very 15 seconds a whistle blew for the woman who had just been battered. Every minute a bell rang for the woman who had just been raped.

Not even a little rain could keep people from taking back the night from violence against women Wednesday. About 30 people gathered for the event sponsored by National Residence Halls Honorary and the University of Idaho Women's Center.

Marchers with raincoats and umbrellas met in front of the Forestry building for the Take Back the Night rally and candle light march through Moscow and UI. Although wet and cold, marchers listened to speakers from the Women's Center and community tell about rape and domestic violence.

"Has crime touched your life?" Betsy Thomas and Susan Palmer from the Women's Center asked the crowd during their presentation.

In the past 14 months, 77 violent crimes have been reported to the Women's Center. In Idaho one domestic violence victim goes to a shelter every five hours.

Thomas and Palmer went on to tell about cases of domestic violence in Moscow and around the nation. As they spoke, the whistle and bell where heard to symbolize the victims.

'We have been unable to walk the streets after dark without a male to protect us from all the rest of the men has been assumed in this society for so long that people can hardly imagine a culture in which this would not be the case," Palmer said.

Take Back the Night began in San Francisco, where a group of protesters marched down the city's pornography strip. Since then, similar events around the world have symbolized the desire for perpetrators of violent crimes to be held responsible for their actions and to

"No one asks to be raped," Kathy Edwards said in her story about her experience as a victim of rape. Edwards was raped seven years ago at a fraternity party at UI. From her experience, Edwards gave the crowd several suggestions on how to avoid being a victim.

Birge said in her letter it was, "One of the hardest decisions I ever had to make.'

ASUI elections may go

t Wednesday's senate meeting the possibility of having electronic balloting via the internet became closer to being a reality. Elections have been set for Nov. 15, and any students who wish to run for office need to make an announcement with the ASUI office before Nov. 3.

Stanford University currently is operating under the electronic balloting concept and student votes are on the rise on their campus as a result. Senator Jeremy Winters expressed security concerns and the overall integrity of the electronic balloting process. Most senators agreed that in order to prevent any problems that could arise from such a new concept that they should wait a semester until the proper testing and analysis have been completed.

Chris Houck, recently appointed chair of the Student Issues Board which is responsible for the execution of the election said, "It's a good idea, if it works and Stanford is using it, why can't it work here?" The electronic balloting would be carried out over the World Wide Web, Netscape, etc. and ballots would be available to any student anywhere who has access to a modem. The ballots would be collected electronically and tabulated.

"Basically any student on any computer with proper ID can vote, said Peter Neisen who, along with Jason McMunn, has been selected by President Sean Wilson to apply the proper testing on electronic balloting at the UI.

Wilson said, "It is aimed at allowing people to vote more con-

Blind man's seeing eye dog killed by neighbor

PARKER, Idaho—A blind man says he was stunned to learn a Parker resident shot and killed his seeing-eye dog after it roamed into the man's yard.

"I didn't realize how much I needed him until he was gone," said Wayne Edlefsen, 43. "You can't keep an animal tied up. I let him be a dog one day, and it was a mistake."

Edlefsen was helping his son, Corey, load firewood on Sunday when they let their two black labradors loose. The dogs went into the yard of Corey Statham.

Statham, who said he has had trouble in the past with stray dogs, opened fire.

Jed, a $20,000 seeing-eye dog who had been Edlefsen's companion for the past 19 months, was killed instantly. Corey Edlefsen's dog, Tar, was badly injured and had to be killed.

"The dog was with me all the time," Wayne Edlefsen said. "Now he's gone. Like my wife said, that's almost like losing one of my kids."

But the man who shot Jed said he didn't realize he was killing a seeing-eye dog. "The two dogs came into my yard," said Statham. "I'd never seen them before. I shot them."

When neighbors told him what he'd done, Statham said he felt badly that he had killed a seeingeye dog, especially one owned by Wayne Edlefsen, whom he's known all his life.

"I just, oh, I felt bad," he said.

Edlefsen said he has already made calls about getting another dog, but he hasn't made up his mind if he will. At the earliest, it would be next spring before he can get a new one.

Statham said he can't afford to buy Edlefsen a new dog. "I just wish that it had never happened and I just feel bad about it," he

Sho-Bans block train with nuclear waste

POCATELLO, Idaho—Shoshone-Bannock tribal police blockaded the railroad line onto eastern Idaho's Fort Hall Reservation on Tuesday, halting the first shipment of nuclear waste under Gov. Phil Batt's new deal with the federal government.

Tribal officers in three patrol cars met the train about mid-morning as it approached the reservation boundary north of Pocatello, at about the same time tribal officials notified Union Pacific Railroad of their action. One car blocked the tracks for several hours before it was moved off.

Batt spokeswoman Amy Kleiner said she had been advised that federal officials were trying to talk with tribal leaders to determine what they want in return for the train's passage through the reservation to the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, where the waste is to be stored.

A tribal spokeswoman said Yupe was met with the tribal council early Tuesday afternoon and a statement further explaining the Shoshone-Bannock action was expected later in the day.

Up until the blockade, the train had only been met by a smattering of protestors along the track in what was the first organized display against the agreement signed by Batt on Oct. 16.

The Shoshone-Bannock Tribes went to court with the state of Idaho four years ago, challenging attempts to continue dumping radioactive waste at INEL on grounds that transporting the waste across the reservation—by either train or truck—created an unacceptable health risk.

BSU student leaders suspects in rape

BOISE—Boise State University's student body president and vice president are suspects in an alleged rape of another college student in Lewiston, The Idaho Statesman reported in today's editions, Lewiston police interviewed student body President Jeff Klaus and Vice President Darryl Wright regarding an incident early Oct. 15 at Lewiston's Ramada Inn, the newspaper said.

A female college student told police she was assaulted by two men in their hotel room. The three were in Lewiston for a meeting of student leaders.

Sgt. Alan Johnson confirmed that Klaus and Wright are the suspects in the case, The Statesman reported. Police also have interviewed five other people who are not, Johnson told the newspaper.

Klaus, who is paid $6,900 a year

Klaus, who is paid $6,900 a year as student body president, and Wright, who earns $6,300 as vice president, have not been charged with a crime.

Results of laboratory tests will not be available for three to four weeks. Johnson said.

"We've definitely done nothing wrong and absolutely have done nothing illegal," The Statesman quoted Wright as saying. "We've been kept in the dark throughout the whole process."

The newspaper said its attempts to reach Klaus on Tuesday were unsuccessful. But in an interview with The Statesman last week he also denied any wrongdoing.

Wright told the newspaper that police "just asked us to recap on what happened on a specific time and night and we answered the questions, cooperated fully with them. After we did so, they said, "Thank you very much and have a safe trip."

Clinton annouces deficit declined to $164 billion

WASHINGTON—President Clinton announced Wednesday that the federal budget deficit declined to $164 billion in the fiscal year that ended in September, the third straight annual decrease.

He declared at a news conference that he would not cave in to a Republican threat to force the nation to the brink of an unprecedented default on its debt obligations unless he accepted what he termed extreme Republican budget cuts.

Clinton took obvious pride in the deficit figures, noting that it was the first time since President Truman was in office in the 1950s that the federal deficit has declined for three straight years.

This achievement, he said, reflected the tough budget decisions he pushed through Congress during his first year in office.

A default would occur if Congress does not agree to raise the national debt ceiling, currently at $4.9 trillion. If the ceiling is not raised, the government cannot pay its debts to holders of U.S. Treasury securities

The president's veto threat underscored his previous statements that the Republican budget plan must be changed. Clinton has argued that it would devastate the government's education and training programs, ruin health benefits for the poor and elderly and hurt the nation's prospects for future economic growth.

Wal-mart CEO says stores must compete abroad to survive

SPRINGFIELD, Mo.—To survive in the ever-changing retail market, stores must compete abroad, provide value to quality-conscious consumers and sell in cyberspace, says David Glass, CEO and president of Wal-Mart Stores

Canada, Mexico and the United States are becoming one big market, he said.

Glass, a Mountain View native, returned to Southwest Missouri State University, his alma mater, to speak to about 100 businesspeople and students Tuesday.

Wal-Mart, the nation's largest retailer, sees its next opportunity in South America and has already opened stores in Brazil and Argentina, Glass said.

By April, China will have three Wal-Marts, including one supercenter.

Meanwhile, Wal-Mart will continue to add stores, especially supercenters, domestically.

On the national level, Glass said retail sales aren't likely to grow significantly, so stores must seek to increase their share of the pie. But more players will be vying for a slice.

To gain market share, retailers must focus on value without sacrificing quality, Glass said.

Older citizens will become increasingly important customers, Glass said.

Noguera is a member of the Bureau of Independent Journalists of Cuba, a group formed earlier this year which seeks to operate outside of state control.

A vote for separation from Canada would trigger messy divorce

MONTREAL—If Quebec votes next Monday to secede, separatists' initial joy will be followed almost certainly by protracted wrangling with an embittered Canada over debt, trade and division of property.

Who would get those high-tech air force fighters based in Quebec? How would Canada's national debt be divvied up? Under what terms could a sovereign Quebec gain membership in NAFTA?

