

GEM^{OP} THE MOUNTAINS
1914
VOL. XI

Foreword

In this eleventh volume of "The Gem of the Mountains," published this year by the class of Nineteen Hundred and Fourteen, an attempt has been made to represent in some way every phase of college activity. The staff found itself confronted with a proposition concerning which we knew but little, and it is to the solving of the problems of the different departments by the Editors of those departments that the success of this Annual is due. We realize that it will be found lacking in many respects, and that it will be criticised both favorably and adversely, yet it is with the knowledge of having made an honest effort that we send it forth, and we make no apologies.

The staff has been greatly assisted in its work by other people. We want here to thank, especially, Josephine Wayman, '14; Gladys Nankervis, '15; Clough Perkins, '14; Vestal Hockett, Mark Anderson, '15; R. E. Perkins, '14; F. G. Price, Louise Richardson, Dorothy Taylor, '15; Gladys Collins, '15; and Professor E. M. Hulme for the valuable assistance they have rendered.

JUNIORS

Mrs. J. G. Griffith, Class Patroness.

Class of Nineteen Hundred Fourteen

Little need be said of the history of this class—it speaks for itself. The members of the class have always been prominent in the various departments of College activity. We have been well represented on the Athletic teams, in Debate, Y. M. C. A. work, Dramatics, Society and otherwise. It will be remembered that, among other things, we are the only class that has won the St. Patrick's Day inter-class scrap both years in which we participated.

The officers of the class for the Junior year are as follows:

First Semester		Second Semester
VIRGIL SAMMS.....	President	CLARENCE FAVRE
ROY TUTTLE.....	Vice-President	JOHN HAYDEN
LORENA DARTT.....	Secretary.....	MINNIE MINDEN
JOSEPHINE WAYMAN.....	Treasurer	JOSEPHINE WAYMAN

"PINK, Jr."—Mascot.

The College of Law

The College of Law, since its establishment in 1909, has grown steadily and greatly in both number of students and size and ability of faculty.

This year the second class, consisting of twelve men, will graduate. It is a noteworthy fact that as yet no graduate of this College has failed in the examination which must be passed before one can be admitted to the State Bar.

The Law students have always been prominent in College activities. It seems that the tendency to take part successfully in athletics is a part of the budding lawyer. They are also foremost in debating, and take an important part in Dramatics and other phases of college life.

This year the students perfected an organization known as "The Bench and Bar Association," with the following officers: Chief Justice, R. D. Leeper; Associate Justice, J. M. Boyle; Clerk, A. Heer.

A law fraternity, Pi Alpha Delta, was organized this year with a membership of thirteen.

SCHOOL OF PRACTICAL AGRICULTURE

F. G. Price.

The School of Practical Agriculture

The School of Practical Agriculture was organized in October, 1910. It has for its purpose the training of young men for a practical and useful life on the farm. Whether or not the school has succeeded in its purpose can best be decided by turning our attention to the class just graduated, the first to attain diplomas. There are eight young men in this class and not one of them saw his way clear to accept an agricultural position which was better, insofar as remuneration was concerned, than the average College graduate can expect. Most of them go back to the farm.

Students are admitted from the eighth grade without examination. Instruction is given in secondary subjects, such as English, Mathematics, Bookkeeping, Chemistry and Physics, which correspond to High School work. Some of the practical agricultural subjects taught are Farm Machinery, Motors, Steam Engines, Irrigation, Grain Judging, Stock Judging, Feeding of Animals, Carpentering, Forge Work, Bacteriology, Dairying, Orcharding, Vegetable Gardening, and various subjects in Veterinary Science.

The girls' classes in Home Economics are also popular. Instruction in sewing, cooking, vegetable gardening and poultry raising are emphasized.

The course begins about the middle of October and closes after the second week in March. Thus a young man can work seven months and more than earn enough to pay his expenses for the five months spent at college.

Not only do boys from the eighth grade take advantage of the School of Practical Agriculture, but High School and even College graduates from other courses have made up their mind to "go back to the soil" and have prepared themselves for a practical and scientific farm life in this way.

Football

The 1912 football season was one of the most successful at Idaho in several years. Although we did not win any more games than in 1911, the relative strength of the other conference teams made it a more glorious year for Idaho. In the somewhat mixed-up standing of the conference teams last fall, Idaho was given second place by all critics.

The season opened under promising conditions, with a good percentage of the old men back and a large squad of new men trying out for positions. We played the four other strongest teams in the conference and finished with only the invincible Washington team ahead of us.

The schedule opened with the biennial invasion of Pullman. Idaho seemed to have the advantage from the first. As the game advanced, the superiority of our team became more apparent, and before the game was over we were playing rings around Bender's pupils. The score was 13 to 0 for Idaho. It should have been bigger, they say; but we were well satisfied with that.

It was a weaker team which Washington walloped, 24 to 0, at Seattle the following week. Washington has an ugly habit of winning all her games, so we were not as disappointed at losing this game as we were when Oregon beat us a week later, 3 to 0. From the dope, Idaho should have won this game. Though greatly outweighed, we had the web-footers outclassed and the game would certainly have been ours had the team not been in such poor shape following the Washington game, from the injuries of which the men had hardly recovered—and the Oregon hoodoo. As it was, the game was about as even as a football game could be. Oregon was within striking distance of our goal about as often as we were near theirs. Our team would have a great advantage in one quarter only to have the worst of it in the next.

But the greatest game of all was the Thanksgiving battle with Whitman at Walla Walla. Doped as hopeless losers and with a score for the first half of 6 to 0 against them, the Idaho team came back in the last period and won the game, 13 to 6. The Idaho fighting spirit and the training of "Pink" Griffith did it. In those two touchdowns, Idaho jumped from the bottom to the second place in the conference race.

Only two members of this team will be lost by graduation this year—Enoch and Proctor Perkins. While they will be greatly missed, there are men to take their places, and there is no reason now apparent why we should not have to fight it out with Washington for first place next fall.

