University puts registration on WWW

Bryant J. Kuechle
Staff

No longer will registration at the University of Idaho be restricted to the local phone lines. Beginning with the upcoming spring semester, it will be easily done over the World Wide Web.

"Students that are not computer experts can use this easily," said Registrar Reta Pikowsky. "It's just point and click. I don't think anyone should have a problem with it."

The web sight will be able to be accessed directly or through the UI homepage. After students have logged in their ID and PIN number, they are given many of the same options as the old computer registration: they can create a schedule, add and drop classes, and change their addresses.

If it is not your specified registration time according to your last name, the new program will give you the correct time in which you can register.

There is also an added feature in selecting classes which allows students to choose a time, days, subject or instructor specific to their schedule and the program will find those classes that fit their criteria.

The university has plans to make more aspects of students' collegiate life easier through the

"Eventually all the information that you might go to an office to find out about you can go to the web instead," Programmer Analyst Tonya Heikkinen said.

The next project for the WWW is to allow students to access their transcripts. Within a year it will also be possible to view a checklist of classes a student needs to complete within his/her field of study.

Touch-tone phone registration will still be available, with minor changes. Instructions on how to access and use the web sight will soon be "plastered across campus," said Pikowsky. The Argonaut will also run instructional information.

Workshop gives career selection advice

contributed story

By her third semester as a University of Idaho student majoring in biology, sophomore Jessica Winkle, 19, was certain of one thing: She hated biology.

After 15 years of successfully running various Moscow daycare centers, Shirley Richards, a non-traditional UI freshman, was ready to broaden her horizons. But she didn't have a clue which road would be right for her.

At the height of the season for pre-registration advising, both women decided to seek guidance to help set them on the right path before deciding which spring semester classes to sign up for.

As a result, each ended up at a weekly afternoon workshop Monday at the UI Student Counseling Center, a workshop designed to give them the help they wanted.

Deciding on a career is a journey that begins with choosing which courses to take and declaring an academic major, said Steve Saladin, a counseling center psychologist who, among other things, specializes in career development.

"The trick is to find something that fits you," Saladin said. "If you know yourself really well, the decision will be easy. The problem is most people don't know themselves really well."

Exercises done by students attending the workshop assess student interests and abilities and suggest three leading career possibilities.

Does it work?

"Biology wasn't on there as a suggestion for me," Winkle said. "It helped me realize my strengths and interests are probably more in psychology and business. Hopefully it will help at registration."

A grandmother of four, Richards said, "I thought it was very helpful."

She now intends to pick up a spring semester catalog to find out what kind of social work and counseling classes will be offered.

Sophomore Geneva Karaba, 19, wasn't so sure. "It gave me the tools to figure out what I want to do," she said. "So if I focus on finding a career it will be helpful."

Saladin cautioned that the career suggestions offered are just a guide to help get students started. The average person, he said, changes careers seven to nine times in a lifetime.

Saladin's workshop is called "Deciding on a Career: Where Do I Start?"

It is held every Monday afternoon from 3:30 to 5 p.m. at the Student Counseling Center, Room 309 in the UCC. Appointments are necessary and can be made by calling 885-6716.

Senate reviews meeting with WSU

Andrew White
Staff

The Senate met Wednesday after returning from a joint session at Washington State University. Several bills passed the senate and numerous senators expressed their appreciation for the involvement of both students and citizens in their participation in this year's elections.

Shana Plasters, ASUI program assistant, thanked the senate for the joint session with WSU. "It was a great step forward," she said.

"It went really well. It was very informative and we were able to discuss ways we do things with them as well as ideas they have and ways they do things with us," said ASUI Senator Brian Tenney.

During Brian Kane's presidential communications, he told the senate he was very pleased with the joint session of the senate between UI and WSU. "It's the first time in history it's ever happened," Kane said.

He told the senate that it was a first step in the cooperative effort to bring the UI and WSU closer together and utilize both universities' resources.

Kane also congratulated the senate on the voter registration effort. "I want to congratulate everyone in the ASUI who was involved with the voter registration and the One Percent rally."

Kane also told the senate that in the City of Moscow there was a 70 percent voter turnout, "which was really fantastic."

Campus safety is being upgraded with the addition of 21 new lights located around the residence hall areas. The cost of the new lights was around $41,000.

SB F96-26 unanimously passed the senate, providing for the creation of an ASUI judicial council. The senate hopes the judicial council will increase efficiency and productively in student affairs.

Lori Manzanares was unanimously appointed to the position of Programs Board Chair.

Senator Mahmood Sheikh expressed disappointment about ASUI candidates and negative campaigning on campus.

Facilities Management begins new system

Shanna Nelson
Staff

A team maintenance system recently introduced on campus by Facilities Management provides a faster, more efficient response to requests for minor repairs, said Tim Miller, assistant director of Building Services.

The key to this system is the Maintenance Response Team, a group of individuals responsible for minor maintenance and repair of general education facilities on campus. The team operates from a new truck — a shop on wheels — that can be sent to buildings when service is requested, Miller said.

Purchased for $22,250, the truck is highly visible with traditional University of Idaho markings and "Maintenance Response Team" printed on each side. The truck includes a complete set of tools, maintenance equipment and replacement parts.

"It's a real benefit to have our tools and supplies on the job site," said Mose Kimberling, senior maintenance craftsman. This eliminates the need of running back to a shop, located north of campus, for parts and tools.

A major advantage of the team approach includes a reduction in lost productivity time. Maintenance personnel now combine their strengths and work together for better results. Working together also provides more training opportunities, Miller said.

There are two teams. Each includes one team leader and two craftsmen or mechanics. The first team works from 5:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. and the second team from 2 p.m. to 11 p.m.

Prior to this approach, all maintenance personnel worked a standard day-shift. "With extended coverage, we now have the ability to get into classrooms and areas otherwise in use during normal business hours," Miller said.

When repairs are scheduled for a particular facility, the team coordinator will determine if there are other problems that can be solved during that visit rather than returning numerous times in one week.

"Our goal is to serve the campus community better through regular inspections of university facilities," Miller said. "We will be doing more preventive maintenance and take a proactive approach rather than waiting until something breaks."

This new approach also has reduced costs, said Miller.

Before the team approach, the campus was divided into seven main areas. Each area housed a maintenance craftsman or building manager with an office, telephone, computer and campus vehicle. The managers typically responded to requests only for their assigned areas.

With the new system, university departments should call the Customer Service Center at Facilities Management (885-6246).

Problems may also be reported to the custodial staff, Miller said. All requests are then given to Kimberling and scheduled according to campus location and priority.

Miller has not received any complaints associated with the team. "However, we are in a transitional stage that requires an adjustment period," he said.

Phi Kappa Phi offers $7,000 fellowships

The University of Idaho Chapter of the National Honor Society of Phi Kappa Phi invites applications from outstanding senior students for competitive fellowships worth up to $7,000 for first-year graduate or professional study.

Fifty of these prestigious fellowship will be awarded nationwide. Thirty additional honorable mention awards of $1,000 will be made.

The UI chapter will select one nominee for consideration in the national competition. The nominee automatically will receive an active-for-life membership in The Honor Society of Phi Kappa Phi.

The criteria for selection include scholastic achievement, standardized test scores, participation in honors and enrichment programs, leadership in university and community activities, statement of study plans and career goals, and evaluations by faculty.

Graduating seniors with superior academic and leadership records should call UI Phi Kappa Phi officers Dr. John Yost at 885-6651 or Dr. Edward Bechinski at 885-5972 for application forms.

Jan. 15, 1997, will be the deadline for submission of application forms and supporting materials.

Phi Kappa Phi, which was founded in 1897, has more than 270 chapters at universities and colleges across the nation. It is the only major national scholastic honor society that recognized academic excellence in all disciplines.

The Fellowship Program has provided more than 1,200 fellowships and 400 honorable mention awards since its inception in 1932.

Last year nine awards went to students from universities in the Western Region.

Pit Crews provide free assistance

Shanna Nelson
Staff

Parking and Information Services does more than just write tickets. They also provide a free service that many students are not aware of.

The Motor Assistance program, introduced in 1994, offers emergency vehicle services to University of Idaho parking permit owners at no extra charge.

"We didn't raise permit prices to create this program," said Pam Alsterlund, director of Parking and Information Services. "It's a value-added service for students and faculty."

Emergency services include unlocking vehicles, providing jumper cables to start a vehicle and providing aid in changing a flat tire. Motor Assistance "Pit Crews" will also provide transportation to and from a retail gasoline station, as well as provide a gasoline container.

Identification, including a Vandal ID card and a driver's license, must be shown to a Pit Crew officer before any service is performed. Assistance seekers must also sign a disclaimer agreeing to hold harmless UI, Parking and Information Services and the State of Idaho for any damages sustained to their vehicle.

Motor assistance is available Monday through Friday from 7:30 a.m. to 9 p.m. with an exception for lock-out vehicle requests.

"Right now, we have 10 employees who are trained to use the lock-out tools," Alsterlund said. Because the tools are kept at Parking Services under lock and key, this service is provided from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. only.

Assistance is limited to the UI campus. "Our mission is not to take away from locksmith businesses in town," Alsterlund said.

Pit Crews are not allowed to tow or assist with pushing vehicles stuck in snow for liability reasons, Alsterlund said. However, crews can provide sand for traction during the winter.

Alsterlund recommends that all students and faculty commuting to campus toss a bag of sand in the back for added weight as well as for emergency traction during the winter.

To avoid being locked out of your car, Alsterlund also recommends purchasing a magnetic key box that can be placed in a secure location underneath the car.

So far this year, Motor Assistance has helped over 75 permit holders, Alsterlund said. To contact Motor Assistance, call 885-6424.

Sigma Nu wins national award

Andrea Lucero
Staff

Overall excellence earned the University of Idaho Sigma Nu chapter honorable recognition in the meeting of the 57th Grand Chapter of Sigma Nu.

The Delta Omicron chapter of Sigma Nu was presented the Rock Chapter award in San Antonio, Texas. The award is given once every two years. If none of the 239 international chapters of Sigma Nu are deemed worthy, the award is not given.

"The award is a great honor because it is given out only if a chapter really deserves it," explained Eric Wofel, president of the Delta Omicron chapter of Sigma Nu.

Delta Omicron was one of seven recipients of the award for 1996. The Rock chapter award is given to chapters who display excellence for a minimum of three successive years in scholarship, campus leadership, candidate education, rush, chapter home maintenance, ritual, chapter finance, special service projects, social programs, athletics, alumni support etc. This is Delta Omicron's first possession of the award.

