead, I was completely surprised. Slipstream's album has more of a traditional rock-n-roll sound mixed with a bit of trance.

Kind of like Spiritualized meets the Kinks. It seems that Revoy is getting away from the heavy mesmerizing sound he used on his previous works.

Do not worry Spiritualized fans. Revoy gives you the song, "Pulse Beat," which is an experimental moog synthesizer track, just to show he can still do it if he feels Compositions on the album are beautiful and brilliant. Highlight tracks are "One Step Ahead," "Sundown", and "Riverside," in which Revoy is asking you to go out and enjoy nature instead of stressing about things that should not be taken seriously.

Revoy's point being, we are not on this earth long, enjoy it while it lasts.

Enough already! Go out and buy the album. It can be found on Che' records. Meanwhile, I think I will go outside. As Revoy says, "Before my time has come and too many things get done, I'll take a walk by the riverside."

Xenon hosts alternative dance night

Justin Cason

Fridays at Xenon Night club have a new look this year.

Starting Sept. 1, every Friday night will feature only alternative music. "Alternative night" adds a new type of music to a lineup which already has hip-hop on Saturdays and country on Thursdays, as well as occasional live performances by local bands.

Jess Johnson, Xenon general manager, hopes that the previous lack of any alternative dance clubs in the area will draw in large audiences

"No other place in Moscow or in Pullman that offers this type of music on a regular basis," he said.

While at first all the dancing will be solely to the sounds of compact disc, Johnson is looking to add a bit more for his mainly college-age audience.

"We'd like to build a foundation first and feel our way around," he stated.

"Eventually, though, we want to bring in some live groups."

Although Johnson plans to stick with this format for a while, he has no specific groups in mind as far as airtime.

"Alternative has different connotations to different people," he stresses. "We're trying to offer something diverse."

The club, which requires patrons be at least 18 years of age, will open its doors at 9 p.m. and close at 2 a.m.

Xenon has featured alternative nights in the past; most recently a few years ago on Wednesdays. This, however, was cut short after about a month because of a poor time slot.

Posies electrify Palousafest crowd

Jeffrey Albertson

While the audience slam danced, stage dove and tossed an eight year old child around like a beach ball The Posies put on an electrifying rock extravaganza complete with everything but a fireworks show at last Saturday's Palousafest '95.

The Posies, following a brief introduction from the staff of KUOI, energized the audience for over an hour and a half calling on material from the groups three previous albums as well as some new songs.

Before the show, guitarist and founding members of the group, Jon Auer and Ken Stringfellow spoke with reporters about everything from putting out their first album to working with Ringo Star, and Cheap Trick.

The band's debut, Failure, on Pop Llama Records was recorded in Auer's father's house and has since served as the corner stone for the group's sound.

That's the record everyone in the area knows us by, but that's seven years of water under the bridge," Auer said of the groups 1988 release.

Since then The Posies have gone threw a slew of rhythm sections, but the main drive behind the band's success has always been the partnership of Auer and Stringfellow as a song writing team.

While the success of Failure paved the band's path out of the northwest its followup Dear 23 was met with considerable less attention, mostly in sales.

Touring for that album left the band disenchanted and they rushed to get back into the studio to begin work on its follow up. What came about was an album's worth of material that the band was not pleased with and decided to scrap all but one song, which would later surface on a DGC Record's Rarities Compilation.

What followed was Frosting On the hailed praise from critics and gave fans a new, sleeker look at The Posies blend of power pop-much closer to what Failure had achieved.

It was that album that spawned some of the groups side projects including work with former Beatle Ringo Star as well as the 70's pop sensation Cheap trick.

"Cheap Trick was the first band out that I could call from my era," Auer said, "they were the first band I annoyed my parents with."

Currently the band plans a January release for What Color is A Red Light? their third album for DGC.

Auer describes the new album as a potpourri of music all over the map while Stringfellow quotes film maker Ingmar Bergman—"Art has to entertain to be of any value."

Halfway through last Saturday's show Auer offered a somewhat tongue and cheek dedication to "Jerry" and even went so far as to change the lines of "Suddenly Mary" to "Suddenly Jerry."

raunchy feedback frenzy knocking over mic stands and even throwing in a few broken guitar strings for good measure.

