UI awarded Navy grant

The Office of Naval Research awarded the University of Idaho a $1.25 million grant to aid in the development of a new computer chip.

The grant provides funding to five UI scientists who will be collaborating on a new chip that will store information even if it loses power.

The chip is called MRAM (magnetoresistive random access memory) and research at UI will focus on a storage element for the chip.

Idaho senators Larry Craig and Mike rapo assisted in securing the funding.

Fighting fires keep some students from hitting the books

BY SARA YATES

For most college students, a summer job

For most college students, a summer job meant sitting at a desk, 9 to 5. For Bruce Lovell, a sophomore from Potlatch, Idaho, it meant 19-hour days, fighting fire.

Lovell, 19, spent the majority of the summer months fighting fire in Montana and Colorado. He was joined by approximately 23,000 other firefighters according to Capt. Carl Purvis, military liaison for the National Interagency Fire Center in Boise.

"It was hard at times, but it's good money." Lovell said.

money," Lovell said.

Students planning to attend the University of Idaho in the fall were given extended registration deadlines. Lovell said many of the prospective students on his crew decided not to return to school this semester, but plan to stay and fight while the work is good.

According to the UI Registrars office, 85 students have notified the school to extend registration deadlines due to firefighting.

With more fires igniting over the Western states, work has increased, and so have the hours. President Clinton announced immediate compensation for the federal firefighters Sunday. This compensation includes full-time benefits and timeand-a-half wages.

Over the course of the summer, firefighters fought 79 fires, burning close to 1.6 million acres in Idaho, according to the U.S.

Safety has always been a large part of training, but has drawn even more attention this year, due to the dry, high fire risk conditions.

"There were a lot of fires we didn't go into. It was too dangerous," Lovell said. He also said many fires were evacuated periodically if winds picked up. New firefighters go through Guard training where outdoor skills, equipment operations and standards of survival are taught

The type of crew Lovell, and at least eight other University of Idaho students, participated in, was primarily responsible fore digging line — clearing all debris in a specified path to contain the fire.

Close to 2,300 military personnel are helping to clear debris and dig line in Idaho, Texas and Montana, according to Capt.

However, a large part of the job is waiting on standby until word is given to go into the fire, Lovell said. Firefighters are assigned to project office work during slow seasons or when fires are considered too dangerous to fight.

Both Purvis and Lovell said there has not been much time for office work this sea-Firefighters have battled 71, 969 wildfires nationwide this year, burning over 6 million acres, according to NIFC. This is up from the 4.1 million acres in 1999 and more than doubles the 10-year average of 2.6 million acres. Idaho has experienced the biggest margin of loss in acreage, followed by Montana's nearly 784,000 acres lost, NIFC reported. Georgia has had the most wildfires to date.

The last time the United States had an outbreak comparable to the 2000 fire season was 1996 with 84,225 fires which burned 4.7 million acres, according to NIFC.

Lovell has not decided whether he will continue to return to firefighting next sum-

"It's always something to fall back on," Lovell said. "It's dangerous, but it's fun."

Construction increases parking woes

Although the number of silver spaces decreased this year, the amount of permits sold and oversold remained the same. The only change in the parking system is the sale of parking permits online.

One improvement soon to be under way is the addition of a new parking lot on campus. The lot is located on Sweet Avenue and will add parking to the east side of the university. This lot will hold 340 spaces, adding approximately 150 spaces to campus parking.

Another improvement is the upcoming leveling and paving of the law school parking lot, which is currently steep and covered in loose gravel. Both of these are scheduled to begin in October.

Some of the solutions which have already been considered are the elimination of free parking on and around campus and metered parking around the Student Union Building and the Commons.

According to Schoenberg, meters in those two parking lots may become necessary due to the heavy turnover in the lots every day.

Another project that may or may not lead to a major change at UI is the possibility of a campus mass transit system. Five student interns, majoring in business, spent their

Skin cancer on the rise for young people

BY JENNIFER HATHAWAY

With the average time young adults spend in the sun on the rise, the risk of sun-related skin cancer at a younger age is also increasing.

increasing.