For next season, O. A. C. has been added to the Idaho schedule, to take the place of Washington. O. A. C. is usually well represented in football, and this game will probably not be the easiest of the series. However, students are already beginning to wonder if it will not be necessary to play a post-season game with Washington to settle the first place.

The scores of 1912:

Idaho	13	W. S. C.....	0
Idaho	0	W. U. U. W.....	24
Idaho	0	U. O.....	3
Idaho	13	Whitman College.....	6

Coach J. G. Griffith, "Pink" for short.

A form of energy not described in Gurney's courses, but which keeps Idaho's handful of athletes in the conference running. Originator of "Idaho Fights" and chief exponent of the "Come Back" theory. For several weeks each fall he is the most popular man at Idaho and holds his own for the rest of the year without difficulty. He believes in clean athletics and practices what he believes.

Graduate Manager G. L. Larson.

Sometimes called "Gus" by his friends, who include everyone connected with the University. In ancient history he is famous for winning his "I" in three branches. Since he is no longer eligible to play he now devotes himself to putting Idaho's athletics on a sound financial basis. In his capacity of Graduate Manager he has made the credit of Idaho athletics good, besides giving us the best schedule going.

Captain Procter K. Perkins.

He has played every position in the line, and played them all well. "Proc" has a habit of getting the maximum amount of work out of a team and, at the same time, keeping a good spirit among the men. He has shown unusual qualities as a leader. This is his last season and he will be greatly missed when the men line up next fall.

Student Mgr. C. G. Paulsen, an able manager.

Managing the football team is not usually considered the best way of becoming popular with the players, but Paulsen has got the system and gets along with everybody without slighting his duties in the least.

Enoch Perkins.

"Nuck" played quarter for Idaho four years, and was one of the most feared men in the conference. Was picked by some for All-Northwest quarter. He shows good judgment in directing a team, and is a strong defensive player. In open-field running he is classed with the best in the conference.

Clarence Favre, Captain-Elect for 1913.

He claims thirteen is his lucky number, and plans to be captain of a winning team in that year. He will be the only man on the team who has played three years when the players report for practice next fall. Favre is a star guard and in that position has met all the guards in the Northwest, getting more than his share of the honors. He has the enviable record of having never been taken out of a college game. His fighting spirit will make him a most successful leader for the 1913 team.

Albert Knutson.

Although not a heavy man he will pass with the best of the conference halfbacks when it comes to hitting the line hard. "Knut" has but one formula for football, which is "Hit 'em low and hard." He has been a regular halfback for two years.

C. H. Buffington, Tackle.

"Buff" did so well in '11 that he came back for more last fall. He was missed very much when forced by other work to give up football. He is a big man and fast, a sure tackler, and can be counted on for gains in "tackle back."

H. Banks Kinnison, Guard.

A big man, who has few equals in his position. He is also one of the best punters in the Northwest. Banks was named for All-Northwest guard, and received strong support in the election of captain for next season. He will be one of Idaho's best in 1913.

John Phillips, Tackle.

"Buck" is a heavy man, with lots of strength. He plays his position well, being a valuable man on both offense and defense. He is also one of the best punters in the Northwest. "Buck" is only a Sophomore and will wear the red Jersey for a couple of years more.

Virgil Samms, End.

"Sammy" is one of the hardest tacklers on the team. He is strong on breaking interference and getting down under punts. With him on the receiving end, the forward pass always looks good for a big gain.

Robert O. Burns, a Lightning Fast Halfback.

He is also a good punter and drop-kicker, and one of the best men on the team at making forward passes. "Bobby" has played for Idaho two years and has two more years on the team.

Stanley Brown, Fullback.

He is only a Freshman, but one of the best backfield men in the conference. A great line plunger and hard worker. He will be much heard of in the next three years.

Gilbert McCormick, Tackle.

He made the team on the jump and was one of the hardest workers on the squad. "Mac" is not only a big, fast tackle, but also can be used to punt or make forward passes. He has three more years with the team.

James Lockhart, Quarterback.

The fastest man on the squad. Jim is a good field general, a sure tackler, a drop-kicker and one of the best in open-field running. He will be a valuable pilot for the team next season.

Jack Johnson, End.

He is the last word when it comes to playing end. He has a world of speed and knows the game from every angle. With Johnson on one end and Leuschel on the other, there aren't many plays going around Idaho's line.

Carl Shipkey, End.

A hard worker, who can stand plenty of hard knocks. He has played against some of the roughest men in the conference and always seems to have the best of it.

Seth Freer, Substitute Halfback.

Freer was called upon several times last fall and always filled a big hole when he went into the lineup. Last fall was his first season here, and he stands a good chance for the next three years.

William Gowan, Substitute Quarter.

"Bill" can always be depended upon to fill the quarter job in a pinch. He is a cool player and strong on defense. He has three years more in which to make the team.

Howard Elliot, Substitute Guard.

"Porkey" is one of the heavy men on the squad, and he handles himself well. He is a freshman and will make his "I" before he graduates.

Fay Robinson, "Skinny," Substitute Halfback.

Although last year was his first season out, he showed enough stuff to be taken to Walla Walla. He has a chance at it again next year.

Otto Leuschel, End.

"Dutch" played his first college ball this year. He is big and fast. In breaking up interference and handling the forward pass he has few equals

Arthur Jardine, Substitute End.

Idaho had plenty of ends last fall, otherwise Jardine would have made his "I". He is big and fast and has a way of getting under forward passes and punts that makes him a valuable man on the team. He is also strong at running interference. He has three more years at Idaho.

Basketball

The basketball season of 1912-13 was not one of the best for Idaho. We had a team made up largely of new men. The team worked hard and consistently and much credit is due them for the effort they put forth. Probably the greatest achievement of the season was the breaking of the "Oregon Hoodoo" when we beat Oregon, 16 to 11.

Financially, the season was a success, for the first time in several years. This is due to the adoption by Manager Larsen of the season-ticket plan.

Those who won the basketball "I" this season are Harry Soulen, Allan Kinnison, R. Mitchell, Jim Keane, C. Ankorn, Gail McNett and A. Jardine.