Doomsayers say a separatist win would knock the Canadian dollar to an all-time low, jack up interest rates, and virtually freeze any new investment in Quebec.

The separatist leaders, Parliament member Lucien Bouchard and Quebec Premier Jacques Parizeau, say the aftermath of a "Yes" vote for independence doesn't have to be traumatic. Markets would be soothed, they say, if Canada would pledge to sit down at the bargaining table and negotiate an equitable economic and political partnership with Quebec.

Even the bitterest foes of separatism agree Quebec could survive as an independent country; it would have the world's 21st largest economy, 7 million people, vast territory and extensive natural resources. But many predict much harder times for Quebeckers if they go it alone—higher taxes, less favorable trade deals with the rest of Canada, the exodus of tens, perhaps hundreds of thousands of non-French speakers.

Act now, more graduates needed in job market

Janet Birdsall

The job market is coming out of its slump, but students haven't noticed yet, said Dan Blanco, director of Career Services

"The job market is improving. Students need to act now," Blaco said. "The signs are there that conditions are improving.

As the job market picked up, Career Services had 13 percent more employers scheduled for on-campus interviews in the 1994-95 school year than the previous year. "We're confident the 1995-96 year will improve on those figures," he said. "This year our hope would be to have over 100 employers schedule recruiting visits."

One of the problems faced by Career Services is getting students signed up for job interviews. "We've really had to scramble this fall in filling employer interview schedules." Blanco said. They have managed to fill all the schedules so far, he said.

The Career Services office targets graduating seniors looking for a full-time position. "We do have some seasonal employers who come to campus," Blanco said, but students looking for summer work or internships should contact the Student Employment Office or Cooperative Education.

Anyone who is going to graduate in December or May should get in and register without delay," Blanco said. When students register with Career Services, they provide infor-mation such as what kind of position they are looking for and when they are available to begin working. Employers who contact the office often ask how many students are registered in a certain area. The larger that number is, the more likely they are to schedule interviews here, Blanco said.

Each week recruiting schedules are posted with employer information. The schedules are also available now on a home page at http://www.uidaho.edu/career-services/. The home page still "very much under construction," Blanco said, but students will find the weekly updates helpful.

Registered students should stay on top of weekly recruiting schedules, making it a part of their weekly rou-tine, Blanco said. He also stressed that students shouldn't become discouraged with the campus recruiting service. About the time they get tired of checking the schedule, something comes up that they would have been interested in, he said. Career Services encourages students to take advantage of their all programs and training. Besides pro-viding employer interviews, they help students develop job-finding skills that are independent of campus recruiting. They also offer resume and interviewing information. The office can be reached at 885-6121.

Computer Services presents concerns to Faculty Council

Christopher Clancy

'Hidden' student labs and technological obsolescence were just some of the concerns raised during a recent Computer Services presentation before the Faculty Council. The presentation, given by the Director of Computer Services, Fritz Hibbler, was a sort of progress report on the direction of the department since 1992.

One of the underlying references of the presentation, "The plan for Improved Academic Computing at the UI," approved in the Fall of 1992, sets forth a number of goals designed to "enhance the computer literacy skills of students attending the UI." During the presentation, Hibbler summarized budget and infrastructure issues and reported on a variety of projects designed to fulfill those goals.

"From '92 we saw a need for more access to computing on campus," said Hibbler, "We didn't want to restrict it to in-class access only...one of our main goals is to make sure that labs are accessible to the general student population regardless of curricula or enrolled hours.'

While several of such goals include ongoing projects, such as general maintenance and expansion of labs, other more recent developments have taken the shape of increasing access to labs for handicapped users and establishing multi-media classrooms. This was in addition to an increase in off campus access with the recent purchase of 32, 28.8 modems and the Harrier server. All of which, said Hibbler, can be considered part of this years added expenses.

According to the presentation, from 1993 to 1996 Computer Services will have spent an estimated $1.5 million in student computing fees. The 1995 budget of $524,000 reflects an increase of $13,000 from last year. Only part of that amount reflects the total spent by the department annually. Other sources of income include departmental and corporate contributions from lab fees and donations, such as the one provided by AT&T in the Education Building room 202, said Computer Services' Kari Dickinson.

Cost effectiveness of labs was a central issue during the presentation as faculty debated obsolescence, decentralization and 'hidden' student labs.

"There is a real difference between technological obsolescence and use obsolescence," said Hibbler, noting that computer services stretches out the life expectancy of it's equipment by finding new roles for equipment that may be considered "technologi-cally obsolete." One such example is, said Dickinson, is the the conversion of 8088 PCs from general student lab use to terminals used to access the IDA computer in the library.

'Hidden' labs, another topic of debate, dealt with computers that students have access to outside of the realm of Computer Services, such as PCs located in dorm rooms and off campus machines. One concern was that the increase in private machines would eliminate the need for increased on campus spending.

"We found that with schools that require students to purchase computers in their freshman year, that those computers are usually obsolete by graduation," said Hibbler.

While a typical home computer can cost anywhere from $1,000 to $3,000 and offer a limited amount of options, the student computing fee is costs $28 a semester for full-time students and supplies several hardware and software options, said Dickinson.

Key evidence allowed in student murder trial

Mike McNulty

An alleged confession given by murder suspect Wenkai Li will be heard by jurors in an upcoming trial of a Memorial Day double slaying of a University of Idaho student and his wife.

Second District Judge John H. Bengtson denied a motion by Public Defender Michael Henegen Monday which would have suppressed comments Li made, including a possible confession, after his June 5 arrest in Wyoming.

Because Li may have been intimidated by several officers when he was arrested and unfamiliar with the U.S. courts and legal system, Henegen argued, his client was coerced into talking with the police.

In response to Henegen's motion, Latah County Deputy Prosecutor Robin Eckmann quoted a recorded discussion between Wyoming Sheriff Gary Puls and Li where the suspect is twice asked if he wants an attorney but answers,

"No. I don't want," and "Don't want."

During cross examination by Eckmann at an Oct. 12 suppression hearing, Li confessed he didn't remember much about the verbal exchanges after his arrest. He also said he believes he was not coerced.

"It is evident from a cursory review of the facts that the defendant is, in fact, articulate and fully capable of understanding his rights and

American Lung Association celebrates car care month

UI students who coast to school on their bikes, get up a little earlier to walk or who use public transportation are all helping the American Lung Association celebrate National Car Care Month.

American Lung Association of Idaho President, Laurie Anderson, endorsed October as National Car Care Month. The Agency is joining AAA of Idaho and Governor Phil Batt, who proclaimed October, "Car Care Month" in Idaho. This is an effort to promote consumer awareness of proper vehicle maintenance, which is essential to ensuring clean air for all Americans to breathe.

'These are major steps forward in cleaning this nation's air," said Anderson. "People ask what they can do to help improve the environment. One of the easiest ways is to maintain their cars properly so they don't contribute to air pollution."

Although they might not know it, many UI student are helping reduce the air pollutants in Moscow by taking care of their cars, by car pooling and by walking and biking whenever possible.

"I get my car checked regularly," said Julie S. Berryhill, a senior at UI. "But its usually for the well being of my car, not to prevent pollution.'

Anderson also explained air pollution results from the number of miles driven. In the last 20 years approximately two trillion miles were driven per year. These statistics have resulted in higher levels of air pollutants all over the coun-

Students interviewed at UI said they drive their car everyday, but carpool or ride a bike when they have the chance.

"I usually drive my car everyday," said Berryhill. "But when I find other people with the same schedule I have I always car pool."

Jill K. Morris, a senior explained, " I drive my car when I have to, but I usually car pool to basketball practice and school."

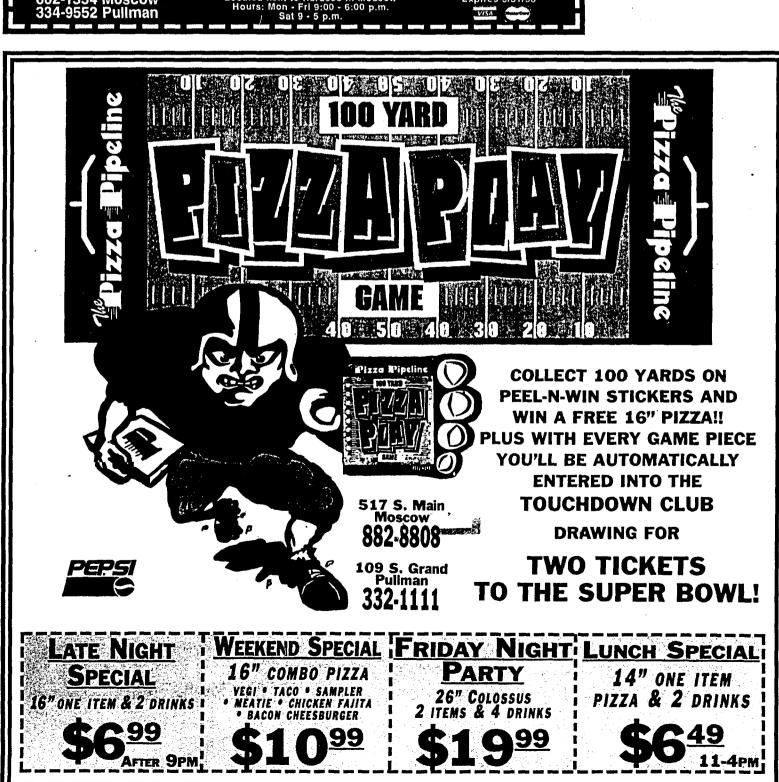

Lance A. Taylor, a senior said, "I walk and ride my bike, its the easiest way to go."

