A laughing matter

Idaho Repertory Theatre opens 48th season with comedy 'The Foreigner'

BY DAVID JACK BROWNING EDITOR IN CHIEF

the Idaho Repertory Theatre, performing a comedy is a very serious matter. After just three weeks of rehearsals, IRT opens its 48th season June 22 with "The Foreigner," by Larry Shue.

IRT will perform four plays during the summer season, which lasts through Aug. 5. "The Glass Menagerie," by Tennessee Williams, opens June 27, "The Fantasticks," by Tom Jones and Harvey Schmidt, opens July 4 and Williams, Schmidt, opens July 4 and Williams, Schmidt, opens July 4 and "The Schmidt, opens July 4 and William Shakespeare's "The Tempest," opening July 11, add to the summer

"Foreigner" is the tale of a socially phobic Englishman, Charlie Baker, who is left by his friend Froggy at a Georgia fishing lodge for a few days.

Intimated by his new surroundings and nervous to mix with the natives, Charlie wants nothing to do with the Froggy, unbeknownst to Charlie, tells the lodgemates Charlie is a foreigner and should be left alone.

Of course the exact opposite happens. And that's when the real fun begins. "Foreigner" becomes the tale of interaction and human nature. "["Foreigner"] takes real people and puts them in extraordinary circum-

Ellard, known for being slower than the others, begins to teach Charlie how to use eating utensils and other table etiquette, including placing cups on their heads.

But the captivating element of "Foreigner," according to Director Dale Moffitt, is the ability for an audience member to find similar characteristics and situations between the play and themselves. "It's the 'My God! It me! I recognize myself in what he's going through'" concept, Mossitt said. "I like that when that happens."

Jasmin agrees. "When it comes right down to it, the more human people are, [Foreigner] just takes real people and puts them in extraordinary circumstances," he said. "It's really based on

Without giving it away, "Foreigner" ends happily but with exciting twists and surprises for the audience if, Moffitt says, there aren't any technical difficulties.

a great deal."

Most changes will be based on audiextended time. "The audience teaches you what you've done — or what you haven't done."

In his second season with IRT, Moffitt already sees differences in the "Foreigner" cast from the point rehearsals began. "I see major change."

"The Foreigner" runs June 22-23 and returns June 29 after the debut of "The Glass Menagerie," directed by Forrest

Several new viewing options are available this season, including student preview nights (always the night before the play's debut). Students are admitted free with their Vandal Card and guests

Also this season is the Pay What You Can Sunday Matinee. Ticket prices are open-ended — those who attend, literally pay what they can.

Performances of "The Foreigner," "The Glass Menagerie," and "The Fantasticks" will take place in the Hartung Theatre. "The Tempest" will be performed outdoors. In the event of inclement weather, it will be performed

UI, Moscow team up to celebrate Juneteenth

UI is making plans to celebrate Juneteenth on campus and in Moscow.

Juneteenth is the oldest-known celebration of the end of slavery. Although President Abraham Lincoln signed the Emancipation Proclamation Jan. 1, 1863, ending slavery, it wasn't until June 19, 1865, when slaves in Texas were eventually freed.

Celebrating the holiday helps the UI community "to encourage and promote diverse perspectives and the idea of human rights. It allows us to recognize the importance of family values," said Juandalynn Taylor, spokesperson for the Office of Diversity and Human Rights.

Juneteenth has traditionally been a holiday filled with food, sporting events, prayer services, and rodeos, to name a few.

Moscow's celebrations will include a chil-. dren's book reading at Hastings June 19 from 2-4 p.m. Other events may also be in the works. Contact the Office of Diversity and Human Rights at (208) 885-9229 for details regarding local celebrations marking the holiday. For

Schreiber wins NCAA title in discus

FROM STAFF AND WIRE REPORTS

EUGENE, Ore. — Senior Katja Schreiber won the first NCAA individual title by an Idaho woman at the 2001 NCAA Outdoor Championships at Eugene, Ore., May 30.

