F·O·R·E·W·O·R·D

Q In presenting this, the twentieth Gem of the Mountains, the Staff has endeavored to combine the better features of former year-books and of similar publications from other schools, into a volume that will be worthy of our Alma Mater, The University of Idaho. The purpose has been to portray life on the campus from the viewpoint of every student, giving proper consideration to every interest, to the exclusion or over-emphasis of none.

Q If this volume is worthy, if it is fair to all and to the trust which was placed in the Editor, it has succeeded. Q May each succeeding year-book be better than this, the twentieth volume, the Gem of the Mountains of 1923

To Dr. Alfred G. Upham

President of our Alma Mater, a Faithful Servant of the University, whose earnest efforts have won for him honest admiration among the students as an executive and as a sincere friend, we dedicate this book.

The Varsity Players

THE Varsity Players for the All-Northwest Summer Season of 1922 will present a three-act comedy entitled "Her Money Man." This play has been prepared especially for them and for the Idaho audiences by Director Cushman. The play is set in Nantucket and is as bracing and invigorating as though a breeze from off the sea were actually blowing through it. It is as bright and gay a comedy as could be secured, with its story of young people in pursuit of the almighty dollar and the comic scenes from which they extricate themselves.

A more ambitious itinerary has been planned for this summer than was played last summer with "Her Husband's Wife." A tour of ten weeks is scheduled through the states of Washington, Oregon, Montana, and Idaho. This year the management is linking up with local organizations wherever possible, thereby increasing co-operation more effectively.

Many new faces will be seen in this year's cast. The plan of the Varsity Players is always to get the best person possible to fill each part, making the production as nearly an all-star cast as is possible. The following cast will represent the Varsity Players.

The Misses Carolyn Logan, Esther McRoberts, Lenore Pickerel, and Bethel Collins; and Messrs. Cushman, McLaughlin, Kimmel and Sholes.

Music Department

THE Music Department of the University, since its installation, has come to play a very important part in the affairs of the Student Body. It has grown in popularity and strength until it now has the interest of most of the students. The growth of the Department is due to the demand for music among the students, and because of the excellent work done by us.

Professor Edwin Orlo Bangs, head of the department, is responsible for the rapid growth of this Department, in the last four years. Thru his efforts he has produced the best men's Glee Club that has ever been turned out. Mr. Dickinson, the violinist, has not only been a remarkably good instructor, but has played his way into the hearts of all who have heard him.

The piano department is headed by Mrs. Sharp and Miss Clark. This is Miss Clark's first year at Idaho, coming to us from the Boston Conservatory of Music.

The Idaho Pep Band

THE Pep Band was organized in 1920 by Lynn F. Hersey and Yell King Gipson Stalker. Its purpose was to assist the Yell Leaders at football games. Each year it has gone to Boise with the football team for the annual Armistice Day game, raising the money for the trip by a series of entertainments at home and dances while south. While in the southern part of the state, the band appeared before the high school students in Boise and adjacent towns, teaching the students Idaho songs and yells to be used in the Armistice Day Game.

The Personnel of the band has been kept below the number of fourteen in order to allow the organization freedom from excessive expenses when traveling.

Debate

DEBATE activity in the collegiate year of 1921-22 has been limited somewhat in number of debates. The new policy of using but one question throughout the year has proved satisfactory. It has led to a more intensive study of the different phases of the question, and to a more intelligent and accurate discussion in the debates. The question used this year is: "Resolved, that Congress should enact legislation providing for compulsory arbitration in all labor disputes in public service corporations."

This year is the first in which Idaho has debated an Eastern institution. The debate with the University of Chicago marked a new and broader policy in debate activity. The Inter-Mountain League, consisting of the Universities of Utah, Montana and Idaho, was revived, and promises to be a permanent feature of Idaho forensic activity.

Coach C. W. Chenoweth coached all the teams this year. His commendable efforts to raise the standard of Idaho's debating have resulted in a very high quality of debate work, and an increased interest in this activity.

Chicago Debate

University of Chicago 2      University of Idaho 1

THE University of Idaho met the University of Chicago in debate at Boise on March 31, 1922. Idaho had the Negative of the compulsory arbitration question, and the Idaho team was placed at a disadvantage because of the nation-wide coal strike that was called the night of the debate. This is the first debate Idaho has had with an eastern institution, and the first college debate to be held in Boise.

Jerome Hall and H. M. Shughart were the Chicago debaters. Philip Buck and Walser Greathouse represented Idaho. Governor D. W. Davis presided. Chief Justice Rice and Justice Budge, both of the state supreme court, and Judge F. S. Dietrich of the United States District Court, acted as judges.

H. M. Shughart opened the debate for Chicago. He contended that there was a necessity for some action in the industrial situation. He cited examples of strikes, showing that strikes were costly and destroyed continuous service. He argued that progress had been made in social fields along the lines of compulsory arbitration, and insisted that such legislation could be applied as easily to the industrial field.

Philip Buck, first Idaho speaker, maintained that the Affirmative must have a definite plan of compulsory arbitration before the value of compulsory action could be determined. He pointed out that compulsory arbitration would fail of its purpose because it could not be enforced. In addition, he showed that harmful effects would result from the law if it were enforced.

Jerome Hall, second Affirmative speaker, presented a plan of compulsory arbitration which provided for a National Commission. He maintained that compulsory arbitration was just and necessary, and that it could be enforced. He concluded his speech with a condemnation of the present policy of voluntary action, stating that it had not protected the public, and was the rule of the minority rather than of the majority.

Walser Greathouse, second speaker for Idaho, granted the necessity for some action in the industrial situation. He presented a plan of voluntary action, and showed that it had the support of the present tendency in industry. He further argued that the Negative plan would combine the good will of labor and capital with the intelligence of the public, and would be an adequate protection for the public. He cited examples where compulsory arbitration had been tried, and was supplanted by voluntary arbitration.

The rebuttal arguments were centered around the two plans. The Chicago speakers contended that the Negative plan was inadequate, and the Idaho speakers contended that compulsory arbitration would not prevent strikes, but would have many harmful results.

The decisions of the judges were two for Chicago and one for Idaho.

Inter-Mountain League Debate

Affirmative		Negative
University of Idaho	3	University of Montana	0
University of Utah	2	University of Idaho	1
University of Montana	3	University of Utah	0

THE Intermountain Triangular resulted in a victory for Idaho with four judges deciding in favor of the Gem State debators. The debate between the University of Montana Negative and the University of Idaho Affirmative was held in the University Auditorium. Carl Feldman and Philip Buck were the representatives of the University of Idaho. The judges were Professor Cornelson of Washington State College, Principal Gail of the Moscow high school, and Homer Estes.

The issues of the debate were principally the enforceability of compulsory arbitration and the feasibility of some means of voluntary action. The Negative admitted that a law which is right in principle can be enforced, and the Idaho speakers proved that compulsory arbitration is right in principle, because it is just to labor and capital and protects the public from strikes. The main point of contention was then the feasibility of voluntary action. In rebuttal the Idaho debaters attacked voluntary action successfully and won a unanimous decision.

Errol Hillman and Walser Greathouse were the members of the Negative team that debated the University of Utah at Salt Lake City. The judges were Messrs. Bramel, Wolfe and Casto.

The issues in the debate were similar to those in the home debate. The Utah Affirmative stressed the justice of compulsory arbitration and the necessity for its enactment. The Negative presented a definite plan of voluntary action, and demanded that the Affirmative present a definite plan of compulsory arbitration and a means of enforcement. After considerable deliberation, the judges decided two to one for Utah.

Inter-Scholastic Debate League

The Debate Department has fostered a movement to have a State High School Debate League. The final contest between the winners of Northern and Southern Idaho will be held in May. This is the first year such a League has been tried, and it promises to create greater interest throughout the state in debate work.

Oratorical Contest

The Oratorical Contest is a yearly contest between the Universities of Washington, Oregon, and Idaho. Each college has a competitive try-out, and from this one student is chosen to represent his college. This year Mr. Rex Kimmel class of '23 was chosen to represent our University at Seattle where the contest is to be held. Last year Mr. Ralph Breshears of the class of '21 won the contest for Idaho. Mr. Kenneth Collins of the English Department is coach.

THE best way to gauge the success of an institution is by the results her alumni have accomplished. Idaho has men and women who are prominent in their particular line of endeavor, and who are rapidly giving to the University a name of which undergraduates and Idaho state citizens may well be proud.

A State Alumni Association has been organized and functioning for a number of years, and has been greatly strengthened during the last few years by organization in every town and hamlet of the state, of similar local clubs. The object of the association is to keep its members in touch with events and matters pertaining to the University, to foster a general interest in the welfare and support of the University, and to develop a constructive program looking to a Greater Idaho. Active local alumni clubs are maintained in every important city of the state, whose particular business it is to look after University interests in each community. These clubs are active in procuring new students, in bringing the University to the attention of the people, eliminating prejudices, etc.

The University of Idaho vs. University of Wyoming Armistice Day football game staged this fall at Boise, was handled entirely by the Boise Alumni Association, which expended a great amount of energy toward making the affair an entire success, which it was unanimously agreed it was.

Idaho's graduates have gone out from under the surveillant eyes of her alma mater into all the walks of life. Everywhere we may find them making good, some in business, others in science, and still others in the great teaching profession. In the latter class are many who are fast becoming renowned in educational circles, and include the following: R. L. C. Nichols, '07, director of the Oregon Institute of Technology; Bruce D. Mudgett, '08, assistant professor at Minnesota State University; Alice E. Gipson, '05, Professor of English at Wheaton College, a well known New England women's college, Lawrence Henry Gipson, Professor of History, Wabash College, Crawfordsville, Ind., and Donald David, Assistant Dean of the graduate School of Commerce at Harvard University.

