The transport Sumner started on her voyage for Manila with troops and supplies recently. Congressman E. H. Driggs of Brooklyn, after making a thorough inspection of the transport, declared that the charges of extravagance and lavish expenditure of money on the Sumner were true. He declared that the officers in command of the ship had taken the best rooms and crowded Colonel Davis, the officer in command of the troops for the Philippines, into inferior quarters. He examined every part of the ship, making copious notes of what he saw. Congressman Driggs condemned the unsanitary arrangements for the soldiers; 782 soldiers went on board.

WRECK NEAR SPRINGDALE

SPOKANE & NORTHERN WRECK.

The Train Plunges Through a Bridge—Flames Swept Over the Cars—Twenty-One Are in Ashes—Brakeman Dunlap Injured.

Spokane, April 3.—A serious and what may prove fatal accident occurred on the Spokane & Northern road Monday, resulting in serious injury to Brakeman Dunlap, slight injuries to several others, and the destruction of 21 freight cars with their contents.

The scene of the accident was on the high trestle near Sheep creek, about a mile and a half north of Springdale. North-bound freight train, No. 15, with Conductor Dorsey in charge, was running along with no suspicion of anything being wrong with the track.

Plunged Into the Gulch.

On reaching the trestle the engine and a number of cars passed over in safety, when suddenly the trestle gave way, precipitating several cars about the middle of the train into the gulch 40 feet below. In falling they drew with them both ends of the train, only the engine and one car remaining on the track on one side and the caboose and four cars on the other. Twenty-four cars went through the trestle.

The only one of the trainmen who was riding on the cars which went down was Brakeman Dunlap, and he is reported to be injured.

Four unknown men, who were stealing a ride, also went down with the train, but are said to have escaped with slight injuries.

As the cars struck and piled up in the gulch they caught on fire, presumably from a cargo of matches which was in one of them. Before the flames were extinguished 21 cars were destroyed. The cars carried a miscellaneous assortment of freight, there being a car each of whisky, beer, matches, coal, dry goods and groceries. There were also a number of cars of ice.

Bryan's Trip.

William J. Bryan made March 30 memorable in the political and popular history of eastern Washington by addressing no less than 35,000 people between and including the town of Colfax and the city of Spokane. Of these 35,000 listeners, 25,000 heard him in Spokane.

In the morning he spoke at Colfax, Garfield, Farmington and Tekoa, and in the afternoon he addressed an audience of 10,000 people, and in the evening an assemblage of 15,000 people in Spokane.

In the afternoon he spoke for two hours and fifteen minutes, and delivered the most magnificently partisan-patriotic address ever made in the Northwest. In the evening he talked for an hour and thirty minutes to a crowd greater in size by one-third than the one which listened to his earlier speech.

The evening throng was the biggest ever assembled in Spokane. The main exposition tent, capable of roofing 12,000 people, was used for both occasions. It was not spacious enough to hold the night crowd, which overflowed till a dense ring of people many rows deep fringed the whole circumferrnce of the tent.

Those who heard Bryan in Spokane came from all sections, cities and towns of the Inland Empire.

He departed immediately after his evening address on a special train for the west side of the state, where he will make several addresses in the principal cities, thence to return to California.

In the House.

In the house Tuesday Mr. Pierce, who stirred up something of a hornets' nest last Saturday by bringing to the attention of the house an interview in a local paper with an alleged republican representative charging that the Puerto Rican tariff was the result of a bargain for campaign funds, read that newspaper's affirmation of the accuracy of the interview. He also read Hanna's denunciation of the story that

When consideration of the army appropriation bill was resumed McRae attempted to secure an amendment giving the officers and men serving beyond the limits of the United States 10 and 20 per cent respectively extra pay, which would limit extra compensation to those serving in the Philippines.

The Coeur d'Alene investigation opened Thursday with no outward evidence of the exciting events of Wednesday.

Steunenberg was again on the stand, with Lents conducting the cross-examination. The evidence produced was on unimportant details, until the witness was questioned as to a recent petition from the Coeur d'Alene district asking the secretary of war to retain federal troops there. This petition has not yet been presented to the federal authorities and the committee went into executive session to determine what to do with the document.

The committee decided to file the petition from the Coeur d'Alenes with the secretary of war, and in the meantime it will not be made public.

In the Idaho riot investigation Representative Dick continued the examination of Governor Steunenberg during the afternoon session, going over a number of alleged acts of cruelty occurring in the bull pen. As to statements of the killing of a prisoner, Johnson, the governor said that on investigation he learned that it was a case of suicide of an insane man. As to the charge of a dying prisoner being refused spiritual communication, the governor said investigation of the story proved it false. The governor denied the charge that men were subjected to vile and inhuman imprisonment.

When the house met Monday, Payne, the majority leader, presented a resolution which was adopted calling on the secretary of the treasury for information as to whether the war revenue act had created a surplus, and all the details concerning the revenue under that act, with estimates of expenditures. The presentation of the resolution calling, as it does, for information which may furnish the basis for a reduction of the war revenues created considerable interest.