Schreiber was projected to win the discus by Track & Field News and led the nation for several weeks. She did not disappoint. On her first throw she blew away the competition with a school record toss of 197-11. In doing so, Schreiber becomes the first Idaho woman to win an NCAA Championship.

Schreiber's closest competition finished 13 feet, six inches short of her throw. Schreiber's second and third best throws of the day would have also been good enough to win. Also she was the only N JAA woman to throw the discus more than 190

"It was incredible," throws coach Julie Taylor aid. "She threw well all day, even though knowing he probably had won with her first throw.

Meanwhile, Joachim Olsen was looking to defend his 2000 NCAA title and avenge his loss at the 2001 NCAA indoor championships. Olsen started off well, heaving his first throw 66-5 1/4. With his third throw he bettered his mark with a season

Teammate Simon Stewart got off to a shaky start, fouling his first two throws, but regrouped and launched his third throw 59-4 3/4. Stewart's throw was good enough for 14th.

"I'm happy with where I finished," Joachim Olsen said. "I lost to a better guy. But I will improve next year and we'll have to see what happens." Olsen's performance in the discus and shot put earned the Vandals 11 team points and placed Idaho tied for 23rd in the nation.

Angela Whyte saved the best race of her life for the final of the women's 100-meter hurdles, Saturday. Whyte shaved .15 seconds off her own school record set May 31 in the preliminaries. Her time of 12.82 seconds placed her third and ranks her in the top 10 in the world. The third place finish also earned Whyte All-American honors.

"She got out of the blocks well," co-head coach Wayne Phipps said. "She fell a little behind after the second and third hurdles but keep stride the rest of the race. After Merriman of Ohio State, it was a blanket finish.'

"I'm ecstatic," Angela Whyte said. "It was pretty nerve racking. I tried to take it just as another race. kept telling myself 'this is just like Texas.'

With Whyte's finish in the 100-meter hurdles and Schreiber's victory in the discus, the Vandal women finished tied for 16th. This is the first time in school history the women have placed in the top 25 at the NCAA Championships.

May graduates can take advantage of lowest interest rates on loans

ARGONAUT STAFF

According to UI financial Aid, this year's May graduates owe an average of $23,229 in student Robert Dunn, associate director of financial aid at UI said, "no matter how difficult your financial situation is, paying back your student loans does not have to be a nightmare. There are plenty of options and help available for everyone."

The good news for May graduates with student loan debt is on July 1 the interest rates on federally backed loans will drop from 8.19 percent to 5.99 percent. "That is the lowest interest rate ever. It wasn't even this low when the program began in the 1960s. This is a great time to be graduating,' Dunn said.

Most May graduates will have a six-month grace period before they have to pay back loans. "This is the time for students to get their ducks lined up — to figure out how much they owe and choose a pay-

DIRECT LOAN PROGRAM

The Direct Loan Program offers four repayment plan options.

Standard

Under this plan, payments are a fixed amount of at least $50 each month for up to 10 years.

Extended

Under this plan, payments are a fixed amount of at least $50 each month for 12-30 years, depending on the total amount owed.

Graduated

With this plan, payments start out low, then increase every two years. The repayment period is 12-30 years, depending on the total amount owed. If income is low after graduation, but is likely to steadily increase, this is a good plan.

Income Contingent (ICR)

This plan is designed to give borrowers the flexibility to meet student loan obligations without causing undue financial hardship. The maximum repayment period is 25 years. Each year the monthly payment will be based on family size, annual Adjusted Gross Income (AGI), and the total amount of Direct Loan(s).

ment plan," Dunn said.

If a student is unsure of how many loans they have and how much they owe they can make an appointment with the financial aid office or look the information up

To find out information on any federally backed loans such as Direct Loans, Stafford loans, Perkins loans and Federal Family Education Loans, a student can view a loan history at www.nslds.ed.gov. A student's pri-vate loans will not be listed on the

To find out information about private loans, a student can contact the financial aid office to get a private loan history.

