ASUI Board Chair spends unauthorized funds

Mike McNulty

It was a flagrant misuse of the students' money," ASUI President Sean Wilson said about a chairperson's decision to spend an unauthorized amount of cash on an expensive dinner last semester.

Angie Shaltry, chairperson for the Student Issues Board, was authorized to buy dinner for board members after the spring election with a UI departmental purchase order issued by ASUI Business Adviser Sandra Gray.

"It was my understanding that the dinner was to be a pizza party," said Gray.

Shaltry and seven guests ate at West 4th Bar & Grill on May 11, charging a $228 meal to ASUI.

The supposed "pizza party" consisted of four appetizers, shrimp pasta, seafood fettuccini, four steak and shrimp platters, pepper steak, chicken cordon bleu, cheesecakes, twelve virgin Bloody Marys and Daiquiris and a $25 tip.

Gray said the six member SIB is given an annual food budget of $120 to be used for board members during the student elections. The money comes primarily from student fees which supports ASUI's near $1 million annual budget.

ASUI Senator Christa Manis said "it's a shame" the student legislature is often slowed down by minor details.

"We're just tired of knit-picking," said Manis. "It's hard to keep things moving when we have to deal with things like this."

President Wilson said he found out about the dinner party after most students had left for summer vacation and contacted Shaltry telling her to pay back the entire amount except for $50 which he allocated to her for the cost of a pizza party.

Wilson said Shaltry paid back part of the dinner cost while the rest was billed to her student account.

A receipt produced by ASUI Thursday verified that on June 28 a check for $90 was deposited as "reimbursement for SIB board members."

Shaltry has not returned to UI and is currently living in Boise. If she returns to school, her account must be paid in full to register said Wilson.

Shaltry was unable to be reached for comment.

ASUI Senator Clint Cook, who resigned from office last week, said he was at the dinner which was a "reward" for board members who put in over 20 hours of unpaid work during the spring election. He said Shaltry was just appointed to her position and was unfamiliar with certain procedures.

"No one told her the rules," said Cook. "Angie thought the money was available to be spent."

Cook said everything was "straightened out" and the situation has been exaggerated because there were "a few people in ASUI that want to make trouble."

There are currently no members on the SIB which are primarily responsible for running elections and informing students about pertinent legislation in Boise and proposed fee increases.

To prevent future blunders, Wilson plans to educate new board members about available funds and the strict budget ASUI must work with each year. He said there are no plans to write policies concerning such matters.

General education course numbers to be standardized

Janet Birdsall
Staff

The State Board of Education decided that all general education courses will be re-numbered to be the same across Idaho institutions, Faculty Chair Larry Branen told faculty council members in a meeting Tuesday.

Standardization of course numbers may make it easier for students to plan their classes and transfer credits within the state, however the plan was met with some disagreement from the faculty. The courses offered at the various universities do not cover the same material. Making standard course numbers for all institutions implies the courses are similar in content.

"All of the institutions agree it's a nightmare. Maybe we can do it, but it won't be without a lot of work," Branen said.

The Board also plans to distribute 4.6 million dollars across all agencies for salary equity, Branen said. This money is in addition to cost-of-living raises.

In other business, Director of Business and Accounting Services Mike Allred informed faculty of restructuring in the travel credit card program. The current program will be replaced by a new program at the end of September.

"What we have now is not workable—it has to be restructured. Nobody else in the world does business this way," Allred said.

As it stands, faculty can check out credit cards from their department. The department files a claim voucher, the university pays the credit card bill, and the travel office reconciles the credit card statement.

Under the new program, faculty travelers will have individual credit cards and the bills will be sent to their homes. If travelers promptly file a claim for reimbursement, they will receive a reimbursement check before the credit card bill is due, Allred said.

Faculty questioned the necessity of the restructuring. They also asked for figures related to the revisions.

Allred cited overhead costs and incomplete documentation as problems in the current program. The decision to restructure the program was made by the Travel Advisory Committee on Aug. 23. The new system will go into effect on Oct. 1.

Computer Services offers helpful hints

Christopher Clancy
Staff

In response to student concerns, to promote greater awareness in campus computer labs and increase the efficiency of campus labs, Carl Brenner of computer services provided some helpful tips aimed at solving some common PC problems in an interview in the Student Union computer lab on Wednesday morning. Brenner provided some quick and simple solutions to some of the more common problems dealing with start-up, care and maintenance PC lab computers.

One of the most common problems many computer users face is a simple one having to do with start-ups, said Brenner. Many users simply abandon computers when at first they don't start-up, creating a shortage of computers in the labs.

"A lot of times the computer will stop during it's start up before opening into the initial blue menu in DOS because a one or zero will come up when the computer is asking for instructions from the server and it will get confused," said

Brenner.

The problem comes from the fact that most lab computers don't have hard drives that supply that information—it has to come from a server in the administration building. The rule of thumb, said Brenner is to wait only about 30 seconds. If the computer isn't on-line by then a problem has probably occurred. A simple solution, said Brenner is simply to re-start the machine. Restarting gives the machine another chance to connect to the server.

A related problem that stems from the use of servers for holding and maintaining of Windows and Windows related software on lab computers, such as a general protection fault.

"Usually when a student has problems in Windows it's because the H drive for whatever reason gets unhappy... maybe data has been corrupted," said Brenner.

When such a problem occurs Brenner advises users to first: get out of Windows and back to the main menu. Then press F4 on the upper portion of the keyboard. This deletes all of the

Craig calls Dworshak study giant leap of faith

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service praises water releases from Dworshak Reservoir for improving salmon survival, but Sen. Larry Craig believes the weather and fish barging did the trick.

The agency on Wednesday reported a five-year study shows a dramatic increase in survival when large amounts of water from Dworshak flowed down the Clearwater and into the lower Snake River reservoirs as salmon were migrating.

Biologists found 47 to 55 percent of Snake River fall chinook salmon smolts survived this year with the help of 48 days of extra water releases from Dworshak Reservoir.

That compares to a survival rate of just 7 percent in 1992 when special releases only lasted 11 days.

But the Idaho Republican on Thursday said he was told the study was based on very little sampling over a two-month period and factors other than Dworshak should be examined.

"A giant leap of faith has been made by the USFWS to claim this study is conclusive scientific justification," he said.

Craig said Idaho enjoyed lots of snow last winter that helped the migrating salmon. He also stressed barging the smolts around the dams played an important role.

But fish advocates say barging does not help salmon since their numbers have plummeted over the years, even with the transportation.

Fish and Wildlife's announcement Wednesday was labeled "junk science" by the Columbia River Alliance, which represents barge operators, irrigators and other industries who have the potential to lose when dam operations are changed to accommodate the fish.

Both Craig and Sen. Dirk Kempthorne, R-Idaho, have urged Commerce Secretary Ron Brown to reconsider the National Marine Fisheries Service's reliance on increasing flows for salmon and recognize the need for a full summer pool at Dworshak for recreation.

Craig has said he is working to insert language in an energy bill to limit the power of federal agencies to control reservoir levels.

He added he was leery of Fish and Wildlife issuing a press release before announcing its study and supportive data.

"This may be just another example of the bureaucrats in Washington laboring hard to exert federal control over water in the West," he said.

Group claims tax credit initiative is unconstitutional

BOISE—A group claimed Wednesday that an initiative that would give parents a $500 tax credit for home-schooling or sending children to parochial or private schools is clearly unconstitutional, no matter what Attorney General Alan Lance says.

"The proposed tax credit, if adopted, would clearly violate the church-state separation provisions of the U.S. and Idaho constitutions," said Steven Green.

He's an attorney for Americans United for Separation of Church and State. The Idaho chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union joined in claiming the initiative is unconstitutional.

A deputy attorney general disputed the claim, and said the ACLU submitted the same arguments earlier and they were rejected.

Green and Terry Gilbert, head of the Idaho chapter of Americans United for Separation of Church and State, took copies of their news release to Lance's office.

The Idaho Citizens Alliance sponsored an initiative which must generate 41,335 signatures from registered voter to qualify for next year's general election ballot.

Sponsors say it will aid public schools by encouraging parents to use private schools, relieving overcrowding.

Deputy Attorney General William von Tegen said the Supreme Court decision that the ACLU and Green rely upon is different than the initiative proposal. He said the earlier case involved a law allowing direct payment of state funds to parochial schools, different from the ICA proposal that calls for tax credits to parents.

