Frost on the leaves should warn Moscow residents that winter is on its way. The forecast today calls for mostly cloudy skies and cool temperatures with highs in the 40s and the low around 32.

Thompson accepts position as director of Multicultural Affairs

ERIN SCHULTZ
STAFF

Dona Walker Thompson, the University of Idaho's newly appointed director of Multicultural Affairs, will begin taking on the responsibilities of her position Nov. 24.

"This is what I've wanted to do for a long time — be the director of a multicultural program," Thompson said.

Since 1991, Thompson has been the associate director of Multicultural Affairs at Washington State University. For a two year stint in 1993-95, she acted as the interim director. By accepting the position at UI, Thompson will be leaving her work at WSU. She says she is ready to leave and ready for the challenge of UI's offer.

The Multicultural Affairs director is a new position that was created this year with the intent of enhancing UI's diversity environment. Until this year, the UI has had a coordinator for the Multicultural Program, but no full time director position.

Thompson has a master's degree from the University of Oklahoma in guidance and counseling. She worked as the American Indian counselor and recruiter at the University of Oklahoma, and as a counselor for Native American students at WSU.

"My heritage is Native American. By virtue of my job, I've been working in Multicultural Affairs for the past several years. I've been working in some specific Native American programs and I enjoy that. I enjoy being part of other cultures," Thompson said of her past experience with multicultural issues.

"I've been in (Multicultural Affairs) such a long time. I've learned a lot from past directors and learned a lot from watching them working in the university system," Thompson said.

Though she has been in the Palouse region for the past 11 years, one of Thompson's first goals is to become familiar with the UI climate.

"The first thing will be learning about the campus and what's available...I'm very hopeful. I'm very excited for a full time position instead of part time. To me, that's a commitment from the university," Thompson said.

Along with this, Thompson will be responsible for developing the position of director of Multicultural Affairs. The director position will be different from previous positions in that it will allow Thompson to interact with other program directors, without having to go through a long chain of command.

"We intend to include her at the director's level. She will have regular contact with other directors of student and academic affairs," said Hal Godwin, vice president of student affairs.

In responding to why the search committee chose Thompson out of the four applicants interviewed, Godwin said "Dona really interviewed very well. An overwhelming number of folks responded very positively to her. Her experience in higher education showed."

Thompson's office will be located in the University Classroom Center, next to the Student Advisory Services on the second level.

Winter road conditions create driving hell

DEVON HAMMES
ASSISTANT NEWS EDITOR

After first snowfall, crews busy working to clear roads and parking lots.

Hours before students brave the cold winter mornings to warm up their cars for early morning classes, road crews have cleared the roadways and sidewalks throughout campus.

Many University of Idaho staff and city road crews go to work when it is still dark and students and daily commuters they are clearing the roads and sidewalks for are still asleep, or just heading for bed.

Street crews and parking lot maintenance crews are at work at 2 a.m. when 2 or more inches of snowfall occur. Once the street and parking lot crew open these roadways, they will begin to clear snow from gold lots, lateral campus streets, and green lots, respectively. Red, blue and silver lots clearance follows, according to a press release issued by the UI Campus Snow Removal and Ice Control Program.

The release reminds students and faculty that a 2-inch snowfall and the current resources may cause the process to take a little longer than normal.

"It may take several days to fully complete snow removal in all areas and follow-up sanding, rocking and other ice control measures," the release said.

An hour later, at 3 a.m., crews begin to clear sidewalks with a plow and sander after 1 or more inches of snow accumulates on campus sidewalks. Main sidewalks, bike paths and walkways are the crews' first priority. Another crew clears entrances, steps, ramps, disabled parking spaces and sidewalks that are too narrow for machinery at 4 a.m. These will be cleared in order of priority, based on frequency of use.

Charles Zillinger, assistant director of facilities management for landscape and exterior services, said the crews come in so early to prevent the possibility of blocking in students' vehicles.

"That's why we come in so early. We have to put the snow somewhere, and (if there is a car in the way) we do try to bypass that car, but we still have to clear the streets — that's our top priority," Zillinger said.

He suggests that students do not park their cars in one place for a long period of time.

Dave Sexton, supervisor of parking services, said parking services provide help for permit holders who have run into some trouble, such as locking keys in their cars and needing a jump start.

"We turn some of this back to our permit holders and help them out when they're in a jam," Sexton said. "We'll help people out whenever we can."

Parking Services also help change flats or take permit holders to the gas station when they have run out of gas. People are available to help from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Doctor discusses importance of sleep for health

JUSTIN OLIVER RUEN
STAFF

Since one-third of our lives are spent in sleep, most of us tend to take it for granted. But an audience packed into the Logos School auditorium last Friday certainly recognized its importance.

Dr. William Dement has the honor of being named "the father of sleep medicine." Dement is director of the Stanford Sleep Research Center, a group of scientists who first documented REM sleep and its connection to dreaming. Last Friday, Dement and local physicians met to answer public questions at the Gritman Sleep Symposium.

Most people equate sleep with "parking their car in a garage." But Dement argues that "the continent of sleep is extremely complex...but almost everything that goes wrong can be fixed." The most common complaint among patients is that they don't get enough sleep. But what most people fail to realize is the "sleep debts" accumulate over time, resulting in chronic fatigue.

Sleep has special implications for college students who often see themselves as invincible and fail to recognize the necessity of sleep. Dement said 34 percent of Stanford undergraduate students are so sleep deprived that they are experiencing serious health problems.

Students who fall asleep in class probably don't get enough sleep at night, said Deborah Nichols, regional director of the Stanford Primary Care Sleep Education Project. "If you don't have enough sleep you can't study for tests or concentrate."

More serious health problems can also cause lack of sleep. Most common is insomnia, which affects nearly half of the population periodically, although 12 percent of the general population complains that they have difficulty falling asleep every night. Trouble falling asleep or light sleeping can be cured with medication.

A less-known but very serious affliction is obstructive sleep apnea, characterized by loud snoring, breathing pauses and chronic fatigue. In sleep apnea, a person's breathing stops due to blockage of the airway by the tongue or tonsils or weakness in the muscles holding the airway open. Such individuals can actually stop breathing hundreds of times in one night of sleep. Treatment generally involves sleeping with a special mask which opens the airway during sleep, although severe cases may require surgery.

Restless legs syndrome is characterized by an itchy feeling in the legs, which causes a person to have to get up and walk around at night. Despite the fact that nearly 12 percent of the population suffers this affliction, it remains largely undiagnosed but can be cured with

Fitch brings reorganization experience

MOSCOW — The state Board of Education's newly hired executive director has a reputation as progressive, tenacious and unafraid of wielding an administrative ax.

Gregory G. Fitch, a Vietnam veteran and former police officer, has been chancellor of the two-college, three-campus Mid-Plains Community College system in North Platte, Neb., where he proposed an administrative overhaul he called "Operation Starlight."