According to the American Cancer Society, children born today are twice as likely to develop a form of skin cancer as a person born only one decade ago and 12 times as likely as someone born 50 years ago. Also, up to 80 percent of lifetime exposure to ultraviolet light happens during a person's 25 years of life — particularly targeting childhood and adolescence.

Although the sun can damage everyone's skin and eyes, people with fair skin have a higher risk of cancer, over 20 times higher, than people with darker skin, according to the American Cancer Society

After being exposed to the UV rays emitted by the sun, sunburn and tanning are immediate results. However, over time, prematurely aged skin, wrinkles, darker patches of skin commonly called "age spots" appear and rough growth patches and skin cancers can develon

Some preventative methods include spending a limited time in the sun, avoiding overexposure between the hours of 10 a.m. and 4 p.m., (when UV rays are the strongest), covering exposed skin, staying in the shade as much as possible, using sunscreen and avoiding tanning beds. The American Cancer Society recommends using sunscreen products with a SPF of at least 15. A SPF of 15 blocks out 93 percent of UV rays while SPF 30 blocks out 97 percent.

Although sunscreen diminishes the exposure to harmful UV rays, the American Cancer Society states it doesn't provide total protection. For example, if using SPF 15 sunscreen properly, 15 minutes spent in the sun is equivalent to one burning minute of unprotected skin. Eight hours of wearing SPF 15 is the same as spending 32 minutes of unprotected time in the sunscriptors of the sunsc Overexposure to strong sunlight is a large risk factor in developing any form. Out of 1 million cases diagnosed yearly, most are considered sun related, according to the American Cancer Society.

Even using preventative methods in the sun, certain risk factors such as past exposure to radiation or chemicals, certain medical treatments, a weak immune system, some medical prescriptions and family history can contribute to skin cancer, according to the American Cancer Society.

The most common forms of skin cancer, nonmelanoma basal cell carcinoma and squamous cell carcinoma result from too much exposure to UV rays. Basal cell carcinoma skin cancer begins at the lowest layer of the epidermis, and accounts for 75 percent of all skin cancers. Unlike basal cell carcinoma, squamous cell carcinoma begins on the epidermis (the top layer of skin).

Both basal and squamous cell carcinomas affect the areas of the body most often exposed to sunlight such as the face neck and arms. Basal and squamous cell carcinomas appear as pale, wax like bumps, a scaly red patch or a sore that does not

Melanoma is a much less common form of skin cancer.

Melanoma often starts as a small mole-like growth. Although it is less prevalent, it is much more likely than nonmelanoma to spread to other areas of the body.

Skin cancer, both nonmelanoma and melanoma, is the most common of all cancers. Skin cancer cases equal half of all cancers and is one of the most common cancers occurring among people under 30.

According to the American Cancer Society, nonmelanoma skin cancer will result in 1,900 deaths this year. Although melanoma makes up 4 percent of skin cancer cases, 79 percent of skin cancer deaths result from melanoma.

Skin cancer can be curable if it is found and treated before spreading. According to the American Cancer Society, the likelihood that a person will survive five years after the cancer has been found is approximately 95 percent. Early detection is a key factor in stopping the spread of skin cancer. Taking precautions early, especially if skin is more susceptible to damage, can lower the risk of skin cancer.

PALOUSAFEST

BY ANNETTE HENKE

Students, area businesses and university services gathered in the Idaho Commons Plaza Saturday for the unofficial start of the school year, Palousafest.

Students loaded up with Frisbees, minideodorants and sno-cones while listening to live music. Others tested their skills on an inflatable-climbing wall.

Palousafest serves a vital purpose to new students, allowing them to become familiar with campus services and the Moscow area.

"It's an opportunity to create visibility with new and returning students." Alice Pope Barbut, director of Cooperative Education said.

She said freshmen and new students can familiarize themselves with a program they were previously unaware of, and returning students can clarify their understanding of the program, or update information with the program.

Local businesses were present to let students become aware of what exists outside the campus boundaries.

"The proof first product " Wether Spragge

"It's a good first contact," Kathy Sprague of Eclectica said. Visitors to her booth took of Eclectica said. Visitors to her booth took turns rolling 'naughty' dice for the opportunity to win prizes which included safer sex kits, T-shirts, hats and gag gifts.