"We didn't find that they (tax credits) are a direct benefit to private schools," Von Tegen said. "The payments are a tax credit to parents, reducing their tax liability."

Baesler completes fact-finding in the Balkans

WASHINGTON—U.S. Rep. Scotty Baesler, returning Tuesday from a fact-finding mission to the former Yugoslavia, said he saw first hand the "width of the gulf between the various factions" in the Balkan nations.

The delegation departed Tuesday morning from Zagreb, Croatia as tensions were mounting in the wake of renewed NATO air strikes against the Bosnian Serbs.

Baesler, D-6th District, served as the co-chairman of the bipartisan delegation. He described the trip to the troubled region as "eye-opening."

During their tour, the delegation met with heads of state in the troubled region to discuss the future of U.S. and NATO policy there. The delegation held high-level meetings in Belgrade, Yugoslavia during recent peace talks.

The group also talked to officials of Albania, Montenegro, Kosovo and Croatia about policy options for the region. Members of the delegation also met with refugees from the region hardest hit by enemy shelling, and talked with officials of the United Nations forces in the area.

Baesler and Rep. Mark Neumann, R-Wis., will brief other members of Congress about their findings some time this week. Congress is back in session after its August recess and the House is expected to debate President Clinton's decision to veto the congressional resolution lifting the Bosnian arms embargo.

Baesler made the trip as a member of the bipartisan National Security Caucus, which is now the largest Congressional member organization on Capitol Hill.

Joint Chiefs of Staff Chair: End to defense cuts

INDIANAPOLIS—Defense spending cannot be cut further without endangering the quality and readiness of American armed forces, Gen. John Shalikashvili said today.

The chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff told the American Legion national convention that the nation's military budget has been cut 40 percent since the Cold War ended.

"I say enough is enough," Shalikashvili said. "This nation's security demands that we cut no more."

Proof that America still needs a strong military has been seen again in recent weeks, with the deployment of forces to Kuwait in response from threats from Saddam Hussein and in the NATO bombing missions flown by American pilots over Bosnia, he said.

"If we want peace, we have to pay for it," he said. "Our nation must pay for it by keeping our armed forces the best in the world."

The United States learned bitter lessons by disarming after World War I and making sharp defense cuts after World War II and the Vietnam War, he said. "In the end, we paid dearly for our mistakes," he said.

Clinton supportive of new air strikes against Serbs

SELMA, Calif.—President Clinton said today he supports NATO airstrikes against the Bosnian Serbs, who refused to remove their heavy weapons around Sarajevo. "We're working together and I agree with the policy," he said.

Clinton, wrapping up a two-day political trip in California, was notified of the bombing this morning by his military aide, who was given word by National Security Adviser Tony Lake in Washington.

"The president is fully supportive of the action being conducted by NATO military commanders," presidential spokesman Mike McCurry said.

Citing administration policy against discussing ongoing military operations, McCurry refused to say whether U.S. planes were involved in the operation or how long the strikes would continue. Clinton did not discuss specifics of the operation either.

Pentagon spokesman Kenneth Bacon said U.S. warplanes flying out of Aviano, Italy, and off of the aircraft carrier USS Theodore Roosevelt in the Adriatic Sea comprised more than half the NATO strike force sent against Bosnian Serb targets today. A Western military source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said about 80 U.S. warplanes were involved in the attacks.

The targets struck today included ammunition depots and communications facilities, Bacon said. Although preventing the shelling of civilians in Sarajevo is a key aim of the strikes, the NATO planes were not always able to get at Serb artillery emplacements because of their proximity to populated areas.

Earlier at the Pentagon, Deputy Defense Secretary John White told reporters that the air attacks are designed to force Bosnian Serb compliance with allied demands, including freedom of movement for peacekeepers, no shelling of designated U.N. safe areas, and the removal of heavy weapons from U.N. exclusion zones, particularly the area around Sarajevo.

"We had a pause of four days to allow them time for compliance," White said. "They unfortunately have not done so yet. I would suggest that they ought to do so and that they ought to do so very promptly."

White indicated that the latest series of air attack—though more intense than those approved in the past by the U.N.—is intended to pressure the Bosnian Serbs more than to turn the tide of the war.

"The campaign objectives are the same as they were—that is to send a message to the Bosnian Serbs that they should comply with our demands," White said.

Clinton, who planned to leave California late Tuesday, played golf at fabled Pebble Beach this morning, shortly after being notified of the attacks.

"Now," he said of the allies, "we're working together and I agree with the policy."

Clinton has pressed NATO allies to support the airstrikes, hoping the pressure will force Serbs to accept a negotiated settlement.

Computer Services installs new 28.8k baud modems

Sean Tetpon
Staff

University of Idaho's campus computer system will see 32 new modems installed in weeks to come. The new modems will double the data transfer rate for some users logging on from home.

Users with modems rated less than 28,800 baud will not detect a change in performance. Users with 28,800 baud modems will notice download times cut in half.

"They are called V.34, the latest modem standard, which runs twice as fast as previous generation modems," said Chris Magagna, senior systems network analyst. "When pulling up a page with (Internet software) Netscape or Mosaic, the graphics will transfer at least twice as fast."

A serial line Internet protocol, or point to point protocol, is software used to help modems "talk" to each other. Users who log-on to the new modems should have a SLIP or PPP package in their modem software. The packages allow users to take advantage of Internet capabilities found in UI computer labs.

The Computer Services Help Desk has free software for users without SLIP or PPP packages.

"What you will need if you use either protocols, is a terminal server account. It is different than the regular Unix account we give out," he said. "It is to keep those not associated with UI from dialing in."

Terminal server accounts are given at the Help Desk.

On Tuesday, Magagna said the upgrade will result fewer failed log-on attempts by off-campus users. "Going from 64 modems to 96 modems, you are less likely to get a busy signal," he said.

The $25,000 modem purchase is part of a $7.3 million dollar project called the telecommunications infrastructure project.

TIP will connect 75 campus buildings into one Local Area Network. The LAN will consist of 6,350 network connectivity wall plates throughout the campus. A computer can access the UI network through each wall plate.

Kari Dickinson, assistant director of computer technologies, and TIP coordinator, said the project was started due to the lack of accessibility to the Internet and administrative systems on the UI campus.

"The demand right now is network connectivity. UI feels it is important to give connectivity to faculty, staff and students," she said. "Many people on campus are using the modems as the only way to get Internet connectivity, and connectivity to services we provide on campus."

Dickinson said 96 people at any one time can access the UI computer system once the modems are installed.

"We understand the popularity of the modems, and we understand the usefulness," she said. "We are doing the best we can to provide as many modems as possible, and keep up with demand."

"If you compare UI to other schools across the nation, 96 is a large number of modems to have," Dickinson said.

Old charge against ex-prosecutor dismissed

Associated Press

COEUR D'ALENE—A misdemeanor criminal charge against former Kootenai County prosecutor Glen Walker has been dismissed, 18 months after it was first filed.

Walker, who has maintained his innocence, alleges he has been the target of a political attack orchestrated by Prosecutor Bill Douglas. Douglas appointed as a special prosecutor Rollie Watson, defeated by Walker in 1984 in a campaign for county prosecutor.

The misdemeanor charges stem from an incident at Walker's office more than two years ago. A deputy sheriff arrested Walker for obstructing justice after he arrived to take a 12-year-old girl into protective custody and Walker wouldn't allow it.

Twice magistrates have ruled there was no probable cause and the charge was dropped, although a district judge later termed dismissal premature.

Watson re-filed the charge and said a jury could decide whether there was enough evidence to show a crime had been committed. The Kootenai County prosecutor's office quietly dismissed the charge on Wednesday.

Walker said the real victim in the case was a legal system congested by meaningless cases.

"It's an injustice to the system more than to me," he said.

ASUI Senate funds one big party

Andrew T. White
Staff

The ASUI Senate met for the first time this year approving funds for a tailgate party before the football game on Sept. 16. The bill appropriating funds for the program spurred debate among the Senate.

"It's what the students have wanted for a long time," said ASUI President Sean Wilson. "The tailgate party will be a great success, and everybody is invited," Wilson said.

The tailgate party, an event that is estimated to cost over $7,500 raised questions from many Senators. "It's not a question of Vandal pride, it's our job as representatives of the student body to question every bill that comes before the Senate," said Senator Christa Manis who voted yes for the bill.

