Comet linked to KUOI programming decision

The Grand Poobah
Staff

Early this week, NASA probes returned conclusive evidence that the appearance of the comet Hyakutake is linked directly to programming changes currently under way at KUOI-FM.

"We thought this might happen," KUOI Station Manager Vicki Trier said at a Wednesday press conference. "This is a sign that the programming changes are going to propel us into the top three stations for markets of our size. We're all very excited."

Over spring break, the staff of KUOI decided to discontinue their free-form format and switch to 24 hour Buttrock. "We felt there was a great void in Palouse radio that needed filling," Trier explained. "Being the most flexible of the radio stations in the area, we decided to take it upon ourselves to give the people what they want."

To test the potential format change, KUOI sent the severed head of Interstellar Groovy Dave into deep space to monitor test transmissions and calculate extraterrestrial reaction. Photos from the NASA probe Conspiracy show Hyakutake brilliantly exploding from Groovy Dave's forehead. The decision to use Groovy Dave's head was made after much deliberation. Independent researchers concluded that the head was of little use after the unfortunate shaving accident that left Groovy Dave headless last November.

"It was supposed to be a routine data transmission," project coordinator Colic Orbs said of the comet's appearance. "Apparently, the response from extraterrestrial listeners was so overwhelming, it overloaded Groovy Dave's data control gates, resulting in the comet. Therefore, the comet is really nothing more than a lot of superheated binary code in standard LZH compression." Orbs declined to comment on the project further until the source of the malfunction is determined.

KUOI is planning to implement the changes over the summer with some huge promotional events to help change the image of the station.

"Going 24 hour Buttrock is not an easy step," KUOI Promotions Director Erik Marone said. "We're planning a Cinderella reunion concert for June and a Quiet Riot picture disc giveaway over Dead Week to help pave the way."

Also planned for summer is an 48 hour

Ratt-a-thon and drawings for autographed Great White and Trixter album collections.

"There's a lot of music out there people don't even recognize as Buttrock. We're going to change that," Marone promises. "It's a lot more than your standard Bon Jovi, AC/DC and Poison. KUOI will soon be helping you explore the uncharted depths of Buttrock."

Researchers discover lethal new bacteria

Ima Scientist
Staff

Two University of Idaho microbiologists announced the discovery of a new bacterium Thursday.

Stanacocci faiezium was isolated from aged beer in a rarely used coffee-stirrer technique. Several petri dishes were found late Thursday night by a night janitor. Unfortunately, only one plate remains; the others were thrown away.

Mocow police officer Jeb Bubba was able to determine from the wreckage in the laboratory that a large explosion occurred right after the bacterium was discovered. Bubba said, "I'd sure like to talk to those science guys, but now they're dead."

Dr. John Smithe of the Centers for Disease Control, who examined the site, said S. faiezium is a level four pathogen similar to the Ebola virus.

Harassment plagues third floor

Lisa Lannigan, Shelby Dopp and Christine Ermeey sexually harass Mark Vanderwall.

Joe Blow
Staff

For the past six months, tension has been building on the third floor of the Student Union Building, as accusations of sexual harassment are running rabid.

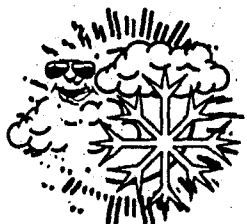

As in the movie DISCLOSURE, the problem stems from the other side of the rainbow, as Editor in Chief Shelby Dopp has been abusing the power granted her by the Media Board. Dopp has threatened to fire five male employees in the past month, as they are not meeting her expectations as writers, or at least that what they are accused of.

With perhaps the greatest newspaper in years, Dopp's accusations have found several complaints landed on the desk of Student Media Chairman Patrick Olsen. Olsen told the Argonaut that the situation is under control, and the issue is getting looked into as a possible means for job termination for Dopp.

Internationally known artist to visit campus

Corinne Flowers
Staff

Our life's journey often takes us back to the very place we started.

For Kansas artist Stan Herd, the journey has lead him across open countryside and back to the farmland owned by his grandfather.

