Senior project sheds new light on old train

Sean Tetpon

Three University of Idaho engineering students will set lights to music in a holiday light display next Saturday.

Nearly 1,800 light strands will be placed on an old steam-engine locomotive and surrounding trees at the bottom of 21st Street in Lewiston.

Students Brad Heath, Dale Linafelter and Moncif Ouazzani designed and built a soundactuated light controller in Senior Group Design class. The controller is to be used with the lights in the trees.

Lights on the train will simulate smoke rising from the stack and movement of the wheels. Lights in the trees will respond to holiday music, via the controller.

The controller activates specific light strands in response to music intensity. Low, mid-range and high tones in the display music will trigger corresponding lights in the trees.

"The music dances up and down the trees at different loudness and frequency levels," Linafelter said. "You can watch the lights respond as different instruments and noises jump in the music."

A compact disc player feeds music into the controller. The CD player's analog signal is split into separate frequencies and converted into digital signals.

The digital signals are separated into low, mid-range and high volume levels. Each volume level is measured and sent to a corresponding relay switch. The relay switches match volume levels with light strands in the trees, turning them on or off.

"If there is a low tone, the controller will turn on the lower lights," Heath said. "The intensity of the tone will be measured, and determine which lights turn on."

The lighting display is a Lewiston Chamber of Commerce project, funded by John's Electric, Inc., of Lewiston. Larry Kopczynski, co-owner of John's Electric, said the material cost for the project is approximately $35,000. Heath said their part of the project runs over $1,000 with parts provided by John's Electric. "Larry has bought everything we needed for the project and has given us support," he said.

Kopczynski said "It is neat to see college students doing a good job in community ser-

Heath, Linafelter and Ouazzani began working on the controller at the beginning of the semester.

The controller will be finished on Thursday and the lights will go up Saturday. The display will last through Jan. 6, 1996.

Resident Director Graci Dungao said the residence halls will be handing out red ribbons and selling t-shirts with the logo "Life is Short;

The t-shirts, sporting the cartoon character Calvin, are on sale for $6 from resident assistants. Those who order the shirts early will have them in time for AIDS Awareness Week. Others can still buy the shirts throughout the week.

"Extra funds benefit AIDS projects in the community," Dungao

Week long activities start with an impact panel on Monday, Nov. 27, from 8 p.m. to 10 p.m. in the Gault-Upham party room. A panel of people will discus caring for and living with AIDS.

On Tuesday a presentation to raise AIDS awareness titled "Sex in an Envelope" will be held from 8 p.m. to 10 p.m. in the Wallace Complex study lounge.

The movie Common Thread: Stories from the Quilt along with a presentation of the area AIDS quilt will take place on Wednesday in the Wallace TV lounge from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

A candlelight vigil on Friday will start at 7 p.m.and proceed from the Gault-Upham party room and the residence halls, through downtown Moscow and past Greek Row.

Resident Assistant Jen Mudge said condoms will be distributed all week during the programs.

"We did this last year on a small scale," Mudge said. "We had the basket set up with condoms and it worked really well."

Dungao said resident assistants will hold a red ribbon drive. People are asked to wear red ribbons in support of AIDS awareness throughout the week.

Mudge said it is important to get new and updated information out to college-aged people.

"I don't know it's vital right now, but at some point it's going to become important," Mudge said.

Local employers provide spring, summer internship opportunities

"What I thought was really great was I didn't have to go too far. We ought to take advantage of the businesses in the community we're living in," said senior Heidi Kruckenberg, who interned at the Idaho Center for Developmental Disabilities.

"It gave me the confidence to know that I could do it. As a student, I was putting together major functions," said senior Katie Fuess. Besides, she added, "it can't hurt you, you get three credits for it, and you might even get paid!"

Interns and employers gave advice to students looking for intern positions. "Go to your organization with some knowledge of them," said Christina Baldwin, development director of the Palouse-Clearwater Environmental

"I got a resume from a woman who wanted an editor position, and she spelled 'editor' wrong,' Kenyon said.

"Students need to network and talk with people and really get out to see what's available," said Alice Pope-Barbut, director Cooperative Education. Students shouldn't give up if they don't find something offered specifically for their major. "If you want something bad enough, it may take time, but you'll find something," she said.

Most local spring internships have application deadlines in December, but some are on-going if they are not filled. Seniors who do not have work experience should really consider investing the time a local internship, Barbut said. They will get elective credits, work experience and a fuller resume...and maybe even get paid.

BSU senator accuses president of trying to quash review

BOISE—A student leader has accused Boise State University's student body president of trying to quash a student government review of his behavior at an out-of-town conference last month.

Jeff Klaus, the student president, already is under investigation by Lewiston police in connection with the alleged rape of another student leader at the conference, held in Lewiston the weekend of Oct. 15.

Police confirmed late last month that Klaus and Vice President Darryl Wright are being investigated in connection with an alleged rape in a Lewiston motel room. The complaint was lodged by a female student leader from another university.

Both Klaus and Wright say they did nothing wrong. No charges have been filed. Police say they are awaiting the results of laboratory tests.

Jochum said the Student Body Senate committee intends to steer clear of the criminal investigation. Its concerns are whether university vehicles were used for nonofficial business, whether Boise State students violated alcohol rules, and whether there was a breach of the student code of ethics.

If the committee recommends any action after its review, approval by the Student Body Senate as a whole is required.

Klaus attended the committee's first public meeting Thursday and stated his intention to attend future meetings, Jochum said. On Friday, she said, Klaus told her he intended to abolish the committee altogeth-

Klaus gave a different version of his actions. Citing the Boise State Student Handbook, he said he believes the proper forum for any investigation is not the Student Body Senate but the student government's judicial branch.

Faculty want role in engineering transfer

MOSCOW—Faculty of the University of Idaho want the state Board of Education to include faculty and students on a steering committee to transfer the engineering education program at Boise from Idaho to Boise State University.

The UI Faculty Council on Wednesday unanimously passed the resolution. It also approved a resolution stating it will provide input and expects participation in the statewide role and mission debate the board's going through.

The engineering transfer steering committee is made of Idaho Interim President Thomas Bell, Boise State President Charles Ruch and Rayburn Barton, executive director for the Board of Education. It's developing a plan to transfer three undergraduate engineering programs at Boise to Boise State's administration.

The board meeting to consider the transfer is next week, and faculty and students in Moscow and Boise are wary since few specifics have surfaced.

They say the process is too secretive, and issues such as promotion and tenure of faculty, relocation and accreditation need their input.

When the steering committee was formed, engineering Dean Richard Jacobsen was named as an information point person for press, faculty and student questions about the transfer. But Jacobsen said he has no information to give out. If there is a plan, no one has filled him in on details, he said.

Republicans stand firm in budget impasse

BOISE—Idaho Republicans have conducted the nation's first vice presidential straw vote.

Former ambassador Allan Keyes bested both Senators Phil Gramm and Steve Forbes by a two-to-one margin in a nonscientific, nonbinding straw poll during the 1995 Conference of Western Idaho Republicans, held Saturday in Boise.

In a presidential straw vote conducted at the same time, Sen. Majority Leader Bob Dole doubled Sen. Phil Gramm's votes to obtain the nod as the conference's overwhelming pick for president.

Lamar Alexander, Pat Buchanan, Dole, Rep. Bob Dornan, Forbes, Gramm, Keyes, Sen. Richard Lugar, Sen. Arlen Specter and Morry Taylor were listed on both ballots as presidential and vice presidential choices.

Meanwhile, congressional Republicans told conference goers they will cooperate with President Bill Clinton to end the budget deadlock, but will not compromise on important areas.

Rep. Tom DeLay, R-Texas, House majority whip, was the keynote speaker. But he and Idaho Rep. Michael Crapo said they were keeping an eye on developments in Washington, as Congress heads toward a showdown with the Democratic president on the federal budget.

Gov. Phil Batt urged Idaho's all-GOP congressional delegation to stand firm in the budget battle, even though they know they will take heat from the Democrats.

Batt said he's been going through criticism himself on the nuclear waste issue. He signed a contract Oct. 16 that will allow 1,133 shipments of nuclear waste into the state over the next 40 years.

11-year-old going for graduate degree

MURFREESBORO, Tenn.— Eleven-year-old Michael Kearney of Mobile, Ala., has decided to add to his resume with a second degree from Middle Tennessee State University.

Michael already has a degree in anthropology from the University of South Alabama, which made him the youngest college graduate on record last year at age 10. He has said he hopes to become a gameshow host.

MTSU has offered Michael the equivalent of a full-time graduate assistantship because the real thing might violate child labor laws.

The precocious youngster hammed it up at a news conference Friday to announce his decision to attend MTSU, which is about 30 miles south of Nashville.

Michael also raked his nails over the blackboard, sang a Barry Manilow song into the microphone and kneed his sister, Maeghan, in the behind.

Michael doesn't know what his second degree will be in. He wants to explore when the semester begins Jan. 10.

Michael has an IQ of more than 300 and also set a record as the youngest child to enter college when he started South Alabama at 6

Man wounded while showing off his gun

BRIDGEPORT, Conn.—An 18year-old man was wounded in the genitals when he tried to show his girlfriend the large gun he had in Kevin Hall, of Bridgeport, was taken to Bridgeport Hospital where he was treated for a laceration to his penis and powder burns on the inside of his left thigh.

At around 7:30 p.m. Friday, police responded to a call of a shooting, police said. When police arrived, they found Hall lying on the ground clutching his groin.

Police said there was large hole in the crotch area of his pants which were smoking.

Hall told police that he had been the victim of a driveby shooting, police said. But his girlfriend told police Hall was showing her a sawed-off shot gun he had in his pants when the weapon went off.

The gun was found in some nearby bushes, police said.

Hall was released from the hospital and police charged him with reckless endangerment, illegal discharge of a firearm and possession of a sawed-off shotgun. He was being held in lieu of $100,000 bond pending arraignment in Superior Court on Monday.

Seven killed, 40 wounded in attack ahead of election

ALGIERS, Algeria—Seven people have been killed and at least 40 others wounded in escalating violence ahead of this week's presidential election in a nation torn by civil war.

A car bomb exploded Saturday near the city hall in Ouled Yaiche in southern Algeria, killing five people and wounding 40, sources in the capital said Sunday.

Also Saturday, a member of President Liamine Zeroual's campaign staff was shot to death in Djelfa, southwest of Algiers, and a supporter of presidential candidate Said Sadi was fatally shot in the town of Tirmitine.

No one immediately claimed responsibility for the attacks. They drew an angry response from Zeroual, a retired general appointed in 1994 to guide the government through a three-year transition to democracy.

U.S. strategy of diplomacy and arms, how long will it work?

VIENNA, Austria—High-visibility diplomacy backed by far quieter military assistance has been the hallmark of the U.S. effort to solve the Balkan crisis.

The two-track approach helped bring about a nationwide truce and the current peace talks in Ohio among the presidents of Bosnia, Serbia and Croatia. But it also led to a regional military buildup that some experts fear may spark future war.

American policy for the past two years has been driven by a belief that creating a balance of military power would obviate the need for outside intervention, even if it did not bring immediate peace.

Croatia's retrained and rearmed army, advised by retired U.S. military officers, did in three months what it could not in three years—recapture most land held by rebel Serbs, eliminating the need for a U.N. presence.

The U.S. peace proposal for Bosnia continues the same approach, according to congressional testimony last month by the secretaries of state and defense.

In addition to contributing troops to a NATO peacekeeping force, the United States would arm and train Bosnia's Muslim-led government army and its Bosnian Croat allies to defend themselves in a future Bosnia divided between them and rebel Serbs.

Assistant Secretary of State Richard Holbrooke, the architect of Washington's Bosnia policy, denies the United States is arming or training forces or encouraging other countries to do so.