Senator John Tesnohlidek said, "It's going to be a tight year (financially) and we just don't know if it's even going to work. What's going to happen if the turnout isn't what we expect it to be?"

The goal of the tailgate party is, "To bring the entire campus, city, and football fans from across the Northwest together for one big function to kick off the football season, double student attendance at the game, and provide students with the largest and most exciting function ever held in the past 15 years."

Vice President Damon Darakjy said, "It's great, the students have been waiting for something like this to happen for a long time." All Senators are in favor of a tailgate party, the only dispute is over how much should be spent where.

Chair of the Activities Board,

John Hoynes said, "It's great, anything to get the students to come to the game."

Some Senators abstained from voting. Senator Zahrah Sheikh, who abstained said, "For one event that's expensive." Senator Sheikh said, "I abstained because I wanted to ask my living groups what they felt."

The tailgate party before the game will provide great entertainment. Everything from discount hot dogs and pop to a live band will be present. The living group that gets the most people at the tailgate party and football game will receive a generous prize.

The tailgate party begins at 12:30 p.m. on game day, with the football game following at 3:05 p.m. This year's slogan for the party is, "We're having a $10,000 party and everyone in the Northwest is invited."

Agroforestry Conference hosted by UI

Andrea Lucero
Staff

The University of Idaho hosted the fourth annual North American Agroforestry Conference in Boise July 23-28, 1995.

The conference, entitled Growing a Sustainable Future, centered around the conservationist philosophy of using land for the benefit of the people. Individuals attended to share their knowledge on how to grow strong crops while conserving the environment.

"Agroforestry is a field that has been investigated for thousands of years," explained Dr. John H. Ehrenreich, professor of international forestry and range sciences at UI and Chairman of the conference. "Only in recent years has agroforestry become an interest to developed countries."

Ehrenreich explained most of the agroforestry interest has centered around under developed countries because its flexible concept of land use takes into mind the needs of the people and the long term conservation of land.

The success of agroforestry in the under developed countries has caused the concept to become popular in the United States. Over 200 scientists attended the July conference. Agroforestry draws such a wide audience as a result of its involving everything from range and environmental conservation to the habitat of fish.

"I don't know of any other group that has so many people from different background working towards the same goal," said Ehrenreich.

Among those who attended the conference was Mirza B. Baig, an international graduate student from the College of Forestry, Wildlife and Range Sciences.

Baig presented seven papers, the highest number in the conference, many of which concerned the use of agroforestry in Pakistan and underdeveloped countries. Baig plans to publish these papers through the World Bank.

Baig came to the U.S. in 1990 and earned a masters degree in international agricultural extension and was placed on the honor role in 1992 at Utah State University. In 1993 Baig came to UI to pursue his Ph.D.

Baig developed an interest in agroforestry as a result of his experiences in Pakistan.

"Erosion and soil problems are common in Pakistan," Baig explained. "As most of the results of scientific studies are not brought to the potential users, I want to develop my career in agroforestry extension to be a productive professional."

Idaho was chosen to host the 1995 conference because of its involvement in the agroforestry system. Idaho was also the first state to form an Agroforestry Coalition.

"UI has been a leader in the area of agroforestry for many years," said Ehrenreich, "Its because a tremendous number of UI faculty have worked in areas all over the world and brought back so much interest."

Kennedy Center honors Simon, King, Poitier

Associated Press
WASHINGTON—Neil Simon and B.B. King, masters at capturing the emotions of everyday Americans on Broadway and in the blues, will receive Kennedy Center Honors for their contributions to the nation's culture.

A fellow honoree is actor Sidney Poitier, known for some of the first popular film roles to explore seriously the lives of American blacks. Opera singer Marilyn Horne and ballet dancer Jacques d'Amboise complete the 18th group of artists honored by the Kennedy Center.

Their lifetime work will be celebrated with a gala performance at the Kennedy Center on Dec. 3. It will be taped for broadcast early next year on CBS-TV.

President Clinton plans to attend the show, and the honorees are invited to a White House reception earlier that evening.

For the honorees, the fuss began quietly just over a week ago, with an express letter asking whether they would accept the award.

"It's much like the Pulitzer Prize, a little telegram out of nowhere, and you never had a feeling it was coming," Simon, who won a Pulitzer for Lost in Yonkers, said in a telephone interview from Los Angeles.

In announcing the honors Tuesday, Kennedy Center Chairman James D. Wolfensohn called Simon "America's most prolific and popular playwright."

He has written 29 plays since he began in the 1960s. "Number 30 is halfway in the typewriter," Simon

Boise State library expansion project ready for dedication

Associated Press

BOISE, Idaho (AP)—More than two years of construction to renovate and expand Boise State University's library has come to a close—and students say it's about time.

The university will dedicate the $10 million project Wednesday. It features 50,000 square feet of added space, new areas for study rooms and special collections, more computer stations, additional seating and a spacious three-story atrium.

With construction winding down, students will be able to concentrate on their studies without distractions caused by the work.

"They've been moving things around a lot, and it's been hard to find what you want," finance student Jeff Woodall said. "It'll be good for things to stay where they are."

The original library was a two-story structure built about 30 years ago. A four-story addition was built seven years later.

At Wednesday's ceremony, the library will be renamed the Albertsons Library in honor of its largest benefactors. The project was financed with $4 million from the state, $3 million from Albertson's Inc. and $3 million from the late supermarket magnate Joe Albertson and his widow, Kathryn.

As chief executive of Albertson's at the time, Warren McCain played a key role in the corporate gift. A charity auction at his retirement raised $500,000 to support the library's McCain reading room and collection of books concerning Western life.

"The library is the heart of any good university," McCain said. "Without a good library, you don't have a good university."

The changes in the library are varied. Along with expanded space, the entire building was renovated to have a more modern look and feel.

"On a very menial level, there will be more space because of the expansion. On a psychological level, it will be much more grand," head librarian Tim Brown said. "It's better organized than before, but there is the added element of a certain feeling of grandeur."

The library's organization was improved so that students can find materials easier and more quickly.

The work did not go unnoticed by an accreditation team of the Northwest Association of Schools and Colleges. It praised the expansion, and university officials noted that it solved deficiencies noted in 1984 and 1989 evaluations.

But accreditors also said the university needs to spend more money to "improve collections to support faculty research and graduate programs."

Boise State's library now contains more than 450,000 printed volumes, including 386,086 books, 54,683 bound periodicals, and 17,578 textbooks, company reports, computer software materials and browsing books.

UI professor to head Boise facility

Associated Press

BOISE, Idaho (AP)—Larry Stauffer, an associate professor of mechanical engineering at the University of Idaho, has been given a three-year appointment as director of Idaho's engineering programs in Boise.

The school said Tuesday at the end of Stauffer's term, a national search will be conducted for an associate dean for the college, replacing the director position.

Stauffer will direct a beefed-up engineering program at Boise. After complaints from microchip manufacturer Micron Technology that its educational needs weren't being met, the last Legislature allocated an extra $2 million to improve engineering courses in Boise.

Micron offered the state $6 million to start a stand-alone engineering program at Boise State University, but the Board of Education rejected the idea in favor of continuing Idaho's classes in Boise.

Besides the $2 million, the UI reallocated $500,000 of its resources to the Boise program. In addition, the Legislature approved $500,000 for new facilities.

Ten new UI faculty were assigned to the Boise programs and five staff were added. That gives Stauffer 17 faculty and nine staff.

Stauffer will be responsible for dealing with BSU and carrying out educational and research responsibilities of the program.

Stauffer also remains an active member of the Department of Mechanical Engineering faculty.

"There are big changes involved with the expansion of the program," he said. "We've grown quite a bit, and now, we offer bachelor's through doctoral degrees in mechanical, electrical and civil engineering."

Previously, the program offered a bachelor's degree in computer engineering and bachelor through doctorate degrees in electrical engineering.

UI administrators and BSU employees, including Steve Affleck, chair of the BSU Department of Construction Management and Engineering, will share administrative office space in the College of Technology Building.

Both schools will send top officials to an open house on Monday. "Support from both the Idaho Board of Education and the Idaho Legislature has made this important needed program expansion possible," said UI Interim President Thomas Bell.

BSU President Charles Ruch said employment in southwestern Idaho's more than 50 high technology companies has increased 43 percent since 1990.

files in the H drive. Once you've purged those "unhappy" files from the drive the computer can then reload Windows and start over again from scratch.