Mr. David, after graduation from the University in 1916, served his state as director of University Extension for several years, and thence went to the graduate school of commerce at Harvard, where he graduated with distinction in 1919. He was retained by that school and is now assistant dean. Another prominent educator who has since left the field is Carol Howe Foster, who after serving as professor of English at Annapolis Naval Academy, entered the diplomatic service of the United States, and is now consul at Vienna, Austria. A curious coincidence, is that Ralph B. Foster, his brother, is now professor of French at the Naval Academy.

Another Idaho Alumnus with an estimable record is Gustus Ludwig Larson, '07, who was with the General Electric Company, and then later served as assistant professor of Mechanical engineering at the University of Idaho, and is now professor of Gas and Steam Engineering at the University of Wisconsin.

Idaho's chemical engineers are ably represented by Dr. J. M. Brahm, Washington, D. C., of the Bureau of Standards; and Arthur Almquist, now doing research work toward a doctorate degree at the University of California.

The story of B. S. Morrow, '06, is representative of the Mining engineers of Idaho. After graduating, he worked for the Hecla Mining company until 1913, when he transferred to the Anaconda Copper Mining company, being assistant in the testing department. He successfully arose to the head of the department, and was placed in charge of the experimental work on flotations, and later foreman and superintendent of the grinding and flotation department. He is now superintendent of concentration of all the plants of the Anaconda company in Montana.

Idaho foresters have made an enviable record, Clarence E. La Favre, who served in the various grades of forestry in the Nevada district is now general inspector of three of the largest forests in Nevada. Another good record is that made by Harry E. Malmsten, who began in the lowest of positions, but is now acting director of the great basin experiment station at Ogden, Utah, which studies grazing and range conditions.

Other good men are Tom Jackson, of the Edward Rutledge Lumber Company at Clarkia, Idaho, where he is serving them as logging engineer, and land agent of the Potlatch Lumber Company, Arlie D. Decker.

Idaho's claim to a great agriculture college is proved by the work of her graduates. L. W. Fluharty, after holding various other positions was appointed a few years ago as director of the Idaho Agriculture Extension Bureau. Another man who has gone into similar work is W. B. Kjosness, who is now state leader of county agriculturists. Among the practical farmers who have achieved noteworthy success, stands Carl Ed. Johnston, of Idaho Falls. He is owner and operator of one of the biggest dairies in the State, and has demonstrated that "College Pays." The first man to graduate from the College of Agriculture was C. P. Mix, one of the largest farmers and business men in north Idaho. Steve Regan has made a name for himself in agronomy, having done excellent work with the U. S. department of agriculture, and is now located with a great seed company of Salt Lake City. J. C. Kinzer, another old Idaho Grad., is one of the foremost cattle judges of the United States, participating in nearly all prominent cattle shows in the country.

In the scientific field of education, Idaho has two prominent men. Louis Nettleton, '17, is doing extraordinary work at the University of Wisconsin, while the other, Louis A. Turley, of the class of '04, is one of the most eminent pathologists of the United States. He did considerable research work before graduation, making several important discoveries. After teaching at several institutions, he entered the employ of the University of Oklahoma as teacher of a number of the medical sciences. He now occupies the position of assistant Dean of the Medical school there.

Among the better known women to receive Idaho diplomas, are Ruth Fauble, '16, head of the domestic science department at Lewiston Normal College. Another woman who has done exceptional work along this same line, is Helga M. Anderson, who has developed the Home Economics department at Sandpoint High School to such a point that it is able to qualify for assistance from the Smith-Hughes act. Sandpoint has the only high school in the state which can claim this distinction. Dorothy Taylor, '15, is nutrition expert at Iowa State College, while another Idaho Alumnus, Ella Woods, '15, carried out some unique experimental work in nutrition at the Florida State College for Women, and is now research assistant at Columbia University.

Idaho has two most promising men in Walter E. Sandelius and Earnest A. Lindley, now at residence at Oxford, England, as Rhodes scholars. The former is taking his doctor's degree in political science, his thesis being on "The History of the Swedish Constitution," the first attempt of its kind in English. He has already taken one degree there with high honors. Both he and Lindley were prominent athletes at Oxford.

As it takes ten to twelve years to make a good lawyer, Idaho's list of barristers are mostly "comers." Those who have shown the greatest ability are: Roy Leeper, '12, who besides being a good lawyer, is State Commander of the American Legion for Idaho. He has hung his shingle at Lewiston. Another excellent man is C. J. Taylor, who is prosecuting attorney of Madison county. John H. McEvers, '15, is also listed as a prosecuting attorney, holding office in Shoshone County, while Isaac E. McDougal occupies a similar position in Bannock County.

Idaho engineers have and are making a name for themselves. Probably the most interesting due to geographical location, is William LeRoy Zeigler, of the Class of '04. After doing good work for the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, he was called to be one of the two assistant engineers to the chief of the English-French Monopoly railroad. He has successfully had charge of many difficult pieces of railway construction. Harry C. Smith, '05, has charge of a twelve million dollar project in the canalization of the Cumberland River, being in the service of the United States Engineering Office of the War Department, and his title is assistant engineer.

ATHLETICS

ATHLETICS at the University of Idaho during the past year, made tremendous strides in every branch of sport. Every effort was bent toward placing Idaho athletics in the position to which they belong. Wholly unexpected to alumni and undergraduates was the admittance of the University into the Pacific Coast Conference, which places Idaho in direct competition with the leading universities of the far west. A constructive program looking toward giving the Silver and Gold athletes the best fields in the northwest was inaugurated during the past year, which program will be completed for football next fall.

Handicapped through lack of money, Idaho's teams were compelled to make frequent and far separated trips for games, which had a noticeable effect on their physical condition. The football season was erratic. Hard games were won, easy ones lost. For the first time in years, Oregon University was cheated from winning her usual Idaho game. South State fans were treated again to a football classic at Boise, when the Vandals played and beat the University of Wyoming before eight thousand spectators.

Idaho's basketball team achieved national fame by taking first honors in both the Pacific Coast and Northwest Conferences, and competing in the national tournament at Indianapolis, Ind. The Vandal five went through a twenty-two game conference season with only one defeat, which establishes an enviable record for Idaho.

Track and baseball were both fairly successful, neither producing any astounding results, however. Irving, star weight man, was clearly not in his usual form last spring, and failed to take his events, as was expected by Idaho undergraduates. Baseball broke even, Washington State College taking first Conference honors. Poor weather was, and probably always will be, a serious drawback to the ball players, and was the cause of Idaho's twirlers failing to pitch the brand of ball necessary for a thoroughly successful season.

Tennis advanced greatly during the past year, Idaho making a good showing in her first year in competition with other Northwestern Universities in that sport. Wrestling failed to develop during the winter as had been hoped, and Idaho won only one of her three matches, that against the College of Idaho. Wrestling was listed for the first time as a major sport, and four I sweaters were issued to members of the squad meeting the requirements.

Freshman athletics developed wonderfully during the season, especially in football. Some likely material was uncovered for the coaches to work on in the fall, and if for this value alone, Freshman athletics should be fostered even more than in the past.

Football Review

CAPTAIN "GROVE" EVANS, R. End

THE football season of 1921 was not all that the loyal supporters of the game had hoped for, nor what the coach and players really expected. Starting the season with high hopes and winning the first game against all predictions, the initial prospects looked exceedingly bright. Then the team struck its first snag in the Cougar eleven, and went down to defeat against a stronger and better team. Against Oregon, however, a somewhat better showing was made, and although Idaho failed to more than tie the score with them, and was beaten by Utah, the fact remains that Idaho in both these games played clear around their opponents in all phases of the game, but were unable to put the ball across for the necessary tallies. The Silver and Gold emerged victors from the remaining games, until she hit Whitman, where she went down before the Missionaries, contrary to all expectations and predictions. Taking the season as a whole, we feel that a distinct step forward has been made in football at Idaho. The men have learned the methods of the coach, and the coach has learned what to expect from his men, so that future teams should show a brilliancy never before seen on the Idaho field.

Captain Evans, Neil Irving, Joe Whitcomb and Frank Brown played their last game for Idaho this season, and all played stellar ball throughout the entire season.

IDAHO vs. CAMP LEWIS

Outweighed but not outfought nor outgeneraled, Coach Kelley's gridiron eleven blasted all prophecies and defeated the Ninth Area Corps Army Team from Camp Lewis on MacLean field Saturday, October 8, 6 to 0. A place-kick by Irving from the Army's 22-yard line in the third period, and a duplicate by him from the 20-yard line shortly after the opening of the final period constituted the only scoring of the game. Idaho used few tactics out of the realm of categorical football. Irving, Whitcomb, Beany Breshears and Babe Brown proved to be Idaho's mainstays in the conflict.

IDAHO vs. OREGON

For the fourteenth time in twenty years, Idaho failed to emerge victorious in a football game with the University of Oregon eleven. The game was played on Multnomah Field in Portland, October 15. In the second quarter, a blocked punt by Vohs was recovered by Sherm Breshears for a touchdown. Then the Oregon Jinx got busy and the score was tied a few minutes later and although actually making twice the yardage from scrimmage that Oregon made, Idaho was unable to win, the game ending with a score of 7 to 7. Irving was easily the star of the game.

IDAHO vs. W. S. C.

Idaho went down to defeat 20 to 3 in the Annual Washington State College game played on Rogers Field in Pullman, October 22, before the largest crowd ever assembled on that field. The game was a great exhibition of football and was marked by Idaho's stubborn defense against an admittedly superior team. Vohs played a wonderful tackle position until taken out by the referee. Irving was the chief ground gainer for the Idaho eleven.

IDAHO vs. UTAH

Reaping full benefits from all breaks in the game, the University of Utah eleven was enabled to defeat Idaho's machine on Saturday, Oct. 29, at Salt Lake City, 17 to 7; although the football honors were virtually equal. Idaho's only score was made in the final period when Sherm Breshears recovered a Utah fumble and dashed 45 yards for a touchdown. Captain Grover Evans was the stellar actor for the Idaho team.

