Ed major moves from graded to grader, at age 20

Kelli Deck grades her seventh grade English class's test on "Miracle Worker" in the SUB Wednesday. Deck is a secondary education major who is graduating next week.

raduating from college at age 20 seems almost impossible. Graduating, getting married and moving at age 20 seems terrifying. But for Kelli Deck, it will all happen within a couple of months.

Deck, a native of Mossy Rock, Wash., will graduate with a degree in secondary education May 18. She will marry her fiance, Brian Orr, June 29, which is also her 21st birthday.

"I can drink at my own wedding."

The couple's lease runs out June 30, and they will move closer to Orr's job at Regents Blue Shield of Idaho in

"It's been a pretty busy semester," Deck said, sighing. She lost about 12 pounds throughout the semester — not

She's been student teaching English to seventh, ninth and 11th graders in Genesee where she also helped developed a film class. But she's not much older than some of her students.

Deck graduated with a high school diploma and an associate arts degree in 1999 as part of the running start program at Centralia Community College.

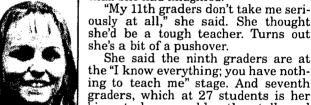

"You were still considered a high school student, and the state paid for you to go to college," she said.

Her last two years of high school were spent on a college campus about 30 minutes from her home. She came to UI that fall to study English and figured teaching was the best fit for her.

"I was always the teacher's pet, like the 'I'll grade papers' type," she said, "so teaching seemed pretty natu-ously at all," she said. She thought she'd be a tough teacher. Turns out she's a bit of a pushover. She said the ninth graders are at the "I know everything; you have nothing to teach me" stage. And seventh graders, which at 27 students is her biggest class, would rather talk and flirt than listen and learn. Still Deck credits her students for keeping her sane through such a busy

And her mentor teachers at Genesee are really thorough, making her complete journals after each lesson she taught with what she learned, how it fits into the curriculum and how it meets Idaho standards.

"They really made me go to a higher level," she said. After earning her bachelor's degree, Deck said she plans on substitute teaching in this area for a year until her husband can transfer with his company. Then she'd like to return to southwestern Washington, where she hopes the job market will be better, she said. Deck doesn't care which grade she'll teach.

"At this point, I just want a job."

Senate sets year's agenda

BY MEGAN OTTO ARGONAUT STAFF

The ASUI Senate is playing with a full deck again. For the first time in over a month, all of the senate seats filled when newly elected and appointed senators stepped in.

Matt Strange and Pfeiffer were appointed to the last two senate positions and were sworn in at the last of the spring senate meetings.

Strange and Pfeiffer both came in for one semester appointments. Strange is an offcampus freshman studying public communication. t's been a stressful year for University of Idaho President ♣Bob Hoover.

Budget crunches, reductions in faculty, consolidating colleges and programs coupled with former members of ASUI attempting to burn the Gay Straight Alliance flag have switched Hoover into overdrive to salvage the university's reputation. During a short interview Monday morning, Hoover addressed how he balances vocation with his personal life and physical health. He said being the president during stringent financial times is no easy task, and that practicing stress management techniques are his key to helping him unwind before and after an agenda-packed workday. Hoover follows three daily routines that keep his physical and mental health intact. The first is diet. Hoover follows a strict diet of low fats and carbohydrates, absorbing nutrients from fish and vegetables.

YOURHEALTH

Beware Summer love and loss

BY BERGEN TORSKE ARGONAUT STAFF

Does absence make the heart grow fonder, or does absence make the heart wander?

Only time can tell when two people separate. Break is one week away, and although many students may think testing is over, for some there still remains an important test that lasts an entire summer. It's called the relationship test. There are no multiple choice questions, essay or short

This test is verbal.

According to Dr. Cynthia Schmiege, three seemingly simple answers will help most relationships pass the test: "communications pass the test:" nication, communication, communication," she said.

Schmiege is an associate professor in the Family and Consumer Science Department. Her area of expertise spans from research of interpersonal relationships to intimate to parent-child relationships and

When talking about commitment, Schmiege can speak very frankly about what to expect.

"There's a common misconception out there that there's only one partner for you," she said, "when actually there will be many others.'

Relationships that last through a summer without a commitment or engagement is a hard thing to achieve, Schmiege

"If you don't have a commitment from the person, you don't want to close yourself off from meeting new people. If you feel strongly about a person, find out if they feel equally strong."

Schmiege said that oftentimes the lack of communication plays a crucial role in separation. The difference of feelings has a lot to say about the longterm prospect of a lasting relationship.

Typically, when one partner feels deeper feelings than the other, the outlook on having a summer relationship long-distance does not look positive.
She emphasized really sitting down and talking about the level of commitment in the relationship. "It's tough because it really puts the relationship out there on the line," she said.

Commitment itself is the extent to which a person is willing to stick with something or someone and see it through to the finish.