It proposed merging two campuses and combining them under a single administration, eliminating administrative and related classified staff and hiring a registrar and management information systems coordinator.

His supporters consider him decisive, but Fitch is aware not everyone likes his style.

Before Mid-Plains, Fitch was president of Big Bend Community College in Moses Lake, Wash., for seven years and of Seminole Junior College in Oklahoma for four years. He also was a police officer in Lyons and Overland Park, Kan., after Army tours of duty in South Korea and Vietnam.

Fitch replaces Rayburn Barton, who left in June to become higher education commissioner in South Carolina. Retired Idaho National Guard adjutant general Darrell Manning has been acting director and is leaving the board office to become head of Gov. Phil Batt's Division of Financial Management.

Now for the big question: how does one get more sleep? Dement recommends establishing a routine of going to bed at the same time every evening. No matter how tired you are, get up at the same time every morning. Avoid too much mental stimulation before going to bed; watch television or read a light novel in the last hour before bedtime. It is important to avoid daytime naps if you are having trouble going to sleep in the evening. Although regular exercise can be an effective sleep aid, avoid heavy exercise just before bedtime. Obviously caffeine is a stimulant which can keep you awake, so lay off the coffee, tea and colas before going to bed.

Dement says that the fear of prescription sleeping medication is unwarranted. "The vast majority of people use prescription medication to go to sleep three to five times per year, and there is no evidence that it is addictive."

Despite the obvious importance of sleep medicine, Dement recognizes that since it is absent from medical school curricula, it has been slow to catch on in the medical community. Anyone with question can all the Gritman Sleep Center at 883-2235.

How they stack up

Candidates for ASUI President

Annie Averitt

Major: History
Minors: Spanish, Interpersonal Communication

Age: 21

My first two years I lived in the residence halls. My junior year I lived off-campus. This year I joined Delta Delta Delta.

Home: Pocatello, Idaho
Something Unique: I fly small aircraft.

Five things that make you presidential material

1. I was appointed to Senate my sophomore year, re-elected as a Senator that fall and then elected by the Senate to the position of Senate pro-Tempore in spring. I took over as vice-president when that position was vacated, was re-elected that fall and I've served as vice president since then.

2. Strong ties to UI administration and state Board of Education.

3. Good at conflict management and I love to work with people.

4. Implemented the emergency medical fund which provides assistance to students who otherwise wouldn't be able to afford it.

5. Committees: Two semesters on Recreation Advisory Board, two semesters on Government Operations and Appointments Committee.

Ben Rush

Major: Marketing
Minor: Outdoor Recreation Leadership

Age: 20
Third year member of Phi Gamma Delta (FIGI)
Home: Boise, Idaho
When I graduate my bachelor's degree will be the 18th degree from the UI earned by a member of the Rush family.

Annie Averitt

Five things that make you presidential material

1. Service as a Senator and an understanding of Senate operations.

2. ASUI Lobbyist with strong contacts to the legislature, State Board of Education and Governor and his staff.

3. Chairman of Public Relations and Outreach for the Rec Center Project.

4. Chairman of the ASUI Student Union Board.

5. Created the Collegiate License Plate Program for the state of Idaho.

List three things you want to see changed at UI.

Averitt: 1. Because we are going into a world where technology is key, I'd like to see a program which would give students more of an exposure to it. I've begun to talk with people at the administrative level about the possibility of getting laptop computers available for students when they register, with the option to purchase them from the university at the end of their four years, at a reduced rate. This is just one idea of the direction the program could take.

2. I would like to work to get an expanded career center to help students choose majors and understand what their majors can do for them.

3. I would also like to work on getting a class on cultural diversity taught through a historical perspective offered as a core class.

Rush: 1. Recruitment and retention. Currently the administration is working on a public relations campaign to improve the image of UI at the state level. It is a great idea but it will not work effectively without student input and involvement. What I propose, is to create a recruitment committee made up of student leaders that will travel around the state, visiting every major high school and telling these students about the benefits of the UI and what we have to offer. Increasing enrollment will benefit all UI students in the form of better programs, more diversity and a value-added degree.

2. Student Recreation Center. After the state Board of Education approves the project, it is imperative the building is created and built according to student desires. I plan on ensuring this project never gets out of UI students' control.

3. The UI has over 2,000 students at branch campuses across the state. These students pay the would cause division and short sightedness in the Senate. The more I've thought about it though, the more I've come to see it as a necessity.

There is a large group on our campus that doesn't feel they're being adequately represented — who don't feel they can be adequately represented with the current system. I think this is why we have such student apathy on this campus. If we had districting it would give the Senate strength through diversity. I think there would be more discussion on a wider variety of topics.

I think the Senate can claim to be representing the students to the best of their abilities now but I think it's time to change those abilities and give the Senate more voices.

Rush: I am all for better student representation and if students feel districting will provide better representation, I will definitely work towards creating districts.

The biggest potential impact of districting will not be for students living on-campus. I see the greatest advantage of districting in terms of better off-campus student representation.

The key to the success of districting is in its implementation. Without strong leadership, districting could potentially provide worse representation than we currently have. If students want to be represented by districts on this campus, I will make sure that it is a success.

same amount of fees that we do here in Moscow but don't get the same benefits. One of my priorities will be to make sure adequate services and activities are offered to all UI students — not just those of us who go to class in Moscow.

Are you for or against districting at UI?

Averitt: When the issue first came up I was adamantly against it. My first impulse was that this

3. Increase student safety on campus

Happ: 1. The arts and entertainment and non-sports extra curricular activities, specific focus on getting the word out about what benefits each student is entitled to or receiving.

2. Putting out the word to other companies that attend university job fairs, besides engineering firms and Walmart, that we have other resources.

3. My big dream, no chance, hail mary: Better connection with WSU, either competitively from an economic stance or co-operatively from a political and economic stance; there is over a 30,000 voter age student market base combined from both communities, an untapped resource.

Bowen: 1: Off-campus student involvement

- 2. UI student recruitment
- 3. Campus Safety

Webster: 1. Senate districts, an excellent way to equally represent the students.

2. The recruitment problem. I think a way to stop the drop in enrollment would be to create a "Good Neighbor" policy by putting a 150 mile border around Idaho and cut tuition to one and a half times in state tuition to people in this zone.

3. The nuisance of broken desks. I have been going to school on this campus for 3 years and I have been sitting in the same broken desks the whole time. I feel it is time to fix them or replace them, because it is hard to learn when you spend the whole class period teetering on a broken chair.

Knesel: 1. The reduction of financial aid that has been happening; possibly work out ways of bringing more opportunities for scholarships or help to students.

2. The fact that student fees are rising while there have been budget cuts in many departments. We need to know where that money is going.

3. Recruitment and retention; I would like to work on improving our image and helping new students feel like they belong here.