Another difficulty affecting the lab users comes from improperly maintained floppies, said Brenner. Students using their own floppies, some having only a slight bend or ding in the metal shutter of the disk, can prove potentially difficult to remove once inserted. Disks are fragile and can be damaged very easily, said Brenner.

"These pieces of metal can become lodged in the drive when the user tries to remove the disk," said Brenner. "The computer must then be opened and the metal dislodged all of which costs UI students and staff computer down time. In addition, whatever data that might have been on the disk will usually be lost as well."

He urges students to check their disks before inserting them into drives and to carry their floppies in some kind of protective case. The UI bookstore sells a variety of these cases, some for less than $1.

When floppies aren't enough, Brenner suggests getting a Novell account from the Help Desk at Computer services. Each student is allowed four megabytes of storage on a server at UI. Old e-mail, files and downloaded applications can be stored on the account eliminating the need for carrying around floppies.

For more information concerning email accounts, including Novell, or to report a problem with lab computers or software contact the computer services help desk at 885-2725 or by e-mail at pclub@uidaho.edu.

Born in the Bronx, the 68-year-old Simon is best known for his sharp, humorous portraits of New Yorkers. His hits include "Barefoot in the Park," "The Odd Couple," "The Goodbye Girl," and the autobiographical trilogy that began with "Brighton Beach Memoirs."

King, 69, expresses the soulful emotions of the Mississippi Delta with his voice and his wailing guitar, named "Lucille."

Born in Itta Bena, Miss., he learned to play the guitar from a local preacher. He cut his first record in Memphis, Tenn., in 1949. A long string of hits followed, including "Recession Blues," "Rock Me, Baby," "How Blue Can You Get," and the Grammy-winning "The Thrill Is Gone."

Poitier, 68, is best known for playing dignified characters who respond to racism with controlled anger, reason and intellect. His films include Blackboard Jungle, A Raisin in the Sun, To Sir, With Love, and In the Heat of the Night. He also starred in Guess Who's Coming to Dinner, a landmark 1967 film that was the first mainstream movie to support interracial marriage.

He was the first black man to win the best actor Oscar, for Lilies in the Field, in 1963.

"I chose to play only those parts that would reflect how I viewed myself and how I viewed my country," Poitier said Tuesday.

But Poitier said credit for his groundbreaking roles goes to directors and producers who risked their careers to make such pictures at a time of social upheaval.

Poitier went on to direct several pictures with largely black casts, including A Piece of the Action and Uptown Saturday Night.

America's political heart needs bypass

The stage is being set for a multiplicity of budget spending showdowns between the Republican-controlled Congress and President Clinton this fall.

It seems the overriding goal of the Republicans is not to bring big government spending back under control but rather to make Clinton look like a dope.

Rather than cutting spending to all government programs and getting rid of those which desperately need to be gotten rid of, Republicans have chosen to go after programs initiated by Clinton instead. Is this fiscal responsibility? No—it's the same ol' game being played out on D.C. turf while the American public grows ever more tired of the partisan gamesmanship being played out while the country struggles to pay off its massive national debt.

The Republicans are currently trying to pass a defense bill which would add $6.4 billion onto Clinton's proposed budget. While the United States does need to maintain a strong defense, the extra money the Republicans want to give the Pentagon isn't destined to strengthen the ranks of the infantry. Rather, it's earmarked for high technology weapon systems even the Pentagon says it no longer needs.

The B-2 Stealth bomber has been resurrected along with another ultra-high tech $1.5 billion Seawolf submarine and the Star Wars missile defense system. The submarine program is being kept active not because we need it militarily but rather because the two areas of the country which manufacture these subs happen to be located in the states of two prominent senators.

The defense appropriations bill—along with Medicare and Medicaid—is but one more area in which the Republicans are hoping to create a showdown with Clinton and gain some valuable political points for the upcoming elections in 1996.

For all of their rhetoric in the 1994 elections about responsible government spending, the Republicans are now the ones who are beginning to look like dopes. Rather than exercising the mandate voters gave them last November, the Republicans are back to playing the political game of survival rather than worrying about the nation's economic well-being.

What the United States' political system needs is a thunderbolt provided by an electorate tired of the politics-as-usual in Washington, D.C. Start looking to Ross Perot to provide the avenue by which independent, fiscally-responsible politicians seek House and Senate seats. With enough independent or third party members seated in Congress (and perhaps an independent president in the White House), the political landscape might shift enough to rid the nation of the political horseplay which takes place in the nation's capitol. Then the nation can get down to the business of what it does best: capitalism.

—Russ Wright

SAY... THIS ISN'T THE MOSCOW CITY PLANNER'S ROAD DESIGN MANUAL!

Smoking crackdown misguided

You can tell President Clinton is already getting nervous about the 1996 presidential election. "Shaking in his Executive Boots" fairly well sums up the situation. By all indications, the Prez is starting to sweat.

"What might one of those 'indications' be?" you might ask. Well, for those of us who are ill-disposed toward the Clinton Regime and paid attention to the news over the summer, Clinton's fears were betrayed by his sudden "get tough" attitude—re: teen smoking.

Clinton thought he could give his approval ratings a shot in the arm by going after a piece of fluff issue like teen smoking. Who could possibly oppose a plan to keep kids from smoking? We all know that smoking poses severe risks to human health, so what's wrong with Clinton trying to come to the children's defense and save them from the evil tobacco company monsters?

The problem is Clinton did not say anything which is not already law, he overlooked the REAL reason teens smoke, and the only person who benefited from his "crackdown" is Mr. Clinton.

Mr. Clinton made bold statements similar to "Thou Shalt Not Sell Cigarettes to Those Human Persons Under the Age of Eighteen." I don't know what country Mr. Bill comes from, but the one he presides over has a law already on the books which says you can't sell smokes to minors. And I sincerely doubt that Slick Willie wagging his finger and saying strong words in front of a press conference is going to somehow make the law any more effective.

Another of Clinton's targets (besides Vendors Who Sell to Minors) was tobacco company advertising and sponsorship of sporting events. Mr. Clinton obviously thinks that hundreds of kids a day are lured into smoking by the Winston Cup Racing Series. Is Clinton too stupid (or too far-removed from his pot-smoking youth) to remember the REAL reasons kids smoke? Kids do not start smoking because of Joe Camel, the Winston Cup, or other advertising/sponsorship on the part of tobacco companies (as a matter of fact, under-age smoking was MUCH worse in the days before any of these things existed).

Kids smoke (usually) for one of three reasons. The first, and most obvious, is to rebel. Teenagers will do anything they know will piss off their parents, and smoking cigarettes usually fits into that category. Clinton's "crackdown" won't change that one iota.

The second reason kids will smoke is if their parents smoke. Obviously, they don't see anything wrong with it, so it's no big deal. Clinton's "crackdown" won't do squat to change situations like this.

The third obvious reason teenagers smoke is experimentation. Most kids will try everything once. It's just a part of life. And no, Mr. Clinton, although you think you are Savior of the World, that title has already been taken. Your "crackdown" is not going to keep kids from experimenting.

Basically, Mr. Clinton has tried to bolster his public image by attacking a non-issue with a position he assumed no one could find fault with. Fortunately, there are people in this country who can see past the pretty picture of laid back sympathy the president tries to present us with daily. Clinton knows his days are numbered, and like a deer caught in headlights, it's only a matter of time until he becomes roadkill.

Until then, you can expect Mr. Clinton to take "a hard stance" on every non-issue that comes down the pike.

Promises of big money in Alaska just another fish story

Ever wonder about the ads placed in student newspapers advertising summer jobs in Alaska? These job announcements promise incredible earnings from three to $6,000 a month. This sounds too good to be true when compared to the minimum wage most students earn.

It all seems so easy: just pack your bags and head for the rugged land of Alaska. When you're finished, you'll have a paycheck in your pocket making you a few thousand dollars richer than before. And, if you're concerned about transportation, put your worries to rest because the companies will provide it for free.

The main drawback is that they require you to deal with fish; to be more specific, a lot of dead salmon. The work is done on either processing boats anchored off the shores of Alaska or fish canneries on land.

Although it is true that most college students are not attracted to a summer spent cleaning salmon, there are those who, enticed by the lucrative salaries, may think of this as an ideal job. Unlike receiving a loan (which is the only other time most of us see that amount of money), the money earned is yours to keep without interest and can be used for all sorts of outrageous things, such as paying off credit card bills, car payments or buying overpriced text books and supplies at the bookstore. And maybe if you are really ambitious and earn the advertised six thousand a month, it won't be necessary to take out a student loan.