Critics of U.S. policy say that by first ignoring clandestine arms shipments and later encouraging them through third countries, Washington has helped militarize the region. U.S. government officials and sources close to the government privately say Washington has been encouraging third parties to supply arms to Bosnia since at least fall of 1994.

Avgeonaut Interview

U.S. Senate candidate Minnick discusses strategy, budget

Justin Oliver Ruen

7 alt Minnick, a businessman and former aide under President Richard Nixon, recently announced his candidacy for the U.S. Senate seat currently held by Sen. Larry Craig, R-ID. In a recent Argonaut interview. Minnick detailed his reasons for entering the race and his political philosophy.

Argonaut: What prompted you to run for the Senate?

Minnick: I was recruited by the Democratic party here and in Washington D.C. They were looking for somebody who was fiscally conservative, socially moderate and who'd had a successful career doing something that was totally unrelated to politics. I fit those specifications.

Argonaut: Running against incumbents is difficult, but you're running against the popular senior Senator Larry Craig. What is your strategy?

Minnick: I think that people are fed up, in Idaho and nationally, with career politicians, whose primary focus is doing whatever's necessary to get re-elected. In these days that means raising massive sums of money from special interest groups. I think people recognize that you can't take a $50,000 or $100,000 check from somebody every two, four or six years and not (allow) that person to have undue influence on your judgment...This is leading to government by the special interests, as opposed to the way government is supposed to be, allowing everyone opportunity to influence political leaders. I think Senator Craig is an example of that spending. At the same time they system.

Argonaut: How do you propose to achieve a balanced budget?

Minnick: People are sick and tired of politicians who say they're going to balance the budget, but only after three elections, or five elections. I've learned from my business career that the only budget that counts is the one for next year, and we have had politicians since 1980 that have postured themselves as political conservatives, meanwhile voting every year for budget deficits of between $150-300 billion a year.

I plan to tackle all segments of the budget, including entitlements. There are $84 billion worth of entitlements that go to people that make over $50,000 a year. They're simply going to have to means-test at least that segment of entitlements, and I think it's only a matter of fundamental fairness. You're going to also have to deal with Social Security which is the biggest single entitlement program. I think that my generation has to tell people like you that we can't afford to maintain the existing program because people are living longer, in another 10 years the baby boomers will be retiring and there simply won't be enough people in the work force under age 65 to support everybody over 65, no matter how much you tax them...I don't think it's fair to cut benefits, because it's such a meager existence, but I do think that we have to tell college graduates-the 30 years olds-that they are not going to be able to retire on full social security benefits probably until they are 68 or 70 (years old).

You've also got to cut military were cutting student loans, Head Start, child nutrition plans and public radio, they took the Pentagon's budget of $270 billion, didn't cut a nickel and added $7 billion in pork barrel projects that created jobs in influential senators' home districts. That's just fundamentally unfair and wrong. You also have to attack corporate welfare. One hundred two billion dollars worth of special tax breaks and direct payments to corporations were not touched by this congress.

Argonaut: How soon do you plan to get to a balanced budget?

Minnick: The first budget I vote

Argonaut: The Idaho Republican Party has said that you're running away from the Democratic label. How do you respond to these charges?

Minnick: I am what I am. I have been an outspoken independent for the last 15 years. I've supported people of both parties. Where I've disagreed with leaders of both parties, I've been pretty darned outspoken about it, and I'm going to continue to be that way...The fact that I'm running for office isn't going to change me a bit, nor what I have to say about professional politicians that are screwing up this country, and unfortunately they're of both Argonaut: You've said that politicians are motivated by special interest groups. Do you plan to take special interest group money to fund your campaign?

Minnick: I think we need campaign finance reform, which should include eliminating all PAC's, all soft money and putting some reasonable spending caps on campaigns like $1 per voter. But unfortunately that's not the system that I'm running for office under. I'm going to have to compete for money if I'm going to have any chance to get my message across. Therefore I am, at least for the moment, going to take contribution from groups that are supportive of my candidacy and my views...there are some groups that I absolutely won't take money from.

Argonaut: You have been very outspoken concerning nuclear waste shipments to Idaho. If you're elected, how will you handle this situation?

Minnick: The deal has to be renegotiated. We have given the federal government the right to send in high-level spent fuel and store it right on top of the aquifer in a volcanically active area. There have been 15 molten lava flows on that Snake River plateau in the last 25,000 years. Some of this spent fuel has half-lives of 100,000 years...There isn't a worse place to be storing spent fuel and we have given the federal government under this deal the right to ship in virtually all they want, for 40 years for free and then to keep it here as long as they want by paying $20 million a year, not inflation-adjusted. We owe it to the next generation to renegotiate that deal.

I would find a circumstances where the administration is proposing something that I can philosophically agree with, but it's close enough in the congress that my vote is one they need. I will condition my vote on them re-opening this deal. What I think they ought to do is appoint a panel of geologists and give them 18 months and enough money to look at all potential sites in the U.S. and have them recommended (to Congress) where the best permanent site is.

Argonaut: Gun control is an important issue to many

UI alumnus still inventing 'doodads'

Jennifer Eng

Have you ever wondered who comes up with the ideas for novelty items such as mink cuff links, gag credit cards, executive marbles and zodiac dice? The inventor of these ideas and many other "doodads" is University of Idaho alumnus— Charles Woodrow "Woodie" Hall.

Hall was born and raised in Moscow and graduated from UI in 1938 with a Business-Education degree. After Hall finished his education he took a job traveling around the country selling fraternity jewelry.

Hall, a member of Phi Delta Theta fraternity, said he didn't like the traveling but did say, "A lot of people didn't get a job because of the Depression, so I took the fraternity jewelry job."

After his stint as a fraternity jewelry salesmen, Hall accepted a commission as a second lieutenant in the army on Aug. 1, 1940.

Hall said, "I just wanted to get in and do some time. The army reserves required two years at the time and I wanted to get in and get mine over with."

The second World War began two years after Hall had been in the army. At that time he was sent to Asia. There Hall was promoted to major and spent time in China helping to organize 120 Chinese divisions to mobilize and drive the Japanese out of China.

While in China, Hall earned the Legion of Merit award which Hall said, "is the highest award you can get out of combat."

After his time in the army was up, Hall turned down a promotion to colonel and went home to get married. Hall and his wife have been married since Dec. 10, 1945.

When Hall returned from his honeymoon, he and his bride settled down in Iowa City, Iowa and opened a gift store named "Hall's" in the small college town.

Hall said of his choice of Iowa City, "I wanted to be in the middle of the United States in a college town."

Six years after settling in Iowa City, Hall was one of three officers from Iowa recalled back to the army because of the Korean War. Hall's orders were changed before he was sent to Korea and he was instead sent to Heidelberg, Germany where he could take his Hall sold his gift store and spent the next three years in Germany and earned the position of lieutenant colonel.

The Halls came back to the United States and settled in Sacramento, Calif. where Hall went to the Kingsley Machine Company. Hall was looking for a name of somebody that needed help, but wasn't expecting Kingsley Machine Company to hire him. Mr. Kingsley himself surprised Hall by offering him a job in sales and after only two years promoted him to sales manager.

Years later, Kingsley told Hall that he hired him because he had never hired a college graduate as well as a lieutenant colonel to work for him before. After working for Kingsley Machine Company for 17 years as the sales manager, Hall started to look towards his own creations, as he saw Kingsley innovative creations make a profit out on the market.

At the age of 55 Hall made a discovery about ideas. Hall said, "I didn't know until I was 55 that you could sell an idea.

This selling of ideas has been Hall's occupation ever since his discovery. In the 27 years that followed Hall has helped 150 new product ideas reach the market.

In a previous article Hall said, "I'm an 'idea man.' I don't look for a reason to fight people. I look for a way to do it quicker, better, easier, cheaper."

At the age of 82 Hall may have slowed down a little bit, but the UI alumnus says he is still working on a few game ideas. The man that has made mink cuff links and Chinese Chess is still thinking up things to Idahoans. What is your position? Minnick: I am in favor of the right to bear arms. I think it's ironic that my opponent apparently thinks that the only people that constitutional right doesn't apply to are federal land management law officers, who are serving the public interest on public lands...I own guns and am supportive of peoples' rights to possess them and use them. I favor some reasonable controls with respect to weapons that have little or no sporting purpose...I also think it makes sense to strengthen the responsibility of parents to ensure that their children don't have access to guns and are trained in their use.

I also think there's nothing wrong with checking out someone who wants to buy a gun to make sure they don't have a criminal record.

Argonaut: What is your stand on abortion?

Minnick: I think it's none of the government's business. I'm pretty civil-libertarian. I think that reasonable people disagree over previability and that it ought to be up to an individual's family, church and conscience as to how you make that decision. The government shouldn't be playing big plan to clean up the ASUI and force it to serve its intended purpose, and not be the student funded bureaucrat training course that it is now. I will demand full representation for all students. Currently, students living off campus essentially have taxation without representation since we all pay the same ASUI fees, yet off-campus students have little to no voice in the senate. I will push the university administration to change the current alcohol policies to allow consumption in the Dome parking lot and pave the way for real tailgating, and possibly even beer sales in the Dome.

president of Students' International Association at UI, chair of the Rules and Regulations Committee, chair of the International Afternoon Committee, and I've served on several other committees.

What other traits should I have to qualify me as the next ASUI vice president? Openness to students' views? Wherever I am, I constantly listen to the issues raised by my peers. Dedication? I am always seeking students' opinions on campus issues such as tailgating and parking. Seeking student input often brings out the best solution to the problem.

Am I qualified? If I haven't asked the right questions, feel free to e-mail me (hisel934@uidaho.edu) or confront me in the ASUI office with your question(s). All questions are welcome.

Some of the offices could be decided by less than ten votes. Please Wednesday, November am spending about $50 on my campaign and about 70 hours. My funding comes from my own pocket. There should be no spending cap on campaign materials because it is not enforceable. In order to enforce a spending cap on ASUI elections would require that the Student Issues Board become a team of enforcers which is not what SIB is for.

What do you feel the role of the ASUI is?

The role of the ASUI is to represent students' views, wants and needs to other students, staff, faculty and other state institutions. We provide services to the general student populace and we interact with our peers to keep our finger on the pulse of the campus.

Mission Statement

acted with you, the student, in mind. Though this hasn't always put me on the majority side, I feel it has been my duty as your elected representative. I foresee an exciting, challenging future for the ASUI, including more involvement in State Board of Education proceedings; input on such pending ventures as the Campus Commons project and a Campus Recreation Center; and increased interaction with administrators regarding important student decisions. I feel I am the most qualified and committed candidate and want to continue to effectively serve UI students in these capacities. Please vote John Tesnohlidek for VP.

Mission Statement

ello, my name is Annie Averitt. Being involved with the senate has enhanced my views of the University and how it works. I was recently appointed to the ASUI senate and am running in this semester's election. Running for re-election will allow this senator to continue to lead and be an active voice of the ASUI. To continue in my current office will keep the leadership of our community at a level of excellence way above par.

The Multicultural leadership retreat this fall brought great insight into inter-cultural interaction and heightened my awareness of various group needs. I was also a soccer coach this fall for first through third graders which increased my patience and developed my conflict management.

Vote. Vote Wednesday. Vote Nov. 15. Your vote counts.

Jason Bills

Mission Statement

In my tenure as an ASUI senator there are several issues and concerns that I feel need to be addressed. Chief among them is the issue of campus safety. During my term, I will work towards the implementation of a comprehensive campus safety program that will include, among other things, more extensive lighting on campus walkways and the installation of emergency "blue-light" phones.

