r. Terry Armstrong, retired professor of education, will be the featured speaker at the commencement exercises May 18. Armstrong has taught in the College of Education since 1967.

"Dr. Armstrong epitomizes the spirit of the lifelong learner," Dr. Thomas O. Bell, interim president, said in a prepared statement.

"His natural curiosity and enthusiasm in and out of the classroom have given generations of Idaho students an appreciation for the joy of learning. Many of those students, who are now teachers, have instilled that in their own students," Bell said. Armstrong is a Twin Falls native. In 1964 he obtained a natural science degree from UI and his Ph.D. from UI in 1969. He obtained his bachelor's degree from Southern Mississippi University in 1958.

Armstrong has been a leader in scholarly and professional organizations throughout his academic career. Much of his time he has provided a helping hand to entities involving public school science teachers, serving as an officer at both the state and national levels.

ASUI President Brian Kane said, "I think it's wonderful. It's a great honor and it's going to a man that is very deserving.

In 1978 Armstrong began his administrative career at the UI as executive assistant to then President Richard D. Gibb. Also during those years he served as coordinator of student services, working closely with students in Greek houses and residence halls.

Sophomore Michael Syron said, "I've heard about Dr. Armstrong all my life and have known him for two years on campus. I know he is a very personable man who spends all his time bettering the educational. program at the UI."

In 1981 Armstrong created a project known

Especially considering all the time and effort he has put into this university." as the UI Found Money Fund. This fund was created with three cents he found on the sidewalk. He kept the money in a jar on his desk. For the past 16 years UI alumni, parents, friends and students have contributed to the fund which now totals over $35,000. Other university endowments are pooled and jointly invested in a diversified portfolio. In 2089, the bicentennial year for UI the fund will be tapped. Armstrong predicts it will hold millions of dollars when it is opened.

The general commencement ceremony will begin at 9 a.m. in the Kibbie Dome. This year a record number of 2,490 students will be eligible for graduation.

Sports injuries make students into spectators ring weather has brought out more than just the flowers, it's also J brought recreation to the outdoors. With many recreational activities there is a chance of injury; however, it's how the injured person deals with their injury that makes the difference.

Dr. Sam Monger of Student Health Services said, "A Lot of people aren't aware of some of the things they should do after the injury. The first thing they should do after an injury is to get ice on the injured parts, the faster the better."

After the injured person puts ice on the injury Monger said they should elevate and compress the body part.

"Most of the time in recreational activities people don't have these things available to them," Monger said. "By the time they get home or wherever they're going after the activity there's a gap of time lost there where you just can't get it back."

This gap of time right after an injury occurs determines the extent of the injury and the impact it has on the person's life.

Monger said during athletic competitions injuries are checked out by trainers on sight and immediately taken care of. On the recreational side, however, such swift action is rarely taken.

University of Idaho student Lance Taylor was recently injured during a rugby practice and discovered the lack of immediate care for injuries.

"I think students should be allowed access to the same facilities for injuries that the athletes in the recognized sports programs have," Taylor said.

At the Kibble Dome there is an athletic training center which deals with sports injuries. Only athletes have access to the center. Students participating in club sports such as rugby and intramural sports can't use the same facilities. The Kibbie Dome recommends for students other than athletes to visit SHS for injuries.

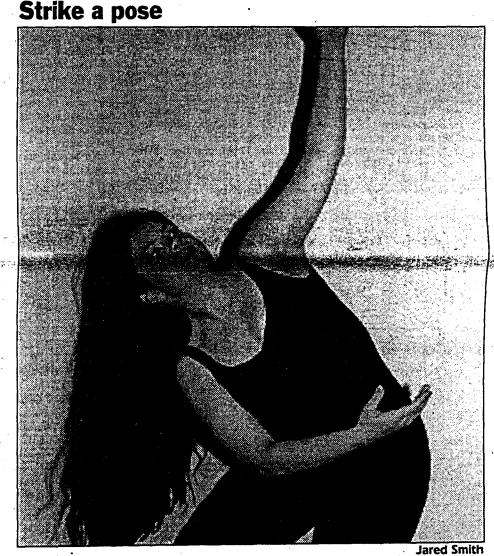

There is an alternative option though, not to become injured in the first place. Monger said, "The best prevention is conditioning. People who are well conditioned have increased tone, muscles, as well as increased strength and they've probably also sharpened their reflexes a little bit."

Aside from good conditioning Monger also said people should avoid playing under fatigue and should adequately warm up before activity. Monger said warming up doesn't necessarily mean just stretching but also some aerobic activities like short jogs to get the blood to the muscles.

To keep injuries from getting worse Monger said people should not play with pain. Injured people should remember the old saying, "If it hurts, don't do it."

"There's still this old myth around about playing through the pain or working through it," Monger said. "It's absolutely 100 percent wrong. Pain is a signal. Your body is telling you that something is not right here. Better quit playing or suffer the consequences. If what you're doing is • SEE INIURIES PAGE 8

C igma Alpha Epsilon will eat hot dogs, hit home runs and slide into base to help raise money for Erin Neilson, a University of Idaho Alpha Gamma Delta who lost her legs to spinal meningitis.

On May 11 from noon to 1 p.m. members of the SAE fraternity will play 100 innings of softball, with the proceeds going to Nielson.

"We wanted to help out a member of the local community, and since Erin Nielson is also a fellow Greek we thought the money should go to her," explained Christopher Cammann of SAE.

Individuals will receive pledges of money per inning of 5 cents, 10 cents and 25 cents. Flat donations will also be made from parents as well as some local businesses.

"Donations are going really well so far," Cammann said. "Local banks have donated quite a bit and the parents have really helped out. So far we're looking at about $400."

The freshman SAE class is traditionally responsible for a yearly philanthropy. In the past, car washes and auctions have been put on to raise money.

"We chose softball this year because everyone is doing it for intramurals so they would be ready for it. The guys like the idea a lot, even members other than the freshman class are participating,' Cammann said.

The softball game was originally scheduled for April 27, but was rescheduled due to snow. Anyone is welcome to attend. Donations will be accepted during the game, the new location will be announced later in the week.

Students, indigents may suffer under new Idaho law

MOSCOW-Local county and hospital officials say a new indigent medical law passed by the Legislature could leave some students out in the cold and other indigent patients out of luck.

For years, county government and local hospitals have had a love-hate relationship.

When hospitals provide emergency medical services to an indigent person, they usually turn to the county to pay when there is no other source of revenue.

If the county turns down the request, many times the hospital has a choice of taking the county to court or eating the cost.

Currently, when an indigent person passes through Latah or any other Idaho county and gets injured, that county is responsible for medical expenses.

The new law, which takes effect July 1, makes counties responsible only for resident indigents.

University students whose parents claim them on their income taxes are covered by the Idaho county their parents live in. But out-of-state students are out of luck.

Linda James, director of Latah County Social Services, said unless Idaho signs some sort of indigent agreement with surrounding states, financial help. Students in Idaho are not required to carry health insurance. A bill which would have required students to carry health insurance died in the Legislature this year.

Hells Angel trial prosecutor: Wife is victim of intimidation

SPOKANE—The prosecutor in the second-degree murder trial of a Hells Angels member says his wife was followed and her office received a bomb threat in an apparent intimidation attempt.

Jury selection in the trial of Timothy Myers was suspended Tuesday after a bomb threat prompted an evacuation of the U.S. Bank Building downtown. No bomb was found.

Authorities are increasing security for Hearrean, who heads the office's gang unit, and his wife, who works in the U.S. Bank building and asked that her name not be divulged.

On Monday evening, two motorcyclists, one of whom was wearing Hells Angels colors, followed his wife's car to a supermarket, Hearrean told the court.

After staring at her in the store, they left, he said. Two miles away, she again spotted the bikers who roared alongside her car.

Richard Fabel, president of the Spokane chapter of the Hells Angels, denied that members of his club had anything to do with the threats.

Myers, the secretary of the Hells Angels Spokane chapter, is accused of fatally shooting a member of the rival Ghost Riders gang,

Ó Black Gonzaga student harassed again

SPOKANE-A black Gonzaga University student who received a hate letter in March awoke Tuesday to find racist graffiti painted outside of her apartment, school officials said.

Slurs that apparently were painted overnight covered the front door, outside walls and windows of Colleen Stoudmire's apartment, officials said.

Stoudmire was one of three black second-year law students who received a hate letter March 22. The letter writer referred to similar hate mail sent anonymously to black law students last year.

On March 24, a black undergraduate student reported receiving a harassing phone call. He also said his parked car was vandalized when someone scratched his name into the paint.

Spokane police and officials at the Jesuit-affiliated school believe the racial incidents are linked and suspect they may be the work of a law student.