Commitment comes in two forms: short-term and longterm. The short-term commitment involves loving a partner, but the willingness to continue that love is what long-term commitment is all about.

People involved in relationships and who want their love. commitment and intimacy to last "over distance and time" should define to each other where their hearts lay.

It is not an easy process. Love itself is a lot like chemistry. Like any chemical reaction that pairs molecules with one another, when two people unite in love it brings them together, bouncing and bobbing back and forth but always remaining together.

The term diversity has been employed a lot lately on the University of Idaho campus, concerning the university's acceptance of different groups and its struggles with attracting a wide range of ethnicties.

Every person in the university community has a responsibility with respect to diversity," said Raul M. Sanchez, special assistant to the president for diversity and human rights.

It cannot be something special or extra done once in a while when the university has additional money, Sanchez

"It is imperative for every institution to be inclusive," he

Recent events at UI have increased talk about diversity and the reputation of the university.

"There is a real distaste for the overall experience here due to what has happened recently," said Nicq Hale, ASUI diversity affairs director and president of the organization Recognizing African American Concerns in Education.

Hale said it's hard to know what to do now since "we're playing the make up game" and because diversity at UI is different than anywhere else.

"You can't take a master copy of policy from somewhere else and solve our problems," Hale said.

"Diversity is a big deal, and negative things have hap-pened, but as a result of the negative things, we can take many positive steps forward. People shouldn't point fingers or be discouraged," Hale said.

Jesse Martinez, a junior majoring in justice studies and Spanish, is the president of the College Assistance Migrant Program of Students and will begin his term as an ASUI senator next fall.

"I strongly feel that the University of Idaho should make a hard push on recruiting more minority students from different parts of the country — not only the states around us. I feel that there are a lot of students coming out of high school that are really smart but don't have many opportunities to continue their education,"

Martinez said.
Students who come to visit for a short period of time don't see it as a welcome environment and often don't come back, he said.

"In the brochures you see there are people of different cultures hanging out together, but it's tough when you go to classes and you don't see that diversity," he said.

Martinez works in the Office of Multicultural Affairs and said the office "receives roughly two to three complaints daily regarding racial slurs or problems that happened to students because they are from different backgrounds."

Martinez said he has been victimized because of his race during his time spent at UI.

"Sometimes we, as margin-alized students, feel that there is nothing we can do, but I have found out that the only way to change things is stand-

"I've had to give up cheese-burgers and French fries," he said. "You can eat your way into disaster, particularly in your 50s

Hoover speaks from experience. Two years ago clogged heart arteries landed him in the hospital where he underwent angioplasty surgery. Since then, the recently turned 61-year-old has shed 30 pounds.

"That was a wake-up call," Hoover said.

Now with a clean bill of health, Hoover said another ingredient to vigor is exercise.

Fourteen years ago while a dean at Utah State University, Hoover ran up to 100 miles a month. Those jogging days ceased four years ago. But Hoover has since bought a treadmill and now runs half those miles each month.

Another key to longevity is finding a hobby to "take your mind away," he said.

But Hoover's hobby is not striking a punching bag, teeing off on a golf course or sculpting a spinning chunk of clay. Instead. the president finds relaxation in preparing lectures for his national security class. Also, recently becoming a grandfather has helped ease pressures linked to career duties.

Another stress reliever will be this summer when Hoover and his wife of 34 years plan to build a house on a plot of land they purchased in Coeur d'Alene.

About the same time Hoover's future vacation home is being constructed, changes to curriculum and colleges at UI will be in the polishing stage.

By July the merging of the College of Letters and Science with the College of Mines and Earth Resources should be complete to form the College of Science. The College of Art and Architecture will be consolidated with humanities programs of the College of Letters and Science to create the College of Letters, Arts and Architecture. The mergers are estimated to save the university roughly $500,000 each year.

The changes are a baby step to inch toward $30 million in budget make-up over the next three years.

Although Hoover is optimistic the new colleges will be a success, many faculty and students are concerned the blend will scar the university's merit. There also are concerns on the number of potential layoffs, which will be reported later in the month.

The university is already los-ing hundreds of faculty who have chose to snatch up Voluntary Separation and Retirement Opportunities Programs. Hoover said VSROP would allow the university to hire more junior faculty.

He said an alternative route would have been to eliminate junior faculty "which would have had more of a significant impact." Another issue Hoover addressed was why the university chose to implement mandatory health insurance costs the same time fees increase 12 per-

He said he hadn't planned to do both at the same time until

"But what makes this all more difficult is that this all came after such a great time.."

> BOB HOOVER UI PRESIDENT

the university was hit with the budget crisis. He said the university acted before the state could impose that all students pay for health insurance.

He reassures that "no money goes to offsetting the budget; it strictly pays for health insurance.