Stop. Before getting too carried away with counting your fish before they are hooked, there are a few things which must be known about these ads. Be careful. Much of what is advertised is misrepresented and a ploy to lure you into the moneymaking nets cast by certain greedy people eager to deprive you of your last dollar.

I speak from experience because I fell victim to one of these ads. Yes,

I confess. I was an Alaskan Fish Processor on a boat this summer, and I even have a T-shirt to prove it. In case you have ever considered taking one of these Alaska jobs, I will attempt to give you a few pointers in order that you don't fall into the same traps I did.

The first item of advice I can give you is not to call the ads listed in the paper. It will be better to get a Seattle phonebook and contact the fishing agencies separately. Calling one of the numbers printed in the ads gets you connected to a Seattle employment agency quicker than you can say sockeye salmon.

These agencies will charge you $50 to mail you an information packet complete with applications. Upon receiving the packet, it becomes your responsibility to get in touch with the fishing companies. Of course, (smile) if you do not happen to find a job, your $50 will be refunded. Yeah, right. Who is going to trust a business so cheap that it doesn't have the courtesy of providing a 1-800 number? I wasn't willing to chance losing my money. After doing some more calling around, I found the Hospitality Employment Services of Spokane. They offer a slightly better deal than the Seattle agencies by getting you in touch with the fishing companies and an interview in Spokane, but there is a catch. If you are hired, they will charge you a $100 fee. But cheer up, a hundred dollars will not matter once you have the thousands you will supposedly earn.

Sadly, the spending doesn't stop there. Once you are hired, you will find there are a few more expenses the ads forgot to mention. First of all there is the slight matter of an obligatory medical examination, hmm... that's $55, and the drug test, oh... a mere $20. But don't stress, if the drug test is negative, your $20 will be refunded. (Hint: Don't indulge in poppy-seed bagels before the test.)

Wait, you haven't finished spending yet. Before you can embark on the great fish processing adventure, you absolutely must purchase the official Processor's gear kit. This consists of a pair of Extra Tuf boots, a rain jacket, and a pair of rain overalls—all of which are not provided by the company; however, you can buy these items through them.

Depending on the brand of raingear, the entire package ranges anywhere from $100 to $200. I was specifically advised to make sure I got the Extra Tuf Brand rubber boots because they offer the best traction and will prevent me from falling overboard. Overboard?

Ok, remember the free transportation to Alaska advertised in the ads? What they forget to say is that you are going via fishing boat. That was in my case—a 200 ft. long boat that traveled, at its fastest, 15 miles per hour. Make sure you stock up on seasick pills and be prepared to spend eight to ten days traveling the high seas.

Before investing in this kind of job, it is crucial to fully research the company you will be working for. Also be aware that the most you will work for is a month. Salmon season only lasts for a specified time and is usually no longer than 28 days. So at best, you will earn about $300. Don't be caught unaware and happy fishing.

Letters to the Editor

Bikers should slow down

This letter has been sparked by the passing of two strangers yesterday. One was me, standing on the edge of the sidewalk at the west entry to the library by Rayburn Street. The other was some bicyclist passing closely by at 15, 20, or 25 m.p.h.—too fast and too close!

For a fraction of a second, I heard the hum of tires on the asphalt... silence... and the ka-chinking rattle of his bike's chain against its stay as he landed next to me after jumping the drop-off that was near where I was standing. I turned to see him heading off down Rayburn, apparently without care, oblivious to his insolence and as to what had just happened.

You, and others with similar minds, may be new to campus or may have been here before, but something that is new to campus are the street signs and sidewalk stencils with text stating to the effect: "Campus Walkway - Bike at Walking Speed."

What you may not realize is that these signs and stencils were not always there... they were put in place because enough bicyclists in the past were doing the same shit... going too fast and too close amongst pedestrians... in short, being inconsiderate and rude.

To highlight things further, if you (and others with similar minds) don't slow down, there will be a progression... one seemingly very obvious and probable scenario is the issuing of tickets to biking speedsters and if things continue status quo, the banning of all bikes on the Campus Walkway.

The latter is not an outcome I want to see and the former is easy to avoid—it all depends upon you and your attitude. I suggest showing some courtesy to the rest of us on campus and slowing down until you are off the pedestrian walkways.

Time to overrule Supreme Court

Seventy-five days after the Fourth of July in 1862, on the seventy-fifth anniversary of the signing of the Constitution, the single bloodiest day in American military history gave President Lincoln the battlefield victory he needed to issue the Emancipation Proclamation. Just five days after the September 17th Battle of Antietam, Lincoln issued the preliminary proclamation announcing his intent to free Confederate slaves.

It was arguably a blatantly unconstitutional seizure of property, especially following the 1857 Supreme Court decision in Dred Scott, which ruled that the words of the Constitution were not meant to apply to Negroes. But it was not the first time a president ignored the Court, and there is no reason it cannot be done today. In an era of activist judiciary, the assumed power of judicial review has become a license for government of men and not of laws. Its worst abuse demands correction.

Lincoln wondered aloud in his second inaugural address whether the Civil War would continue "until all the wealth piled by the bondsmen's two hundred and fifty years of unrequited toil shall be sunk, and until every drop of blood drawn with the lash shall be paid by another drawn with the sword."

Today, this nation stands guilty of the blood of tens of millions of children, with millions more women and men psychically scarred for life by their complicity in prenatal child-killing. It is time for a decisive, principled and precedent overruling of the Court to free the nation from this horrible disgrace, which hangs on the obscenely familiar fiction that the word "person" does not apply to unborn babies. The basis for the choice to discriminate has simply been changed from skin color to physical maturity, but the choice has been applied in a much deadlier fashion.

We need not endure another baptism by blood to give the nation this new birth of freedom from abominations. Only a peaceful victory at the polls is needed for a truly pro-life president, openly pledged in advance, to ignore the despicable drivel of Roe v. Wade and use federal resources to shut down the killing centers. But every announced candidate intends to preside over a nation that slays its young and meekly wait for an arrogant judiciary to reverse itself in some longed-for repeat exercise of the phantom power of judicial review, which is nowhere to be found in the Constitution.

Where is the emancipator who will free us from this curse?

—Alfred Lemmo

Skansi's NFL experience helps Vandals

Skansi

Damon Barkdull
Staff

Nine-year National Football League veteran Paul Skansi wasted no time in accepting a wide receiver coaching job for the University of Idaho.

"When (UI coach Chris) Tormey came here he gave me an opportunity to coach. I was very fortunate," Skansi said.

The coaching opportunity provided Skansi with his first real coaching opportunity, although he did serve as an unofficial volunteer coach for the University of Washington.

Skansi's playing experience is what led Tormey into hiring the Gig Harbor, Washington native.

"He's a fine football coach with a great understanding of the game. He has credibility with his players because they know the experience he's had on the field," Tormey said.

The 34-year old former Seattle Seahawk started his illustrious career at Washington, where he finished as the Huskies all-time leading receiver with 138 catches for 1,723 yards. As a freshmen, Skansi was named the Most Valuable Offensive Player in a 14-7 Sun Bowl win over the University of Texas. Among his other outstand-character as well as the way he played. He's not the type of guy you idolize but you do want to pick out certain traits of his and apply them to your own lifestyle," Skansi said.

Skansi's NFL playing experience along with his first hand involvement with Hall of Famers like Largent has helped to better himself as a coach.

"I think my experience helps quite a bit in terms of knowing the overall game. Knowing what to expect as a player, having been there helps," Skansi said.

Now that Skansi has been given the opportunity to coach, he can implement his own coaching style to his players, as did coaching greats Don James and Chuck Knox when he was a player.

"My philosophy is to try to get the best possible potential out of every player. I'm not a get in your face, yell and scream type of coach. I like to teach technique and motivate from that technique. Consistency is what I'll try and teach," Skansi said.

Skansi has learned to take pride in his coaching and likes to see his players progress.

"I get satisfaction out of seeing someone get better. I like getting the best out of their individual ability," Skansi said with a determination in his steady voice.

Currently, Skansi's hands are full with taking care of his wife Stephanie and his 2-year old daughter Taylor and trying to whip the Vandal wide receiver core into tip top mental and physical condition.

