Dear Sir! Just recieved the flakes and sare do thank you for the trouble in packing. It seems to me it would be well ~~also~~ a lot easier to just pack them in dry wood shavings or sawdust there is considerable mess in wrapping each flake in paper. If you ever send anymore send them in sawdust. You sent some beautiful flakes and it just hate to mess them up without first reading the publication on flaking. so will wait untill I get it. I want to send you some article worthy of your interest in me. Please let me know if you would care to own a a genuine stone axe I have two its grooved all around and its well made I have had these axes a long time and I know of no one I would rather give it to than you so please let me know if you care to have it. And I Would very much like to own a knife like the one that was broken in shipping, its a flaked knife like joint, and it would not have to be as beautifully flaked, just a rugged blade fit to be in a handle. So will you let me send you this axe in exchange for ^{the} knife? The glass bottle obsidian with the streaks through the inside would be beautiful, but will settle for just a plain black blade, longer the better and if you care to send me more flakes in the future you need not select the large thick ends just I like to work on the small bird joints and would like flakes from one inch to two and a half inches long and not too thick I do not know how to chip them to thinner shape. Please let me know if you care to have that axe its nicely polished and weighs over three pounds, and it was found in Iowa Thanking you again for all you have done to please me

I beg to remain respectfully

Did you get the snapshot of the Rube Goldberg joints?

Have you ever shipped an effigy of a turtle about 2 inches long that on article that no collection is complete without it Thank you