Vehicle emissions produce as much as 90 percent of the carbon monoxide, over 30 percent of the ozone and 40 -50 percent of air toxins. Currently, 82 major metropolitan areas where 126 million citizens live fail to comply with the federal ozone air quality standard. Vehicle emissions are also the number one cause of carbon monoxide nonattainment in 37 cities.

Judge Bengtson said Monday he believes statements made by Li were "freely and voluntarily given to the police."

Henegen also asked the court to suppress evidence found in Li's wallet and items he allegedly left at a Wyoming bus station, but did not support the motion. It was later denied by Judge Bengtson.

A former UI graduate student, Wenkai Li, 25, from Beijing, is scheduled for jury trial on two counts of first-degree murder for the killing of doctoral student Ning Li and his wife Xia Ge.

Idaho court procedure has prosecution select a jury for a capitol case based partly on the juror's views on the death penalty. Li's attorney Michael Henegen believes questioning potential jurors on how they feel about the death penalty could produce a jury that favors capital punishment.

In response, Eckmann said any juror opposed to the death penalty likely would be excluded by the prosecution.

Trial has been set back a week to allow time for jury selection. The first day of trial will be Nov. 13 at the Latah County Courthouse.

While many countries think about how to increase global involvement and awareness, the U.S. Congress is considering a bill which would reduce funding available for educational and cultural exchanges by $46 million, leaving many American and international students trying to work and study abroad without the funds to do so.

House Resolution 2076, the act which appropriates money to the Department of Commerce, Justice, and State and Related Agencies, has passed both the House and Senate, awaiting a conference between the two to work out differences in appropriation amounts. The proposed budget would reduce funds available the United States Information Agency, included in CJS, and consequently, reduce the number of grants USIA is able to give.

The total funds available to the USIA for all educational and cultural exchange programs, including salaries for scholarship boards, would be reduced from the $238,279,000 available during the 1994-95 fiscal year, to $192,090,000, in the proposed budget for FY 1995-96, according to information in the 1995 Congressional record. This is nearly a 20 percent decrease in funding.

Part of the USIA's purpose is to fund international exchanges, like the J. William Fulbright program. During FY 1994-95, $188,752,000 was available to the Fulbright program to sponsor students and faculty. The proposed budget would reduce this amount to just over $122 million, approximately a 35 percent decrease.

The Fulbright program, named after late Senator J. William Fulbright, was established by Congress in 1946 "to foster mutual understanding among nations through education and cultural exchanges," according to the Fulbright mission statement. Grants provide round-trip transportation, tuition, research allowances, and a stipend based on living costs in the host country, are provided for qualified students or faculty who want to study abroad. Just over 900 grants are available this year, similar to last year.

But the U.S. isn't the only country involved in the Fulbright program, and it's not the only country giving money to support students, which leaves UI Fulbright Program Adviser

Gleanne Wray worried that budget cuts in the U.S. might have further effects abroad. Less than 1 percent, close to $21 billion, of the entire U.S. budget is currently spent on "international affairs."

"It would be sad for Congress to slash funding now, because it's very much a shared program," Wray said, worrying that some countries will be unable to support exchange programs if the U.S. chooses to cut funding.

She is also worried that budget cuts may undermine her work to make the Fulbright program more known and more available at UI. Wray, who became the program advisor this year, just finished helping 13 students apply for the Fulbright grant from UI to conduct research abroad. This number is up from the five students in the entire state of Idaho who applied last year. California and New York usually carry the highest number of applicants, 466, and 372 respectively, last year.

"Since the House and Senate will have to come to terms on all funding levels, we still don't know the final outcome of the funding for either account (the Fulbright of other scholarships)," said a message released by the Institute of International Education dated Oct. 2, 1995.

Professor studies sex-changing fish

Justin Oliver Ruen

A specific type of Gobi fish found only in Japan is capable of changing sex in both directions, said University of Idaho Assistant Zoology Professor Matthew Grober.

"I saw this paper which was written by Japanese scientist Tomoki Sunobe, who is the person I now collaborate with," said Grober. "I've been working on sex-changing fish for quite a while, and the general understanding was that fish didn't change back to their original sex once they had changed. In 1992 and 1993, four papers came out which showed that there were fish which could change back."

Grober has since collaborated with Sunobe on the Gobi project. The project combines Sunobe's knowledge of the specific fish with Grober's understanding of the fish brain and endocrine system.

"You can make these fish change sex by changing the social system," said Grober. The Gobi's live in groups of six females and one male. "If, for some reason that male is removed, either by a predator or old age, then a female becomes very responsive to the absence of that male and she changes sex."

Females are constantly courted by males. "It's like the worst single's bar you've ever seen," said Grober. "What we think is happening in this fish is that this kind of tonic courting by males keeps reminding females that there's a male around. If you take the male away, then the females aren't being courted, and so one of the females will change."

Grober added, "What's been found in all the different fish

She has to do this in a sense to keep other females from thinking they can change...If you put the male back, then the fish will change back to a female. The fish will not want to defend against a bigger, stronger male, so it changes back."

The behavior of the fish, as well as the physical sexual organs change when the fish changes sex, and therefore the fish are capable of reproducing as both a male and female.

"When we manipulate the system we're not doing anything that the fish don't naturally do," said Grober. Predators naturally remove males from a group, and the changes occur naturally.

This is the second year of the research, which uses undergraduates for the bulk of the work. Currently, the project seeks to connect changes in the environment to the physical changes in the fish. Grober suspects an enzyme in the

Pranks plague Kappa Kappa Gamma

Jennifer Dobbs

Contributing writer

Pranks have always been common on college campuses, especially in the Greek system. But when they go too far or get out of control, it starts to get dangerous.

That's what happened last weekend at Kappa Kappa Gamma on the University of Idaho campus—a prank went out of control.

The incident occurred last Oct. 21 approximately between 2:30 and 5:30 a.m. Intruders entered the sorority at the back door, which apparently was not closed completely. They went downstairs to the sorority's chapter room where their ritual meetings take place, broke the lock to a closet containing the sorority's archives and ritual material with a credit card, and stole the fire extinguishers.

The intruders proceeded to the dining room where they sprayed the fire estinguishers' contents into the kitchen and dining room. Finally, they went upstairs to the sorority's bedrooms, stole the women's undergarments, and ate food that was in the bedrooms.

The sorority women, unaware that the intruders had been in the house were awakened only by the alarms set off by the fire extinguisher fumes in the dining room. The women were forced to evacuate the house for the night because of the fumes' toxicity.

Kappa Kappa Gamma President Jill Gaylord was wary of the incident because the intruders were in the house for an extended period of time without the women's knowledge. She would not reveal the identities of the intruders, but was confident that incident could be handled between the chapters involved.

"They are being very cooperative and cracking down internally so this will never happen again," Gaylord said.

There was no damage done to the house, except for the cleaning cost which amounted to approximately veniently." Traditional election booths will still be used.

Senator David Hisel said, "I think it's a great idea however, we should experiment with it first." The senate will be updated as to the progress of the electronic balloting process and hopefully by the spring semester implementation of the idea will be a reality.

During Wilson's communications with the senate, Senator Christa Manis expressed her displeasure with Wilson's approach regarding the recent BSU engineering decisions.

"I feel that we've let our students down," said Manis. Manis complained that Wilson did not effectively communicate with the senate about the status of engineering at UI. Wilson contends the decision was not a function the UI had jurisdiction over but the state Board of Education was calling the shots.

"With Wilson things haven't changed," said Manis.

Wilson apologized during the senate meeting for not letting the senators know about the engineering proposals sooner. "She is entitled to speak her mind," said Wilson.

"I think we have to remember that Wilson is not here to destroy UI," said Senator John Hovne.

Three candidates have announced they are running for the ASUI presidency. Senators Brian Kane, John Hoyne, and Christa Manis have all made announcements for the office. Senator David Hisel is running for vice-president. Students who are interested in running for any ASUI offices are encouraged to contact the ASUI office for more information.

It's the thought that counts

Anyone who has seen pictures of the Million Man March on Washington, D.C. was probably impressed. I know I was. The Park Service estimates the crowd at 400,000; other estimates have put it at twice that number.

What was even more encouraging were the reasons given by African American men for why they attended the event in the nation's capitol last week.

They didn't do it because Louis Farrakhan, the controversial leader of the Nation of Islam who occasionally spouts anti-Semitic and anti-white messages, wanted them to. They did it for themselves. They did it because they felt the need to turn to a new page, to begin creating a different chapter in the history of American minorities.

