Dear Mr. Crabtree:

Dr. Moore was talking to me the other day and he told me that you haven't been feeling well lately. I just wanted to send you a "get well" message. Hope that you are soon feeling well again.

I wanted to write to you before now and thank you for teaching the course in hethbridge this summer. I really enjoyed the experience of that week and my only regret is that it could have gone on longer. But I did appreciate the fact that I had an opportunity to take part.

Have you done much flint knapping since you returned home? I have to admit that the books have kept me busier than I would like - but that is the peril of being a student. Perhaps after this school year is over.

This is short but I did want to get both messages to you while I had a minute here.

Once again, thank you for the course and I hope that you are feeling better again soon,

Sincerely,

Susan McIntyre.
