Dear Don,

I am just sitting here typing up parts of my dissertation and getting ready to submit it, and find that virtually all of what I have in it is based on something I learned from you. So I thought that I would drop you a line and send you best wishes.

I wrote to you from Greece this summer, and hope that you received my cards, but the mail was quite bad and perhaps you didn't receive them. At any rate, I worked on an excavation in Crete this summer, and will be teaching again at the University of Minnesota this winter. I am staying with the Braidwoods, who are very kind, in giving me a place to work for a while. They also send regards.

I will write to you over the winter and hope that you are in good health, most importantly, and secondly that you are in good spirits. We all think of you often.

With best regards,

Harriet