Baseball

As Idaho did not play conference baseball last spring, Coach "Pink" Griffith organized two five-team leagues in the school. One of these was between class and faculty teams and the other between fraternity clubs.

Both leagues were a success. In each league there were some evenly matched teams and some class games were played. The attendance was better than that of the usual conference games and considerable spirit was manifested.

The Sophomores won the class championship, but were closely pressed by the Freshmen. In the fraternity league Kappa Sigma won the cup. Theta Mu Epsilon, Zeta Delta and the non-frat teams tied for second place. Phi Delta Theta played one game and forfeited the remaining games of its schedule.

The standing of the clubs was as follows:

INTER-CLASS LEAGUE

	Won	Lost	Per Ct.
Sophomores	4	0	1000
Freshmen	3	1	750
Seniors	2	2	500
Juniors	1	3	250
Faculty	0	4	000

FRATERNITY LEAGUE

	Won	Lost	Per Ct.
Kappa Sigma	4	0	1000
Theta Mu Epsilon	2	2	500
Non-Fraternity	2	2	500
Zeta Delta	2	2	500
Phi Delta Theta	0	4	000

Idaho will again play conference baseball this spring, a triangular league with Whitman and W. S. C. having been formed. The winner of this league will meet the winner of a similar league of the three conference colleges on the Coast.

The two leagues last year brought out much good material that would never have been discovered under ordinary conditions and Coach Griffith will begin the season with the most material in the baseball history of Idaho.

Track Season, 1912

Track work was the only intercollegiate sport attempted last spring, the students having decided to withdraw from the conference baseball league. This gave Track Coach Van der Veer a larger squad with which to work and he succeeded in putting out a well-balanced team, although he had to fill vacancies left by Montgomery, Strohecker and Ream of the '11 team.

To offset this loss, Phillips in the weights, Scott and Harris in the jumps, Hunter and Watts in the hurdles and Redeker in the distances, developed into consistent point winners.

The only meet held at Moscow was lost to Whitman by a score of 74 to 66. The meet was one of the most exciting held at Idaho in several years. Only in the last lap of the relay race did Whitman cinch the meet. The two-mile event won by Redeker in this meet will long be remembered. In this meet Phillips set a new Idaho javelin record of 157 feet 11½ inches, and broke the record in the hammer throw by hurling the weight 125 feet 7 inches. Redeker established a new Idaho record in the two-mile run, doing the distance in 10 minutes 30.4 seconds.

Two weeks later, at Pullman, the Idaho team was defeated by a score of 82 to 58. This meet was held in a driving rain and on a slippery field; but Idaho did not attribute her defeat to that, as Pullman had one of the best teams in the conference in 1912. In this meet Phillips again starred, being the individual point-winner of the day.

In the conference meet at Portland on the following Saturday, Idaho made a poor showing, owing largely to injuries and her lack of individual stars. We finished with five points.

Prospects for a good team this year are not exceedingly bright; but with a good spirit among the men and the assistance of "Heck" Edmundson, Idaho's great distance runner, in the coaching department, we should beat last year's showing. We will have Phillips for the weights, Scott for the high jump, and Harris for the broad jump. Sprinters, hurdlers and distance men will be developed from the new men and the minor point-winners of last year. Bonnie Watts, elected captain of the squad for this year, did not return to college, and will be missed in the hurdles.

Interscholastic Track Meet

The inter-scholastic track meet last spring was the most successful that has been had in the three years the event has been held at Idaho. Boise won first place, with 47 points; while Coeur d'Alene, the winner of the year before, was a close second, with 42 points. Carley, of Boise, was the individual point-winner, making 20 points in the meet.

Although the meet was held under unfavorable weather conditions, ten Idaho inter-scholastic records were broken. Each year the committee is bringing more men from the southern part of the state and this year will probably see a more successful inter-scholastic meet than ever before.

Alumni Association

Since the opening of the University in 1892 there has been a rapid and remarkably consistent increase in enrollment. The first graduating class consisted of two men and two women. In the senior class which will graduate in the spring of 1912-13, there are forty-three men and fourteen women—the largest graduating class in the history of the institution. As their number increases the alumni are becoming more and more a source of support to the University throughout the state. As a means of keeping the alumni in closer touch with each other and with the University, the founding of an alumni magazine is being planned by a committee appointed by the president of the association at its last meeting. The officers of the Alumni Association for the present year are:

Y. M. C. A.

It is a significant fact that, among the many student organizations that have flourished at the University, the Y. M. C. A. has had a continuous existence ever since its formation in 1895. Other clubs and societies have had prominence and have fulfilled their particular purpose for longer or shorter periods and have then disbanded because of lack of support, but the Y. M. C. A. has always had a few staunch supporters who have kept the organization intact. At the weekly meetings of this association special attention is given to the discussion of student problems. Besides the regular weekly meetings of the Y. M. C. A., there are Bible and Mission Study classes carried on under its direction. This organization has performed a valuable service during the past two years in finding board and lodging for new men at the beginning of the year and in assisting them, through its employment bureau, in securing work.

English Club

The English Club was first organized in 1906. Although it has never had a close organization, it claims as members all students in the English department of the University. The organization works in conjunction with the drama courses that are given by the English department and has as its purpose the stimulation of interest in the acted drama. Under its direction several Shakespearean plays and other more modern dramas are presented every year. The try-out system of selecting casts was first introduced at the University by the English Club and has been found very satisfactory in that it gives to every student so desiring an opportunity to reveal his talent.

The Associated Foresters

The membership in this organization is extended to all forestry students of the University. At its meetings current literature on forestry and lumbering is reviewed and quite frequently lectures by Forest Service officials are given.

Chemistry Journal Olub

This is an informal organization of students and instructors interested in Chemistry. The object of the club is to discuss current chemical literature and matters of general chemical interest. Although all students in Chemistry are welcome to take an active part in the affairs of the organization, the work is required of only Junior and Senior chemical engineers. This club has replaced the "Chemistry Club" which was organized in 1910.