I also feel that the ASUI must strive to work with the city and county highway districts in regards to the state of repair of campus streets. Prompt attention to this matter will greatly aid the safety and transportation needs of UI students.

I ask you for your support in the coming election, and would appreciate your vote.

feel as serving the students of the University of Idaho as vice-president for one year makes me highly qualified for the position of senator for ASUI. I believe my past record as a promoter of Vandal Athletics, campus safety, community involvement and homecoming events speaks for itself. I have served as a committee person, or have helped with a specific event on all the above mentioned; for example I helped President Wilson with the first promoted Tailgate party, sponsored by the ASUI, at the UI Kibbie Dome.

All I really have to say is that my past speaks for itself. I am also a member of the United States Marine Corps Reserve. I believe that the Marine Corps has given me certain leadership skills which are needed in a leadership position, such as senator of ASUI. Thank you please vote Damon Darakjy senator ASUI on Nov. 15, 1995.

How do you feel about tailgate parties? Therefore, do you support a change in the alcohol policy on campus?

I feel that tailgate parties provide interaction between boosters and the alumni. I have said, publicly and will continue to say that this is a necessary aspect in college or university life. Why? Let me compare it to an aspect in my life. I am a Reservist in the United States Marine Corps. On some occasions we, as Marines, have the opportunity to talk and listen to former or retired Marines that have been in war; or have served in peacetime. It gives you so much pride and passion to hear them relate stories to you, concerning the Corps, and having the feeling that you or one of them. Well. when I talk to a booster or an alumni and they tell me stories it once again gives me that same feeling of, hey I am proud at where I attend school. In the Marine Corps we call our pride and enthusiasm "Esprit de Corps." I feel that I have this spirit in the Marine Corps and with being a Vandal. I am very proud of the fact that I am a Vandal. Tailgating with boosters, alumni, or even with your fellow students is one way to show this pride that you are a student spends on a campaign?

I spend very little on campaigns. I authored a bill last semester that put a cap on spending. Unfortunately it failed, but the idea has not. I feel that there should be a cap and will probably bring the bill up again in the senate should I win.

What do you feel you have done to make campus a better place for students? If elected, what are your goals for the future as a representative of the ASUI?

I feel that as a member of the homecoming committee last year, a member of SARB, past member on the Safety Task, past member of the Teaching Enhancement Committee, helping Sean Wilson with the first ASUI sponsored tailgate party, and just being very visible to students on campus, I have made UI a better place. My goals are the same as they have always been-to represent students by making the ASUI more visible, try to increase the participation with student committees and boards, increase the participant level of the ASUI, and students, at the City level and with the UI administration.

Most importantly to have a pride and passion for being a Vandal. Like I said earlier I am proud of the fact that I attend UI, and I am proud of the fact that I am contributing to making it a finer institution. Please vote Nov. 15, and GO VANDALS.

nlisting in the Idaho Army → National Guard, and actively ✓ participating in UI Army ROTC, have given me the skills I need to be an effective leader. I have lived in Moscow for the past three years, working and learning on this campus. Familiarity has enabled me to identify some of its problems, such as a lack of parking and inadequate security lighting. Something else I would like to have are signs around campus limiting vehicle speed on the shared walkways. I don't know how many times I've almost been run over by a speeding maintenance van. Help me achieve these goals by lending your support Nov. 15. If elected, I won't take "no" for an answer.

Jay Feldman

Mission Statement

am a 43 year old philosophy major in my junior year. Though we may have different perspectives, I am sure we share the same concerns. I am not a member of a senatorial clique; and in fact my goal is to bring your concerns into student government by questioning current policy. Student government, as with most governments, is like a machine that once running people tend to tune up but they rarely bring into question the reason for its existence. We tend to allow it to fund the same programs and base its decisions on the same type of thinking that built the machine long ago. This custom is what I want to challenge. I will ask the hard questions regarding funding of programs that possibly need rethinking and bring student government a new voice that challenges the status quo. Thank you for your vote on November 15 for

How do you feel about tailgate parties? Therefore, do you support a change in the alcohol policy on campus?

I support tailgate parties for those who wish to attend them, but I do not support ASUI financial sponsorship. The main obstacle to the type of parties that students seem to want is the open container law. I would work to eliminate this law; and further, move to remove the ban on drinking on campus. It is not the role of the university to implement repressive regulations that take away from the students' rights and to treat them as other than adults who are responsible for their own actions. Removing the ban would amount to a second chance for alcohol consumption on campus, and I hope that each of us takes it upon ourselves to learn moderation in our consumption to prevent further tragedies like last year. With this obstacle removed, tailgating, as people seem to want it, would be possible and those wishing to attend could do so.

What will you do to make the campus a better place for students, if elected?

My job, if elected to the senate, will be to ferret out outdated wastes of your $1,000,000 of ASUI fees, involve you in re-defining ASUI to serve all the students, and ask the hard questions that need to be asked. It is essential that you get out and vote and make your voice heard in challenging the status quo.

Jon Glenn

Mission Statement

y name is Jon Glenn. I am running for the outcome ASUI senator. I am currently a sophomore majoring in Political Science. I am also involved in University Choir, drawing, the Reserve Training Corps in leadership positions and I am the secretary of Targhee Residence Hall. I intend to bring to the student council enthusiasm and the ability to work together in incorporating fresh ideas that use the available resources to benefit all students. I believe that it is possible to create an environment in which all ideas are considered equally important and relevant in coming to an effective solution. If I am elected, I will hear the voice of the student and do my best to make it happen.

Brandon Jessup

Mission Statement

ince I have been allotted only 'a paragraph or two' in which to say whatever I feel necessary, I shall try to be as precise and to the point as possible. Without simply turning this into a resume I shall begin by briefly describing my qualifications for the position of ASUI senator. I am a pre-law student with Junior standing and a cumulative GPA of 3.7, pursuing a double major in Philosophy and Political Science. Outside class I work and currently serve as my living groups Intramural Sports Manager. What do these things have to do with the qualifications necessary to performing the duties of ASUI senator? My double major and high GPA demonstrate that I possess the drive, dedication, and ability to serve at the level necessary to perform the duties of ASUI senator in a manner that represents the students of the University of Idaho appropriately.

However qualified I may be, though, what would motivate me to seek a position on the ASUI senate?

Now 23, I have been employed since age 14 and, in that time, have learned the importance and meaning of responsibility and hard work. Having worked mostly in the service industry I am also well aware of the intrinsic rewards associated with serving the public. Even away from work serving the public is an area I strive to be active in, as is evidenced by my acting as Intramural Sports Manager for my living group. Though a meager position by some standards, it is one that I find very rewarding because of the opportunity it affords me to represent and serve my fellow students. Why then am I seeking a position on the ASUI senate? It is because of this satisfaction I receive from serving the public and the pride I take in a job well done. I ask that on election day you vote for the candidate who will serve you in the manner that you deserve and that you should demand. On November 15, vote Brandon Jessup for ASUI senate.

How do you feel about tailgate parties? Therefore, do you support a change in the campus alcohol policy?

As the second of these two questions implies, tailgating itself is not the main issue. The University of Idaho's alcohol policy obviously is an issue, as is the ASUI's expenditure of over $7,000 on a tailgate party. While I love football games and tailgating, $7,000 of ASUI funds on a tailgate party is not justifiable (nor, even, is a smaller amount justifiable). Tailgate parties are a place for fans to come together before a game to show their team spirit (without enticement), not to mention having a little fun BBQ'ing and drinking. Ahhh drinking!! This does not mean that all who go to a tailgate party must drink or even that they will not have fun unless they do. It means, quite simply, that many people do. Furthermore, it means that of those that do, some happen to be over 21 and of legal age to drink. This brings me to Ul's alcohol policy. Ul's alcohol policy does not allow any of the kind of consumption of alcoholic beverages just described, no matter how old you are! As long as the drinking age remains at 21 those under 21 will be prohibited from drinking. However, those over 21 already have the right to drink and that right should be recognized by the University of Idaho. UI needs to designate a drinking area for the sake of recognizing that

How much are you spending on your campaigns? Where does your funding come from? Do you feel there should be a cap on the amount of money a student spends on a campaign?

My campaign expenditures to date total approximately $30, which have come entirely from my own personal funds. There should be a spending cap on campaigns, though not so meager an amount as $30. A spending cap should be set which takes into account the amount of spending necessary to inform the student body of a candidate's platform and which allows a candidate to make him or herself known without leaving candidates with limited funding at a disadvantage.

What will you do to make the campus a better place for students, if elected?

Obviously at the forefront of current issues is tailgating. I am confident that the tailgating issue can be easily resolved so that we may move on to other issues. Since we can not recover the money already spent on the tailgate party earlier this year, we can now only make sure that it does not happen again. I will work towards more responsible money management by the ASUI. As I mentioned in an earlier question, I will also work towards amending the University of Idaho's alcohol policy. I will also consider it my duty to work for campus safety. I will push to have ASUI senator's e-mail address publicized so that those wishing to contact their senator can do so more easily. I support the concept of voting by email and would be interested in looking into the concept of the ASUI supporting a home page on the Web containing ASUI news and information for Internet users.

What do you feel the role of the ASUI is?

In it's statement of purpose the Rules and Regulations of the ASUI states that: (9010.000) The ASUI shall represent the interests of all enrolled students at the University of Idaho...(9100.000) The ASUI shall strive to make each student's voice heard within the governmental structure. (4050.050) All ASUI Senators will be representatives to all students. Obviously, then, the ASUI's role is to represent the interests and needs of UI students. Furthermore, it is the duty of the ASUI to take the time that the average student can not spare from there busy college schedule to become informed of all relevant issues and to use that knowledge of the issues to make a positive difference for the sake of the student body, which they represent.

How do you feel about tailgate parties? Therefore, do you support a change in the alcohol policy on campus?

I strongly endorse the changing of the city ordinance to allow tailgating parties. This will increase the attendance at our football games for alumni as well as students. It would be an opportunity for everyone—Greeks, dorms, off-campus and alumni—to support the football team together rather than separated as we are now at the games.

How much are you spending on your campaign? Where does your funding come from? Do you feel there should be a cap on the amount of money a student spends on a campaign?

Ten dollars, which is coming directly from my pocket. Yes, I do believe there should be a cap on the amount of money a student spends on a campaign. The efforts in a campaign can be done in person, without having to spend too much money.

What will you do to make the campus a better place for students, if elected?

I hope to help integrate the relations between all students on campus. I would also like to work directly with faculty to improve their time spent meeting students' needs. I am also a firm advocate of increased campus safety. Lighting and many other options are ideas that need to be presented to the ASUI.

What do you feel the role of the ASUI is?

To lead, as well as support the needs of all students at the University of Idaho.

Ron Woodman

Mission Statement

y name is Ron Woodman and I have pride in my school. This pride has encouraged me to run for ASUI Senate because I want this school to be the best it can be. My platform consists of several areas of concentration. Among these are the elimination of unwise spending in the ASUI budget, increasing the administration's responsibility to the students, and the students' basic right to have a good time. With the introduction of a new administration, we as students have many choices to make. The most important of these choices concerns the student's role in the decision making process. My position is that the students should maximize their role in this process. If I am elected, I will work as hard as possible to assure this.

you support a change in the alcohol policy?

feel that tailgating is a great. The university must change the current alcohol policies and demand that the city get off our backs in order to bring real tailgating to the UI. Spending money on soda pop and hot-dogs just is not going to create the tailgating that the students want.

have spent $112.74 on my campaign. The funding comes from the good people who put money in my tip jar each night at the bar. I believe there should be a cap on the amount a student can spend on their campaigns, that way any student who happens to have a large pool of money to draw from—like their parents, cannot necessarily walk away with the election just because they had the most signs.

