New Argonaut crew, old sinister plot

By Sergio Brown
 Editor in Chief

Welcome to another year of the Argonaut! Last year's Argonaut was extremely successful. Andrew White, Editor, and Sam Aldrich, Advertising Manager, worked together with a veteran staff to take the necessary steps to create this success. Probably the biggest step for the Argonaut was the move to broad sheet pages. This new look gave the paper the appearance and feel of a professional class newspaper.

White added a web page to the newspaper which was very effective in informing off campus students and alumni of UI campus news and events. Aldrich's motivation, and "refuse to fail" attitude opened new markets for Argonaut advertising. Working together, White and Aldrich were able to easily break past Argonaut advertising sales records, and once again making the Argonaut prof-

This year's staff, including new Ads Manager, Katie Heffelfinger, plans to resume the forward progress of the paper literally into the next millennium. To improve the paper, we are expanding on the extraordinary ideas that were presented to the Argonaut by White and Aldrich.

The Argonaut is currently in the process of updating the website to be even more user-friendly. There will be Section Editor message boards and point and click voting to assure that we are serving the students and community in the best possible manner.

Along with the advanced website, the paper itself will take on an updated look and style. Articles will include attached websites and e-mail addresses for extended information. The paper's design will be very progressive, utilizing the latest and best layout ideas, and the stories themselves will be more investigative and in-depth. Under Katie Heffelfinger, Argonaut advertising plans improvements as well. They are expanding the classifieds section and focusing on a broader reach to accommodate many more potential advertisers. Heffelfinger has added some talented graphics designers to improve overall ad quality, and is still accepting applications for production personnel.

A little Background

Originally from the Boise area, I grew up near Kuna Idaho, about five miles south of Nampa. I attribute my character to small town life and the excellent guidance of my parents, Jimmie and Patricia Brown.

My freshman and sophomore years were spent in Nampa Idaho, at North West Nazarene College. My transfer to the UI ended up as one of my all time top decisions where I am a Senior, majoring in English. Up to this point I have had a wonderful experience here at the university and am honored and excited with the responsibility of printing the students' voice through the Argonaut.

Katie Heffelfinger is a senior earning a major in marketing and a minor in advertising. She was born in Hayward California, but now calls Coeur d'Alene home.

She links her success to her parents, Bill Heffelfinger, and Addie Daryanani, as well as her younger brother Neil.

Please remember that all visitors to the Argonaut are always welcome, for business or just to chat. Thanks for reading and have a great summer!

KEEP IN TOUCH

We welcome letters of up to 250 words on topics of general interest. All letters are subject to editing. Please sign with your full name (first name, initial, last name) and include a daytime telephone number where you can be reached for verification. WWF Pro-Wrestler finds real danger

By Rocky Logan
 University of Idaho Argonaut

A 33 year old pro wrestler plunged 50 feet to his death as he was being lowered by a cable from the ceiling into the ring in Kansas City, Missouri at Kemper Arena. Owen Hart, who wrestled under the nickname "Blue Blazer," was given CPR inside the ring as thousands of pro wrestling fans were watching. The event was on pay-per-view national television, but the fall was not shown.

The World Wrestling Federation event "Over the Edge" on May 23, resumed about 15 minutes later, after Hart was taken to the hospital and pronounced dead. Commentators Jim Ross repeated over and over to the audience that Hart's fall was not scripted, as professional wrestling matches openly are.

Shawn Gaitan, a WWF fan said, "I think it's really messed up that they kept on with the show. They could at least tell us what was going on." Some witnesses said the cable snapped; others said it appeared Hart was somehow disconnected from it. Fans later related that Hart's head snapped backwards when he hit one of the padded pieces of metal that holds the ropes together in each corner of the ring.

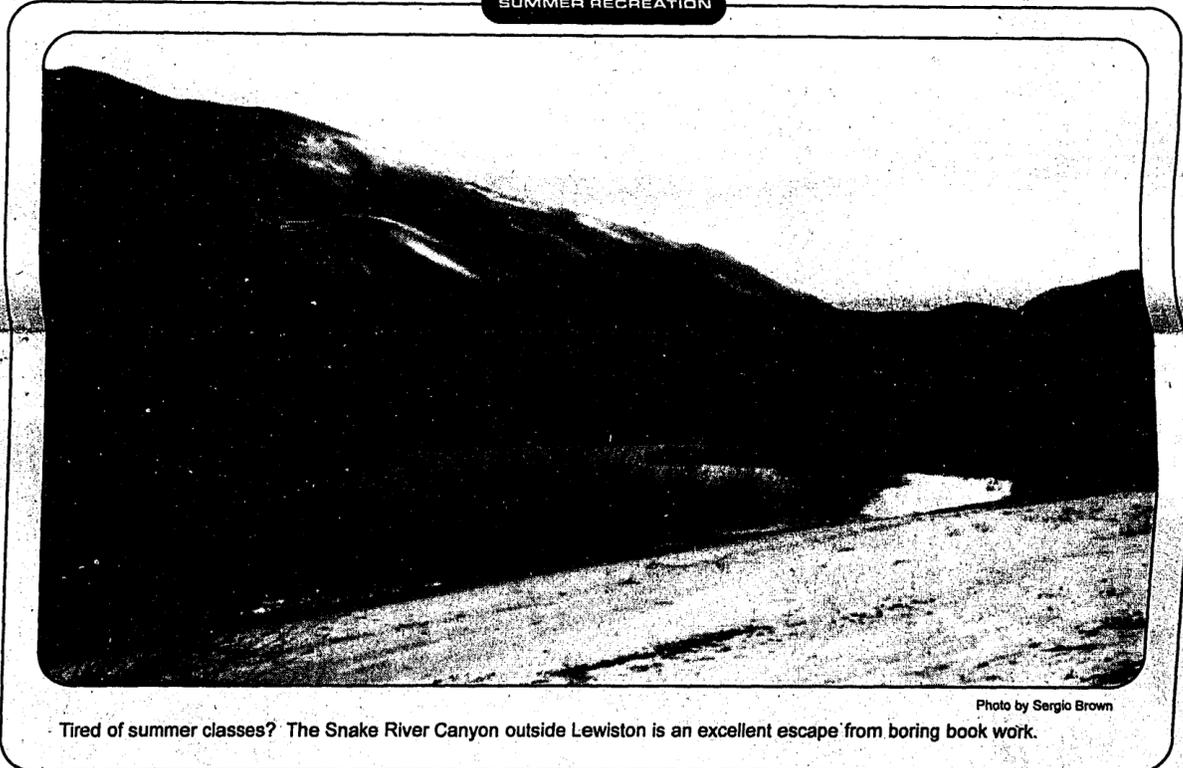

Kansas City Police Sgt. Patrick Witcher explained, investigators were trying to determine what went wrong. "From the information we have so far, it had something to do with the harness system," Witcher said. An on-going police investigation continues.