For Hoover, facing budget challenges is nothing new. This will be the third time he's had to crunch numbers in his career. Once was during his term at Utah State University, the other was while working at University Nevada Reno.

'We started out with a bang with the highest education fund," he said of this fiscal year. But economic headwinds coupled with high utility costs and a permanent tax relief bill has eliminated those funds and the university is being forced to operate on a shoestring budget. "Given all the difficulties, there have been a lot of people who have worked hard, like the people who planned VSROP. They've made this an extraordinary achievement." Hoover said. But what makes this all more difficult is that this all came after such a great time.'

Dangers of being straight

Dear editor:

I am writing in response to the recent rhetoric that would have the casual observer think that you should like someone because they are homosexual.

Now, I realize that I'm being a little bit obtuse, but this is ridiculous. A person should be judged by the person they are and not by some social dichotomy.

A couple of weeks ago, some jerk punched me out of nowhere on my way home from the bar. The cop who "worked" on the case told me that he believed the driver of the getaway car when he said that he had never met the aggressor and that he was, in fact, just giving a stranger a ride to the gas station.

This is simply the most ridiculous thing that I have ever heard, and I would encourage the officer to resign from any sort of position that has to do with thinking, especially any sort of general problem solving. When I told the cop that "If he had punched me because I was gay, you guys would be all over this," he laughed and agreed with me. It's true,

Since this wasn't a hate crime, then the guy must have punched me because of his general benevolence towards humanity. It's too bad that because of my sexual orientation, justice will not serve me. I can't help it. I was born this way.

When this maniacal diversity initiative is over, we are all going to realize that the true measure of a person is the person, and to categorize someone according to their looks or lifestyle is insulting to their uniqueness as an individual. Peace in the Middle East.

> Ruben Delgado senior, marketing

Bad Borah editorial

Dear editor:

The coverage of this year's Borah Symposium on the Israeli-Palestinian Conflict in the Argonaut (April 30) was insulting and childish. It's as if the editorial staff wanted famous action figures to duke it out on stage, rather than hear people who were seriously involved in the issues express their thoughtful, conflicting views.

Most upsetting was the cartoon which implied that the exchange between the Palestinian and Israeli students in the "Seeds of Peace" program had the sop-orific impact of a Mr. Rogers show.

Fortunately, most members of the large audience which heard this exchange were clearly impressed by the experience-based knowledge, bravery and integrity of these students. Wish you would have been there to learn something from them.

Make Greek-bashing stop

Dear editor:

I am writing in response to the insurgence of "Greek Bashing" that has received much print in the Argonaut late-

I am very proud to be a Vandal, and it hurts me greatly to hear fellow Vandals constantly rip apart the Greek community of which I am a part.

I don't want to go off on a tangent about how great the Greek system is, or brag about Greek statistics that highlight two-thirds of congress is Greek, etc. Nor do I want to even go so far as to say that Greek living is better than residence hall or off campus living—every living group has its advantages and disadvan-

I just think that it is immature to stereotype the Greek community as a whole by the foolish actions of a few of its members.

I can honestly attribute the best four years of my life to my fraternity experience. I know it sounds superficial, but the brotherhood involved in being a fraternity member is truly amazing. My fraternity brothers have been my family for the past four years and, since I will be gone next semester, I am finding myself teary-eyed to leave the best friends I have ever made in my life.

Also, the leadership, involvement and service experiences the Greek community has provided, has made me a better person and I would strongly encourage Greek living to anyone inter-

I am sure that someone will respond to this letter with a negative comment about how terrible the Greek community is; my response to them is this-don't judge an entire group that you know little

Summer's here

But you can still stay pissed off

ne more week and it's all over. No more final tests, no more last-minute essays that were put off for two weeks or more, and no more whimsical final projects for all those education classes.

You won't have to worry about the rising costs of college, the illegal actions of a handful of student-elected leaders or the impending drastic changes to the campus healthcare system.

It'll just be three months of hot pants and hula-hoops! not to mention jetskiing and Jell-O shots. Summer break is a chance to recharge those academic batteries.

But don't be surprised when you come back to Moscow this fall and you find that tuition and healthcare prices have gone through the roof.

A recent study found that UI's tuition increases have outpaced the growth of the cost of living by a wide margin in the last decade when compared to those of other colleges in the nation. We may still be a best-buy in higher education, but we're rapidly clos-

It's mainly due to poor planning on the Idaho Legislature's part. During the economic boom of the '90s, our state spent its budget on other matters, like the costly refurbishment of the capitol building in Boise.

Now every elementary, high school and university student in Idaho will pay a dear price for our legislators' bad choices. If you thought the budget was tight this year, wait until next year. All over the state, teachers who choose to leave their jobs aren't being replaced, stretching class sizes beyond reasonable limits, and students are being forced to continue their education with reduced or canceled services.