List three issues you as a senator would tackle

- Linder: 1. Parking
2. Tuition increases
3. Districting

Reynolds: 1. Safety on and off-campus including drunk driving between campus, downtown and surrounding apartments and lighting on campus

- 2. Student representation and participation
- 3. The budget

Soelberg: 1. The biggest issue facing the current Senate is how to deal with the media budget. I want to become involved in tackling this problem and then redistributing excess funds to more worthy pursuits.

2. I would also like to be involved with the task force deciding the characteristics of our new recreation center.

3. I want to be a part of bringing more quality entertainment (i.e. concerts) to UI.

Glenn: 1. Informing students more efficiently of fee changes and why they occur.

2. More thorough representation in the Senate

List one issue the current or past Senates have ignored or not done enough about.

Browning: I think a great issue is what is the function of our Union and how do the things we fund benefit the students? ISU spends most of its budget on programs and concerts where the students can see the immediate benefit of their fees. Are our fees going to benefit our students? I think the current Senate is on track with projects like Laptop computers, yellow public bikes, Idaho banners for lampposts to increase school pride and the Bill Chipman Palouse Bike trail.

Clark: Promotion of ASUI. Half the students on this campus do not know about the ASUI, how they can get involved, what things it does for students or even that it exists until an election. I want to provide students with the promise of opportunity to get involved with ASUI and take advantage of what it can do for them.

Wise: The Senate has done a remarkable job over my tenure here to improve life for students. However, I feel that keeping in close contact with student needs has sometimes been neglected. One idea being tossed around is a survey of all students by the ASUI and I am totally committed to the idea. We need to know what the constituents want and this is one of the best ways to solve many of our miscommunication problems.

What is one thing that has gone on at UI that has made you mad?

Browning: I am constantly bothered by the dividing up of sides between the Residence halls and the Greek system and the way these squabbles lead to us wasting time debating problems that should not even be issues. I realize it is quite idealistic to say this but I believe whenever someone is elected to the Senate or any other office they should realize it is their responsibility to serve EVERYONE, regardless of where they live.

One shining example of this is Jim Dalton. Jim's goal (and it should be all of ours) is to constantly make this campus a better place to live for students of all kinds. Districting is not about where the senators come from. It is all about the lack of initiative taken by past senators in overcoming their own beliefs to be able to represent their fellow students. Now, because they were not able to do that districting is being called for as a system to make sure everyone is represented.

Remember, however, we would not even be discussing the issue except for the fact these people could not set aside their petty squabbles and do their jobs. The problems will only really stop when we come together to work for common goals. The lack of that knowledge has frustrated me.

Clark: Although tuition increases and the lack of parking is upsetting, missing events and other activities due to lack of information is what makes me mad. I hate finding out the next day, after I've missed something important, because it wasn't advertised or promoted.

Wise: One thing that really makes me mad at this school is this so-called 'war' between the residence halls and the Greek houses. I honestly cannot think of anything more childish and stupid than saying someone is inferior to you because they live in a different environment. We all need to realize some issues may be more important to you based on where you live but we are all students of this school and part of this union of students. If we ALL put forth some effort and appreciate our differences, we can make our student government serve the ENTIRE student body!

Last of the Argonaut as we know it

WES RIMEL
OPINION EDITOR

At a university where we will spend tens of millions of dollars for a new recreational facility and campus commons are we not willing to support the student media with an additional $100,000? To me that is simply appalling. In the whole scheme of things, the difference between all of student media being on budget and being off is the difference between the school having one less senior professor.

I do not wish to point fingers in a time of crisis. But according to Shana Plasters, the ASUI Advertising Department projected they would make over $200,000 this school year.

Apparently the Student Media isn't considered very important to the Administration at the UI.

This may be the last issue of the Argonaut as most students know it. Why? Because all of Student Media is projected to lose about $90,000 this school year, all of us will feel the pain.

Let me explain: Student Media lost about $70,000 last year. So one might ask, why the big deal this year? Well, last year the ASUI had sufficient funds to cover for the lost moneys — this year they do not. Last Tuesday, Assistant Director of Student Activities Shana Plasters addressed the Argonaut editorial board at our weekly meeting. She told us that the ASUI more or less has a Balanced Budget Amendment — they must keep $100,000 in the bank to protect against severe financial crisis.

Then proposals were handed around, proposals that included gutting the staff by 14 people and giving everyone else a cut in pay! That would effectively cut the staff of our newspaper in half. To me that is not acceptable and not right.

The highest total they made last year was $155,000 — this year they are on pace to make $120,000. In addition we were told if we did not implement cuts "somebody will do it for you."

In other words, it seemed to me that all of Student Media will suffer because of one very poor budgeting plan. That seems unfair.

What does all this mean? Well it means tough decisions for the Argonaut, Advertising, Gem of the Mountains yearbook, and KUOI.

Only two days after this editorial board meeting we were to have our own proposal down on the table. I e-mailed President Hoover on Wednesday expressing my concern about the cuts and asking for more time so we could put together a decent budget; a budget that is not merely thrown together but one that is well thought out and has solutions to long term problems.

As I write this I have still received no reply. Apparently the Student Media isn't considered very important to the Administration at the UI. Apparently the Student Media, who advertises and promotes for sports and campus events, just isn't very important. I guess a forum for exchanges of ideas at a school of over 10,000 students isn't considered a high priority either.

After all, aren't we really in college to sit in lecture halls, take notes and memorize?

I have heard many people praise our campus radio station KUOI, saying what a learning experience it is for them. The Argonaut has had writers go on to high-level political positions. The Gem of the Mountains just won fourth place at the ACP/CMA National News Convention.

If this university is indeed serious about becoming a premier institution, something should be done about what appears to be the imminent fate of Student Media. If not, I'd say all the slogans and advertisements are just a bunch of propaganda and hot air.

Vote yes for Senate districts

WADE GRUHL
COLUMNIST

What a diabolical crime that is! I wonder how he gets to sleep at night.

Perhaps the most interesting aspect of this scenario is that Mr. Dalton is a member of the Greek system. He sees clearly that his own constituency is over-represented, but many Senators do not. Senator Coyle stated that "the problem is student apathy rather than where they live."

I agree that apathy is a problem, but I think Ms. Coyle should ask herself if the apathy is related to the fact that the vast majority of the student body is under-represented. The President has stated that many Senators view their job as going to the Senate meetings and reporting to their living groups. If this is true, apathy toward Senate elections is concern to them.

An Argonaut reporter quoted an advocate as saying "some senators believe the Senate has so many Greeks because Greek students are generally more involved in campus and community activities." It may be true that Greeks are more involved in campus life, but this situation begs to ask "which came first, the chicken or the egg?" Are Greeks more involved because they control the Senate, which sets the direction for many campus activities?