"The award is the highest commendation a Sigma Nu chapter can receive," said Wofel. "The award really helps boost house morale and pride. It also helps us out during rush."

Sigma Nu was also recognized for its performance in grades with an honorable mention for the Sigma Nu National Scholarship Award. The Delta Omicron chapter earned this award with a 3.01 grade-point average for the spring semester of 1996.

This grade marking was second among fraternities on the UI campus and fifth of all Sigma Nu chapters internationally.

Humanities Council invites grant proposals

The Idaho Humanities Council, the state-based affiliate of the National Endowment for the Humanities, invites grant proposals from individuals and organizations for its winter grant deadline.

Final proposals are due Jan. 15; however, IHC staff recommends that prospective applicants call and discuss their proposals with staff as soon as possible and submit rough drafts any time before Dec. 15.

IHC is a public non-profit organization whose purpose is to increase the awareness, appreciation, and understanding of local history, literature, philosophy, archaeology, law, comparative religion, cultural anthropology, and other humanities disciplines.

Over the past 20 years in Idaho, the IHC has awarded grants for museum displays, traveling exhibits, oral history projects, lecture series, public television and public radio programming, scholarly research, institutes for teachers, public conferences, and numerous other educational activities.

With support from Ore-Ida Foods, the IHC also offers Ore-Ida Humanities Grants for Teachers. Ore-Ida grants are limited to $1,000 for elementary and high school teachers to improve or develop new units or courses in the humanities.

"We recommend that even experienced grant writers submit rough drafts of proposals," says Rick Ardinger, Interim Executive Director of the IHC. "By reviewing rough drafts, we can offer advice on how to fine-tune proposals so that prospective grantees receive the best possible review by IHC's board of directors."

For more information about IHC grants, contact the Idaho Humanities Council at 217 W. State Street, Boise, Idaho 83702, or call 345-5346, or toll free at (888) 345-5346.

Robert Kennedy Jr. to speak at WSU

Robert F. Kennedy Jr. will speak at Compton Union Building tomorrow at 7 p.m.

Robert F. Kennedy Jr., who has directed several successful environmental legal actions, will discuss "Our Environmental Destiny" during a talk tomorrow on the Washington State University campus.

The 7 p.m. talk, set for the Compton Union Building Carey Ballroom, is open to the public without charge.

Kennedy has prosecuted governments and companies for polluting the Hudson River and Long Island Sound, forcing sewage treatment plants to comply with the Clean Water Act. He is considered "a pioneer as an attorney in the area of municipal and government responsibility for environmental problems."

Kennedy serves as an attorney for the Hudson Riverkeeper and the Natural Resources Defense Council. He also is a professor and supervising attorney at the Environmental Litigation Clinic at Pace University School of Law in New York.

He has worked on several political campaigns and was state coordinator Edward M. Kennedy's 1980 presidential campaign.

He is credited with leading the fight to protect New York City's water supply. He also helped lead the fight to turn back the anti-environmental legislation during the 104th Congress.

Kennedy graduated from Harvard University and studied at the London School of Economics. He received his law degree from the University of Virginia Law School. He then attended Pace University School of Law, where he was awarded a master's degree in environmental law.

He is a licensed master falconer. Kennedy has organized and led several expeditions in Latin America, including first descents on three little-known rivers in Peru, Columbia and Venezuela. Kennedy's visit is sponsored by the Associated Students of WSU's Lecture and Performance Series Committee.

Environmental group seeks to limit Idaho's authority

LEWISTON (AP) — A Northwest environmental group is asking the Environmental Protection Agency to revoke Idaho's authority to enforce federal clean water standards and hazardous waste regulations because of the state's controversial environmental audit law.

But the administrator of the Idaho Division of Environmental Quality defends the state's ability to administer the environmental programs, saying their adequacy has not been questioned.

Northwest Environmental Advocates believes several states have enacted environmental audit laws that are at odds with their role in the federal enforcement system, said Craig N. Johnston, an attorney for the Portland-based group. Oregon is the only other Northwest state with an environmental audit law, but the group has not challenged Oregon's law yet, he said.

Idaho's law grants immunity from civil and criminal penalties to companies that voluntarily disclose audits that show violations of environmental regulations and develop compliance plans. It also exempts from public disclosure audit reports and other information considered confidential by firms and submitted to state environmental regulators.

Johnston contends Idaho no longer has sufficient statutory authority to administer enforcement programs under the federal Safe Drinking Water Act and Resource Conservation and Recovery Act.

Idaho's environmental audit law allows companies to withhold relevant records from state agencies if the records are part of an environmental audit, he said. That is a direct conflict with both the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act and EPA regulations, he said.

States must have the ability to sue for civil and criminal penalties under the act, Johnston said, and Idaho's law overrides such authority.

The environmental audit law also "raises substantial questions regarding the ability of the state to force the cessation of any ongoing illegal activities after a permit application has been submitted," he wrote in an Oct. 11 letter to EPA regional administrator Chuck Clarke of Seattle.

Idaho Division of Environmental Quality Administrator Wally Cory said he is concerned about anything that would jeopardize the state's authorization from the EPA to administer environmental programs.

In a letter to Clarke, he said he is convinced the state government's proximity to, and experience with, the issues and environment of Idaho make DEQ the right agency to administer the environmental programs.

"In the past, the EPA has never had issue with the adequacy of DEQ's enforcement activities under the programs for which EPA has granted the state primary."

If the EPA determines new issues have been raised by Northwest Environmental Advocates, he urged Clarke to discuss the concerns with him before taking formal action.

Critics flay Clinton's college aid proposals

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — President Clinton is touting college aid tax credit proposals, but critics fear they could help the middle class at the expense of lower income students.

Clinton's plans would give a tax cut of up to $1,500 a year for students or their families. Students would need a B average to qualify for the program's second and final year.

The second program would provide a deduction of up to $10,000 from taxable income of families with students in a career school, undergraduate program or graduate school.

People qualifying for both programs would choose between the two.

Maureen McLaughlin, deputy assistant secretary with the U.S. Education Department, told the Omaha World-herald that the two programs primarily would target families with incomes between $20,000 and $80,000. She said those families earn too much to qualify for the maximum Pell Grant of $2,470 a year, but not enough to put children through college on their own.

John Beacon, financial aid director at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, said he is concerned that Pell Grants and work-study programs, generally designed to benefit low-income students, might suffer from a new emphasis on tax incentives for middle-class students and their families. Money could be taken away from the Pell program to subsidize tax incentives, he said.

The financial aid director at Metro Community College in Omaha, Danni Warrick, said the federal government should make more people eligible for Pell Grants instead of starting new programs.

Ms. Warrick also questioned some of the details of Clinton's proposals, such as requiring a B average for the second year of the tax cut program. "Do they submit a grade report with a tax return?" she asked.

Education Department officials said many details have not been worked out.

Lewiston cooperative reduces electric rates

LEWISTON (AP) — Electric rates will drop an average of 7.21 percent next year for local customers of the Clearwater Power Cooperative.

The lower rates are the result of the company shopping for new power sources in a deregulated wholesale marketplace and the Bonneville Power Administration reducing what it charges the cooperative for electricity.

General manager John Pankey announced the rate decrease, effective Jan. 1, at the cooperative's annual meeting Friday. It is the second rate decrease in the cooperative's history. The first was in 1947, Pankey said.

Clearwater Power serves some 8,500 households in rural areas of 11 counties in Idaho, Washington and Oregon.

Starting Oct. 1, 1998, Clearwater Power will get half its electricity from Powerex, the U.S. marketing arm of B.C. Hydro in British Columbia, Canada, Pankey said.

Powerex has guaranteed a five-year fixed price for the electricity at a rate below the BPA's present rate.

The BPA, which has been supplying all Clearwater Power's needs, has agreed to let the cooperative make the switch, Pankey said.

"Bonneville Power also realized, finally, they were charging us rates that were over market and they gave us a rate decrease as of Oct. 1, 1996," he said.

As a result, Pankey said, Clearwater Power's nine-member board of directors voted to refund money to consumers for October and November. The average member using 1,100 kilowatt hours per month of electricity will get a check of about $51 before Christmas.

Sri Lankan police detain four Danish journalists

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — Police detectives arrested four Danish journalists who had come to the country to report on a Sri Lankan teenager who was deported from Denmark last week, officials said Sunday.

The journalists were arrested Saturday and were given a seven-day detention order. They are being held in a hotel in a Colombo suburb, said Gowry Thavarasha, a lawyer for the journalists.

"Police say they are checking their identities, and whether they had followed proper immigration procedures," said Thavarasha.

Police officials weren't immediately available for comment.

The journalists arrived in Sri Lanka to report on Chitra Rajendran, an 18-year-old Tamil girl who was deported from Denmark after being rejected as an immigrant.

The police say they are checking to see if she has any links with the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam, a Tamil rebel group fighting for a separate homeland in the country's north and east.

"The police confiscated my camera with a film in it, and the video cassettes of another journalist," said Ole Hoff-Lund, a journalist from Denmark's Berlingske Tidende newspaper, who is being detained.

In a telephone interview, Hoff-Lund said the government had overreacted, and that they had done "nothing wrong or created problems for the Sri Lankan government." Their hotel rooms are being guarded by six policemen, and they are not allowed to leave.

"This is an attack on the press freedom we are used to," said Hoff-Lund.

Denmark's TV2 reporter Jens Moeller, Morten Jastrup from the Information newspaper and Nis Olsen from the Politiken newspaper are the others in detention.

The journalists can be released within seven days or deported, said Thavarasha.

"I have informed the Danish government about the arrest, but haven't had any reaction yet," Palle Bjoern Rasmussen, Denmark's Consul General in Sri Lanka, told the Associated Press.

Police want to investigate if the visitors declared in their visa applications that they are journalists, or if they came as tourists under a false pretext.

Democrats and Republicans hope to move forward

BOISE (AP) — With the elections over, Democrats and Republicans say they will seek an end to the congressional gridlock that has slowed logging, allowed fisheries to decline and turned many Western neighbors into enemies.

Now both parties hope to bring peaceful resolution to this "War in the West" by looking beyond Washington D.C., for answers.

"I think we've shown we can stalemate one another," said Sen. Dirk Kempthorne.

"Now let's get on to the public's business."

Kempthorne and the other three members of Idaho's all-Republican delegation will take leading roles in the GOP Congress on mining, forestry, wildlife and water.

How their agendas fit with the Clinton administration's could have a profound effect on the quality of life in Idaho, where people boat, hike, bike, hunt, fish and ski on federal lands, and where the timber industry, ranching and mining still are important employers.