De Smet Club

The De Smet Club, named in honor of the pioneer Indian missionary, is an organization of the Catholic members of the University. Its monthly meetings are of a social character. The club was formed in 1911 and now has a membership of more than forty. The officers for the year are:

President Katherine Keane
Secretary-Treasurer Clarence Favre

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

Bench and Bar Association

The Bench and Bar Association took its place among the organizations at the University in the early part of the second semester of the current year. All regularly enrolled law students of the University are eligible to membership. The purpose of the organization is to unite the students in the law department in all matters of common interest and to draw them into closer social relations with each other. The first annual "Law School Bust" was given this year under the auspices of this organization. The famous "Lawyers' Edition" of the University Argonaut is published under the direction of the Bench and Bar Association.

The officers of the association are:

Chief Justice.....	R. D. Leeper, '13
Associate Justice.....	J. M. Boyle
Clerk.....	Arthur L. Heer

Coeur d'Alene Club

This organization was formed in the early part of 1912 for the primary purpose of doing some effective "boosting" for the University. All Coeur d'Alene students are members. Meetings, which are of both a social and business character, are held at regular intervals throughout the year. The officers are:

President.....P. C. Mitchell
Secretary-Treasurer.....Edith Smith

Agricultural Club

The Agricultural Club of the University of Idaho was organized for the purpose of promoting interest in agriculture and of creating a fraternal feeling among the students in that department. One of the distinctive features of the club is the publication of an agricultural magazine known as "Idaho Country Life." By means of this paper journalism is fostered among the students and agricultural information disseminated throughout the state. The Agricultural Club is of further aid to the students in securing eminent lecturers to address its meetings, and again in that it offers to the student an opportunity to exchange ideas on matters of common interest.

Twin Falls Club

This organization extends its membership to all students from Twin Falls and the adjacent territory. It was formed in the first semester of 1911-1912 with sixteen members. The large increase in membership of the club this year is convincing evidence of the sincerity of the organizers in adopting the motto, "Boost—Don't Roost."

OFFICERS

President.....Claude Micklewait
Vice-President.....Clyde Musgrave
Secretary-Treasurer.....Robert Leth

Home Economics Club

The Home Economics Club was organized with about fifty members on December 3, 1912. The date of organization was the birthday of Ellen Richard, the founder of the National Women's Home Economics Association, in whose honor the local club was formed. Membership in the club is extended to all women in the University who desire to join. The purpose of the organization is to familiarize its members with the work of the American women—their duties and their opportunities. The club is affiliated with the State Women's Home Economics Association. Its officers for the present year are:

PresidentKathryn Smith
Secretary-TreasurerDorothy Taylor

The Associated Miners

The Associated Miners is an organization of which all students in the mining department are members. It was first organized in 1899. The object of the association is to promote the interests of the mining department of the University and to give publicity to its work. Addresses are frequently given by visiting mining men and alumni of the University. The organization is affiliated with the American Institute of Mining Engineers. Its officers for the present year are:

President.....	Hallard Foester

String Quintet

Under the direction of Professor Collens the University Orchestra and the string quintet have been a great credit to the music department of the University during the past few years. Much credit is due these organizations for the success of the several musical entertainments which are given annually at the University. The membership of the quintet is:

Violins

Ruth Motie
Howard Holaday
Edwina Yearian
Thomas Doyle

Raymond Gillespie

Mandolin Quartet

Professor Tull has been missed in the Mandolin Club this year, and the organization has not been as active as it was under his leadership. The club had five members last year; this year it has four. They are:

First Mandolin.....	Enoch Perkins
Second Mandolin.....	R. J. Adams
Guitar.....	C. E. Watts
'Cello.....	Raymond Gillespie

Military Department

The military department, though perhaps not the most popular in the University, is at least the most widely known throughout the student body. Its work is required of all male students in the Freshman and Sophomore classes. Perhaps the most pleasurable feature of the military work is the annual encampment which is held usually in April. Lewiston is an old camping ground of the battalion. Last year the week was spent at Coeur d'Alene.

Debate

Idaho's record in forensics is indeed an envious one—eight victories out of the last nine debates. Three of these were from Whitman College, four from Pacific University and one from Gonzaga University. Much credit for this success is due to the careful training of the teams by Professor Hulme, who has directed this branch of student activities ever since he came to the University in 1902. During this time the University has claimed more victories in debate than in any other branch of inter-collegiate contests.

Many of Idaho's debaters this year have been Freshmen, who will remain at the University for three more years. With this body of experienced men at her service the University's debate prospects for the next few years appear exceptionally bright.

We who are here on the Campus now cannot fully appreciate the force and significance of traditions—those connecting links between past and present. It is when we have passed beyond the pale of our Alma Mater that their deeper significance and meaning come to us with added force, and then we fully realize what our college has meant to us. When the old traditions waft back memories of bygone times, then the spirit once so evident at such times as Campus Day, the night of the Pullman Rally, Memorial Day, or the Seventeenth of March, flares up again, and the alumnus is once more akin to the Freshman—the past is once more linked to the present by the magic bonds of traditions.

Junior Class Play

Following the example set by the class of 1912, there has arisen a custom which bids fair to become a settled tradition for the future—the presentation of a class play each year by the Juniors as a means of financial aid for the annual. Last year the class of '13 gave a most successful performance and a rare treat in the opera, "The Pirates of Penzance," while the class of '14 is even now working on a play to be presented in the new auditorium some time in the near future.

The Pullman Rally

The first real evidence of the old Idaho spirit breaks forth in grand bursts of enthusiasm and wild excitement on the night before the Pullman game, and no other rally of the year can equal it. For this night, too, the Freshmen have put forth their greatest efforts in an attempt to build a bigger bonfire than that of any preceding class. And it is within the bright glare of this monstrous bonfire that the rally begins. As the rushing flames soar upward to engulf the W. S. C. effigy on top, spirited selections by the University band, and thrilling football speeches from coaches and players incite everyone's enthusiasm to bursting-point. The climax is reached with a torch-light procession and night-shirt parade around the dying fire and then through the streets of Moscow.