What will you do to make the campus a better place for students, if elected?

ne of the main reasons I decided to run for ASUI president is because I feel that the majority of the students think that the ASUI is pretty much a joke. They read and hear stories about the antics of a few bureaucrats-in-training spending their student fee money, and get the impression that the ASUI doesn't really do anything. Off-campus students really get the shaft from the ASUI because for all practical purposes they have no representation on the senate. If elected, I will demand full representation for all students, on and off-campus, and put an end to the political squabbling and start forcing the ASUI to do what the students really want.

What do you feel the role of the ASUI is?

he role of the ASUI should be that of a voice of the students and not a ruling government of the students. Currently all students pay their taxes—student fees, and then the elected members of ASUI take the money and play government. I feel the "student leaders" in the ASUI should take a minute and look behind them to see just who is still following. With voter turnout and general involvement in the ASUI virtually nil, I think it is safe to say that most people are dissatisfied with the status quo. The ASUI should protect the students from actions that the university administration makes that go against what the students want and provide activities and services that the students want.

Tailgating is a key issue in the coming year. Alumni support is an invaluable resource for our university. Through alumni support, athletics receive increased revenues and support, several scholarship programs are produced through alumni efforts, and our students are the sons and daughters of alumni. Tailgating creates an atmosphere in which alumni can stay involved and students can intermix with them. I think that by trying to work a little bit more cooperatively with the Moscow City Council we can find a solution beneficial to Moscow, the University of Idaho and most importantly the students.

Campus Safety is always a critical issue on the campus, especially when the sun goes down. Several well-traveled walkways remain dark and forbidding. Between Wallace Complex and the Tower is an unlit walkway as students head to classrooms and the library. Some of the more popular running paths are unlit. These are issues and areas that need to be fixed. If elected president I will commit myself tirelessly to their resolution.

This is only a small sample of the issues facing our campus. We have one of the finest institutions in the country and I will work to not only keep it that way, but will additionally work for the continued improvement of our campus, facilities and way of life. As a student body of 11,000 students, we have a strong voice; I will insure that voice is heard and taken seriously.

How do you feel about tailgate parties? Therefore, do you support a change in the alcohol policy on campus?

Tailgating promotes the university, interaction among different groups of students, and the continued involvement of alumni with the university. I feel that tailgating is an essential ingredient in collegiate life, as well as life after college. Tailgating goes far beyond alcohol issues. It is the mixing of old and new, a celebration of Vandal Athletics, and the creation of tradition. All of which are the cornerstones of University life.

The alcohol policy should be revised. In our experiences at the university, we are expected to mature and act responsibly. A critical area in which responsibility will be tested throughout life comes in dealing with alcohol and alcohol issues. We are inundated at every level with exposure to alcohol. Simply because the university fails to recognize the fact that alcohol is a part of everyday life in our society, does not mean their policy is right. Ignorance does not solve a problem; and I feel that by the university's outlawing of alcohol, they are simply ignoring the issue. I feel that the university should revise its policy getting their money's worth. It is time to take a stand for students, whether it is in Boise, here at UI or right in the ASUI office, to demand that our voice is heard and we are receiving the best that our money can provide.

How do you feel about tailgate parties? Therefore, do you support a change in the campus alcohol policy?

Infortunately, the issue of Tailgating has become a central focus. Although I know many students are concerned with this issue, there are other issues that should be just as important, such as campus safety and the search for a new UI President that is concerned with student issues. I do think there is a double standard that treats Boise State University differently than UI in regards to Tailgating. As president, I would work for equality between the schools.

How much are you spending on your campaigns? Where does your funding come from? Do you feel there should be a cap on the amount of money a student spends on a campaign?

y campaign has spent around $1,000.00. This money was contributed by friends and family who know that I am an honest person who will spend money wisely. I have kept records that detail where my money has come from and where it is going. If the ASUI could design a policy that could be enforced, spending caps would be OK. I would like to see something equivalent to Sunshine Reports that publicly disclose where a candidate has received their funds and where they have spent it. This is required of political candidates and should be required of student leaders as well.

What do you feel you have done to make campus a better place for students? If elected, what are your goals for the future as a representative of the ASUI?

have worked to increase student representation and also to increase student involvement. I think the goal for the ASUI should be to create a vision and live up to the expectation that ASUI representatives change the way business has been done in the past for a better future. Many students would like to see that their money is going to good use, not to see people play politics. As president, I will work to see that more of our activities are accessible to all students and that we address issues that students feel are important. Increased communication is key to this issue.

My goals are to continue this representation, seeking out students' opinions and concerns and desires; to increase the cooperation between the ASUI and other entities such as the city and county on issues such as road conditions on campus, bike paths and development; and increasing campus-wide awareness of the ASUI, its functions, and what it has to offer a diverse student body. Issues such as campus alcohol policy and future interaction with ASWSU are opportunities that I look forward to

What do you feel the role of the ASUI is?

The role of the ASUI is, I think, to complement students' experience while attending college. The ASUI, I believe, offers something for each student, whether this be in productions or concerts; The Argonaut, KUOI, or Gem of the Mountains; lecture notes for missed classes; funding for valuable campus organizations; and the list goes on and on. I feel very strongly about the ASUI's role on our campus and, if elected VP, will continue my work to more adequately define this role for students.

have spent $23.57 on my campaign. All of my funding has come from my own personal funds. I feel that there should be a cap on spending in the campaigns. Not because of rights or any other issues, but simply to force the candidates to get out among the students and deal with the issues. Simply spraying a name across the campus and the Palouse creates a popularity contest in which the most qualified candidate isn't chosen, it is the most popular or perhaps the wealthiest. We should be willing to set the example in college for politicians, to force them to become more issue oriented, and truly representative of the people.

What do you feel you have done to make campus a better place for students? If re-elected, what are your goals for the future as a representative of the ASUI?

s an ASUI senator, I have worked to open computer labs for extended hours. I have worked on the upgrading of the library and Wallace complex labs, as well as the possible introduction of more labs. I have worked for the funding of non-traditional students when the federal government unexpectedly cut funding, when the ECC bill came before the senate. I have fought for the continued funding of the Argonaut, to include the Summer Argonaut. As a senator, I have consistently fought to insure the voices of students are heard and well represent-

My goals, if elected president, include the speedy resolution of the Tailgating issue. I hope to improve campus safety, through increased lighting, and the addition of safety phones. I would like to see parking improve on the campus with the possible introduction of a parking garage. I will work for the continued growth and expansion of the university, hopefully, through the introduction of more varsity athletic teams for both men and women. I will work to bring the administration and students together; I feel that advising needs to improve, and a possible peer advising system may be the answer. I will work for a strong cohesive responsible government intent on achieving the goals of students for students in order to make sure that students are heard and not overlooked.

What do you feel the role of the ASUI is?

feel the role of the ASUI is to represent students. This includes standing up for their rights, insuring they are heard, funding their clubs and organizations, and creating leadership opportunities for them. I feel the ASUI is an important instrument within the university system and a strong proponent of students. We, the students, are the ASUI, and as your president I will insure it stays that way. The ASUI is nothing without students. We pay the fees; we budget them; and we fill the students. Therefore the ASUI is directly accountable to the students. The role of the ASUI is to serve students, protect students and lead students. Together we are a powerful team; divided we are the little men and women; ASUI is our common bond.

Meet George Roberts, the Man behind the Vandal

Meet George Roberts, U of I's beloved Art Professor and prize-winning sculptor and creator of the armored sculpture, dubbed "Joe the Vandal" who has stood guard in the SUB for many years.

George's welded metal creatures are widely distributed and well known throughout the northwest. He'll be in the Bookstore Saturday, November 18th, from 11am to 1pm autographing copies of "DIRE WOLF."

In this book George talks about his 40-plus years as an artist, his philosophy and working methods, and all the funny things that happened along the way.

This book is also a wonderful photographic collection of George's work.

bear the responsibility of doing so. I want to be a Vandal—not wishing to tear down all the old and previously accepted ideas, but challenging them when necessary. I want to build a better future, without losing sight of the ideals of the past. Perhaps it is time to re-examine these ideals, to take a closer look at what we are doing now and how we can do it better in the future.

How do you feel about tailgate parties? Therefore, do you support a change in the alcohol policy on campus?

I feel tailgate parties are a great way to promote student-alumni interaction, a great way to get students to support Vandal football, and are an all around good time. However, I have trouble seeing why ASUI funds should be used to help finance tailgate parties. I think that tailgating can and should go on without ASUI funds. As far as a change in the campus alcohol policy, I think that the University of Idaho should be treated the same as other Idaho universities—Boise State, Idaho State. I would be in favor of whatever it takes to make sure that we are treated equally in that regard.

How much are you spending on your campaign? Where does your funding come from? Do you feel there should be a cap on the amount of money a student spends on a campaign?

I'm spending approximately $20 on my campaign. That money was obtained the old-fashioned way, work. I feel there should be a spending cap for student campaigns, approximately $200. Spending any more than around $200 is a little extravagant. As I see it, the quality of a candidate shouldn't be measured by the size of his or her pocketbook, but by the quality of character he or she pos-

What will you do to make the campus a better place for students, if elected?

There are several issues I'd wish to address. First of all, I'd like to look at the way people are elected to ASUI positions—by a 20 percent voter turnout. I think this turnout says a lot about student's feelings towards the ASUI as a whole. They don't view it as a governing body that really matters; thus they don't vote. I'd like to change this, I want to see the ASUI actively promote itself to students and show them what the ASUI can do for them. Perhaps this way, students will be more likely and more comfortable to come to the ASUI with their concerns. Also, I believe maintained communication between myself, as a senator, and the people I represent is key to an effective relationship between ASUI and students. I want to make myself as readily available as possible, from meeting at regularly scheduled times to using email to voice concerns. I'm concerned about more specific issues as well, such as the quality of campus lighting, networking with Washington State University to get "big name" productions to the area, and using on-line voting in the next ASUI election. I believe improvement in all the stated areas would make campus a better place.

I feel the role of the ASUI should be to serve as a body which best represents the concerns, views and ideals of the entire student population of the University of Idaho.

am a graduate student in the College of Forestry since fall 1994. I did my M.S. in urban forestry from Michigan State University. I am running the election of ASUI senate. I have been actively involved in various student organizations during my academic career. I have the opportunity to closely observe the activities of different students groups on campus particularly ASUI. I have found the performance of ASUI quiet unsatisfactory on various student issues. Most of the time their meeting never lasts more the 10-15 minutes. Which is like a joke with the students issues and gives the impression that they don't take students matters seriously. It is a student organization. Its aim is to solve student problems not to use it as a platform for spare time activities. As a senator I will try to focus on issues of student concern like health care, and housing problems etc. and would work on ways and means of utilizing the ASUI funds for the betterment of student community. And will try to enhance the funding to the different student groups on camps. I will also work for the issues concerning International and graduate students. There is a lack of graduate students participation in ASUI activities. I am running the elections independently and would extend my full cooperation to elected members to make ASUI an effective student body. I would strongly request the silence majority to come forward and vote on Nov. 15. It is the time to make a difference.

- 4) That Mike Campbell is a mega-stud.
- 3) What the hell, you used up your financial aid and can't buy beer, this is cheap entertainment.
 - 2) It is quicker and safer than sex.
 - ...and the number one reason to vote in the ASUI elections;
- 1) YOU can make a difference.

But seriously; we at the Argonaut have wrestled with the possibility of recommending candidates. And though some of you conspiracy theorists believe we have an agenda, we have decided against endorsements. The reason is simple.

This is our school, we are all in this together. We will endorse no particular candidates because we believe you are smart enough to do that for yourself. And we've done what we can to make the election process as fair as possible. We ask little of you in return.

What do we want? Not much. We ask you to take the time to vote. The election booths will be placed in strategic areas all over campus, just stop by and fill out a ballot. A couple of minutes out of your day.