No arrests have been made, despite an investigation involving police and the FBI. In addition, Gonzaga officials and a citizen crime-fighting organization group have offered $26,000 in reward money for information in the investigation.

Student saves day after driver loses control of bus

KNOX, Ind.-Police and school officials are calling a 17-year-old high school student a hero after he stopped a runaway bus when the driver slumped unconscious at the wheel.

All 25 passengers survived the scary ride and have John Waldron to thank for saving them, authorities said. The children received bumps and bruises, but there were no serious injuries in Monday afternoon's wild ride.

Waldron noticed that substitute bus driver Michael Browning had missed the two last turns and was not responding to his young passen-gers. The children were mostly elementary students in the Knox Community Schools, about 35 miles south of South Bend.

Undercover officer charged with drug dealing, bank robbery

TRENTON, N.J.—Undercover vice squad detective Christopher J. Kerins captured drug dealers, trained his department's drug-sniffing dogs and lectured city kids about the dangers of narcotics.

The decorated 11-year Trenton officer also trafficked in heroin and, as the long-sought "Camouflage Bandit," robbed several banks using unmarked police vehicles and probably his service weapon, authorities said Wednesday.

Kerins' double life was revealed when he was arrested after allegedly robbing a suburban Ohio bank and leading police on a six-mile chase while visiting Cincinnati for a law enforcement conference on combatting drugs and gangs. Kerins confessed to FBI agents after being caught in Cincinnati on Tuesday afternoon, admitting to the Ohio bank robbery and four of seven stick-ups the Camouflage Bandit has committed in the Trenton area since Nov. 1, according to a criminal complaint. Investigators believed the gunman had military or police experience because of the way he handled his gun and other aspects of the robberies. Kerins was charged in Ohio with two charges of aggravated trafficking after investigators found 346 1/20th-gram doses of heroin, worth more than $7,500, in his hotel room. He also was charged with robbery, fleeing and eluding, and felonious assault on a police officer, said Col. Dan Wolfangel of the Hamilton County Sheriff's Office. -Associated Press

"The reports of my death are greatly exaggerated," Zelimkhan Yandarbiyev told reporters, echoing the American satirist's famous setting-the-record straight words.

Yandarbiyev also laid down the same unyielding terms for peace talks with Russia as his slain predecessor, Dzhokhar Dudayev.

"The condition for talks is the total withdrawal of Russian troops," Yandarbiyev said at a news conference at a secret location in southern Chechnya.

Chechnya's pro-Moscow government on Monday claimed Yandarbiyev was killed in a clash among the rebels just a week after succeeding Dudayev.

Top Russian officials seized on the reports as evidence of a bloody, potentially crippling squabble among his successors.

But on Wednesday, Yandarbiyev met with reporters and appeared in a clandestine TV broadcast to mock Russian talk of discord in the rebel ranks.

Sitting next to him at the news conference was Aslan Maskhadov, the separatists' military chief-ofstaff. Some Russian analysts had predicted a power struggle between the two.

Like Dudayev, Yandarbiyev said the war cannot end while Russian troops remain in Chechnya. He also said there's no hope of peace if it's proven the Kremlin had Dudayev killed.

The rebels say Dudayev died in a Russian airstrike on April 21. -Associated Press

RHA banquet honors students

Alissa Arndt

The Residence Hall Association is holding their annual end of the year awards banquet tonight at 6 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom.

The banquet is held to honor outstanding leaders in the residence halls. Ray Horton, university housing resident director, said, "It's basically an evening of fun and recognition."

Awards will be given for man and woman of the year to honor student leaders who have done outstanding work for three or four years in the halls and on campus as a whole. First year man and woman of the year are similar awards given to first-year students. An award is also given for hall of the year to honor the hall that has been notable as a living group.

The top 1 percent of resident hall leaders recognized for their remarkable service and leadership will be inducted into the National Residence Hall Honorees.

Other awards will be given for resident adviser of the year, hall president of the year and a community service award will be given for those who have done outstanding community service. Two-year pins will be given to hall officers and resident advisers who have given two years of service.

The banquet is open to all residents of the halls and will be catered by University Dining Services. Two punches will be taken from students' Vandal Cards for the event.

Moscow Police auction bicycles, other items

Alissa Arndt

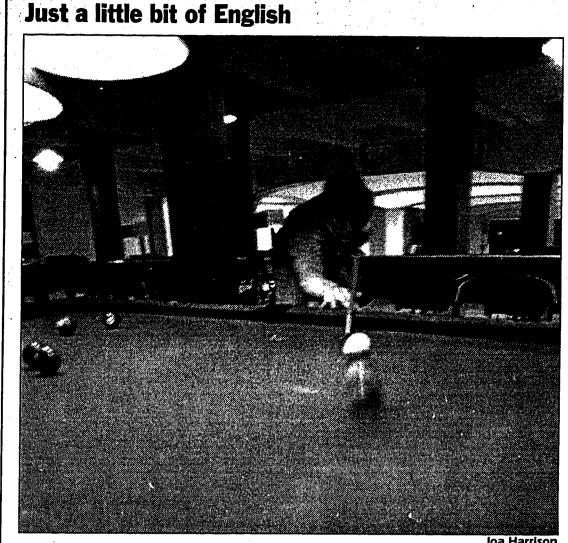

The Moscow Police Department is holding an auction Saturday at the Latah County Fairgrounds. Doors open for viewing at 8:30 a.m. and the auction will begin at 9 a.m.

Many bicycles are up for auction. The police auction off all bikes that have been found and unclaimed. Every year the police end up with a number of bikes that are unregistered and have never been reported stolen. This makes it impossible for the police to return them to the rightful owners.

There are also a number of other items up for auction that have been found and released by the police department including jewelry, knives, cameras, tool kits, clothes, a fiddle and even hubcaps. There are surplus items being offered by the police, parks and street departments as well. Among these items are computers, a dishwasher, radios and a swing set taken from East City Park.

The Quad-Cities Drug task force has contributed a number of vehicles. These include a Ford Ranger, a Mustang, an Oldsmobile, a Toyota pickup, a Jeep Cherokee, a Camero IROC and a Honda motorcycle. Although these vehicles are being sold at a city auction the city will not be held liable for them.

Students do something educationally extraordinary

Shawn Vidmar

Many students find themselves in the doldrums toward the end of their college career. Several do no know there are many opportunities out there to spice up their education. Outward Bound Costa Rica and AmeriCorps are two such options.

Outward Bound Costa Rica is an adventure into Costa Rica, Ecuador and Peru. Students may earn credits in sociology, Spanish as a foreign language, natural history and cultural anthropology. Students learn to identify rainforest ecosystems, plants and animals. They get to know indigenous peoples and achieve a better understanding of themselves.

The sessions last from June 2 through Aug. 25. One student, Jane Bactz, who went last year said, "It was amazing really. I had learned about the canopy forest, giant iguanas and geography, but it wasn't until I saw it all that the book learning really jelled."

She did the 85-day tri-country semester which included climbing the world's highest active volcano, mountain biking to ancient ruins, and repelling in a jungle waterfall. Baetz hadn't been out of the Baetz hadn't been out of the country before this experience. She said, "I can't wait to plan the next adventure. It improves my selfworth. You are judged on your ability to get things done and keep up, not whether your clothes match and your hair is done. It also reminds me what is really important to me because I get so caught up in papers and what not that I forget to live."

AmeriCorps is like the Peace Corps for America. Many individuals go into the Peace Corps after graduation to travel and gain life changing experiences before settling down into an office job. AmeriCorps is not much different, and students are given an education award worth $4,725 at the end of the year to pay back student loans or for continuing in school.

Many Americorps members have converted crack and condemned houses into viable living places for low income families. Members have tutored school children, offered flood and earthquake relief, and reclaimed areas from drug dealers and gangs.

Whitman County puts out a poisonous hemlock alert

Shawn Vidmar

Due to the flooding this year and the extremely high water table, the local pastures and roadsides are primed for the poisonous hemlock weed. Gathering herbs from pastures and the side of the roads should be done cautiously.

Hemlock is a class C Noxious weed and a member of the Parsley family. According to the Whitman County Noxious Weed Control Board press release, hemlock is a biennial that originated in Europe and flowers in this area from May through July. Hemlock is highly poisonous. It was used to kill Socrates when he was sentenced to death for slander against the government. A little bit goes a long way—it only takes an intake of .25 to .3 percent of your body weight to kill you. Two ounces would kill a 200 pound person.

Hemlock grows to the heights of 10 or more feet. The stems are straight and branchy. Some children used the old stems for flutes and were poisoned. The stems have distinctive purple blotches and hollow nodes. It has a strong parsnip odor. Its small white flowers are arranged in umbrellas and the stems produce fern-like leaves. Considering the recent weather, the soil is primed for hemlock growth. It grows in moist soils everywhere: roadsides, flood plains and pastures. Especially with the flooding this year, it is possible for the poison to be absorbed into the water source and become fatal for persons, pets or livestock which ingest a fair amount from the same source.