Seventeenth of March

Hoping to duplicate the Sophomore victory of last year, the Sophomores this year again insisted on a flag-pole rush, but with very different consequences. Their carefully laid plans counted for naught by the superior numbers of the Freshmen, and at the end of twenty minutes the orange was proudly floating from the pole. The fight was one of the best ever seen on the campus, being attended with much more spirit and far less brutality than any preceding one.

Campus Day

The youngest of Idaho's traditions—Campus Day—was celebrated with marked success on May 31st, last year. Dean French, the originator of the idea, and Miss Wold aided materially in the success of the undertaking. From 10 a. m. until 9 p. m., the campus was given over to the students and friends of the University. Games, processions and class rites were observed. The date of this celebration is not fixed, but varies with the weather, usually coming quite late in the spring.

The following was the program for our Third Annual Campus Day:

- 10:00 a. m.—Cornet solos from the tower of the Administration Building, Professor Carey.
- 10:15 a. m.—Pageant of the University of Idaho. Procession headed by the May Queen, followed by representatives of each department of the University.
- 10:45 a. m.—Dances in costume by the girls of the University, followed by the winding of the May-pole.
- 11:15 a. m.—Addresses by President MacLean, Dean French and representatives from each of the classes.
- 12:15 p. m.—Lunch on the Campus.
- 1:45 p. m.—Concert by Cadet Band.
- 2:45 p. m.—Concert by Orchestra and Glee Clubs, Balcony of Ridenbaugh Hall.
- 7:30 p. m.—Production of Shakespeare's "As You Like It" by English Club, on the Campus.

Memorial Day

In memory of the two students who lost their lives in the Spanish-American War, Memorial Day exercises are held each year at the monument on the Campus. On this day the battalion appears in uniform and the cannon is fired from the top of the hill. Last year Professor McCaffery delivered the memorial address before a large assembly of students and townspeople.

The Old Guard

After the thirty-seven of the thirty-nine men who left the University for the war returned, they came to be called the Old Guard. They were asked to be present at battalion reviews and government inspection, and to judge competitive drills between cadet companies. But this custom soon developed into a burlesque performance in which ex-members of the battalion participated, appearing in grotesque costumes of all sorts and colors. The remarkable calmness and precision with which they go through the drill, fitted out in their battered array of swords, tin-horns, cans, knives, sticks, plasters and crutches, is indeed an amusing spectacle to everyone—but the government inspector. This year the spirit of the “Old Guard” was not equal to the inclemency of Moscow weather, and inspection day was rendered tame by the lack of its usual attraction—the “Old Guard”—who are now planning to appear on Campus Day.

Publications

The Gem of the Mountains.

To the Junior Class each year is given the responsibility of issuing the college annual. Into this volume, a copy of which is sent to each high school in the state, an attempt is made to gather all material relative to the college year—a true and brief glimpse into all phases of college life.

The University Argonaut.

The Argonaut is the official student publication of the University, the price of which is included in the regular registration fee paid at the beginning of each semester. It contains only such news as directly concerns the University and is sent to every high school in the state. Thus it serves the double purpose of keeping the eyes of a number of those who may become students here on the University, and of keeping our alumni in touch with their Alma Mater.

The Idaho Country Life.

The Idaho Country Life is a monthly magazine published by the Agricultural Club of the Agricultural College, contributions to which are not limited to students and professors, but practical men all over the state and country often contribute valuable articles. This magazine has already, with only six years' publication, besides its regular subscribers, several hundred high school pupils and rural school libraries. The aim of this publication is to keep its readers in touch with the results of the investigations of the Experiment Stations all over the state, as well as to present the advanced agricultural ideas of specialists.

The Quill.

The Quill is a literary magazine published by the English Club of the University. It has no regular time of appearance, but is published whenever there is a sufficient amount of material worthy to call for an edition. Its aim is to uncover and develop latent talent and ability among the students of the University.

COUNTRY LIFE

Literary

Into this night which we men have called Day,
Into this Death, which we know as the Life,
Pierces a glimmering, nebulous ray,
Penetrates darkness, with succuba rife.

High in the nave where the worshippers kneel,
Prostrate 'fore altars with candles aflame,
A dim, ruby glow which the arches conceal—
A ghost of dead fires—kindled once In His Name.

Blind, though we are, as we grope through the gloom,
Light is before us, and God is above.
Into this world, with its aspect of doom
Penetrates Goodness, and Goodness is Love.

The Library

Its Social Advantages

To appreciate the social advantages of our library at Idaho, one should stroll in during the afternoon. Morning sessions are perhaps very stimulating, but classes are bound to interfere more or less, and, as a whole, the morning lacks the whole-heartedness and abandon of the afternoon.

Thus, if one is wise, a seat facing the main entrance is chosen in the rear of the room. Facing-the-entrance seats are at a premium, and should always be appreciated. To realize the advantage gained, one has only to contemplate the broader view, the better opportunity to see and to be seen. From this point of vantage one can watch at ease the development of the social instinct found alike on the campus and in the library.

This instinct seems more dominate in the gentle sex; at least, it shows more varied developments. From the girl who slyly pinches her cheeks while she watches the entrance, to the humming-bird girl fluttering from table to table, the instinct is apparent. With them, one watches the young lady who scans half a dozen magazines, taking each one separately to and from the farthest seat back, while she tries to look gracefully unconscious of the fact that she has vulgarly "stubbed her toe." The girl who doesn't see the man until he pulls up his chair beside her is generally seated in the middle of the room, and has never yet been known to sit behind a pillar.

It would indeed be a brave stranger who could, without embarrassment or flush, walk the entire length of our library. For such a feat a hardened politician would be needed. To a stranger the pew system of seating would seem to be in vogue. He, doubtless, could not see that the pews are constantly changing; that a girl seated at a table forms a nucleus around which kindred spirits soon gather. He might be able to surmise, from the surprised, almost accusing, glances of previous occupants, that a girl occasionally stumbles into the wrong pew.

