Dr Earl Swanson Idaho State University Museum Pocotello, Idaho

Dear Earl:

One of my former students and field foreman at Blackwater Draw during the exciting discovery period of 1963-64 is very interested in the Don Crabtree supper program.

He is currently a graduate student at the University of Wisconsin and he has served his military obligation, being a naval officer for several years.

He is intelligent, mature, and for years very interested in flaking techniques. He is currently working on 5000 flakes from the Lindenmeier site and has in the past worked on waste flakes from several other Paleo-Indian locations.

He has several publications to his credit, and has worked under me or Cynthia Irwin-Williams at Hell Gap, Lindenmeier and Blackwater Draw. He is a responsible individual, serious, and very excited about the possibility of working with Crabtree.

I strongly endorse him for the candidacy for the summer program.

Don: This is a good man. Solid but not flashy, and he wants so hard to learn more about flaking. He watched you work at Hell Gap, and this started him in his current flake interest. He is really fairly well advanced already.