If you suspect you have found some hemlock, contact the WCNWCB at 509-397-6261 and they will gladly come out and have a look and remove it if need be. A good rule of thumb is that if you're not absolutely sure of a plant or mushroom, do not ingest it.

Graduates may find work, but not from their studies

Associated Press

BOISE—As another academic year nears an end, Idaho college students preparing for life after graduation are asking themselves how all that time in class will help them in the real world.

For many, the answer is less than they hoped.

But university administrators maintain that when graduates wind up working in their field of study, it has more to do with individual goals than whether they got a good education.

"I don't think that we should be assuming that people have to get jobs in their field," said Richard Rapp, associate vice president of student affairs at Boise State University.

Alan Saginak, interim director of the career center at Idaho State University, points out that some fields lend themselves to careers more readily than others.

For example, while most pharmacy graduates find jobs in their field, many liberal arts students have difficulty finding work related to their studies.

Daniel Blanco, director of the career services center at the University of Idaho, sees many people's educations contributing to their ability to perform on the job, even if the work does not directly relate to their college major.

And Rapp said many students go to college never expecting to get jobs in their fields of study.

Boisean Katrina Marcinkowski. 25, got her political science degree from Boise State a year ago. Now she works 35 hours a week at Made in Idaho and cares for a couple's house and dog while they are away.

But she did not go to school to prepare for a career. "I wanted to do a degree that I liked to learn about, but not necessarily one that would get a highpaying job when I was done," Marcinkowski said.

She now intends to get an advanced degree so she can work in public affairs.

On the other hand, Brad Cox, 29, knew exactly what he wanted from college. Just eight weeks after he received his bachelor's degree in business with an emphasis on entrepreneurial management from Boise State last year, he and a friend started Gem State Gutters in Boise m: murud Glycolic Acid rofessional Skin Care air Etc... 0315 • 882-1212 After Finals ...

But while generally satisfied with his college experience, Cox thinks working his way through school contributed as much to his business venture as his course work.

Rapp, Saginak and Blanco agree that education and experience both are necessary in today's job market, and internships seem critical.

At the University of Denver, a survey of the class of 1994 found that graduates who completed internships earned an average of $2,436 more in starting salary than graduates who did not.

Kim Haberman, 25, feels her 1992 bachelor's degree in criminal justice from Boise State had little to do with getting a job in the field. She worked at the Ada County Jail both before and after graduating, and that was her career boost.

"School didn't prepare me at all,"

Then there are jobs that just require a college degree, regardless of the emphasis, because it is the only way to get a foot in the door.

After getting a general engineering degree from Idaho State two years ago, Corey Skinner, 23, found a $7-an-hour surveying job in his hometown of Twin Falls right away. Six months later, he was inspecting dams for the Idaho Department of Water Resources and now makes nearly $13 an hour. As for his education, "Really, I don't use it that much," Skinner said, "but I had to have that degree even to get an interview."

Negotiator: Freemen under the impression 'it's Monty Hall time'

Associated Press

JORDAN, Mont .--- A right-wing activist who has been trying to persuade the Freemen to surrender called it quits Wednesday telling reporters no one is coming out and the five-week standoff is back to "a confrontation of wills."

James "Bo" Gritz, a leader of the self-styled patriot movement, emerged from a 2 1/2-hour meeting this morning saying the Freemen are back to their earlier position that they will surrender only for a tribunal of their own kind, not for an appearance in the federal court system.

Gritz had said Tuesday that the group had gotten the impression that a deal was in the works, and some state and federal charges against them would be dropped if they gave up within a day.

"If they come out within 24 hours, it's Monty Hall time," Gritz said, referring to the "Let's Make a Deal" TV game show host.

U.S. Attorney Sherry Scheel Matteucci said she remained hopeful that some of the people in the compound might leave today.

aged," she said. "But I never expected today to be the end."

She refused to say whether prosecutors had indeed made some kind of offer to drop some charges.

Gritz said he was leaving Jordan, and leaving further negotiations to Assistant Attorney General John Connor Jr., who has been meeting separately with the Freemen.

"I think it will come down to a confrontation of wills," he said. "But they don't want to hurt anyone. ... I think they (the FBI) can take them into custody without gunfire, but I don't know if the government has the courage."

Members of the Freemen group, whose compound has been surrounded by the FBI for more than five weeks, are wanted on state and federal charges ranging from writing bad checks to threatening to kidnap and kill a U.S. district judge.

Gritz, who helped negotiate an end to the deadly siege in Ruby Ridge, Idaho, in 1992, had described the anti-government fugitives as "euphoric" at the prospect of a deal.

That enthusiasm was gone after this morning's meeting. Gritz said the Freemen told him they took an oath to God that they would not come out under anyone's conditions but their own.

"They say Yahweh created an invisible barrier around their sanctuary that cannot be penetrated by foreign enemies," Gritz said.

Gritz made several comparisons of the fatal 1993 Branch Davidian standoff in Waco. He did not consider it a hostage situation, "but I think the comparison is to a Waco ideology. In Waco, the door was open but David Koresh would get them before they got to the door."

He said a few hard-liners in the Freeman compound are performing a similar function.

But Matteucci said federal authorities do not believe some of those in the compound are being prevented from leaving by the more staunch believers in the Freemen creed, as Gritz suggested.

Still, Gritz insisted his days of meeting with the Freemen were a success. He said his visits to the compound allowed him to define the compound, its inhabitants and its defense.

Gritz's meeting came on the heels of a meeting the Freemen had Tuesday with Connor and Republican state Rep. Karl Ohs.

Connor and Ohs, who have met with the group four times, refused to give reporters details of Tuesday's 90-minute session.

But Connor, who also planned to meet with the Freemen again today, told The Associated Press that Gritz had seemed misinformed.

"Euphoria is not how I would characterize their attitude when I left them," Connor said. "Mr. Gritz's view on that is a little off. I'm wary of Mr. Gritz's characterization of their views."

Earlier this week, Gritz raised the idea of giving the Freemen a public forum for their views. Leaders of the Montana Legislature said Tuesday they would consider allowing such a forum-only after the Freemen surrender to the FBI.

"We won't negotiate beforehand or guarantee them anything until they submit to the law like every other citizen," said House Minority Leader Ray Peck, a Democrat. "I don't think you cut a deal about enforcing the law. You follow the law."

National organization keeps bearhunting initiative campaign going

BOISE — Gov. Phil Batt today lashed out at the Fish and Game Commission for financially supporting forces opposed to an initiative to curb bear hunting in Idaho. "I think it's totally unacceptable," the governor said. "The incumbent commissioners seem to indicate that they are the only ones that can set a course for Fish and Game. They don't like being answerable to anyone...That's not so. These offices belong to the people." The financial disclosure statement filed by the Sportsmen's Heritage Defense Fund a day earlier showed that on Jan. 10, the Fish and Game Department contributed $225. Batt said he was told $100 was to put up a booth at a fair the group was holding and the other $125 was for five tickets for the commissioners to attend a dinner the fund was sponsoring.

Since the donation was made, Commissioner Richard Meiers of Eagle has refunded his share and was trying to get the other four commissioners to do the same, Batt said.

'They evidently think it's improper also since they're trying to retrieve the money," the governor said, citing a preliminary assessment from a deputy attorney general that the donations were at least irregular if not illegal.

As for the $100 for a booth at a fund fair, Batt said department officials were very defensive, saying that "they go to all kinds of sports gatherings, set up booths, and this is not unique."

The governor, who crossed swords with the commission 16 months ago right after taking office, is reviewing nominees to fill a newly created commission seat for Lemhi and Custer counties and for the expiring term of Wesley Rose of Jerome.

He declined to say that he would not reappoint Rose, who has served for six years, but "I'm not about to appoint any incumbents who condone some of the actions the board has taken, including this one.'

In January, 1995, Batt had asked for the commissioners to tender their resignations while he determined whether the commission could carry out the policies he espoused during the campaign. An uproar from sportsmen followed, and Batt conceded that his action, as publicly perceived, was premature and ill-advised.

The Fish and Game Department contribution was only a fraction of the cash collected by the anti-initiative forces this winter as they again overwhelmed backers of the proposal ban bear baiting, running bears down with hounds and the spring bear hunt. The Humane Society of the United States kept the initiative drive alive, pumping another $25,000 into the initiative campaign in late January.

That brought total support for the Idaho Coalition United for Bears to $44,000 through the end of March. The campaign has just over $17,000 in the bank to underwrite its effort to win ballot status for the controversial proposition.

The Humane Society has contributed $42,500 of the total.

By contrast, the Sportsmen's Heritage Defense Fund accumulated another $87,700 during the winter to bring its total financial backing to $233,000.