Idaho stepped from the gloom of two consecutive defeats into the warmth and friendliness of a blazing light of victory on Saturday, Nov. 5, at the Idaho Fairgrounds, when she romped over the lighter but fighting University of Montana football eleven 35 to 7. Irving, playing stellar ball, was the outstanding figure in the scrimmage, and his punting kept the Bruins well beyond the danger point at all times.

Idaho beat back an invasion of Wyoming Cowboys Nov. 11 at Boise and buried them beneath an avalanche of touchdowns, defeating them 31 to 3. This was the second annual Armistice Day football classic to be played in the Capital City, and was witnessed by eight thousand loyal Idaho rooters. The Silver and Gold warriors played brilliant ball and earned a hard-fought victory. Captain Evans at left end played a brilliant game both at defense and on the offense. Irving's kicking was an outstanding feature of the game, as was that of Fitzke, star backfield man for the Wyoming eleven.

The Whitman College Missionaries did the unexpected on Thanksgiving Day and defeated the Silver and Gold team on Ankeny field, Walla Walla, 14 to 3. Whitman was beaten until the final three minutes of play, when they slipped over two touchdowns in rapid succession. Captain Evans, playing his last game in an Idaho uniform, starred in every department of the game.

With plenty of material in sight, next year's football season should prove to be one of the most successful ever recorded in Idaho history. In Neil Irving and Captain Grove Evans, Idaho lost two of her most valuable players.

Basketball Review

CAPTAIN "RICH" FOX, Forward

Who led the Vandals to a Two-Conference Championship in his third and last year of Basketball.

TO be champions of the Pacific and Northwest Conferences is a goal few teams ever reach. No greater tribute can be paid to a coach and his men than to be able to acquire this coveted position. Coach MacMillan's entire efforts were concentrated upon this one thing. He reached that, backed by a team of fighters who carried the "Idaho Fight" spirit to the end of their journey.

"Mac"

Entering the Pacific Coast Conference as a dark horse, handicapped by lack of material, Coach MacMillan developed a winning team from mediocre players. At the outset, dopesters considered Idaho's chances among the poorest. With the loss of Hunter and Moe a spirit of gloom enshrouded the lovers of basketball, and little was expected from the team.

The season opened early with a heavy schedule of ten non-conference games, but one of which was lost, and that to the fast American Legion team from Walla Walla. The Vandals opened up their conference season schedule on January 23 by decisively defeating Oregon University on their own floor. This time the Oregon Jinx failed to bother the Idaho men, and it was Idaho's game from start to finish. From there they journeyed to the home of Willamette and annexed another brace of victories by defeating the Columbia River men with large scores in both games.

The floor work and wonderful passing of the Idaho quintet was given its first real try-out when they met their W.S.C. rivals the following week. Returning from her string of victories in the Northwest, Idaho, playing a brand of basketball which was to make her famous, trounced the Cougars in the first conference game on the home floor. History repeated itself the following night when the Vandals went to the Cougars' lair and there administered another stinging defeat, almost comparable to the first. By changing their style of defense, the W. S. C. men were able to hold the Vandals to a close score, but the clever guarding of Oz Thompson, Telford and Edwards evened up matters, for they allowed the Pullmanites but four lone baskets.

The Idaho aggregation opened its second successful tour of the Northwest when it journeyed to Spokane and received the big end of the score with Gonzaga University there. The accurate shooting of Al Fox, the generalship of Captain Rich Fox, and the guarding of Thompson, thrilled the hundreds of fans who filled the Gonzaga gymnasium.

The one and only defeat the Vandals suffered in either conference came when they played the Montana Bruins at Missoula. Handicapped by a small floor, the lightning-like passing of the Idaho team was useless. Montana fought as their name signifies they would, and held the first game to a one-point victory for Idaho. The second game was Montana's. Again Idaho was powerless to bring into use the wonderful passing ability of her men, with the consequence that she lost the game by a narrow margin.

The relative strength of the Montana five was given light a week later when the team journeyed into Idaho territory, and was handed two stinging defeats which smothered all hopes of Montana winning Northwest honors. In these two games, the Silver and Gold rolled up 98 points to the Bruins' 31.

Then came the long to be remembered games with the Washington Huskies. Confident of every success, as yet undefeated, the Washington machine in the first game of the series, gained a ten-point lead before the Vandals had started. Calling time, Captain Fox counseled his men on the weaknesses of their opponents. From then on, Idaho smashed every offensive move, and at the half the score was tied. Literally playing the Sound men off their feet, Idaho was enabled to gain a substantial lead during the second half, and won her first crucial game.

The Washingtonians came back the second night to even up the series, but failed. This game was even closer than the previous night's contest, necessitating the playing of two extra periods to break a tied score, at the end of the second of which Idaho emerged the victor with a four point lead over the Huskies.

HENRY CANINE
Forward

Four games with Whitman practically ended the Conference season. Idaho took all of these by large scores and then played Washington State a final game before they left for the Indianapolis meet. By winning both conferences, Coach MacMillan and his men were invited to represent these respective districts in the national tournament at Indianapolis, Indiana. There the Vandals met their Waterloo, and were eliminated by the famous Kalamazoo College Quintet. Idaho lost by a close score to the lucky Michigan team, which continually made spectacular shots from the center of the floor.

Thus ended one of the most successful basketball seasons in Idaho athletic history. No greater record has been carved upon the traditional pages of Idaho's sports, and filling their cups Idaho's undergraduates and alumni will toast—

Baseball Review

CHICK EVANS
Capt., 3rd Base

BASEBALL during the 1921 season came back with an impetus that will give it a deserving stand in athletics at the University. The thorough coaching which Mac-Millan demonstrated in other branches of athletics was again shown in baseball and he built up a powerful team. It was only after hard and consistent work that a good team resulted. As would naturally be expected under the adverse weather conditions which hampered the team all during the early part of the season, the first games of the season were slow and it was during this period that most of the games were lost. The performance of the team towards the last of the season showed that Idaho deserved to be listed with the best teams in the conference. Idaho broke even with W.S.C., winners of the Pacific Coast title, in a four game series, thereby demonstrating her real ability as a ball club.

Capt. "Chick" Evans had the pitching staff out early, which was an innovation for Idaho, and early mounders were Foran, Marineau, Jacobson, Kearns and Sanberg. Arm trouble was prevalent throughout the season and many of the hurlers were unable to function during the entire season. Foran's arm gave him trouble all season, and the team was forced to depend upon Marineau to do a major part of the hurling, and the team was not disappointed. "Lefty" pitched good, consistent ball all season, although it was his first year on the team. "Les" Moe proved to be the "dark horse" of the season, for when he left his position at shortstop he worked in great form in the box and pitched some of the best ball ever seen at Idaho. He deserves most of the credit for winning the two games from the Cougars.

DAVID MACMILLAN

The team was developed into one of the strongest slugging nines in either conference and if it had not been for untimely errors and erratic hitting the results of the conference standing would have been entirely different. As it was, the season proved a success because of the large and enthusiastic crowds attending.

It is to be hoped that in the future greater interest will be shown by the students in this important branch of athletics. While some may think that baseball is not as important as some of the other branches of college athletics, yet when we look outside of our own individual institution we see its advantages.

THE SEASON

The season opened with the Bulldogs, in Spokane, April 29 and 30. Both of these games were lost, the team having had only a few outdoor practices on account of the cold, wet weather. On May 5 and 6, two games were played with Whitman on the Idaho diamond, Whitman winning the first game and Idaho taking the second by an overwhelming score. The next week a series of four games was played, all at Moscow, two with Montana and two with Gonzaga. Montana won both her games handily, due to the hard hitting of the Grizzlies. Honors were divided in the two games with Gonzaga, the Bulldogs winning the first game 4 to 3 and Idaho the second, 5 to 2. Idaho then proceeded to hit the trail and journeyed to Walla Walla, where, on May 20 and 21, the Vandals proceeded to take two games from the Missionaries, although it took eleven innings to beat them the first game.

Idaho played W. S. C. on the home grounds May 23 and won by a score of 5 to 1. On May 26 and 27, Idaho played Montana at Missoula, Montana winning these two games also, but not as easily as they won the two earlier in the season. June 2, Idaho played W. S. C. at Pullman, losing the game by a close score and the next day W. S. C. returned to Moscow and suffered a rather embarrassing defeat, having just won the Pacific Coast Conference Championship, Idaho winning 3 to 0. June 7, Idaho played her final game of the season, again meeting Washington State at Pullman. This was a hard-fought contest, but the Cougars finally won.

Taking everything into consideration, the season was a marked success, as baseball seasons go. A great many men on the team were playing their first year of college baseball and should play a great game of ball the coming season.

Interest increased in the game as never before, among the student body, not only as spectators but also those who were willing to try for the team. A good "Frosh" team was turned out and those men should help out the team in 1922. Capt. "Chick" Evans, "Jimmy" Fox, "Eddie" Foran, and "Les" Moe will be lost to the team next year.

Track Review

IDAHO'S 1921 track season although not a shining success in victories won, was a memorable one nevertheless, for it witnessed the last performance of two of the Silver and Gold's greatest stars, "Pat" Perrine and "Gus" Irving. Both men have been responsible for a great number of points in all meets entered during their college career.

The season netted one victory, two defeats and a tie for third place in the Northwest Conference meet. Idaho's first appearance was at the Seattle Relay Carnival with a two-mile relay team composed of Van Hoesen, Gill, Macey and Marsch, and Perrine and Irving in the Pentathlon. Perrine placed fourth in this and the relay team took third place in their event. On May 7th, Washington State College won over Idaho by a score of 79 to 52, and the following Saturday Montana repeated with a score of 64½ to 54½. The winged "I" s came back on May 28th when they met Whitman at Walla Walla and carried off the honors with a score of 80 to 51. At the Northwest Conference Track Meet held at Pullman, June 4th, Idaho tied with the University of Oregon for third place with a score of 23 points.

