Dear Dr Crabtree

I am working at present on my doctorate here in Edinburgh which mainly concerns as assessment of which methods of microwear analysis are best suited to the Scottish material which I am studying. In order to assess what factors concerned with flint knapping are likely to affect the use damage seen on the tools and waste flakes I am undertaking a programme of manufacture to produce various forms of flint pieces.

I have seen several references to various flint knapping courses which are held by you in the Idaho State Univ Museum. As I am very eager to improve my knapping I would be very grateful if you would tell me what courses would be available if I came over, where I could stay and the approximate cost.

Yours sincerely

Rosemary Hope