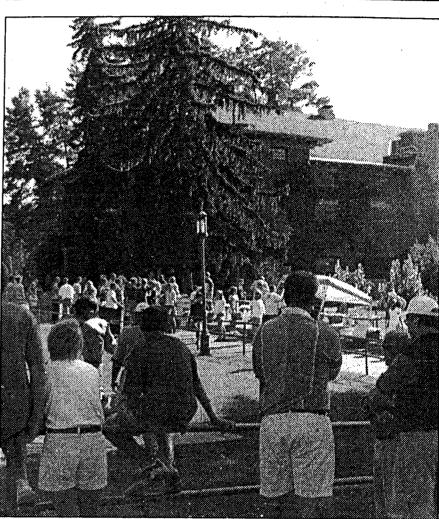

Sprague was also given the opportunity to let new and returning students know about the first Tabikat drag show of the school year, to be held at the Beach Sept. 8.

Many new students were unaware of the purpose of the Palousafest, hearing rumors of little more than free Campus Survival Kits and Campus Gear for Her

Brains behind the roadwork

BOB PHILLIPS, JR.

Maybe it began as a practical joke. Maybe it was a series of terrible coincidences. Maybe someone was out to annoy pedestri-

Whatever happened, this summer's bog of road construction was poorly planned, inconvenient, and dangerous.

Dangerous?

For anyone living in the Otto Hills apartments on South Main Street, leaving the apartment complex while walking or biking was never safe.

Without working traffic lights on Sweet Avenue, there was no dependable break in the traffic.

When there is not a traffic light, the nearest official crosswalk is the designated place you should cross a busy street. Well, there weren't any.

With all of the construction, the crosswalk signs had been removed and never replaced.

The same was true of the white reflective stripes on the

Everything that should have been installed for pedestrian use was missing.

Construction was a migraine for the students who stayed in town for the summer.

While I fully support the improvement of Moscow, especially near the university, the timing and execution of the massive overhaul was chosen badly. Not accounting for foot traffic in the construction areas was a major problem.

With the general shortage of parking while classes are in session, fewer new students are bringing cars to Moscow.

This makes life a bit simpler, and cheaper, for the students. However, this lack of new vehicles for student transportation means that city planners need to pay special attention to those who travel by foot power. Someone really messed up.

I tried to find the silver lining, but I was too busy dodging traf-In the future, when roadwork is necessary, I hope someone will think about the pedestrians who must circumvent the heavy equipment, or walk through the construction areas.

At the very least, with the multitude of construction sites in Moscow, the various crews could have been assigned to complete one task before beginning anothler; it was this leapfrogging which was the worst aspect of the summer road construction.

Watching crews tear up a whole section of one street, then leaving to tear up another section of an entirely separate route.

Having a crew work one job straight through before starting another task would have made city navigation much more simple than it was this year.

As I said, the planning was awful on this roadwork.

At the very least, no one I know was flattened while running across the street between speeding cars. That being said, I hope this highway facelift is completed soon, and I sincerely hope it looks marvelous.

Dear Readers ...

So you have a beef with the Argonaut? Quit whining to your friends (and other people who don't really care no matter how much they say the do) and write to us.

Let us know what we did well, and what we didn't do so well and we'll put it in the paper. Consider us your soap box, your portal to the general public (or at least to the UI student body), your platform for saving the whales.

We won't make you follow a three-paragraph format or anything like that, we just ask that you write in English and that it be on a 5th grade reading level. Not too hard huh?

We need you to sign it though, none of this anonymous stuff that might really be written by the rats in Gault

Being a successful, college-type person

Welcome to the University of Idaho, home of higher education and very little parking.

On this, your second day of school, it would perhaps be appropriate to take a moment to reflect your place, both as a tuition payer, and as a caf-feine-chugging member of the college culture here in Moscow. College, and the life and times that come with it are neither free nor easy. Discuss amongst

In honor of this momentous time in life, members of the Argonaut editorial board (who have over 23 years of college experience combined) have decided to experience combined) have decided to enlighten y'all with the first-ever Complete Guide to College Caveats (subtitled: How to Outwit, Outlast and Outplay Just About Any Other Outlandish Oaf for Under a Million Dollars). This also provides a priceless opportunity for you, the reader, to meet the people behind all of the black and white print and genius to come.