But the fund has also spent over $178,000 to fight the initiative that needs 41,335 registered voter signatures by July 5 to win a place on the November ballot. In addition to consulting services and publication of its position, a portion of the expense was aimed at raising more money.

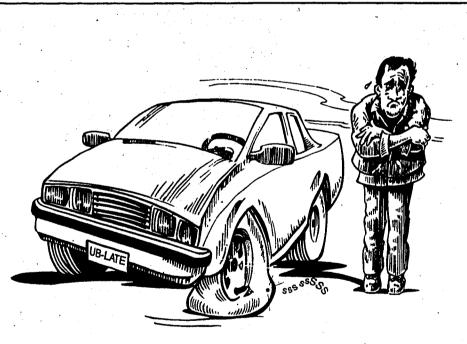

The campaign has been marked by repeated charges and counter charges.

Most recently, an initiative advocate immediately maintained her home had been ransacked by hunters only to have local authorities determine it was a burglary unrelated to the petition.

And the sportsmen's group lashed out at the Coalition for Bears because of the significant financial support it has received from the East Coast organization and because it has decided to hire professional signature gatherers.

Chairman Don Clower at one point labeled as unethical the tactic of professional signature which was first introduced into the Idaho initiative process two years ago by the term limits campaign and employed this year by campaigns to limit property taxes and void the nuclear waste agreement. Clower did not comment on the ethics of those campaigns.

And while a smaller percentage of total contribu-tions, out-of-state support for the initiative opponents totals nearly $35,000.

Senate tries to bring back wildlife

Hunters and animal lovers, hang onto your hats! Nature's coming back to campus thanks to the efforts of former ASUI Senators Sean King and John Hoyne.

Well, that's not entirely true. Nature would be coming back if President Brian Kane hadn't vetoed a bill authored by King. However, the two ex-senators have vowed to continue their crusade to bring back big game.

Senate Bill 96-59 unanimously passed the senate without debate or discussion Wednesday night. The vote shocked Vice President John Tesnohlidek. He had the senators vote twice to make sure they were serious.

The bill reads in part, "Providing for the placement of three dimensional decoys of deer, elk, bear and wild turkeys (and salt licks) in the new and old arboretums." King added an author's amendment to include tree stands. Funding costs would have been about $2,500.

The Argonaut believes President Kane has made a grave mistake in not signing the legislation. We lost a potential learning experience and a lot of potential revenue. A question to ask yourself: "When was the last time you saw big game on campus?"

There are no reports of anyone ever having seen bear, elk or wild turkeys on campus. Maybe near the area but never on our actual campus.

The legislation does have advantages and disadvantages. First lets discuss the advantages. We would have something that no other university in the United States has: free roaming wild life. That would be something to look at. Some students would have the opportunity to see their first bear, elk and wild turkey. Inexpensive salt licks would attract all those beautiful creatures. FAnd now it's time for the disadvantages. If Kane would have signed the legislation there was a downside. There would have been the potential for gun-toting militia types, like Hoyne and King, to lurk in the trees of the arboretums. Liberal students who believe in gun control could be shot, accidentally of course, while non-consumptively enjoying wildlife.

That student, or their family, would definitely sue the university. Kane was obviously thinking of our safety. These concerns are only minor in comparison to the benefits. We could have sold hunting tags and provided some revunue.

Ex-Senator King made a great leap forward in the spirit of cooperation. King pointed out that this legislation would not only be beneficial to hunters but also a learning experience for the entire student body.

The most important thing to remember is that tree huggers and Helen Chenoweth wanna-be's would get to interact and learn they're not so different after all. We all want to see pretty, fuzzy little animals. Wouldn't it be nice if we could see them up close?

—Shelby Dopp —Dennis Sasse Former ASUI Senator Sean King (left) pushed controversial wildlife legislation through the senate in the last meeting of the year. Ex-Senator Hoyne was instrumental in assuring the passage of this piece of "Hunters Rights" legislation.

Dump hemp and push sphagnum

The third annual Moscow Hemp Fest is over, and once again I forgot to crash the party.

I'm a peat moss pusher myself. My goals are to extol and to publicize the unpopularized yet varied virtues of peat moss, because—unlike hemp it is not related, botanically, to a kool boss kick-butt alternative rebellious it-ain't-no-bleeping-marigold-type, cerebrally detrimental plant like marijuana.

Other than lacking the alternative sooper-kool I'm-a-big-boy-and/orgirl-now connection to the drug of choice among those keen on throwing their lives into that Big Ashcan in the Sky, peat moss does have a lot going for it. I've got a boffo recipe for peat-peanut butter cookies. And you thought you couldn't eat peat moss. I'm sure you could make paper out of it. Or cloth. Book bags. Beads. Nose rings. Doo-dads. Ink. Paper. Pooper-scoopers and other ecofriendly products sure to turn a tidy profit for those exemplars of capitalism who are drooling to cash in on the latest faddy-planty wave to mince down the pike since Chia Pet.

But peat moss doesn't have the it'sillegal appeal that seems to thrill and wow the minions wearing their hemp clothes and chewing on their cloth-flavored cookies. Most of them probably can't even say sphagnum, the moss from which wily Canadians procure their earthy product.

But you know, rebels use peat moss with more reckless abandon than George Washington used hemp. Gardeners everywhere buy bales of peat moss and bury it in their gardens—not out of fear of persecution but out of love for their water-starved plants. Nell Fenwick used peat moss to help grow crabgrass on Snidely Whiplash's marigold suit, thus enabling that wily RCMP officer Dudley Do-Right to apprehend the criminal.

Peat has the rebel appeal. It just happens to be legal—a fact which really poisons my efforts—seeing as the fringe elements who rally around hemp hide behind their eco-friendly agendas to conceal their true motivations: eventual legalization of marijuana for recreational use.

To XAN COLOR

Many hemp-ers may deny this allegation, but if they do it's only because they're fooling themselves into believing the eco-capitalists behind the entire hemp movement. Why don't these people rally around papyrus? Or cotton? Or any of the other dozens of plants that have been used to make paper, cloth and other eco-friendly products for centuries? Because, like peat moss, they're legal. And you can't get high off cotton. Though I imagine some of those potheads out there have tried.

Hemp pushers claim they will grow hemp and only hemp. Huh huh huh huh. That's like tobacco companies claiming their products don't cause cancer. Or denying the sun is shining while it burns your flesh. Or indeed insisting the 10 percent hike in student fees will only bring benefits to students.

Hemp growers will grow hemp and mary jane together in the same fields and feign ignorance or innocence or bad seeds or space aliens as the

Some of you are graduating. Graduating is such a big step because not only do you move to a new place (most of the time), but you find new jobs, adapt to new schedules and basicly have a new life. You also leave friends and memories behind as much as four years worth!

On the other hand, some of you have friends who are graduating, transfering to another school or just not coming back for some reason. That adjustment is always difficult, for these people seem to waltz into and out of our lives so quickly. We wonder why they have to leave and when we will see them again.

Lastly, some of you are just saying goodbyes for the summer. Those are sometimes the hardest, because months apart can do such strange things to friendships. But there is something you need to understand. Very few friends remain together—in the same place—for a lifetime, even though we may wish for them to be so. I once read a description of this phenomenon and I would like to pass it on to you.

But from here we have to move on. We can't remain in this cycle of "the good ol' days" for the rest of our lives.

So you are limited with what you can do with your friends. Before you leave, find an empty notebook or journal, and write down your friends' addresses. Promise to write, and then do so.

Dpinion Friday, May 3, 1996 10 THE ARGONAUT More tips on making the university serve you

Editor's note: This is a continuation of a column submitted by two UI marketing professors explaining the role of customer service as it applies to the university.

recent Argonaut column by Shawn Vidmar addressed the issue of students as customers of the university. Shawn suggests students tend not to be satisfied customers and have been convinced that "they can treat us as they please and we still beg to come back for more." As two market-ing professors who discuss customer satisfaction in the classroom, Shawn has prompt-ed us to respond to some of the issues she raises.

We would also like to address some additional issues. One issue is the question of who is the university's customer? Shawn has voiced concerns from a very important customer segment, students. However, the university attempts to satisfy multiple constituencies. Some of the include the local community, the business community, the general public, parents of students, alumni, faculty, staff and government agencies. The business community, for example, exchanges donations for the hope of hiring qualified graduates. The general public, through the giving of taxes, expects the university to create citizens who are prepared to contribute to the well-being of society. UI is a state assisted (not supported) institution. Students pay only a portion of the cost of their education, and the university must be responsive to all of its customers.