However white America chooses to view this event doesn't really matter. Many black men went home from Washington, D.C. with a renewed sense of purpose and direction. That's what is important.

This week's U.S. News & World Report has a wonderful article about the effects the march had on its participants. The march was extremely peaceful when compared to past marches on Washington. Of course, the march on Washington had a different purpose than past marches had. Past marches were held to persuade—through a show of sheer numbers—our nation's leaders to follow some course of action. The Million Man March wasn't about swaying a vote in Congress. It was about an awakening.

The fallout from the OJ trial has shown all of us just how much disparity exists between the views of whites and blacks. Not too many whites believe racism exists anymore; however, blacks think quite differently. And it seems to me that they are the people who should know since they are often the victims of prejudice.

Racism still exists. Perhaps it doesn't exist in the old fashioned sense of the word—with people dressing up in white sheets to perform a cross burning, or worse, a lynching. (Have you ever wondered why they bothered to wear white sheets and hoods? Were they ashamed of themselves?) But racism is still out there. Listen for it.

I've had white co-workers who have expressed disgust when they see a white woman walking hand-in-hand with a black man. In an issue of U.S. News & World Report two weeks ago, there was an article which mentioned an anecdotal story about a woman from Idaho who, while on vacation in the Bahamas, approached a black woman to ask her something and was surprised when the lady replied in English. After the Idahoan asked the black lady where she was from, lease allow me to stray from my usually hard-hitting (boring) discussion of important (trivial) political con-cepts this week to focus instead on the infinitely more interesting topic of "The Beatles Anthology,"

What is "The Beatles Anthology?" Only the most important event in Beatles history since the group disbanded in 1970. For one thing, the public is going to hear the first new Beatles song in 25 years. But I'll get back to

"The Beatles Anthology" is the collective title of several different projects: a six-hour documentary TV series, a ten-hour documentary video series, and a six-CD (released in sets of double CDs) series of previously unreleased music from the EMI and private Beatles archives.

What makes "The Beatles Anthology" so special? It is the Beatles telling their own story from their own point of viewsomething which has never been done before. The remaining Beatles-Paul McCartney, George Harrison and Ringo Starr-as well as other Beatles insiders such as producer George Martin have been steadily filming interviews collectively and individually which will be sprinkled throughout the television broadcast and video series. Old interviews of slain Beatle John Lennon, who was murdered in 1980, will also be shown.

The TV project consists of a sixhour, five hours of program content, broadcast on ABC-TV on Nov. 19, 22, and 23. The threenight event will feature previously-unseen footage from the Beatles' personal archives, as well as restored historic footage of concerts, television appearances, and music videos.

To accompany the film, McCartney, Harrison and Starr went into the studio together to record some incidental background music for the project. When they decided to go beyond that limited scope, they agreed they needed some Lennon "input" to truly make this a Beatles project. Lennon's widow Yoko Ono agreed, and the day after Lennon's induction into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame, she provided the band with a tape containing Lennon demos in various stages of completion.

After discussion, they eventually chose to complete three "new" songs: "Free as a Bird," "Real Love," and one other.

The song "Free as a Bird" will premiere on the first night of the TV series, November 19, and will also be included on the first CD

The first "Anthology" double-CD set will be made available on Nov. 21, two days after the "Free as a Bird" world premiere. Along with "Free as a Bird," it will contain 57 previously unreleased song by the Fab Four spanning from their ealiest known home-recordings in 1958 (when they were all teenagers) to the outbreak of Beatlemania in 1964.

As stated in my previous article, the jurors of the O.J. trial were not impressed with the allegations of domestic violence and felt Nicole's abuse at the hands of the ex-football star was not relevant to the murder trial. Is it possible their sentiments are representative of what the public believes and could it be that violence and abuse suffered between certain couples is considered a private, family mat-

It has become evident that many witnesses of domestic abuse suffer from a fear of getting involved or intruding upon personal affairs. This demonstrates an unspoken belief which views violence as somehow acceptable as long as the victim is involved with or married to the abuser. Does a personal relationship constitutes a secret right to mistreat and injure? Many times it is not until a women is severely beaten or one of the parties is dead before some kind of recognition of abuse is made. By then, of course, the damage has already been done.

It may have been of interest to the O.J. trial jurors to read statistics which show about 30 percent of female murder victims are killed by their spouses or significant others. In 1992, this percentage represented almost 1,400 women. Or maybe the jurors could have taken into consideration a bit of information which shows that women escaping abusive relationships increase their chances of being killed by as much as 75 percent. The American Medical Association has also added a report disclosing a frightening fact: close to 4 million spouses are beaten per year in the United States. While it is true there are occasional cases in which men have been victims of domestic abuse, overa!l it has been found that 95 percent of the time the woman is the recipient.

One may wonder why there are so many cases of abuse and why more is not done to stop and prevent such violence. Currently, there is an action to pass the Violence Against Women Act which would intensify laws which punish the aggressors of domestic violence and help provide aid for victims as well as the prevention of possible future attacks. As things stand now, many victims continue to endure abusive treatment out of fear and other personal reasons by hiding or disguising the signs instead of seeking the needed help.

Domestic violence, or spousal abuse, does not always include physical beating. Many times it can take the form of an invisible, but more vicious form of abuse. Because it is frequently believed a victim of spousal abuse can be easily spotted by an abundance of unexplainable bruises, many cases go unnoticed. Besides the fact that outward marks can very often be concealed under clothing and makeup, the psychological, emotional, economic, and sexual forms of abuse which occur are not as obvious as split lips and black eyes. Nicole Brown Simpson was a prime example of a victim who very effectively hid her bruises and pain behind makeup and a convincing smile.

Throughout history, wife beating has been tolerated and at times expected. The common phrase "rule of thumb" comes from an old English law which declared it acceptable for a man to beat his woman with a stick which was no thicker than his thumb. This attitude stemmed from the animalistic belief of the survival of the fittest and the stronger power conquering the weaker.

Thankfully, the caveman days when Bluto grabbed his woman by the hair and dragged her to his cave have for the most part passed; however, it is now up to this generation to abolish it completely. To many of us, domestic violence is an unfamiliar phenomenon happening to faceless women who belong and exist in a different world from ours. Do not be fooled into thinking you are safe from this form of violence. It is beneficial to realize cases of abuse have occurred and are occurring on campuses nation wide.

The American Medical Association has already found the rate of violence among college she told her—with a straight face, apparently—that she was surprised the lady could afford the same vacation she could. Now, aren't you proud to be from Idaho?

The thing is this: we all need to start combating all forms of racism-no matter how innocuous they at first appear to be. You don't need to be combative about it—just question the person and try to make them see the fallacies of their position.

If you think what I'm asking you to do is silly, consider this: whites will be outnumbered by minorities in many regions of the United States by the year 2020 if current population trends hold true. Now ask yourself: would you want to be discriminated against?

It's a good possibility that many whites will soon find themselves in the same position minorities currently find themselves in.

We need to start working together to end racism (and while we're at it, tribalism, too). So, if you don't want to listen to a message sermonizing about ideals and equal rights, if you don't really think racism exists anymore, listen to a message with a lot more reality in it: what comes around, goes around.

In 1987, amused passengers watched the CACC pilot who, returning from the toilet, found himself locked out of the cockpit by a jammed door. The co-pilot opened the door from within, then both men fiddled with the catch and succeeded in locking themselves out of the cockpit. As passengers stared in disbelief, the pilot and copilot attacked the door with a fire axe, pausing only to draw a curtain between themselves and passengers.

Highjackings in China have added a new dimension to the fire axe routine. In 1983 a hijacker fatally shot the co-pilot after ordering a diversion to Taiwan. Look, I know of plenty "Current Biblical Research" that does not support that conclusion. Furthermore, what "Current Biblical Research" that I have seen which does support homosexuality has been so tenuously contrived, or so obviously against the clear message of the text, as to be completely laughable.

I support your right to choose how to live your personal life. But don't deceive yourself about what the Bible says about it.

Mastercard Acts coverage incomplete

I am writing in response to Shannon Paterson's article about the Mastercard Acts Talent Show in the Oct. 20 issue in the "Diversions" section. First off, I am not complaining that my picture accompanied the article, but the only picture that should have been there was a picture of the Phil Southern Trio since they were the only act mentioned!

While due credit was given to the Trio (and a great background story of the group), a news article is supposed to inform readers of who, what, where, when, why... The only sentence that recognized the other participants of the show was: "Nine acts took stage, showcasing a variety of vocal and instrumental talent." What does that tell the readers? I would want to know who these other acts were and what they did. All of the performers put in a lot of work and time and should be recognized for the talents.

Sean Wilson: original instrumental jazz; Seth Stuckey: "You Can Love," original composition with piano and vocals; Bass Salad: aggressive music band, two songs; Royce Napolitino: "It's All Right With Me," vocals and piano; Lance Wells (second alternate): guitar and vocals; Joey Wellman (first alternate): original piano arrangement, Gershwin Medley; Jarett Skinner: "Give Me a Chance," piano and vocals; Michael Maas: original composition, piano and vocals.

