Dear Don and Evelyn,

Just a short note to thank you for coming up last weekend. It's always such an inspiration to talk with you about rocks.

Max brought in an ad from a California newspaper someone had sent him. The city of Oakland Museum is looking for an assistant to the curator. Max says it's a very progressive place, and has an outstanding American Indian collection. I'm sure they're looking for someone with more experience than I have, but it's at least worth a letter.

The quote on the other sheet is taken from Holmes' Stone Implements of the Potomac Chesapeake Tidewater Region. I still find it hard to believe that he was writing things like that 75 years ago!

Rec'd a letter from Hiro yesterday. He says he has written his thesis about last summer's flintknapping school and it is going to be published in Japanese Archaeological Journal soon. He promised to send a copy. He also said other Japanese archaeologists frequently ask him whether tools they have found were made by pressure or percussion etc.

Thanks again for your encouragement Saturday. Will probably see you again soon.