The Argonaut will provide election coverage in the form of candidate profiles. See page 5.

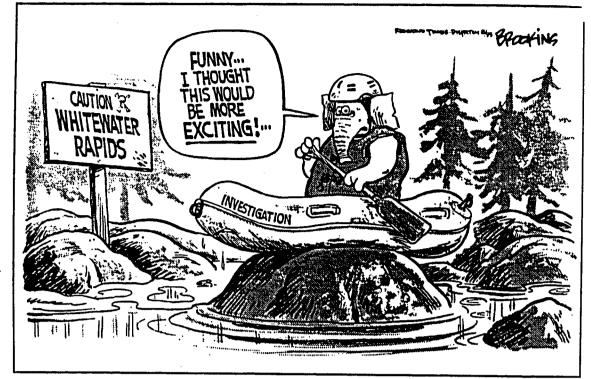

Turnout at the polls in the past has been dismal at best. Last year less than 20 percent voted. A lot of important things happened this year—and will continue next year: plans are being laid for the University Center, a presidential search is underway; engineering will continue to be an issue; and there is always budget debate. Who knows what else will happen? You need to ask yourself a question: Do I care? If the answer is no, stop reading. If it's yes, continue. Do you feel represented? Will you take the initiative to be represented?

Take an hour out of your day and read the candidate profiles. Get an idea of where our student leaders come from. Do you agree with them? More importantly, do they agree with you? Will you feel better represented by a conservative or liberal? Or would it be a Greek, a GDI or someone who lives off campus? Do you want to see change in the way student government works? Or are you happy with the way things are?

All are legitimate questions, and I know there are more. I can't even begin to scratch the surface of potential issues or concerns of the student body; you need to become involved. Let the president and senate know how you feel.

It takes only a minute: voting.

At the bottom of the spiral

he darkness has a hunger that's insatiable, and the lightness has a call that's hard to hear...

Life certainly does have its ups and downs. Sometimes the downs seem to outnumber the ups. Sometimes the downs never go Depression is something we've all dealt with at one time or another. Some of us have dealt with it more often and for a greater length of time than we care to think about. I personally fought with it for over 15 years.

Depression can be caused by several things. Holidays get you down, winter is too dark, bad things happen, the stress is just too much, your relationships are crap or maybe you have no reason at all.

Maybe it's absolutely nothing. Maybe it's absolutely everything.

I have been to the edge and back. I have seen the dark and terrible monster from both sides.

I have been on the downward spiral. Some of my best friends have been there, too.

I have seen them cut their flesh, abuse their bodies and hurt the people they love most. I have heard their cries for help, their yells of anger and their screams of torment.

I have lost some of them forever. Some of them have almost lost

Corinne Flowers

It is a scary, difficult, and exhausting place to be. Many times I thought that I could not win, would never win.

Perhaps the most terrible part of all is knowing that there is nothing that you can do to help—and knowing that there is nothing that anyone can do to help you.

The despair that a person feels cannot be effectively communicated to another; it is deeply personal and unique.

When you're hurting, sometimes it's difficult not to shut everyone out.

If someone you love is struggling, all you can do is be there. No amount of effort on your part can bring them back from the place they are in.

When you are depressed, you are very much alone. No one can walk your path, no one can live inside of you to feel your pain.

But I know it. And I have overcome it. It has taken me my entire life, but I have overcome it. And what I want you to know is that you can overcome it, too. It's not easy, but it really can't get much harder now, can it?

Talk to whomever you need to talk to about it. Talk to a counselor, talk to a friend, call them up in the middle of the night if you have to. Cry on someone's shoulder. Find someone who has been there, because they know where you are, they can see past the darkness that eats away at you, they can see the person inside who is trying to get out.

If you need to be on medication, get on it. If you need to take a vacation, do it. Do whatever it takes to get out of this alive.

But don't give up. Hold on a little bit longer, hang on a little bit tighter. Life is worth the struggle. The world is a better place for your having been in it and will grieve for its loss at your absence.

Someone once told me, "We are born alone, we die alone," but that simply isn't true.

When we are born there are a hundred people awaiting our arrival, and when we die we take a thousand with us. What we do in between is entirely up to us.

Believe in whatever you have to in order to get by. Grab onto it and don't ever let it go.

Because I promise you, it gets better, it gets easier, and it gets much brighter.

Look and listen for the light; it's faint, but it's there.

http://www.uidaho.edu/~Anyone.out/there?/Ididn't/think.so about the Internet is how it's supposed to turn an antagonistic and dimwitted earthbound population into a generation of lilted-out multiethnic souls who have nothing better to do than carry candles as they march, pixel by pixel over a green cyberspace mountain, offering everyone a Pentium Pro and a smile.

As much as we may wish for a Star Trek universe, we are literally thousands of light years away from such a place. And the road there is certainly not the Information Superhighway as we have it now.

First of all, not everyone in the world is hooked up. The Internet is a tool of the elite class and will remain so until the technologies involved drop in price enough to become available to as many people as possible. Not every household in the world can afford a $1,500 computer and has enough cash lying around to pay the phone bills. Some households have yet to be hooked up to the Electricity Autobahn and the Plumbing

Brian Davidson

Carnival Funhouse Ride.

Certainly these more fundamental needs should be more of a priority than having 24-hour access to computers in Paris that store the Human Genome Model.

And yes, I said elites, and like it or not that includes every single soul attending the University of Idaho—even the Democrats. It matters not that many of us cannot afford to eat anything more than Top Ramen. The road to Elitesville is paved with university degrees, not gold. Until this technology—and electricity—are made available in some form to everyone, elitism will never fade.

Though the Internet has intellectual roots, this silicon-plated highway of ours is swiftly degrading to the point where it is no better than the programs available on television. Miss Friends or ER on TV last night? Dial up their home pages and get your fix—that is if you didn't record it, or know someone who did, so you can watch it anyway. And we all wonder why 24 hours don't go as far as they used to.

In addition, let's not forget as the Net brings us 'together' in frantic exchanges of ones and zeroes, it isolates us from real living, breathing human beings who are all around us. What are the benefits in being chums with computerphiles in Illinois, Arizona or Japan if one doesn't even know how many people (let alone who) live in the house next door?

I'll admit that I've bought into the Internet myself. Started small with an e-mail account. Then this semester, had to put together a home page for a class assignment. I still mess about with it and am starting another page for my church group. But what is it all really? Simplistic short stories, boring old Argonaut columns and links to peacebuilding sites such as the Scooby Doo and Space Ghost home pages. I've invested hours into building this home page.

What do I get for it? A little euphoric thrill every time I log in and see the counter at the bottom has jumped a few notches. Some unknowns have been rummaging through my tagged garage sale items without bothering to get to know the person behind the cute pictures and pixeled words on the screen.

Chat groups are even worse. How is it we can carry on semi-intelligent conversations with people halfway across the continent and can think of only grunts, "Howyadoinimfines" and phrases that rhyme with 'duck shoe' to share with the real people we see? A better question is how can we continue in these semi-intelligent conversations even after the majority of the messages being shared sound like rejected dialogue for Beavis and Butt-Head cartoons.

The term 'chat group' itself is an oxymoron, since the 'chatters' do not chat, but rather type their way to carpal tunnel syndrome as their vocal cords atrophy.

Using this technology does not make people friendly and open to new ideas. Studies have shown that people become even more boorish, pigheaded and verbally violent once they strap on the shield of assumed Internet Invisibility.

Use of this technology can make some people down-right ornery.

A certain professor of mine, who will remain nameless until I have report card in hand, is a bona fide expert when it comes to computers and the Internet. This professor is also one of the most superior-acting and condescending critters I have ever met. We ask questions about basic computer knowledge in the hopes this professor will use vast stores of knowledge to aid us in our sorry little searches for a college diploma. We get answers along the lines of: "Oh, that's too simple." And that is it.

Letters to the Editor

Vote for Tesnohlidek

In tomorrow's election, University of Idaho students have one clear choice in the election of ASUI Vice President: JOHN TESNOHLIDEK. John is the only candidate capable of representing students, improving student government and successfully carrying out the responsibilities of this office.

When I think of what a leader needs, three characteristics come to mind: leadership, experience and drive. John Tesnohlidek possesses each of these qualities.

John has continually proven his abilities at UI. John is not only involved in many campus and community activities but is also a driving force in each and holds leadership positions in many. Examples include the Student Activities Task Force, International Business Club, Campus Safety Task Force and Greeks Against Rape.

For experience, John was elected an ASUI senator his freshman year and has served well ever since. In these two years, he has served students in many capacities and is now chair of the Finance Committee and vice chair of the Ways and Means Committee. He is an active member of the Programs Board and serves as ASUI parliamentarian.

And finally, John's drive to implement change on this campus is extraordinary. His interest in improving student-life is genuine and commendable. I can think of no one who would more effectively serve as a strong voice for students than John Tesnohlidek. For OUR benefit, I strongly urge all students to elect JOHN TESNOHLIDEK to ASUI vice president tomorrow.

Rumors about Manis untrue

My name is Christa Manis, and I am running for ASUI president. I am writing to correct some misconceptions about my candidacy.

There are rumors designed to anonymously attack my character which I have worked hard to build around honesty, integrity and accountability. I stand by my word and work hard for students.

I would like for this election to focus on real issues which affect this campus. I would like to see more lighting on campus. I am concerned with keeping student fees low and making the student voice in Boise heard by legislators loud and clear. These are examples of issues that I find important to the union of students, the ASUI.

While I served as president of the Associated Students of North Idaho College, the NIC student senate became the center of a controversial debate involving the funding of the Lesbian, Gay, and Bisexual Association. The student senate repeatedly voted to not fund this club. As president, I did not have the power to control how the senate voted. I feel similar clubs on this campus have fulfilled the necessary requirements to be recognized as an official ASUI organization.

As president of the ASUI, please be assured I will not take club funding away from any group which fulfills the necessary requirements and is recognized by the ASUI.

I encourage everyone to get to know the candidates and the facts. I would like to be your president, and I feel I have the experience and the genuine interest to be an effective leader who makes a difference. Please get out and vote on Nov. 15. I need your help to focus this election on issues which matter to UI students.

---Christa Manis

Vote for Jay Feldman

This year's student government elections have centered around the issue of tailgate parties. I wanted to take a moment to address a subject I have not had an opportunity to address—that of the general apathy of students toward student government. Before you stop reading, this is not going to be a pep talk to convince you to get involved but a letter to explain my views, which I hope will be important to you.

I have identified two problems with the ASUI. First, I see a lack of student awareness of the role of student government and second, the narrow perspective of those in office discourages involvement.

Even as a candidate for the senate, I am still not fully aware of the entire role student government plays. It's most important role certainly is as the liaison between students and the faculty and administration. It also manages a budget of almost $1,000,000 of your fees to be used to enrich your experience at University of Idaho. It is clear the vast majority of students are unaware of its functions and even less aware of how student government can be useful to them.

To resolve this problem, and in an effort to make ASUI accessible to students, I will work with the Argonaut in writing a weekly column. In it, I will explain the work of the senate for the week as well as include ongoing reporting about the role of ASUI.

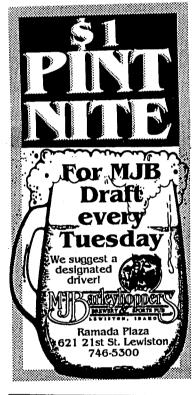

My second goal in conjunction with this project is to redefine the ASUI to better serve your needs. It is clear that student government has been running on automatic without taking a hard look at just why they work the way they do. In another part of the Argonaut today, you can see my piece on tailgating which also addresses the issue of the Gem yearbook. In this explanation of my views, it is not my intention to single out the Gem for execution, but rather to demonstrate the type of thinking that currently permeates student government and that I want to challenge if elected.

