Rural Electricity In Long Valley Foreseen Soon

Residents of the rural districts of Long Valley, long dependent on oil and gas for lighting and power, have been presented with an opportunity to obtain electrical power in the future. In an effort to obtain government assistance in the project, Long Valley citizens have organized a corporation, the Long Valley Cooperative, Inc., to get the cooperation of all rural dwellers who desire electricity on their farms.

Signatures of 75 per cent of rural residents of the district between Smith's Ferry and McCall are necessary before government loans can be had to buy equipment and erect lines. This includes perhaps 250 farm homes. At the present time more than 150 families have acknowledged a desire for this service and the complete quota should be obtained soon.

Those who have been holding back are advised to join soon in order that engineers may route power lines near their homes. The fee for joining the organization, a non-profit enterprise, is only five dollars.

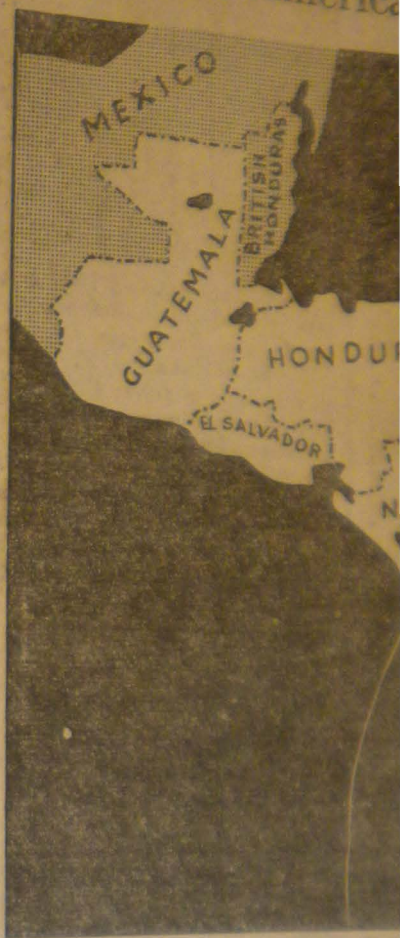

Thursday at Donnelly a meeting of those parties who are members of the cooperative was held and a board of directors was elected by those present. Oscar Erickson was elected president; Arjolph Heinrich, vice president; Bertha White, secretary; and Alta Downen, treasurer.

The organization was fully incorporated a short time ago.

What source of power will be used to supply electricity to these homes is not yet known. Probably a small diesel plant will be used until water power can be had.

Engineers will arrive in the valley as soon as enough residents have signed up to use the electricity and routes will be surveyed for the lines. It is for this reason that all those who plan to use the electricity should acknowledge that fact in the near future in order to have a line routed near their homes.