While many bands have flocked to the northwest to jump on the bandwagon of having a Seattle address, The Posies have remained true to their original intent.

Auer said that college radio has given them a solid fan base and explained that the group's appeal lies in the fact college students like guitars and songs they can remember, which is what separates them from riff oriented bands.

Writing catchy rock oriented pop songs has got The Posies to where they are now. Working together for 12 years Auer and Stringfellow have obviously become comfortable with what they are doing. It's that solid partnership that allows The Posies to maintain their status as a convincing rock band, despite the continually changing line-

Fans of the band's music can now reach Auer, Stringfellow as well as bassist Brian Young and drummer Joe Bass on the internet at kenposie@seanet.com.

Sweetwater plays Pullman

Matt Baldwin

On Aug. 30 Sweetwater played at the Zoo in Pullman. Opening for the Seattle band were two other Seattle bands by the names of The Chauffeur and 3D S&M.

The first band, The Chauffeur, exploded with music that seemed sensual yet sounded like a rogue steam engine jumping through hoops in the mind's circus. Some of their songs verged on mimicking Sonic Youth.

After speaking with the first band, they informed me they may be doing some more shows in the Pullman-Moscow area. Currently, they have a cassette out featuring the Zoo while some others are not featured on the album.

3D S&M, the second band to perform, riled and tore the eardrums out of the patrons of the Zoo. Mosh galore crept its way into the center floor of the Zoo while 3D S&M performed. 3D S&M created a sound which seemed to mix L7 or Babes in Toyland with Dexatrim.

The final band to perform was Sweetwater. Currently, their album is being played on 50 top national radio stations nationwide. If you enjoy their music their live show will blow you away. Their set, which seemed to end just a little after they started, ignited the crowd into a throbbing mass of flesh, blood and sweat. Beer was thrown and sweat was bled from pores, the Sweetwater concert was a grand ol' time.

Sweetwater should be performing again during CougFest at Washington State University in Pullman. If you missed them at the Zoo don't miss them at CougFest.

Look for an interview with Sweetwater in the next issue of Diversions.

It promises to be a fantastic sojourn into the world of this fantastic Seattle band.

Also be watching for interviews with The Chauffeur and 3D S&M.

LC's Brew Review: Back to school brews

Erik Marone

Staff

Welcome back to yet another exciting and action-packed semester at the University of Idaho.

As many of us have discovered, the educational process can be both hindered and enhanced by the consumption of golden ambrosia, beer.

Sooner or later, you may develop an appreciation for quality, as opposed to quantity, and I shall be once again abusing my association with this fine publication to offer you some suggestions to help you explore beyond the cold, multiple and domestic.

This is not to say that domestic brews cannot be world-class, so today we'll sample a few American brews that help dispel the myth that all American beer is like making love in a canoe.

First, we'll try Hale's India Pale Ale. This fine brew, hailing from Spokane and Seattle, is a light brownish amber color with a clean but not overly unique aroma.

However, the flavor grabs you by the throat and slaps you with a sharp, hoppy bite and relatively high alcohol content. And each taste is just as exciting as the first because this ale finishes very clean, with little aftertaste. WAITRESSES BEWARE: One interesting side effect I've noticed about this beer, is that exactly two pints greatly enhances the amorous side of the drinker, and they may subject you to even more suggestive comments than usual.

Next, let's take a look at Hart Brewery's 1994 Pyramid Anniversary Ale. This full-bodied barley wine styled brew is unfiltered, so you get a layer of yeast sediment at the bottom, which adds to the ale's fruity bouquet.

It has a rich, sweet taste that is lightly hopped. It is slightly darker than the Hale's and finishes with a lingering, highly complex aftertaste that is mostly sweet but has dry undertones.

Finally, we'll journey to Ceres, California for the Sam Adams 1995 Reserve Triple Bock.