This misguided thinking is spawned from the narrow views and unwillingness of current and past senators to ask hard questions. This was demonstrated to me on Friday evening at the KUOI candidate's forum. I was amused to see a current senator's surprised reaction to my statement that the average age of a UI student is about 26. It appears some senators cannot perceive there are views other than their personal ideologies. This lack of awareness tends to repel those that do not share their views which in turn creates our pervasive apathy. Further, it would never occur to them to change the ASUI and bring it into the 21st century.

We currently have a minority using a narrow perspective to control student government when what we need is representation of the whole by those who understand and support the needs of the diverse population of the student body. Only by having a larger vision of UI as a university which is not limited to a single viewpoint can student government meet those needs.

I am a 43-year-old philosophy major in my junior year—not a member of any campus clique, and my main goal in running for senate is to challenge the status quo and to bring all perspectives into the discussion. If you would like a student government tailored to serve all the members of this campus, a student government which is not afraid to ask the hard questions and fight for student control of the future of UI, then please vote for Jay Feidman for ASUI senate on Wednesday, November 15. Thank you.

Article on Manis biased

I would like to take this time to respond to the article in the Nov. 7 edition of the Argonaut that was about Christa Manis. I found this article to be very one-sided and negative towards Manis.

First of all, John Tesnohlidek's statement about Manis being "out for herself" was quite inappropriate. Such a statement should only be added if there is evidence to support such a judgment (which there was not). If anything, Manis is self-sacrificial for the student body, both with her time and abilities. She has more than once taken time to come to the officers of the RHA and has asked what the students in the residence halls want from Another statement I found very inappropriate and blatantly incorrect was that made by one of Manis' hall mates, who stated that Manis resigned her hall presidency to avoid impeachment. The truth is Manis' time was being spread out over too many involvements. As a result, she resigned her hall presidency. I am a hall president myself, and by her actions, I do not feel Manis abandoned RHA or her hall. She did what was best by focusing her skill where they can be used for the student body most efficiently.

I would like to point out that the Argonaut is "The Student's Voice."

The Argonaut should not be used for slandering individuals or for political purposes. It should be used for educating the student body in an unbiased manner. The power of the media should not be forgotten and more importantly, must not be abused. Publishing biased and false information is an attempt to manipulate readers and I find that insulting. As a student at the University of Idaho, I would like to hear the truth about issues which directly affect me and the rest of the student body. Thank you.

Article on Manis unfair

In Tuesday's Argonaut, some of you probably read an article about the "controversial" Christa Manis and her drive for ASUI President. I have met her before, and this didn't sound like the same person that I know. This started to bug me and so I did what I thought was necessary. I went to the ASUI senate office, and I asked her about the issues discussed in the article.

When I asked Manis about North Idaho College and her opposition of a sexually-oriented group, I heard the entire story. I heard how the NIC senate was opposed to the group and as student body president with no veto power, she was spokesperson for their views. Their reasoning for this opposition was not related to the sexual orientation of the group in any way, but rather the way in which the group presented itself. "In order for a group to get funding, there are certain things that a group must go through first" said Manis. She continued to explain how the group was not meeting those standards which was the reason for the opposition.

When I questioned Manis about being impeached from her hall presidency, she told me this was the first time she had ever heard that word associated with her situation and she seemed certain that the Resident Director's office would give the same story. So I went to the office and the people there told me something even more interesting. They told me the information is confidential and the source who mentioned the impeachment could not be trusted. As far as losing valuable leadership, Manis left when she did so that someone else could go on the leadership retreat and receive the necessary training, which is exactly what happened.

I am very disappointed in the article, and the Argonaut, for printing that article on a news page instead of an opinion page. I find Christa Manis to be a wonderful person in both formal and informal settings and will honestly say that, in my opinion, she will make a wonderful president. The slander against her has absolutely no truth. Christa Manis has my vote for ASUI President on Nov. 15.

Column ignorant and selfish

After reading the editorial of Nov. 7, I was truly amazed at the selfishness, ignorance, and inhumanity shown by Mr. Wright. Actually, his statements shouldn't have surprised me—it is the same selfish rhetoric that seems to run wild throughout the country. What I'm referring to are Mr. Wright's stated beliefs about the "horrors" of overpopulation and the "benefits" of abortion. The first idea of his that I would like to dispute is that of abortion. Abortion is simply a selfish solution that results in the death of a human being. In referring to the number of abortions performed since Roe vs. Wade was instituted, Mr. Wright says: "How much sooner would overpopulation occur if those millions of babies had been born." I guess Mr. Wright's personal food supply and personal space is more important than the life of a child.

A statement made by Mother Theresa puts abortion into perspective. In February 1994 while in Washington, D.C., she said "If we accept that a mother can kill even her own child, how can we tell other people not to kill each other?...Any country that accepts abortion is not teaching its people to love, but to use any violence to get what they want...And that is what is the greatest destroyer of peace today—abortion, which brings people to such blindness." This is a statement from someone who has seen poverty, misery and overpopulation that Mr. Wright couldn't even imagine. And yet she names abortion as one of the greatest causes of unhappiness and misery in the world.

As to the "looming problem of overpopula-tion," I'm sorry Mr. Wright, but overpopulation is not the cause of the problems you presented, such as lack of food. According to a Sept. 12, 1994 article by Stephen Budiansky in the U.S. News and World Report, scientific studies report that even under conservative estimates, the Earth has the ability to provide food for 80 billion people, eight times the expected population of the world by the year 2050. One report also says that the Earth has a gross potential to produce enough food for 1,000 billion people! I guess those babies would have had something to eat after all.

The real problem isn't overpopulation. The real problems of the world are greed, hate, selfishness and lack of love for our fellow humans. Policies like abortion are just extensions of those problems. If we really want to help the world be a better place, we need to start promoting ideas like personal responsibility, love, peace, faith and hope. And we need to start practicing them ourselves. Only then will anybody's existence on Mother Earth be worthwhile.

Tesnohlidek for VP

I would like to encourage all University of Idaho students concerned about the direction of student government on this campus to vote for John Tesnohlidek for ASUI vice president tomorrow.

John has been an ASUI senator for two years and has served the UI student body well. John is a true leader and representative, constantly putting the wishes of others before his own. John has always made it a point to vote the way his living groups decide, even when their views conflict with his own. This is what we need as students: a vice president who puts others-those for whom he is elected to serve—ahead of himself.

I have full faith in Tesnohlidek's leadership ability and his potential to become an even more effective voice for UI students. John finishes all that he begins and is driven by a desire to make a difference. Please join me in ensuring that our student government will be led by a leader such as this: vote John Tesnohlidek for ASUI Vice President!

Be courteous to your neighbors

This letter is written as a formal apology from the social committee at the University of Idaho law school to those residing near the Latah County Fairgrounds.

The social committee sponsored a Halloween Party at the Latah County Fairgrounds on Oct. 27, 1995. There was a live band at the party that played until approximately 1:30 a.m. Saturday. The building echoed and vibrated the sound of the band beyond the property line, and while it did not sound loud to those of us at the party, it was loud for the residents in the area.

After the social committee learned that a neighbor complained about the noise, they instructed the band to turn the sound down and the band complied with this request. However, unbeknownst to the social committee, the noise emanating from the building was still loud and the band eventually had to be shut down. We are truly sorry for any disturbance we made to the surrounding neigh-

OUTDOOR TIP OF THE WEEK:

This is a tough time of year to be an outdoors kind of person. The wet weather, cold temps and lack of snow are pretty discouraging to those of us who like to play outside. My best advice for getting though the next few weeks is this: do the Snow Dance. This has no real set steps and no particular music but it is very versatile and goes over well at parties or in bars where many sad gear freaks have been hibernating lately. The most important thing to do is dance with reckless abandon to really loud music, preferably rockclassical or Muzak doesn't usually work as well. Another requirement is the utmost concentration on snow. Think about its many forms, big flakes, little flakes, deep powdery drifts, wet snow-ball making snow, anything you can think of. We try to discourage thinking about anowmaking machines because it implies a need for such things, which we do not want. Another valuable hint is to try and find a partner or two. Multiple people participating increases the positive snow-energy output and increases the likelihood of a good blizzard. If this doesn't work the first time, don't be discouraged. Dance this dance every chance you get. Don't be embarrassed, many of the people staring at you do

Muzzleloading a blast from past he history of the Northwest is abundant with tales of many different tribes of Native Americans and mountain men during the early 1800s.

The Northwest territories consisted of what is now known as British Columbia and Alberta, Canada, Washington, Oregon, Idaho, parts of Montana, Wyoming and Utah.

A need in the east for fur to make felt for hats, prompted many men to head for the Northwest to harvest the abundant animals rumored to be there. The mountain men's search for beaver and other animals for their high-priced fur led to many conflicts. Native Americans had to contend with an invasion of men from Canada and the United States, both trying to beat the other to the wealth of fur.

With the mountain men, came traps, metal knives, metal strikers for flint and steel fire starting and wool blankets. However, their most prized possession was the muzzleloader rifle.

This rifle out powered any weapon of the Indians'. It could also bring down large game like moose, elk or deer within 100 yards. The average caliber back then ranged from .36 to .69, with the preferred calibers of .45 and .50.

A muzzleloader rifle used black powder for propellent and a cast lead conical bullet or round ball for a projectile. Ignition was created by a primed cap on the percussion or flint and steel on the flintlock.

Accessories included linen or cotton patching material for a gasket between the round ball and the inside of the barrel. Conical bullets had grease in the cast grooves that circled the bullet instead of patching material. The container used to keep the powder dry was usually made from horn or brass. A powder measure was necessary to make sure the charge was accurate.

A short start is a small rod mounted to a wooden ball or part of antler. It is needed to start the bullet or ball down the barrel. A ram rod is then used to push the projectile the rest of the way down the barrel and seat it.

By 1850, the fur trade era was over for the Northwest. Silk had replaced the need for fur in the East. The time of the mountain man was over.

During the last 30 years, a new wave of mountain men and women have arrived. They are not here to trap and take fur animals for profit. They are trying keep the Northwest history of the mountain man and Native Americans' alive. Many will take their pre-1840 designed weapons and clothing to a rendezvous to reenact a portion of history for a weekend.

Some will use the muzzleloader for hunting. Now days, the preferred calibers are .50 and .54. Both of these are very capable of bringing down a deer, elk, moose or bear within 100 yards.

If you want a muzzleloader, you need to decide on the type and twist of the barrel you will need. A conical bullet will shoot more accurate in a 1-48 to 1-66 twist barrel, while a round ball will be more accurate with a 1-66 to 1-72 twist. A longer barrel will also increase the speed of the bullet or

When choosing the stock, a flat butt plate is placed into your shoulder like a conventional rifle. However, the more curved the butt plate the more the rifle is place out on your arm.

There are many different view-points on flintlock verses' percussion cap for the lock. Both are good and work equally well if kept dry. For hunting, I prefer a caplock or percussion. I can usually keep the caps dry easier and my weapon usually has less malfunctions than a flintlock.

Before loading your weapon, make sure the inside of the barrel is clean and dry. After each shot, blow down the barrel to cool any sparks that might be in the barrel. This will help prevent pre-ignition of the next powder charge. Carefully measure out the amount and kind of powder recommended by your weapons manufacturer. Pour the powder down the barrel. NEVER POUR POWDER DIRECTLY FROM YOUR POWDER CONTAINER. Doing so usually results in too large of a charge.

