Dear George:

It was nice to hear from you again and learn of your interest and experiments in stone flaking. I find it great occupational therapy and good chest and shoulder exercise. Plus the fact that all the concentration involved erases all worldly problems. Since it is doubtful that any single piece of work is - or has been - done without some minor imperfection, there can be no monotony in the work and each new piece is a challenge.

I wish I could be there to help you - a few minutes of demonstration is better than volumes of print. You will learn a lot from Francois when you visit him this summer.

I just learned today that my wife and I may be coming to London in the Fall and it is possible that we may then go to the continent. I am also delighted that you will be coming West next year. So with our trip and your trip, the odds are in our favor that we may make contact.

George, please do not jeopardize yourself by sending specimens. I will treasure those I have and be glad that you sent them. In the meantime I will send some additional samples some time in July. Can't do it before then as my school starts soon and will continue until July 9th and won't have a minute.

Thank you so much for the card of the unbelievable core and blades from Grand Pressigny. They are, indeed, a challenge. Thanks again for everything.

Your friend,

Don E. Crabtree