Having been a writer for the Argonaut, I know it isn't easy to juggle your schedule around events. However, I got the above information from the program itself.

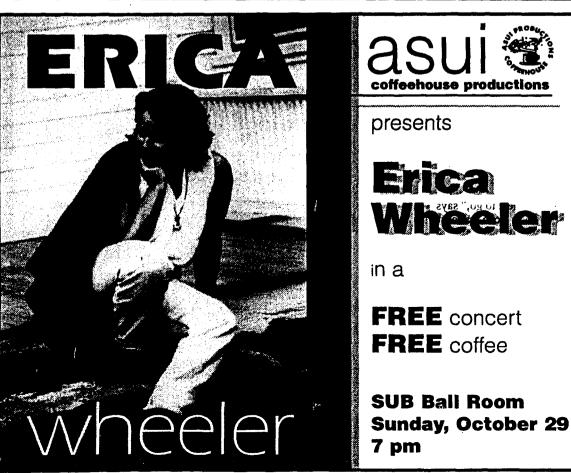

Though the turnout was low (due in part to the night of the week), people should take advantage of attending such talent shows. The University of Idaho has a lot of talented and entertaining students. Congratulations to everybody!

The show is put on by the Dance Theatre class and covers a wide range of dance styles, from 1950's sock hop to modern hip-hop.

"It's very diversified with a little bit of everything," said Leslie Gallagher, performer and choreographer. "That's one of the things we tried to play up with the title Dance Spectrum.

Some features of the show include dance and narration based on Native American mythology, gospel dancing, jazz and modern contemporary dance.

Some of the cast members are dance majors but those with different majors participate just because they enjoy dance, said Gallagher.

"It's a great experience to come watch," she said. "Once people watch one concert they tend to keep coming back. We've picked up a few dancers that wav.'

Diane Walker is directing the production and some of the choreographers include Marla Huskey, Megan Gazdik and Alyssa Lyons. The cast is also guided by the expertise of Kelli Neal, guest choreographer, and Brian Bennington, a new dance instructor. Neal, who is an alumnus of UI, works as a choreographer for DisneyWorld. Bennington just

Groovy Dave fills air waves with techno

Matt Baldwin

Tithin the galaxy there is a show that has became interstellar. That show is Groovy Dave's House of Fish which airs every Friday night from 10 p.m. to 2 a.m.

"My show is pretty much Idaho's only rave style show. In that I get mixed tapes from DJs around the country, and sometimes around the world. I also play a mish-mash of '80s, disco, because it is funny and silly and ambient music which is under-represented in this area. So I make sure that gets played as well. Then there is just all the crazy silliness that I try to play on the radio because I can," Groovy Dave Groovy Dave is also productions director for KUOI.

'A guy named Taylor Jessen helped me get involved with it (KÚOI). Approximately the first semester of my freshman year, I was talking to this guy and I found that he was a DJ. I had been DJing at raves for a little while before that so I was thinking radio wouldn't be that big of a step. It would be sort of fun actually because I like to talk and talk. I talked to Taylor and he told me that it was half-way through the semester and that they had all of their DJ slots filled. So spring semester I met J. William Berger who trained me, this was spring of '94. I've been DJing ever since. So this is my fourth season. And it gets weirder every time," Groovy Dave said.

Groovy Dave's show originally started on Saturdays from 9 a.m. until noon.

"It was utterly evil. Who wants to dance at nine in the morning on a Saturday? Most people tend to be recovering from their bleary. haze of the night before," Groovy Dave said.

Groovy Dave plays techno or ambient music. "Both are basically electronic based dance music for techno and electronic based listening music for ambient. Although you can dance to either one. Techno itself tends to be repetitive beats, a lot of synthesizers and some very specific brands of instruments. Ambient music is somewhat similar that you would have samples, but you can also have a much more complex range of recordings.' The House of Fish can be caught on Friday evenings from 10 p.m. to 2 a.m.

't's funny to think of the little events in our lives that lead us Lto where we now stand. Alan Rose would probably say the same Rose, associate professor of Foreign Languages, grew up in London. At 16 he was "gently pushed" out of high school and began working in the ladies' garment industry and by 21 was managing the largest garment plant in England.

Every so often, Rose would quit his job and explore the world, traveling by himself or with friends. On one such trip he met an American while in Israel. They became friends and for Rose it sparked the idea to make the trek to the United States.

In 1963 he arrived at the harbor in New York with his bags, every cent he possessed, and a crate of China intended for the people that were suppose to greet him at the harbor. They didn't show up.

"There I stood at Pier 43 with everything I owned in the world and nowhere to go," says Rose. So he took according about half the money he had to the address of his friend. Rose spent the next six months in New York City working as an elevator boy.

"It wasn't a very brilliant career," says Rose. Eventually he ended up working in the fashion industry again. Wanting to get a glimpse of the southern life, Rose transfered to Woodbury, Tenn. and worked as an executive for a shirt company.

Living in the rural south was a different experience. Rose recalls the first time he asked a black woman for a date; his colleagues thought he was asking for trouble. Rose tells of the time he pulled up into a gas station in Alabama bearing the sign 'Any money received from niggers will be donated to the KKK.'

He married in Paris to the woman he had kept in touch with throughout his American endeavors for three years.

In 1970, he and his wife made the journey to west where he was offered a teaching job at the University of Idaho.

"I love the big wide open spaces," says Rose. "I loved seeing real cowboys, wearing cowboy hats and boots." Rose has been teaching at the university ever since and fulfilling his students' lives is what he enjoys. "It's wonderful to see a students face light up when you are teaching, to make their life richer by learning."

As far as foreign languages go, Rose believes it is something that everyone should learn. "You never really profit from a trip abroad unless you understand the language. You can't appreciate the culture without the language.'

Anyone who has had Rose in class knows that his strategy is to break down the barriers of fear in class. "You must establish a climate where (students and teachers) are willing to admit that you don't know everything," he says passionately. He believes that the efforts of teachers are often underestimated. "It's a crying bloody shame that we don't have a much more active teacher's union," says Rose who started the union here himself.

Rose doesn't really care for the hierarchical ways of the American university and believes that the conservative UI doesn't always take the radical risks that he feels a true institution should take. Clearly education is important to

Movie night planned

Gault Hall is putting on a "Beat Movie Night" on Nov. 2 with a start time of around 7:30 p.m.

The night will focus on two philosophers: Jack Kerouac and William S. Burroughs. Kerouac, a glimpse through the living room window of Jack Kerouac and his work, will be the first movie that will be shown. The second movie will be The Naked Lunch, a conceptual overview of Burroughs' work. The Naked Lunch is a movie not necessarily based upon the novel from which it garners its name. It is a movie directed by David Cronenberg illustrating images and ideas more than anything.

There will be coffee, hot cocoa and an assortment of desserts for everyone to drink up and devour throughout the two movies.

The environment will be relaxed. It is suggested that people bring pillows to the showings.

The movie night will take place in the Gault movie lounge, located on ground floor of Gault Hall.

It will be a happening environment for the intellectual and philosophical.

A movie night like this more than likely would not show up if it were a book of the month club recitation. Come, it will be fun.

Traveling exhibits tell story of Idaho

Valaree Johnson

It has been said that history repeats itself and in this case its true.

The Idaho Humanities Council presents a year long exhibit of Idaho history mounted and framed by the Idaho Historical Society on display in the Vandal Lounge.

"It's very well done," says David Mucci, director of the Student Union. "The exhibit is an engaging way to get a good introduction or a quick refresher on the history of Idaho."

Mucci also stressed the exhibit helps not only residents of Idaho, but many visitors identify with the roots of the state.

Fourteen museums host a traveling exhibit, each highlighting a different piece of the history of Idaho. Commencing the exhibit was the Prehistory of Idaho outlining the early years from over 10,000 years ago. The exhibit told the story of the first inhabitants of Idaho and included tools, house structures, and lifestyles of native peoples.

Currently on display is the Native

American Experience and Early European Contact exploring the early contact experiences of Native Americans and Christian missionaries. Each exhibit will remain in the lounge for around three weeks allowing ample opportunity to explore the history that many do now know about. Following is an outline of the exhibit schedule:

November-December

Migration and Settlement shows the early settlement of Idaho such as the impact of railroads and irrigation on Idaho's economy, settlement which began as a result of the 1860 gold strikes in north Idaho and Mormon migration from Utah. December-January

Logging and Timber focuses on the forests and timber mills of Idaho. The development of new towns and trade routes as a consequence, which remains a major part of the industry today.

January-February
Mining will examine the early mining boom in Idaho and tells information about the different mining operations and environmental impacts of those mines.

March-April

Agriculture and Ranching will provide insight in to the role of water, dry farming, and the conflicting interests of farmers, ranchers, sheepherders, and the Native Americans which resulted in serious disputes.

April-May

Territorial Government and Statehood will explore the creation of the Idaho as a territory and then as a state and the questions that Idaho's founders faced while drafting the constitution and bordering territories.

Some exhibits will be accompanied by public lectures to discuss the topics with more depth. Whether you are from Idaho or not, taking a moment to look at the display will give greater appreciation to the heritage of this state and the happenings that brought us to where we are today.