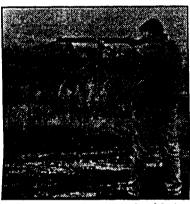

If you are using a round ball, place a pre-moistened patch over the end of the barrel. The patch can be moistened with a lubricant or spit. Place the ball in the center of the patch and drive it down the inside of the barrel with your short start. If you are using a greased conical, no patch is necessary. Using the ram rod, drive the projectile down onto the powder. When you can throw the ram rod down the barrel and it bounces, the bullet is seated properly.

Place a cap on the nipple if you are using a caplock. Place a small amount of 4f powder or equivalent in the flash pan if you are using a flint lock. You are now ready to reenact the past.

Used for hunting or pleasure shooting, muzzleloading is a great way to spend a day.

Winter driving tricky without caution

Erik Marone

Staf

In a few days, many of us will be traveling for Thanksgiving break. Every year many students demonstrate that they have never driven in snow before, or have forgotten how over the summer.

Latah County Deputy Mike Jenkins suggests some driving methods that will help reduce the risk of getting in an accident. "The major thing is that people need to slow down," Jenkins said. Driving in snow and rain reduces visibility and people get caught off guard. Drivers also need to use extra caution in shady areas on highways and county roads. Without direct sun to warm the pavement, black ice remains on the road surface, presenting one of the biggest winter driving risks.

"If you need to slow down in snow for an emergency or start to slide, put your car in neutral and use your brakes slightly," Jenkins advises. Taking your car out of gear will take power away from the drive wheels.

Jenkins advises people to take the few minutes in the morning to let your windows completely defrost, not only for safety, but to avoid citations. "Basically what it is, is a moving infraction for obstructed vision," Jenkins said. "I see a lot of people driving around with this little spot they can see out of." A properly working heater in your car keeps windows defrosted and will help keep you warm if you are stranged.

The most important things to remember are driving at a lower speed and wearing your seatbelt, Jenkins emphasizes. The best way to survive an accident is to avoid them in the first place, but you should be prepared in case you are in one.

Your car should always have at least a half tank of gas. That will keep water out of your fuel lines that might freeze, and reduce your chances of getting stranded.

Cars tend to work a lot harder in the winter, making them more likely to break down if not properly maintained. Jenkins advises winter travelers to keep an eye on your car's fluids before embarking on longer trips, especially the oil and anti-freeze coolant. Make sure your belts are tight and in good condition. Winter wiper blades that are in good condition keep snow and ice off your windshield.

"Your car should always have at least a half tank of gas," Jenkins said. "That will keep water out of your fuel lines that might freeze, and reduce your chances of getting stranded."

Either studded snow tires or all-season radials should be adequate for most highway conditions, but Jenkins says carrying a pair of chains in your car is a good idea. Many times they will be enough to give your car traction to pull the car off the shoulder if necessary.

Other items Jenkins recommends to keep in your car in case of an emergency are a blanket, drinking water, dried food, a fire extinguisher, extra anti-freeze coolant and oil. If your car does break down, flares, cones and reflector triangles alert other drivers and signal distress. If you need assistance, open the hood of your car and leave it up.

If you have to stop for an extended period of time, such as at the base of a pass that is temporarily closed, Jenkins says it is OK to leave your engine running for heat, but be sure to leave the windows open a bit to avoid carbon monoxide buildup in your car. "That is where the blankets may come in handy," Jenkins said. You can keep warm without depleting your fuel supply and reduce the chance of excessive carbon monoxide exposure.

Using a little extra caution while driving in winter conditions will help keep you on the road and out of accidents. A little preparation can help make a breakdown or getting stuck less of an ordeal, and possibly save your life. Drive carefully as you head home for break and have a great Thanksgiving.

Outdoor swap offers great deals on gear

Jennifer Swift
Outdoors Editor

Approximately 700 people attended the annual Outdoor Equipment Swap and Sale last Tuesday night in the Student Union Ballroom.

"I think it went real well, A lot of people went away with new stuff and low prices," said Mark Wedeking, UI ski team director. The table rental fees went to support the ski team in their efforts to send some members to the nationals in Mt. Snow, Vt.

Steve Mims, Outdoor Rental Center manager, said they sold almost everything they had to offer except a few frame packs and wet suit jackets. Mims, who has worked at the last five swaps said, "I'd say that the event has grown every year. It has now become a full-fledged swap for the community." The swap started out as just the rental center selling old equipment to raise money for new stuff. Now there are businesses as well as private sellers that come back each year. "A lot of people show of, there is a lot of energy there," said Mims.

All the money raised from the sale of used rental center equipment goes back into buying new gear. The goal is to keep the equipment updated and in new condition, said Mims.

The Student Union Ballroom was packed from the time the swap started at 7 p.m. It was a good idea to get there early in order to get the best deals. Everything from sail boards to water filters and home-made polar fleece quilts were on sale, all at super cheap prices. There were give-aways all night from KUOI who broadcast live from the swap. Prizes included CDs, lift tickets, hats and gloves.

The UI ski team showed the Warren Miller film Endless Winter the following night. All seats were sold out in a room with a capacity of over 380 people. "The place was packed. There were people standing," said Wedeking.

Overall the swap and the Warren Miller film were a great success. If you missed it this time around you have to wait until next year but the wait is worth it.

Alalanche victims found

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP)—Search teams on Sunday rescued 85 people trapped for two days by an avalanche near Mount Everest, and dug out the bodies of 18 Japanese and Nepalese trekkers.

In another deadly accident, 11 people died after being buried in a landslide in western Nepal. The victims include a Canadian, a Irish woman and two other foreigners, police said.

The Japanese and Nepalese trekkers died Friday after returning from the Gokyo peak, 11 miles southwest of Everest. The avalanche struck their camp at the village of Panga, said an official of the Trans-Himalayan Trekking Co., which arranged the trip for the Japanese.

Rescuers were searching for three more Japanese, two Nepalese guides and two Nepalese tour operators, said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity. One Nepalese guide was found alive, he said.

Another 85 sick or injured trekkers, half of them foreigners, were flown by helicopter to a hospital in a nearby town, said Home Ministry spokesman Gopendra Bahadur Pandey.

Their nationalities were not immediately known.

The avalanche has worsened already poor communications to the mountains, and authorities did not have any other details of the rescue, Pandey said.

In the other accident, 11 people were buried in a landslide at the village of Bagarchhap, 110 miles northwest of the capital of Katmandu, Pandey said.

The landslide followed heavy rains Thursday and Friday.

RRTA moves trail, raffles airline tickets

Jennifer Swift
Outdoors Editor

The Resource Recreation and Tourism Association recently helped the Idaho Department of Fish and Game relocate a trail at Spring Valley Reservoir.

Thirteen members of the RRTA devoted a Saturday to moving a section of trail out of an area subject to spring flooding. The members got an 8 a.m. start and were able to finish by 5:30 p.m. They successfully moved 550 yards of trail to a slightly higher elevation so detours around flooded areas will be unnecessary, thereby reducing adverse effects on the surrounding habitat.

rounding habitat.

The RRTA is busy with other projects also. They are holding a raffle for two round-trip tickets to anywhere Horizon Air flies. Tickets sell for $2 or three for $5. The money earned will be used to send students to a professional conference in the spring. There is a booth set up in the west main floor lobby of the Forestry building on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays. The drawing will be held at the Boise State game in the Kibbie Dome Nov. 18. The airline tickets are good until June 30, 1996.

The RRTA currently has 35 members and is growing rapidly. Rob Buchert, co-president, prides the group on their student participation on and off campus. Recent activities the club has participated in include a Climbing Wall workshop, working concessions at the Chris LeDoux concert, an Experimental Forest clean-up, a trip to Radium Hot Springs in Canada and they also sent delegates to the Idaho Recreation and Parks Association Conference.

For information on joining the RRTA, all majors are welcome, call Rob Buchert at 883-4759 or e-mail buch9333@uidaho.edu.

Vandals deserve playoff bid

Mark Vanderwall

With Christmas coming early to the Bay Area this year, I must humbly apologize to all the devoted 49er fans who believed that Elvis could be resurrected from the dead.

Reincarnation was the theme for the San Francisco 49ers on Sunday, as Elvis (Grbac that is) proved he could be the King once more, as he was in Michigan. On a day that will forever be remembered by my wallet, their is one of you Bay Area fanatics that is surely drinking up all the profits of your loyalties to the red, white and gold.

since the beginning of time, when Mammoths and Dinosaurs played on the minds of everyone they encountered, so to has the question of how playoff teams are chosen?

As Mammoths and Dinosaurs are now extinct, people are concentrating frivolously on how to get the best teams into the playoffs. After a dismal start, Idaho has beaten the likes of Montana, which was ranked fifth before the defeat, Northern Arizona which was ranked 13th before the Idaho game and now Northern lowa which, was ranked 15th last week has fallen prey to the Vandals as well.

With a win over Boise State next weekend, the Vandals will have thrashed yet another ranked team, finishing the season as one of the strongest I-AA teams around, but at 6-4 will it be enough to get them into the playoffs?

I think that the current playoff system focuses too much on teams rankings, rather than getting the 16 best teams together for the post season. Idaho is sitting in a more or less must win situation come this weekend, both for pride's sake and for the sake of having any chance at the postseason as well.

Idaho's defense is quickly maturing after a big outing by Montana's offense for 43 points, the Vandals have held opponents to only 17 points a game in their last three games, winning the last two in nailbiters.

Idaho has proven time and time again that it can get motivated for the big game, but this season it is winning the games it has been questioned in and losing the ones it is supposed to handle with ease.

In Idaho's defense, I find it absurd that one of the greatest programs in I-AA has to play six games on the road and only four at home. Idaho is averaging 14,418 fans per-game so far this season, with perhaps the greatest attendance game to be played this weekend against in-state rival Boise State. With many of the I-AA teams playing 11 games, Idaho in my opinion was also hampered by two byes, within a three week span, that could have very well affected its play against Montana State.

With the pieces starting to come together like a jigsaw puzzle, Idaho has finally found those pieces that had fallen on the floor so the puzzle couldn't be completed. Now that the puzzle is nearly finished I am going to go out on a limb and say that the

UI kicker leads Vandals to win

Dan Eckles

Tor the second straight week the Idaho Vandals pulled off a come-from-behind road victory over a nationally ranked opponent. Two weeks ago that task seemed about as likely as the Bad News Bears beating the Chicago Bears.

A week after dropping Northern Arizona in Flagstaff, Idaho used the strong leg of kicker Ryan Woolverton to upset the 15-ranked Northern Iowa Panthers 16-12 in a non-conference NCAA football matchup Saturday in Cedar Falls, Iowa. The Vandals had lost their first four road games of the season all by seven points or less.

Woolverton kicked three field goals, including a 25-yard boot with 14:17 remaining in the contest to put Idaho ahead for good. The senior's 37-yard attempt with 2:39 left in the game split the uprights to put the UI crew up 16-12 and ensured the win.

The home loss was just the second ever in 37 regular season contests for the Panthers, dating back to 1989. The only other loss came to McNeese State, which is currently ranked first in the Division 1-AA poll, last season.

Northern Iowa's Matt Waller put the Panthers ahead 12-10 with a 49-yard field goal late in the third quarter, but the Vandals responded immediately. Idaho marched down field with a 14-play drive that covered 69 yards, moving the Vandals to the UNI eight-yard line and setting up Woolverton's game-winning kick. The key play on the drive came on third down with the Vandals on their own 40-yard line. UI quarter-back Eric Hisaw hooked up with freshman wideout Yaphet Warren for a 28-yard gain to give the Vandals a first down.

The Panthers had opportunities in the fourth quarter, but Waller's 25-yard field-goal sailed wide left with 8:50 left in the game and five minutes later UNI quarterback Chris Berg coughed up the ball, giving the Vandals possession deep in the Panthers' zone. Three plays later Woolverton nailed his final field goal.