Skansi's career goal is to establish himself as a solid coach and fortunately for UI fans he doesn't have any thoughts of leaving the coaching world.

"I'm not planning on getting out of coaching. I just got in. I just want to do the best job I can here," Skansi said.

My philosophy is to try to get the best possible potential out of every player. I'm not a get in your face, yell and scream type of coach.

ing accomplishments at UW include being named first-team all Pacific-10 Conference his junior year and in 1990 being named to the all-time Huskie team.

After finishing up at UW, Skansi went on to play in the NFL, being drafted in the fifth round by the Pittsburgh Steelers in 1983.

The UW guru played a year with the Steelers before being traded to the Seahawks. Skansi went on to finish his career in Seattle. By the end of Skansi's career in Seattle, he had compiled 166 catches for 1,950 yards with 10 touchdowns.

To Seattlites, Skansi is a hero and only second to another great Seahawk receiver—Steve Largent.

Largent, one of the greatest receivers in professional football history, taught Skansi a lot, on and off the playing field.

"I tried to live up to Largent's

Vandal men open season at Colorado St.

Jared Smith

J.T. Jones swings away on the first tee at the UI golf course Thursday.

Mark Vanderwall

Staff

Although the University of Idaho men's golf team may not have a final pairing of Hootie and the Blowfish and Freddie Couples, they have put together quite a team to tackle the competition this season.

The Vandals open the season this weekend at Colorado State with four returning players and three strong newcomers. Being able to only travel with five, Idaho will put it's four veterans and a lone rookie on their way to the Rocky Mountain state. John Twining, Jason Hicks, J.T. Jones, and Tyler Sullivan make up the veteran corps, while Jason Stephenson, a freshman from Twin Falls, Idaho will be playing his first college tournament coming off being named the second best high school player in the state last season. Mark Hogaboam, a freshman from Kelowna, British Columbia, and Neil Schneider a freshman from nearby Clarkston, Wash. round out a squad that will possibly form the deepest UI team in many years.

"We look a lot better than we did last year," said Dan Koesters, men's head coach.

"I think we should contend for the Conference Championship if everyone is on their game," added Koesters.

The Vandals had their first tournament qualifier this past weekend and all seven players averaged in the 70's to build a solid base to work from this season. "The three players battling for the fifth spot were only separated by one stroke, so I think the guys will realize that traveling this year is not going to be a free ride," said Koesters.

The Vandals are strong in leadership, as they have three seniors on the team. "I think the three seniors want to leave here on a positive note, and everyone seems to be practicing really hard right now," said Koesters.

With expectations around the pro shop being higher than the crowd at a Grateful Dead concert, the Vandals have nowhere to this season but up. In a year that has seen John Daly win the British Open and Corey Pavin capture the U.S. Open, Idaho may be shortly adding it's name to list of first time major winners.

Cross country season kicks off Saturday as Vandals host WSU, Gonzaga, UM

The University of Idaho will host its lone cross-country meet of the season on Saturday at the UI Golf Course.

The women's race will begin at 9 a.m. and then men's race will follow at 9:30. The Washington State University Cougars men and women are favored coming into the meet as they return champions on both sides. Also competing are Montana, Gonzaga, Whitworth, Whitman, North Idaho College, Portland State and Community Colleges of Spokane.

For the women, WSU's Kristen Liebich is the returning champion and will be joined by teammate Carrie Mangiopane who finished second last year under her maiden name Tacheira. The Cougars could be challenged by Whitman and Idaho.

"Whitman is a very good NAIA team," Vandal coach Scott Lorek said. "The best two teams here, very well could be WSU and Whitman."

Idaho's Shelley Zickler finished third as a freshman a year ago. She is joined on the Vandal squad by junior Angie Mathison, who won this race two years ago.

Also, racing for the first time will be Idaho freshman Brigitta Sera, a Budapest, Hungary native and Maggie Hurst, a freshman from Jamestown California.

On the men's side, the Cougars should hold off the challenge of a tough Griz squad. WSU heads into the meet with defending champion George Loucaides and talented newcomer Rasto Kiplangat.

Idaho's Frank Bruder finished second last season and could be in title contention this year.

For Montana Donovan Shanahan returns to improve on his fifth place finish of a year ago.

Bumbershoot brings out best of Seattle

Jeffrey Albertson
Diversions Editor

Seattle's Bumbershoot has revealed audiences for 25 years, bringing out the best that city has to offer in art, music, food and crafts.

The festival's 25th Anniversary this past Labor Day weekend suggests the event is not only growing to enormous proportions, but can look forward to continuing success for years to come.

Situated inside the Seattle Center gates, visitors pushed their way in only to find the crowd inside reaching capacity levels on all four days. Once in visitors can shuffle through the elbow to elbow traffic sampling from over 40 different food booths selling anything from genuine Thai, Lebanese or Mediterranean cuisine to baked corn, espresso or strawberry shortcake. Arts and crafts vendors lined one whole section of the park with 30 different booths of genuine goods and wares.

Seattle has long been known for its rich blend of street performers who came out in droves to entertain crowds throughout the center. Fire breathers, jugglers, street musicians, magicians, and many other performers put on top notch entertainment for free all weekend long. The performers, mixed with the aroma from a wide variety of food booths, brings a carnival like flair to the atmosphere within Bumbershoot.

While the arts and entertainment may be the frosting on the cake at Bumbershoot, the music proves to be what keeps people coming back year after year. This year's lineup highlighted national acts such as: Los Lobos, 10,000 Maniacs, Michelle Shocked, The Robert Cray band, The Gap Band, The Ramones, Donovan, Patti Smith, Mel Torme and Bela Fleck. Local bands selected to play were: Truly, Presidents of the United States Of America, Sweet Water, Love Battery, Built To Spill, Heatmiser, Running With Scissors, Seaweed, Mudhoney, Sky Cries Mary, Catfood, Juned, Goodness, Supersuckers, Sage, and Steel Wool.

While the event has so much music to offer, time as always, is limited and I unfortunately was only able to make it to a few of the finer shows.

The Rock Arena

Saturday's line-up featured Presidents Of The United States of America, Sweet Water, Love Battery and Built To Spill. The Presidents, laying claim to the title of Seattle's "hippest new post-grunge rock act", filled the arena to capacity causing crowds to form a line blocks long in hopes of getting in to see the rest of the evening's acts.

After standing in line for an hour and a half I made it in to see Love Battery. While the venue may have been dubbed the Rock Arena all that lay ahead inside was a converted hockey palace complete with Dorrito's banners and a scoreboard. While Love Battery blasted out supercharged guitar rock for over an hour the light crew declined to dim the house lights making the atmosphere and intimacy of the venue about as sincere as an Earth Day celebration at a monster truck bash.

Built To Spill followed, and with the insistence of frontman Doug Martsch the lights went out. Martsch and company, complete with new bassist James Betram and Dave Schneider formerly of Lync as well as a cellist, proceeded to play songs from the band's two albums sounding much more well rounded than in the past. Martsch's skillfully crafted songs leveled on the brink of destruction before settling into complete pop bliss proving that Built To Spill is not only Idaho's greatest, but only pop sensation.

Jenwood Stadium

Following Mel Torme could have been a disaster but Mudhoney delivered a solid set featuring old and new songs displaying a contemporary twist to 60's era garage rock. Despite the home court advantage unruly fans pelted the band with lemons throughout their set. Singer Mark Arm commented on how nice it was to be surrounded by geniuses and the band left the stage only to return with an encore of "Hate the Police" which seemed to win over some respect for the band that helped define the now commercially marketed Seattle sound.

The Ramones closed Saturday's show in what is to be the band's final tour after nearly two decades together. In the thickest New York accent Joey Ramone welcomed the crowd then tore non-stop into a medley of the band's earliest hits including "Rock 'n' Roll Radio," "Blitzkrieg Bop" and "Sheenah is A Punk Rocker." While many bands outlive their popularity and continue to play the bar scene well after their prime The Ramones decision to call it quits after 20 years is more than dignified. While today's punk bands have all but forgotten the roots of their musical genre The Ramones have stuck to the same style continually, rather than embarrass themselves with one flop album after another they've chosen to let others do it for them. Still after 20 years of bashing out three-chord punk rock the capacity crowd responded with appreciative frenzy throughout the band's set.

Jeffrey Albertson
Street performers roam the crowds.

GO SAILOR
THE MCRACKINS

This week I decided to review a couple of the new seven inch records that have been released lately.