Kempthorne may be the first to test President Clinton's promise to work with Republicans in moving the nation forward. After his own endangered species bill was dismissed by Democrats and moderate Republicans, Kempthorne began crafting a bipartisan bill earlier this year.

"I'd say we have 70 percent of the legislation written so far," Kempthorne said.

"A significant portion is bipartisan."

He hopes his bill will be one of the first introduced in 1997, and he is confident he can get a bill Clinton will sign.

Sen. Larry Craig will continue to set the agenda on forest issues in the Senate. He introduced a forest health bill designed to loosen the restrictions on national forest lands so that dead and dying timber could be salvaged and fire threats reduced.

He has promised to seek an overhaul of the National Forest Management Act of 1976 to resolve the agencies' conflicting laws and mandates. That could affect how much timber is cut on the Payette and Boise National forests and whether more money is available for recreational trails and campgrounds in the Sawtooth National Recreation Area and the Frank Church-River-of-No Return Wilderness. It also could affect how much elk habitat is protected.

GUESS WHAT?

These jobs have good pay, require little training

HOUSTON (AP) — If you're looking for a good-paying job but don't want to spend more time in college or vocational school, here are four career possibilities: postal mail carrier, postal clerk, roustabout and seaman.

But in every case these are tough jobs to get.

Those jobs generally require just a month or less of on-the-job training, yet pay so well that the occupations, based on median wages, are among the top 25 percent in the country, according to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Postal clerks, for example, earned an average of $628 a week in 1994 (the most recent data available), seamen earned $634, postal carriers received $647 a week, while roustabouts raked in $651 a week.

Jobs at the post office and at sea are highly unionized, and the unions are strong, said Neal Rosenthal, chief of the division of occupational outlook for the labor bureau in Washington, D.C. And the oil industry, which hires roustabouts, is a high-paying industry across the board.

But these jobs won't change the fact that more education pays off in higher salaries and more career opportunities. Consider the limited opportunities in these four fields.

The demand for postal mail carriers shouldn't change between 1994 and 2005, but another 85,000 will be needed to replace the carriers who retire or die.

An expectation of expanded mail volume should boost the need for postal service clerks by 5 percent during that same time, but only 41,000 new clerks will be needed for growth and to replace those who leave the job, according to the labor bureau.

That doesn't stop the flood of people who want to become postal clerks.

When applications were taken last year in Houston, there were lines around the post offices, said Lawana Haynes, chief steward of the North Houston postal facility for the Houston area local of the American Postal Workers Union.

Haynes, who is also a postal clerk, gets 20 to 30 calls a week from people who want to become clerks. And there are between 20 and 30 stewards in the Houston area who are fielding a similar number of calls.

The benefits are good and the job pays well — an average of about $17.50 an hour — considering you don't need much education, Haynes said. That high pay discourages turnover.

The future need for roustabouts is limited, too. While drilling has picked up recently, the number of workers needed in this business has been reduced by more efficient tools and more productive ways to look for oil, according to the labor bureau.

Demand for seamen, meanwhile, will drop 3 percent between 1994 and 2005, the labor bureau predicts. The United States has a shrinking foothold in oceangoing industries nowadays, Rosenthal said.

If a little more on-the-job training doesn't sound bad, the labor bureau has a few more careers to consider: low-pressure boiler operator and tender ($590 a week in 1994) or machine operator, dairy processing equipment operator and chemical equipment controller (all $626 a week in 1994).

They all require on-the-job training that takes between one month and a year. And they're also among the top 25 percent of occupations, in terms of median pay.

For the bad news, if you don't want to put in four or more years in college and then end up with a low-paying job, stay away from farm management.

Farm managers are generally required to have work experience plus a bachelor's degree or more, yet they earned an average weekly wage of only $320 in 1994.

Witness's story counters police statement

BOISE (AP) — A witness to Wednesday night's shooting of a 20-year-old Boise man says a police statement does not reflect what she saw.

On Friday, the Boise Police Department released a statement saying Detective Dave Smith feared for his life and shot Ryan Matthew Hennessey only after he grabbed Smith's gun.

According to the statement, Hennessey fought with Smith, kicking and hitting him up to five times each. It also said that Smith tried to fend off Hennessey by striking him with a flashlight.

Ann Logsdon, 30, watched the struggle from outside her home.

"I didn't see any flashlight," Logsdon said. Patty Billington, Hennessey's mother, said the family has hired an attorney to investigate the shooting.

"We're strained and we're all very tired," Billington said. "We're hurt because we don't feel this was a justifiable act."

On Wednesday night, Logsdon said she saw Smith and a woman rush up and force Hennessey out of his 1986 Ford Mustang.

Smith forced Hennessey down onto his knees and was in the process of handcuffing him when Hennessey turned and punched Smith, she said.

"He was hitting the cop," she said.

"I heard one shot and saw the guy go down."

Friday's police statement said Hennessey tried twice to start his car and that Hennessey grabbed Smith's tie during a struggle at the car.

Hennessey, 20, had a blood alcohol content of .27 percent, which is almost three times the legal limit.

In countdown to single currency, accounting games abound in Europe

LONDON (AP) — As Europe stumbles toward a single currency, national treasurers are furiously slashing budget deficits to meet rules for taking part.

At least on paper they are. Some economists say the European Union nations are merely juggling numbers in a game that could cause problems if it gets out of hand and undermines the fiscal credibility of the currency, dubbed the euro.

The euro is due to be launched in 1999 among the 15 EU nations whose fiscal houses are in order. Not surprisingly, they all claim to be getting close to the target for budget deficits, which must be no more than 3 percent of a nation's gross domestic product.

And politicians at EU headquarters in Brussels, Belgium, agree. The strict economic criteria, including low inflation and interest rates, must be met before nations can take part in the single currency program.

"These impressive improvements are achieved by really scraping the bottom of the barrel — a lot are one-off measures," said Norman Williams, European economist with the London brokerage Barclays de Zoete Wedd.

Commentator Martin Woollacott in the Guardian newspaper was blunter, complaining "standards of honesty are being abandoned."

France raised eyebrows with plans to shift 37.5 billion francs, or $7.5 billion, from the France Telecom pension fund to the national treasury. It explained the move as an advance payment on retirement benefits the government must pay after the phone company is privatized.

Germany, whose people would stand to lose the most if their strong Deutsche mark is brought down by an ill-conceived marriage with weaker currencies, complained loudly about the French plan.

"There are severe question marks over its legitimacy in international accounting terms," said Darren Williams, senior European economist at UBS Ltd. in London. "It's very much borderline."

But the European Commission, the EU's executive agency in Brussels, okayed the French maneuver, stirring fears of more creative accounting by other nations trying to get their fiscal acts together.

Spain and Italy are most often cited as problem nations, with some experts saying they will be left out — along with Greece — when the single currency begins circulating.

Britain has not yet decided whether to go along with the currency plan, which could be politically explosive among voters who view the EU as an infringement on their sovereignty. Britain four years ago withdrew its pound from the group's exchange rate mechanism, which closely sets exchange rate fluctuations among EU currencies, and the economy has done better ever since.

Thus far, only tiny Luxembourg has met every requirement for the single currency.

"There has been a lot of optimism about Italy and Spain the last few weeks based on accounting tricks," Norman Williams said. "We think those hopes will be disappointed."

He recently revised his estimates and predicts Italy's budget deficit for 1996 will be 7 percent of gross domestic product, more than twice the allowable level. This is bound to cause problems as Italy tries to pare its deficit.

"Not any transaction or any fiddle is admissible," Norman Williams said.

To be sure, some economists, including Jim Fralick at Morgan Stanley in London, believe France is on firm ground and complaints about the fiscal tricks have been overstated. "If it were simply an outright gimmick, we'd be more concerned about it," Fralick said.

The issue seems certain to cause collisions between politics and hard-headed fiscal strategy.

A division between the politicians and central bankers appeared Thursday, when the European Commission said at least 12, and maybe 14, EU members will have their budget deficits in order by next year.

Greece was the only certain failure, with Britain and Italy placed into a question-mark category.

"There are various bits and bobs flying around in other countries," Darren Williams said.

Italy is perhaps worst about its accounting tricks, he said. "We don't actually know what they are because they won't tell us."

Powell would consider joining Clinton cabinet

ORLANDO, Florida (AP) — Nearly four years after bowing out of the first Clinton cabinet, retired Army Gen. Colin Powell said he would consider being a part of the president's second term if an offer came his way.

No offers have been made, Powell told The Orlando Sentinel in a story published Saturday. But, he said: "You always have to listen to your president."

The former national security adviser and chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff has been mentioned as a possible candidate for secretary of state or secretary of defense.

Powell denied rumors during the Republican National Convention in August that presidential nominee Bob Dole had offered to make him secretary of state if elected.

The White House on Friday would not say whether Powell, a Republican, was being considered for a cabinet position.

After winning re-election Tuesday, Clinton said he would consider a bipartisan cabinet to work with the Republican Congress.

Powell, while in Orlando Friday to deliver a speech to 5,000 members of an auto-repair convention, dismissed questions about whether he will seek the presidency in 2000.

"Right now, I'm enjoying life," he said.

ASUI election preview

Elections for ASUI positions will be held Wednesday, Nov. 20. All candidates were invited to submit a blurb for the Argonaut.

Below are the submissions from the senator candidates. Look for the president and vice-president candidates' submissions in the Nov. 19 edition.

Editor's note: candidates were given a 200-word limit. Some submissions were edited to comply with this limit.

Aaron Baldwin

I am Aaron Baldwin, I am running for ASUI Senate and I am more than qualified to represent the students of the University of Idaho as a student.

By now most of you are sick of the empty rhetoric of the political windbags you have heard for the last several months. I am not a politician and have no desire to be. I am a student, plain and simple, who will work for the students.

For far too long students have not known where to turn with concerns and ideas or been unsure of access, but I have a solution. If we create an ASUI help line that will help to bridge the gaps between students and the machine that is the ASUI, we can tear down the walls and build students, leaders, and the university.

I propose the creation of an 885-ASUI line for students to call in on and voice their concerns, we can leave our name for a response, or remain anonymous, but our concerns will be heard and acted upon.

The ASUI is our instrument, and we should use it as such. Please vote November 20.

Nathan Basford

Dear Students,

During the last year, I have watched the ASUI government do a lot of work that has only represented the feelings of groups which push hard for the Senate's passage. SOMETHING'S WRONG!

I feel that senators should go to the students instead of the students coming to them. If it is our job to represent the entire student body, a few things must be addressed.