Although the Silver and Gold suffers a loss this year in the loss of two of her outstanding track performers, we have something to look forward to in Purdy Eaton, Ray Harsch, and Captain "Jerry" Gill. Eaton took first in the 440 in all the dual meets and was a close second in the conference. Harsch started the season well when he won third place for Idaho in the two mile relay at the Seattle Relay Carnival, by gaining twenty yards at the finish. He ran the 880 in fast time in the dual meets, lowering the record of 2:01 set by "Hec" Edmunson in 1905, to 2:00 flat in the W. S. C.-Idaho meet, and later in the conference meet lowered it again to 1:57.4. The only other former Idaho record to fall was in the two-mile, in which "Jerry" Gill at the Conference clipped 24 seconds from the record of 10:14 made by Oliver Campbell in 1915, and changed it to 9:50.

BROWN
Capt. and Coach

RESTLING this year at the University of Idaho was introduced for the first time as a major sport. The turnout, however, was weak and the only ones from the squad of the previous year were Babe Brown, Frank Kinnison and Fred Horning. "Babe" acted as coach this year and developed the squad considerably, but in the first two meets, the Idaho mat men showed lack of experience which proved exceedingly costly.

HILLMAN

The first meet was staged at Pullman against Washington State College, and Idaho was represented by Osborn in the 125 class; Hillman at 135; Robinson, 145; Kinnison, 158; Horning, 175, and Brown, heavyweight. Idaho was defeated, 16 to 10. In a return meet at Moscow, the W.S.C. team again took the majority of the bouts, piling up a score of 19 to 6. The third and last meet of the season against the College of Idaho was a different story, however, and the final counting showed 30 points for the University of Idaho against but 8 for the College.

Again this year the followers of the mat game were disappointed when they were not able to see "Babe" Brown in action.

The men who made letters were Hillman, Kinnison, Horning and Brown.

Tennis Review

TENNIS at the University of Idaho is slowly gaining in favor, but several years must elapse before racket wielders at Idaho can expect to enter the big tournaments with any chance of defeating their more skillful opponents. The two main reasons why Idaho doesn't rank very high in tennis is the lack of material turning out and the shortness of the season. The lack of material is gradually giving way, and each year sees more students on the court, and the spirit of the sport is rising to a high pitch. The shortness of the season, however, can never be overcome, since the winter months drag on and the courts can not be fixed until most of the other colleges in the Northwest have had their preliminary tournaments. Since skill and endurance in tennis demands a great deal of consistent practice on the courts, it isn't difficult to understand the obstacles Varsity tennis players must overcome to make a creditable showing.

The season of 1921 held nothing but defeats for Idaho. A preliminary tournament was held in the early part of May, and from the results, Veatch, Hansen, Herrington and Yaggy were chosen to represent the University. The first meet was on May 14th at Pullman, against W.S.C., and all our matches were lost, Yaggy being defeated 6-1, 6-0; Hanson 7-5, 6-4; Herrington 6-3, 6-3, and in doubles Herrington and Hansen lost 6-3, 6-4. The team traveled to Walla Walla on May 28th and lost to Whitman there. The final tournament was held at Moscow against W.S.C., and again Idaho was defeated.

The prospects for 1922 are good inasmuch as only one Varsity man was lost by graduation, and several old players are now on the campus.

Women's Athletics

IN line with the trend of other universities and colleges throughout the United States concerning athletic events for women, the co-eds in the University of Idaho are getting under way an extensive program for participation in athletics of various kinds. Horseback riding, baseball, basketball, tennis and hockey are a few of the activities that are being launched this spring.

This, perhaps the first well organized attempt in the university to create interest in and an opportunity for athletic contests, is a commendable departure which has long been needed and is proving valuable in other institutions of a similar nature.

Modern woman has begun to consider it her especial sphere to avail herself of every phase of life that makes for health and well being. She has entered politics through the woman suffrage act and is rapidly moving to the front in every field of endeavor. Her endeavors in the field of athletics at college are just another indication of this awakening.

And we may well ask why we should not enter these activities. They are health giving and physique builders. Too long has woman entertained the idea that it was indelicate and not proper to contest in health-giving sports. Today that conception of woman's sphere has given place to the realization that woman is just as much in need of physical culture activities as the men and that it is essential that she develop her body by participation in athletics.

An interclass basketball tournament was held during the winter, and a great amount of amusement and helpful exercise was obtained by the various co-eds. In the fall, hockey was played in interclass contests on MacLean Field, and interest in tennis increased by leaps and bounds among the co-eds. Idaho was represented in intercollegiate competition by a co-ed team, which made a very successful showing in both their matches, and for which two of the contestants, Gladys Hastie and Vida Richards, received Circle I sweaters.

Under the able direction of Mrs. Murray, in charge of Women's Physical Education work, the Idaho co-eds are rapidly learning the advantages of a life in which physical exercise plays a leading part. The women are learning the advantages of long hikes into the country, and every spring day sees them setting out for the hills. Admittance has been granted Idaho in the National Women's Athletic Association, and it is probable that during the coming year, still greater interest will be taken in athletic events, and that various intercollegiate contests can be held in which only the university co-eds compete.

Freshmen Football

THE 1925 "Frosh" football team was the best yearling team Idaho has turned out for a long time. Except for the defeat they suffered at the hands of Washington State College, the yearling's season was one of overwhelming victories. The turnout in September was large and the material was excellent. Coach MacMillan had a hard time choosing a first string squad because he had a husky bunch to pick from, but using Captain Kline as a nucleus he built up a strong aggregation both on defense and offense.

The first game was against Washington State College on the home lots, but a wet field and many heavy Pullmanites proved too much for the Freshmen, and the game ended with the score 21 to 0 in W.S.C.'s favor.

To demonstrate that they were not hitting their best stride in the first game, the team traveled to Ellensburg for their next game, and beat the Normal team 55 to 0. When they played Cheney Normal, the yearlings again administered a shut out with a score of 37 to 0. The remaining two games with Lewis and Clark and North Central High Schools showed that the team still knew the game, for they defeated their opponents 42 to 7, and 35 to 7.

This year's team was the first to be awarded jerseys, and no one doubts but that they deserved recognition. The individuals who made up the team showed a fighting spirit and they will greatly strengthen the varsity next year.

Those who were awarded the 1925 jerseys are: Reamer, Keller, Kleffner, Reed, Hausen, Neuman, Tapper, Otnes, Kline (Capt.), Hubble, Waltman, Sigfried, Hays, Thomas and Vesser.

Freshmen Basketball

THE Freshman Basketball team this year developed from an initial turnout of about thirty men, which inside of a week was thinned down by Coach MacMillan to ten men, around which he built up a team that showed up fairly well. The season was a success inasmuch as it uncovered some likely varsity material in Kleffner, Keller, Reamer, Thomas and Kline.

The season ended with seven games won and six lost. The team opened the season by taking a trip to Nez Perce county and played three games there. The first game was lost to the Nez Perce high school, but the following night the men staged a come-back and won by twenty points. The remaining game proved easy against the Winchester five, and the Frosh returned with the knowledge that they could play basketball if they worked hard enough. Hard luck was encountered when they met the Washington State College yearlings, for they lost three out of four games to them, not, however, without making their opponents work hard for their victory. Of the remaining games a double header was split with Cheney Normal and one game lost to Spokane University, while Coeur d'Alene high school was defeated once and Moscow high school twice.

The team was handicapped by the lack of efficient coaching, else a better showing ought to have been made considering the material from which to choose. As it was the playing was erratic and team work was lacking. The players, in spite of their handicap, showed a fight which did much to compensate for their inability to handle the ball as it should have been, and more than once the game was pulled from the fire by grim determination.

Interscholastic Track Meet

BURLEY easily carried off high honors in the annual spring Interscholastic Track Meet at the University last spring, which was by far the most successful ever staged by the Athletic Department. Schools from all sections of the state were entered in the meet, and every event was contested for by numerous candidates, and competition was extremely keen.

In Doe, Burley high school has a man of whom she may well be proud. In every event in which he entered, he won first place, and easily captured the cup for individual scoring of the meet. He was successful in setting two new high school records for Idaho, in the 100-yard dash and in the broad jump. His phenomenal leap of 22 ft. 5 in. in the broad jump established a mark which will stand for many seasons.

Interscholastic Basketball Tournament

INTERSCHOLASTIC basketball dope was again upset when the victorious high school teams from all over the state met in the University gymnasium March 10th and 11th to battle for first honors. Weston, a town of three hundred people, sent her team from the Utah border line, and was gratified to see her boys bring back the championship title, after defeating Culdesac in the final game of the tournament.

The Weston high school team, after winning the Idaho state tournament, went to Salt Lake, where they entered the Intermountain basketball tourney, and won there, giving them the championship of Montana, Colorado, Utah, Wyoming and Idaho.

Interest in the annual Interscholastic basketball tournament increased each year, and is proving to be a great advertising feature for the University. Two of the teams which were picked to take the journey to Moscow for the tournament, were unable to come at the last moment due to sickness, so that substitutes were sent in their place, representative of the districts.

The All-State Teams picked by the judges are as follows:

FIRST TEAM		SECOND TEAM

Nedros (Moscow)	Forward	Newman (Culdesac)
Rohrman (Culdesac)	Center	Talbot (Coeur d'Alene)

HISTORY AND PURPOSE

The "Ag Club" was organized December 10, 1907, for the purpose of promoting the social welfare of the students in Agriculture, to enrich their knowledge from outside sources and to promote greater unity among the students enrolled in the Agricultural College.

Third Annual "Ag Bawl"

On October 15, 1921, as the corn and pumpkins were being harvested, the members of the Ag College and faculty gathered at the Gym for the third annual "Ag Bawl." Decorations consisted of cornstalks, pumpkins and bales of straw from the University farm. The gym was transformed into a regular harvest scene, a throne of straw was erected at one end of the room, where Miss Agnes Weed was honored by being crowned the Harvest Queen.

Each girl was given a small Cow-Bell as a favor, and the milk and doughnuts for refreshments were enjoyed by all. The programs were very unique, having been designed by a member of the club.

The dance was carried out in true farmer style and everyone reported as having an excellent time.