The first of the two I am reviewing is the Go Sailor "Long Distance" EP, headed by ex-Tiger Trap member Rose Melberg. This band combines soft rhythmic guitar and sweet vocals to produce a girl pop rock sound which is quite popular in Olympia, Washington these days.

The EP sounds so much like Tiger Trap it doesn't even seem like the band broke up. However, the songs are actually more interesting, even though they sound mellower than Rose's previous band.

I liked this release better than the last EP Go Sailor put out and I'm also finding that I enjoy this band more than Tiger Trap. The record has four songs and can be found on the label Slumberland. If this is the kind of sound you enjoy, then pick it up. It is as cute as cute can be.

THE MCRACKINS

The next seven inch I sampled was the new McCrackins record titled "Get Crackin!" These three guys from British Columbia are the goofiest thing I have heard in a long time. They bring back the fun that pop punk has lost recently. They give you three new songs including a wacky cover of Chuck Berry's "Surfin U.S.A."

Their sound is similar to the Ramones only with crazy high pitched vocals that will make your hair stand up on end. As if this weren't enough, they also dress up like a chicken and two eggs when they play live.

The songs are great to listen to and kept me laughing as they played. McCrackins' seven inch can be found on a Japanese label called Wallabies Records. If you find that you like it, then check out their full length release on Shredder Records. Its just as crazy as the seven inch.

'Lord of Illusions' disappoints

Matt Baldwin
Staff

With an opening scene which resembles Waco, Texas, yet more sadistic and more haunting, Clive Barker takes us on another trip through his mind with Lord of Illusions.

Lord of Illusions is based on Barker's short story The Last Illusion which appeared in his novel Cabal. The Last Illusion and Lord of Illusions do not have much in common except for characters appearing in the two stories.

The movie is essentially a detective story. Scott Bakula from Quantum Leap is featured as the detective Harry D'Amour. Other characters which cross over from the short story to the big screen are Swann, the illusionist and his wife as well as their butler. Unlike the book though, Swann does not die in the beginning of the movie.

In The Last Illusion D'Amour is hired to guard the body of the illusionist Swann. While in the movie D'Amour is sent to L.A. to investigate someone and somehow runs into the events which lead him deeper into the magic of the cult leader Nix and his prodigy Swann.

Lord of Illusions fails to become a good horror movie. At some points it drags on, while at others the story moves at a relatively good pace.

As for the grotesque, Lord of Illusions fails. The special effects weaken the movie and make it somewhat unbelievable. There are some scenes which make you wince in your seat though. One such scene is when Nix's followers break sets of bottles and then follow that action by kneeling down on the broken shards of glass.

The relationship between the short story and the movie are almost nil. In the short story D'Amour operates strictly in New York while in the movie he goes to L.A..

Unlike other Barker movies, Lord of Illusions does not show us new monsters. There are no memorable visages such as Pinhead or Candyman.

There is not much of a story line to Lord of Illusions. The story is about the cult leader Nix coming back from the grave and D'Amour trying to stop everything. Barker fails to give us any insight into the character of D'Amour. Towards the beginning of the film Barker hints D'Amour has already had dealings with the supernatural in an exorcism case, but he doesn't expand it.

Barker disappoints us with Lord of Illusions. He fails to show us any originality and a coherent story line. Barker's Lord of Illusions is a failure in the world of horror.

'Center Stage' at L-C Center

Justin Cason
Staff

The Lewis-Clark Center for Arts and History has just announced the lineup for "Center Stage," a series of music and drama concerts highlighting various nationally renowned performing artists.

The series, which features five concerts in all, kicks off Nov. 17 with classical guitarist Robert Bluestone.

The Sabella Consort performs two weeks later on Dec. 1. The group will combine holiday music with its always popular jazz and new age instrumental arrangements.

The 1996 season begins with a performance by The Chestnut Brass Company's performance. The quintet, which specializes in show tunes and classical music, will play in late January.

March 23, is the date set for the fourth concert. The Gene Harris Quartet will perform, adding their own style of blues to a jazz sound that has made them one of the most popular acts at the Lionel Hampton Jazz Festival.

Rounding out the list of concerts is the Naa Kahidi Theater of Alaska, a group which dramatizes Native Alaskan folk legends through music, dance and costume. The performance is part of the group's three-day stay in Lewiston, where they will be involved in a cultural exchange with Nez Perce tribe members in Lapwai.

"Center Stage," formerly known as LCSC Artists Series, will be held at the Lewiston High School Auditorium.

The concert art series originated in 1979 and has since provided a great variety of professional performances for the Lewiston community and surrounding area.

Season tickets are now available and have been discounted $10 for students. For information call the Lewis-Clark Center at (208) 799-2243.

Maybe they can't spell 'music,' but they can play it

Valaree Johnson
Staff

Admit it. We've all said it. Either we wished we had taken music lessons as a child, or we hated every minute of them. But using the Kindermusik and MusicGarten curriculum, Andrew Pudewa makes learning fun.

Children as young as 18 months can learn simple songs, finger plays, and musical stories through focused listening to help auditory development and locomotor activity.

Between 8-10 children meet weekly for two 15-week semesters to develop vocal, rhythmic, and expressive musical skills using a wide range of activities such as games, stories, ensembles, and dances.

At the tender age of two and three, the effects of the musical experience are "truly profound."

Andrew Pudewa, who has five children of his own, also teaches violin using the Suzuki method. This method, also known as the "Mother Tongue Method" allows children as young as three or four to learn.

First they learn by ear and then use an age appropriate music reading system.

Founder of the method, Dr. Shinichi Suzuki, believed since children learn their mother tongue easily, they could play and instrument in the same way starting early and progressing in small steps while saturating their environment with music.

Palouse Suzuki Strings, an organization of parents, children, and teachers in the Moscow-Pullman area meet throughout the year for group performances and lessons. This year the group will be offering an 8-week "pre-twinkle" violin class for children four and older beginning Sept. 18.

Classes will be held on Mondays 3:30-4:30 p.m. at the Methodist church in Pullman. Cost is $80 for the series, including materials.

For more information or to reserve a space, call Andrew Pudewa at 882-9123.

THIS WEEKEND ON THE PALOUSE

Clubs and bars in both Moscow and Pullman are offering a wide variety of shows in the upcoming week. If you're looking for something different—this weekend in particular—here's what's going on on the Palouse:

The Big Newtons, a classic rock band from Lewiston, will be featured this Friday and Saturday at Cadillac Jack's, 112 N. Main. The shows begin at 9:30 p.m. and have a $2 cover charge. Only those age 21 and over will be admitted.

John's Alley, 114 E. Sixth St., is presenting the group Citizen Swing this Friday, while local favorites, The Bedheads and Soulcraft will perform Saturday. All shows start at 9:00 p.m., cost $3 and have a 21-or-over age limit. Also, Portland's Tree Frogs are scheduled to play Sept. 12 at John's Alley.

Diehard fans of Soulcraft can also catch them Friday at the Rathaus, 215 N. Main. 9:00 p.m. is the time and $2 is the cover. Again, all patrons must be 21 or older.

In Pullman, The Combine is presenting Scottish artists Len Graham and Cathal McConnell on Wednesday. The show, which is all ages and costs $8, begins at 7:30 p.m. Next weekend, well-known folk musician Dan Maher will do a free show which begins at 8:00 p.m. The Combine is located at E. 215 Main, in Pullman.

Dan Seals to play Palouse Empire Fair

Jeremy Chase

Dan Seals, nationally known country music entertainer, will appear at this year's Palouse Empire Fair tonight at 8:30 p.m.

Seals, formerly of Seals & Crofts and England Dan and John Ford Coley, has produced a score of musical hits, including nine #1 hits. Among those are "Meet me in Montana," "I Will be There," and "Big Wheels in the Moonlight." Besides the nine chart toppers, Seals has had more than 20 songs on the charts.

Seal's music history began long ago with family ties. His father was a friend of famous performer Ernest Tubb, his uncle wrote "Crazy Arms" for Ray Price, and even had a cousin, Johnny Duncan, that produced several country hits in the seventies.

Seals comes to the Palouse Empire Fair as the result of Shoot for the Stars, a promotion and production agency. Bernie Miller, who operates the organization, said that the opportunity to see Dan Seals was the result of good contacts and good luck. "Everybody I wanted to have at the Fair was already booked," she said.