1) The senators must keep in close contact with each of their student groups and colleges and provide a readily available communication link for them. My past experience shows that senators suddenly show up at election time. That is political bureaucracy, not representation.

2) I believe that off-campus students do not have a fair voice. Each living group and college is represented. This means on-campus is represented twice as much as off campus. Is this true representation???

So what about promises? Everybody makes them but do they keep them? As a result, I will only make one promise. My promise is to fight for you and try my very hardest to do what is right for each student at U of I. I want your suggestions!

Sincerely,
Nathan Basford

Krista Brady

Hello, my name is Krista Brady and I am running for ASUI Senate. I was appointed to the senate earlier this semester and have had the opportunity to experience and understand the professionalism and dedication necessary to represent the students of the University of Idaho.

I am currently working on a number of projects which include the on-line elections, organization of a High School Leadership Conference, and securing the Kibbie Dome for a concert next semester.

I have the experience, capability and motivation required to complete these projects and the many which will follow in the upcoming term. In order to do so I ask for your vote on November 20. Thank you.

Ken DeCelle

My name is Ken DeCelle and I want to be your choice for ASUI Senator.

What, makes me any different than the other candidates? Three things set me above the rest.

My determination: I don't take no for an answer. I will use every legal means necessary to get the job done. People do take notice when I become the squeakiest wheel to get the grease.

My experience and leadership: Soldier of the Year. I was also awarded a medal this summer for leadership in the field. But I know how to be a part of a team and I bring my experience, to make the team as successful as possible.

My innovation: Some have given up on a problem when they find that a problem on campus is out of their jurisdiction. What they have forgotten is that as students we are a union, and at 10,000 strong, a very powerful one. I will help us band together to alleviate problems like parking on campus. No one can say no to 10,000 united students!

For my stance on the issues, check my homepage at www.uidaho.edu/~dece9410/

Katie Heffelfinger

Hi, my name is Katie Heffelfinger and I am running for ASUI senator. I am a freshman and pursuing a degree in business.

As your senator, I plan to be actively involved. I will listen to your ideas, voice your opinions, and stand up for what you believe in when it comes to issues dealing with the senate.

Being involved means a lot to me, and it is something I take great pride in. I have never put forth anything less than my best in what I do.

I am already going to safety board meetings. As a student, I saw that there was a problem with the safety on our campus. I am not afraid to get to the bottom of a problem when I see one. Your problems are my problems too, and I will not hesitate to do something about them.

Once again, my name is Katie Heffelfinger, and I promise that when I am elected I will serve you to my utmost ability. Thank You.

Mandi Johnson

STUDENT EMPOWERMENT! One of the issues that needs to be addressed on the University of Idaho campus is the lack of student participation in the decision-making process.

Students are paying to attend this university, but the majority of decisions that are made each day are made by those that are paid to be here. There is an important distinction between the two. Students deserve a voice in making decisions that will affect their education.

Why do we have classes during dead week when most other major universities utilize this week for intense studying? Why are decisions made without student input? Empowerment of the student body is one of the many issues that I would like to pursue as an ASUI senator.

I am a sophomore in school with a double major in Political Science and Environmental Science and a minor in Women's Studies.

I am running for this office as a way to get involved in my education and the education of my peers. Other issues that I intend on pursuing if elected include the possibility of a much needed campus recreation center, as well as student apathy.

This is our university. We need to get involved.

Jamie Rewoldt

Hello. My name is Jamie Rewoldt, and I am running for ASUI Senate. I have a great deal of experience in Student Government.

I was Class Secretary/Treasurer and Associated Student Body Secretary/Treasurer my Sophomore year of high school, ASB Vice President my Junior year, and ASB President and a Senior Senator my Senior year.

I now hold an elected office in Alpha Phi, my sorority. I am currently pursuing a bachelor's degree in Pre-Veterinary medicine. Upon graduating, I plan to go on to Vet school.

I am extremely interested in the workings of our student government. When elected, I will devote my time to representing the needs of the students to the student government.

I believe that the duties of a senator are to express the views and ideas of the entire student body and to keep them informed. I would like to see more ideas for bills and decisions originating from students; not just government representatives.

I work at the information desk at the SUB, so stop by and talk to me, or contact me by email at rewo0250@novell.uidaho.edu. Please vote on November 20!

Remember the name JAMIE REWOLDT, for ASUI Senator.

Mahmood Sheikh

Hello Fellow Vandals!

My name is Mahmood Sheikh and I am a freshman from Moscow majoring in marketing. I was appointed to the ASUI senate this fall, but the term I am filling ends this semester.

I ask you for your support in my quest to continue my service to the students at the University of Idaho.

I am a senator who visits my living groups, fulfills my office hours and represents all students in the senate.

My goals for the future include, but are not limited to, working on raising money for the Moscow-Pullman Bike Trail as a student representative on the fundraising committee.

Another project I would like to work on is wisely spending a $25,000 grant given to the ASUI for safety and I want and will bring your concerns to the forefront.

I also hope to organize the first high school leadership conference at the UI. This way we can show our young leaders how great the University of Idaho is and recruit them to become a part of our family.

If you have any concerns or questions, please call me at 885-6944 and I would appreciate your support on November 20.

Please vote Mahmood Sheikh — "The name you know."

Vic Rodriguez

When elected ASUI senator I will be accessible at all times for students to come to me with their concerns. The senators position was created in order to serve the students of the University of Idaho. I am running because I see an excellent opportunity to serve my peers. I will bring integrity, experience, and commitment to this office.

As a senator and concerned citizen I would like to see a campus-wide recycling program adopted. The next step is implementing a recycling effort within the Greek houses and the various academic departments. Poor parking and lighting still plagues the campus. I will make sure these issues are given top priority.

Endorsements for Vic Rodriguez, ASUI Senate candidate: "Vic is dynamic. His opponents are merely idle observers." Justin Rader (sophomore, Zoology)

"Vic is a natural leader." Terah Douglass (sophomore, Forest Resources)

"Vic is an intelligent leader who understands what it takes to be successful." Matt Carter (5th year senior, Biology)

"Vic is a committed individual. He can transform an idea into reality." Martha Munoz (junior, Finance & Economics)

Vic is a senior in environmental science. He is an active member of Phi Gamma Delta and Organizacion de Estudiantes Latinos Americanos (OELA).

Dole defeats Clinton! and other post-election laughs

MADISON, Wis. (U-WIRE) — WASHINGTON — In an improbable comeback that made the 1948 election look like a sideshow, Republican presidential nominee Robert Dole pulled off the "upset of the century" with his defeat of incumbent Bill Clinton by a razor-thin margin late Tuesday.

"I told you we could do it, and we did!" Dole told an exuberant crowd at a victory rally in his hometown of Russell, Kan.

The Clinton camp, meanwhile, expressed shock at the unlikely results. As late as Tuesday evening, exit polls had shown Clinton holding a strong lead in key electoral states.

"We're just stunned," a glum Chief of Staff Leon Panetta said from campaign headquarters in Little Rock.

OK, so that's not totally accurate. Well, not even close. But wouldn't that have been a helluva lot more interesting? We hate to travel down such a well-beaten trail, but this election season certainly ranked as the dullest of our lifetime. As far as spectator events, it was down there with Super Bowl XXII (Washington pounds Denver), the 1985 Oscars (Amadeus sweeps!) and this weekend's upcoming heavyweight fight (Tyson KOs Holyfield in three).

At 7:45 p.m., our pizza hadn't even arrived yet and the networks were already declaring Clinton the victor. In fact, NBC was already declaring Gore the winner in the 2000 presidential race. ABC was rejoining "Home Improvement" already in progress. CNN's Candy Crowley had begun singing. It was over. Hooray.

The Badger Herald U of Wisconsin Richard Schwartz

Thought Your Parents Were Cruel! Dept.: the Democratic Senatorial candidate from New Hampshire was named Dick Sweit.

He lost. We could have told you that years ago.

Speaking of politician names that also could double as porno film titles, how about Lydia Spottswood?

On second thought, maybe it wasn't so bad to have your face morph into Newt Gingrich's.

"You have one message. Recorded Wednesday morning at 2:35 a.m. 'Yeah, Mr. Bigelow, this is Paul. You know, I kind of said some things I shouldn't have. I kind of made some pledges and I wasn't really thinking too much. Anyway, what I really want to say is ... uh ... well, do you think I could have the mayor's job back?"

If I had a dime bag for every Ben Masel vote ...

We turned in early so we couldn't see the late returns. However, if all the radical referenda in California did pass, we should begin seeing a flood of securities fraud lawsuits being prosecuted by litigators who are predominantly white males and extremely stoned.

Here's hoping that California's top referendum in the next election is for secession.

Just one question: Who would you rather be, Bob Dole or Richard Jewell?

And you thought you were wasting time by spending two hours on e-mail instead of working on your term paper? Think how Pat Choate feels right now.

That regretful kicking sound you hear is coming from Colin Powell's living room.

I turned on C-SPAN just in time to catch Delaware Sen. Joe Biden giving his acceptance speech.

Unfortunately, it was the same speech he had given in 1990 and 1984.

What I suspected when "The Jeff Foxworthy Show" was renewed last season was confirmed when Jesse Helms was re-elected last night. I'm moving to Canada.

Ninety-three year-old South Carolina Sen. Strom Thurmond was also re-elected, which means he'll be around to claim social security for the second time around. We had planned to say the best thing about the end of the campaign was that CNBC's Geraldo could now resume talking about the O. J. case. Until we turned on Geraldo ... and he was talking about the O.J. case.

Amid the speculation on who will stay and who will go from the Clinton Administration, we offer our predictions:

Spin doctor George Stephanopolous will leave the White House for Hollywood where he will proceed to chase after any role that Michael J. Fox turns down.

Warren Christopher will drop dead after looking in a mirror for the first time ever.

Health and Human Services Secretary Donna Shalala will meld with Labor Secretary Robert Reich to form one adult-sized person.

Senior advisor Dick Morris will launch his own 1-900 line featuring sexy girls reading advance copies of Clinton's State of the Union address.

Defense Secretary William Perry will return to the NFL.

And what do we make of Bill Clinton's second term? Fries. Lots and lots of fries.

Finally, "You won't have Apolitical Commentary to kick around anymore."

We must announce today that we're going the way of Sen. Dole and retiring from this column. In closing, we'd like to thank all of our supporters.

greatest tools known to man. For very serious long-term effects, like acute paranoia or homicidal tendencies, you usually have to start at a young age, but a lot of wonderful little annoyances can really mess people up for short periods of time. Humming while pretending not to be the one doing it is an oldie, but a goodie. (Tip: That one is also great in a classroom to disturb teachers.)