Guest Commentary Mike McCollough Dwayne Gremler assistant professors of marketing

Customer satisfaction is an interesting issue to discuss in the university setting. Given that students are a very important customer group, what is a satisfied student? Is it a student who receives an easy A? At a superficial level, a class of students who received an "automatic A" would be "satisfied" but they still would have cause for complaint. This is the fundamental paradox of education that all instructors and students must address. To bring out the best in their students, instructors must challenge them. They must be encouraging and yet demanding, reluctant to accept any performance other than the student's absolute best. To bring out your best we must demand performance of which you may believe yourself incapable. It is the accomplishment of challenging assignments that will bring out the confidence you will need to successfully overcome the many seemingly insurmount-able obstacles you will face after college.

We believe that in some respects the last thing want is "satisfied customers." We want students who are fundamentally dissatisfied with what they know and understand of the world. We want students who channel this dissatisfaction into a desire to learn. We want students who demand more of themselves, their peers and their instructors.

Indeed satisfaction is often the students' own worst enemy. Consider the classic case of a student who aces his or her first midterm. Often this satisfaction translates into complacency and a substantially lower score on the next exam.

Education should be many things. It should be enjoyable at times, sometimes exhilarating, often painful and frustrating. Education should never be, but often is, boring. But satisfying? Perhaps, only in the very long run. We suggest that customers (students) evaluate their satisfaction after their university experience is over as well as on a day to day basis. At that point students can more accurately reflect upon their overall experience and determine how satisfied they were with the experience. Accurately assessing the university experience while you are experiencing it is somewhat difficult. We have both found that many students who have taken our classes are not as "satisfied" during the semester (while they are in the midst of tests and term papers) as they are after the semester is over and they can evaluate what they received from the experience. One further step a student can take to improve the quality of educa-tion at the university is to let us know with the advantage of hindsight, how you found our classes. We often find the most valuable feedback to be that of former students.

Shawn also touches on the issue of a diploma as a route to a job. In our experience employers hire individuals, not degrees. Ironically, the best way to obtain a good position in today's competitive employment market is to focus your efforts on getting as much possible out of your education and, secondly, to position yourself for a job. Good employers are more interested in how you applied vourself to your studies and what you have learned than they are in your specific degree and GPA. You will get out of your education what you put into it. A diploma only guarantees you a job interview not a job. You, not the degree, are responsible for getting a job in much the same way you are responsible for getting an education.

Shawn seems to feel a professor's job is a trade off between research and teaching. As students we felt professors cared more for their computers than their students. In large measure this perception reflects the poor job we do as educators in explaining what research is and why it is so important. Research is vital to any academic community. There should be very little in your text book that is not the product of research efforts. Research efforts produce the material that we teach. If we do not conduct (and publish) research we are freeloading on the efforts of those who do. Our research should not make us worse, but better, teachers. Indeed, having the opportunity to learn from a researcher who is on the cutting edge largely defines the • SEE TIPS PAGE 12

Hemp Fest not about dope

I am outraged that the Argonaut advertised the Hemp Fest with a picture of a marijuana leaf, joint and pipe. The Hemp Fest was not created to become a "Marijuana Fest" attracting potheads proclaiming their belief in smoking dope. The Fest is to educate and create awareness of hemp and its multi-uses. Because of the U.S. stigma against hemp and its relation to marijuana, many people do not know its economical and environmental advantages over most synthetic and cellulostic fibers. While we remain uneducated about hemp's benefits, thousands of industries will continue to pollute and damage the earth with fibers and production processes that are wasteful.

Thanks for supporting off-campus students

I would like to thank Shelby Dopp for her editorial in the Argonaut on April 26, concerning statements made by the newly elected ASUI Senator Jennifer Gish.

I too, was upset by Gish's comment about off campus students not caring about the University of Idaho. I was especially bothered by her assertion that those students don't deserve ASUI representation because they "don't matter."

Senator Gish is obviously not aware that 54 percent of UI students live off campus every year, according to Student Advisory Services. That amounts to over $190,000 a semester in ASUI fees that supposedly don't matter. I wonder what uses Gish will make of these students' money during her term in the Senate? Will she be sure it is used only for the benefit of on campus students? After all, they are the only students who really matter, in her opinion.

I would like to point out that a majority of the students involved in the different departments of ASUI, such as the Argonaut, KUOI, the Senate and all the different boards, are off-campus students. Some of them, myself included, started their college careers in Greek houses or residence halls, but have since chosen to move off campus. The students in the ASUI, whether they live on or off campus, are some of the most productive students on campus. They get involved because they care and want to make a difference at the UI.

I suppose that, as a freshman, Gish might have an excuse for not knowing what she's talking about. I only hope that, as a senator, she takes the time to educate herself before she attempts to represent student interests.

For her sake as well as the students'. -Jennifer L. Moore

Buy a burrito at the fair

Get ready for the 23rd Renaissance Fair! On Saturday and Sunday, May 4 and 5, Moscow's East City Park will be transformed to a village full of artists, craft persons, musicians and booths offering culinary delights from around the world.

For the 11th consecutive year, the Coalition for Central America will be preparing its famous black-bean burritos. Our booth, popularly known as "el Cafe Verde," will also offer vegetarian chili, a variety of baked goods and desserts, and fruit juice based soft drinks. And don't forget strong, hot Nicaraguan coffee from our little red wagon in the mornings! Over the past nine years, the Coalition has raised more than $15,000 for humanitarian aid in Central America at the Renaissance Fair. This year, we are designating the first $1,000 raised at the booth for Concern/America, a non-profit organization that works with weaving cooperatives in Guatemala. Proceeds from our booth also support the year-round work of the Coalition in promoting better understanding of our neighbors in Mexico, Central America and the Caribbean.

You can help this worthy cause by purchas-

What happened to the games?

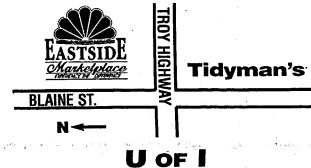

Did anyone notice the lack of participation in Greek Week this year? Did anyone wonder why? I have just a few ideas as to why I think Greek Week was a failure.

When only about five or so fraternities participate, something has to be wrong. Could it be poor planning? I would have to agree with that theory. The events this year were disappointing. They called it Greek Week, I call it Philanthropy Week. Don't get me wrong, I'm for philanthropy as much as the next guy, but isn't Greek Week supposed to promote Greek unity? How is stacking a bunch of cans on your front lawn supposed to promote Greek unity? My fraternity has raised $1,600 for St. Judes Children's Hospital, and $800 for Special Olympics. We have also received an International award for philanthropy. We, like most other Greeks on campus excel at philanthropy. What happened to the games?

PS: Whoah Nellie! Was I right or was I right about Spokane? Just look at them slavering and drooling in the paper and on the news since the Big Bad Bomb blew up in front of City Hall.

Maybe I ought to be quiet about it, though, or some nutwad working in official capacity in Spokane will get wind of these theories and present them as yet another sorry case of the media pushing (undoubtedly with hypnotic-type rays emanating from the newsprint) some whacko wannabe over the brink. I heard that there were no games this year because it was believed that they could cause unhealthy competition between fraternities. That is a pretty pathetic reason if you ask me. If that is the reasoning behind this, then you'd better get rid of intramural games too. What's the difference? I was really looking forward to Greek Week this year, when we found out about the events (about a day before it started), everyone in our house could not believe it. Pay $50 to go paint a bridge? If this Greek Week trend continues, I may just run for Greek Week chair myself.

Here's an idea for sports. Instead of having fraternities and sororities compete against each other, why not combine fraternities and sororities so they can play together as a team against other fraternities and sororities?

How about visits to each Greek house so the host house can speak to all the other Greeks about their fraternity/sorority so there is a greater sense of unity. We'll never get along completely until we all understand one another. These are just a couple of my ideas that have been bouncing around in my head the past two weeks. We need to try to remember what Greek Week is supposed to be, and this year, we did not meet that criteria.

In fact, your letters are documents of your life and can help you to survive separation, so cherish them and hold onto them instead of r or most people, bikes provide a cost efficient and simple means of transportation around the small community of Moscow. But for 10 devoted Idaho students, bikes mean more than getting to class on time, bikes mean competition.

Those 10 cycling enthusiasts make up the Vandal Cycling Club, a competitive organization of roadbike racers who represent Idaho at meets around the Northwest. The club, an officially recognized group by the ASUI Activities Board, competes in Oregon, Washington and Montana in the Northwest Collegiate Circuit.

This season, Idaho's cycling team has competed in only one meet due to financial difficulties from a change in ASUI funding regulations for clubs. In the past, the team would have used $250 to $500 a year to cover transportation costs to events around the Northwest. This season, the teams only event entry came last week at a meet hosted by Washington State.