Once a student knows how much money is owed, the next step is to choose a repayment plan. With federally backed loans, this is a much easier task. Private loans may offer very limited repayment options.

"Often the best thing for a student is to focus on paying back their private loans first. Because private loans have a higher interest, and are not as flexible as govest, and are not as hexible as government loans in repayment plans, they are also sometimes harder to work with if you are having difficulty paying back your loans," Dunn said.

A student has a variety of flexible payments plans to shoose from ble payments plans to choose from on government loans. Once a student picks a plan, he/she is not locked into that particular repayment option.

If for instance the student realizes a loan payment is more or less affordable, a student can change the payment plan at anytime online at www.dlservicer.ed.gov.

There are four general repayment options for federally backed loans. The basic plan is for horrowers to pay a fixed amount no less than $50 every month for up to 10 years.

The average UI student owing around $20,000 would need to pay $245 a month to pay off debts on the standard 10-year plan.

Occasionally because student loan interest rates are low, it may be more profitable for a student to invest instead of paying money toward student loans.

The Extended Repayment Plan may be an option for students wishing to invest money or for stu-dents who cannot afford payments in the standard plan.

The extended repayment plan gives students 12 to 30 years to repay their debt. A student can pay no less than $50 dollars a month. The typical UI grad owing $20,000 would pay $170 a month.

The graduated repayment plan starts with low payments increasing every two years over a period of 12 to 13 years.

It would take 20 years and payments of $140 a month for the average UI student owing $20,000 to pay of their loans on this plan.

The income contingent plan bases the payments on income. As income rises, so do payments. Dunn says this may be a good plan for many graduates because income typically rises steadily over the years following gradua-

Payments will not exceed 20 percent of discretionary income. The plan is set up to last no more than 25 years. If at the end of the 25 years the student has not paid off the loans, the remaining debt will be canceled.

Graduates can pay off the entirety of a loan or make extra payments at any time under any of the above plans. However, if the student is having problems making payments there are some things to keep in mind. things to keep in mind.

"Don't wait until you're delinquent on payments to call. Call them as soon as you realize you are having problems making payments. They are willing to work with you at that point. You may even be able to defer payments temporarily or get a forbearance. It's when you wait too long that they get difficult to work with,"

If a student doesn't want to talk to someone over the phone, they can do it online at www.dlservicer.ed.gov. Graduates who run into financial trouble may be able to have payments postponed or temporarily reduced.

If they are having problems finding a job, experiencing economic hardship, or who are caring for a newborn child may qualify for a deferment of loan payments. However, there are many other qualifying reasons for a defer-ment. To find more information about deferment and download the forms at www.dlservicer.ed.gov.

If a student does not qualify for deferment, they may qualify for a forbearance. A forbearance is a temporary postponement or reduction in loan payments when a person is unable to make loan repayments for health reasons or other acceptable reasons and does not qualify for a deferment condition.

"My truck broke down one summer and I needed to put my money towards repairs. I didn't qualify for a deferment but I was able to get a forbearance. There's always options if you call right away and don't wait until you're delinquent," Dunn said.

Three WSU students killed in car accident

PULLMAN - A memorial gathering is planned Thursday, June 14, at Washington State University for three students who died in a car accident June 4 on the Moscow-Pullman Highway.

According to the Washington State Patrol, those killed were two men, Brandon S. Clements of Wapato, Wash. and Ryan G. Sorensen of Westport Wash., and a woman, Stacy Morrow of Milton, Wash. They were originally listed with Pullman as their hometowns.

Frederick D. Russell, 22, Pullman, was charged with three counts of vehicular homicide and three counts of vehicular assault. He pleaded innocent to all counts in Whitman County Superior Court.