And next time you're in an elevator, instead of facing the door like a statue and looking at the numbers slide by, try turning around and putting your back to the door. Then you can look people square in the eyes and cause all sorts of commotion. This is so fun. I love it. Another great elevator brain game is to strike up random controversial conversations with the other strangers riding. ("So, do you think Scorse's Last Temptation of Christ should have been banned?") People will go nuts.

This is all that I can give you for now. If you've got a particular pet peeve, or a thing you love to do that bugs the heck out of someone else, let me know about it. E-mail me at perr9582@uidaho.edu and I'll be sure and let you know what I think. Annoyance is a very powerful thing. Use these tools wisely and remember, a little annoyance can go a long way. Blame work-out tapes for women's urge to hit BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (U-WIRE) — My roommate celebrated her 21st birthday a few weeks ago. The festivities kicked off early in the evening, and by midnight, besides being a little inebriated, she had also grown weary of our company.

Indiana Daily Student
Indiana U
Amy Webb

We were joined by a few mutual friends and two of her ex-boyfriends. While I was more than entertained by the banter, she decided the joking needed to end, so she promptly punched ex-boyfriend No. 1 in the shoulder. Ex-boyfriend No. 2 heartily laughed at her strength as ex-boyfriend No. 1 winced, so she popped him square in the jaw.

Why disseminate the more violent events of the evening? Because a recent article in the Utne Reader reports on female-male violence and the recent resurgence of women who not only have the capability, but the willingness to assault men.

Blame it on Claudia Schiffer's newest workout tape (golly, I bet she wrote the script herself). Women across America now feel the urge, if prompted, to physically strike a man. And as women say they have the "right" to hit a man if he deserves the attack, a simple line of analysis would prove this idea seriously wrong for a few reasons.

My feminist friends say women should be able to strike a man, yet these same feminist friends say if a woman hits a man, he cannot hit her back. At the same time, my less-thantactful male friends say if a woman hits them, they'd apply that same force that was applied to them. This amazing conclusion probably stems from the fact that most men are larger than the women with whom they keep company, which means they would surely win a physical fight.

What's the cause of the aggression? I think as women strive to attain more presence in the workplace, more equality in society and more respect from their male counterparts, they have adopted male characteristics to level the playing field. Women now dress in pants, ties, cut their hair shorter and work out just like men, in order to achieve their status.

Now that it is acceptable for a woman to be a bodybuilder, chew tobacco and uppercut a guy if she so feels, we need to consider the implications of our actions. Are we helping "our cause" of establishing equality between men and women if we continue to use physical aggression against a male, tell him he can't hit back and then freshen up our lipstick after the brawl?

Certainly not. So I propose a few alternative solutions. First, if some guy becomes bothersome, try to talk about the situation first. For instance, if I see a guy from Parking Operations ticketing my car because, after circling the library parking lot 50 times I decided to park on the curb, I could take that silly ticket-writer thing and smack him upside the head. But why not simply say, "Excuse me, Mr. Cool Parking Operations Man, can I explain to you why I parked here?"

Next, on a more general level, try to use femininity to your advantage, rather than your disadvantage. In the 1940s, women used their gender to get ahead. By today's standards, we'd call that pandering to the male archetype in society, but it worked for them. A woman would gain more ground by using her femininity rather than trying to adopt the characteristics of men.

At the end of the evening, my roommate had thoroughly irritated ex-boyfriends Nos. 1 and 2. She proceeded to slap, punch and smack each one of them all night. And while neither of them ever made the effort to hit back (not that they weren't thinking about it), I interjected. I explained to her hitting a boy was no longer in vogue. And then I reminded her they were both over 6-feet tall and weighed twice as much as she.

Ultimately, she came to her senses. Violence isn't necessary. Especially when you're trying to have fun.

Hunting: I just don't get the thrill of the kill

LINCOLN, Neb. (U-WIRE) — The following quote represents the ramblings of a madman: "Be vewwwwwy quiet. I'm hunting wabbits." That's right, I'm suggesting that loveable, bald Elmer Fudd is actually a bad man, a vewwwwwy bad man.

Now before you start labeling me as a hunter-hater and a hypocrite for eating meat myself, let me explain. I'm not naive enough to believe that the meat I eat is simply delivered to the store by the Meat Fairy, but if you hunt for food, that's a different story. Hunting for that purpose is OK. I'm talking about the hunters who kill just for the fun of it. That's why I despise good old Elmer J. Fudd; he is the stereotypical example of a bad hunter. He just goes out and tries to shoot whatever Daffy Duck says is in season.

But even though I tolerate it in certain situations, hunting just doesn't seem that fun to me. My dad tried to get me to go deer hunting with him one time. Here's a rough recollection of that conversation:

ME: Can I bring a radio? DAD: No music, it'll scare away the deer. ME: Can I tell jokes? DAD: No talking, it'll scare away the deer. ME: Can I bring something to eat? DAD: No food, the smell will scare away the deer. ME: When do we have to leave the house? DAD:

The Daily Nebraskan
U of Nebraska
Brent Pope

Before sunrise, so we don't scare away the deer. ME: So we'll have to bring flashlights, right? DAD: No flashlights, they'll scare away the deer. ME: What if I can't see and fall off of a cliff? DAD: No falling off cliffs, the noise will scare away the deer...

All of this brings me to the heart of what I'm getting at, which is this: I don't GET hunting. I mean, I just don't understand why it's still popular in this day and age. I think of hunting as something you do to get meat, and that's what I thought grocery stores were for.

There's got to be a less dangerous (and lazier) way to obtain meat and still have some of the "fun" that hunters have. Here are a few things that I came up with:

1. We could have a store where you can go in, grab a rifle, and shoot blanks at a man in a walrus costume. Then the man in the costume reels around for a while and finally collapses on the floor. Then you go in back and pick up meat from the butcher that supposedly comes from the animal that you "shot." (And the whole time the butcher tells you how you are a mighty walrus slayer.)

2. Or, we design a store where you grab a harpoon at the front door. Then you go to a giant swimming pool at the back of the store, get in a raft and harpoon the floating pieces of meat in the pool that you want to take home. (And the whole time you can pretend that you are Ismail the great whale hunter.)

3. How about this? A store where you get a bow and arrow and sit in a tree until a mechanical bull waddles in front of you. Then you shoot arrows at the bull until you hit it. And just in case you aren't a great shot, the bull keels over after three minutes and you can claim that you scared it to death!

4. Here's a new concept: Meat piñatas! One of those new-age stores could have piñatas hanging from the ceiling filled with your choice of meat. All you would have to do is grab a club and slug the piñata until it breaks and you are showered with a glorious batch of delicious beef jerky. (Conan would declare you a powerful Barbarian indeed.)

As you can see, there are plenty of exciting meat-gathering options other than actual hunting. And I didn't even mention CYBER-HUNTING and punching slabs of meat Rocky style. (YO!)

High Ground, art object, book, magazine all in one

Amy-Marie Smith
Staff

High Ground, a unique art publication is now out with its second annual edition. It is a cross between a magazine and a book — a compilation of area artists and culture — and comes with free stuff.

The title High Ground refers to the geographic location between the Rockies and the Cascades. The authors, husband-and-wife team Ross Coates and Marilyn Lysohir, are responsible for this innovative way of giving credit to artists in our area not previously showcased in such a way. "There isn't another publication that deals with what artists in the area are doing," Coates said.

The unique thing about High Ground is that it is so many different things all in one. Lysohir says it is an "art object, book, magazine collectible." She goes on to say that the publication "helps to store historical documentation of the area."

As previously stated it comes with free stuff. The first free tidbit you run across in the publication is a postcard. The card pictures some porcelain dinnerware by Helena, Mont., artist Sarah Jaeger. Another possible bonus is that in the 550 issues of High Ground, 20 of the postcards in them have on them a stamp informing the holder that he/she has won a prize. Upon sending the winning postcards in, the winners can expect in return some of the gorgeous pottery work done by Jaeger.

Another featured artist in this year's edition of High Ground is Spokane Nation citizen, Charlene Teters. She received the YWCA Racial Justice Award in 1991 for her strides made in racial understanding. Teters is responsible for a campaign to try and get sports teams to not use racial terms as team mascots. Her campaign motto: "People, Not Mascots." This edition of High Ground gives you a button with this motto and her icon of the Atlanta Braves Indian in a circle with a line through it.

On the inside cover of the last page of this year's edition of High Ground is a small booklet containing the history, and many stories from people who have studied the art of clay pottery at the Archie Bray Foundation. The Bray, as it is referred to in the art world in Helena, is a famous institute which has taught numerous people in the fine art of ceramics. A vile of "Real Bray Clay" is included.

Many other artists are showcased in High Ground's second edition. Mark Ruwedel is featured in the publication for his photography of the "Hanford Stretch" of the Columbia River.

"Outsider" artist James Castle and his works are also displayed in High Ground. The word "outsider," in terms of artists, refers to one who is self-taught. Castle was not only deaf, but also never learned to read or write. Sharpened twigs and other crude objects were used for his illustrations that he drew with ink he himself made from a combination of stove soot and his own saliva.

This year's copy of High Ground is available, in limited quantities, at Bookpeople in Moscow. You could also pick one up at the Boise Art Museum, the Missoula Museum of Art, Printed Matter in New York City, The Insider in Los Angeles, and Galerie Salpehanger, if you happen to be in Holland (ask for Sylvia). It goes for $30 a copy.

Coates and Lysohir are constantly gathering data for High Ground. If you have information that may be of interest to them to include in next year's publication, you can give them a call in Moscow at 882-0265, or write to them at P.O. Box 8961, also in Moscow.

Music provokes thought

staff

Cecilia's Circle performed Monday, Nov. 4 in the Administration Auditorium. They played works by Handel, Purcell, Stradella, Frescobaldi and many pieces by women composers of the Baroque.

Cecilia's Circle is one of those corner-the-market groups. An all-female ensemble, playing Baroque music (by female composers and pieces about women by male composers), on period instruments. Who else does this? Who else do they compete with? Well, regardless of how much business they get, and how many other ensembles vie for position beside them, Cecilia's Circle is a project that may make you think a little differently about Baroque music and culture, and a worthwhile investment of your time if you get a chance to pick up a CD or see their performance.