"Ag" Day

"Ag Day" as the name indicates, is the big day in the Ag College. It was first authorized by the faculty of the Agricultural College in 1914 and has steadily grown from that time on. The entire day is given over to the judging of agricultural products, each student entering one or more of the contests. The judging is divided into six distinct contests, Animal Husbandry, Dairy Cattle, Dairy Products, Grains, Fruits, and the Showing and Fitting of Livestock. The day is closed by a banquet in the evening, given by the "Ag Club" members, where the students, faculty and stockmen meet each other as man to man. After a sumptuous repast, for which all farmers are noted, prizes for the judging of the day and the judging "I"s are awarded.

THE School of Practical Agriculture is maintained for the purpose of training the young men of the state in practical agriculture. It is open to eighth grade graduates who do not desire or are unable to attend high school. It is also attended by boys who have had some high school work or have graduated from high school. The course is arranged for three years of five months each. High school graduates are able to finish the work in two years. The boys attending the school work on their farms at home during the summer, and attend school during the winter months. The school term begins in the fall after the crops are harvested and ends in the spring about the time that spring work commences.

All of the College of Agriculture equipment is available for the use of the School of Practical Agriculture. The students get the same kind of work that the regular college students in Agriculture receive, except that it is briefer and of a more practical nature. Much of the work is laboratory, such as judging all classes of livestock, grain, dairy products and fruit; shop practice in farm motors and tractors and machinery; use of surveying instruments, drawing, forge work, insects, veterinary science, dairying and livestock management. Most of the students are interested in Animal Husbandry, Dairying, Farm Crops and Horticulture, but there is very good interest shown in all the different lines of study. Interest and enthusiasm is the keynote during the whole year.

Each year the College of Agriculture sets aside one day to be known as "Ag Day" when all students of the college engage in judging contests. Students in the School of Practical Agriculture engage in all of these contests, and usually succeed in taking some of the highest prizes offered. This year Cecil Roberts captured the silver loving cup offered to the best judge of dairy cattle. Although only two men from the school entered the contest in Horticulture, one, George Fitzpatrick, placed third, and the other, Cecil Roberts, tied for sixth place. Fred Berry, a student in Commercial Dairying, won third prize in judging dairy products.

A Literary Society, open to all students in the school, is maintained by the students. Meetings are held on the second and fourth Thursdays of each month. Interesting programs are prepared in which all members have an opportunity to take part. Debating, extemporaneous speaking, essays, papers, readings, musical numbers are the features of these programs. The best usages of parliamentary practice are observed in conducting the meetings, and students who take part secure, in addition to valuable practice in public speaking and debate, a mastery of the difficult art of conducting public meetings and the direction of debate upon questions of public interest.

The English Club is perhaps the most effective departmental organization of its kind on the Idaho campus. It is a strictly honorary organization, membership being limited to those who are either exceptional students or majors in the English Department or have distinguished themselves in debate, dramatics, approved work on the Argonaut staff, or the Gem of the Mountains staff.

The special work of the English Club during the last year was to arrange a brief visit by John G. Neihardt and Vachel Lindsey to give lectures to the student body and the English Club.

PRESIDENT - - - A. N. THOMPSON
VICE-PRESIDENT - - - ARTHUR SAWYER
SECRETARY-TREASURER - FRED M. VEATCH

The purpose of this organization is to encourage a more widespread and intensive interest in engineering and all its allied subjects. To this end the Associated Engineers have attempted to perfect an organization which will be of value both from a social viewpoint and from the standpoint of practical instruction. Noted speakers are secured at various times during the collegiate year who bring before the group many of the latest developments along scientific lines. Membership is wholly voluntary, but includes practically all members of the Engineering College.

Associated Miners

(Affiliated Junior Society of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers)

The "Muckers' Club" is one of the oldest and most active organizations on the campus. It meets every other week for business, professional and social purposes. Papers are frequently presented by members of the club. During the year many interesting and instructive talks are given by prominent engineers and mining men of the northwest.

The "Muckers" are represented in the social world by the "Muckers' Ball" and the "Annual Muckers' Smudge", which is an all-college smoker. Both affairs are popular with the students.

All students and faculty of the School of Mines are eligible for membership. The School of Mines offers courses in all phases of mining and geology. Because of its location it is possible to witness practical applications of mining in the great Coeur d'Alene Mining District. Before graduation an extensive trip is made to all the nearby mines. If possible all students are desired to work around the mines during the summer. The faculty and the club are instrumental in securing positions for the students.

Almost all the members of the "Muckers' Club" are Junior Associates of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers, one of the largest and strongest professional organizations of the world. The club itself is an Affiliated Junior Society.

The "Muckers' Club" has always maintained an attitude of loyalty to the University of Idaho and the School of Mines.

The Open Forum

OFFICERS

PRESIDENT	- - -	REGNER KUHMBERG
VICE-PRESIDENT	- - -	BRIAN BUNDY
SECRETARY	- - -	LOREN WILSON
TREASURER	- - -	JOSEPH CURTIS

AIMS of the Open Forum are: To provide an opportunity for free and unhampered expression of opinion and to furnish a center for the crystalization of ideas for the betterment and upbuilding of the University. The Open Forum has been the birthplace of a number of constructive programs which have received the sanction of the A. S. U. I. and the University faculty.

Among its actual accomplishments during the past year the Forum counts the plan for a Student-Faculty council and the recent initiation of a campaign for an increase in the Student Loan Fund. The State Debate League, somewhat comparable to the State Basketball Competition, is sponsored by the Forum and is expected to become a permanent institution for the advertisement of the University.

Typical of the live subjects discussed in Forum meetings are the vital problems of securing a chapter of Phi Beta Kappa, a university swimming pool, and many other matters of universal concern to the students of the university. From time to time programs of a broadly educational sort are given. An opportunity is offered to students to hear discussed by men who know, things which they can ill afford to miss. The wide diversity of the subjects introduced for discussion makes the Forum an organization which should have something of value for people of greatly different tastes and inclinations.

The Forum, as its name may suggest, has maintained a consistent attitude of friendliness toward debate and numbers among its members a large number who have represented Idaho in forensic contests in the past. Its interests are not, however, confined entirely or even in major part to debate or any other one activity. The interests of the Forum are, in toto, those of the University.

A. E. F. Club

OFFICERS

PRESIDENT - - - - DAVID McCLAIN
VICE-PRESIDENT - - - WALTER E. SCHMID
SECRETARY-TREASURER - JAKE MATTER

The A. E. F. Club, as the name indicates, is made up of students of the University who saw service overseas during the great war. The purpose of the club is to foster the feeling of fellowship and camaraderie that grew out of serving together for the same cause and under the same conditions in a foreign land; to keep alive the memory of those of our number who will never come back; and to occasionally get together for social purposes and to talk over incidents and experiences common to all.

Chief among the activities of the club for the year were the Armistice Day ceremonies, consisting of a flag-raising ceremony on the campus, the reading of President Harding's Armistice Day Proclamation, and the review of the Cadet Battalion by the A. E. F. men. In the evening the Armistice Day Ball was held in the gymnasium, which was one of the most successful all-college dances of the year.

The club membership includes about eighty undergraduates, who served in France.

Ethanol Society

The Ethanol Society is the pioneer trail-blazer on the campus. Since its foundation in 1492 the society has accomplished phenomenal progress in the world of science. The book of life is nothing more than a combination of Ethanol chapters.

When not engaged in research work the Ethanols take on the semblance of hooded knights of the chivalrous days of old. They are often referred to in poetry and prose as the sole remnants of a long-lost gallantry and knighthood—a most remarkable and truthful tribute.

The society has made countless contributions to civilization in this time of greatest need. Bulletins were issued on all problems of paramount importance and the daily publication was placed alongside the most solid journalistic institutions. Besides carrying the late news of the day the paper carried special scientific departments filled with contributions from authoritative society members engaged in research work, also intellectual editorials to inspire greater service and a permanent preservation of the student body morale.

Radio enthusiasts all over the northwest commended the society upon the radio programs issued during the spring. This broad-casting program will be repeated next year.

Thousands of requests have been received for a special bulletin on Hades. The readers believed evidently that the society would have to descend to that place to get the information.

Membership is of necessity very limited, but all departments on the campus are represented.

The Ethanols are a group of scientific merrymakers with a lofty goal which they have crossed and recrossed several times during the year. Next year the weekly annals of society proceedings will be compiled into an attractive booklet which should be as popular as the Congressional Record.

Women's Athletic Association

PRESIDENT - - - - - MARY BALL
 SECRETARY-HISTORIAN - MARGARET KUTNEWSKY
 TREASURER - - - - - EDITH COOPER

THE Women's Athletic Association appeared this year for the first time on the Idaho campus. It was felt that there was a need of organizing women's athletics, and much need of a concerted effort to get girls out for athletics. With this object in mind, girls who took part in athletics last year, in conjunction with the Women's Physical Education Department, formed the Women's Athletic Association along the lines of the national organization of that name. Thelma Hare was elected temporary president, and Jean Rowlands, temporary secretary. A committee was appointed to formulate a constitution. Upon the adoption of a constitution, permanent officers were elected for the year 1922.

The purpose of the organization is to foster and maintain an interest in women's athletics, to create a spirit of good sportsmanship among the women of the university, and to uphold Idaho's traditions and standards in athletics. To become eligible to membership, a girl must take part in at least two sports a semester. She must also fulfill certain scholarship requirements. She may not have two D's against her name for that semester, and she cannot be admitted with a condition until the condition has been removed. To retain membership, she must participate in at least one sport a year.

The sports which have been organized at present are basketball, baseball, tennis, hockey, and hiking. As interest in sports grows and as equipment and suitable floor space is obtained additional sports will be organized.

The organization hopes within a year or two to have fulfilled enough requirements to unite with the National Congress of Women's Athletic Associations. Faculty recognition has been secured and with the organization of sports, great interest has been shown in women's athletics.