Hart, known for his acrobatic stunts, is the son of former wrestler Stu Hart. All seven of the elder Hart's sons went into wrestling, including Bret "The Hitman" Hart, a WCW star. Bret Hart told ABC's "Good Morning America" that his brother had been worried about the stunts. Hart's sister said, "My poor brother Owen was sacrificed for ratings."

WWF hosted a live two hour "Monday Night Raw" special celebrating Owen Hart's life. Hart's colleagues opened the show by having a moment of silence and rang the bell ten times in his honor. Throughout the show, Owen was mentioned as wrestlers wore arm-bands with his initials on it.

Vince McMahon Jr., President of the WWF told reporters that the WWF was saddened by the tragedy and that answers would be searched for.

Hart was known for his extraordinary humor and friendship. He leaves behind a wife and two children. A private family service was held May 31.

Exams conjure up fears in all of us. Did I study hard enough? Will I pass? Do I know the material inside and out? Will it be graded on a curve?

The fact is, exams are an essential component of learning valuable information. And if you think about it, one more exam—a skin cancer self-examination—really won't kill you, right? No, in fact, it could save your life.

You know your skin better than anyone else. Whether it's a passing glance in a full-length mirror as you're getting dressed for work or a thorough once-over every night before bedtime, you look at your skin every day. That's why you're the best person to notice any changes or suspicious marks on your skin that could be a sign of skin cancer.

Skin self-examinations aren't difficult and can be done in a matter of minutes with only one tool—a hand-held mirror. Or, you can enlist the help of a friend for those hard-to-see areas.

By giving yourself a personal inspection regularly, you can spot potential trouble at the best possible time: in the earliest stage. That's important because most skin cancers, including melanoma—the deadliest form of skin cancer—can be cured if caught in time.

About 1 million new cases of skin cancer will be diagnosed in the United States each year. Of that total, it is estimated that approximately 44,200 people in the United States will be diagnosed with melanoma this year, up 6 percent from 1998. This year alone, approximately 7,300 deaths will be attributed to melanoma, about one every hour. A report in the April 21, 1999 issue of the Journal of the National Cancer Institute finds that while the number of new cases for the most cancers declined from 1990-1996, melanoma is one of the few cancers that continues to rise at a rate of approximately 3 percent annually.

While melanoma can strike anyone, Caucasians are at far greater risk than those of other races. But even among Caucasians, however, certain individuals are at higher risk than others. For example:

- Your chances increase by nine times if you've already had one melanoma.
- You have a substantially increased risk of developing melanoma if you have many moles, large moles or atypical (unusual) moles.
- Your risk is increased if your parents, children or siblings have had melanoma.

- If you are a Caucasian with fair skin, your risk is twice as great as a Caucasian with olive skin.
- Redheads and blondes have a twofold to fourfold increased risk of developing melanoma.
- Excessive sun exposure in the first 10-15 years of life increases your chances of developing melanoma threefold.
- Conducting a skin self-examination is simple and painless. Look over your entire body, including your scalp, soles of your feet, between your toes, and the palms of your hands. You'll need a mirror to check some of these areas. Here's what to look for:
 - A mole that has changed size, color, shape or texture.
 - A mole that begins itching, bleeding, crusting or becomes irritated.
 - New moles.
 - Changes in your skin.
- If you spot any of these changes, see your dermatologist immediately. "If neglected, all skin cancers, especially melanoma, can be lethal," warns Dr. Darrell Rigel, MD, President of the American Academy of Dermatology. "That's why skin self-examinations are so critical in the detection process."

In addition to practicing frequent skin self-exams, the American Academy of Dermatology recommends that everyone follow these sun safety precautions year-round:

- Avoid "peak" sunlight hours - between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. - when the sun's rays are the strongest.
- Apply a broad-spectrum sunscreen with a Sun Protection Factor (SPF) of at least 15, apply 15-30 minutes before going outdoors, and reapply every two hours, especially when playing sports, swimming, gardening or doing any other outdoor activities. Cloudy days are no exception. Sunscreens should not be used to increase the time spent in intense sunlight.
- Wear protective, tightly woven clothing, sunglasses with UV protection and a wide-brimmed hat.

DANGER: Beware of Summer parking pests

Yes, those boys of summer are at it again. When they are not locked in their Geo Trackers eating bologna sandwiches they are molesting your car with $15 parking tickets.

However, You can protect yourself this summer! Only parking in the blue, and green lots. It has come to the Argonaut's attention that although the rugged little 4X4's of parking services can go just about anywhere, they are staying away from these lots.

So, please, protect yourselves and postpone the parking police's car upgrade for another year! only park in blue or green!

or single tickets can be purchased by calling (888) 265-4554.

State informational seminars

Idaho State Treasurer, Ron, G. Crane, will hold informational seminars around the state throughout the month of June pertaining to a new Prime-Rate Loan Program which goes into effect July 1, 1999. The program is offered to all small businesses. Crane and cronies will be in Lewiston, Tuesday, June 1, with a seminar for banks only at 2:00 p.m., and a public seminar at 3:00 p.m. They will also be in Sandpoint June 2, from 9:00-10:00 a.m., and Coeur d'Alene June 2, from 2:00-3:00 p.m.

The International Friendship Association (IFA) is looking for families of individuals to participate in the Friendship Family program. This program links international students at the UI to families and individuals in the Moscow community. The student and the family spend time together, practice the glockenspiel, and learn about each other's culture. To participate in this program, contact Stephanie Kilgore at 885-7841 or e-mail at skilgore@sub.uidaho.edu.