The University has received an image over the last three years of porous football attendance and rightfully so after averaging just 10,197 fans per home game during that span. The Kibbie Dome seats have averaged 14,418 fans a game, including a single game high of 14,912 last Saturday against Montana. Idaho even drew in excess of 13,000 for its home opener against a Division II school, Sonoma State.

However, a big down note to the jump has been the decline in student attendance this season. Just as the overall attendance has increased each home game, the student turnout has fallen. The Sonoma game saw 3,900 student fans turn out compared to 2,100 for homecoming against Eastern

Washington and 1,700 against

Although the number of Kibbie Dome seats filled by students is down, sales at the ticket counter are up. With the price of a general admission ticket set at $13 and an increase of 4,200 fans per game, the school has taken in more than $55,000 a game over last season. UI students get in free to all regular season UI athletic events and since their numbers are down, paid attendance is up. With some of the seats making up the increase coming in the reserved section and selling for $15 and $16 apiece, the gate sales increase is probably closer to $75,000.

All kinds of reasons have been given for the dramatic increase, but barring an $8,000 tailgate party sponsored by ASUI before the home opener, not a single dollar of funding has increased over last

The UI Athletic Marketing Department is under new leadership this fall and it would be a fallacy to say the attendance increase is not at least partially linked to the hiring of Marketing Director Mike

Hogan, who came to Moscow in April after holding a similar position at Weber State. The marketing department is annually allotted $14,000, all of which goes to cover radio, newspaper and television advertising on the Palouse. Hogan is well on his way to raising another $160,000 in corporate sponsorships to cover promotions throughout the year.

"We actually bring in more revenue than we spend," Hogan said.

Fiery Holt keeps Vandal defense on track

long with the off season remodeling that occurred in the friendly confines of the Kibbie Dome, crowd enthusiasm was also revamped in the process.

Idaho Defensive Coordinator Nick Holt didn't have enough good things to say about the crowd support this season.

(UI Marketing Director) Mike Hogan has made a difference getting the crowds here. He has worked his tail off, as have the fans to make this place fun to play in again," said Holt.

Holt hails from Pacific University where he graduated in 1986 before taking his first coaching job at St. Mary's High School in Stockton, Calif. He moved on to UNLV where he was a grad assistant in 1987 and linebackers coach in '88 and '89 before coming to

Along with getting used to the favorable change in the crowd, Holt has found that deciding not to leave with former Vandal head John L. Smith to Utah State has also created another favorable change for the Vandals in Head Coach Chris Tormey.

"Staying here has really worked out, Chris has been great to work with and the whole coaching staff is really starting to gel," said Holt.

Holt's family came into the equation of staying put in Moscow. Holt's wife Julie took over coaching duties of the UI women's basketball team last season and keeping the family together was a key reason for Holt to stay at Idaho.

"Julie gave up her job at Gonzaga to coach here so we could be closer together. If she hadn't taken the job I would have loved to go to Utah State with John L, but the timing just wasn't right to go down there," said Holt.

Julie wasn't Holt's only reason for staying here, there was another family member that had a silent say in what his daddy did. Nicholas Holt III was born in 1992 and the small town atmosphere of Moscow might suit him a little better than many of the metropolises Holt has seen while recruiting.

"I have a young son and it is nice to know that he can go out and play in the yard without a lot of concern," said

In Idaho's three losses, the defense gave up a total of 56 points or a measly 19 points a game. In its three wins Idaho has given up the same exact number of points, but the offense found it's mark on those days averaging 53 points a game to more than give the defense something to work with.

"Our defense has played very well all year and against Montana with the losses of Montrell Williams and Barry Mitchell they some key Montana drives late in the game to win," said Holt.

In the past it was nothing for Idaho offenses to score 50 or 60 points a game and that was what the press focused on. Last season however, the fact that the Vandal defense was ranked #1 in the nation against the rush was completely overlooked.

"In the past the offense has gotten the majority of the credit for winning games, but the past two seasons our defense has been getting a lot of credit for winning games as well," said Holt.

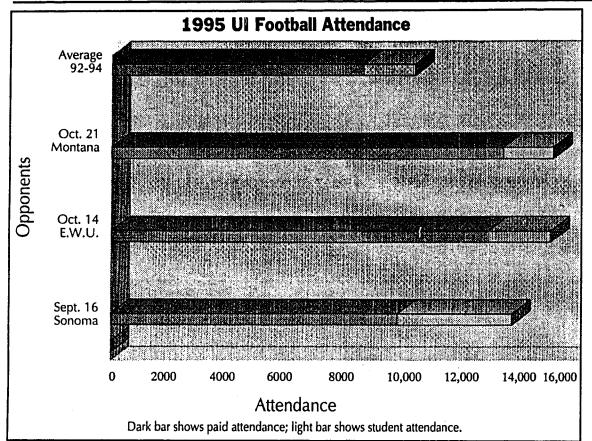

With back-to-back wins against Big Sky foes, Idaho has put itself in position

All of the university's major sponsorships have been sold, with the likes of Pepsi, Rainier, the Idaho Lottery, Power Bar and First Interstate Bank all contributing in excess of $12,000 in exchange for advertising and other perks. The sponsorships allow Hogan to do promotions such as the golf ball driving contest, clicker giveaways and a tuition waiver raffle. Last week Hogan had signs made up and distributed throughout the student seats, telling them to make noise when UM had the ball. The cost to produce the signs was $12 and students responded at times with raucous noise levels when the Griz tried to move the ball.

"Everything we give away we do not purchase," Hogan said. "Ideally you'd like to have everything sponsored and we're pretty close to

Volleyball ranks 21st in attendance nationally

The UI volleyball team has steadily increased its home attendance since head coach Tom Hilbert took over in 1989. Idaho is 21st in the nation in attendance this fall and has the longest current home winning streak in Division 1 with 42 consecutive victories at home, not losing in Memorial Gym since 1992.

"The winning streak has given our kids confidence and helps recruiting. Kids want to go where they will be seen," Hilbert said.
The volleyball coach said successful athletic programs benefit all students and provide a trickle down or ripple effect.

"I believe college athletics is an important part of the college experience and the image a college builds for itself," Hilbert said. "People can talk until they're blue in the face about the over-emphasis of athletics, but I'll tell you right now if we were in the PAC-10 we wouldn't have lost (control of) our engineering program. The only difference between Idaho and a land grant PAC-10 school is the athletic conference affiliation."

marketing has been very helpful in increasing attendance. We don't have a whole lot to spend, but we do a good job," Liske said.

Being only eight miles away from Washington State University, comparisons are made constantly between the two schools. Unfortunately for Vandal fans Idaho will lose out every time when it comes to comparisons in money matters. Just as Idaho spends $14,000 annually on athletic advertising the Cougars spend closer to $100,000. WSU runs a program known as Cougar Mania, where local advertisers promote a product or service over a given time period during the Cougars marketing campaign. WSU then receives a set percentage of sales from the products or services sold. Hogan said the PAC-10 school makes more than $450,000 a year on the program and he hopes a similar program could be initiated to support Vandal athletics.

The first-year administrator also pointed to Bronco Stadium in Boise which boasts a wall completely set aside for advertisers' signs. The sponsor contracts to have a sign put up for an agreed time period, allowing Boise State to make pure profit with little or no overhead.

"We need to look to do more projects like those," Hogan said. "If I make more money on marketing, the university has more money to spend on scholarships, recruiting, new uniforms or anything else. We can't count on the students and taxpayers to pay for everything."

Regardless of money spent on advertising or promotions it's evident that the more fans making noise in the stands, the better a home team responds. The Vandal football team is 3-3 on the year, all three wins have come at home, extending Idaho's home winning streak to 11.

Weber looks to bring Vandals back to reality

Damon Barkdull

After a 55-43 win over Montana last Saturday in Big Sky football action, it may be difficult for the Vandals to jump off the emotional roller coaster and jump back on the preparation train as they get ready for the Weber State Wildcats on Saturday in Ogden, Utah.

We already know that Idaho is near unstoppable at home, but the Vandals still haven't proven they can use that same Kibbie Dome magic on the road.

"Whenever you go on the road you have to overcome the distractions of a road trip," Idaho football coach Chris Tormey said. "You know, the bus, the plane, the hotel -you have to be mature enough to stay mentally focused. And then you have to play in front of a hostile crowd."

Idaho QB Eric Hisaw will face a Weber defense that terrorized the Montana State offense last week. Against MSU, the Wildcat defense recorded eight quarterback sacks, intercepted four passes and recovered two Bobcat fumbles. They also held the league's leading rusher, MSU's Matt Engelking, to just 73 yards on 25 carries and the Bobcats rushing offense totaled only 90 rushing yards for the entire

In essence, it might be safe to say that Hisaw will be throwing the ball—a lot. The senior signal caller will look to his athletic wide receivers Dwight McKenzie and Robert Scott, Last Saturday Scott and McKinzie combined for 11 catches, 231 yards and five touchdowns.