Bottled in a spiffy blue bottle with a cork, just the packaging is intriguing. Brewed with maple syrup, this is a beer that commands respect, if not fear from anyone who encounters it. It is a deep brown color, almost cloyingly sweet and very heavy, with a grainy bouquet that can best be likened to soy sauce.

This beer is so thick, it didn't pour a head, it oozed into my glass. The very high alcohol content lends it a liquor-like character and finishes fairly dry, with little aftertaste.

Even if you can afford to pay over $5 for an eight and a half ounce bottle of this, you would not want to drink more than one of these at a sitting because it will spoil your appetite.

The Pete's Wicked Ale I drank after

The Pete's Wicked Ale I drank after the Triple Bock tasted like Keystone Light. Definitely not a beer for weakhearted.

And so it goes from here. If you would like to see a beer reviewed here, drop me a letter through the Argonaut, I'm always looking for new beers to try.

Until next time, remember that beer doesn't have to be consumed in multiples of six to be good. Cheers!

Theta Chi welcomes these new pledges...

Deadheads sue due to injuries

ST. CHARLES, Mo. (AP)— Four Deadheads are suing for injuries suffered when a deck collapsed at a campground after a Grateful Dead concert.

The lawsuits, each seeking more than $25,000 for negligence and personal injury, were filed against campground owner Pinewoods Enterprise Inc. and promoter Douglas Bledsoe. Calls to the company and promoter Tuesday weren't immediately returned.

The deck collapsed July 6 at the Pinewoods Camping and Fishing Park near Wentzville, after the show in suburban St. Louis.

Hundreds of Deadheads were camping there and many had gathered on the deck and a patio below during a thunderstorm. In all, 108 people were treated at hospitals.

Robert C. O'Neal, lawyer for injured fan Scott Dolman, said his client's neck was broken and he "spends most of his time in a wheelchair."

Two of the lawsuits were filed July 31 and two were filed Friday.

Tommy Chong seeks younger fans

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Cheech Marin, the counterculture comedy partner of Tommy Chong, is looking for a "womb-to-tomb" fan base.

Since the 1978 dopehead film "Up in Smoke," Marin directed himself in "Born in East L.A." and provided the voice of nogood hyena Bonzai in "The Lion King."

The 49-year-old Marin plays the bartender in "Desperado," starring Antonio Banderas, and is now filming "From Dusk Til Dawn," directed by Robert Rodriguez and written by Quentin Tarantino.

"Part of my new process is to get a fan base that goes from womb-to-tomb," Marin said in a recent interview. "There are little kids that listen to 'Cheech the Bus Driver,' and like, grandfathers that still listen to old Cheech and Chong albums."

'Billy Madison' offers quality, stupidity

Justin Cason

With the current lack of quality movies at the theaters (Mortal Kombat is number one at the box office right now), what better way to take in a good show than to check out something on video that you might have missed the first time around.

Billy Madison, starring Adam Sandler, is a new release to video stores and comes as close to combining quality and stupidity as ever thought possible.

Sandler plays Billy Madison a Sandler plays Billy Madison a twenty-something son of an enormously wealthy hotel tycoon. Billy's day is filled with drinking, nudie magazines and chasing imaginary penguins on his golf cart. This is until his retiring father chooses to turn the corporation over to his vice-president, Eric. instead of Billy.

tion over to his vice-president,
Eric, instead of Billy.
After Billy persuades his dad to let him take grades 1-12 over again—without the help of his father's bribes to the teachers—to prove he's not a complete idiot, he spends the next months relearning spelling, reading and writing, all while trying to impress his father and his thirdgrade teacher, Veronica. This movie

This movie is either the funniest thing since Ace Ventura or the dumbest since Ernest Goes to Jail.. It's a matter of taste. It's a question of whether making fun of children who stutter and lighting bags of feces on fire amuses you. The fist time I saw this, I didn't stop laughing until long after I'd left the theater.

The beauty of Billy Madison lies not only in Sandler's ability to make the stupid into the hilarious. He helps remind us of our days in elementary school—dodge ball, story time, a crush on the teacher. Still, only Sandler could make farting and talking gibberish a true art form.