At the WSU meet, Idaho displayed the benefits of training over 200 miles each week. In the B Class, the shorter distance class, Idaho's Steve Choi led the Vandal's by placing third in a Criterion Race. Fellow Vandals Troy Smith, Bryan Wallace and Dan Gager, followed Choi in sixth, ninth and 12th respectively. The Criterion consisted of a 1-mile loop which riders circle as many times as possible in a 45-minute period, followed by a two-lap sprint to determine a winner. Idaho placed four men out of 14 finishers, while many other racers dropped out due to the pace of the race.

Next, Idaho placed first in the team time trials, defeating a tough University of Washington squad in the four team field. A 60-mile road race followed the next day and again Idaho scored big, with Choi taking first overall, followed by Smith in fifth, Wallace 14th and Gager 15th out of 30 total finishers.

While the team had success at the weekend meet in Pullman, cyclist Choi believes the team has experienced a downfall since 1993.

"We used to have a bunch of guys who raced A Class, since then we have not really been a strong team," Choi said. "We need to get more people involved next year, maybe get an adviser to help get money."

Money has been a major concern for the team this year, limiting them to just one event. Choi admits that some of the cyclists were able to travel to other meets on their own, but funds have limited what the team can do.

"We didn't have enough money to even buy team shirts for the new guys this year," Choi said.

Despite money problems this season, Choi and the team hope next year more people will become involved.

"All you need is interest, you don't need a fancy bike," Choi said, encouraging new bikers to join the club. "If you wanna put in the time to train or ride, come out and ride, time is the thing."

The Vandal Cycling Club competes in two classes, A, which compete at the 60 to 80 mile distances, and B, which competes up to about 60 miles. The club competes against university sponsored and funded teams like UW, WSU, Oregon State, the University of

The team trains an average of 50 miles each day, riding on the local Palouse roads. As grey skies and a biting wind prevailed Thursday afternoon, Mother Nature kept her consistency of fine weather for UI Intramural softball action.

The Griswalds (8-0) did not let the overcast sky and wind blow out their desire to win en-route to a 13-5 triumph over Lump in the men's recreational playoff championship.

The Griswalds used nickel and dimed Lump to death, knocking out 14 base hits, 12 for singles, and taking advantage of six Lump errors.

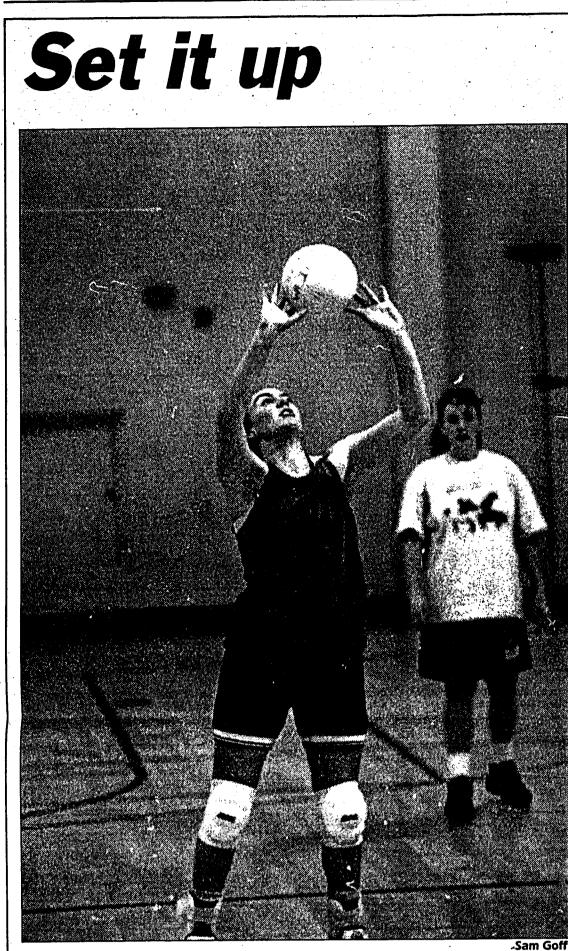

Leading 1-0, the Griswald gang broke the game open with six third-inning runs. With one out, pitcher Shane Dines started the rally with a single. Expos own April

Associated Press NEW YORK _ Did anyone tell the Montreal Expos they're supposed to be in last place?

After 25 games they owned the best record in U.S. Major League Baseball with a roster of young players whose combined salaries are slightly higher than Cecil Fielder's yearly rate.

. The Expos were a near-unanimous pick to finish last in the National League East, yet they lead the World Series champion Atlanta Braves in the standings.

And just look at some of the names in that starting lineup. Grudzielanek, Lansing, Rodriguez and Santangelou haven't made many All-Star appearances, but after one month they've helped the Expos become this season's biggest surprise.

"At least we were the kings of April," manager Felipe Alou said. .

No doubt. Montreal entered a three-game series against the New York Mets having won nine of its last 10 the lone loss a 6-5, 13inning defeat at Colorado _ and was coming off the most prolific game in team history. The Expos surpassed a club record for runs in a 21-9 rout of the Rockies on Sunday.

They lead the NL in batting average, runs scored, home runs, RBIs and slugging percentage. Thanks to the season's early start, the Expos established a club record for wins in April and their 17-8 start was only exceeded by the 1979 team's 18-7 record after 25 games.

THE ARGONAUT 15

Sports

"We were picked to finish last with the lowest payroll in baseball, but we're having fun right now," Alou said. "I know that I'm having fun."

And, in Montreal, the Expos are the only game in town.

While the Montreal Canadiens are making tee times after being eliminated from the Stanley Cup playoffs, the Expos are teeing off on NL pitchers.

In the Colorado blowout, the Expos hit two grand slams, raising their season total to six. Shortstop Mark Grudzielanek, who earlier this season hit in 17 straight games and leads the majors in hits, went 5-for-7 and F.P. Santangelou, starting in center field for the injured Rondell White, set career bests with four hits and five RBIs.

Six regulars are currently hitting over .300, and the team's run production is better than that of the powerful Cleveland Indians.

Not even pro wrestler Hulk Hogan, heavyweight boxer Mike Tyson or All-NFL safety Ronnie Lott could give America the blood shedding violence we capitalists. deserve.

Nobody wants to pay hard earned cash to go watch a couple muscleheaded actors pretend to beat each other up. And not even the sight of Tyson throwing a barrage of wicked uppercuts constitutes the price tag of pay-per-view television. Yah, football is pretty violent but the sissies get to wear pads and get in trouble when they intentionally try and hurt one another.

Here is an idea. How bout' we invite some of the toughest guys in the world to one big brawl fest. There will be no rules, except of course for eye gouging. We'll put these badasses in an octagon shaped ring, with fence all around And the only way you can win is f you knock the guy out or he submits by tapping out with hand. It'll be wrestlers against boxers, kung u against karate and kickboxers versus bar-brawlers. We'll finally ty. I might add, if you're considering taking out one of the beautiful Gracie women on a date, it might not be in the best interest of your physical health to take advantage of her.

Brazilian Jujitsu has been perfected by the Gracie clan over decades and its unique combination of grappling and joint manipulation hasn't been solved by any challengers. It's kind of interesting to see the best kickboxers and karate experts in the world get taken to the mat and choked out before they get a chance to throw a single punch or kick.

The following of Brazilian Jujitsu and the UFC has been tremendous in America and will soon dominate professional boxing in the category of interest. Besides, UFC features the toughest guys in the world. It gives people a chance to see what the Asian nations have been seeing for centuries: no holds barred fighting.

Currently, the purse for win-ning the UFC is only around it to see the toughest style of ighting.

Too bad I didn't patent this idea ecause it's already underway. The nost popular of these fighting natches is called The Ultimate ghting Championship.

Finally, there is no argument. No eatherweight, middleweight or eavyweight divisions. Just one on ne fighting, mano y mano.

To see these fights it won't cost ou an arm and a leg either. Most the UFC collection can be found the local video rental shop. And ere are more copycat UFC fights their way. New baseball season raises questions or some reason the balls are flying a little further this spring than in years past, as both Brady Anderson and Barry Bonds hit an April record 11 homeruns apiece to start their 1996 campaign.

Anderson and Bonds both started out the new month with similar fashion as they belted their 12th homers in Wednesday's action, and are their perspective league's leaders.

Several other players are reaching double figure homer totals as well, as pitchers earned run averages are looking more like the current gas prices, both reaching all-time highs.

ESPN has made a killing on discovering new names for all the balls leaving the park, such as Crackatoa, Aloha means Goodbye and "I don't think the park is going to hold it," just to name a few. They have also put their great minds to work on developing a theme for strikeout victims, as "Sit on it Pottsy, Sit on it Mouth, Sit on it Chachy and Sit on it to anyone else that was ever a Happy Days character," headline the list of one of the greatest accomplishments ever by the boys from SportsCenter.