As if that weren't bad enough, Idaho once again made national headlines because three young student leaders thought it would be a great idea to steal the property of an activist organization and attempt to destroy it.

Their actions and the lackluster support education in this state receives from its elected representatives continue to mar this fine state's image in the nation's eyes.
Some of us at the Argonaut are graduating in a week, as are some of our t'. ughtful readers. After receiving four or more years of top-notch education in our fields, quite a few of us are going to leave Idaho, primarily to go where the money is, but also to disassociate ourselves from the bad decisions so many prominent Idahoans seem to make on a regular basis.

The brave and the faithful stay here, confident that things will change for the better some day or resolved that Idaho's many advantages outweigh its few despicable disadvantages.

Similarly, some students who have not finished their degrees have decided not to return to Moscow. Some have decided to stick with it, hoping that things will get better. Others don't really care; they just want to finish their degrees and move on.

If you aren't walking next Saturday, don't join this latter group. Use this summer to reflect on everything that's happened here this year. Get ready to fight for what you believe in, for you will continue to face challenges greater than any of us saw during our tenures here.

There is relevance in a story

Right now, I could write about a lot of things that could be considered relevant. I could write something about the GSA incident, like everyone else has.

Or I could put together a moving piece about the woes of finals week. Suicide bombings in Israel, war in Afghanistan, and fascinating stories about seemingly backward former Enron executives are all "relevant" and provide an endless array of possible angles I could apply toward a "relevant" column.

These issues are important, but I just can't seem to justify saying something about them when I find myself skipping over their stories as I read the newspaper.

I don't only care about what makes the headlines on CNN or the New York Times. I'm looking for something beyond what the news says is most relevant and deserves the most attention.

It's a rare thing to read an objective piece of news that actually tells you something new. It's even rarer to find someone who addresses small issues and might not be considered relevant in a newsworthy sense.

As an opinion writer, I've seriously had to look at what my goals and motivations are in having my thoughts printed every week. Should they be to infuriate readers simply to get them to the Argonaut. His e-mail address is write a letter? Or should my goal be to spark thought and communication among people, not for the purpose of making someone angry or to get a letter, but to encourage the understanding of things that are behind what we call "rele-

Nicole Brodeur, a columnist for the Seattle Times, idenifies this very well when she addresses why she writes. "My column is more a conversation with readers than a spouting of my own views. I like to think that, in writing, I lay down the vertical pronoun — 'I' — as a bridge between readers and me. It is as much their space as mine. And it is a place to tell the stories that otherwise may not get into the_paper."

The stories that rarely make the news and the stories that might not seem to have any relevance whatsoever to the greater whole of society carry a unique message that goes straight to the heart of what ultimately makes the headlines. This uniqueness and relevance stems from the simple fact that these stories, the ones about that trip you took last week-end or about your brother's wedding, are relevant because they go straight to the heart of who we

It's easy to get caught up in only talking about the big headlines. It's even easier to not see any relevance in a story that might not affect anyone directly other than the writer. But the small things that often fall through the cracks are what identify us as humans, and help us to maintain a sense of reality that is often skewed by the constant bombardment of so-called relevant news that we consistently feed ourselves.

Sometimes a story that might not seem to have a newsworthy point on the surface is exactly what we need because it hits the heart of an issue in a way a big headline never could. The point of simply telling a story might just be a subtle way of identifying what really is relevant.

That's why I take the time to write every week. It's not to make people angry and to hopefully get a few letters. My goal is to identify and recognize the things that I find to be most important, and hopefully get someone thinking about the issue addressed.

Sometimes that might mean forcing people to read the story and then identify the issue themselves. Relevance isn't always an easy thing to identify, but it's important to take the time to figure out what relevance there might be in a story, especially when you're dealing in the realm of opinion.

Today and Saturday

"Kandahar" will play at the Kenworthy Performing Arts Centre today and Saturday at 7 and 9:30 p.m. Director Mohsen Makhmalbaf tells the story of Nafas, a young women born in Afghanistan and taken to Canada, while her sister stayed behind in Afghanistan. Now Nafas has received a letter from her sister, who lost both legs after stepping on a land mine, and plans to kill herself during the final eclipse of the 20th century.

Nafas sets off on a desperate journey to smuggle herself from Iran into Afghanistan, to persuade her sister to live. "Kandahar" follows that journey in a way that sheds an unforgiving light on the last days of the Taliban. Admission is $4 for adults and $2 for children.

ABC plans full-day tribute to 9/11 attacks

LOS ANGELES - On the one-year anniversary of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, ABC news will commemorate the event by presenting a full day of comprehensive live coverage of events in the U.S. and around the world.

Anchored by Peter Jennings, the program will present reports by Diane Sawyer, Charles Gibson, Barbara -Walters, Ted Koppel and many other ABC News correspondents.

