Dear Don:

I'm ashamed to admit it, but I still have never had the chance to transcribe the tapes I have of the flint-knapping session at the Jurgens site in 1968. Since I am planning on taking the flint-knapping courses from Dick Daugherty and Henry Irwin next semester, perhaps I shall find an excuse to take the time then. But in the meantime, might I ask you for some information on your flint-knapping course? Will a class similar to last year's summer session be held again in 1970? And if so, are there any funds available for support while in session? And who might I contact about applying for the class?

I spent last summer doing a detailed attribute analysis of the Cody points from the Jurgens site, after finally deciding what I was looking at and how to record my observations---now it's time for me to actually do some knapping rather than just look under a microscope. I have some interesting ideas about the Eden-Scottsbluff manufacture that I would like to talk over with you sometime as well, to see how plausible they might be in light of the practical realities of working flint. I do hope you will be offering the class again this coming summer, and that I can manage to get into it this time.

Sincerely,

Ruthann Knudson