Getting back to my point, Anderson is a clean-up hitter in a lead-off hitters body, as is Bonds if he were used in such a way. They both hit for average, both sport good leather, both have tremendous speed and now both hit for power. Bonds has always done all of these things from the three spot in the lineup, but Anderson has been consistently doing them from the lead-off spot, so where do you hit this guy? If you leave him in the lead-off spot, you will more than likely get your pitcher a lead to start the game, if you move him to the three spot you allow him to drive in more runs, but is it worth adjusting your line-up over? This is just one of the questions managers face with the increased production that comes from today's players.

• Another question that has often plagued me is whether or not the ballpark you call home has anything to do with your home run productivity?

Cecil Fielder hits his home runs at the short porch of Tiger Stadium in Detroit; Larry Walker, Dante Bichette and Andres Galarraga hit the long ball with relative ease at Coors Field, and Mo Vaughn hits his fair share at Fenway Park, granted many are over the Green Monster. Jeff Bagwell does his damage in perhaps the toughest park, which is located in the Astrodome. Ken Griffey Jr. and Frank Thomas may be todays superstars, and they both are able to adjust to the parks they play in.

I am not trying to say the Bagwell is a better power-hitter than Fielder or Vaughn, but rather making the point he has a harder time hitting for numbers at the Astrodome. I think any of these guys would have power no matter where they played, but some are getting breaks that others don't is all I am saying, but as is with any other sport, breaks are part of the game.

• All of this is trivial as far as I am concerned, but if there are questions to be answered in the game of baseball today, these two are near the top for me. The Bonds/Anderson deal is just an example, as many other teams face the same problems.

• Baseball has made its way back into Americans hearts, but chilly weather and poor play thus far have made crowd turnouts somewhat non-existent. I think what has happened thus far this season is going to have a good impact on the game of baseball, but if the fans are going to turn out in groves again, the players are going to have to keep up the offense. Today, people come out to see offense, and not pitching. There are very few pitchers that get the

There are very few pitchers that get the crowds to come out to watch only them, Randy Johnson, Greg Maddux lead the list of few that are able to still fill the seats at the sound of their names. Roger Clemens, Dwight Gooden, Orel Hershiser and Fernado Valenzuela were able to do it in their prime, but pitching is no longer desired by the fans. People would rather come out to the park to see a 20-20 ballgame, than they would to see a no-hitter. This may not be the way it should be, but it's the way it is, so I guess winning isn't everything, personal numbers are climbing the ladder to the top rather quickly.

Going to NBA right move for Mississippi State's Jones

Associated Press BOONEVILLE, Miss.— Dontae' Jones says the decision to turn pro after only one season at Mississippi State seemed like the natural thing to do.

"You go to college to get your career," Jones said. "I know my career is basketball. I have an opportunity to play in the NBA."

That opportunity and the money it represented was too much to put off, he admits.

Jones, who passed 36 academic hours last summer just to be eligible to play, didn't even finish classes at Mississippi State this season. He withdrew from school soon after the Bulldogs made their first-ever NCAA Final Four appearance.

For the first time since the end of the basketball season, the 6foot-7 Jones made a public appearance Friday. More than 600 people attended ceremonies at Northeast Mississippi Community College, where he played for two seasons before transferring to Mississippi State.

"I don't get a chance to visit Northeast very often," Jones said. "I just wanted to let them know I was going into the NBA draft."

The No. 32 jersey Jones wore at Northeast was retired by the school.

During the 1995-96 season, Jones averaged 14.6 points and 6.8 rebounds at State. But Jones said it was during the postseason, when he was MVP at both the Southeastern Conference and NCAA Southeast Regional tournaments, that he became aware. that he might be a legitimate NBA prospect. Former Ole Miss player Tim Jumper, now a Memphis, Tenn.based agent, is now representing. Jones. Jumper said he is in contact with various teams, and that Jones. will be at the pre-draft camp in Chicago June 3-10. Jumper expects his client to start visiting various teams for personal workouts in mid-May. "It is hard to tell how high he will go in the draft," Jumper said. "A lot depends on who comes out of school. I have been in contact with a lot of teams and everybody feels he will be in the top 15."

Hitters off to hot start

NEW YORK - Baseball's longest April saw lots of long balls.

There were 826 homers in 359 games for an average of 2.30, up 64 percent from the 1.40 average in 1992, the last year before expansion and 3.6 percent higher than April 1994.

Runs were up 28 percent from 1992, to an average of 10.58, which is 1.7 percent higher than two years ago.

Texas (26), Minnesota (24) and Montreal (21) all scored 20 runs in a game, the first time three teams did it in one month since June 1950.

On April 24, teams scored 195 runs for an average of 13.93 per game, a modern record for days with 14 or more games, according to research by the Elias Sports Bureau.

Barry Bonds, Gary Sheffield and Brady Anderson hit 11 homers apiece in the month, matching the major league record for April shared by Willie Stargell (1971), Mike Schmidt (1976) and Graig Nettles (1974).

Montreal became the first team to hit six grand slams in a month, topping the previous record set by Baltimore in September 1983 and matched by Seattle in August 1985.

At 3.98, the Chicago White Sox are the only AL team with an ERA under 4. Detroit's is a majorleague high 7.31.

Fans started coming back. The average attendance was up 7 percent in the first four weeks of the season, from 23,606 to 25,260 for the first 338 dates. Following the strike, the average dropped 20 percent for the first month last year.

Despite efforts to cut game time, the average for a nine-inning game was 2 hours, 53 minutes, down just one minute from last year's average.

thumbs up to the colorful personalities at UFC. The UFC features some of the weirdest and culturally different fighters I've ever seen. You've got guys that have Jesus tattooed on their chest and wear a cross on their back on their way to walking into the ring. And then there's also guys like Tank Abbott, a hefty bar brawler with little martial arts experience but about umpteen years experience in favern scuffles.

UFC also has its glamour boy fighters like shoot wrestler Ken Shamrock, who doesn't give evil glares to opponents, rather, he smiles at them to show his confidence. If you don't like watching boxing because of its boring personalities, UFC is the right place for you.

Matt Baldwin Contributing Write

Incident at Vichy, a play by Arthur Miller, is the story of a group of people thrown together by circumstance.

Vichy is described as a suspensethriller involving Nazis and the fear that drove people to do certain things. It contains different beliefs and philosophies, all of which are at work in this one-act play. It makes it something that both entertains, enlightens and reminds us of our history.

To prepare for the play the actors researched the background of Vichy, France, learning everything possible for their characters: beliefs, state of mind and probable actions.

Ibsen's Ghost was originally the play that was going to be produced instead of

Contributed Photo Vichy, but because of circumstances

Incident at

Miller's play was chosen. Vichy's characters represent certain social beliefs. Its primary characters are: Lebeau, an artist played by Justin Cegnar; Prince Von Berg played by Eric Jacobsen and Leduc, a doctor played by Brad Roman.

"It is definitely a slice of history that actually didn't happen that long ago. It was this century that this thing called the Holocaust happened. And there is a lot of people that still don't know a lot about it. People need to know more about it or need to be reminded about it. It raises a lot of important questions," Jacobsen said.

"It's not like another one of these Holocaust plays. It doesn't have anything to do with Nazis. This is where it takes place.. It's just about these people. It's about these random, completely differing social-political background thrown into this big stew pot. And now they're forced together with fear acting as the catalyst. It is really about the individual people and their views of the world as opposed to being about the Roman describes the play as somewhat like the story Ten Little Indians by Agatha Christie, "except you don't see the bodies."

Arthur Miller is also the playwright of the Pulitzer Prize winning Death of a Salesman and the popular The Crucible. In Incident at Vichy Miller has directed his ideas towards making people think about humanity on the choices we all have to make in order to survive and be ourselves.

Incident at Vichy opens at the Hartung Theatre on May 7 at 8 p.m. and run until May 11. There will be a 2 p.m. matinee May 12.

The story and the acting make it worthwhile. Vichy is an elegant piece of work that is rarely put on stage., It offers an entertaining and free break from dead week.

The Hartung Theatre is supported through student activity fees, thus is free to all students at the University of Idaho.

Take advantage of this chance to see a play that will probably not be produced around here in a while. Enjoy the arts on campus.

Holocaust," Cegnar said. Hemp Fest poll reveals interesting statistics

Aaaaah, summer...sunshine, barbecues and the scent of freshly grown grass. And while the thought of grass causes some students anxiety about mowing the lawn, many students get excited for other reasons. Last Saturday's Hemp Fest could provide support that the popularization of marijuana is on the rise despite a drop in the trend of national drug use. Songs, movies and pot fashion (clothing made from the imported material hemp) is a huge industry in the United States.

A survey at the University of Idaho shows that students are high on the support for legalization of marijuana. The survey was done in a random sample at various sites around UI and the Moscow community.