However, there are times when the plot runs a bit dry and the dumb humor just doesn't work. Billy's preoccupation with the imaginary penguin gets old, and the dance number on the Madison front lawn seems to be merely filler.

Eventually, Billy beats Eric in a "decathalon of the mind" and wins his father's multi-million dollar hotel chain. He also wins the affections of Veronica along the way, who teaches him, in a roundabout way that everyone has feelings.

While Billy Madison lacks any social or political value, or any value at all for that matter, it is a great laugh and definite springboard for

Saturday night live guitarist fired

NEW YORK (AP)—The new faces on "Saturday Night Live" this fall will include the bandleader.

G.E. Smith, the flaxen-haired guitarist who headed the house band since 1986, was axed for the 1995-96 season, NBC has announced. His replacements as musical director will be "SNL" saxophonist Lenny Picket and pianist Cheryl Hardwick.

Intruder shot attempting entrance into home of Madonna

LOS ANGELES (AP) —The intruder shot at Madonna's mansion while insisting he was the entertainer's husband pleaded innocent to stalking and making terrorist threats.

Robert Dewey Hoskins, 37, entered pleas Tuesday to felony stalking, three felony counts of making terrorist threats and one misdemeanor count of assault. He remained jailed in lieu of $150,000 bail.

Superior Court Judge Jacqueline Connor set a hearing for Sept. 27.

Hoskins was shot in the arm and hip May 29 after leaping a fence at the star's Hollywood Hills estate and lunging for guard Basil Stephens' gun, prosecutors said. The assault charge related to Stephens.

Hoskins ran around Madonna's property for up to 15 minutes and took a dip in her pool while Stephens called for backup, police Detective Andrew Purdy testified during a preliminary hearing.

Guards talked him out of the pool and were trying to handcuff him when he became combative, the detective said. Hoskins, meantime, insisted he was Madonna's husband.

Hoskins also tried to scale the walls of Madonna's home on April 8, telling the same guard that he was going to marry her or kill her, Purdy said.

"Specifically, he said he was going to 'slit her throat from ear to ear," Purdy said. Hoskins fled before police could arrive.

Madonna, who wasn't home during either incident, will testify at Hoskins' trial, said Deputy District Attorney Rhonda Saunders.

ASUI readies for future

With a $100,000 of improvements to the Borah Theater under its belt, ASUI Productions is prepared for an exciting season of films and entertainment.

Thanks to a cooperative agreement with Network Events Theater, a new projection system, screen and sound components will enhance the viewing experience for filmgoers.

"I think our improvements in the Borah Theater will really make a difference," said Shana Plasters of ASUI Productions.

Four films and one double feature are planned for September. They include Animal House, the director's cut of Blade Runner featuring additional footage, a foreign film titled Tangos, The Exile of Gardel and another foreign production called Delicatessen. These films will show on Wednesday nights at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $1 for UI undergrads with identification and $2 for general admission.

Ferris Bueller's Day Off and Three O' Clock High are slated for the double feature on Sept. 23. Tickets are the same price as regular features.

Plasters also said ASUI Productions will televise the $1 million one-on-one basketball challenge of Shaquille O'Neal and Akiem Olajuwon on Sept. 30. No starting time or ticket prices were available at press time.

Craig Karges, a mentalist/psychic/illusionist who was named "College Entertainer of the Year" by the National Association of Campus Activities, will perform on Sept. 19 at 7:30 p.m. at the Student Union Ballroom. Admission is $3 for UI undergrads with identification and $5 for the general public.

"It's a great show and he's a great performer,"

"It's a great show and he's a great performer," said Plasters.

Other fall events include live concerts and lectures, including one by Barry Williams about "Growing Up Brady" on The Brady Bunch television show.

"I think students are really excited about that (event)," Plasters said.

Bananafish, an acoustic guitar band from the Seattle area, will play at the Student Union Food Court on November 7.

Plasters also said an offer to Blues Traveler was refused but ASUI Productions is still looking for another band to perform at the Student Union.

Events that return from last year's schedule include Open Mike Nights, a virtual reality fair called Virtuality and MasterCard Acts, in which Sean Wilson and Eric Cannavaro went to the finals last year.