Name games, constant regurgitation of your major and home-town, along with all the standard getting-to-know-you questions will come in much abundance this week, but there is a way around them - pizza.

Students and faculty alike can rest easy, with a full stomach, and pizza joints can reign supreme (with all the fixings of course), because not only will it familiarize all parties involved, but it also gives you incite into their personality.

Ordering College is the place for pizza, and we're all familiar with the routine. Who wants what on which half, with that special and could that please be delivered with bread sticks, extra sauce and a 2-liter of soda?

There are several things that can be learned here. Who orders? This is the take charge, I-won'ttake-crap-from-anybody type of

They send food back at restaurants, are often the oldest in a family, and will argue the color of the sun before they admit a wrongdoing.

Those who refuse to order? Mamas boys, pure and simple; can't cut their own potato without a little help from their friends.

Then there is taking down the actual order. Joe: no onions, Shelly is allergic to tomatoes, Yvonne is vegetarian and Camille has requested "no cheese" on half.

This is how you remember everyone's name. Interaction to get the order, repetition of the name, auditory confirmation as you write it down, visual reminder on list of requests - it's all covered.

Moving on. Eating

There are 10 pizzas, many hungry college students and the eating is about to begin. Do they dive in, or must they first find plates, napkins and utensils?

Those who delve into cheesy bliss are pretty easy going, often spontaneous; they don't need a detailed map to find your apartment, just a sticky note with scribbles on it.

Those searching for are the opposite. They like having a plan, and even read the instructions on the new blender.

The "plate finders" are also more likely to eat with a fork and knife. Knife eaters are clean and don't like a mess - potential underwear labelers, alphabetizers of soup cans; you can set your watch by their daily routine.

Another interesting personality manifest in pizza is that of the napkin dobbers. Napkin dobbers are the, usually, girls who conduct grease-soaking rituals before eat-ing. Napkin dobber girls are over-ly concerned with appearance, avid Tae Bo participants and testimonials for Metabolife.

However, this is the hardest personality trait to diagnose. There is a difference in mopping up a small ocean, and personally making the slice fat free, even if it means wringing it out and hanging it to dry.

All in all, pizza is the replacement for worksheets with "lived in an Amish community" next to a line, which is beckoning for a classmate's signature. Because, you see, if you lived among the Amish, chances are your question was, "What's pizza?"

Let all walks of life keep things on the Internet, to be fair

BOB PHILLIPS, JR COLUMNIST

Bob's column appears regularly on editorial pages of the Argonaut. His e-mail address is

A friend of mine once said you cannot do any Internet search without finding at least one listing for a pornographic site.

I agree, having tried to find information on insomnia, shoulder stiffness, and football over the summer. Every search found at least one corresponding adult

But that's okay. After taking all of three seconds to read the little quip about what the site was about, I could easily tell the porn sites from the real ones, so I was able to gather only the information I was looking for, and not stumble into anything embarrassing.

While I am annoyed with the creative advertising adult sites are beginning to use, I also realize that we need to allow such smut to be available on the web. Somewhere there is a line between illicit pornography and artistic expression, but where? What I consider art, some others would think is trash, and vice versa.

I'm not going to push my ideals on others, and it would be immoral for the government to push their views of appropriate subject matter on those who run their own web sites.

I had the same problem when the KKK was marching in Coeur d'Alene. There was no reason to petition to keep the zealous, and closed-minded supremacists from marching. It was just as easy for minority groups and racial diversity associations to march the exact same route. Legal rights need to be extended equally to everyone. Very few people are against the idea of equal rights for all legal citizens, however the dirty side of that argument includes a Web site for Homosexual activist groups and also Jerry Falwell's Web denouncing them as abominations of nature. It is up to the web surfers to decide which view is most applicable to the real world. There is no freedom of expression if only the wholesome and clean pictures are allowed to be posted. To allow real freedom the unsettling photos must also be allowed to stay.