Being friendly with more than a few Greeks, I ask that you to please not take this as an attack on members of the Greek system, just the Senators that oppose fair representation. I may be overgeneralizing here, but I believe a higher proportion of older non-traditional students and self-supported students live off campus. Many students are less likely to participate in campus activities because they also must support themselves financially. This fact of life often necessarily precludes participation in campus activities, but it absolutely should not be cause for denying representation.

Some objections to districting are absurd. For example, Senator Coyle doesn't think the measure should be on the ballot because students voted it down last year. This is deceiving, since 60 percent of voting students voted for it. It failed because a 2/3 majority is needed to pass the amendment. Ms. Coyle's contention that students oppose districting is a lame excuse at best. Though 60 percent of voters approved districting last year, the Senate seems convinced that students oppose it. Ironically, more students voted for districting than for any senator by a margin of 1.5 to 1, and 2 to 1 in some cases.

Get out and vote! Support fair representation by voting yes for senatorial districts.

Mr. Dalton is guilty of attempting to bring about fair and equal representation in the Senate. What a diabolical crime that is!

perfectly understandable.

Senator Sam Aldrich reportedly believes that the Senate represents the students that vote and that visit the Senate office. That is not enough. If people are disinterested, the Senate should find out why and correct the problem, rather than simply representing the clique that elected them. Mr. Aldrich should ask himself if students refrain from voting because they don't see the

A recent letter to the editor claims that ASUI President Jim Dalton pulled off "one of the gutsiest maneuvers I have seen in student politics in a long time."

I agree. Mr. Dalton has championed the cause of creating senatorial districts for future Senate elections. With districting there would be four off campus seats, three Residence Hall seats, three Greek seats, and six at large seats. Currently all seats are at large, and they are dominated by members of the Greek system.

The Senate will not vote to put the Senate districting amendment on the ballot, so Mr. Dalton wrote a petition that will get the measure on the ballot if enough students sign it. I applaud Mr. Dalton for taking steps to ensure that more students have significant representation in the student government.

I don't understand why the current Senate is opposed to having the entire student body represented. Since 70 percent of University of Idaho students live off campus, I don't see the districting proposal as unreasonable.

Senator Rebecca Coyle certainly does. She has accused Mr. Dalton of committing a "political ploy." She is right — Mr. Dalton is guilty of attempting to bring about fair and equal representation in the Senate.

Letter to the editor

ASUI needs Ben Rush

As the University of Idaho embarks into the merky waters of Big West Athletic Conference compliance, decreasing student enrollment, and major campus construction projects in the works, it is more important now than ever that the ASUI President's office is filled by one that will work diligently to address the above and numerous other issues. Ben Rush, a junior majoring in marketing, is a leader that is of the caliber the ASUI and the University of Idaho need working to move Idaho's Land Grant institution into the next century.

Ben has a proven track record when it comes to student involvement at the UI.

Not only has he served as Vice-Chairperson of both the Student Union and Student Media Boards for two years, he has also served a semester in the ASUI Senate. During the Spring 1997 semester, Ben represented the UI in the Idaho Legislature as the ASUI Lobbyist, a capacity which focuses on representing UI students at the state level. More recently, Ben has served as Chair of Public Relations and Outreach for the Student Recreation Center, an effort which has just been approved by the majority of ASUI voters.

Having served as an ASUI Senator, I know Ben Rush is the most well rounded and qualified candidate running for ASUI President this Wednesday, November 19th.

Not only has he proven he can represent the UI working with state leaders, but he has also demonstrated that he can make tough decisions quickly and effectively. For the future of the ASUI, I urge all students to vote Ben Rush for ASUI President!

employee. The constitution emphasized great support and pride; patriotism at its finest. The Nationalists were supported by United States military supplies and troops. The American government even sent millions of dollars to China before the money vanished.

The Nationalists, with United States government support, slaughtered thousands of rebels that attempted to cross the length of China, but the rebels still made it 6,000 miles on foot. The rebels couldn't go through any cities because, with the help of United States government supplies, the Nationalists blockaded all roads in the city and remained armed to the teeth — with United States government weaponry.

Then the propaganda set in. The Red Scare. Hysteria in America at its finest. All media resources were used to spin the public's head to make the majority of them hate something. Great journalists were those that could bath themselves in yellow paint and see who could spin the hardest; or rather, lie the most.

It is these mighty censorship propagators that sweep books out of America and out of children's minds. This is what we live in and have to deal with today: people mired in debt and loaded with struggles weighing down their backs and ruining their lives. All in the name of democracy.

The media, especially print journalism, are still infected with this propaganda. And this propaganda is sucking money out of the education that is supposed to teach us.

Now the Senate-associated media within the United States are spoon-fed processed garbage.

Our freedom is still being threatened and those taking away our freedom are the same folks from the generation running from bullets at Kent State University thirty years ago.

So what was it that changed the American psyche from freedom-seeking intelligence to freedom-restricting paranoia?

It's simple. John F. Kennedy wanted to change the monetary system in America. Instead of the banks needing to be involved in the money-developing process, Kennedy wanted to take out the middle-man, and base our entire monetary system on gold, not digits in a computer.

So the big Whigs (coming from the boys club that originally was a party in the United States government and has connections with the Masons and the CIA which allowed Bush, who was at the head of the CIA, to become president of the United States of America) took him out and developed a plan of attack on Vietnam and, with the help of the American public that had been exposed to McCarthyism, wiped out hundreds of thousands of Vietnamese civilians, just as the Nationalists had done to the communist rebels just a few years prior.

So our economy then explodes and lays the framework for the manner in which our country is run, including our educational system. Then all media, the same media that are supposed to be the voice of the students, are cut back tremendously. Democracy has its roots in every institution. Even the timber industry. In the midst of rapid urbanization and exploding population, and the increased reliance on natural resources, the forests are being destroyed. But what are the reasons for the path of destruction from the eastern states through the Appalachians, down to Kentucky, up to Michigan and Minnesota, through Montana, Wyoming and Idaho? It points directly back to the same economy which our education is being based on.

That's why the Northwest is such an interesting and important place to be at this time, and you all should feel lucky to have to opportunity to change what you want changed, and help other with their goal, too. But most students are caged in the process, in the bureaucracy of politics that currently is drowning those that are restricting our freedom.

We can try to change the government the way it is, or we could, with the help of our generation, create a new way.

Outdoor Program heads to Banff

KIKE CALVO
STAFF

The ASUI Outdoor Program offers the chance for backcountry skiers to enjoy their favorite sport before the snow comes to Moscow.

"It's an opportunity for early season backcountry skiing," said Mike Beiser, Coordinator of ASUI Outdoor Program.

"In a typical year, by this time of the fall season, U of I students have open ski resorts less than one hour's drive from home. This year is not the case, so for Thanksgiving Break we will go north. The place will be Canada."