Your weekly horoscope

ARIES: (March 21-April 20)

Creative opportunities during the week may be just the opening you need in order to explore a career-related idea you have been toying with for some time now. Give your mind and nerves a rest, you will need to be 100 percent on the homefront. Romance is highlighted at night.

TAURUS: (April 21 - May 21)

You seem to be overly concerned with your financial base. You and a mate haggle over joint funds and finally agree on a better approach to handling your money. Relationships with coworkers are positive and beneficial. Someone will do you a big favor soon.

GEMINI: (May 22 - June 21)

A powerful mutual attraction may arise between you and someone you meet during the week. The other person will take the lead in bolstering the relationship. Your emotions are downbeat, and probably affecting your work or health—make sure to conserve your energies.

CANCER: (June 22 - July 23)

Be skeptical of promises given to you by a close friend or business partner. Your financial prospects are slowly improving. Be extra cautious in dealing with other people's money. The key is to focus on positive emotions and diffuse tensions as they arise.

LEO: (July 24- August 23)

Although you may be in the mood to have things your own way, it's not a good time to insist on that. Back off with your loved ones, they are no doubt distressed by your efforts. You seem to be busier than ever with friends and neighbors showering you with invitations.

VIRGO: (August 24 - September 23)

You have a lot of personal and family obligations this week. Despite all this commotion, you feel surprisingly calm and more serene than usual. Old emotional issues now make sense and you are free to deal with them and then let them go and get on with your life.

LIBRA: (September 24 - October 23)

The week begins confusingly and doesn't seem to improve much at all. Money news may be iffy at best, and cooperation is definitely lacking. Try to bypass any form of speculation. Dreams of traveling are a pleasant diversion from the daily grind, what are you escaping from?

SCORPIO: (October 24 - November 22)

You are feeling overly burdened by family responsibilities. Being a strong and stable person, people naturally tend to count on you; maybe its time to be a little selfish and work on your own interests. It's up to you to decide how much you will give to those around you.

SAGITTARIUS: (November 23 - December 21)

Being ambivalent about a home problem will not help matters at all. This could be one of those matters that must be approached head on. Those around you may be somewhat touchy, so take that into account when dealing with all. Realign your priorities—the future is bright.

CAPRICORN: (December 22 - January 20)

Follow through on a project that is money, family or property related. This could have potential well beyond the immediate benefits. Distractions at work have a negative effect on your concentration. You will connect with a likeminded individual who wants to help you.

AQUARIUS: (January 21 - February 19)

Working harder than ever, it seems as if every task requires twice the time and effort to finish. You may be a little rundown and that is why everything seems to be such a big chore. Start taking better care of yourself, and your outlook will be much brighter.

PISCES: (February 20 - March 20)

A financial matter requires your attention. Old debts must be cleared away as soon as possible—it will take some effort to get your cash flow situation to a comfortable point. You are busier than usual and have less time for fun and games. A new lover is patiently waiting.

Rock-n-roll hall of fame set to open

CLEVELAND (AP)—There is no rock-n-roll in the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame.

Well, there is, but there isn't. The museum part of the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame and Museum, which opens Friday, is alive with the music it celebrates. But the hall of fame is silent and dark.

Which is just how the music shrine's backers envisioned it.

"That's probably the one place where we allow you to be a little reverential," said museum Director Dennis Barrie. "To be a little quiet with your thoughts, to contemplate what these people meant to you and I think we achieve it very well."

Inductees' names and autographs are etched in white on panels of black glass. Short biographies and pictures of the stars fade in and out on tiny television screens.

"There's a nice moment of being one with the great stars of rock-n-roll— having a chance to just think about them and not have to react to their performance, to the sound, or be overwhelmed by being in the presence of their guitar or their costume," Barrie said Wednesday as hordes of reporters and photographers got a preview of the $92 million museum.

Architect I.M. Pei designed the Architect I.M. Pei designed the glass, chrome and steel pyramid, built on the shore of Lake Erie. The rest of the museum resonates with music, from rock to Motown, from the British Invasion to Seattle's grunge.

But not the hall of fame.
