Dear Don:

Thank you very much for your letter. It appears I was much too conservative in interpreting some of these cobble tools.

Could you write a short paper on this technique for The Arkansas Archeologist? I would be glad to send you any specimens you would like to borrow and, as you can see from the illustrations in the Florida Anthropologist reprint, we have one of the best photographers around (Dan Printup).

Enclosed is a copy of my talk in San Francisco. Would appreciate any comments. I will send you a draft copy of another paper attempting to identify a microlith assemblage found in Florida.

Are the ground edges on Hopewell and Jaketown cores due to edge preparation or to detachment?

Sincerely yours,

Dan F. Morse
