

Larson & Grenaugh.

Operative reports that Sam Cassidy is still here, and is going to try to get work here.

Burris and P. F. O'Donnell are also here. O'Donnell carries a big sheath knife and says he would like to kill Mgr. McDonald with it. He said that if martial law was not declared off by the first of the year, the only way for the boys to go was for each man to take his gun and kill his man; that's what he was going to do. He also said that if Gov. Hunt went back on them, as the Spokane Review seemed to hint, they would shoot him first, then McDonald and so get to the root of the trouble. O'Donnell also said that Mgr. McDonald wanted to shoot with a man in Wallace, the night before, but that he had not scared up the right man, but that he would take the chance any time.

Sam Cassidy is pretty still; he is afraid that the Deputies and Detectives are on his trail. He is sleeping with operative.

Operative reports that the Euzter mine is closed down for a day or two, for want of water. The water pipes are frozen up.

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 23, 1900.