Alessandro Stradella's Sinfonia was quite enjoyable. A rather long instrumental work for this ensemble, they executed it beautifully. Sinfonia felt like a multi movement work (for Cecilia's Circle would cadence and pause every few minutes), yet no movements are listed in the program. This issue baffled many of my fellow concert patrons as well as myself. Are there movements within this work (that went unlisted in the program)? Is Sinfonia a work with significant pause written into it? Or was Cecilia's Circle taking a large amount of freedom-of-expression at the fermatad cadences?

Regardless of these interpretive issues, Sinfonia was a well crafted, well performed piece. Sinfonia featured many fast solo, unison, and harmonized melodies between the cello and violin. The harpsichord served as the entire continuo for this work.

Two Barbara Strozzi pieces were moved from the second to the first half of the concert. Amor Dormiglione and I Baci brought Soprano Janet Youngdahl out to perform again. She began each of these works with spoken dialogue, expressing the mood and topic of the work. Her acting ability rivals her musicality, for she was quite expressive in these brief theatrical moments. The music of both these works was characterized by counterpoint and harmonization of line between the soprano and violin, like a conversation between a woman and her lover.

The second half of the concert began with Henry Purcell's Bid the Virtues. A kind of theme song for Cecilia's Circle (since the work is from Purcell's Ode to St. Cecilia's Day), it ambles along in a minor mode.

used many sequences in this work, but with soprano singing one, and the violin responding with the next. The most ear-catching things about this work were the darkly minor, non-diatonic progressions that occurred for about three measures. They resolved to a slightly elaborated cadence, which ended the piece.

Canzona L'ambitiosa is a Frescobaldi instrumental work for solo cello and for cello and harpsichord. The beginning is a very free, unaccompanied cello cadenza which was executed quite well by Elizabeth Reed. The harpsichord joins, and together they begin a jumpy yet flowing ride through six-eight time. The work ends in a quasi-recitative passage, with cello as the soloist.

A late addition to the evening's music was Purcell's The Blessed Virgin's Expostulation. A great opportunity for vocal expression, this work was basically like a recitative, in that all the instrumentalists hung on every note out of the soprano's mouth. It is slightly different in that there was some music occurring, with accelerando and some very quick step-wise motives that were more melodic than would normally be found in an operatic recitative.

The Prelude nonmesuree, by Elisabeth Jacquet de La Guerre, was performed by the harpsichordist Vivian Montgomery. One of the most musical of the works on this program, it allowed Montgomery some expressive freedom she hadn't received yet in the concert, for she had been filling the role of continuo for the other performers. Prelude nonmesuree features some of the best Baroque use of a technique similar to tone clusters that I have heard.

Cecilia's Circle is certainly a concept group; their focus is to further the recognition of early music, and women and their involvement in early music in particular. Their passion for this is obvious. Their potential for musical excellence is apparent as well. As a young ensemble, they will undoubtedly grow together. With some attention to the vocalist's intonation (which generally went sharp), the group's stage presence (which looked like they were all playing their own solo), and the group's sense of musical ensemble as a whole (which was okay, but regularly sounded like they were not thinking together about their music), I am certain Cecilia's Circle will grow into a formidable force on the Baroque ensemble scene.

SUB exhibit honors veterans

Yesterday was Veterans Day in our nation, a federal holiday. You may have been aware of this when you failed to receive mail. WSU got the day off, but you were most likely also aware that we Vandals did not.

Another item you may or may not have been aware of was the display of Veterans Day posters along the wall adjacent to the Student Union Building's lounge.

Comm 387 — Digital Imaging — under the instruction of Professor Bill Woolston were assigned to construct an informative poster for yesterday's holiday. Of the 35 students in the two sections of the course, 16 posters were selected for display in the SUB.

Despite the fact that the University of Idaho doesn't observe Veterans Day as a school holiday, Woolston doesn't feel it hinders how the day is observed. He said, "It is important to recognize the day. It is important to recognize the individuals, both men and women who made a sacrifice for the things that we all too often take for granted. I don't know if observing it as a school holiday would change that."

Woolston, a Vietnam veteran, said about the results of the project he assigned, "I am very proud of the way my students per-

Grupo Serenata NOT a mariache band ... but a good one

Amy-Marie Smith
Staff

Recent MasterCard Acts winner Grupo Serenata, contrary to popular belief, is not technically a mariache band. They are, however, a Latin-American band who perform all of their songs in Spanish.

What classifies a band to be termed "mariache" according to good ol' Webster is 1) a member of a strolling band of musicians in Mexico, 2) such a band, and 3) its (this band's) music. Webster's Dictionary also makes a reference that mariache bands are most noted for performing at wedding ceremonies.

None of the five members of Grupo Serenata fall into either of the first two definitions. The third definition is debatable, having heard mariache bands play in Mexico, this reviewer of the MasterCard Acts felt the music from Grupo Serenata was identical enough to those bands to label them mariache, however inaccurate that may have been.

So then, according to the first and second definition, can you be a mariache band while in Mexico, but then no longer be considered such a band upon crossing the border of the country? I guess I'm confused.

Another classification of a mariache band, according to Grupo Serenata, is the combination of instruments used, the rhythms in their songs, and the costumes they perform in.

Unfortunately for Grupo Serenata, they will not be competing in the regional MasterCard competition this February. Last week the group found out since they signed up for the competition after the deadline, even though they were assured by the contest's officials, their first-place status had been revoked.

They were disqualified from being called the winners of the competition that was held last month. Sean Wilson, the second-place winner will now be competing in the regional competition representing the University of Idaho.

Regardless of all the above mention facts, Grupo Serenata is a great-sounding band.

This group has been together performing at Mexican restaurants in Lewiston and Clarkston, as well as various events here in Moscow for nearly a year and a half. Over the course of that time, some of the group members have come and gone, but the band's five current members come together to produce a culturally diverse, yet superiorly entertaining group.

David Embleton is not only the founder of the band, but also the lead singer and guitarist. Miguel Aguirre is another of the band's guitarists, as well as back-up vocalist. Tim Nordstrom plays the trumpet for the band. Chris Larsen is the groups violinist and another back-up vocalist. David Cavett is the bass player, as well as playing a special instrument — not seen much in this country — the guitarron.

This group of performers and their instruments lends to Grupo Serenata's unique sound. Another attribute making this band just a little different from other Latin-American groups is their blending of musical tools not always found together.

Cavett is the only music major in Grupo Serenata. This group has come together simply because they enjoy making music. "It started out that way," Embleton said, "and we saw that we could also make some money."

Another interesting fact is that Cavett is not only the only married member of Grupo Serenata, but is also involved in another music group. He is currently a member of Texas Tea, who coincidentally won the MasterCard Acts competition last year.

Texas Tea is a Western swing band. Grupo Serenata takes pride in having a member who is musically diverse enough to be a success in two bands playing such dissimilar music. Grupo Serenata also takes pride in not only winning the MasterCard Acts competition, but the fact that they, a Latin-American group, was chosen to win. Grupo Serenata views is as an achievement for Latin-American music, UI, as well as themselves.

Presently Grupo Serenata doesn't have any steady gigs. They have played at the Streets of Mexico at the farmers market in September, the Latin American festival last spring, fund-raisers, as well as other various events. They aren't picky as to what kind of event they perform at; they say they'll do almost anything. If you'd like to hire them, call David Embleton at 883-4485.

Russian Lessons interesting, thoughtful

Mathew Baldwin
Asst. Entertainment Editor

Last week the Collette Theatre was host to a student-written, student-produced play entitled Russian Lessons. The playwright, Bevin Flynn, is a theatre student here at University of Idaho.

Russian Lessons is a play that operates around the motifs of post-modernism, absurdism and black humor. The ideas of the play fluctuate and seem to deflect the main idea, yet the moods of paranoia, ambiguity and confusion are abundant.

The setting is a butcher shop, one incidentally no one comes to. There was no real plot, more the audience is exposed to a set of ideas and the characters' relationships to each other. I found the play interesting and entertaining because of this fact.

As the first scene opens we find out that Till has just been hired by the "boss" and has moved into the butcher shop where Patch and Damon work. Till's purpose remains unclear during the play. This fact helps build the tension and suspense throughout the story. We know that she is infatuated with particular Saints — their histories we learn as she hangs their portraits up in the shop, another facet we, as viewers, are left to interpret.

Flynn writes in a way that makes the reader think as opposed to just giving us the complete stories behind her characters. This is what makes the play interesting: that there are many beliefs and themes at work in the story.

The characters' dialogue is amusing, at times serious, and always circulating around the fact that both male characters like Till. She is avoiding commitment to both characters. Instead she seems to be testing the waters for some unknown reason, and lives in fear of the "boss."

It is understandable that this play could be confusing to the inexperienced and inept, but it does play around with an interesting love triangle between the three characters: Till, the only female character; Patch, a veteran of an unnamed war and Damon, a hemophiliac.

The play rings of Samuel Beckett's Waiting for Godot in the fact that the characters, towards the end, are awaiting the arrival of their boss — a character that is not revealed throughout the play's discourse.

Russian Lessons was both entertaining and thoughtful. It is a play that should not have been missed.

formed. They did an outstanding job, and I am pleased with their work."

Mike Perkins, Army ROTC Cadet, Gulf War veteran, and senior in zoology at UI saw the display. Perkins said, "All of the posters were very professional, I didn't know students had done them until I read the literature at the end of the display. A few of them were very powerful images that invoked a sense of pride in having served my country. I think if displays like these help just one more person take the time to think a little bit about those who have fought for their country and sacrificed so much for everyone's freedom, then they are the greatest gift you could receive on Veterans Day."

The posters will be on display until this Thursday on Nov. 14. Those top 16 student's whose posters are on display are:

This assignment was the equivalent of a mid-term for Comm 387 and the students were given only ten days to complete it. They were graded in the categories of; creativity, technical proficiency, and completeness of the parameters of the assignment.

The digital images were constructed from scanned photographs, downloaded images from the internet. These images were then manipulated by one or both of the following programs; Adobe Photoshop and Fractal Designs Painter.

Idaho rallies to oust New Mexico State

Nate Peterson

Staff

The Idaho Vandals displayed a Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde personality, as they played a tale of two halves Saturday.

The Vandals ended up beating the New Mexico State Aggies 34-19 in front of 9,494 fans in the Kibbie Dome, after trailing 13-6 at intermission.

The Vandals used a second-half rally after a dismal first half to put the Aggies away for good in the fourth quarter and remain in the hunt for a piece of the Big West Conference title.

"You have to give credit to NMSU," coach Chris Tormey said. "They had a good offensive and defensive game plan and we just couldn't get in sync."

In what was the lowest home attendance since 1994, the Vandal seniors said farewell to Vandal fans and the comforting playing atmosphere of the Kibbie Dome — and its present streak of 18 consecutive home wins.