The day will begin with "Good Morning America" at 7 a.m. PDT and will continue until 5 p.m. After a break for local news, the coverage will continue with "World News Tonight," followed by four hours of prime-time programming until 11 p.m. After another break for the late local news, ABC News' coverage will conclude with a special edition of "Nightline."

In prime time the programming will include a dramatic minute-by-minute reconstruction of what happened before and during the attacks in New York and Washington, D.C.; visits with some of the people ABC News has been following since the attacks; an investigation of whether the nation is safer than it was; and a look at how the youngest victims of post-traumatic stress syndrome are being helped toward recovery.

Blockbusting summer

BY RICK HOLTER THE DALLAS MORNING NEWS

And now, as a public service to those who think Spider-Man is that kinda funny exterminator guy who sneaks into the apartment while you're at work and leaves the cat wheezing like she just inhaled a dime bag of satnip, we present ... summer's Dead-Bolt Movie Locks.

That's right, this season any bozo can be a box-office prognosticator! Those moneyed moguls have set up the block-busters like so, many milk bottles on a carney's shelf: Knock one down a week, win a Julia Roberts "Full Frontal" action figure. Weekly chart toppers are easier to predict than a match race easier to predict than a match race between Secretariat and Francis the Talking Mule.

So sit back for a weekend-by-weekend look at which of Hollywood's biggies will be hot – and not. (And remember, scheduling is almost as ridiculous as these predictions, so dates will change.)

May 10-12

Dead-Bolt Movie Lock: "Spider-Man" (the Web Master vs. Richard Gere? Puh-

Wanna-Be: "Unfaithful" (the aforementioned Richard seeks erotic thrills) and "The New Guy" (with Hollywood new guy D.J. Qualls).

DBML: "Star Wars: Episode II – Attack of the Clones" (with the sound-track hit, Judy Collins' heartfelt "Send in the Clones").

WB: "About a Boy" (who gets squashed by a killer clone).

May 24-26 DBML: "Clones" redux (even Jar Jar couldn't derail this box-office express). WB: "Insomnia" (which moviegoers may have after watching this Al Pacino-Robin Williams thriller directed by "Memento's" 'Christopher Nolan), "Spirit: Stallion of the Cimarron" (starring a computer-generated horse - what, was "My Little Pony" booked?)

and "Enough" (of J-Lo, already).

May 31-June 2

DBML: "The Sum of All Fears" (No, it's not the math-obsessed sequel to "A Beautiful Mind;" Ben Affleck steps in for Harrison Ford in this Tom Clancy extravaganza).

WB: "Undercover Brother" (Eddie Griffin with a Dr. J 'fro and a blaxploitation 'tude).

June 7-9

DBML: "Bad Company" (summer's weakest lock has Chris Rock and Anthony Hopkins making a run at the

"48 HRS" formula).

June 28-30

DBML: "Mr. Deeds" (Adam Sandler plays a goofball who inherits a fortune. Sounds like a certain actor's career.) WB: "Hey Arnold! The Movie" (no, it's WB: "Road to Perdition" (classy cast, but Will Smith owns the road), "Reign of Fire" (Matthew McConaughey heats up with a team of dragons) and "The Crocodile Hunter: Collision Course" (cable TV hero and his trusty crocs leap to the big screen).

July 19-21

DBML: "Stuart Little 2" (mice are nice – at least at the box office).

WB: "K19: The Widowmaker" (fed up with patriotic roles, Harrison Ford switches sides to command a failing Soviet nuclear sub), "Halloween: Resurrection" (which aims to resurrect Jamie Lee Curtis, too) and "Eight Legged Freaks" ("The Osbournes" leap to the big screen! Nah, actually just your run-of-the-mill mutant spiders

July 26-28 DBML:

"Austin Powers Goldmember" (with Beyonce aboard, it's destiny, child).

WB: "The Country Bears" (Dr. Evil will smash these Disneyland escapees).

August 2-4
DBML: "XXX" (as in extreme sports with Vin Diesel, not "fine arts cinema") will rule in a powerhouse week.

WB: "Signs" (Mel Gibson and Sixth Sense creator M. Night Shyamalan make a scary team) and "Full Frontal" (even a cheapie from Steven Soderbergh and Julia Roberts can contend - especially with this title).

August 7-11
DBML: "Spy Kids 2: The Island Of Lost Dreams" (can lightning strike twice for indie hero Robert Rodriguez?).
WB: "Blood Work" (director/star Clint Eastwood is still a force, but 'Kids" rule).

DBML: "The Adventures of Pluto Nash" (Eddie Murphy blasts off to the moon, but will audiences follow?) WB: "Master of Disguise" (Dana Carvey gets silly - now there's a surprise!), "Serving Sara" (ditched its original title, "Servicing Sara." Maybe they should settle on "Surviving Sara").