You may never get the chance to see Herd's artwork in person. That's because your vantage point is several miles up in the air and the composition is at its peak in between the growing and harvesting season.

But perhaps you've seen the pictures. Giant flowers, portrait heads and still lifes etched into huge tracts of land.

Herd is an internationally known environmental artist. His galleries are vast expanses of flat farmland, his canvases 100 acre fields, his pigments plants, flowers and the color of the soil itself.

In his statement Herd says, "The process of creating the work is as important as the final visual manifestation." Indeed the planning, mapping and eventual manipulation of soil and vegetable matter is as important if not more so than the finished work itself.

Herd's artwork is widely recognized and has been featured extensively: the cover of U.S. News and World Report, an Absolut Vodka ad, the logo for Garth Brooks new album Fresh Horses, as well as features on television, radio and publications such as Smithsonian and the New York Times. In 1993 he authored Crop Art and Other Earthworks, a book which features text and photographs of his work.

Herd will be visiting the University of Idaho as part of the art department's 1995-96 speaker's program "Appropriation."

Herd will be on campus March 30-April 3 to conduct workshops in which groups of students from various disciplines will conceive and create their own earthworks.

He will also be giving two lectures that will be open to the public. The first will focus on his earthworks and will be held Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the UI Administration Auditorium. The second will focus on his works with the Indian Nations and will be held Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in Engineering Physics Auditorium 122.

Like Herd's life, his work returns to where it began, once more becoming part of the earth. As the season moves from fall to winter the artworks fade until nothing remains but their memory, and the promise of a new creation.

For more information on the workshops or lectures or for information on upcoming art department programs call 885-6851.

Carol Ryrie Brink honored

Valaree Johnson
Staff

Hundreds of students pass the Brink building on campus everyday, but few know much about the honored person it's named after.

As a wrap to Women's History Month, Mary Reed from the Latah County Historical Society gave the closing presentation on Carol Ryrie Brink, women at the turn-of-the-century Moscow. "It's appropriate for me to give acknowledgment to this gifted writer who was a woman," Reed said. "Everyone from English majors to ordinary folk can really get caught up in her writing."

Although Carol Ryrie Brink did most of her writing in Minnesota, her major perspectives and influence came from her memories of growing up in Moscow. In a slide presentation, Reed gave an outline of the life of Brink. She was born in Moscow in 1895 as the town was still becoming civilized. Her father, Alexander, was the town's third mayor. After his death from tuberculosis in 1900, her restless mother, Henrietta, remarried and became part of the "fast crowd" spending much of her time at the Elk's Lodge. She later took her own life by the intake of poison.

Brink was a mere eight years old when she lost her parents, but writes that she was never bitter and instead felt great independence from what they left her. She grew up with much influence from grandparents, uncle and aunt. "She was a lonely child,"

Reed said. "But even then she knew that she would be a writer."

Brink was sent to the Portland Academy where she somewhat overcame her shyness. She met David Brink, who was living with her family while he was teaching at a prep school. Brink continued her education at the University of Idaho for the next three years and finished her final year at Berkeley. She married David and later had two children. "She was a wife and caretaker first," Reed said.

But Brink still had a love for writing and would sit down between loads of washing or ironing to write. Three of her books, Buffalo Coat, Strangers in the Forest and Snow in the River were Idaho novels. Her collection of vignettes Chain of Hands speaks of the generations of hands that touch the generations to come as she reminisces of the characteristics of her childhood family.

"She was a woman of much integrity yet she really understood people," Reed said. Reed was honored to have an interview with Brink at her retirement home in July 1991. Brink died the following month. "Her roots really went deep into Idaho," she said.

Brink's birthplace stands on the corner of Polk and A streets. The McConnell Mansion in Moscow has some of her books. She wrote a total of 27 books, many of them for children. Her most famous children's book, Caddie Woodlawn, can be for anyone. "Even if you're grown up you'll like it," Reed said.