"I would say," Beiser said, "this trip is already a tradition. It's the 14th year we've organized this backcountry skiing trip to Banff National Park. We will be staying at The Bow Hut."

As you can read on The Alpine Club of Canada homepage — Canada's National Mountaineering Organization, "The Bow Hut is situated on the east side of the Wapta Icefield, above Bow Lake and about one km northeast of Mt. St. Nicholas in Banff National Park. The hut is really two buildings connected by a fireproof vestibule: a kitchen/common area and separate sleeping quarters. The kitchen area is spacious and bright and is equipped with a wood burning stove. The sleeping quarters, which are unheated, consist of three large rooms with bunks, each accommodating ten people. The hut is accessed by a hike (by ski in the winter) from Bow Lake or across the icefields from the other huts on the Wapta. Access across the icefields requires extensive glacier travel."

The Bow Hut is an excellent base for mountaineering and ski-touring on the Wapta Icefields in both the summer and the winter. It is the largest, best equipped and most accessible of the four huts on the Wapta.

"I would call it an advanced trip," Beiser said.

"There are some prerequisites to join the trip. They must have experience skiing with a full pack. We will carry food for a week, sleeping bags and other stuff, so it's not the place to achieve experience. Also, avalanche transceivers are required," Beiser said.

"The trip," said Beiser, "will run from the 23rd to the 29th of November. The price will be $125. The first night we will stay at the Canadian Youth Hostel at Banff National Park. Next day, early in the morning, we will hike six miles, with almost 2000 vertical feet. And... we still have some space."

The Caffeinated Rants of

T. Scott Carpenter

A personal message of contempt

This is a message to the guy that stole my skinny triple tall mocha at the Vox last Saturday. You don't know me, but I was sitting a few tables away from you as you spoke to your lady friend. I had previously ordered a skinny triple tall mocha, and was anxiously awaiting its arrival, hoping it would fuel the next rant I had to write. I hadn't decided on a topic yet, when the kindly Java Temple Priestess yelled out the sugar sweet words I had been waiting to hear. "Triple tall mocha!" Oh bliss!

I hastily made my way toward it when you cut in front of me, wearing your 7-11 hat and sporting sideburns, a goatee and a ponytail. You swiped the beverage in question from the counter, the caffeinated altar of enlightenment. My first instinct was to tackle you, screaming vows of revenge. I quickly realized that doing such a thing would most likely cause the mocha to spill and become useless. I came to the conclusion that if I truly loved the mocha, I would let it go. I did just this, hoping that you had coincidentally ordered the same drink as me, and that mine was on the way.

But alas, the clock ticked away monotonously. My building rage over the injustice that had befallen me consumed all time like John Popper gettin' busy at an IHOP. The mocha did not come.

I went back to the counter and recounted the whole ulcer-stinging ordeal for the kindly Coffee Goddess who took pity on my tortured soul.

"Someone must have taken your mocha — I'll make another one," she said.

I sulked back to the table, and watched you with violence on my mind. I studied you, and came to the decision that you were enjoying my mocha far too much. I could see that every sip you took caused your black, twisted heart to dance a grotesque little jig like an organ grinder's starving monkey. Your face radiated exaggerated zeal with every swig of your ill-gotten beverage.

"How can you live with yourself?" I thought to myself. Then I realized that you are Satan. The fact that you were the ruler of the underworld helped me accept the fact that you were such an arrogant jerk.

My "pity" mocha arrived. It did not taste as good as normal, because I wanted the first one, the one that you stole. But I drank it and envisioned your head exploding, first in slow motion. Then after your head was gone, I pictured it in reverse until all the bloody chunks of skull came together again. I decided I liked it better the other way, so I pictured your head exploding again, this time more dramatically. A mushroom cloud formed over the stump of your neck, and the interior of the Vox was subjected to nuclear winter.

I had not taken this into account, and was horrified as the skin melted off the other patrons who were present at the time. I immediately tried to think happy thoughts and overcompensated, causing the interior of the coffee house to turn into a field full of buttercups and floppy-eared rabbits. Everything was beautiful and everyone lay in the grass watching the clouds. You couldn't do such a thing, because your head was still blown up, and you lay motionless on the ground.

Of course, all good things must come to an end, and before long we weren't in the field anymore. Your head was still attached to your body and you were completely clueless as to what had just transpired. I got up and left, because I had found inspiration in your cold-heartedness. Some people in the world have to be scum-sucking losers, and you might as well be one of them. Just be careful, or next time it won't be your head that spontaneously combusts.

My building rage over the injustice that had befallen me consumed all time like John Popper gettin' busy at an IHOP.

Classic Shakespearean actor creates mystery

AMY SANDERSON
STAFF

At the age of 12 thespian Tony Church was already playing Macbeth. Although having an education from Cambridge, this well-known Shakespearean actor learned the tricks of the trade from, as one friend describes, the "school of hard knocks."

In a voice filled with the refinement and resonance expected of someone with 28 years of experience with the Royal Shakespeare Company in London, Church described his beginnings in Shakespearean theater.

"The fact was I ran into people who were particularly keen on Shakespeare very early on and I started doing Shakespeare school when I was 11," Church said.

The one-man montage written and performed by Church entitled Give 'Em a Bit of Mystery is making its world premiere with tonight's performance at the Hartung theater. The performance will trace the acting styles of early masters like Richard Burbage of the 16th century to more recent Shakespearean actors such as Sir John Gielgud, an actor still performing at the age of 93.

The "mystery" in Church's piece has several meanings all relating to the theater world. Originally, mystery meant a craft or skill. In the 15th century, guilds of craftman, shoemakers, butchers, and the like put on religious plays now considered the beginning of drama, explained Church. Today the word mystery relates to the shadowy perception of actors and the art of acting itself.

"The whole business of acting really is a mystery because you can't completely solve it; why one person is particularly good and one isn't so good — what it is about personality that an audience reacts to," said Church.

Church's career also involves performing for London's West End, several theaters in the United States, and in feature films including Roman Polanski's Tess. Church currently teaches and performs for the Denver Center Theater Company. This visit to Idaho owes thanks to theater professor Forrest Sears who befriended Church while touring with a group entitled Theater in England.

"He spent a lifetime being a student as well as a professional actor. I think that's the most unique thing I can say about Tony: that he has this great curiosity of the history of the theater to the point of being a scholar and at the same time he has been a top actor," Sears said. The performance will encompass Church's knowledge of theater history and experience with some of the greatest names in theater.

Church is known for the role of Polonius from Hamlet. His portrayal, explained Sears, has yet to be topped by any other actor. Church has played some of the greatest and most demanding characters: King Lear, Henry the IV, and Don Armado to name a few. Despite this serious repertoire, the next role Church yearns to play is one from Shakespeare's comedy The Merry Wives of Windsor.

"There is a role which I have played part of professionally, and that's Falstaff, but I've never played part two — I've only played part one. It is my absolute ambition to complete that by playing part one and two in the same season," said Church.