As a matter of fact, there are men who don't appreciate the social advantages of a library. Such a one was once heard dubbing it a "Date Emporium." He was, of course, a disgruntled sort of fellow—the kind who never lends his notes. Of course, no one denies that occasionally such things are arranged in the library, but who would have it otherwise?

An account of library advantages would be incomplete without mention of its value in the get-rich-quick method of studying. Five minutes in the library before the recitation bell rings have often been invaluable toward making a good bluff. Someone kinder and more generous than the unappreciative man above is almost sure to have studied the lesson.

As a general rule, the apportionment is one man to a table. However, occasions have been known when the situation was reversed, and the girl's sweet smile was continuous in its general distribution. Such a girl one recognizes at once as the sort of girl who cares for that kind of things; the sort of girl who makes a man lose half of his next dance in order to write his name for her seventeenth extra.

There is a curious sheep-like attitude in the movements of a social crowd in the library, whether watching the stranger enter, or listening to the book fall in the stacks. A librarian passing an especially happy table calls to mind the picture of a white-frosted little girl, sticky hands clasped behind her, and juicy lips pouting, gazing with innocent blue eyes and a wonderfully non-chalant manner at her mother in the doorway.

The views from the library windows aid in its social attractiveness. On windy, rainy days the campus is a joy forever; that is, from a point of vantage. On sunny afternoons the hazy blue mountains in the distance are conducive to dreams, and, looking around our library, one can watch many living in the future—hearing, while the stolid, middle-aged chaperon sleeps under a tree, the sparkling stream gurgling over the moss-covered rocks, and the soft wind whispering in the trees, while the shadows lengthen and deepen on some glorious golden Sunday afternoon.

G. C., '15.

Getting Ready for the Dance

The fun begins in the afternoon. When there are sixteen girls to dress at the same time in space to accommodate twelve, complications arise, unless one or two are prudent enough to begin early—so far early in advance of the appointed day bath lists are filled and there flourishes the motto: "To the provident belongeth the spoils." At 3:30 the rush is on. Perhaps it is too long before dinner for the water in the tanks to be hot. Then any chance caller needs to be blessed with edifying composure or her sense of humor will be her undoing. She will find it hard to tear her fascinated gaze from the game of "hide and seek" that each girl plays as she dodges up the stairs with steaming pan or kettle.

The gowns must be pressed now, too. The demand for the iron is insistent on the part of all.

"Who has the iron after you, Peg?"

"I have"—this from a vision in boudoir cap and flowing kimono, her face rosy from a recent application of soap and water.

"Then can I have it after you?"

"No; Jack has it."

"Oh, dear!" And the disconsolate one retires to shake out the folds of a soft creation in pink and wonder if a pressing is necessary after all.

But after the early dinner, the real excitement begins. Then the girls scatter to their rooms, laughing and chattering with high-pitched voices. Garments are thrown hither and thither in a mad search for girdle or gloves put away in some nook after the last dance. Many a poor brain is cudged to locate this thing and that. The babel increases, girls scamper through the halls on one errand and another.

Even after the mysteries of the toilet are revealed, the shuttle of conversation travels back and forth from room to room. Here Jo speculates while she brushes her hair or gives a final polish to her nails.

"I wonder if Dan will be there. I hope he asks me for the 'Wedding of the Roses;' I love to waltz with him."

"Well, he won't ask me," retorts her roommate, as she slings aside the contents of a drawer in a vain attempt to locate a hair band. "Where is that velvet? I'm sure I put it in here."

Mary, whose hair is her chief concern, wants a psyche. She sympathizes with Bob, who finds her gloves not so immaculate as she had thought. Someone lends a piece of art gum and a vigorous cleaning ensues.

Muffled explanations, from the depths of a closet, tell another tale of woe. A slipper is lost. Someone else cannot find the "lace butterfly that Miss Buckley just made me yesterday."

The atmosphere clears a little, as each girl becomes engrossed in the dressing of her hair or the fitting of a new dress. The low hum of voices is broken occasionally by an urgent request or a plaintive protest at the elusiveness of some much-desired article.

The telephone rings.

"Telephone, Mary!" sings a voice from the foot of the stairs.

She drops her brush on a trunk as she flies to answer. When she returns she explains that it "was only Jim wanting to know if I could be ready at eight;" and she searches the dresser diligently for the brush lying just behind her.

At last the flurry is over. Slippers and bags have been collected. Scarfs are discovered in their hiding-places and adjusted to keep the coiffure unruffled. When the men arrive the girls trip down. Filmy draperies float from neck and shoulders; they are drawing on the long gloves. The disordered rooms, the mad rush of adornment, are forgotten. Dainty gowns, bright faces, and low, modulated voices lend to the attraction of youth and high spirits.

—D. T. '15.

The Unfortunate

Is there a demon who follows some people through life, who is with him in his brightest moments, and in his saddest ones, who takes possession of him at the time of his birth and is with him till his death?

There are many different kinds of demons; there are frivolous ones who do pranks out of mischievousness, and there are evil ones whose every act is malevolent. Perhaps there are good little demons, too, or sprites who lead their charges by silken strings along happy pathways. But this story does not deal with the joyous elves—rather of the devilish ones. I think you will agree with me that Jim Goodwin was followed about by some demon, whether of mischievous or evil intent we cannot say; but, at any rate, he taunted Jim and was ever ready to turn the natural into the ridiculous. Jim, generally called "Jimsy," was a good-looking fellow and a student of Boswan College. His demon did not deal fairly with him, and on this hinges the story.

The first time the boys noticed any peculiarity in Jim's makeup was at dinner one day at the frat house. The Boswan football boys had played their strongest rival's team that day at the strongest rival's town. Results of the game did not come in till dinner time, when the excitement was intense. The boys were seated at the table when the telegram came, telling of Boswan's victory. All of them jumped up and whooped; all—yes, all but Jim, who fell forward onto the table, his forehead hitting the edge of his soup plate, which splashed the contents over his face. As far as the boys knew, Jim had been in perfect health, so the reason of his fainting was unknown. It might be that he had bet heavily against Boswan; but, no, that wasn't like Jim. When he had come to, the boys began plying him with questions.