Womens' run to benefit breast cancer research.

The 8th annual Palouse Roadrunners Women's Run will be held on Saturday June 5. The race will start at 9 a.m. with registration starting at 8. The race will start at Eggan Youth Center, in Moscow on the corner of D St. and Mountainview. All mothers, daughters, grandmas, and friends are encouraged to attend this run/walk. Awards will be given, and all proceeds go to benefit breast cancer research. Entry forms can be picked up at area sporting goods stores, the Moscow Co-op, Gambino's or by calling (208) 798-4705.

Local golf tournament to Benefit The United Way

United Parcel Service will host the first annual Border Challenge Golf Tournament on Saturday, June 12. The event is to take place at the University of Idaho Golf Course. The gala begins at 7:00 a.m. with a silent auction, followed by play at 8:30. A cost of $40 per person, which includes lunch and refreshments, will be charged at the gate, with all proceeds going to the Moscow, and Pullman United Ways.

Go to UI, get a tree

May 27, the University of Idaho College of Education and the Alumni Association presented its first Idaho Family Tree Award. The George and Norma Greene family will be honored at a ceremony on the north side of Memorial Gymnasium, where the Greene family tree will be planted. The UI Family Tree program was established as a way of honoring families whose lineage has spanned several generations at the UI, leaving a legacy of strong Vandal tradition.

George Green, a 1929 UI graduate, passed away in November 1998. He was a former UI athletic director and coach. Norma Geddes Greene, also a 1929 UI graduate, will attend the ceremony, along with many of the nearly 30 family graduates.

Musician's Spotlight

Ani Difrancu/Utah Phillips- Fellow Workers (righteous babe) 73%

By Dan Pokorney
Contributing Writer

Ani Difrancu has been, at least in this decade, a big thorn in the side of mainstream America. Taking politics back from the pundits, she has taken responsibility to a new level in the music industry and has inspired her legions of fans. It seems to be a natural extension of this that the person she chose in expanding her independent labels roster was Utah Phillips. Utah has long been on the folk circuit, entertaining his audiences with his true stories of people who have risen up to keep the authorities and experts at bay. Most of these stories are even more anti-quoted than Utah himself, but the wit and intelligence heard here are directly from Utah's long and rich existence.

Fellow Workers, Utah and Ani's second collaboration, was recorded in Kingsway Studios in New Orleans. Difrancu's music, obviously soaked in the funk of the old city, is not especially dynamic. It does, however, compliment the stoic and elegant nature of Utah's storytelling. Having recorded in front of a live audience this time around works well and allows for the intimacy that every bard needs.

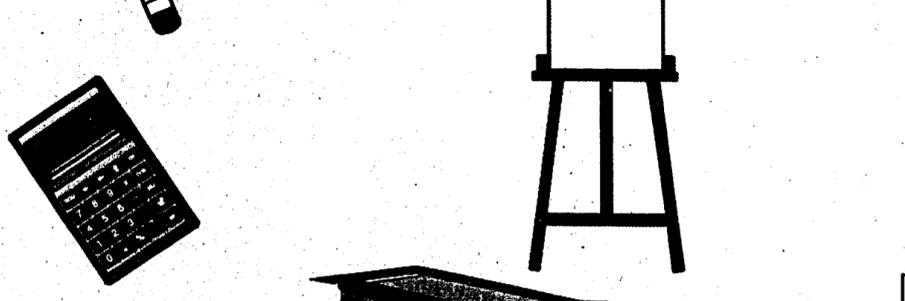

What we get from Utah's stories (and the excellent liner notes by lefty scholar Howard Zinn) is that throughout history, people have gotten the goods by standing up to the inherently corrupt corporate world. If radical politics with a little bit of heart and soul is your bag, this is not one to be passed up.

ASUI Presidential Update

Hope everyone is having a good summer. For those of you going to summer school, I commend you. For those of you working and relaxing, I hope you are enjoying the quiet months in Moscow. Summertime is one of my favorite things about the University of Idaho because new friendships are formed and there is no hassle for parking.

My office hours are from 1:00-3:00 pm Monday-Thursday, so please stop by the ASUI Office in the Student Union Building to say hello, or to discuss any concerns. I will be heading to Boise next week to attend the UI Foundation meeting. The Foundation is looking at changing their by-laws and has called an emergency meeting. During my visit in Boise, I will also meet with Governor Dirk Kempthorne and ask him to prioritize state funding for higher education in the next legislative session. If you would like for me to share any issue with Governor Kempthorne, then please get in touch with me.

Also next week, the Idaho 4-H Teen Association will be on campus for their annual Teen Conference. The 8th graders-graduating high school seniors will attend workshops, participate in athletic competitions, and meet lifelong friends. It will be my honor as a former 4-H'er to welcome the group to the U of I during their opening assembly.

The State Board of Education will be in Moscow June 17 and 18. Meetings will be held in the Student Union Building. It will be nice to have board members walk around campus and see the new Commons and other programs being implemented at the University of Idaho. State Board of Education President Harold Davis informally discussed with me after the May Commencement Ceremony that he would ask the President's Council to analyze the future of student fees.

I am in the process of assisting Noreen Benjaminsen, a student at the U of I, in developing a directory for non-traditional students. The directory will be a resource for non-traditional students to orient themselves about campus life.

To ensure a smooth transition to the move to Martin Stadium, I ask you to contact either myself, or Athletic Director Mike Bohn at 885-0200 to answer any questions you may have. Meetings will be held throughout the semester to finalize the plans for transportation and pre-game activities.

Please contact me at the ASUI Office at 885-6331, or via e-mail at: shei2594@uidaho.edu Enjoy the sunshine and remember we are all "Vandals for Life".

Life after Star Wars, "The Phantom Menace"

By Sergio Brown
 Editor in Chief

It's rare when you have to stand in long lines for a movie on the Palouse, but George Lucas and his gigantic media machine made it happen. Toys, fast food promotions, T-shirts, pizza boxes, and everything else you can think of was offered to the Star Wars starved public.

We all heard about the many Star Wars radicals who went as far as to spend weeks under the stars to be the first in the galaxy to view what was considered a masterpiece before it even hit the box office.