Tony's knack for storytelling and ability to recreate the ghosts of great actors should make for an intriguing and informative performance to please those interested and involved with theater, explained Sears. "I certainly wouldn't call Tony an impressionist; this is not a nightclub act of impressions, but some of them will come very close I'm sure

Discovery of King Tut's tomb inspired movie house's style

BOISE, Idaho - The Egyptian Theater's painted columns, hieroglyphics and gilded statues are a reflection of the worldwide frenzy for the pharaonic after the 1922 discovery of King Tutankhamen's tomb.

British archaeologist Howard Carter had unearthed the remains of the boy pharaoh and hundreds of golden, bejeweled possessions in Egypt's Valley of the Kings at Luxor. It set off a construction boom of American theaters in the "Egyptian Revival" style.

"There was a craze in the mid-1920s of all things Egyptian," said Robert Yohe, administrator of the State Historic Preservation Office. "Everyone was so stunned by the opulence and splendor of the artifacts in King Tut's tomb, they thought it would be a nice thing to incorporate into buildings. Theaters were the place where you saw the grandest expression."

Architect Fritz Hummel designed the movie house. The interior is a smaller replica of the Egyptian Theater on Hollywood Boulevard in Los Angeles, said Bill Dougall, former curator of the Idaho State Historical Museum.

Current owner Earl Hardy revamped the exterior and repainted the interior columns and hieroglyphics depicting Nile barges, falcons and sacred scarabs. It has a rare theater organ to provide music accompanying silent films, with two rooms reserved just for the pipes.

Hardy's attorney, Fred Shoemaker, said he recently toured the Luxor casino in Las Vegas, which has the fourth-largest pyramid in the world.

Minus the Luxor pyramid and its Sphinx replica, Shoemaker said, "it looks like someone went in and got their ideas from the Boise Egyptian."

because he has this wonderful ear and ability to catch the cadence and music of who these people were. I think it's going to be a very intimate portrait of great actors over three centuries."

Performance time from Give 'Em a bit of Mystery is at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $8 for adults, $5 for youth and non-UI students and $3 for UI students with ID. For more information and reservations contact the Hartung box office at 885-7986.

-Important Spring Fee Payment Changes-

Due to the Tax Reform Act of 1937, the fee payment deadlines published in the spring 1998 time schedule have been changed. The changes are intended to make it easier for our students and/or their parents to take advantage of the Hope Scholarship (tax credit) which is effective for tax years beginning in 1998. Students and or parents who intend to use the tax credit for spring semester should make cash or credit card payments for fees and/or tuition in 1998. Students using financial aid to pay fees are still encouraged to return their billing statements early. Below is the revised fee payment schedule for spring. Hope Scholarship Information

Beginning January 1, 1998, taxpayers may be eligible to claim a Hope Scholarship credit against their federal income taxes. The credit may be claimed for qualified tuition and related expenses of each student in the taxpayer's family who is enrolled at least half-time in one of the first two years of post secondary education in a program leading to a degree, certificate or other recognized educational credential. The amount of the tax credit is (1) 100 percent of the first $1000 of out-of-pocket expenses of each student's qualified tuition and related expenses, plus (2) 50 percent of the next $1000. The maximum credit per student per year is $1500.

The amount a taxpayer may claim as a Hope Scholarship credit is gradually reduced for taxpayers who have modified adjusted gross income between $40,000 and $50,000 for single taxpayers and $80,000 to $100,000 for married taxpayers. Taxpayers with modified adjusted gross income over $50,000 and over $100,000 for married taxpayers may not claim the credit.

The term "qualified tuition and related expenses" means the tuition and fees an individual is required to pay in order to be enrolled at or attend an eligible institution. The term "out of pocket" expenses means qualified tuition and related expenses paid with a loan, a gift, an inheritance, personal savings, or earnings. Qualified tuition and related expenses paid with a Pell Grant, or other tax-free scholarship or tax-free distribution from an Education IRA, or tax-free employer-provided educational assistance are not taken into account in calculating the credit amount.

Idaho? It is a common question put to those who come to this spatula-shaped anomaly of a state as students of the writing craft. With question-mark brows pinned high upon incredulous faces, the members of more tame and populous lands pose that same question over and over; "Yeah, but why I-da-ho?"

They severely underestimate the Gem State.

Idaho is a land of unparalleled majesty, wrought in fire and ice and given to mountains and valleys that fill the heart with no less than the ache of divinity. It is, therefore, little wonder that our much overlooked state has played host to a slew of notable bards, many of whom are alive and well.

The University of Idaho English department has hosted a series of readings this fall by such noted writers as Ed McLanahan and Deidre McNamer. Tomorrow night the fall reading series will conclude with Idaho writer John Rember.

Rember, reading for the first time here at the UI, is a fourth-generation Idahoan from the Sun Valley and Stanley area. His father worked as a fishing guide on the Salmon river and trapped during the spring. John and his brother Bill often went along on these excursions. "He was determined to live a lifestyle not plugged into career" said Rember. After high school, he worked on the Sun Valley ski patrol for seven years. Rember earned a Bachelor of Arts degree (cum laude) in English from Harvard University and went on to receive a Master of Fine Arts degree in creative writing from the University of Montana.

Today, Rember lives in Caldwell and is an assistant professor at Albertson College where he teaches English, creative writing, and journalism. He has penned numerous articles for such magazines as Travel and Leisure, Skiing, and Wildlife Conservation and is set to print two acclaimed collections of short fiction.

Rember will be reading Wednesday from some of his earlier works of short fiction such as Cheerleaders from Gomorrah and Coyote in the Mountains as well as from his recent journalistic efforts. He has of late been working on a semi-fabricated autobiography he dubs a "fictional memoir."

Rember's fiction is engaging. Rember's past experiences with his outdoorsman father and his work on the ski patrol come through in his work providing a rich and unusual palette on which to render his tales. His characters are human and sometimes given to arrogance and hedonism. However, they are also blessed with a sincerity that leads them to brilliant moments of self-aware philosophizing that will leave you nodding your head in unconscious sympathy with these all too familiar feelings. Rember's journal pieces parallel their fictional counterparts in splendor. It takes a firm resolve not to call one's travel agent after reading Rember's accounts of Thai resorts and skiing excursions.

Rember will read Wed. Nov. 19, at 7:30 p.m. in the UI Law Building Court Room. A reception, with noshes and potables, sponsored by Bookpeople of Moscow, will follow the reading. The event is free and open to the public.

Vandals finish strong against Wolf Pack

Team bounces back after 0-3 loss to Utah State

TONYA SNYDER
ASSISTANT SPORTS EDITOR

The University of Idaho volleyball team was well on their way to claiming their second back-to-back Big West Eastern division title after their huge win over nemesis Boise State last weekend.