"The development of Robert Scott at wide receiver and Eric Hisaw at quarterback has taken a lot of pressure off the rest of the offense," Tormey said. "And certainly Dwight (McKinzie) has been a playmaker for us all year. It takes pressure off of Dwight, not only that they can't double cover him all the time, but they have to be concerned about Robert (Scott)." Tormey said.

The Vandals will be hurting in their kick return game and on the defensive side of the ball with the loss of senior safety and kick returner Montrell Williams, who suffered a knee injury against Saturday and is out the rest of the

"It hurts. He's the fastest guy on our football team," Tormey said. "He's leading the nation in touchdown returns and he's kept a number of touchdowns off of us in our secondary."

Bonners Ferry native Travis Coffey will take over in place of Williams. Although Coffey may not have the speed of Williams, he did show some promise, grabbing an interception against the Grizzlies at the free safety spot.

"Travis played well. He came in, in a backup role and played really well," Tormey said.

Led by all-American defensive end Ryan Phillips and linebacker Dave Longoria, the UI defense is looking to put a significant amount of pressure on WSU's quarterback Robert Cook. Cook, a junior, made his first collegiate start against MSU last Saturday and finished the day 20-of-38 passing and recording 161 yards. Despite the typical poor weather conditions in Bozeman, Cook did not throw an interception all game.

I don't know if they fall off much at QB from what I've seen," Tormey said. "They're going to throw the ball—they've got three great wide receivers and their offense looks very similar to ours. Our defensive backs have to play well against those great wide receivers."

to salvage a season that looked dismal from the start. If Idaho keeps the ball rolling it may find itself in the I-AA playoffs afterall.

"We can't worry about what anyone else does from here on out, right now we just need to focus on winning the remainder of the games and let things fall into place from there," said Holt.

Moving to the Big West Conference has a lot of excitement running around the athletic office and it has found it's way into Holt's office.

"I'm excited, but at the same time a little skeptical. I hope we are going to be on the same grounds financially as the rest of the conference, because we are going to have to recruit against them for the talent that comes to this league," said Holt.

"Right now our facilities are not what they could be and believe it or not that is what a lot of recruits look for when visiting a campus,' Holt said.

Staying at Idaho has proven to be a good thing for both the program as well as for Holt himself, but don't let yourself think for a minute that if a head coaching job became available that Holt wouldn't think seriously about

Major label opens doors for Love Battery

Jeffrey Albertson

Thile Love Battery's music hasn't evolved much from the guitar driven psychedelia prevalent since 1989s Between The Eyes, the band has come leaps and bounds with a tighter out of reach sound that fills their latest release Straight Freak Ticket.

The former Sub Pop champions, who have now made the major label leap to A & M Records, visited Washington State University's Ballroom last Saturday playing to a crowd of around 200.

Love Battery have been a staple of the Northwest rock scene since the late '80s and have recorded several albums for Sup Pop, show-casing their brand of riff oriented rock.

Rather than dwell on the debate of "indie" credentials about their move to A & M guitarist Kevin Whitworth and bassist Bruce Fairweather chose to dish the dirt both Sub Pop and A & M.

When asked about their newly formed relationship with A & M the two chide "Next question" in

"They (Sub Pop) kind of gave us the short stick, we certainly didn't get the treatment we felt we deserved," Whitworth said adding that broken promises led to their decision to switch labels

"As far as major labels, Sub Pop was good training because they acted like a major label from the start," Whitworth said.

Whitworth and Fairweather agreed that the new label hasn't been much better but has allowed them to enjoy themselves in the studio more.

Nehru's Jacket a precursor to the latest album was an EP they worked on with producer Bruce Calder, who's also worked with Miles Davis and George Clintonthe furthest sounds from Love Battery imaginable.

"Bruce (Calder) also had worked with Mother Love Bone and is an old Seattle person," Whitworth said.

Fairweather had made friends with Calder while playing bass for Mother Love Bone.

"Calder was a good situation because we got to work with someone we like," Whitworth

The two agreed that with the major label the biggest change of all was going into the studio.

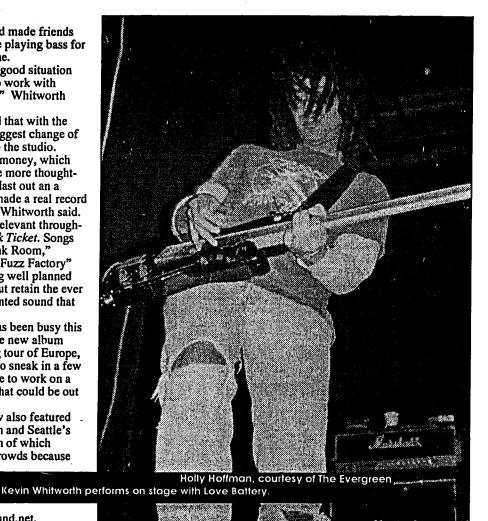

"We had more money, which gave us time to be more thoughtful. Rather than blast out an a quick album we made a real record like real people," Whitworth said. The change is relevant through-out Straight Freak Ticket. Songs like "Harold's Pink Room,"

"Waylaid," and "Fuzz Factory" come off sounding well planned and thought out but retain the ever prevalent riff oriented sound that is Love Battery.

Love Battery has been busy this year promoting the new album with a month long tour of Europe, but has managed to sneak in a few days of studio time to work on a follow up album that could be out Spring of '96.

Saturday's show also featured Pullman's Potlatch and Seattle's 30 Ought Six, both of which played to sparse crowds because of a 7:30 p.m. starting time.

Actor portrays Northwest author's works man sits down at his desk and begins to type on an old, antique typewriter, laughing as he reminisces out loud about childhood experiences.

The man, actor Tim Behrens, is busily portraying Patrick McManus as well as other characters in "Misery II: McManus in Love," a one-man show performed last Sunday at the Lewiston High School Auditorium.

"Misery II" is the second show written by McManus and performed by Behrens, the first being "A Fine and Pleasant Misery."
Written by Patrick McManus, "Misery II" is a stage adaptation of several of his works, including "The Night Bear ate Goombaw," and others. The show was directed by Jack Delehanty.

The show, broken into two acts with a 15 minute intermission, provided the 300 plus person audience with almost two hours of side-splitting humor as Behrens told and performed several anecdotes detailing McManus' experiences with young love.

Act one began with a chronological, year by year look at growing up, complete with a young McManus conquering his fear of the dark, learning about girls, and trying to understand the "birds and the bees.

Along the way, Behrens portrays more than half a dozen characters, including Eddy Muldoon, Jr. and Sr., Bobby Dittmore, cousin Buck, and Goombaw. All of which, having their own distinctive voices and gestures, added to the fun of the show and the magic that Behrens cast over

After a series of anecdotes, Act one concludes with a bewildered Behrens left with the question that he started with: "Girls?!?

After intermission, with cookies and punch provided by the Lewis-Clark Center for the Arts, Act two takes off with an older, wiser Behrens-as-McManus explaining the basic differences of men and

As Behrens said early in the act, most successful relationships depend on "shared ignorance," when neither partner knows anything about a situation and is forced to talk about a subject.

Next, Behrens recreated the first date for a young McManus by explaining, "Your first date will warp your personality forever."
Then, carefully looking over a couple in the audience, said "I sure hope this isn't your first date.'

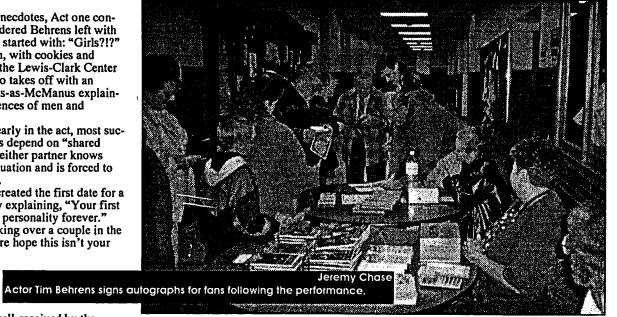

Through more humorous anecdotes Behrens concluded the act and the show and was well-received by the audience. Afterwards, he made his way to the exit to thank people and sign autographs as they left the building.

For Tim Behrens, the chance to perform

McManus' material has come often the last three seasons. "We've done 231 performances of the first show and 14 performances for the second show in 15 states," he said. "We've been around."

Behrens, who has known McManus for 12 years, said the difference between this show and the first has been the choice of material used. "The first one was a series of vignettes, with about 75 percent coming from his books," he said. "This one is exactly opposite, with 75 percent being unpublished material."

Another difference, he said, was "Misery II" had more of a theme involved with it. This one, I'd like to think, is connected to the questions of what's love and what's romance," he said. "There's more of a theme running through it."