So was this movie a success? A lot of the critics didn't like it, claiming that the jokes were too juvenile for an adult audience. Some even called George Lucas out of practice as a director, having not directed a movie for years. But how can we judge a movie when it is thought to be the greatest movie of all time, before the opening night?

In shrewd reporter fashion, I took this challenge to discover the truth Sunday. I stood in line, fought for a seat, and saw something priceless, movie that had the ability to take me on a fast and furious trip back to my childhood. I still remember going to the old Plaza Twin in Boise to see The Empire Strikes Back for the first time. I was six years old. I don't remember seeing the movie but I remember previously unmatched excitement felt from viewing the film. It has come to my attention that the Star Wars generation has grown up. The young audience who was blown away at Lucas's vision of space and exploration in the 70's and 80's are now adults who expect more from movies than sensory stimulation. It's true that the jokes in the latest Star Wars are juvenile, and at times the acting is sub par, but when wasn't this the case?

It is my opinion George Lucas made another gem for the ages, in "The Phantom Menace." The movie is at a level with the previous trilogy. Just remember, bring your kids. They are the true benefactors from this film.

Moscow school officials claim additional security unnecessary

By Ruth Snow
University of Idaho Argonaut

MOSCOW, Idaho— Two months after the worst high school massacre in United States history at Columbine High School in Littleton, Colo., local school administrators are still thinking about their students' safety.

"Safety of students and personnel is always a concern in schools, but the events of the past few weeks have heightened our awareness of the need to be prepared for potential violence," said Dr. Edward Fisk, Moscow School District Superintendent.

School administrators still do not see the need for security guards, gates, or metal detectors at entrances since Moscow is a relatively close-knit, small community.

"If some unbalanced person wants to cause harm, security isn't going to prevent it from happening," said Fisk. "One of our goals is to identify potential problem students before any violent incidences occur," he added.

At Moscow High School, the incidences of harassment have dropped dramatically in the past two years. In the 1996-1997 school year there were 203 incidences, compared to only 41 in the 1998-1999 school year. Suspensions dropped from 134 in the 1997-1998 school year to 92 in the 1998-1999 school year.

There were no reported weapon violations this year. About a week after the Littleton, Colo. tragedy, there was a bomb threat that caused a disturbance. According to Fisk, the phone call was made from inside the school, probably by a student.

The Moscow School District has a no-tolerance approach to those who violate policies pertaining to weapons and violence on school property.

"Everyone has a right to feel safe in school," said Fisk. "A secure environment where students and staff are free from insults and injury is one of our most important goals," he added.

School Safety

According to Moscow School officials, school violence is dropping.

Kosovo price tag in the billions

By Tom Raum
Associated Press

WASHINGTON— The war against Yugoslavia cost the United States as much as $4 billion, according to private and congressional estimates.

Annual peacekeeping and reconstruction expenses are expected to run nearly as high — and that assumes the United States will honor President Clinton's pledge that "not a penny" will go to rebuild Serbia's roads and bridges while Yugoslavia

President Slobodan Milosevic remains in power.

The U.S. military contributed to the NATO force more than 725 aircraft, a variety of artillery, multiple-launch rocket systems and about 5,500 supporting Army troops. Clinton called up about 5,000 reservists.

U.S. aircraft flew 2,300 missions in the 11 weeks of airstrikes. U.S. Navy ships fired about 450 Tomahawk cruise missiles, at a price of about $1 million a missile. U.S. Air Force B-2 bombers launched 90 air-launched cruise missiles, which cost about $2 million apiece.

The Pentagon has not put a price on these deployments or on replacing the munitions they consumed. An independent research organization has: $2.3 billion to $4 billion, according to the Center for Strategic and Budgetary Assessments.

The costs are difficult to estimate because the Pentagon has not given details on how many munitions other than cruise missiles were used.

Further, the Pentagon plans to upgrade, rather than replace, some of the cruise missiles and other munitions while also increasing stockpiles, center analyst Elizabeth Heeter said. In late May, President Clinton signed an emergency spending bill that set aside about $5 billion for the airstrikes through Sept. 30, if necessary.

With the fighting over and warplanes headed home, the administration hopes to use as much of the remaining money as possible — about $2 billion by some estimates — to pay for peacekeeping in Kosovo, a province of Yugoslavia's dominant republic Serbia.

Tending to the peace in Kosovo is expected to run $2 billion to $3.5 billion annually, not including reconstruction costs, the center says. The international force of 50,000 peacekeepers includes 7,000 U.S. troops to help resettle and protect ethnic Albanian refugees.

The White House chief of staff, John Podesta, said U.S. peacekeepers will be needed indefinitely.

U.S. peacekeepers in a second Balkans hot spot, Bosnia, have cost more than $9 billion. About 6,700 U.S. troops remain in Bosnia, down from a peak of more than 22,000. They are helping to implement the 1995 U.S.-brokered Dayton peace agreement that ended three years of fighting by the country's Serbs, Muslims and Croats.

For Kosovo, the administration and congressional leaders insist the bulk of Western reconstruction aid must come from Europe.

Without waiting for the administration to request a U.S. share, the Senate Appropriations Committee voted to provide $535 million for post-war Balkan reconstruction. Kosovo would receive $150 million, but the rest of Serbia would get nothing.

Lawmakers want the United States to provide about 20 percent of total costs, said Sen. Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., chairman of the Appropriations subcommittee on foreign operations and author of the reconstruction plan. The Senate could take up the measure this week.

The European Commission, administrative arm of the 15-nation European Union, has estimated the cost of rebuilding Kosovo at $7 billion for the first three years. It plans to spend up to $722 million on reconstruction during each of the next three years.

While no independent agency has assessed damage in Serbia, Yugoslav claims range as high as $90 billion. Factories, railroads and bridges bore the brunt of NATO's airstrikes.

Outdoor Program takes on Mt. Kennedy

Ruth Snow
University of Idaho Argonaut

MOSCOW, Idaho— An eight-man expedition team from the University of Idaho recently conquered Mount Kennedy in the southwestern corner of the Yukon Territory.