"We don't get the big crowd support," senior inside linebacker Jason Shelt said. "It's something we as players don't understand. We came here in 1992 and I think we have only lost two times. They're (the fans) missing out because we win at home."

Seniors Shelt, quarterback Ryan Fien, defensive end Barry Mitchell, linebacker Ryan Phillips, and wide receiver David Griffin each contributed big plays and stellar performances for the Vandals, who graduate 14 players.

The Vandals continued their streak Saturday with the decisive victory over the 1-9 Aggies, but were surprisingly trailing at halftime. With crucial mistakes and the inability to score in the red zone, the Vandals only scores came on two field goals by Troy Scott. Defensively, Aggies running back Dennis Manns scored touchdowns on consecutive plays on option plays from quarterback Chad Salisbury.

Manns first touchdown, early in the second quarter, came on a 2-yard run. After a Vandal punt, the Aggies chose again to give the ball to Manns on the option. With the Vandals safety sealed off, Manns sprinted over the left sideline for a 59-yard score.

In the next half the Vandals' personality changed, as did their performance on the field.

"It's almost like two different games," said Tormey. "We went out and eliminated penalties and turnovers and made some good plays. We got Ryan Fien protection and were able to get Joel Thomas running the ball."

Both Thomas' and Fien's performances were vindictive of the Vandal second half. On both sides of the ball, the Vandals engine jump started into action and raced past the Aggies.

"Everybody maintained their composure," said Thomas. "We made crucial mistakes in the first half that we knew we had to change."

Thomas finished the game with 24 carries for a 119 yards. In the fourth quarter alone Thomas rushed 8 times for 59 yards and had touchdown runs of 14 and 19 yards.

"Everybody knew what we had to do," said Thomas. "We just let our actions speak for ourselves."

As was the case of Fien, who not only helped bring the Vandals back, but also surpassed Doug Nussmeier in Vandal all-time single season passing yardage. With 386 yards, Fien is currently fourth with 3,329 yards and should surpass John Friesz's all-time UI mark of 4,041.

Despite finishing over the nation leading 380 average pass yards per game, many of Fien's passes were underthrown and mistimed. The result was a first-half interception and many short balls. His deep balls, although off the mark, kept the Aggies in check.

"If it's complete or not it's gonna scare them," said Fien. "That's our philosophy."

Besides Fien and Thomas, the receiving corps of Griffin, Robert

Scott, and Antonio Wilson all gained over 100 yards receiving. Griffin caught six passes for a 103 yards and a touchdown in his final game at the Kibbie Dome.

For the defense, the philosophy could've very well been to contain the run and hope they pass. After Manns' two touchdowns in the first half, Aggies wide receiver Duane Gregory answered Idaho's touchdown drive of the third quarter with a 61-yard touchdown run on a reverse play.

Ahead 19-13, the Aggies would not see another scoring opportunity the rest of the game as Idaho's defensive standouts Mitchell and Phillips took matters into their own hands.

Following Gregory's touchdown, Phillips blocked the extra point. After a Vandal touchdown and extra point, the Aggies' next drive brought them all the way to the 39 to attempt a field goal. Again Phillips got penetration, blocked the field goal, and preserved the lead that the Vandals would not relinquish for the rest of the game.

"We got ourselves in a hole that we couldn't get out of," said Gregory.

Vandals squeak by in-state rival Boise State

Kindra Meyer

Assistant Sports Editor

The University of Idaho Vandals narrowly escaped a loss Saturday night in Bronco territory.

Big West rival Boise State strung the Vandals to five games before succumbing to the Idaho attack. The tiring match exhausted itself 15-12 in rally scoring, after going back and forth 15-8, 10-15, 15-9, 8-15.

"It was a long, tedious match," said Idaho coach Tom Hilbert. "Boise's much improved, and they attacked our weakness, which is Jemena (Yocom's) inexperience in the middle."

Kyle Leonard shone bright in the Vandal spotlight, executing plays with remarkable precision. She hit 17 kills for an impressive .462 percentage, and pulled up 11 digs. Another obvious leader was senior Lynne Hyland. Not only did she rack up 63 assists, nine digs, and six block assists, but she had seven kills and only one error leaving her hitting percentage at .429.

Other standouts for Idaho were Beth Craig, Jessica Moore and Yocom. Craig led both the Idaho offensive and defensive efforts, pouncing on 22 sets and digging up 13 balls. Moore added 15 kills at a moderate .242, but her real spark came when blocking. The sophomore assisted in eight blocks on the night. Although fill-in middle blocker Yocom had a weak night hitting, recording only two kills at a negative percentage, she was on fire at the line, shaking up BSU's serve receive with 10 aces.

"Kyle had a very good match, as did Lynne. Beth Craig was solid throughout as well. Jemena's serving, especially the five straight service aces in the third game really pulled us through," Hilbert said.

Numbers were even in many aspects of the match, but BSU found out the hard way that it's the little things that kill. Idaho's slight advantage especially defensively, eventually weighed on the Bronco spirit. The Vandal's out-blocked their opponent 15-11, recorded six more service aces, and barely hit with more accuracy at .240 to .235.

There were five BSU athletes who hit in double figures and three that came away with double-double matches. Jeni Elson had 13 kills, four block solos and 11 digs and Robin Phipps had 17 kills and 10 digs, but it was Julie Kaulius who stole the show with 18 kills for .417 and 11 digs.

"It was a good character builder for the girls," said Hilbert.

BSU also received two yellow cards during the five game match.

The Vandals are right on track in their quest to win the Eastern Division of the Big West Conference. Their season wraps up with a pair of Big West road matches at Utah State and Nevada on the Nov. 15 and Nov. 17. The Big West Tournament spans Nov. 22-24.

"The main thing that we need to do is respect our opponents, everybody has improved and we can't rely on what they looked like earlier in the season," Hilbert said.

Senior Louisa Kawulok was absent from the court Saturday, and she wasn't able to participate Thursday night in the biggest game of the year, which would have been final home game of her career. In fact, she will never share the court with the Vandals again. Last Tuesday night's practice ended in tragedy as Kawulok left the gym with a torn left anterior cruciate ligament.

Kawulok had an incredible career at Idaho. This season alone she was the Vandals' leading blocker averaging 1.13 per game and second leading hitter at .330. She earned her keep as sixth on the all-time leading record for block assists, and is only one of two Vandals to win four Big Sky Championships.

Taking over for Kawulok in the middle is junior Yocom, who in limited playing time has racked up 26 kills and 66 digs.

comeback failed midway through the fourth quarter when Mitchell's quarterback sack forced the Aggies to punt. Shortly after, the Vandals leading 27-19, Idaho engineered one more touchdown in the quarter to seal the game.

With 6:29 left in the game the Vandals ate up the clock and the Aggies' hopes. Fien hit Scott deep bringing the ball to the NMSU 35. Consecutive passes to receiver Deon Price and tight end Andy Gilroy brought the ball to the 20-yard line before Thomas capped off the drive. Thomas rushed first for 4 yards, then ran over and through Aggie defenders for the 17-yard touchdown.

With the win the Vandals still remain in contention for a piece of the Big West Conference title since Nevada knocked off Utah State, which was previously undefeated in the Big West. Now Idaho, Nevada, and Utah State each have one loss in the Big West.

While Nevada and Utah State have finished their conference seasons, Idaho is yet to play conference foes North Texas and Boise State. For the Vandals to get a share of the title, they must beat both teams.

"It gives us something more to play for instead of just a winning season," said Tormey.

Defeating both North Texas and Boise State will not be an easy task for the Vandals. Each game is on the road and played in open stadiums, unlike the controlled environment of the Kibbie Dome.

The Vandals feel they're ready to bring an end to their road woes.

"We are sick of flying home pissed off," said Fien.

Boise State will be an exceptionally interesting game should the Vandals defeat North Texas and remain in contention for the title. The last game of the season against the Vandals biggest rivals will also be the last time fans will see Shelt, Fien, Mitchell, Griffin, and Phillips in Vandal uniforms.

With these factors in mind, including bragging rights in the state, the Nov. 23 date of the game will be the teams' first meeting since moving up to Division I.

For Boise State, Division I has not been as friendly as it has been for the Vandals. The Broncos (1-8) are winless against Big West and Division I schools. As for the Vandals, much can be said about the program that may get a piece of the Big West title in only its first year.

"For them to come up from the Big Sky is a big step," said Gregory. "I think they are doing a tremendous job."

Intramural billiards readies itself for first year of existence

Look out Minnesota Fats, now there's something meatier.

The University of Idaho intramural department is sponsoring a first-year event of billiards. Sign-ups for this event due by Thursday, Nov. 14, with pairings and rules for the event to be handed out the following day.

Billiards will also count towards team sport totals, with a maximum of three entries per living group counting to the score, and all others counting toward the individual rankings. This is a 100-point event, and will take place Saturday, and Sunday if necessary.

Winners will be decided on a best two-out-of-three series, with a $1.00 charge being doled out to those who choose to partake.

In other action, Delta Sigma Phi won the men's competitive soccer title, beating the other Delta Sigma Phi team in the process. In women's competitive action, Delta Gamma defeated the Tri Deltas for the title.

In recreational action, Reich defeated Peanuts for the men's title, and the Rascals beat the Spuds for the women's.

In ultimate Frisbee, the Admin Aviators beat Delta Sigma Phi to climb atop the mountain as the best around, while Gamma Phi Beta climbed a similar mountain to look down upon Kappa Kappa Gamma in the women's division.

Idaho rehires Rasmussen as Vandal golf coach

Don Rasmussen was named Idaho's new golf coach Monday.

Rasmussen will coach both the men's and women's golf teams come this spring. He takes over after vacating the same post last season.

Holyfield shocks Tyson

Stankowski captures PGA victory

Damon Barkdull

Simply put, America wanted Mike Tyson to be destroyed. They wanted the indestructible man to be annihilated.

And who better to do so than underdog Evander Holyfield?

At one point doctors said Holyfield would not fight again because of a serious heart condition. Holyfield was a man with a mission, possibly encouraged by God.

In prefight interviews, Holyfield didn't talk trash like most no-brain boxers, instead, he remained confident. This confidence mixed in with slight humbleness, made for an American hero.

Tyson, on the other hand, is thought of in the citizen's mind as a bully. A bully who spent time in jail for raping a woman. A bully who knocked his opponents out in the first and second round. A bully who won his fights before Michael Buffer said his "Let's get ready to rumble" gig.