"I'll tell you all about it, fellows," he said. "It's a weakness of mine. Once, when I was a kid, at a baseball game, during the moment of greatest excitement a foul had been struck; when it was coming down I paid no attention—would now that I had, for it landed on my head. It bowled me over, and ever since then in the moment of greatest excitement I have fallen over in a faint. It doesn't generally last long, but it's mighty disagreeable."

The fellows considered it a joke and perhaps were thinking what a good one to tell on old "Jimsy," but it was a serious affair to Jim and he made the boys promise they wouldn't tell his failing to anyone. He said it was hard enough to bear as it was, without his being pointed out as a freak.

The following summer vacation Jim spent, as college boys are wont, in work. His place of work was in a village, and he had enough spare time to get acquainted with the girls, who, as most village girls are apt to do, held college men in high esteem. He, therefore, found it no difficult task to step over the heads of waiting beaux and into first place at the side of the belle of the village.

One Sunday afternoon they were out walking when they saw, over a block away, down the narrow street, a runaway team coming in their direction.

Two little toddlers were playing in the road, unaware of any danger. Jim saw, and jumped into the street, caught a child in each arm, took one step and then—fell down, all three on their faces, the children screaming at the tops of their voices; but Jim's face was white and drawn and his eyes glassy. Fortunately for the three, the horses had turned the side street just above.

Jim woke up to find himself and a lady holding two little children very tight to her, in a circle of bystanders. He heard snickers from the crowd, and things that sounded like "He was more scared than the kids," and "That's Happy Hooligan in real life for you."

The distance to the fair one's home was too short for full explanations, even if she had stopped talking long enough to give him the chance. She finished her volley of words with "I hate notoriety, and this will all be written up in the papers." And, sure enough, it was written up in the morning paper and copied word for word in the evening paper, and written up in a manner not very complimentary to Jim. The village evidently thought college educations were lacking along some of the more essential lines.

That ended the girl question for Jim that summer.

The next year at college was his Senior. The boys wondered what was the matter with him; he never spoke to a girl unless it was absolutely necessary, and he never went to festivities where he would be likely to meet a girl. Naturally, then, his position attracted much attention among the coeds.

Next to him in German class sat a little Junior girl. She was just the same as all girls to him; that is, the disliked feminine who was to be avoided. But this particular maiden belonged to a class that was hard to avoid. Not that she thrust herself in his way; no, far from that. She was just a helpless little girl, who, if she didn't forget her book (in which case, what could he do but offer his for double use?), she broke her pencil which must be sharpened, or she couldn't unscrew the top from her fountain pen, or, if she could, it probably went dry and she must borrow a pencil from him. All through the winter these daily class-room performances continued, and it wasn't till spring that he noticed what a very pretty little girl this Junior was. After that, he noticed more things. She was quite bright and always came to class a little early; so did he, and the hard translations were somewhat simplified before class. One sunshiny afternoon he was strolling through shady paths when he passed a bench where the Junior girl sat, alone, studying. She was studying German. He sat down, and together they prepared it. Other afternoons the same thing happened, till pretty soon the fellows said "Jimsy" had a "case." Jim knew he had a "case," and he thought he was in love. One evening on his way to the Junior girl's house he made up his mind to propose. He was excited all evening and when it came to the proposal he afterwards couldn't remember what he had said. He took a step nearer her, frantically reached out his hands to catch hold of something, and fell over. The something he had caught hold of was her hair. When he came to and saw what he was clutching in his hand, he thought he must have scalped her, but there was no pain shown on the Junior's face, as her hands were at her head, jabbing in a pin here and something there—no pain—just mortification and anger which he read there. At her request, he left the house immediately. The next day a bundle of letters came and a few books he had given her; added to this was an icy note.

And this was the way it all ended. She was so pretty, and he had cared so much! To be always making a fool of one's self might grow monotonous—to him it became a curse. He was not dealt with fairly. He would keep on living, because it was cowardly to take one's life; but he could see only gloom ahead.

At that time he had sworn it would be his last attempt at love, and it was the last but one. After he left college, he became fairly successful in business. He was in a new country and, starting out on a small scale, had secured the right property, which netted him good profits. The best way to forget one's grievances is to work. Jim had proved this and at the end of five years we find that his life had not led along those darkened paths which he foresaw at the time of his graduation. He was well liked socially, and he had forgotten his aversion to womenkind to the extent that he was very much in love with one. He proposed to her and nothing happened, barring that she accepted. If he had any doubts in his mind that he had not fully outgrown his old weakness, they were gone now. Wasn't this the greatest event in his life, the time when he asked this girl he truly loved to be his wife? For, looking back now, he saw that the others had been just kids' affairs.

During the days of his engagement, his happiness, however, was not unclouded. It weighed on his mind that he had not told her of his past misfortunes, and yet he dreaded to unlock that part of his life to anyone, even to her. Again and again he resolved to tell her, and again and again he put it off till another time—that convenient other time—until it seemed to him that if he waited till after his marriage it could be told more easily then.

The great day dawned. Jim woke up that morning feeling unusually happy, exultant. Just before the ceremony he felt such a strange excitement that he ran back to his room to get a brandy and soda.

The church had but one door, so the bridal party must needs meet in the vestibule and march up the center aisle. Jim took hold of his best man's arm, and, as the organist changed from the Nocturne into the Wedding March, the couple started up the aisle. A few steps and Jim began walking unsteadily; the best man laid it to nervousness, but still, since he was smaller than Jim, he could not make him walk straight. The farther up the aisle they went the more the couple swayed, till, up near the front, Jim bumped against every other seat, the best man clutching him and steadying him the best he could when he lurched in the other direction. The fact that the bride and her bridesmaids were passing was unnoticed, so absorbed were the people in the antics of the groom. At the front of the church he slipped out of the wild hold of his best man and sprawled into the chancel on his head, going off into a faint. The bride gave a little cry and fell into her father's arms. There was much hushed excitement in the church. The minister and the best man carried out poor "Jimsy;" they noticed on him the odor of brandy, and that was his undoing. People declared he was drunk. His bride-to-be would listen to no explanation from him.