Fortunately, Miller called a friend and found out the country music legend was willing and ready to travel to the Palouse. "I asked, and found out that Dan Seals was available and he could make the date," she said.

Miller said that Seals will be performing strictly a 60 to 90 minute acoustic set as a way to promote his new album, In a Quiet Place.

An "unplugged" album, it includes most of his hits, only redone with just guitar. Seals will also be staying after his set to sign autographs and chat with the concertgoers.

Tickets for tonight's show will be $12, not including the $5 entry fee for the fair. Seating for the event is limited, so getting to the fair early is suggested. Seal's performance will be outdoors, and due to the variable nature of weather on the Palouse, everything from umbrellas to coats are suggested items to bring.

On a final note, Miller hopes the entertainment provided by Dan Seals will only be a step towards bigger and better things for the fair in the future. "I just hope the Palouse comes and supports it so we can do it again next year," she said. "It should be a really good time."

'Material Girl' faces lawsuit over use of namesake

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP)—A New York-based jewelry company is suing to stop entertainer Madonna from using her name as a trademark for her own line of trinkets.

Hobe Cie. Ltd. has used the name Madonna for some of its own jewelry since before the singer was born, said Robert Hobe, who retired as head of the company and moved to West Palm Beach.

"Why is she so greedy? She just ignored what our rights were and made money and completely diluted our imagery," Hobe said.

"The Material Girl" owns a record company, a Miami mansion and as much fame as anyone alive, says the company's lawsuit, filed in federal court in West Palm Beach.

"No one person has an absolute right to use her own personal first name as a trademark, particularly if it has attained stature as the name of Mother of Christ," the company said in court papers.

The singer has "thumbed her nose" at trademark laws by using her name to sell jewelry, the lawsuit claims.

Madonna's attorney, Richard Bales Jr. of Miami, said neither he nor the singer would comment. But in court papers, Bales dismissed the suit as a blatant attempt to cash in on Madonna's popularity and wealth.

"This lawsuit is being driven by the defendant's fame and the perceived pot of gold available through the mere institution of litigation involving the name 'Madonna,'" Bales wrote.

Hobe's Madonna line includes faux pearls and is designed to be elegant, according to the company's West Palm Beach attorney, Thomas Hoadley. It receives high praise in several costume-jewelry reference books and buying guides, and is sold in stores across the country, including five Saks outlets in South Florida.

Madonna's jewelry consists of inexpensive trinkets—earrings, pins, key chains—with the entertainer's name or likeness on them.

Sky Cries Mary, Donovan play Bumbershoot

Jeremy Chase

Staff

Being able to attend the 25th annual Bumbershoot, the Seattle arts festival, during one of its four days was a highlight for my Labor Day weekend. The wide variety of music, art, food, and even people were all ingredients to a well-spent day at Seattle Center.

With so much going around me, it was hard to choose what to do. However, after carefully reviewing my handy Bumbershoot schedule for Sunday's entertainment, I had already made my decision of who I wanted to see and where to go to see them.

The first performer I saw was Donovan at the United Airlines Opera House. To my surprise, the great rock-n-roll legend of the sixties and early seventies was not only still alive, but put on a great show to boot. Working with only an acoustic guitar and his warm, rich voice, he belted out all of his hits. To name a few, he performed "Mellow Yellow," "Sunshine Superman," "Hurdy Gurdy Man," and "Catch the Wind."

Not to be rooted in his old material though, he also played new compositions for a new album to be recorded this fall.

Throughout the hour and a half set, it was evident that the Scottish balladeer and folk singer had not lost the beautiful voice that captured fans 30 years ago, or his sense of showmanship. The packed opera house was filled with occasional cries of "we love you, Donovan," as well as grateful fans leaving flowers on the stage.

As a change from the music of a sixties rock icon, the second big act I saw was Sky Cries Mary, playing at the Seattle Center Rock Arena.

Taking the stage at 6 p.m., the

Jeffrey Albertson

Mudhoney plays to a capacity crowd at last weekend's Bumbershoot.

Seattle-based band played for an hour and a half, mixing songs from their three albums and showing off new material.

For those that have not heard Sky Cries Mary, the best way I could describe their music is diverse. The instrumentation includes Roderick and Anisa Romero on vocals, Michael Cozziguitar, Juano-bass, Gordon Raphael-keyboards, Todd Robbins-sampler and turntables, and Bennett Ireland on drums.

Mixing numerous styles, including rock, a touch of techno, and simple ballads, the music of Sky Cries Mary appeals to a wide range of tastes. On top of all this, the harmonizing vocals of singers Roderick and Anisa Romero float softly above and through the music.

To add to their show, the band also had multiple slide projectors producing random images on a large nylon screen behind them.

Sky Cries Mary has played across the west and east coasts, and regularly travels through the Pacific Northwest. I encourage anyone to attend one of their shows, or at least listen to their music.

As the capstone to the 25th Bumbershoot, many a tribute was paid to the late, great Jimi Hendrix. Among them was the Red House, which included an electric guitar exhibit from Hendrix, vendors, and interactive projects for people.

Portland's Heatmiser put on a short but tight set for fans at Seattle's Bumbershoot.

LC's brew review: Heads above

Erik Marone

Staff

This week, I decided to pull some of my favorite brews from last semester's reviews for your reading and drinking pleasure. We'll try two imports and two domestics that I find worthy of reprinting.

So for those of you who faithfully read this column last year, you are excused, enjoy the rest of this edition of Diversion and we'll see you again next week.

For those of you who have decided to stick with us, we won't disappoint you with today's fine testaments to the art of zymurgy.

These beers are some of the finest of their style available locally. But don't take my word for it, I encourage you to give them a try and let the beers speak for themselves.

The first beer we will taste today is widely regarded as the finest pilsner in the world. Hailing from the Czech Republic, Pilsner Urquell is indeed a very fine brew. It has a darker gold color and much fuller taste than most pilsners. Its unique bouquet can be attributed to the brewery's exclusive use of Zatec hops for the Pilsner Urquell. A clean taste and crisp finish with a nice slightly sweet after-taste characterize this beer.

This is a more expensive, but far more satisfying brew than American pils such as Budwieser, Michelob, Miller, etc.

If you are ever in San Francisco, try to visit the Anchor Brewing Company, the home of a number of delightful brews, most notably their trademark Steam Beer.

Steam beer, also known as California Common beer, uses a unique brewing process that produces a light charactered reddish-amber brew.

It has an almost floral bouquet and mildly bitter flavor with a lingering after-taste that is not at all unpleasant.

Also from the Anchor Brewery comes a porter that is rather unique as well. It is not as dark as some porters, but has outstanding body and flavor.

The Anchor Porter is very smooth brew that is lightly bitter and finishes dry.

Most of the hops for this beer went to the bouquet, which is sharp and aromatic. This is truly one of the better domestic porters available.

Finally, let's sample Belgium's

Gouden Carolus. This medium-bodied ale has a deep amber color and almost grapey aroma. With cider-like characteristics, it is too sweet (and too expensive) to be consumed as a thirst-quenching cold one or to accompany pizza or burgers.

However, the Gouden Carolus would make a quite acceptable and tasty desert beverage for any number of fine meals.

All of these brews are available locally and just waiting to soothe your palate.

I hope I have inspired you to rush out to the nearest purveyor of finer alcoholic beverages and give them a try.

However, it is my duty as author of this column that I remind you that our legislators have made it illegal for anyone under the age of 21 to consume alcohol in any form.

And the staff of the Argonaut would never encourage or condone underage drinking.

Heavens no. With that in mind, have a great weekend and until next week, cheers!

Gates visits Venice

ROME (AP)—Computer software mogul Bill Gates finally got a chance to see what he wanted so badly: a Leonardo da Vinci manuscript he bought by telephone for nearly $31 million.

Gates got his first look at the 72-page compilation of ideas and inventions on Saturday in Venice, where he attended the annual film festival.

"I think da Vinci was the most amazing scientist of all time, and so I'm pleased to have the Codex and really was very happy with the way it was put on display," Gates said Sunday at a news conference to announce plans by the Bank of Rome to use software from his company, Microsoft Corp.

Gates acquired the 16th century Codex in November with a $30.8 million bid by telephone during an auction at Christie's in New York.

The Microsoft chairman does not plan to market the da Vinci images. Instead, the manuscript will be displayed in various Italian cities during the next year.

Gates has been in Europe to launch Windows 95, a popular new personal computer operating system.