Iron Mike intimidated rivals. Anyway — a stare, some rap music and a 40-man entourage would give the heeby-geebies to a Russian Army. So why wouldn't it scare some bum boxer whose already making a few million for stepping into the ring?

So on Saturday night, the man with a bad heart and the modest image — the man with no chance to win, battered and beat on the World Boxing Association heavyweight champion.

When Tyson charged and hit the challenger, Holyfield took the punches and punched back. Landing combination after combination, Holyfield looked like a warrior with a mission.

From this point on, it was Holyfield who looked like the champion intimidator. And Tyson looked like he had the bad heart.

Not since the Buster Douglas fight in 1990 had Tyson seen someone punch him back. The result of that fight a Douglas upset which rocked the boxing world. Since Tyson's comeback, a list of bums and losers sought a match with Iron Mike. Instead, most of the fights didn't get past the second round and Tyson looked invincible as always.

The 11th round technical knockout of Mike Tyson on Saturday may be considered one of the greatest upsets in boxing history. However, had a challenger not been intimidated by Iron Mike before the fight had started, then Tyson may never have been considered as great as he really is.

Holyfield stood strong and didn't let a stare intimidate him. When Tyson pounded him with slicing hooks, Holyfield came back with an exchange of flurries.

After the fight, Tyson spoke humbly for the first time. Iron Mike congratulated Holyfield and recognized that the challenger and new heavyweight champion, had legitimately given him a thumping. Not even after losing to Douglas did Tyson admit he got whooped on.

This fight is truly a victory for the underdog, the modest and religious, though, the nature of boxing tends to give false hope that this fight was for real. Even in the wake of a great upset, I tend to believe the fight was fixed.

Tyson had talked about getting out of boxing. Don King could make a few hundred million if he betted against the Las Vegas 10-1 odds on the fight. You see, King knew Holyfield wouldn't take a fall, however, he knew that his puppet (Tyson) would.

Just think, King could wager a few million sinner dollars against Tyson, come up big when Iron Mike falls in the 11th round and then double the pay with a rematch. Simple, huh? Not for a guy whose used to making the dishonest dollar.

Although, whether or not this fight was fixed is not the key issue. The key issue, well, America finally has a champion it can cheer for.

This champion is a believer rather than a bully, a model citizen instead of a model criminal. Moreover, Holyfield gives hope to those who don't believe in miracles.

Associated Press

Paul Stankowski figured chopping another four strokes from par would be enough for him to win the Kapalua International.

Fred Couples and Steve Jones had other ideas.

"That's what I thought I'd need," said Stankowski, who started Sunday at 16 under par. "But at the turn I knew it was going to take more than 20-under to win." With Couples in the threesome ahead of him and Jones a playing partner, the three-time All-America from Texas-El Paso knew exactly where he stood as he approached the critical closing holes at the 7,263-yard Plantation Course.

"I knew he (Couples) was catching up," Stankowski said.

Stankowski, a winner of one tournament on the PGA Tour, birdied the 72nd hole — a testy 3-footer to turn back Couples. His 68 put Stankowski at 21-under 269, one stroke ahead of the onrushing Couples, a two-time winner of the event, and two over U.S. Open winner Jones.

"I'm tired, but this is exciting," the winner said. "It's all kind of a blur."

Early on, the final round appeared to be a Stankowski-Jones duel. But as Jones faltered on the back nine, Couples vaulted into a tie for the lead with an eagle on the 555-yard 15th. Stankowski, however, birdied the same hole to regain a lead he never relinquished, although Couples did make it interesting when he narrowly missed another eagle on the par-5 18th when his 20-foot putt stopped a foot past the hole.

"It was fun, coming close," Couples said. "The good thing was I drove the ball well. But I didn't make the putts."

"The better guy won, but I felt like I did all right," said Jones, who closed with a 69, and Davis Love III, who capped his day with an eagle on the final hole for a 66, shared third place at 271.

Bob Gilder, the first- and second-round co-leader with Jones, finished fifth at 18-under.

With playing conditions conducive to low scores, only 10 players completed the 72-hole swing over par with one at even par. The first day of the tournament was without wind and the second round had to be stopped for almost two hours because of wind and rain. The tournament on the island of Maui was sponsored by Lincoln-Mercury.

Kris Baumann

Starting in nine games last season, Kris Baumann averaged 9.2 points per game shooting 31 for 69. He started two of his nine games in the Big Sky Conference tournament taking over for an injured Reggie Rose. He played 18 games as a true freshman last year averaging 1.2 points per game.

Baumann played well in the first round of the Big Sky tournament win over Montana contributing 15 points, hitting three of seven 3-point shots, and three steals. He has chalked numbers in double figures six times, four of those times as a starter. He led the team in 3-point field goal percentage overall with (.330) and during conference play with (.340). Baumann made at least one 3-pointer in 15 of 28 games, and averaged 8.8 points per game out of those 15.

"Baumann had a great summer lifting and getting into shape improving on his vertical jump, etc.," coach Kermit Davis said. "He has tested out to be the best athlete, and his off-season performance should give him greater effectiveness on the court."

Jason Jackman

His first year as an Idaho Vandal, Jason Jackman showed the ability to dominate on the offensive end of the court. He scored 31 points against Cal Poly-SLO which put him tied for the top scorer in the Big Sky Conference. He averaged 14.5 points per game shooting 23 for 39 — 59 percent from the field. Jackman started in nine games last season averaging 11.2 points, and finished the season making 14 of 16 freethrows. He led the team in both field goal percentage and free-throw percentage, become the first Vandal to take leading statistics in those two categories since Brian Coleman in 1987. His .566 field goal percentage is the ninth best in Vandal history.

He played 27 of 28 games as a freshman at Utah, averaging 5.2 points and 3.9 rebounds, and started seven games averaging 13.3 points and 7.4 rebounds.

"Jason worked hard in the off-season to build up his strength and gain some weight which should make him a lot more physical player," Davis said. "This season, we are going to be looking for him to be a more aggressive, physical player on the offensive and defensive boards."

Reggie Rose

Leading the Vandals last season in scoring (13.9), assists (78), free throws attempted (116), and steals (45), Reggie Rose was an honorable mention All-Big Sky Conference pick. He recorded double figures in 21 of 26 games, and chalked 20 or more points five including his season high of 25 against Montana State. During the second half of the season, Rose picked things up increasing his field goal, free throw, and 3-point field goal percentages in 14 conference games.

He was the only player from last year's squad to average more point totals on the road than at home in the Kibbie Dome. With the addition of Rose to the team, the Vandals averaged four more points per game and recorded 40 more steals.

His best game of the season came in Idaho's win against Weber State as Rose scored 23 points, had three assists, eight rebounds, and five of eight 3-pointers in 34 minutes.

"Reggie also worked hard to improve himself and his overall game in the off season," Davis said. "He has done a better job taking care of the ball, his shooting selection has improved, and he has taken on more of a leadership role this season."

Eddie Turner

Finishing last season averaging

10 points per game, Eddie Turner scored in double figures in 15 of 28 games. In those 15 games, Turner brought in 13.7 points per game, shooting 80 for 144 for 55.6 percent from the floor. He had a slight downfall, but picked things back up in the second half of the season scoring in double figures in six of the last nine games. He recorded a combined 30 points in needed wins over Montana during the regular season, and during the first round of the Big Sky tournament. He had a streak of eight consecutive double figure games, and saved the day against Cal Poly sending the game into overtime with a clutch shot at the final buzzer.

He averaged 11.5 points per game as a starter and nine points per game off the bench. Turner game to Idaho from North Idaho College where he averaged 18.4 points per game, 3.9 rebounds, 3.6 assists, and 1.5 steals per game. He earned all-regional honors as a sophomore at NIC.

"Eddie beefed up in the off season improving his bench press, and making himself the second strongest player on the team," Davis said. "Turner has made a lot of improvements on his rebounding game, and has made a lot of progress academically in the classroom."

Idaho loses game, but gains experience

Mark Vanderwall
Sports Editor

This is a test. I repeat, this is only a test. If this were a real emergency, Idaho would be playing for a little more than bragging rights at this point.

The Idaho women's hoop team opened the doors to Memorial Gym for excitement other than volleyball, as they hosted Simon Fraser Friday night, losing 65-53 in front of 674 dormant fans.

The Vandals, playing in their first game of the season, ran into a Simon Fraser club that had already completed four games, and it showed. The Vandals looked good early, but dwindled under several second-half mistakes.

With things notched 27-27 at intermission, the Vandals came out colder than William Byrd's first trip to the North Pole, only they were able to seek refuge from the cold after the final buzzer rang.

"This was good for us," said Idaho coach Julie Holt. "We really needed to see where we are in terms of game experience. Obviously we have things to improve on, but we have better depth and we are better."

With 14:23 left to play in the first half, those same 674 dormant fans lay witness to a revolution. This revolution comes in the shape of

Alli Nieman

Alli Nieman. Nieman scored the first points of her inaugural Vandal season, but certainly not her last. Nieman paved the way on the inside for the Vandals, and Kelli Johnson lit it up from long range to keep things close, before Simon Fraser's experience came into play.

"This is a point to find out where we are and where we need to get to," said Holt. "They showed they had more game experience. They held their poise and we didn't, end of story."

The Vandals looked as if they were hosting a game of "Beat the Clock," as they were continually forcing a pace that wasn't suited for this early in the season. Long shots, short shots, hook shots, jump shots, or Tequila shots — it didn't matter for several minutes of the second half. If you had the ball, you had better shoot it.

"We came out after the half and waited to play defense," said Holt. "In this game you cannot wait to do anything, you must be aggressive. Aggressive, but not anxious, and I think we were not waiting for things to develop the way we should have."

Nieman led the way with 20 points, on 6 of 14 shooting, including 1 of 4 from long range, while Johnson added 15 of her own on similar numbers, shooting 6 of 13 from the field for the night and 3 of 7 from 3-point range.

Joby McKenzie led the way for Simon Fraser with 14 points and 13 rebounds, while Amanda Mulholland pitched in 11 points respectively.

All four new Vandal additions

played and scored their first points in a new uniform, as Kathryn Gussett showed she was a hard-nosed player, slashing and banging her way to eight points and three assists, but also turning the ball over seven times in the process. Susan Woolf, the highly touted Kansas freshman, showed her range with a 3-pointer from nearly 25 feet out. Lauren Newman also hit the stats column with a bucket of her own to notch her first Vandal points.

The women play another exhibition Saturday night at 6 p.m. in Memorial Gym, as they play the annual Alumni game before the men take on Global Sports at 8 p.m., also in Memorial Gym.