Jim sold out his business as quickly as he could and left town. He went west to buy him a ranch and spend the rest of his life in seclusion. Whether his little demon followed him or not, I do not know, as that was the last I heard of Jim the Unfortunate.

When swallows fly
On wistful wings,
And the rose-flushed sky
The darkness brings,—
Sing, shadowy pines,
Of the sail-winged sea,
And sing, O day,
Thy memory.

When the salt sea tide
Returns again,
O'er reaches wide,
With its sad refrain,
Sing wailing tern,
The day forget,
To dreams return,
Leave old regret.

When ways to wander
Allure no more,
Stay wind to ponder
Beside my door,—
As some sea-shell
Sings of the sea
With its deep swell,
Sing thou to me.

When twilight falls,
And from afar
A lone thrush calls
The first pale star,—
Sing wind of the shadows,
Sing wraith of the rain,
In the quiet meadows,
To me again.

HEARD IN ROADS AND PAVEMENTS

Dr. Little—Mr. Samms, if you were offered a $25,000 job, building a concrete structure, what is the first thing you would do?

Sammy—I'd take the job.

SOLVED

Question—Why do the leaves turn red in the fall?

Answer—Because they are blushing when they think how green they have been all summer.

Fresh (watching the snow pile up)—When this stuff goes off, it will raise H—.

Larrie—Yes, and Paradise, too.

HEARD IN CRIMINAL LAW CLASS

Duffy (speaking to Professor Wilber)—Suppose that while I am sitting here I should try and see how close I could shoot to you without hitting you, and that I accidentally hit you; what would I be guilty of?

Prof. Wilber—Murder.

P. Perkins—Aw, no; it would be just a misdemeanor.

IN THE SAME CLASS

Harry Mc.—I know that a man knows what he is doing when he is "tanked."

SEEN IN THE MOSCOW BLAT.

"Seymore spent Thanksgiving at his home in Palouse."

"R. O. Burns spent the week end at his home in Lewiston."

The report is that "Beam" is beating his way through college by a skin game.

He claims that it is a hum-drum job at that.

Handsomest girl in college—"Bennie."

Flo could not register for music as it would break into her afternoons.

Said the Engineer
To the Co-ed dear:
"I'm like a ship at sea—
Exams are near,
And much I fear
I shall unlucky be."

"Then," murmured she,
"A shore I'll be.
Come, rest, thy journey o'er."
Then darkness fell,
But all was well,
For the ship had hugged the shore.

HEARD ON THE THREE MILE WALK

"Why did you dance so many dances with her?"

"Why, I only danced one."

"Well, you didn't need to hold her so close."

"I didn't, and, besides, you told me to dance with her."

"Well, I didn't think you would." And the frail boat was navigated safely through the breakers.

"Well, anyway, we did our damn'dest."

Some Facts Concerning the University of Idaho

More than five hundred subjects are offered in the University.
The faculty numbers sixty-six.

The courses are under the direction of men of distinguished scholarship, with degrees from the great universities of the world. Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Columbia, Cornell, Chicago, Wisconsin, California, Stanford, Nebraska, Iowa, Virginia, McGill, Toronto, Goettingen, Berlin, the Sorbonne, Madrid, and other universities are represented on the faculty of the University of Idaho.

The University is the only institution in the state that prepares students for the Rhodes Scholarship examinations. This scholarship offers the successful candidate three years' residence at Oxford University, England, and an income of fifteen hundred dollars a year.

In recognition of the high scholastic standard maintained, the Idaho Legislature has passed an act which entitles University graduates, who have satisfactorily completed their respective courses in Education, to State Teachers' Certificates.

The University of Idaho has the reputation of being one of the most democratic institutions in the United States. A large percentage of its students, by work during the summer or during the college year, pay part or all of their own expenses. There is no discrimination, social or otherwise, against the man or woman who works.

A system of clubs has been organized, so that the student coming from any part of the state will be brought into close touch with other students from his section, association with whom will make the transition from high school to college easy.

The north wing has just been added to the Administration Building and contains, besides eleven splendidly equipped new class-rooms, the large Auditorium, which will be used for assembly and all sorts of musical and dramatic events.

Although the University of Idaho is almost the youngest of the state universities, the high scholarship of its faculty, the honors accorded its alumni in the great universities of the East and Europe, the proved efficiency of its graduates in practical life, its recognition by the Carnegie Foundation as one of the group of thirteen state universities of highest standards, have made it an institution of which the people of the state and the Northwest are justly proud.

The University comprises the following divisions:

- The College of Letters and Sciences.
- The College of Engineering.
- The College of Law.
- The College of Agriculture.
- The Agricultural Experiment Station.
- The Summer Session.

The College of Letters and Sciences offers, besides the customary B.A. and B.S. courses, four-year degree courses in Home Economics and Forestry. Courses in Music, both theoretical and practical, may be counted toward the B.A. and B.S. degrees. Special provision is made for pre-medical and pre-legal students and for those desiring the courses in Education leading to the State Teacher's Certificate. Normal courses are also offered in Physical Education and Music.

The College of Engineering offers four-year courses in Civil, Mining, Electrical, Mechanical and Chemical Engineering, in which the instruction is both thorough and practical.

In its fifth year, the College of Law continues to offer a thoroughly standardized curriculum, based upon the experience of the best law school in the country, embracing broad, cultural training in legal theory, a comparative study of Pacific Coast law and some practical applications of these principles.

The College of Agriculture offers thorough courses in Agricultural Chemistry, Bacteriology, Dairying, Horticulture, Forestry, Irrigation and Drainage, Agronomy, Animal Husbandry, Soils and Veterinary Science.

The Agricultural Experiment Station conducts original investigations in the fields of agricultural science, which are of great value to the state and nation.
