Dear Mr. Crabtree:

I am a student of the Field Museum of Natural History's Southwest Archaeological Expedition under the direction of Dr. Paul S. Martin, and am researching , for my URPP project, variations in tool styles and functions through time. One aspect of my research concerns the relationship of projectile point style, size, and weight to the type of game upon which the point was used.

I would be grateful if you could supply any information concerning pre-historic projectile point mechanics, especially that which deals with the relation of function to style(including size and weight) of points, and that which deals with points known to have been used by Indians of the Mogollon or Anasazi Cultures.
Please send me a bill for any cost involved, and thank you very much for your time.

Sincerely Yours,

Kathleen J. Bragdon