Five other WSU students were injured in the four-car accident on State Route 270, commonly know as the Moscow-Pullman Highway. They include one woman, Kara M. Éichelsdoerfer, 21, Aberdeen, and four men, Eric Haynes, 24, Spokane; John M. Wagner, 21, Harrington; Sameer Ranade, 20, Kennewick, and Russell.

Idaho braces for another fire season

The United States Forest Service is predicting Idaho will have a normal fire season. However, that could change in the next 30 days.

Last year, 847,000 acres of Idaho's national forests burned. According to the Forest Service, this year there have already been 76 fires and 1,235 acres burnt statewide.

Not helping the possible fire conditions are below normal winter water levels. If Idaho does not receive enough rain in the next 30 days, dry conditions could increase the potential for severe wildfires,

The Forest Service is working to reduce the amount of potential fire fuel by cutting down driedout timber and treating fire risk areas full of weeds. The Hazardous Fuel Reduction project has a $3 million budget and will cover projects on 72,453 acres.

Radiohead forgets about the past on 'Amnesiac'

(U-WIRE) OKLAHOMA DAILY

NORMAN, Okla. - There are actually two Radioheads. The first is the alternative rock band responsible for the early '90s radio hit "Creep." The second is the group of musicians who have been testing and experimenting with music structures since 1995's "The

It is this latter Radiohead that has released "Amnesiac," an intense collection of music, more akin to last year's "Kid A" than the "Creep" — bearing "Pablo Honey."

Although the lack of traditional radio hits are a more positive aspect of the album than a negative one, the pretentious creativity often overshadows the band's true alternative music-making ability, resulting in an album as cramped and confused as it is detailed and intricate.

Nigel Goodrich is behind the production board, as he was on "OK Computer" and "Kid A," and the resulting sound shows his presence. Pianos are the dominant sound; guitars are used only as secondary instruments, as they were on "Kid A." When they do make an appearance, the guitars are in fine form, but their random inclusion on the album truly establishes "Amnesiac" as less than radio-

Of course, the same was true of last year's "Kid A," and in the case of that album, unusual structure and instrument choice did little to keep the album from being heralded as one of the year's best.

Although there's no song as radio-friendly as "Optimistic" from "Kid A," the new album is still being promoted as more tradition-

Songs like the purposely misspelled "Packt Like Sardines in a Crushd Tin Box" show Radiohead's commitment to testing the boundaries of what makes a song. The combination of electronic beats and acoustic percussion make for an unusual effect, but it isn't until, Thom Yorke's vocals come in that the song reveals itself as a powerful and challenging piece of music. It is one of the best songs on Amnesiac, and an introduction that sets the tone of the album per-sporadic melody and Thom Yorke's mumbling make "Pulk/Pull" less like "Idioteque," another "Kid A" song built from on a cool drumbeat, and more like a band struggling to find material that further progresses the "experimental" vibe of the album.

The same is almost true of the following track, "You and Whose Army." In its first two minutes, the song threatens to lose itself in incoherent vocals. Sounding like an a cappella vinyl recording from 40 years ago, the track finally finds life just before the two-minute mark, when the rest of the band finally makes an

"Morning Bell," a revamped version of the "Kid A" track, is an improvement over the original, adding lush textures to the original's vocals.

"Life in a Glasshouse," the album's final track, features a small horn section. It's a powerful touch that gives "Amnesiac's" swan song a necessary note of melan, choly, closing what has been the band's most challenging release

O'Neal, Mutombo take war of words to media

BY BARBARA BARKER NEWSDAY

PHILADELPHIA — All through the playoffs, Shaquille O'Neal has been an unstoppable force. He knows how to score and he knows how to use his battering-ram of a body to get rid of anyone stupid enough to stand in his way.

"He's been playing guys who have been trying to avoid getting hit," 76ers center Dikembe Mutombo said. "I don't know if most guys get out of the way, or they're scared. I'm not scared at all.'

