Dear Errett:

My thanks and compliments for your most informative publication on The Basics of Biface Knapping in the Eastern Fluted Point Tradition - A Manual for Flintknappers and Lithic Analysts. I am disappointed that they didn't illustrate one of your beautiful bifaces on the front of Archaeology of Eastern North America rather than some decayed molar of a dead elephant!

It is a most informative publication and will long be cherished by the profession as you have contributed so much information and it was done so well. Particularly I like your idea of the exfoliation of the flakes and scars in portraying a biface.

I will be most interested to learn of your experiences while you were in Denmark. There are so many different techniques and technologies that are quite strange to us in the New World. I know it has been a rewarding experience to you.

Keep up the good work with the Flintknappers Exchange, and we both are thankful for Jackie Nichols's assistance.

Your friend,