SCHOOL OF FORESTRY, 1921-22

The Associated Foresters

The Associated Foresters is a member of a national organization composed of all students enrolled in the Schools of Forestry in the various universities of the United States. The purpose of the organization is to bring together the students interested in forestry, assimilate ideas, correspond with other universities and hold general discussions of forestry problems.

This year the Foresters at the University of Idaho held their annual all-college "Timber-Beast Hoedown" on December 3, and the annual banquet for the Foresters at the Guild Hall on January 19.

The "Idaho Forester," the annual publication of the school, will make its sixth appearance in May.

Alpha Mu Delta is a local honorary legal fraternity, organized for the purpose of promoting a more professional attitude among the students of the College of Law, to foster a greater regard for high scholastic standards, to uphold the honor system, and to promote generally the best interests of the College of Law.

The ultimate object of Alpha Mu Delta is to obtain a charter from the Phi Delta Phi national legal fraternity.

Official recognition was accorded Alpha Mu Delta on December 2, 1921, by a unanimous vote of the Faculty Committee on Student Organizations.

The colors of the fraternity are lemon and green. The pin is a monogram of the Greek capital letters of the fraternity.

Delta Tau

Founded 1922

Delta Tau was founded at the University of Idaho to fill the long felt need of a closely-knit body of men interested in college forensics. Its objects are the promotion of interest in debate and its allied activities and the revival of interest in the arts of oratory and speaking. The society has a high scholarship requirement, thus maintaining itself as a distinctive group. A man selected for membership must have taken part in a collegiate forensic contest and is further required to be among the upper two-fifths of his class in scholarship. Other branches of student activity are also taken into consideration as a basis upon which to judge membership.

THE University Argonaut is the official student publication of the University. It is published once a week and serves as a medium for the broadcasting of news of general interest to the student body.

The Editor and Business Manager are elected from the student body at large and have full control of the policies of the paper. The Associated Students elect each semester an associate editor, who after serving in this capacity for one full semester, automatically becomes Editor-in-Chief.

The Argonaut is a member of the Pacific and the Western Intercollegiate Press Associations. News is dispatched to and received from the other members of the association, thus linking together the larger universities and colleges for the mutual benefits derived from the exchange of news and ideas.

The staff is chosen by the editor on a basis of experience and willingness to work for a bigger and greater Idaho.

To the "Ad" Building

YOU are the keynote of our campus; the emblem of our University. When we return from distant journeys, we are eager for a first glimpse of your commanding crest; and when we see it, we know that all is well. In you, we have a wealth that is priceless: a common symbol of all that links us together.

Your many moods reflect the beauties of all the varied days we spend here. They live wherever we go; glorious pictures painted in our hearts. We see you morning, noon and night, in all the seasons of the year. On winter mornings we look up a walk flanked by drifts, to your snow-rimmed towers over silent white-plumed trees. On soft June nights, the campus lamps—screened from our eyes by leaves—shine clear upon your walls, and show you as on a stage; an enchanted palace behind painted trees, against the deep-jeweled curtain of the sky.

As we approach you through a fog, you loom up with massive strength; but on most days we can see you wherever we go. We look for you then often, though seldom do we think about it.

In early morning, your windows strike back the rising sun like fire. Often at sunset you stand in molten glory; and as it slowly fades, and your details blend, the I-tank looms dark above. It is thus that I like best to think of you; for then the lamps burn softly, and we, your children, pass to and from with lightened hearts, at the ending of a day. Another thread of reality has been laid upon the patterns of our dreams.

The Ballad of the Frosh-Soph Fight

WAS on a dismal rainy time,
On a dark and stormy night,
The Freshmen and the Sophomores
Began their yearly fight.

The Frosh of Kappa Sigma took
Each Soph within the house,
Without a word of warning and Proceeded him to souse.

And when with this most awful deed
The Frosh were done and through,
They went on down the street and
    . ducked
The Sophs of Sigma Nu.

They sought the Betas and Phi Delts
But these were safe from harm,
For one that was locked up escaped
And gave them the alarm.

The Freshmen then went back to bed
To safely snooze and dream,
But little did they reckon on
The Sophs' avenging scheme.

When all the campus was asleep,
And clocks were striking three,
The Sophs snuk to the Beta house
And gathered silently.

They brought their edicts green and red
And put them everywhere,
They warned the 'Measly Maggots'
    to
Obey and to beware!

The Beta Frosh were rooted out
And they did yawn and blink,
The Sophs, to make them wide awake
Tossed them into the drink.

And then this valiant band of Sophs
Proceeded on their way,
And ducked almost the whole Frosh class
Before the break of day.

By dawn the Frosh were organized,
But when they looked around
They saw the edicts everywhere,
But not a Soph was found.

They hunted high and hunted low,
Till late within the morn,
But finally gave up the search,
Dejected and forlorn.

They'd get the Sophs at dinner time,
They said, but this intention
Was straightway queered, for Upham staged
A sudden intervention.

And thus, my friends, you have the tale
About the deadly fray;
You now have heard of how the Sophs
Were victors all the way.

L'Envoi

All Measly Maggots, now take heed,
And make your color seen,
For there's a bloody law about
The wearing o' the green.

Inbad, the Sailor

T IRED and footsore, a weary tramp sat down at the foot of a beautiful mansion to rest. As soon as his deep breathing had ceased, soft melodious strains of oriental music reached his ears. At first it fascinated him, then the power of hunger and thirst overcame him, the music seemed to change to a mocking chant and he cursed the owner of the house for living in such luxury as he knew the house afforded. The chief gardener overheard his curses, and being a man of good nature, he called to the tramp, told him who lived in the house, and then invited him into the house to rest.

No sooner had he entered, when the head butler sent a wireless to the master, who was on the eighty-fourth floor, telling him he had company. A reply came to show the man up to him. They took the Chinese elevator and arrived at the master's chamber three hours later, stopping twenty minutes on the way for lunch. The tramp was introduced to the master by the head usher, then the master bade him make known his wishes. The tramp was overjoyed at such hospitality and soon was enjoying the most sumptuous repast that his eyes had ever witnessed before. On finishing his meal he expressed his desire to recline, so the master bade him rest on a velvety oriental lounge, padded with gnat wings. This sudden jump from the stony curb to the softest couch he had ever known, caused the tramp to feel at home. The head cigar passer came next in line with the mildest of Havana's cigars and bade him take his choice. After selecting the best he resumed his position on the lounge and spoke to the master, asking him just how he had amassed such a fortune and begged him to relate a few of his experiences in life. The master ordered some soft music, then began the first of his tales to the newly contented tramp.

"My good guest," spoke Inbad the Sailor, for such was his name, "my life has been one hard adventure after another. When I was a lad, I had no comforts such as you see here now, my father was very poor and for our living he shot snipes. This more than supported us and offered a great deal of sport for him as he was a lover of the chase. Thus I lived from hand to mouth until I was twenty-two, when I arrived at this age my father refused to support me, because I refused to ante in a small card game. I was alone in the world, without money and without friends.

"For awhile I followed the occupation of my father, shooting craps instead of snipes, but when the season on them closed I was compelled to resort to different means. At first I walked over to a small town on the east coast in search of some light work but could not find any to speak of. Hunger and the cold nights of the north drove me south to Old New Orleans. Here I got a job trimming street lamps which was quite light at times, and finally my opportunity came.

"It was on the night of the 'Mardi Gras,' a tall sailor came to me with a chart. He was weak from loss of blood. I found out later that he had misjudged the railing on a fire escape. He placed the chart in my hands and said, 'Stranger, I am on my last legs, and before I pass over the hill, I want to reveal a secret to you. These drawings and figures give the exact location of the main cache of Captain Dave Jones, and my ship is ready at the wharf; promise me to take the ship and get the treasure.' Those were his last words for he died at my feet.

"After arranging with the city for his burial, I searched for the ship and after many mistakes I found it. I obtained money enough from the captain's quarters to get a crew and we set sail for the coast of Africa. When we were ten days out, our ship got stuck in the sand, and the crew refused to dig a channel to continue our voyage so we had to abandon the ship. Each man took some useful article and swam the rest of the way to the coast, which was some two hundred miles. I was a day late in arriving, being hampered by the ship's anchor, which was more than my match. Lack of food caused the men to fight and upon arriving, I found them all dead. I was alone with the chart and what few things the men had saved from the ship. My hunting powers came to my rescue and that night I managed to get a few star fish. The next day I searched the chart for marks, locations and the like, and found to my great amazement that I was on the exact spot where the treasure had been buried. I dug it up and spent the rest of the day counting the bars of radium. That night I got a hundred or so star fish and signalled a passing ship which brought me home with my treasure. That was the first of my great adventures. I invite you to come tomorrow and hear more."

Just at this point the master and the tramp were interrupted by the warden, who informed them that before they could have their evening chat they would have to go out and roll up the sidewalks.

"Yours Truly"

BORN, Pete Brennan, yet few if any, except the time keeper who made out his pay checks, knew him as other than "Yours Truly." It is a peculiar thing the way a nickname will stick, when often there seems to be no particularly obvious reason for its doing so.

Anyway, to get down to the story, "Yours Truly" walked into the small mining camp, picturesquely called "Six Shooter Mamie" one May morning, looked the place over, evinced rather more than mild interest in the elevated tramway which passed overhead, carrying ore from the diggings to the concentrator some seven miles away, and finally, throwing down his pack, inquired the way to the office. The onlookers gave him little attention, for wandering strangers were common there; men came and men went, some by request and others through choice, when the wanderlust struck them undeniably strong.

The man made his way leisurely to the office, and stood patiently in line, while other applicants were accepted or turned down. If he noticed that the man on the other side of the railing showed a distinct preference for men with past experience in underground work, he gave no sign of it, and when in answer to the usual question, "Ever mucked before?" he answered, "No, but yours truly's used to dirt," the loungers looked at him in surprise, then laughed at the unusual answer. They watched with interest, as the time keeper sized up the would-be employee, then "All right, Yours Truly, we'll see what you can do with a shovel and a pickaxe, you're hired."