Nearly everyone labeled the Mutombo-O'Neal matchup the key to this NBA Finals. And now, with the Lakers up 2-1, the two continue to jockey for position.

Monday, however, they did so with the media, not underneath the basket, as both continued the war of words that began late Sunday night when O'Neal called Mutombo

O'Neal was clearly upset he had fouled out with 2:21 left, even though his team hung on for the win without him. He remained ticked off Monday, and opened his news conference by challenging Mutombo to play him and not look to draw phantom fouls.

"Challenge me. Play me," O'Neal said.
"I'm allowed to pivot, I'm allowed to play strong, I'm allowed to be powerful. That's what I've been doing my whole career and

I'm not going to change. The question is whether O'Neal should be allowed to lower his side-of-beef shoulder, aim it at a defender and take the ball to

And the officials' answer Sunday was a resounding "No" — O'Neal was assessed two offensive fouls, including the one that removed him from the game.

Lakers Coach Phil Jackson, of course, believes O'Neal was unfairly singled out. He showed great leadership, because it would have been very easy to get upset at a couple of those calls," Jackson said.
"He retaliated, strength for strength.

That's kind of what the motto of that game was: OK, we're gonna let you guys play. We're not letting you play, Shaq, but we're letting everybody else play."

Mutombo called the accusations that he fakes fouls "stupid." He seemed perplexed by O'Neal's decision to go on the offensive off the court.

"If I had been flopping. I would not win as many trophies as I won in my career," said Mutombo, who won his fourth NBA Defensive Player of the Year trophy this season. "It was stupid to say that."

O'Neal hasn't exactly been stopped in the Finals. In three games, he has averaged 34.0 points and 17.3 rebounds. His 7-1, 330pound frame presents a whole series of problems for defenders.

"Shaq's a completely different player than anyone you've probably ever seen in this league," Philly's Aaron McKie said. "The unique thing about him is he's so big, but he's mobile. He's able to move and spin and do all those kind of gyrations under the basket. You wouldn't expect a big guy like him to move like that."

That's why some teams have tried to deal with O'Neal by fouling him frequently. The Sixers don't have enough healthy bodies to play Hack-a-Shaq, so they're trying a Make-Shaq-Hack strategy. One way of doing that is to make him work a bit on defense, which is something Mutombo surprisingly has been able to do.

Never known for offensive prowess, Mutombo scored 23 points in Game 3 and is averaging 17.3 in the series. Before the series, Mutombo went to the Sixers' coaches and asked them to help devise some way of making O'Neal

As a result, he has unleashed a short jumper, a shot that previously was not part of his limited repertoire. "I saw the change in him during the playoffs," Jackson said.

PHILADELPHIA — Los Angeles Lakers' Shaquille O'Neal tries to block a shot by Philadelphia 76ers' Dikembe Mutombo during the first half of game 3 of the NBA finals Sunday.

'He's become confident, and obviously this last game is his best so far in the post.

Mutombo said that before this series, he considered himself to be friendly with O'Neal but not close. O'Neal said in his recent autobiography that "the Georgetown fraternity" of Mutombo, Patrick Ewing and Alongo Mourning has power been all that Alonzo Mourning has never been all that friendly with him, though it's mostly Ewing and Mourning with whom he seems to have problems. Mutomob now has put any possible friendship on hold. "Sometimes you lose your friends in the middle of the battle," he said. "You forget who your friends are.

Brett Krebsbach is the latest addition to the University of Idaho men's golf team, coach Brad Rickel announced.

Krebsbach comes to Idaho after a sterling career, which includes the 2000 4A regional championship, at Pine Creek High School at Colorado Springs, Colo.

"I'm delighted Brett decided to play for the Vandals," Rickel said. "His playing credentials are outstanding, and his reputation as a student-athlete is exemplary. In 2000, Krebsbach, a four-year let-terman and two-time team captain, was second in the Metro League's individual standings and earned academic all-state recognition.
