

C. 6. 4. 86

I am pleased to have the opportunity to recommend Christine E. Lovgren for placement in the field of anthropology. I have worked with Miss Lovgren for several years and I find her to be a competent, energetic person with a good personality who is willing to assume the responsibility of assigned tasks as well as successfully using her own initiative.

She attended the 1971 School of Lithic Technology and proved to be adept and skillful in the manual arts of replicating prehistoric stone tools. She was a student with an inquiring mind who had the wisdom to apply her knowledge of flintknapping to artifact and flake analysis and, subsequently, typeology. Her skill and knowledge in the field of lithic technology as well as all phases of anthropology should make her a valuable asset to any university or museum.

As well as teaching, I can also recommend her for curator work, for she successfully and efficiently did a volume of cataloging, filing and laboratory work for me as well as supplying the art work for my illustrative lexicon of lithic technology. She also helped me compile and edit a comprehensive bibliography of stone working literature.

I consider Christine to be an anthropologist with unlimited potential and would highly recommend her to anyone considering her for employment.