However, there is also an ethical component which many people overlook. The adult sites should be more conscious of their marketing. Key words should not be those associated with more innocent or academic searches. Advertising is too important to ignore and when freedom of expression is mixed with capitalism is that, ethical advertising becomes an endangered species.

So, back to the beginning. Don't support any form of censorship of the Internet. Sure, the nude picture sites would be banned, but my website containing original poetry might also be banned, and your personal site to show pictures of your vacation could be illegal, too. Common sense is a much better defense than legal stipulations could ever be.

ADAM FISH ARGONAUT STAFF

"Taming of the Shrew," one of four summer plays produced by the Idaho Repertory Theatre, combined talents from all actors to produce the funniest play the University of Idaho theatre department has seen in 10

The actors were able to render the queer humor palatable to the conservative crowd. Not only were the modern difficulties surrounding the mating-game in a selfish materialistic society made evident, but the actors courageously introduced the numerous sexual identities one may choose in this post-Microsoft, Ecstasy Generation.

The Shrew was set against a backdrop that resembled a Jackson Pollock version of the Arc de Triumph.

The Shrew is a Shakespearian comedy about seduction, possession and the other tortures of love. The UI theatre department is blessed with a drove of actors gifted with an ability for the absurd. The cast embodied Director David Lee-Painter's abilities and found their true calling in comedy.

Adam Pitman, as Jim Curry, deserves two limp wrists. The boy introduces the feeling of the leading role in Hugo's, "The Hunchback of Notre Dame." Every mouth glistened with stupefied smiles whenever Pitman came bumbling on stage bucked-toothed and anxiously pawing the ground like a camel-footed sloth. The UI students deserve praise for their performance but not without due credit to the imported actors who evoked numerous cackling outbursts. Rian Jairell, from the University of

When David isn't eating rats or getting voted off islands, he working for the Argonaut. His e-mail address is arg_opinion@sub.uidaho.edu

I am not exactly sure what sucked me into CBS' summer hit, "Survivor," but whatever it was, it worked. I had nearly given up on CBS — its programming was far behind the other two major networks. At times, I thought the Discovery Channel was more interesting. However, after America became obsessed with 16 castaways who lie, betray, hunt, compete and sometimes (although disputable) sleep together, CBS clearly reigns. What was it about "Survivor" that was so addictive? Was it really the voyeurism, the ability to connect with someone via national television yet have no interpersonal communication between castaway and viewer? Maybe some people can see themselves in members of the show. Let's just hope it's not Sue. And if it was, get help. There was a time when even I liked Sue. So if you've fallen victim, there is help available. The first sign is usually the accent. It was the format of the show that was so addictive. The show opens, a breathtaking white beach welcomes viewers as a blue sky envelops the island in the South China Sea. Richard, now clothed, decides to go spearfishing.

Rudy waits patiently on the beach for Rich to come back so he can burn whatever dinner may be. Sean and Dirk pretend to fish. Sue tells us "aboot" how things should be done, and Jenna still refuses Playboy's upped $750,000 offer, negotiating the contract over Gervase's Ericsson cellular telephone. Or maybe it was Greg's phone.

By five minutes into the show, the lies start. Every cast member is self-centered, saying "so and so betrayed me" and "I can catch fish" and "no one is offended by my nakedness."

Challenges for awards and immunity quickly follow, as does disappointment. Then, someone gets to wear a groovy Greg Brady in Hawaii idol around his/her neck to the moment we've all waited for — Tribal Council.

Meanwhile, we've nearly forgotten about the castaway who will soon be voted off by the alliance, because cameras focus on one whom viewers think deserve the boot but never get it (Richard, Richard, Richard).

It's fascinating. What else is amazing is that CBS was able to keep the winner from the public. But we all knew that cheaters always prosper, so Richard had to be the winner. That was a possible deduction from the start.

But what can CBS possibly do with "Survivor: The Australian Outback?" Everything, I'm sure. The first episode airs immediately following the Super Bowl, replete with new lies, new alliances, new challenges, but hopefully no nudity.