WEEKEND ENTERTAINMENT

Singer and performer Irene Barrera will display her uniquely inspired music to the Student Union Building Dipper (basement). Her music is inspired by the rich culture of the South American continent and it also carefully explains the history and meaning associated with the music she performs. Barrera was also chosen by Arts Northwest for their 1995 Northwest on Tour roster. Her show is brought to campus by ASUI Productions, and begins at 8 p.m. For more information, call Sarah Church at 885-6485 or Shana Plasters at 885-6951.

University of Idaho Dance Theater and the Lionel Hampton School of Music presents "We're Beat" in the Hartung Theater. The show will be an offbeat collaboration of original music and choreography by UI's "Dancers, Drummers and Dreamers." Tickets to the event are available at the Hartung box office and are $4 for students, $5 for non-UI students, $6 for seniors and $7 for the general public. More information can be gained by calling UI Dance Theatre at 885-2189. The event starts at 8 p.m. both tonight and Saturday.

THE BIRDCAGE

If there has been one sure-fire formula for comedic success in Hollywood the past few years, it has been dressing in drag.

To Wong Foo: Thanx for Everything, Love Julie Newmar and Mrs. Doubtfire, among others, attest to this. The Birdcage, starring Robin Williams and Nathan Lane, follows this recipe, and sure enough, it works.

Williams willingly takes a step back out of the spotlight for the bulk of the show, giving Lane a chance to show off an effeminate side that he plays to the hilt.

In a film where the real and only laughs come from the gay humor between lovers Armand (Williams) and Albert (Lane), the plot is just simple enough to let the audience delight in the outrageous swishing and fluttering of the two principle characters.

Armand's son, Val, is getting married to the daughter of Senator Keeley (Gene Hackman), a politician so right-wing he thinks Billy Graham is liberal. Albert, who's an entertainer in Armand's drag club, eventually dresses up as Val's mother so the senator isn't offended by any misplacement of family values.

While The Birdcage begins somewhat slowly, it's in Lane's preparing to be a heterosexual man and then in playing Val's mother that the movie takes off. Lane steals almost every scene with his exaggerated girlish screams, squeals and giggles. He walks like a supermodel and acts like a spoiled school girl when he doesn't get his way. In Armand's words, Albert is "practically a breast."

Williams and Lane's supporting cast plays off the two stars beautifully, especially underrated actor Hank Azaria as Agador, the Latin houseboy who dresses about as conservatively as Jenny

McCarthy from MTV's Singled Out.

Dianne Wiest is also great as Louise, the wife of Senator Keeley, who has to juggle an ambitious husband, a pre-marriage daughter and an untainted American image.

It's interesting that The Birdcage skirts around showing any real physical contact between Armand and Albert, or contact between any of the drag club patrons for that matter. Instead, director Mike Nichols relies solely on the vocal innuendoes between the couple for all comedic effect.

The ending is a culmination of one of the best sequences of the entire movie. Senator Keeley has to dress in drag to get by the press and out of Armand's club, all the while singing the Sister Sledge classic "We Are Family." Needless to say, it's quite hysterical.

The film, which is based on 1978's La Cage aux Folles, is a should-see for fans of Williams and a must-see for fans of Lane—especially fans of Lane in drag.

Learning the many facets of Islamic culture

Valaree Johnson

It is unfortunate that very few Americans really know much about the past contributions and present conditions of most Arab countries, says JoAnn Trail, director of the International Friendship Association.

It was for this very reason that Trail became interested in learning more about Arab countries and the Islamic culture. "I guess you could call me a student of history," Trail said. "But we really owe a debt to learn more about them," she added, emphasizing that many of our studies of disciplines like astrology, medicine, algebra and others are due to the findings of Arab countries.

Trail was honored last February with the Joseph J. Malone Fellowship and left Tuesday for orientation in Washington, D.C. to go to the Middle East for an intensive two-week study of learning first-hand the relationship between the United States and the Arab world. "I hope to take in as much of the society as possible," Trail said. "I really want to be an open book."

The fellowship, which is worth an estimated $10-12,000, has had over 450 participants since it was started in 1984 in honor of historian Joseph Malone. Those who are awarded a fellowship are expected to engage in a range of activities to benefit others from the experience. Trail is excited to work with other area fellows to coordinate events and enhance education here at the University of Idaho.