But study this list, learn from it and then come see the movie. Study Guide for "Not Being a Moron 102:"

Don't be shocked if the movie you are expecting to catch is sold out. Don't be surprised if all movie times for the night are sold out. People take their movie-watching seriously, stand-ing in line for extended periods if necessary. People are crazy.

If there is a sign in the win-dow claiming the show is sold out, do not ask me if it is "really sold out." Contrary to your sus-picions, I do not make "trick signs" to try to fool you.

The term "sold out" means no more tickets are left for that we are showing. Likewise, "no more stand of signifies the digit zero and is in no way a synonym for a few.

If the person before you in line gets the last ticket, it is not, surprisingly, my own personal attack on you. If only you could have torn yourself away from the electronic ab belt infomercial 30 seconds earlier, you would be holding the last ticket.

You and I are not buddies. Do not ask me to "hook you up" no matter how attractive or charming you think you are. I have no authority to give out free tickets, and if I did, I'd sell them to supplement my income, not give them to you. Tell me what you want to see.

Don't expect me to guess your age, your child's age, how many are in your party or which movie you want tickets for. There are other movies playing, though they are, admittedly, inferior.

In conclusion, use those rusty, cobweb littered brains, people. Listen to your common sense, or maybe even befriend it. This wisdom is not limited to movie theater attendance. There are people in public service jobs everywhere, working long shifts for minimum wage. Help them out a little bit. And when you go see "Episode II" next weekend, try to understand what the employees are going through. Don't be the people they complain about during their break.

That was for Soundgarden, who at the time was one of the biggest bands, and seeing them in Seattle, they were a huge draw. I could go on for days about why I didn't go to the show, but that's not my point here. In the six years since that time, ticket prices have gone out of control, and for what? To see some glorified rock star shake what the lord gave him for 90 minutes.

This summer The Eagles, one of my favorite classic rock bands, are making their way around the country. When I received word of this tour I reactedt like Michael Jackson would be coming to town.

Then I found out how much they were charging for tickets. For their show at the Gorge, the cheapest tickets - lawn tickets - are $79.80.

After the Ticketmaster enema, the final price, depending on the buyer's shipping preference is around $95. Tickets for the golden circle in the front seats are $140 before Ticketmaster takes a hold. My feelings toward the Eagles have drastically become that much of a problem? To borrow a couple key phrases from "The Big ebowski," "This aggression will not stand man," and 'I fing hate the Eagles.'

I wish Joe Walsh and the boys could hear me when I say that I will spend $79.80 to see the Eagles when hell freezes over. This year's Area:Two festival put on by electromusic star Moby is looking like the tour of the sum-

Then I have to mow like two more because of the Ticketmaster fees.

Lollapalooza, Area's forefather, was never this expensive, and it was much better, always. Believe it or not The Rolling Stones are giving fans a break with their 40th anniversary tour this fall.

Tickets for many shows start at only $50. Still a lot of money, but it looks good next to $79.80. Even modern-day Greek god Dave Matthews and his band are keeping things decent this summer. Prices for their show have only raised a hair from last year, starting at $41.25 for their shows at the Gorge in

More than just music: jazz has stories to tell

There's history and controversy in your own backyard | Sandpoint resident recalls Alabama's first black radio station

BY KATIE BOTKIN ARGONAUT STAFF

Jazz has played a part, historical, in the flow of civil rights. And Lionel Hampton, the namesake of the UI School of Music, played a big part in both jazz and civil rights.

Dr. Lynn Skinner, director of Jazz Fest, holds its name sacred. "We always say 'Lionel Hampton Jazz Fest,' " he said "Not just 'Jazz Fest.' "

The name holds a deeper significance than the tacked-on few extra letters.

"This is the first festival in the world named after a jazz artist. There are others now, but we were the first. Not only that, but it's the first festival, the first Shelef Marie town he named School of Music, to ever be named after an African American," said Skinner.

In fact, Antoinette Handy, former director of music for the National Endowment of the Arts, said naming the Festival and the School of Music after Hampton was "The highest honor palities and the school of Music after Hampton was "The highest honor palities and the school of Music after Hampton was "The highest honor palities and the school of t minority this century," Skinner said. "I mean 1900-2000. That's pretty significant."

Hampton himself was one of the first black musicians to play onstage with white performers such as Benny Goodman.

Goodman saw Hampton playing in Los Angeles in 1936 and asked him to tour and record with him. Certain establish-of its mixed race. In the same respect, Goodman refused to temporarily replace the black members of his band, Hampton and Teddy Wilson, so he would be allowed to play.

Hampton's success with Goodman enabled him to begin his own big band ensemble in

In the 1980s, after a successful career, Hampton began working with the University of Idaho to establish music programs, and the Jazz Festival and school of music were named in his honor. However, jazz as a catalyst early in the 20th century by African Americans."

