C. C. C. camps under the supervision of the Idaho National Forest started their spring migrations this week. An advance movement of the French Creek C. C. C. camp began Wednesday when twenty-five enrollees were moved to start construction of the Lakefork C. C. C. camp. An army officer and technician will be overhead. The entire company will move in in about two or three weeks, probably June 1st.

The Riggins C. C. C. camp will move to the South Fork camp the first of next week. The new C. C. C. camp is already constructed. No change in overhead or army personnel will be made, being moved with the respective companies.

The main road crew started last week into the back country where they will open the road between Knox and the South Fork C. C. C. camp. That camp will move this week into the Yellowpine and Roosevelt country for the season's work. Two road crews started this week to work on the Warren road, and it is hoped that the road to Burgdorf and Warren will be open by the end of next week. At the present time there is three feet of snow on Secesh summit and trucks are being dragged along to feet of snow on the road from French Creek.