The set was revealed in "Survivor's" finale Wednesday by the show's host, Jeff Probst. Set upon towering waterfalls and beneath the scorching Australian sun, survivors are in for a hot 39 days. But I think everyone in America will join me in asking, "where's the mud bath?"

Maybe this time, a shiny kangaroo or koala bear medallion will stand for immunity. When someone is voted off from tribal council, does Jeff Probst say, "you must leave the outback immediately. Please jump off this towering 1000-foot waterfall?

The anticipation is killing me. So it's fair to say that it wasn't Richard who deserved the money for withstanding 39 days on a remote island with rice, rice, rice, rice and an occasional fish, it's the viewer!

I deserve the million for waiting 152 days (I am counting — join me in making your countdown calendars) until Survivor 2's pre-

THE TAXABLE PROPERTY OF THE PR

HOROSCOPES

Taurus: Don't give into the temptation of getting a dog, it's not your time yet but it will come soon. Keep your head up and join the choir. Singing really could be your forte.

Leo: This week will be a breeze. Munch some fatty burritos and down some killer spirits. Your karma will work itself out in no time. Try some aerobics to tighten up those flabby abs, or order an Ab-glide, its more that just a workout device.

Sagittarius: Take this week to really explore your inner-self. Practice some yoga, have plenty of 'me' time and catch up on your soap operas. Who really needs a degree? Skip classes, sleep-in and sponge as much money off mom and dad as you can, while you still can. You're only young once.

Cancer: The planetary alignment is in your favor this week, meaning you're going to meet Mr./Ms. Right at the bar tonight. Give into your instincts and dump him/her next week, pick-up the next bum off the street and move into a 'love nest' together.

Aquarius: The sun is entering the third house of your planetary duplex, meaning your life will be taking a sharp turn for the better. Beware of back stabbing bushmen and potted plants flying out of windows. The UI will soon become a comfortable and safe place for you.

Come find out what exciting involvement opportinities our campus has to offer!

Libra: Dazed and confused? Try taking the plastic bag off your head and eating some nutrients besides liquid carbohydrates. You're really going to have to work hard this year at walking and chewing gum because everyone knows you weren't blessed with natural coordination.

Virgo: It may be hard to get back into the swing of things, but relax, you'll be pick'n up the babes as fast as you can read "War and Peace" front to back and sideways. Don't listen to your roommate, she/he dived into one to many shallow pools this summer, and remember what your parents said before you left home, "change your underwear at least twice a week."

Gemini: Change your major now! Don't sell yourself short, your true passion is really molecular technological engineering with an emphasis on ceramics. Listen to that child inside and decorate that dorm room/apartment with lots of pastels, they add color and spunk to any drab

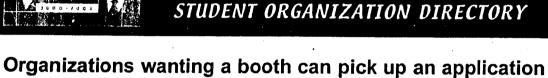

Capricorn: All the corns and blisters on your feet, from all the fire fighting and hiking this summer, will soon be replaced by hand blisters from all the note writing you'll be doing this semester. Beware of stray cats with white spots.

Aries: Get fed-up with the sun-worhip biz this week and revert to being a night loving ware-wolf. Howl at the moon and laugh at the white buts of the flash-happy frat boys (they're really Survivor Richard wannabe's at heart.)

Scorpio: So fat camp didn't really work out for you this summer, no big deal. Things will start looking up by the end of the month after your tongue gets infected from the new piercing and you can't eat for 2 months. Maybe you should postpone that public speaking class until next semester.

Pisces: You may have swum like a fish all summer, but you are out of water here in Moscow. Find other things to suit your fancy. Stay away from drinking like a fish and instead try your hand at making origami birds. Make friend with the freak across the hall and show him/her just how fun you really can be.

Scrimmage previews football season

BY BRIAN HANSEN ARGONAUT STAFF

The University of Idaho football team completed the inal scrimmage of the practice schedule Saturday morning at the Kibbie Dome practice field.

The scrimmage was the final of a three-part series designed to wrap up pre-season practice.

"Defensively, we came out to play," senior linebacker Chris Nofoaiga said.