Some say jazz began as early as 1895 in New Orleans, but popular jazz era began in the '20s and centinged with the suing era and continued with the swing era beyond World War II. Both styles of music, and the dances that went with them, were hugely popular in their time; with both

"In World War II, practically everyone danced," said Madeline Moses, a 74-year-old retired nurse. "They had dances for servicemen and women at the USO, which were free, and they served free soft dripks coffee and free soft drinks, coffee and doughnuts. This was in the era of the 'Big Bands of Benny Goodman, Glenn Miller."

Ul relives the greatest sports moments of the year

UI vs. UC Irvine

The most memorable moment in Vandal sports this season came during a women's basketball game at home against UC Irvine

Darci Pemberton has been awesome her entire career, but on this night she blew everyone away. She scored 33 points by shooting 11-16 from the field, including 2-4 from the three-point line, and 9-10 from the charity to say to the media: "It was amazing."

Pemberton scored 53 percent of the Vandals points in the 72-67 win, and helped keep their postseason hopes alive. Her high output night was the highest scoring game of any Vandal bas-ketball player all season long, both for men and ever has a victory meant so much to many fans. Well, that is probably an exaggeration when talking about the University of Idaho football's team's first and only win of the 2001 season against the Louisiana-Monroe Indians in the Kibbie Dome in November.

Jake's column appears regularly on sport pages of address is However, watching ULM's Mack Vincent inexplicably drop a seemingly sure touchdown catch that very well could have won the game for the Indians was the defining Vandal athletic moment of the school year for many fans, including myself.

The win was the Vandals' first after opening the season with eight straight losses, including an embarrassing 70-58 loss to Middle Tennessee State, during which UI rolled up an amazing 760 total yards and still lost. This was a different day, though, and even UI's much-maligned arg_sports@sub.uidaho.edu defense stepped up big.

The Vandals somehow held the Indians' rushing attack to 23 yards on 24 carries, although the Indians still managed to take a 24-13 lead into halftime. ULM really took it to UI in the last 53 seconds of the half, scoring on a 94yard kickoff return and on a field goal from short

Montana's saving grace

13-6 victory by the Montana Grizzlies over Furman to win the Div. I-AA football title was possible, the best moment this year in UI sports for me.

I know that sounds incredibly odd, even a bit like a traitor to say Montana's good fortune was my favorite moment in UI ath-finished the season 1-10, dropped their final game of the season to the Grizzlies in a game I blew off as another Vandal embarrassment long before the opening kick.

The opposite was true as our Vandals, the same that finished with the No. 110 defense in the nation, held on to a 27-

27 tie going into the second overtime. Even though the Grizzlies did not have the most potent offensive attack, No. 21 in Div. I-AA, they were still held back by a proud and fierce group of Idaho defenders.

The Vandals went on to lose that game 33-27 women, and her career best. Never has a crowd at a women's basketball game been so loud. As soon as Pemberton caught the ball, everyone got excited and couldn't wait to see what was going to happen next. After sinking shot after shot the crowd erupted louder and louder, giving the Cowan Spectrum a playoff-type atmosphere feeling.

Unfortunately, only 324 people got to see this performance, but it was probably as loud as 324 people could possibly be.

Suddenly the troubles that the team had faced earlier in the year didn't seem like much of a problem, as Pemberton was doing the work of three people, seemingly without effort.

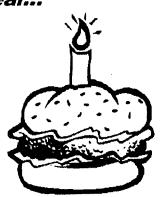

If I were allowed to give an Espy Award, or even just an Argy Award, Darci Pemberton would takwith wasuus tiens discouraged at yet another halftime deficit, a scenario they had seen all too often in the preceding weeks, UI came out fired up in the second half. The third quarter was highlighted by senior wide receiver Chris Lacy's 70-yard touchdown catch, which he caught off the shoulder pad of a ULM defender.

You've made it through another school year...

We've decided to celebrate.

Come to a FREE BBQ Friday, May 10th at 3 p.m. On the Campus Christian Center Lawn

The score brought the Vandals within five points of the Indians.

Late in the fourth quarter the Vandals led by four points, but everyone in the crowd seemed to holding their breath, as they had seen UI screw up sure wins more than once in the past. Not this

The Vandals forced ULM into a fourth and 18 situation, and the Indians had not even reached midfield yet. However, ULM's Vincent had a good five yards on UI defensive back Ighe Evero on a deep route, and the pass from quarterback Andre Vige appeared to be right on target.

As UI fans everywhere collectively held their breath, the ball somehow went right through the hands of the intended receiver, which pretty much sealed the deal for the Vandals' emotional first win.

To this day I don't know how that receiver managed to flub that catch. Maybe Evero clucked like a chicken, causing the receiver to lose his concentration. Maybe Vincent simply couldn't stand to see the Vandals lose another game.

Whatever the case may be, the Vandals won, and UI fans won't have to tell their grandchildren that they witnessed a winless football season.

early in that second overtime after Montana's Yo Humphrey ran 25 yards for the game winning touchdown. But that has little to do with why that quickly became my favorite moment.