After dropping Friday night's game to Utah State 11-15, 13-15, 13-15, Idaho redeemed themselves against Nevada Saturday in their last home game of the season.

The Vandals pushed a much faster pace in their game Saturday night, but things were slow to get rolling for the Idaho offense and defense. Two back-to-back aces by the Wolf Pack's April Colgrove gave Nevada the early 2-1 edge. The senior dominated line-up of UI slowly but surely got into the swing of things with Jemena Yocom and Jeri Hymas coming up with several huge kills early on.

After tying the score at 4-4, the Vandals went on an eight-point run, thanks in part to Alli Nieman, who, as of late, has sparked the Idaho front line. Several key dumps by Anna Reznicek and an ace by Yocom got the Vandals to game point. A net violation by Nevada gave Idaho the easy win, 15-5.

Four Vandals led the Idaho attack. Nieman, Hymas and Reznicek all had four kills apiece of the 17 total kills and an impressive .364 attack percentage. Nevada struggled at the net in game one with only eight total kills and only a .056 attack percentage. The Idaho defense led by Shalyne Lynch was definitely on the ball, with the team stretching for 20 digs, double the number of the Wolf Pack. Individually, Lynch scooped up nine digs followed by Hymas and Yocom with three.

Two hot aces by sophomore Kelly Holzer gave UI the advantage in game two before some problems at the net gave the Wolf Pack the room they needed to sneak up and challenge the Idaho led. Nevada tied the game at 5-5, but the Vandal service game heated up, giving UI a slight advantage.

The two teams remained close and the Wolf Pack briefly took the lead at 12-13, until Nieman blocked a Nevada hit for the Idaho win, and a close one at that 15-13.

Lynch, Hymas and Yocom again led the Vandals with four kills, with Yocom boasting a .571 attack percentage. Kelly Holzer finished off the match with four aces to add to the team total of six. Ashley Williams led the Wolf Pack with four kills with Allana Whitnack sparking the Nevada defense with three digs.

Once again, Idaho pushed the pace and took the early lead, thanks in part to the phenomenal digs and sacrifices of Lynch. After receiving only limited playing time since dizziness and blurred vision kept her out for the majority of the season, Lynch has come back strong for the Vandals.

"Shalyne did an excellent job," said Idaho coach Carl Ferreira. "She always has a positive energy level for all that we're doing. She's played sparingly but practiced well. I would have to say this was Shalyne's best match all season."

The UI mainstay, Jessica Moore saw her first action of the night in game three, but was having apparent difficulty with most aspects of her game.

The Vandals were ahead 14-9 and looked destined to take the win. Kristin Kress and Sally Powers came in to finish off the game for Idaho, but things quickly began to fall apart and Nevada came up from behind, stealing the lead 15-14.

But it was Moore, the emotional leader of the team that pulled the Vandals out from under the Wolf Pack with a block and a kill to give Idaho the sideout. Reznicek finished off Nevada with her patented dump for the win 17-15.

The Idaho performance Saturday was a far cry from the game played only the night before against the

Colts shock Pack to gain first win

BARRY GRAHAM

COLUMNIST

I really felt the Indianapolis Colts would not win a game the rest of the season. Going into Sunday's week 11 game with the World Champion Green Bay Packers, the Colts had the dubious distinction of an 0-10 record. If they did get on the winning track, it would definitely not come against Green Bay of all teams.

Well, you guessed it. The Packers did just about everything possible to lose the game. Eventually, the Colts took advantage and after Cary Blanchard hit the game-winning field goal in the fourth quarter, Indianapolis fans had reason to cheer. The Colts win, the Colts win, the Colts win! The final count was Indianapolis 41 and the Pack 38.

The Colts did it with offense, believe it or not. No, "captain comeback" was not at the reigns of the win but Paul Justin came off the bench to lead the 12-point underdogs. Yes, the Packers moved up and down the field against the Indianapolis defense. But, when the Colts had to make a stand, they were up to the task.

Now, where do both teams go from here? Well, for Indianapolis, the season appears to be bleak. They must still contend with several rivals in the AFC East. A 1-15 record is quite a possibility for this franchise when the season comes to an end. Don't get me wrong, the Colts had quite a win this past weekend. But, they still have plenty of holes in their lineup. Offensively, they have had too many critical injuries to marquee players like Harbaugh. Furthermore, they really don't have a big-play starter that could be a game-breaker in a crucial situation.

Defensively, the Colts seem to be old and small up front. When you don't matchup well against other teams' offensive lines, you really are playing from behind at the start of the first quarter.

Idaho ends losing streak with a rush

BRAD NEUENDORF
STAFF

In a must win game to prepare for Boise State, Idaho ended their three game losing streak, defeating New Mexico State 35-18 Saturday among a dismal 6,425 fans in Las Cruces.

The victory ended the longest losing streak Idaho has had since the 1991 season under John L. Smith.

The second half was dominated by the Vandals, giving the Aggies no chance to ever have the lead after trailing just 14-10 at the half.

Three drives that went 70 yards or longer in the second half ended up in touchdowns for three different Vandals.

Sophomore wide receiver Ryan Prestimonico ended the Vandal effort with a 35 yard reverse run that finished a five play 82 yard drive that put the Vandals up by 17 with 5:51 left in the game.

Anthony Tenner had the first score of the fourth quarter on a one yard run that would put an exclamation point on the true freshman's excellent afternoon.

Tenner ran the ball 22 times, going 149 yards and making his solo touchdown. Willie Alderson touched the ball only four times, but with a 56 yard rush in the fourth quarter, the freshman would average 20 yards per carry.

"We established the run and we had a lot of people step it up and make big plays," Idaho coach Chris Tormey said.

In all, the Vandals ran all over

New Mexico State, gaining 296 yards on 37 attempts.

The season high rushing effort for the Vandals enabled them to use their play action offense.

"We had to do three things in order for our passing attack to work today and we accomplished all three," Tormey said. "We had to protect, throw and catch and we were able to do that."

After sitting out against Eastern a three yard touchdown late in the first quarter.

"This is most definitely our best offensive production of the year," Tormey said. "We didn't punt until a minute left in the game, so we must have put up some big numbers."

Tormey was right, the Vandals finished the game with 610 yards of total offense, averaging 8.7 yards per play.

The Vandal defense was able to hold the talented New Mexico State offense to just two touchdowns. Dennis Manns, who leads all Big West running backs with a 112.3 yards per game average, was held by the Vandal defense to only 79 yards on 20 carries. Concentrating on Manns allowed fullback Brett Gentrup to hit the 100-yard mark on only 12 carries. The Aggies still managed to go 265 yards on the ground, but when they were down late in the second half, they were unable to go through the air.

Quarterback Ty Houghtaling completed just 17 of his 39 passes on one touchdown and one interception. Houghtaling, trying to rally his team back from a 21-10 deficit, completed only seven of his next 20 passes in the final quarter--eliminating any chance of an Aggie comeback.