While some University of Idaho students and faculty were preparing for graduation ceremonies, these eight men were doing last minute preparation for the advent

"We were packing our supplies for the climb while everyone else was attending graduation," said Mike Beiser, the University of Idaho Outdoor Program Coordinator and group leader for the expedition. The expedition was scheduled to climb Mount Kennedy and Mount Hubbard, but because of bad weather conditions they were only able to get to the top of Kennedy.

"Almost every day we were there it snowed," said Beiser. The team had to wait four days in Yakutat, Alaska because the weather conditions made it impossible to land on Cathedral Glacier at the bottom of the mountains.

After reaching the glacier, the team was delayed four more days by bad weather. There was only violent storms and the expedition members took advantage of this short period of time to climb Kennedy.

While on Kennedy the team took Global Positioning System readings with signals from 10 satellites and discovered that the peak had grown by about 75 feet.

Beiser wants to go back to the same area with better equipment and better weather sometime in the future.

Other expedition members were Phil Druker, 52, Brian Keller, 27, Ben Rush, 21, John Carnes, 34, Clint Herridge, 25, Chris Giedt, 26, and Michael Wolfson, 35. All members, except Wolfson, were students or faculty at the University of Idaho. Wolfson is a visiting professor from Washington State University.

UI's Professor Pals returns from sabbatical

By Ruth Snow
University of Idaho Argonaut

MOSCOW, Idaho— Dr. Douglas Pals, a professor in the Department of Agricultural and Extension Education, traveled to Chile last fall and then continued to Penn State this spring while on sabbatical.

In Chile, Pals taught two environmental issues courses. He and his wife, Diana, took the equivalent of 14 college Spanish courses at the Universidad Nacional Andres Bello in Santiago, Chile. Although he could read and understand the Spanish language, Pals admitted that he was a long way from holding a fluent conversation.

Professors have the opportunity to go on sabbatical every seven years. Sabbaticals are all about rest, relaxation and research that allow professors to grow more aware of what others are doing in their area of interest.

"The hosting country or college sometimes supplement the visiting professor's income, although my family came up with most of the resources," said Pals.

At Penn State, Pals worked within the Department of Agricultural and Extension Education to develop a survey to assess the in-service needs of agricultural science instructors in Pennsylvania. He also did school visitations and filled in for a Penn State professor who was away on sabbatical.

He taught through the University Studies Abroad Consortium. USAC is a program on the University of Idaho campus as well as many other college campuses across the country that give both professors and students an opportunity to go to selected countries.

"According to Pals, both students and faculty should take advantage of the USAC program located on the University of Idaho campus. There are many opportunities to travel to Australia, Chile, China, Costa Rica, England, France, Germany, Italy, New Zealand, Spain, and Thailand.

Department of Ed putting funds to a good use

The Idaho Department of Education is learning driving techniques from a "Monster." The Auto Control Monster apparatus consists of two pneumatic tires - capable of casting or pivoting 360 degrees - bolted to the rear of a front-wheel drive automobile. The device allows drivers and passengers to attempt extreme driving conditions, without the risk of injury.

The Arthritis Foundation is reminding everyone that early detection of Rheumatoid Arthritis (RA) is essential. The onset of RA is typically between ages 25-50, however it can affect anyone including infants.

RA affects people differently but some common symptoms include: swollen, warm, tender joints; inflammation of the wrist and finger joints; symmetrical disease patterns; and stiffness and pain lasting for more than 30 minutes after an extended rest.

For more information about RA, contact the Arthritis Foundation at 1-800-444-4993.

Hallelujah! The Ag Hotline will continue

Boise - The Idaho Agricultural Resources Hotline will continue to serve Idaho's farmers and ranchers through the summer months. However, a decline in the number of calls received has prompted a change in the response time callers can expect from 24 to 72 hours.

By calling the toll-free number, (877) 862-5870 Idahoans can get info on resources such as farm loans, financial planning, educational opportunities, community health programs and veterans' services.

The lackluster "hotline," which once served more than 300 calls when the service began in November 1998 but has recently dwindled to around one or two per day.

Movie Review:

To shag or not to shag?

By Nick Hopkins
 University of Idaho Argonaut

Yeah, baby, yeah! Austin Powers 2: The Spy Who Shagged Me exploded onto the big screen recently bringing two hours of joy to the American moviegoer's life. Oh, and what joy it has brought! If you haven't seen it yet, Go! Now! Quick like a monkey! You will laugh until you hurt.

Mike Myers has once again donned the swinging velvet suit and shag carpet chest hair that is Austin Powers, International Man of Mystery. He also returns as the diabolically silly Dr. Evil, the man would-be ruler of this planet. As an added treat, Myers plays the part of Fat Bastard, a one ton Scottish spy in the Ministry of Defense. The skin suit used to make Bastard's large physique is the most impressive I've seen, though in some ways I wish I hadn't. You'll see what I mean.

Austin's new love interest in this adventure is none other than the extremely shaggable Felicity Shagwell, played by the lovely Heather Graham. "Shagwell by name, shag very well by reputation." Robert Wagner returns to reprise his role as Number 2, with Rob Lowe playing a younger version in swinging 1969 London. Wrapping up this all star cast is the venerable Michael York as Basil Exposition, Austin's commander.

The plot for "The Spy Who Shagged Me" is as outlandish and fun as it was in the first movie. In this installment, Dr. Evil hires Fat Bastard to steal Austin's mojo in 1969, two years after Austin was first frozen. This insidious plot is an attempt to keep Austin from toiling Dr. Evil's latest plan, the creation of a death star capable of incinerating every major city in the world! Without his mojo, Austin is helpless, even pathetic, and no threat to Evil. He is so pathetic, he can't even score with Felicity! The ensuing battle between good and evil sprawls across two decades and two celestial bodies...

This movie is very funny, though the first one might have been funnier. This one has more low brow humor in it and Dr. Evil seems more silly than anything. He lacks the drive and evilness this go'round. Despite that, this is a must see movie for anyone with any sort of sense of humor. Go see it now! Quick like a monkey!

Soundtrack Review:

Psychedelic shag-mobile, baby!

Shaggadelic, baby, yeah! The new Austin Powers movie has burst onto the scene, bringing a new soundtrack with it. The soundtrack is a funky mix of old songs performed by new artists and new songs that contain the same feel of the older ones. The CD has a definite theme to it and many of the songs flow together in a groovy way.