Respondents were asked to fill out a confidential poll. The majority (66 percent) were between the ages of 21-25. Undergraduates constituted 83 percent, 9 percent were graduate students and the dents. A surprising 85 percent agreed that marijuana should be legalized for some purpose. Of that, 75 percent agreed it should be legalized for medical purposes, 58 percent support recreational legalization, and only 15 percent believed marijuana should not be legalized for any purpose at all.

Less of a surprise to some than others is that 72 percent polled have tried marijuana and 41 percent admitted to smoking pot more than 10 times.

The survey showed that 50 percent of students are politically moderate, 20 percent said they were Republican, 28 percent circled Democrat. The majority polled labeled themselves associated with a religion (58 percent) and the remaining circled "none."

But none of these factorsseemed to have a correlation on support for legalization. In fact, the opposition and support draws from an array of reasoning. According to the Moscow

Police Department the penalty for less than three ounces of marijuana is a misdemeanor and carries up to $1,000 in fines and/or up to one year in jail. Anything over three ounces is a felony and can carry up to life in prison and/or a $10,000 fine. Only 30 percent of those polled knew this fine.

Comments ranged from "It's fun and a safe alternative to alcohol,' to "the dangers of marijuana are too extreme to allow it to the public." Many support the use of hemp for industry and the legalization of marijuana to cut down on overcrowded jails and organized crime, some simply believed it to be their human right.

Forestry Dean watches his students grow and learn

-who the hell are you?---

Valaree Johnson

The vibrancy of Alton Campbell's smile is contagious. The instant you meet him you find yourself smiling back. As Associate Dean of the College of Forestry, Wildlife and Range Sciences, one would wonder how this busy man keeps on smiling. But when you know he is doing what he loves most the answer is a little more clear.

"It was always an intention of mine to teach," Campbell said with a southern drawl. "It's a great satisfaction to work with students and watch them grow. "He loves to see students come in as fearful freshmen and leave as confident adults.

Campbell grew up in a small town in North Carolina and did his undergraduate work in science education at the University of North Carolina. He continued his education receiving a master's in chemistry from Duke followed by a Ph.D in wood chemistry from North Carolina State University.

Between it all, he taught high school chemistry and met his wife Janet. Campbell has never been intimidated by change. "Life is all about the evolutions we make," he said. "I always knew what I wanted to be, I just never knew which pads to jump to get there." He and his wife made the long haul and created their own pad after interviewing with the University of Idaho 13 years ago where he made some quick jumps through the evolution chain starting as assistant professor and moving within 13 years to associate dean.

Last Spring Campbell was awarded ASUI Outstanding Faculty Award to the pleasure of many students who admire him. Why do students love him?

"Maybe it's because I love them," says Campbell, who has a strong philosophy about the pow-ers of teaching. "My belief is to be diligent at what you do," he said. "If you are going to be good at something, you have to 'be it' seven days a week."

Campbell has a strong interest in science and is knowledgeable about the many facets of a simple tree, but his real love lies in being a teacher. "I could easily have been happy teaching other sub-jects. This one just kind of happened," he said.

Currently Campbell has also been working as Chair of Teaching Enhancement and teaching a college teaching course at UI. "I am teaching teachers to better teach." Campbell explains there are high expectations of college professors from advising to research and publications to being mentors to students. "It's certainly not an easy profession," he said. But in the free time he has,

Campbell enjoys spending time with his children Caroline, 7, and Christopher,4, either swimming, hiking or attending the organizations they are involved with.

Campbell is proud of the program, the faculty and the students that comprise the acclaimed Forestry Program the Ul has. Although he misses the lushness of North Carolina and the opportunity for his children to visit their extended family frequently, Campbell likes the community atmosphere of Moscow. And when people ask about that southern drawl, he explains "I just tell them I am from Boise.'

Photo exhibit to open next week

Justin Cason Staff

The Lewis-Clark Center for Arts & History will offer its first ever all-photography exhibit this month, giving 20 of the best local artists an opportunity to show off their work.

While the art medium is limited to photography, the subjects of the works range from portraits to wildlife to rock and roll legends.

"We've left the criteria very open," said Leslie Esselburn, director of the Lewis-Clark Center for Arts & History. "There are no restrictions. The only regulation was that the works be framed. We've left the selection entirely up to the artists.'

Although this is the first time the center has proffered an presentation of this kine, Esselburn is not worried.

"We expect that this will be a popular show," she said. "People seem to really like photography. We've got some imaginative things and some really phenomenal works."

All the pieces in the show will be from artists who have formerly displayed their talents in the center. However, Esselburn emphasizes that there may be a change in the future.

"We hope to expand and add new artists to our displays," she said. "I am really excited about this show, though."

All the works in the show will be on sale as well as on display, an aspect of the center consistent with each and every exhibit. There will, however, be no judging of the show, as there are so many different themes and types of photography. There may be a People's Choice award given out by a vote from gallery patrons, but no real judging. The exhibit begins May 9 with a

"meet the photographer" reception from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. held at the center, which is located at 415 Main in Lewiston: The featured artists will be there to meet with patrons and talk about their works

According to MATT: Soundtrack to the movie Barb Wire

Pamela Anderson Lee's new shoot-em-up movie Barb Wire has a soundtrack full of quality classics from the 70s and 80s that just won't quit. (Kinda like, not "bad" meaning "bad," but "bad" meaning

Matt West

Contributing Writer "good.") As a special bonus Tommy Lee of Motley Crue performs the first track, "Welcome to Planet Boom." It isn't the greatest display of drumming, but at least you can listen to Tommy Lee and not have to watch him play the drums in his skivvies. "Welcome to Planet Boom" has a catchy rhythm of hard guitars and punchy drums. The first track sets the stage for a soundtrack with a metal edge.

edge. Other great 70s and 80s found on this soundtrack include Michael Hutchence's (INXS) rendition of "Spill The Wine." Hutchence has a good voice and some of my friends who also listened in on the song thought it was the original, only more up tempo. Also, Cameo's "Word Up" is done by a band called Gun, and to the best of my knowledge sounds very similar to the original "C'mon baby tell me what's the word— Word Up!" One of my favorites, "Hot Child In The City—runnin' wild and lookin' pretty," is done by Hagfish. Don't ask me the names behind Hagfish it doesn't matter, this band has revved up the song to its maximum genuine potential.

Finally, Salt 'n Pepa wrap up this wonderful party disc with their "Barb Wire Metal Mix" of "None of Your Business." "None of Your Business" doesn't quite live up to expectations associated with a characteristic like "Barb Wire Metal Mix." Nonetheless the song adds another genre to the soundtrack.

I hope Pamela Lee Anderson will be able to live up to the quality of the movie's soundtrack.

I understand this is a rare "thumbs-up" from this Matt; however, this soundtrack's unique blend of metal and one-hit wonders has been pulled-off successfully. (Or, maybe it's because Blind Melon isn't on the album.) I also give a "thumbs-up" to an album that possesses me with a song that won't leave my head, i.e. "Hot Child In The City."

With eleven tracks in all, you may want to spend your money on the Barb Wire soundtrack and forego the movie.

Matt Bakiwin Contributing Writer

Tommy Lee starts off the first track with a mixture of Buttrock and techno, creating a synth-induced migraine. Oh, before I forget, the track features his bad-acting wife Pamela Anderson Lee.

Pray that the upcoming film Barb Wire is not reflected by its horrid soundtrack, featur-

Before I rip into this more let me preface by saying there were a few good songs on the album, but they came far apart. Shampoo's track, "Don't Call Me Babe," Shampoo's track, "Don't Call Me Babe," is the best song off of the album. "Don't Call Me Babe" mixes an interesting bit of guitar but leaves the beauty of the song to the female vocals of Shampoo.

Another good song on the album is Hagfish with "Hot Child In The City." The song is relatively fast paced, but maintains a plateau that doesn't make it too fast or too "Hot Child In The City" sounds like neobunk mixing some of the old-school punk with Top 40 give-me-the-label-of-punk sound. With this fault though, it is still a good song.

The last good song on the album is Die Cheerleader's "Dancing Barefoot." It too is melody based, something I can't say is intrinsic to some of the other songs on the album. The vocals are female. The music drifts in and out of distinctness and blending.

ing. "Word Up," track four by Gun, epitomizes the problems I have with this album. The song's lyrics are based around the phrase "word up." The singers combine bland guitar with bland vocals to spell out "word up" over and over until it drones into the background making the listener feel nauseous.

Before I depart and leave Barb Wire on the table, giving my tortured ears a rest, I will say one more thing. Salt 'n Pepa are combined with heavy metal music, leaving a bad aftertaste on the tongue.

From start to finish the soundtrack to Barb Wire is a gallery of the grotesque. It seems that I have heard all of these songs before except done in a better way. If you want to buy an album, avoid the Barb Wire soundtrack.