Idaho defensive standout Ryan Skinner led the Vandal defense with 17 tackles, including nine solo, one assisted sack and a pass breakup.

Idaho finally gains some momentum and it could not have come at a better time as Boise State enters the Kibbie Dome this Saturday at 5 p.m.

This is definitely our best offensive production of the year.

—Chris Tormey

Idaho head coach

Washington, quarterback Brian Brennan looked strong again.

Brennan, under little pressure, completed 19 of his 33 passes for 314 yards and three touchdowns.

"It felt like I had a lot of time to throw the ball; I only got hit twice all day, once on the sack and once when I ran the ball," said Brennan, whose line gave up just one sack all afternoon.

Antonio Wilson was Brennan's primary receiver with eight receptions for 135 yards, including

Four sign letters of intent to play women's basketball

Courtesy of UI Athletic Media Relations

Four high school girls basketball players signed letters of intent to play at the University of Idaho.

Darci Pemberton, Jennae Krell, Julie Wynstra and Megan LeBlanc each committed to play for the Vandals next year.

"Overall, they're the class with the most depth I've ever recruited," fourth-year Idaho coach Julie Holt said. "All of them are good enough to compete for starting time as freshmen."

Pemberton is a 6-foot senior forward from Everett High School in Everett, Wash. As a junior she averaged 14.6 points and 9.2 rebounds per game, earning first-team all-area and first team all-WESCO.

"Darci is very athletic. She can get up and down the floor, can score the basketball and is a great rebounder," Holt said.

Arizona State, San Francisco and Northern Arizona also recruited Pemberton.

Krell is a 5-foot-11 guard from Bothell High School in Bothell, Wash. She averaged 15.5 points, 8.4 rebounds and 3.1 assists per game during her junior season. For her efforts, she was chosen to the Seattle Times All-Area team — one of five girls selected from over 200 high schools — as well as the Star Times All-Kingco First-Team.

"She has good size as well as really good speed and quickness," Holt said.

Weber State and Idaho State also recruited Krell. Her father, Ken Krell, played basketball at the University of Washington.

Wynstra is a 6-foot-3 center from Lynden Christian High School in Lynden, Wash. During her junior season, Wynstra averaged a league-standing 17.6 points including 10.7 rebounds per game. She also holds the record for blocked shots in a state tournament game with seven. Wynstra has helped her team to sixth-, first- and fifth-place finishes at the last three Class A tournaments.

"She's a winner. She's a natural-fli-athlete," Holt said.

New Mexico State, Portland State, Montana and Seattle Pacific each recruited Wynstra.

LeBlanc is a 5-foot-10 guard from Crescent Valley High School in Corvallis, Ore. She averaged 16.7 points, 8.0 rebounds and 3.0 assists her junior year. LeBlanc's scoring average placed her second in the league.

After her junior season, Street and Smith's named LeBlanc an honorable mention All-American, and USA Today ranked her among the top 20 players in Oregon. She was also picked first-team all-league and honorable mention all-state last year.

"Megan is a good scorer, rebounder and passer," Holt said. "She will give us outstanding depth at the guard position."

LeBlanc was recruited by Montana, Boise State and Northern Arizona.

"All of these kids you look at them and go, 'Wow,'" Holt said. "Each kid has great character. They're all tall, athletic and very good basketball players. We will press a lot and rebound well with these kids."

The Packers, on the other hand, are still one of the best teams in the league. However, they say that championship teams are marked by wins on the road. Last season, the Packers went 5-3 away from Lambeau Field in Green Bay. This season, the Packers are 2-3 on the road. Green Bay will have to play much better if they are to repeat.

The problem with the Pack this season appears to be their inconsistency on both sides of the ball. Bret Favre has shown signs of brilliance in several games in 1997 but also has made some bad decisions as well. He will have to find the touch and put teams like Indianapolis away early in a game.

The Packers' defense is struggling again, especially against the run. Even with these problems, Green Bay is still in the hunt for the NFC Central title. And, with Dallas coming to Lambeau Field next week, Packer fans, players and coaches will undoubtedly put this game behind them.

Everything on line in Apple Cup

The talking is over and the battles have already begun. The Apple Cup, which features Washington vs. Washington State, of the Pac 10, in a contest for state supremacy is finally here.

And this season, a trip to Pasadena is on the line.

Ever since the middle of the season when both the Huskies and Cougars gradually moved into the top 20 poll of elite, teams, players, analysts and fans alike have been eagerly awaiting the inevitable showdown between the two schools.

Let's go over the scenarios. The Cougars (9-1, 6-1 in the Pac 10) are traveling to Seattle to face the Huskies (7-3, 5-2). If WSU wins and the Bruins of UCLA defeat USC on Saturday, Washington State will play in the Rose Bowl. If the Huskies hold serve in their home stadium and defeat the Cougars and UCLA wins, then the Bruins will be the Pac 10 representative in Pasadena.

The game itself will feature a hobbled and weakened Husky team that will not have a completely healthy Brock Huard taking the snaps. However, Washington does have several playmakers that could still be the difference. Throw into the mix the fact the Huskies will have the homefield advantage. WSU, on the other hand, has had balance all season. Heisman Trophy hopeful Ryan Leaf will pass first to set up the run and then Mike Black will use his speed and elusive ability to run to daylight. The game has all the makings of a classic with so much on the line. What team has the advantage? Which ever team can control the line of scrimmage and run more effectively then the other will win.

UI head coach David Farrar added a second player to his 1998 recruiting class by signing Nathaniel J. Watson, a 1994 graduate of Eastglen High in Edmonton, Alberta, who has spent the past two years on a LDS Church mission.

As a senior, Watson (6-4, 195) averaged 21 points, eight rebounds and six assists while shooting 50 percent from the field and 80 percent from the line.

Utah State Aggies. The entire team looked slow, even lethargic, for the majority of the match despite efforts by Beth Craig and Kyle Leonard at the net as the Aggies took a dominate 0-7 lead.

Aces by Yocom, Reznicek and two by Leonard pulled the Vandals into striking distance, but the Aggies continued to extend their early lead and captured the game 11-15.

Kress and Lynch set the pace for Idaho in game two and for the first time of the match, the Vandals held a decisive lead at 6-2. The Aggies soon caught the Vandals at 8-8 and overtook Idaho thanks to the help of an ace by Niki Conner and a block on a Leonard spike. Two Idaho time-outs couldn't snap the Utah momentum, and despite a last-second rally by UI, a simple net violation shut down Idaho 13-15.

The Vandals went on a 9-0 run to start game three and things were looking up. Two aces early on gave Idaho the edge, but the Aggies began to whittle away at the lead. Numerous mistakes at the net and poor communication left the door wide open for USU as they finished off the match 13-15.