The first thing one notices when looking at the CD cover is the large number of names they recognize, which is generally thought of as a good thing when a soundtrack is involved. The reader would notice names like REM, Lenny Kravitz, Madonna, and Green Day.

My favorite song on the soundtrack is REM's version of the classic "Draggin' the Line," originally by Tommy James. They took a different angle on the song, choosing to make the song dreamy and cosmic as opposed to raucous and fun. Another such song on the album is Big Blue Missile's remake of the Zombies' "Time of the Season." Where REM scored a hit, this song is a complete miss. Scott Weiland's past as lead for Stone Temple Pilots isn't experience enough to help him create a worthy version of a classic. Lenny Kravitz has the same luck with his version of "American Woman," a song by Guess Who that should never have been remade.

The original songs on the album do a good job of bringing a taste of the psychedelic sixties to the present. The most notable of these is the Flaming Lips and their "Buggin'." It's a trippy ballad that makes the listener yearn for a time long past where love and harmony were king. Madonna once again shows why she has survived so long in the music industry with "Beautiful Stranger," a beautiful song with a strong backbeat.

The other songs are also fine fare. Green Day's "Espionage" conjures up images of Billie Joe and the boys having a good time playing around with their overemphasis on bass guitar. And Dr. Evil rapping up his memorable snippet of Will Smith's "Just the Two of Us" has an equal helping of good clean fun in its outspoken lyrics. The venerable Burt Bacharach makes another appearance, this time bringing along Elvis Costello to help him say "I'll Never Fall in Love Again."

I enjoyed this soundtrack, though it is far from perfect. It lacks the character and overall groove of the first soundtrack. It deserves its place on the shelf beside the first, though maybe a bit behind and to the right. And, if you tire of the music, there is always the cover photos of Felicity Shagwell to make you smile again. We all like to smile, don't we?

The new dating game: Trying to find that special someone

Rocky Logan
University of Idaho Argonaut

The dating game is a familiar scene on college campuses across our nation. However, today, the dating scene is far from the traditional dinner and a movie. Dating traditions have been replaced by the advancement of technology, as more and more individuals are taking different approaches to dating.

Meeting someone through mutual friends or at a bar used to be the way in finding that special loved one. However, that method of finding someone to date is diminishing with creative approaches introduced by avenues of advertising.

Looking through newspaper publications in the United States, people are advertising themselves and describing what they are looking for in hopes of finding love. Some search for simple companionship, while others search for long-term commitments which may eventually lead to marriage.

Take our local newspaper for example, the Moscow-Pullman Daily News, devotes a quarter page to make "love connections" throughout the area. People of all ages, sex, occupation, sexual preference, and interests are soliciting themselves. Ironically, the Argonaut's former editorial board, decided to pull their "Chapel of Love" (a section containing personals) because readers felt it was offensive and not suitable for publication. Why? Other newspapers offer the same service to their readership.

Magazines also publish matrimonials. "Seeking Husband" or "Seeking Wife" is the reference in one religious publication. Playboy and Men's Health display webpage addresses and phone numbers to inform their readers on how to subscribe to Russian wives catalogs. Purchasing a wife just like ordering a pair of Khakis from Abercrombie & Fitch. Women being sold to come to America and marry a man. To fulfill physical and emotional satisfaction.

Newspapers and magazines are not the only means of advertising used for the new age dating game. You can now find that special one on the World Wide Web. Just like a computer Software Company or insurance company, individuals advertise themselves on the web. Ever been on a chat line before? A portion of chat line users search for love and companionship. Some in grottoes manners, others who are innocent and lonely. Just like classified ads, men and women of all demographics and races choose to sell themselves in five sentences, four words a sentence, in hopes of reaching interested parties.

What a game? Not only a dating game, but a field day to play with someone's emotions by lifting their hopes for love and end up to be a fourteen year kid and corresponding with a forty-five year old widow. The game can also be reversed on the solicitors side by displaying a phony ad and hearing responses from eager and excited individuals who think the found that special one.

Ironically, local radio stations in the Moscow-Pullman air waves advertise from the Sexual Assault Commission that it is okay to say no in reference to acquaintance rape. No longer are we dating those we know, or even those who live in the same region. We are seeing long-distance relationships grow and individuals soliciting themselves to find a relationship.

The new dating game is not necessarily negative. Questions of ethics and traditional courtship enter the picture. However, we can enter ethics and tradition in all aspects of life as times are changing. We no longer live in the I Love Lucy, or Brady Bunch era.

America's divorce rate is at an all-time high. Are these shocking new numbers due to the new dating game, or will the advancement of technology that is essential to the new dating game decrease the divorce rate? Will it be difficult for children to tell their friends that daddy bought mommy from a Russian magazine? Will society be able to accept the new dating game? Difficult or non-accepting, the new dating game has arrived and is the means for obtaining new relationships.

Who Killed JFK?

Rocky Logan
University of Idaho Argonaut

The assassination of Abraham Lincoln, Martin Luther King, or Malcolm X did not have the impact on American lives as did the assassination of John F. Kennedy. President Kennedy's assassination on November 22, 1963 in Dallas, Texas, is probably the most controversial issue in United States history. Americans have come up with their own conclusion on who killed Kennedy. Fingers point to Lee Harvey Oswald, the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), Cuban Dictator Fidel Castro, Russia, and even the Mafia.

Evidence against Oswald clearly proves that he had access that November afternoon to the Texas Book Depository. Oswald also had adequate military training. Prior to the assassination, Oswald returned to the United States with his Russian bride from the Soviet Union. A decoy to get the American people to believe the Russians were involved along with Cuba since the two countries had military relationships.

All along Oswald, portrayed as the lone gunman, was simply a decoy. The CIA and Kennedy's Vice-President Lyndon B. Johnson are the ones who planned the assassination of John F. Kennedy. Kennedy wanted to eliminate the CIA, which would have left hundreds out of work. In a poll by CBS News at the time of assassination, 50 percent of surveyed Americans felt the CIA had to be involved. Finally, the CIA felt Kennedy unnecessary got involved with Cuba.