So Yours Truly, as he was known to all from the first, entered on his career as a "mining man" as he called it. "What would me ald pals, Mike and Denny, think of me—sure they'd more'n likely want ter borrow five or tin of me hard earned dollars," he would say to his interested fellow workers. He surely was proud of his pay check if ever a man was, but sad and truer still, money with him was easy come, easier go.

It may be said in his defense that his earnings never went for whiskey in the "pay-day spree" in which the other muckers joined with gay spirits, once a month; nor did he win or lose any great amounts in the evening's games, but he was an easy mark for all the "gold brick" schemes which were afloat at regular intervals. He gave to many a professional loafer, because he thought him worthy. Perhaps he had a warm spot in his heart for all wanderers, a sort of something in common feeling; at any rate, the proverbial wool sock never became greatly distended with earnings.

The months passed and Yours Truly worked faithfully on. It was probably the first time in his life that he had held down a job for any length of time, and affair but for some reason the foreman continued to hold it against Yours Truly, and showed impatience with his every act. He was continually finding fault with the orders which the latter gave the men he had charge of, and often he indulged in rather heated arguments with the ex-wanderer. One memorable day something happened which forever changed the order of things.

On this day Pomeroy had found it necessary to make a trip down to the concentrator to meet some mining engineers who were to carry on some investigating work in the mine. He made the seven mile trip with the assayer, George Meyers, in the latter's automobile. Meyers went on to the next town where he had some business to transact, and Pomeroy planned to ride back with him late in the afternoon.

All went well till early in the afternoon when the foreman received a message by telephone that there had been a slight cave-in on one of the levels of the mine and that his advice and help were needed.

Now, automobiles were few and far between around Six Shooter, and there seemed to be only one way in which he could get back to the mine, unless he walked, until late in the afternoon, when Meyers would return. This one way lay in the aerial tramway which had been used before in emergency cases, very efficiently. Pomeroy did not hesitate, but after leaving a message for Meyers, when he should arrive, climbed into one of the buckets and started on the homeward stretch.

Meanwhile in Six Shooter, after the excitement following the cave-in had abated, it was found that the damage had not been great and that no one had sustained serious injuries. But it was too late to notify the foreman who was by this time nearing home.

The episode which almost put an end to the young man's career happened when the bucket was about two hundred feet from the dumping shed. Yours Truly happened to be standing in the yard below, contemplating, as he so often did, the tramway above. He saw the figure in the bucket, and after close inspection decided it was Pomeroy. He watched his approach enviously, then all of a sudden as he stood there, there came a low grating sound, and the bucket in which the figure was seated, tore loose from the iron hooks which held it shut and in the same moment the whole tramway stopped dead still. He saw all this with a sense of horror, waiting for the lifeless body of the foreman to fall with a sickening thud to the ground. To his amazement he saw that in some way, as the bucket swung open, it had caught the heavy khaki coat and shirt, which Pomeroy wore, and was holding him suspended. Although partly stunned the victim was clinging with both hands to the edge of the bucket, and it came to Yours Truly, that when he became too weak to hang onto the bucket, and let his dead weight hang, the cloth which held him would give way. With a sudden movement he pushed away the horror-stricken crowd, which stood helplessly around, and ran to the shed where the machinery which controlled the tram was stationed. He was quite familiar with the workings of it and quickly manipulated certain levers which had to do with the starting of the machinery. There was no response, the conveyance refused to run, as it often did. Even the expert machinists who were by this time working on it desperately realized the uselessness of their efforts.

Yours Truly, without the least hesitation, shed his coat and heavy boots. "Look out," he cried. "Don't stop me; every minute counts; I'll swing out over the cable and support him." A gasp came from the crowd and cries and pleadings. "Don't go; better one death than two." But Yours Truly was already climbing out over the cable. His eyes were fastened on the figure which still held on feebly to the bucket. "Don't let go; I'm coming," the people heard him say, and they fairly held their breath, waiting in suspense for the inevitable.

Just in time they saw Yours Truly swing over to where he could support the foreman, then with a mighty effort he flung the latter's leg over the cable so that he was upheld, and then with the hand which was loose from the cable he manipulated the iron hooks which worked the bucket. After a little work the bucket clanged shut, and Yours Truly drew himself up into it and pulled the motionless body of Pomeroy after him. There was great cheering from the crowd below, and many tears and white faces.

In less than a half hour the mechanics had repaired the machinery which controlled the tramway, and the bucket which contained the hero and the rescued, approached the shed. With cheers and cheers the occupants were lifted out—Pomeroy had by this time regained consciousness and was able to realize to whom he was indebted for his life.

Yours Truly had resumed all the calm and steadiness of the old war-horse that he was and was comforting Mary Allison, Pomeroy's fiancée who was distributing her tears between her sweetheart and Yours Truly, who was impatiently submitting to having his torn hands bandaged.

Pomeroy got shakily to his feet, and the crowd moved off and became silent.

"Yours Truly," he said, "rather unreasonably I took a dislike to you once, now I am indebted to you for my life. I will never, as long as I live, forget; and if ever you need a friend—" He paused, and added "I am yours truly—"

Oh Galosh!

(Apologies to Vachel Lindsay)

I know a maiden
I know a maiden
On flumsy clumsy feet she trips,
Into the deep snow she dips
With her flapping, flapping feet
Flapping, flapping down the street.
Safe is she from all the storm
And her feet are nice and warm
Galosh—Galosh—Galosh—
Oh Gosh!

Then came the gallants
Scoffing young gallants
Behind the maiden they did walk
And meanly of her they did talk
As with her flapping, flapping feet
She went flapping down the street.
“Let them scoff,” was all she said,
“I’ll still be young when they are dead,
Because I wear galoshes.”
By Gosh!

Kappa Sigma pledge was looking mournfully down the street when a Phi Gam Freshman bumped into him as he ran down the campus steps. "I beg your pardon," said the Phi Gamma Delta frosh, "why, if it isn't my old friend Skithers! How are you? I didn't know that you were coming to the university. Gee, I am glad that I ran into you!"

"Ran into me is right," said the K.Z., as he allowed his hand to be thoroughly shaken. "I still feel the impact of our acquaintance. Congratulations on that pin, I see that you are a near-Greek like I am. How do you like the life?"

"How do you like it yourself? You don't seem to be overly well pleased."

"I've been disappointed," said the K.Z. bitterly: "cruelly disillusioned. Years ago, when I was a mere lad in high school, I decided I wanted to be a Kappa Sig. I incurred my parents' displeasure by learning to smoke and drink, I accumulated a reserve of money in order to buy a dress suit, and the various trappings of social splendor; I learned to shove a mean shoe sole on the dance floor; in fact, I tried to develop myself into a sophisticated, slightly wicked type of man; that was my ideal of the typical Kappa Sig. Now that I am here I have been—well, you might say—earnestly invited——"

"I know what you mean," grinned the Phi Gam pledge.

"—to go out for student activities, and I have plenty to study. Study! Think of that. I thought that one of the initiation requirements was to flunk out of college. But they make me attend classes and keep up my work, and they are trying to get the scholarship cup away from those hillbillies across town. And then the other day came the crowning insult to me—they insisted that I cut out smoking and that I go to church on Sunday. That was too much, so I'm out here trying to get up courage enough to give back my pin."

"I feel the same way," said the Phi Gam pledge. "I, also, had a young ambition, as you did. I wanted to be a Phi Gam. So the year before I went to college, I went around to all the high schools in the state and by various means and manners, such as personal influences, and bribes when necessary, I managed to fix things so that when I came to college I could pull the Freshman class presidency. I had an idea that political prominence was an essential characteristic of every Fiji, so I meant to satisfy that requirement. I satisfied the requirement but I didn't satisfy the bunch. They wanted me to get a high scholarship average, and so now—"his voice broke, and fell in pieces all around them—"now they want me to—to resign the office and put more work on my studies. That was the absolute climax, the final blow. Combined with the daily luncheon sprint across the valley, I find that I have to do too much work to enjoy going to college, so I'm leaving school."

As he finished a S.A.E. pledge came up, and was cordially hailed by both of the unfortunates.

"Men," he said, "I'm out here trying to expand. You know our house is small, and I have slept and studied in such a small place that I have to get a block away from the house before I can draw a full breath for fear of pushing a wall out of place. I have been having training in a new college sport, pitching horseshoes. It strikes me as a fine sport, and I believe that I shall go out for the Varsity team. Although the game depends on horseshoes, there is very little luck in it, success depending upon patience, skill, and whether your horseshoe rings the peg or not. But the trouble is that going in for the sport has wrought my mind to such a pitch that I have had a nervous breakdown, and will be forced to go back home. I didn't realize that college sports had such an effect."

A Beta Frosh who had heard this last exchange of confidence chimed in.

"I came up to college," said he, "hoping to be a Beta. I stayed out of school a year after graduating from high school, and practiced chewing tobacco. I got so that I could even chew Copenhagen, and figured that I could make a bunch choose me on my chews, which I thought was the principal qualification. But when I got up here I found that they weren't merely a fraternity, but that they were a band. I was stumped for awhile when I found that every member and pledge had to be able to toot his horn—I mean play a musical instrument. Then I had an inspiration—I went down and got a Jews-harp, and got over big by playing solos to them. I was bid almost immediately. But playing in the band has taken so much of my time that I am afraid that I am going to lower my scholarship rating so that we shall lose our chance for that cup. This is a complex life."

"You're right, old lad, absolutely," said a Sigma Nu frosh, who had just horned in on the last word. "And the longer you live it the more complexion it gets. Now take me. I had always rather hoped to be a Sigma Nu. Now from what I had heard of them for the past few years I thought that they were all literary lights—or dark ones—and so I got some stories of mine published to attract their attention. But when I got here I found that they had two rigid requirements for entrance—you either had to come from Coeur d'Alene or from Genesee, and they had a rigid weight requirement. Every man that gets in over there goes on the scales and that requirement is a weigh up. A heavy one. I had got by on the location requirement with a forged birth-certificate, but the second I had to wait two weeks until I had gained enough to get by their scales. You'll notice that the Sigma Nu's are nearly all over-size men—well, that's because their motto is 'Where there's a will there's a weigh.' Eating half a pound of lead a day has had a bad effect on me though, so I'm afraid that I am going to get too light to stay in the chapter. If only I weren't light headed I might be able to make my weight through all right, but as it is, I am afraid that I am going to lose out."