The defense looked alive and well, rarely giving up a big play. Head Coach Tom Cable was somewhat impressed with the offensive performance.

"We were a little out of sync early in the scrimmage, but we looked OK later on," Cable said.

This meager okay managed to rack up 659 yards of total offense during the 90-minute workout, including 424 yards of passing. The passing attack was split between starting junior quarterback John Welsh, who was 16-of-25 for 184 yards and backup Ed Dean; with was: 10-of-23; for 161 yards. While the passing attacks was evenly balanced.

Willie Alderson carried the bulk of the ground attack with 130 yards of rushing.

Vandals prepare for a promsing football season

BY BRIAN HANSEN AUGUNAUT STAFF

Summer is over and Vandal Football has returned to the Palouse. The Vandals are a shoein to win their second conference title in three years, and make their way to the Humanitarian Bowl.

The Big West Conference will discontinue sponsorship of foot-ball after the 2000 season; therefore, giving the Vandals a chance to go down in history with a pos-sible final victory at the last Humanitarian flowl. This feat will not be easy while the Vandals have to battle a brutal, non-conference schedule.

There is a new look for Vandal football this year. This season the Vandals will be led by a new head couch, Thm Cable, who came to the University of Idaho last spring from the University of Colorado. Cable brought a new style of offense and defense that will "vandalize" University of Idaho opponents for the entire 12 weeks of regular season.

The offense, led by junior quarterback John Welsh, will feature a position that is rather -lift a -- Indtool It of language back, This spot will be filled by Laki Ah III, 6 feet, 235-pounds from Lewiston, Ah III, along with Willie Alderson and Anthony Tenner, should comprise the bulk of the UI ground attack, whose confidence rests on the offensive line.

The Vandals have a veteran offensive line, which includes four seniors, including Rick DeMusting, who received first team all-Big West Conference honors in 1999.

"The line is the key to the success of any football program and I'm pleased with what I'm seeing up front," Cable said. Cable was also a Ul lineman from 1982-86. Welsh agrees the lineman truly

Jenny Kniss (16), outside hitter for the Vandal volleyball team, goes for a forceful spike during Saturday's scimmage in the Memorial

New coaching staff heads women's volleyball team

BY COURTNEY WARNER ARGONAUT STAFF

If there is one word used to describe the 2000 Idaho women's volleyball team, it is "new." With six new freshmen, a new head coach, and completely new coaching staff, the team does not seem like much has remained the same from last year. Even with the "newness," the team came out to win.

"This team has a winning mentality; we're looking to be compet-itive and take it one match at a time. I think we're going to do better than everyone thinks this year; we have some upperclass-men who are pretty fired up and two seniors who know it's their last year," Head Coach Buchanan

The Vandals have something to prove after being ranked sec-ond to last in the Big West Conference. Buchanan plans on building the team around a core of returning starters. She believes have come back faster, stronger, and in better shape after a grueling summer of training.

Returning senior middle blocker Regan Butler can vouch for the training, boasting an inch and a half increase on her vertical and 335 lb. squat max. Returning junior setter Jenny Neville, who is already ranked in the top five at UI in career assists, is also excited to start the season.

'Coach Buchanan does a little more of just letting us play and make our own decisions; we don't have to look to the bench for every single play. I think this builds team chemistry and confidence and it brings the team closer, letting us play together," Neville said.

Butler and Neville, who have played together for three years, are both confident in team chemistry. Their outstanding play can only be complimented by the power hitting of the Kniss sisters, who seem to appear identical, bring individual strengths to the team.

Junior outside hitter Heather Kniss tallies more hits last season than any other returning player. Senior hitter Jenny Kniss, who led the Vandals in almost every statistical category in the '99 season, contributes the experience of playing in the NCAA tourney with her previous team at the University of Houston.

The new coaching staff has a lot to add to the team in terms of success. Assistant Coach Ken Murphy came with Buchanan from Colorado State where they worked together for three years previous. The duo helped lead the Rams to a sweet 16 finish in the NCAA tourney last season, establishing themselves as national contenders.