Kennedy and Johnson debated on crucial issues and never saw eye to eye. Johnson was added to the Kennedy ticket as a political move to solidify support in the South. Johnson was never taken seriously by Kennedy. In fact, Kennedy advocated bringing home U.S. troops from Vietnam while Johnson insisted America needed to fight communism and spread democracy around the world. Johnson knew that something would happen to President Kennedy in Dallas. He knew so well that he asked JFK's wife, Jackie Kennedy, to join him and his wife in their motorcade in the parade through Dealey Plaza. Johnson simply tried to protect Mrs. Kennedy from the tragedy.

The theory of Castro being involved in the assassination is ridiculous. Kennedy did attack Cuba in the Bay of Pigs, but Castro was not that ignorant and still to this day is not courageous to pull off an act like that. Fidel Castro later told CBS News reporters that he was not involved. However, one out of five Americans surveyed believed Castro was the mastermind behind the assassination.

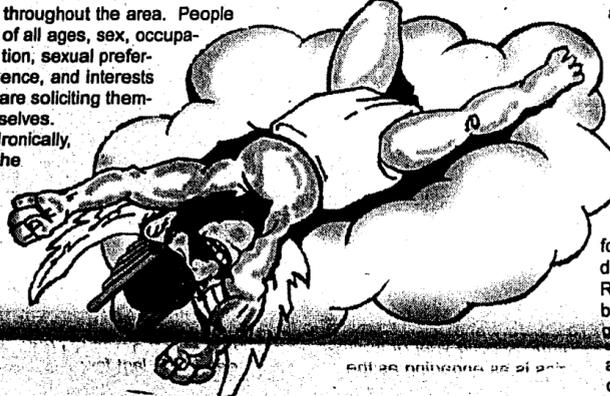

President Kennedy's affair with a woman, who had a relationship with a Mafia leader, led some finger pointing to the Mob. Robert Kennedy, the President's brother, personally attacked the Mafia during his term as Attorney General of the United States. Oswald's ties with the Mafia in New Orleans supported the Mob's involvement.

Perhaps true, or probably another decoy established by the CIA and Johnson using Oswald as the assassin.

The single bullet theory, or the lone gunman is one of the numerous questionable issues in the assassination. After watching the Zapruder film over and over again, one must conclude that no single individual could pull off the event that stunned the world. Kennedy got shot in the throat and neck and Governor Connally of Texas was also shot.

Only the CIA could pull off the assassination. Think about it. The CIA survives even to this day and a man named Johnson became President and sent thousands of Americans overseas to defeat communism. Both sides got they want, even if it meant shocking our nation and leaving behind the most controversial issue in United States history.

The issue will linger forever, or until records from the JFK file become open to the public. Millions of Americans will form their own conclusion on the assassination. However, the question still remains. Who killed JFK? Perhaps the newly released documents from Moscow, Russia will help us find solvency to this American tragedy.

A letter to Ed

Dear Editor

I think that something needs to be done about the Admin. bells. I hear the "Here We Have Idaho" song at least twice a day. And the worst part is that when you think it's over, it starts all over again. I like hearing the bells chime for the hour, but playing that damn song all the time is really getting on my nerves. Since the bells run on a computer program, why can't they program some other songs. Wouldn't it be great if the admin. bells would play some Jimi Hendrix or Pink Floyd songs...

Sincerely,
Hazel J. Barrowman

Musician's Spotlight By Dan

Pavement-Terror Twilight (Matador) 90%

For those who like their pop skewed on a shishkabob, they know of pavement and their permanent barbecue. pavement keeps it on the grill with their fifth album, Terror Twilight, their debut album has been lauded by critics and their ilk as THE independent rock example of the 90s, but have lost support in that realm over subsequent recordings. the fans can tell you otherwise...

pavement is as strong as usual, managing their ever-increasing complexity with miles and miles of style. stephen malkmus operates at the same level, the worldplay just as convoluted and oblique. Example? "tie your hopes to the folks with the liquor with the ropes." Do I know what it all means? Nah, but I sure do love it. pavement have slowly but surely been moving away from their earlier spartan recording techniques. TER-ROR TWILIGHT has a definite modern sauce on it, provided by producer of the moment Nigel Godrich (beck, radiohead), but throughout the album a ragged exuberance is revealed with every bite. the big question on every fans mind is if the rumors are true, the members of pavement lives all over the country, and some have expressed interest in starting families. alas, pavement may be ready to turn in their aprons and shut off the propane tanks. its not a bad idea, mind you, bands get a little hard to swallow if they're left on the grill too long. so, we'll have to sit with our plates empty for awhile and wait. whats important is that pavement has continually served up the best sirloin slab of slack ive ever had.

Musack double feature:

Oleander- February Son (republic/universal) 63%

Bijou Phillips- I'd Rather Eat Glass (Almo Sounds) 55%

Turn on the radio anywher in the nation. In almost all scenarios, there will be a modern rock station. This format was jump-started by the popularity of grunge in the early 90s, and ushered in a parade of imitators and hair metal leftovers with a new marketing niche.

Then theres the station professing to be as eclectic as your very own cd collection. These stations, called the adult alternative album format, do have an expanded playlist, but...well hell, what im really trying to express here is that the album i have listened to today are about as exciting as talking about the sameness of modern radio formats. Oleander, a 4 piece rockunit from Sacramento, seems tailor-made for the alternative radio milk-rock in the tradition of one hit wonders like Fuel and Creed. Oleander, appropriately enough, have named themselves after a beautiful flowering shrub that is entirely poisonous. What better metaphor for Oleanders triumph of style over substance.

Was that a bad review? A little, but I do give Oleander some credit for covering one of my favorite anthems of teen depression, The Cure's boys dont cry. the really sad thing is bijou phillips and her new record. (nice segue, eh?) Im not gonna give you anything but the facts. Bijou is 1) daughter of 60s Pop/Folk Papa, John Phillips 2) a teenage model with her face on the cover of magazines such as Vogue 3) a social butterfly of the New York club scene with tons of the connections in the music industry. with this info, one must ask themselves this important question: How did bijou get herself a record contract? I'd Rather Eat Glass tells me its not talent, but I guess you dont need that to get down.