The Malone Fellowship has already had an impact on studies at UI. Professor of Political Science Al Rouyer leaves in April with seven students for a model Arab League in Portland. Rouyer was a fellow with the second group to ever go to Egypt in 1985. He returned as an alumni delegate to Israel in 1990 and again to Syria and Kuwait in 1991, just three months after the liberation.

The fellowship led him to a shift from Southeast Asian to Middle Eastern studies creating a Middle East Politics class added to the curriculum. "It was a major benefit for me and the University of Idaho to go," Rouyer said. "It provided many opportunities and incentives for me and others to understand more about the Middle East."

As the world gets smaller, it takes more than reading the newspaper to truly understand the relationships of cultures.

Trail and Rouyer are examples of commitment beyond the classroom and how a university is an excellent forum for becoming educated about the world we live in.

FROM THE NET

In an effort to end pain and suffering throughout the world, a contest was held to find the best cure for one of mankind's more prominent, recurring ailments: the common hangover. Here are a few winners of the Internet Hangover Cure Contest:

MOST REVOLTING

Go to your local deli and order Liverwurst on white bread with butter and a glass of buttermilk to wash it all down.

SOUNDS GOOD TO US

- Three stage process:
1. Cold tomato juice. Large glass mixed as a Virgin Mary. The salt in the juice assists your electrolytes in re-balancing.
 2. Chocolate Milk. Provides calcium, lines the stomach and gives energy.
 3. Dairy Queen Cheese Burger. Does absolutely nothing for your body, but it works for me.

CAN'T POSSIBLY SURVIVE THE CURE

- "Hair of the Dog That Bit You"
- 1- Take hairs from Greyhound
 - 2- Take hairs from Whippet
 - 3- Take hairs from the Cat
 - 4- A fifth of Whiskey
- Take a small amount of ingredients 1 & 2. The Greyhound hair will give you the stamina to survive. The Whippet hairs will speed your recovery.

Mix with ingredient 3. All chemical reactions need a Catalyst.

Down with a large glass of Whiskey. (Don't forget a beer chaser). After all pet hair is hardly palatable.

EMERGENCY CARE:

In case you made the mistake of trying to pull handfuls of hair from the dogs or the cat, the Whiskey can be used to sterilize the wounds on your way to the hospital. THIS WILL.

THE SURGEON GENERAL CONSIDERS THIS CURE TO BE DANGEROUS TO YOUR HEALTH, AND IF YOU TRY IT, YOU DESERVE EVERY NASTY LITTLE THING THAT HAS EVER HAPPENED TO YOU"

BEST ZEN CURE

You need one bottle of 100 aspirin, 2 - 6 packs of your favorite beer. Get comfortable, preferably a rocking chair on the porch, throw an aspirin in the yard and take a swig of your favorite brew. Throw away another aspirin. Take another swig when you finish with the aspirin, the hangover will be gone.

Residence halls and KUOI to host 'Battle of the Bands'

Erik Marone
Staff

Friday night, the Moscow Social Club Grand Ballroom will see the most explosive concert event to hit the Palouse since Kenny Rogers played the Kibbie Dome!

Maybe even more explosive as five local bands will feature their talents for the benefit of the Latah County United Way. The UI Residence Hall Association, with the help of KUOI-FM are hoping to renew an old RHA tradition of an annual Battle of the Bands concert.

After a year's hiatus, the event is back under the planning of Joe Swarner, RHA Programs Coordinator in charge of community service.

"The RHA used to do this in the past, but last year it didn't happen because the funding fell through," Swarner said. "But this was my main goal when I came into office. We ended up a little more organized this year and the people we're dealing with have given us discounts since it's a benefit show."

Planning for the show was started last semester and picked up the assistance of KUOI in March. "KUOI approached us and expressed an interest in helping out, and we gladly accepted it," Swarner said.

With local bands Crimebucks, flycatcher, Clamp and Maybug competing for audience votes and Soulcraft playing a full set at the end, concertgoers will have a variety of music to enjoy throughout the evening.

