Dear Don:

I have taken the liberty to limit the class size of your course to a maximum of 12 students. If you would like this altered please let me know. The Calendar has just arrived from the printer and a copy is enclosed. Also, a copy of the Calendar and an application form has been sent to Jim Woods. Al Bryan and Ruth were here last Saturday to address the local Archaeological Society and mentioned that two of their graduate students are planning to take the course. I have lined up sources of antler, and am now wondering about other perhaps necessary supplies; for example, leather pads, gloves, protective glasses, etc. I have filed your book order request with the bookstore. However, if the above type of supplies are needed either the University should obtain them in advance, or students should be advised to obtain the gear in advance of the course.

As you can see from the enclosed W.A.S.A. brochure I have been busy of late helping to organize that conference which opens here tomorrow. The Meetings end with a panel discussion on archaeology which I am looking forward to. Hope that you are keeping well, and with best wishes,

Sincerely,

Terry Moore, Chairman
Department of Anthropology