Just one final vaguely related note, this one about the names of albums. Artists need to be more careful about what they decide to call there latest product. The title usually tries to tie off the loose ends, give the fan an idea of what the songs add up to. If you give your album a title that is begging to be kicked in the ass, there will be plenty of us to take them up on it. (well-evidenced a few years back with Metallicas Load. Yeah, its a load of somethin all-right...) Sooo...the album title as joke resurfaces for 1999 with Bijou Phillips. Theres a few things id rather be doing than listening to her. Just guess...

Thunder God returns

By Nick Hopkins
University of Idaho Argonaut

The Mighty Thor has returned to this mortal plane, and he has never been better. His new series, currently up to issue 14 is an amazing piece of comic book majesty. It draws upon some of Marvel comics' best and most innovative talent. Yes! The aroma of it all is more than I can handle!

John Romita Jr. and Klaus Janson, two of Marvel's most adaptable talents, combine to provide the artwork. Romita's pencils fill out nicely with Janson's inks, combining in a way reminiscent of Batman: Year One. The attention to detail and personality on the Asgardian gods is remarkable; Hogun the Grim has never lived up to his name so well. Romita has definitely matured since his early days on Amazing Spiderman and should become even more of a dominate force in the Mavel offices in years to come.

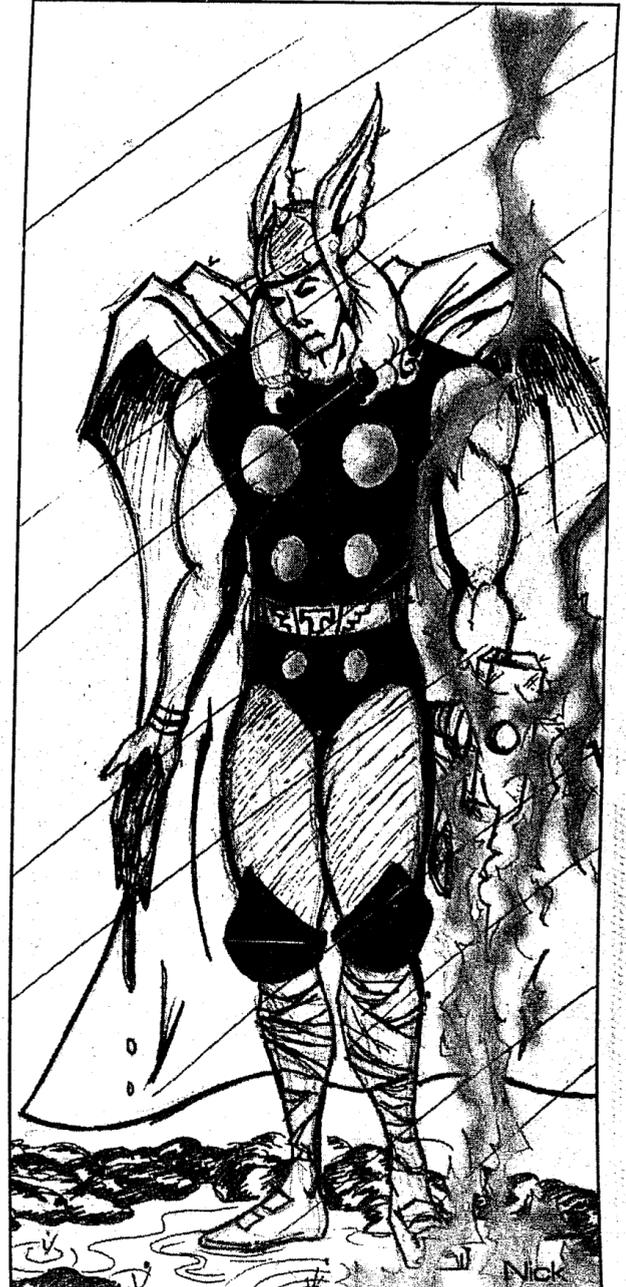

As excellent as the art is, though, the story is where the might of Thor shines through. Dan Jergens, of Superman fame, is doing a marvelous job with the god of thunder. He has breathed new life into one of comicdom's oldest and most prestigious characters. His complex storylines leave the reader excitedly anticipating the next issue.

The first year's storyline was a precursor of events to come. In the first few issues, Thor is involved in the death of an innocent man and must live out the man's life in order to atone. The mortal, Jake Olson, is a paramedic that is engaged. The way Thor deals with living Jake's life in modern day New York is truly interesting and capable of keeping a reader glued to the page. As if that weren't enough, all of the Asgardians have been captured by a mysterious group calling themselves the Dark Gods. Even mighty Odin succumbs to their onslaught and is chained up like an ugly dog in heat on the hottest day of summer. Thor is the only Asgardian left to save his friends and so must draw on the help of other heroes; Hercules, Spiderman, The Fantastic Four, and even the Destroyer. The ensuing battle is one of epic proportions and the outcome is in doubt up to the very end.

If the second year of the new series is as engaging as the first, we may very well see the beginning of another comic book dynasty. So far this title has been overlooked by many readers and industry magazines, but another successful year will likely make Thor one of the most heralded of Marvel titles. That amount of success would be unlike anything Thor has seen in the last few decades, and would cement him as one of the most popular comic book heroes ever. Recognition that is past due in my opinion.

RED MEAT from the secret files of Max Cannon

It was the last when my dad told us that we couldn't keep that artificial head chess in the shed any longer. My brother and I didn't have the heart to simply throw it away... I had brought an exact copy home to read it.

So we brought a better copy of the second hand chess set every pointed to red. He put the only on the chess set back his chess board to the kitchen's and set the in one of his hands.

When my dad read about it in the paper he said they had got in a reputation for a while now. He thought it was worth it. Though... that chess set was his. He had... that chess set was his.

There... do you ever wonder what happens to people after they die?

Oh... they go to heaven to be with God.

Well then... in that case, that probably isn't your idea of heaven. I can't imagine you ever becoming a saint with a hat. I guess heaven must be a very boring place.

I hate you more than you hate me.

Oh... then... I can't see you ever becoming a saint.

What's up, Bob? I haven't seen you around in quite a while. How's the company doing?

The boss is spending a good chunk of time down in Florida and I'm not sure he's coming back for a while. I'm writing a contract for him that will make the performance of his employees worse.

Interesting... I'd be curious to know how many of your employees are in Florida. I'd like to see the "Toby" test.