Assistant Coach Jennifer Sondrup adds the insight of playing at the collegiate level. Buchanan admits they've had to use Sondrup to "beef up" the net play in practice.

Confidence radiates from this trio of talented mentors. Buchanan admits that although she has a lot of her past coach's styles instilled in her, she knows what works for her and she knows what it takes to get a team to the level of NCAA competitor.

Vandal soccer ready to make some noise

BY DEBI CAIN SPORTS EDITOR

Despite the weekend's 4-1 loss to the Oregon Ducks, Coach Larry Foster is optimistic about the number of returning veterans and promising group of new recruits entering the women's soccer 2000 season. The soccer program is in its third year at the University of Idaho.

"We're more experienced, older and wiser," Foster said. We also enter this season more balanced. Last year, we were just missing depth, and injuries forced us to juggle our lineup quite a bit at times. But we're facing stiffer competition and will have to see how much improvement we can make." Vandal soccer remarkably increased the number of wins on their schedule between their first and second season and is looking to continue to do just that. A group of talented players bring a huge amount of experience to the field and veteran players are more familiar with their coach's coaching styles.

Yet, their competitive sched ule, going up against all Division 1 teams and one teams and one Division 2 team, forces the Vandals to stay intensely focused in order to continue improvement.

"Our biggest challenge is that we're dramatically improving the strength of the schedule. We play at the Division 1 level in 18 of our games and our goal is to be in every single game,' UI assistant coach Steve Crum

As far as being physically ready for the games, the coach is very confident.

"I am very pleased with the condition the players came in. Every last one worked hard this summer. The veterans stepped up toward the end of the double days and kept the level of intensity up in practice," Crum said.

The Lady Vandals marked an enormous improvement, leaping from 4-13-1 in their founding season, to 9-8-1 in one year. The second year Vandals also got their name on the board in the Big West, going from win-less in the 1998 conference, to 2-6-1 in 1999. Five games were lost by a single goal. "We plan on placing a lot higher this year than last year as far as improving our standing in the Big West. And as far as how we'll do it, we'll just

The fairly young team consists of six freshmen (one freshmen) man redshirt), four returning starters from the 1999 season and two defensive specialists.

The Vandals kick off their season Sept. 1, at 5 p.m. competing against UNC Greensboro. The tournament will resume play Saturday, at noon, taking on Creighton and finishing off at 7 p.m. against Iowa State.

The team is confident and has high expectations for the upcoming tournament on the road.

"It's a must win tournament and I'm sure we can beat every team there," Head Coach Debbie Buchanan said.

Vandal fans won't be able to get in on any of the volleyball action until their first home game versus rival Washington State, Sept. 19, at 7 p.m. at Memorial Gym.

'They're awesome!" King said, "They have potential to be impact players." King was the Most Valuable Player in 1998 and led the Vandals in scoring her sophomore year.

2000 The program opened their season on the road at the University of Oregon in Eugene on Sunday. The lone Idaho goal was made by Senior forward Andi King. The Vandals (0-1-0 overall, 0-0-0 Big West) face Oregon State University (0-1-0 overall, 0-0-0 PAC-10) today, in Corvallis. Head Coach Larry Foster was unable to travel with the team due to illness.

Oregon and Oregon State defeated the Lady Vandals by a single goal in each game last season.

Annual Vandal Games bring athletes together

The student athletes at University of Idaho gathered together Sunday to compete in the third annual Vandal Games. The event is organized by the Student Athlete Advisory Board to create a cohesive atmosphere in the sports department.

'It's an opportunity to have student athletes participate in a social event and meet each other,' Athletic Director Mike Bohn said.

The activity brings together all fifteen sports to participate in various relays, accompanied by lunch afterwards. The teams were chosen at random from the various sports.

"It [the Vandal Games] brings everybody into the same place to meet each other, have fun, and build camaraderie," organizer Wendy Gunter

The athletes participated in a three-legged race, a hot dog eating contest, and various other group relays. After the students participated, they watched as the current coaches competed in a bubble gum blowing contest.

"It was nice bringing athletes together to get the Vandal Spirit going!" said Kelly Benad, another organizer and member of the women's basketball team.