"We have a lot of good local talent playing for us. It's definitely going to be a quality show," Swarner predicts. "It's a great show for a great cause, we'd like to see everyone there."

The competition starts in the Moscow Social Club Grand Ballroom at 8 p.m. The cover charge is $5 at the door, which includes a vote in the competition and free iced tea while it lasts. Eighteen and older will be admitted, with a full-service bar available for those 21 and older. KUOI will be broadcasting from the show throughout the evening. All proceeds from the show will be donated to the Latah County chapter of the United Way.

For more information, call the RHA office at 885-5948.

Sting shows diversity with Mercury Falling

Matt West
Contributing Writer

Sting's latest and long-anticipated release Mercury Falling, aims for diversification and change with every song.

This album has traits of identifiable Sting. . . lyrically. While Sting's lyrical style is mellow and filled with sorrow, musically Mercury Falling is a delightful deliverance from Sting's sad life.

Mercury Falling has opted not to rely on the keyboard's popular ability to replicate a wide range of instruments and sounds, instead live instruments such as the pedal steel, fiddle, Northumbrian pipes, The Memphis Horns and an additional Hammond organ are attempting to dry the listener's tears.

Regardless of Sting's blues, Mercury Falling may be Sting's most uplifting album to date. Not a devoted Sting fan, I will take a moment to consider his rise to popularity. His voice is catchy and unique...due to an English accent!? His lyrics are constantly depressing and remain solemn, calm and patient. Wait! Doesn't that contradict what I just said about an uplifting album?

Okay, here's Sting's secret, or better yet, my theory on his success: Sting has effectively used a wide range of instruments, especially on Mercury Falling, in conjunction with his calm, cool and collective voice and lyrics, to build a following that appreciates both mourning and celebration. In other words, Sting can appeal to some musically and others lyrically.

A prime example of Sting's ability to mix constant, depressive lyrics with a seemingly lively beat is his country-sounding "I'm So Happy I Can't Stop Crying." Now, since I despise country and the song begins with a definite country-sounding beat, primarily due to an instrument known as the pedal steel, my immediate reaction was one of the following cries for help: "Skip!", "Quick, next track!", or "NO, its the thing that should not be!"

After a few listens however, the song has become one of my favorites on the album—luckily Sting does not attempt a country-sounding voice. Another reason why this track has grown on me may be due the tune's departure from a semi-typical country twang with progressive chord changes.

Don't let Mercury Falling's first single, "Let Your Soul Be Your Pilot" fool you; it sounds nothing like any of the other songs. I think it was the first single of the album because it will agree with traditional Sting fans. It may take the traditional Sting fan more listening sessions than usual to appreciate Mercury Falling. Take your time getting to the store but don't leave without Mercury Falling.

New exhibit opens April 5

The Lewis-Clark Center for Arts & History will be featuring the works of 68 artists in a juried exhibit and sale starting April 5 and lasting through April 28.

About 135 individual pieces will be on display during the show, which includes many different types of art works ranging from paintings to sculptures, all with open media as the only convergent theme.

They were chosen from a field of around 450 entries. The artists themselves hail from just about every state west of the Great Lakes.

"It's really exciting to see our show gaining interest all over the country," said Leslie Esselburn, director of the center.

The gallery show was recently honored by the prestigious Southwest Art magazine in its collector's edition issue. It was named a price index exhibit for the third year in a row.

While this spring's exhibit is the 13th one for the town of Lewiston, it will only be the fifth at the actual Center for Arts & History. The center, which is the second largest exhibit gallery in Idaho, was a gift to Lewis-Clark State College in October 1991 and helped lead to enlarging the yearly exhibit.

"It really helped expand what we were doing here," Esselburn said of the building. "We increased the show to a month long and our audience became larger."

The 68 artists were chosen by a jury of five professionals who will eventually award ribbons and cash prizes to what they believe are the "best of the best." The judges include Wally Mason of Moscow's Pritchard Art Gallery.

A free opening reception hosted by LCSC President James Hottos and Mrs. Suanne Hottos will be held April 5 from 5 p.m. until 8 p.m. at the center, 415 Main St. in Lewiston. For additional information, call 799-2243.