Behrens also said "Misery II" has been successful because it has a theme people can easily understand. "Anyone who can relate to growing up with fears and questions about growing up will like the show.' As a result, audiences have been very laughter-responsive. "I've never been in a production that gets so much unmitigated laughter," Behrens said. "We even had a show in Twin Falls that an 8 year-old boy wet his pants because he was laughing so

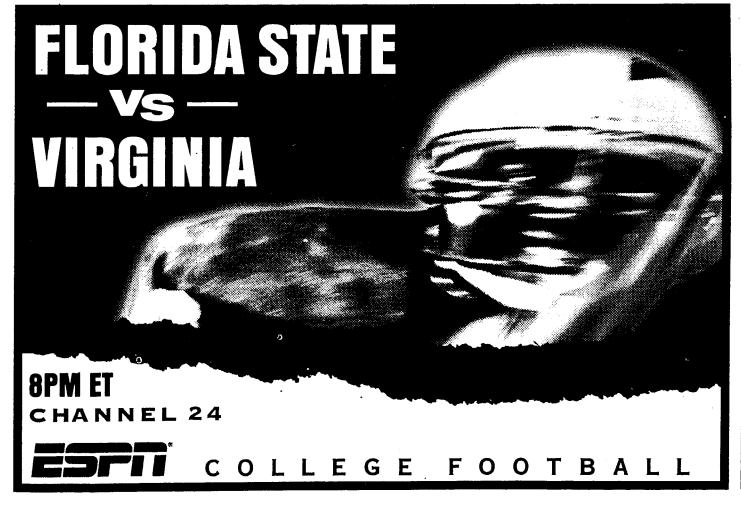

Knowing the superb talent and abundant energy that Behrens possesses, "Misery II" will certainly deliver the laughs at his next show. "Misery II" was brought to Lewiston by the Lewis-Clark Center for the Arts.

Chris LeDoux performs tonight

Justin Cason

Country music performer Chris LeDoux will be performing tonight at the Kibbie Dome. The concert begins at 7:30 p.m.

Opening for LeDoux will be Perfect Stranger, a group whose first major-label album, You Have the Right to Remain Silent, has achieved notable commercial success this past year. Their tour is part of a Northwestern U.S. concert series.

LeDoux, who recorded 22 albums independently before he signed with Liberty Records, has been nominated for a Grammy, as well as for Academy of Country Music and TNN/Music City News awards.

LeDoux got his start in the music business as a 14 year-old, riding the rodeo circuit and playing guitar while on the road. Eventually, after years of selling albums out of the back of his truck, he got his much-needed break.

Perhaps the performer's most famous album is the one that went gold-Whatcha Gonna Do With A Cowboy—although his latest, 6:: album, Haywire, is quickly becoming another LeDoux tri-

In fact, it is on Haywire that LeDoux shows quite a bit of the range of material that he can produce. The album contains songs written by Charlie Daniels, Bruce Springsteen and a few by LeDoux himself.

LeDoux has been to the University of Idaho before, opening for Sawyer Brown three years ago. It was his success and widespread fan support here that made him a candidate for this year's performance.

"We do our best to accommodate the performers in order to get them to return," said Terry Rivers, assistant manager of Kibbie-ASUI activities. "He really enjoyed coming here (last year).

Both LeDoux and Perfect Stranger will be performing tracks off their latest albums as well as earlier songs from their beginning

Tickets to the concert went on sale Sept. 23 at Ticket Express in the UI Student Union and are available for $20 to UI students or $22 to the general public.

Quartet from Ukraine to play

Jeremy Chase

Coming overseas to the Pacific Northwest, the Leontovych String Quartet, will be performing Oct. 27 at 8 p.m. at the Administration Building auditorium. The concert is the second of the season for the Auditorium Chamber Music Series.

Considered one of the best string ensembles from the former Soviet Union, the quartet's strength lies in its members. Among others, first violinist Yuri Mazurkevich is laureate of three international violin competitions, and also heads the string department at Boston University.

Mary DuPree, professor of music at the Lionel

Hampton School of Music, said the concert will be a unique opportunity for everybody interested in fine music. "I think students and everybody will find them interesting and exciting,' she said. "They are absolutely outstanding musicians."

DuPree also said the quartet's style of playing will be unique to watch because of there origins in the USSR. "I tried to get them here because the Russians have a passionate approach to music,' she said. "It's not as restrained or constricted as other styles."

Selections for the evening will include three classic pieces: the "Death and the Maiden" Quartet of Franz Schubert, Dmitri Shostakovich' Quartet #14, and the Quartet, op. 11 by Samuel

The Leontovych string quartet will be performing Oct. 27.

The quartet's origins go back to 1971, in Kiev. Since that time, they have recorded for Melodiya Records, and performed extensively over various radio programs. They have also given more than 2,000 concerts in the former Soviet Union, Europe, and the United States. Currently, DuPree said that the quartet is signed by Graystone records, an American recording label.

After their show on Friday, the quartet will perform again on Saturday. This time, it will be for high school string players participating in the Northwest String Festival. The festival will be held on campus.

DuPree said the quartet's appearance at the festival will benefit the students in attendance. "They'll be plunked right in the middle of the students to play music with them and talk with them," she said.

Prices for tickets are $12, $11, and $8. Tickets are available either at Ticket Express, located in the Student Union, or at the auditorium the night of the per-signed to the big boys. The band Jawbreaker have finally hit the big time with their new release titled Dear You on Geffen records, the label that gave the band Nirvana their claim to fame. Thirteen brand new songs to drool over, but yet very different from songs on their past works. When I picked this disc up, I thought I would hear the catchy fast punk tunes that I loved on the last release 24 Hour Revenge Therapy. I was suprised to hear that I got a of songs this time around. Yes, a lot of the tracks on this one are mellower and very pro-

JAWBREAKER Dear You

whole variety of different types

duced, but not for the worst. This type of sound is a refreshing change for the band and actually fits them well

The songs are very well written and you can tell alot of thought was put into lyrice Songs!" was put into lyrics. Songs like "Chemistry," "Fireman", and "Bad Scene, Everyone's Fault" are amazing.

Blake Schwarzenbach's singing is great even when he's not trying to do that raspy screach he is so good at.

Even though I thought that Geffen Records would make this album sound horrible and send Jawbreaker down the rotten path that so many bands take these days, I was very wrong. I loved this album!

I Do not know if people will catch on to this band or if they will go anywhere, but I do know that Jawbreaker rocks whatever they do. Instead of wasting your money on the new Green Day album give these guys a try, you will be alot more satisfied.

LC's Brew Review: Bless this beer

Erik Marone

It was two years ago that I first encountered the Belgian Trappist Ale, Corsendonk, and since that cold October evening, I had searched for another bottle of this beer. Alas, none were to be found.

That is, until we arrived at a friend's house who had just invited us over to partake of the bounty of beer he had just purchased.

Among the many fine beers he had acquired was a bottle of Corsendonk. I fell to my knees in awe. "My god!" I cried, "Bless this man and all that he is about to share with us!" I usually don't say grace before drinking beer, but this was a special occasion.

The Corsendonk is a very enjoyable reddish-amber brew, with a very complex flavor that includes hints of chocolate, port, raisin and apple. The yeast sediment adds to the flavor and bouquet, which includes hints of fruit and is fairly malty, evidently not a lot of hops were used for aroma. The aftertaste is slight and sweet. If you happen upon this beer, do not think twice. Buy one, or several, you won't be disappointed.

The next beer we sampled was the Belgian Ename Dubbel Abbey Ale. This is a dry, tangy beer with an unusually light, but smoky character and fairly bitter aftertaste. The aroma was rather nondescript, but overall it was a pretty pleasing beer.

It made sense that we would open the Ename Trippel Ale next, so we did. The Trippel was a light blonde color, very different from the Dubbel's deep amber. The bouquet is very nice; it's lightly hoppy and fairly smoky. The flavor is not outstanding, but it has a nice bite, mostly from the high alcohol content. This beer did not impress me as much as the Dubbel. The Trippel really reminded me of the Singha malt liquor I reviewed earlier.

We finally broke away from Belgium and cracked open a bottle of Paulaner Oktoberfest from Munich. The hoppy bouquet had nice caramel undertones, which also came through in the flavor, which was pretty heavily malted. However, the Oktoberfest has a smooth, light character, not at all what you'd expect from a malty brew. The aftertaste was fairly grainy and it all adds up to a pretty decent beer.

All of these beers are pretty decent cold weather brews. Just pour yourself a nice glass of beer, sit in front of the fire (or baseboard heater, if you're not so lucky), grab a good book, put some blues on the stereo and enjoy some of the finer things in life this fall. Until next week, cheers!

Broomstick ball to raise funds

Ol' Halloween is approaching from the North in a gush of chilling wind, horrific, ominous, archaic Cthulhuistic chants, souls sprouting from bushes where they were past suicides and in the form of music at the Moscow Community Center.

To kick off the horrid—in the best sense of the word-night of Halloween, The Bedheads and Circle of Knots will be performing a benefit concert.

This is "The First Annual Broomstick Ball". The purpose of the concert is to raise funds for the Disability Action Center Northwest, a non-profit group in Moscow.

The Bedheads will perform first, starting at 8:30 p,m. After them Circle of Knots will per-

Throughout the show there will be raffles and costume contests. It is suggested that you dress up, since it is Halloween.

Tickets will run $3 at the door. If you want to purchase tickets before the concert then you can purchase them at the Disability Center for only $2.

The show will be held on Oct. 31. It promises to be one hellish night of wild dancing, mellifluous laughter and music.