Idaho's running game got a shot in the arm despite the loss of senior Lavonni Kidd to an ankle injury. True freshman Jerome Thomas became the third Vandal starter of the year at running back and showed he deserves to stay. The 5-foot 10-inch 175-pound Paso Robles, Calif. native, ran wild over the Panther defense, finishing his first collegiate start with 122 yards on 30 carries.

The sellout crowd of 16,324 watched the Vandal defense run roughshod over one of the nation's most potent offenses. UNI signal caller Berg came into Saturday's clash rated the nation's most efficient passer, but was thwarted throughout the game by intense pressure from the Vandal front. Idaho chalked up six sacks and stymied Berg into an 8-of-26 passing performance, including three interceptions.

The Vandals outgained the Panthers 346 to 227 and controlled the line of scrimmage with ease, holding the Panthers to just 34 rushing yards while amassing 136 yards of their own on the ground. Not surprisingly, Idaho dominated the clock, retaining possession for 36:50 compared to UNI's 23:10.

The Vandals only touchdown came on a 1-yard run by Dave Longoria at the 3:18 mark of the first quarter. Idaho's Tommy James picked off an errant Berg pass to give the Vandals the ball on the UNI 29-yard line. Seven plays later Longoria rumbled into the endzone, putting Idaho up 7-3. The lead changed hands five times Saturday.

Idaho (25-4, 13-1 Big Sky) is riding a 44-match home winning streak, the fifth longest streak in NCAA history.

Boise State, the fourth seed in the tournament, gallops into Memorial Gym Friday night at 7:30 p.m. Idaho State (No. 2) and Northern Arizona (No. 3) play Friday at 5 p.m. The winners play Saturday at 7:30 p.m. for the Big Sky Championship and an automatic berth into the NCAA Tournament.

Friday's match in Bozeman proved Idaho could win on the road—handily, too. Junior setter Lynne Hyland dished out 40 assists and Tzvetelina Yanchulova and Beth Craig combined for 32 kills in the 15-11, 15-1, 15-9 romp.

"We're siding out very well right now," UI coach Tom Hilbert said. "We're getting more people involved in our offense. We have the best setter in the league and it's nice to see all the different things that we can do with her and the offense."

The Vandals outdug the Bobcats 54-40 and MSU hit only .156 for the match. Idaho hit poorly in the first game (.026), but rebounded with a .426 hitting percentage in the second game.

MSU's season ended at 16-10 overall and 5-9 in conference play. Idaho vs. Montana

The BSU-Idaho rivalry is doing double-time this weekend with Friday's volleyball clash and Saturday's football game.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY, ARG!

Fab-freshman running into success

Injuries, solid performances against NAU, UNI lead to starting job

Damon Barkdull

If it were up to loudmouth ESPN sports announcer Dick Vitale, Idaho true freshman Jerome Thomas would be a diaper dandy, a nickname that Vitale gives to all outstanding freshmen.

But any Vandal fan that's been reading the newspapers lately knows that Thomas is anything but a baby.

Thomas, not to be confused with injured senior runningback Joel Thomas, shocked coaches and teammates with jaw dropping performances and helped lead the Vandals to upset wins over Northern Arizona and Northern Iowa on the road.

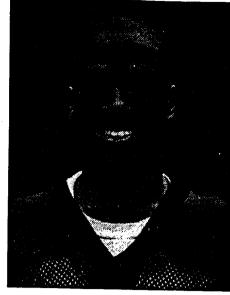

The true freshman running back scored two touchdowns against NAU and racked up 128 yards on 30 carries against UNI.

Was the humble freshman shocked by his performance?

"Honestly, I wasn't too surprised," said Thomas. "The offensive line did a tremendous job, I'll say that again. Anybody could have done it with the job the line did.'

Injuries were prevalent among Vandal runningbacks, and Thomas would soon get his chance to become Idaho's third starting running back: Joel Thomas left for the year with a knee injury. Lavoni Kidd suffered an ankle injury. And backup Marcelle Williams is out with a knee injury as well.

So the redshirt was yanked off Thomas's back and underneath Idaho coach Chris Tormey found a big black and gold S on the phenom's chest-Super Freshman.

Thomas

"I got my chance," Thomas said. "I'm a firm believer that everyone always gets a chance some way, somehow. And I'm getting mine now."

Actually, just three weeks ago Thomas was listed as a defensive back. The Paso Robles, California native originally was recruited as a running back, but moved to strong safety when injuries left the position lacking in

"I'd rather play running back," Thomas said. "It's easier to be an athlete and play

The 5-foot 10-inch 175-pound tailback decided to play college football after an astoundingly solid high school career at Paso Robles High school. Thomas rushed for 1,500 yards and 23 touchdowns his senior year and was voted a two-time, first team all-Los Padres League selection and all-San Luis Obispo County pick. He also was voted the league's Offensive Player of the Year in

After being recruited by several Division I-A and I-AA schools, Thomas ultimately decided on Idaho because of its tradition of

"Coach Tormey came down and recruited my friend, Kevin Hill. He basically said that Idaho had a winning tradition and none of the other schools were saying that," Thomas

Thomas is well on his way to helping the Vandals keep the winning tradition that brought him here and unlike a lot of freshmen that get caught up in the hype of college athletics, this tailback knows what his priori-

"First and foremost, I want to get an educa-tion," Thomas said. "I'm not looking forward to playing football afterwards (professional)—if it happens it happens. It's not one of my goals or a dream. I'm a communications major and I want to get out and start my

Considering the way that Thomas has played of late, you might tend to believe that this rookie might develop a big head-not so. Since racking up so many yards and being the hero, the freshman says that teammates tend to push him even a bit harder in practice, leaving little room for an ego.

"The whole team gives me crap about it," Thomas said with a grin. "Teasing me-I'll do something minor and someone will say score two touchdowns against NAU and you think you can sit down." It kind of bothers me a little bit because I'm not one to say 'I did good, I did good.' I like to try and keep things in perspective."

Whether it be heckling or teasing the freshman, one thing all people can learn from a rookie is enthusiasm and excitement. Before leaving for practice Monday, Thomas looked up into the empty Kibbie Dome bleachers thinking of this Saturday's clash with Boise State, "I can't wait, this place is going to be packed," the freshman said.

NBA rookies get advice on date rape at orientation

NEW YORK (AP)—When Joe Smith, Jerry Stackhouse and the rest of the NBA's class of '95 gathered for their rookie orientation session, they got advice on how to eat right, how to handle newfound wealth—and that when a woman says no, she means it.

For the first time, date rape was a subject at the mandatory three-day session. The teachers were Sgt. Susan Morley and Detective Raymond Lane, veteran New York Police Department sex crime investigators and lecturers specializing in date and gang rape.

When the 67 NBA rookies filed into an auditorium in Orlando, Fla., for the Rookie Transitional Training Program this September, Morley was skeptical. "I wasn't sure that we would be able to get through to them," she said.

Morley felt they might hold back because she's a woman. She assured them that as a cop and a woman who grew up with eight brothers, nothing they could say would make her blush.

That didn't stop them from trying.

"They really tested me," she said.
They talked openly for 90 minutes about gang rape, peer pressure, date rape and how men and women give different sexual cues.

You could tell that the questions were definitely directed at real situations or things that had come close to happening to them or someone they knew," Lane said.

One rookie asked if it counts if a woman is drunk, Morley said, and another wanted to know whether he could get into trouble if a woman asks him to stop kissing her and he keeps going.
"I had to tell them, 'Just because a woman is drunk, just because she goes to your room—going to your room is not consent," Morley said.

Morley and Lane also provided slides that said "no" in 13 different languages. The message: "Any way it's said, at any time, no means no," Morley said.

Argonaut staff hands DJs hockey defeat

Jeremy Chase (center) and Andrew White (right) prepare for a face-off during Friday night's floor cassette hockey clash. The Argonaut staff picked up the 12-5 win over the KUOI DJs.

Erik Marone*

It was a grim night on the third floor of the Student Union last Friday for the KUOI Kiwis. The Argonaut Yellow Journalists handed them a 12-5 loss in the KUOI Floor Cassette Hockey Invitational.

Yellow Journalist Jeremy "The Ace" Chase predicted they would "destroy them, burn down their station and hear the lamentations of the women." With a hat trick to his credit in the first period, and outstanding defensive performance, Chase was only the beginning of the Kiwi's nightmare. Journalist teammate Andrew White also left the first period having chalked up three.

The Kiwis had little to say, as they were out of breath trying to keep up with the fast paced Yellow Journalist attack. Kiwi forward Kim "Pixie" Sara commented, "We're fuzzy, we're brown, and we have no idea what we're doing." The Kiwis' Vicki Trier managed to put a single goal in during the first quarter.

The Kiwis couldn't put the puck past the expert foot and stick play by Journalist goalie Dennis "Grandpa" Sasse, so they decided to wound him. Grandpa suffered a minor laceration when Kiwi Goalie "Interstellar Groovy Dave" Camden-Britton tossed the puck into his forehead. Grandpa returned to play in the second period.

The second period turned up little more than sweat and more goals for the Journalists, answered with two Kiwi goals. Kiwi Aaron "Ethnoman" Mayhugh moaned, "It's rough out there. I've got bruises on my knees, I've broken a blood vessel, the skin is gone from my fingers. It's ugly!"

my fingers. It's ugly!"

The Kiwis tried changes in the lineup, dirty plays and prayer, to no avail. The only promise shown by the KUOI team was the addition of radio commentator Erik "Grand Poobah" Marone in the third quarter, who contributed two assists and aggressive defense. He declined to comment on his performance, claiming it was self-serving to interview oneself.

The third period turned up scoreless for the Yellow Journalists, but the Kiwis sudden burst of talent came too little too late, only putting two more goals on the board. "We got better toward the end, but it was rough at the first," Kiwi Vicki Trier commented after the final buzzer.

Sara added, "Next year, it's going to be tag-team Scrabble. Given the Argonaut's penchant for misspelling, we're going to kick booty!"

"We're small and we're slow, and it proved to be the deciding factor in the game," Sasse said. "We had a strategy all along, feigning confusion." It was a task that came naturally for Sasse and the rest of the Journalist squad.

The event ended with the passing of the Third Floor Brain trophy to the victorious Yellow Journalists. The Kiwis left the hall with challenges for next semester, promising to make an appearance next time. Members of both teams retired to the West 4th Bar and Grill to nurse their wounds and recall the game that is certain to take the place of the mudshark in your mythology books.

final result will show a picture of Idaho in the Division I-AA playoffs.

Idaho can make this season a success to many of it's fans simply by beating BSU. Idaho should get strong consideration for post-season play even at 6-4 overall. With losses to three previously ranked I-AA teams and a loss to Oregon State from the PAC-10, all of which came on the road.

First-year coach, Chris Tormey, has had the ups and downs that many first-year coaches endure, but if his Vandals finish at 6-4 they should at least get consideration for post season play.

When the season started, Idaho was picked to finish third in the Big Sky Conference. Already handing Montana it's only conference loss of the season, Idaho again has a chance to play the spoiler role against BSU. With a win, Idaho would drop BSU to 7-4 overall and at the same time possibly lock themselves into a four-way tie for second.

Idaho wins are very impressive, considering their road troubles as well as their problems all season with injuries. Finishing above .500 in a conference that is probably the strongest it has ever been shows that their is some great parity in the Big Sky, and maybe it should be given a little more consideration during postseason selection.

Whatever happens after this weekend is unimportant, because I'm sure we will all come back proud Vandal fans from Thanksgiving break, knowing that we beat BSU in our last game in the Big Sky Conference. Although the two schools will meet many more times down the road, this is Idaho's chance to make the most out of this season, and ruin BSU's at the same time, so Idaho wins 27-21 and makes the postseason.