You're somewhat in my fix," said a Phi Delt frosh who had listened to the Sigma Nu. "I had been looking forward to being a Phi Delt. All prospective Phi Delt's at that time had been practicing on being interior decorators. The idea was that they were to have a new house built in a semi-colonial style, and it was necessary to have a bunch of colonial looking fellows to make the proper atmosphere. A keen idea, wot? I practiced looking colonial in front of a big mirror at home until I got so good at it that people often mistook me for a porch pillar or a good old dormer window. But when I came up here, I found that all the practice had been wasted, what was wanted of me was athletic ability. I got the notion that the highest type of college man was an "I" sweater with a hunk of bone and muscle inside of it. I practiced so much football that today I tried a flying tackle at one of the colleges dances—just force of habit, you know—got in bad and I am afraid that my career is ruined. The climax of the whole thing is, now we are in the house at last, all that carefully created chapter which was to carry out the decorative scheme are wearing "I" sweaters and spoiling the color scheme."

A Phi Alpha Psi gave a knowing smile.

"We have the real action, I could almost say that we had a house before we had a chapter, and then picked the chapter to fit the house. By some financial wizardry which I don't quite understand, of which I am still afraid that I shall feel the effects, we are living in our own house. I fancy that if we decide to expand we shall just take over Im-Morrel Hall as an annex. We've got a fine 'military' life. One of our chaps is an enthusiast in military stuff so we rise by reveille, go to sleep by taps, and eat in rythm to one of Sousa's marches. It's a regular life, I assure you. We are thinking of marching over to classes in platoons, just to show the campus how we can step. Next to military stuff we come in on the newspaper game. Why, you know that so many of our fellows are newspaper men that we drink printer's ink at our meals. But man, as you fellows have said, it's a hard life. This newspaper game is contagious, and we'll have to do something, because, just the other day one of our fellows broke out with small-font type, just the same as measles, you know, and I am afraid that we shall have to be quarantined for the rest of the year."

"I've heard of people breaking into print," said an Elweta, who had just come up, "but I never heard of a person breaking out with print before. You fellows talk about the strain of college life, I've had more than any of you. See that?" He stretched out his arms and they saw that one was longer than the other, and one of his legs was longer than the other. "Moreover," he continued, "I wear a size thirteen shoe on one foot and a seven on the other, my ears don't match and I'm getting cross-eyed. This is all because I had a young ambition to be an Elweta, and everyone I saw was different and I pulled myself all out of shape trying to qualify. Now I am trying to get back to Normalcy, but even then I may not be the type. We live where a sorority used to live, but that doesn't mean that we'll always be after the women. We live near the campus and so make our eight o'clocks with less effort than anyone else. Classes then don't worry us as much as the rest of you, and now that the Phi Deltas have moved away we can take the guard off the kindling pile. Solid comfort expresses us, particularly the solid part. And lately, we've worked out a scheme whereby we will all raise mustaches and so set up a distant type; become the hairs of all the ages, so to speak. But I find that I can't raise it, so I'm going into retirement in the woods, and——"

At this moment the siren sounded for a pep rally, and so the chorus of moaners adjourned.

"A card to you, and a card to you, and a card to you, Dean."

"Now, gentlemen, here shows the first card of this pleasant little match."

"George, you pull a lady. Our friend Messenger pressed hard with a J. Boy. Little drags a seven spot. Poor form, Dean. And the last card is a trey."

"What do you do, gentlemen? The queen bets a flock of reds. Are you in, gentlemen? Are you in?"

"Everyone is in, gentlemen; the game is progressing nicely. Gather in while we slip the winning card."

"Around she goes, gentlemen. A six to you, an ace to you, a deuce to you, an eight to you."

"The Doctor pulls a deuce. Professor has an ace. What do you do, my friend?"

"A stock of Daddies. Are you in, gentlemen? All in? They come like a hungry bull to a haystack; like a mother to her long lost son."

"A six to you, making a big pair. A five to you, a nine to you, Doctor, and a king to you, Dean. Doc Miller is high, with a pair of sixes. What do you do, Doc?"

"My smiling neighbor heaves a single bean into the pot."

"A raise! A raise, gentlemen! The game is getting more life. Are you in, gentlemen?"

"A lady to you, a seven to you, a duck to you, and a king to you. Bet your hands, gentlemen. The Dean has two ducks and our friend on the left has a dead man's hand."

"The ladies and sixes invest a flock of reds. Don't waste your money, gentlemen. You pass it, sir." He sacrifices his pile to the cause. "Quite a lot of activity, gentlemen."

"A raise! A raise! Watch your cards, Dean. The team of emperors passes it up."

"Fifty blues, he says. What do you do, my friend?"

"A gob of blues. Have you got them, Dean? Boost him, Sir! Boost him! He thinks! Shall we let him ponder?"

"He only calls. What have you, Dean? Three ducks? 'Tis yours!" The Dean pulls the wad without a struggle.

"There's room for one more live poker player in this big hee hoss game."

HE beheld, then, coming down the hall briskly, a short, thick-set man of middle age with an energetic and jovial countenance. His eyes were blue and twinkling, his mouth rather wide with a decided inclination to curl up at the corners, and his head a great expanse of shining baldness, broken here and there by an unruly hair and surrounded by a narrow rim of brown hair. When he laughed his eyes were entirely hidden in a mass of wrinkles, and his round face and body seemed to distend as a soap-bubble ready to burst.

He came striding into the laboratory, sweeping all obstacles aside. He was tall and lean, his clothes seemed to exaggerate his leanness. His face was thin and expressed a sternness that is only visible on the faces of chemistry profs. He looked his students squarely in the face and announced that "no extension of time would be given on late work."

A tall man walked down the hall. His walk was ungainly, as if he put one foot before the other before he was really ready to take a step. His hair was brown, with a short pompadour, but toward the back of his head was a bald spot. His eyes were brown and sparkled when he laughed. His complexion was very dark. He had a peculiar habit of moving his hand across his cheek and chin as if in search of a beard. He had a black mustache and short, even teeth, except for one that was missing. He reminded one of a villain in the movies.

We beheld then, hurrying up the hall, and wearing a rusty suit that bulged away from the buttons, a short and plump old man. His hair was shaggy and lustreless white, his eyes were faded and twinkling, his complexion was sallow and crisscrossed with wrinkles. His glasses rested on his forehead. He had a kindly amused air and one might infer, that instead of being a scholarly professor, he was a jolly old street car conductor.

A very straight little man minced sedately into the class room. His youthful face had a sternness about it that was very near to severity. His complexion—all pink and white—hinted of the school room rather than of the out-of-doors. His hair, which he patted nervously, was light and fluffy, and neatly brushed. His eyes were blue and searching. He gave the impression, at first sight, of an inexperienced school boy pretending he was a university professor and moreover felt that he would make an angelic Queen of the May if fate had not clothed him in trousers instead of skirts.

Seated at his desk in front of the room was a faithful representative of Old Massachusetts. He was fair with large blue eyes, pink cheeks, and hair smoothly brushed. He was short and inclined to curves. His voice was low, clear and cultured. From the soft pongee shirt and the dark tie to the clocked wool socks and oxfords, his clothing was faultlessly correct, and in perfect taste. He looked like "Mamma's Angel Child," but actually was the naughtiest English professor at the University of Idaho.

She was a tall and decidedly angular person, with a sharp and penetrating gaze. Her hair was turning gray and done up in a knot on the top of her head; her eyes were blue and set rather close together; her nose had a downward and an upward swing which gave her the appearance of a hawk ready to swoop down upon its prey. She was dressed plainly, with long sweeping skirts and a high necked waist, which partly concealed the outlines of her throat. Every moment I expected her to swoop down upon me and tell me the evils of the tobacco habit.

ADVICE TO THE CO-ED

1. Tell him how many frat pins have graced your chest and that you danced the "I" Special. (This is bound to secure instant admiration).
2. Play something cute on the piano, and if he will stand for it, sing a couple of the latest. (This works very well at times).
3. Invite him out into the kitchen to make some candy. (Ten to one the fire is out and he has a toothache, but nevertheless he's sure to be delighted).
4. Before he leaves grip his hand firmly and with your party inflection ask him to come again. (If he does come again, don't be too confident. He probably forgot his rubbers).

A Gateway to Progress

There it stands—a simple forty-foot gateway but unlike any other in the entire world. Through it have come many of the engineering ideas that have made this an electrical America.

The story of electrical development begins in the Research Laboratories. Here the ruling spirit is one of knowledge—truth—rather than immediate practical results. In this manner are established new theories—tools for future use—which sooner or later find ready application.

The great industries that cluster around Niagara Falls, the electrically driven battle ships, the trolley cars and electrified railways that carry millions, the household conveniences that have relieved women of drudgery, the labor-saving electrical tools of factories, all owe their existence, partly at least, to the co-ordinated efforts of the thousands who daily stream through this gateway.

THE ABILITY to produce finely printed books and pamphlets at moderate prices depends not only upon the individual skill of the workmen, and the organizing ability of the management, but upon the equipment of the printing plant.

Q We have lately improved our facilities by the addition of one of the largest presses for fine printing ever brought west of the Rocky Mountains, giving us the best equipped pressroom in the state of Idaho.

Q Our conscientious effort is to build an organization able to better serve the buyers of printing in this state.

Q It is a pleasure to correspond with those who desire large or small editions of neatly printed books, booklets or pamphlets, in leather, cloth or paper covers.

EACH year we "go to college and high school" in the sense that we study students' needs, work with dozens of committees, and suggest novel ways of helping them "make a hit." And the man who works with them is a pretty recent college man himself!
