Mr. E. Leland Webber, Director,
Field Museum of Natural History,
Chicago, Illinois, 60690.

Dear Lee:

We have just had four exciting days with Dr. Crabtree, the world-famous expert on classification and manufacture of stone artifacts by every known technique. We have all learned more about all aspects of stone tool techniques than we ever knew before, and the students have benefitted immensely by these demonstrations and lectures; they are all knapping stone like mad.

I have just received from NSF the new brochure and instructions for submitting proposals for URPP. I am going to start the writing of this next week, and will send you a rough draft for your approval as soon as possible.

The students are infinitely better than last year, and have taken hold with amazing rapidity. Tomorrow morning we give them a written quiz.

May I send my fondest greetings to you and all my friends at the Museum.

As every, your friend,

Paul S. Martin