Like any other reporter on the Palouse, I went to every Vandal home game and time and again watched as the UI players would play brilliantly through three quarters and choke in the final minutes. My typical opening line to every story started something like "The Vandals could not finish as they dropped Saturday's game to..." Boy did I get tired of writing that.

But on Nov. 24 as I watched the evening news to see how the Vandals botched the last quarter, I nearly messed myself when I saw our Vandals, the same that finished with the No. 6 offense in the nation, hold on to double overtime.

Being the weekend before Thanksgiving, I sat at my home in Buhl (that's in southern Idaho, by the way) in awe of the effort the Vandals gave to this apparently meaningless game. In a 1-9 season. To the eventual Div. I-AA champions.

Boy, I would have loved to have been in that locker room before the game to hear what Coach Tom Cable said to make these guys play so hard.

These same guys who always seemed to find a way to lose in the final possession of every other game.

These Vandals held on for 75 minutes against the best football team in Div. I-AA.

I was not at the game in Missoula, but I guarantee the Grizzlies were stunned to still have the starting squad on the field in the fourth quarter, let alone to be taken to double overtime by a 1-9 team.

The Vandals finished their season that day in Missoula with the ability to hold their heads high knowing that they gave a damn good football team a run for their money.

I cannot speak from experience, but I would be willing to bet that every coach would take that rather than a good win over a mediocre team.

If I could have one wish for the Vandals in the next year as they take the field it would be that they play that hard every day and take to heart every insult they get and learn to cram it down the throats of everyone, including this reporter.

Congratulations

Dear Graduating Class of 2002

Congratulations to the graduating class of 2002! I know that you have worked hard to make it to this day. You have reached a real milestone in your lives. I hope that your experience at the University of Idaho has been a good one and that you will remember your alma mater as a place where learning took place, friendships where made, and solid foundations were formed for a successful future.

Many of you have already accepted offers of employment. Others have chosen to pursue advanced professional degrees. Should you still be in the job market, trying to make your decision to secure employment, our Career Services personnel are available and willing to help with your job search. You may also be considering continuing your education. The University of Idaho has some excellent masters and doctoral programs. A significant number of our graduate students receive assistantships. There are other programs also available to help students while attending graduate

I wish you well in whatever goals you pur-Your presence while attending the University of Idaho has made a difference to us, and I hope the days you have spent with us have made a significant impact on your life and future.

Julia Nkanata

Julia Nkanata, a Kenyan native, completes her master's degree in rehabilitation/community counseling and will return to Kenya to pass along training to people who work with HIV/AIDS patients. She was an officer of UI's African students association. She says her new skills will address a significant social problem in the world today. "None of my family have a college degree or have traveled outside my home town and I feel so privileged to have had the opportunity to gain a meaningful education that will contribute directly to the challenges my country is facing."

Zeljka Vidic

Zeljka Vidic from Zagreb, Croatia, is a four-year member of the women's tennis team. She came to UI as a refugee from Croatia with nothing but a tennis scholarship and seven years experience with unpredictability, she says. Her family's home had been destroyed in the Serbian occupation. "In this small college town, I blossomed," she said.

Kevin Davis

Kevin Davis from Gresham, Ore., a student in recreation and outdoor leadership, is a worldrenowned javelin thrower for the deaf. He regained some hearing in 2001 with a transplant known as a bionic ear. He has been a teaching assistant, student leaser and member of the UI track team. Davis won the Outstanding Programmer Award for his department at a recent awards event.

Rodney Hilaire

Rodney Hilaire, who came to UI from Los Angeles for men's basketball, had a difficult adjustment and academic road, he admits. But when he lost his parents a few years ago, he remembers the promise he made to his mother — that he would get a college degree. His mentors say his perseverance and effort to turn his life around made a significant impact at UI. He dedicates his degree in general studies to his mother.

Buck S. Samuel

Buck S. Samuel of Nordman is a first generation college graduate, a home-schooled product, a model for community volunteerism, and an exceptional student in microbiology and biochemistry. After graduation, he will study at Washington University in St. Louis, a top institution in microbial pathogenesis. Samuel is considered one of the top 40 college students in the country, based on being chosen for the USA Today 13th annual All-USA College Academic team. His many honors and achievements recognize his academic and research talents, his student leadership and community volunteerism, and his self-starting motivation. He credits "living in the northern Idaho wilderness for shaping my intense reverence and curiosity for the life around me."

Robert D. Phillips

Robert D. Phillips, a Korean War veteran and Boise resident, will participate in Moscow's ceremony alongside his granddaughter Kathryn Lee Tracy, who receives a bachelor's degree in Family and Consumer Science. He earned a UI business degree in 1951, but was called to action and missed his graduation ceremony 50 years ago.