The chief interest in Governor Steunenberg's testimony before the Coeur d'Alene investigation was in his continuance of the recital begun at the last session of the old conditions prior to the uprising of April last. He had been asked by Representative Dick why he refused to disband the militia of the Coeur d'Alene district in 1897, as had been requested by the county commissioners.

He said that at that time officers of the Western Federation of Miners were advising the arming of the unions, and that he had an address by one of these officials stating that "every union should have a rifle club and that in two years we can hear the inspiring music of 25,000 armed men in the ranks of labor."

Steunenberg said that following this there was evidence in the Coeur d'Alene district that the advice was being followed.

In the Senate.

The conference report on the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill was agreed to in the senate Thursday. The consideration of the Porto Rican tariff and government bill was then resumed. Senator Beveridge of Indiana addressed the senate in support of the proposition for free trade between the United States and Porto Rico.

The president nominated Capt. Chas. S. Cotton to be rear admiral.

So far as the committee in charge of the measure is concerned, the Puerto Rican bill was completed Saturday, with the exception of two amendments which senators requested should lie over.

Saturday the house proceeded to the consideration of the fortifications appropriation bill. It was agreed that general debate on the measure should not exceed one and a half hours. Mr. Hemenway of Indiana, in charge of the bill, explained its provisions. It carries $7,039,488, being $4,659,540 less than the estimates. He said the reductions in the estimates had been made because it had been demonstrated that the government could manufacture its own guns cheaper than it could buy them and the appropriation would be sufficient to keep our gun factories at work eight hours a day for the ensuing year. The government, he said, manufactured 12-inch guns cheaper by $10,000 than they could be purchased, and 10-inch guns $7500 cheaper.

Making a Garden.

"A good garden is half the farm," says one writer, and "the garden furnishes about one-half of our living in summer, and its products are on the table every day in winter," says another, and neither of them is a vegetarian, though with a liking for fresh vegetables and fruits in season. To have a good garden the first requisite is a piece of strong but well-drained land, well manured. It should not be shaded with trees, nor should it be on a northerly slope, if possible to get a southerly or easterly slope. Certain crops belong in a permanent garden, and may be in one place for several years. The pie plant, asparagus, the bush fruits and grapes or peach trees may be on the south side of a high board fence at the north end of the garden. In front of these the hotbeds and cold frames may be permanent fixtures. Onions do well for many years in the same locality, and so will celery or carrots, though not so long. Sweet corn may follow sweet corn for many years in the same place, and so may peas, but if it is desired to put in another crop after peas or early corn, it is not so easy to find the late crop that grows well two years in the same locality. Cabbages and turnips certainly will not. For this reason, when on a farm, we preferred to move our garden, or at least the peas, corn, vines of all kinds, beans and all roots to a new location every few years, or so often that we did not have the same place oftener than once in five or six years. Even for such crops as lettuce, spinach, kale and dandelion a new locality is better than to continue them for many years, though sometimes they can be changed about with other crops. But with only a village lot one must change about, or omit some crops for a few years to get insects and fungous diseases out of the soil. If one will take this trouble, and will be sure to obtain good seed from reliable seedsmen, and put in work enough to keep it in good condition, the garden will not only furnish half the living for the family, but sales of surplus from it may help greatly in buying the other half.—American Cultivator.

Hotbeds.

Whoever has a hotbed in which to start early plants for setting in the garden should also have a cold frame into which he can transplant some of them to give them more room and harden them up a little before setting them in the open ground. Of course there are some who sow so late in the hotbed that this is not necessary, but they do not get their plants so well advanced, and gain but a week or two when they should gain as many months. Many are at a loss to know when the temperature is right for sowing seed in the hotbed. The best way is to use a thermometer, as one fairly good can be bought for a few cents. Plants which require much heat to germinate in open air, like tomatoes, peppers, egg plants or melons, should go in when the heat is at or about 90 degrees, while cabbages, cauliflowers and other medium early plants will do better if the glass does not mark above 80 degrees, and lettuce or radish would sprout readily at 70 degrees.—Exchange.

Care of Sheep.

There are two things that the sheep need as much as any animals on the farm. They need fresh air and they need exercise. The sheep shed should be so built that when it rains or snows so that the sheep cannot take their daily run in the field, the windows or upper-half doors can be opened to allow the fresh air to enter freely. If they have not been shorn they will not feel the cold, and only those who grow winter lambs shear in the fall. But whenever the weather is suitable they should have a run out in the field, not a yard bare of grass and filled with mud and manure, but in an open field. Even in a damp day they may be out for a short time, but not long enough to get their wool wet through. The uneasiness of sheep when in a pasture shows their need of exercise. They will not eat and lie down as a cow does, and some of the smaller breeds are almost as ready to jump on a wall for the fun of jumping, as goats are.

Changing Plans.

The farmer who is continually changing his breeds of stock or his favorite crops is very seldom a money-maker. He is apt to find out that he made the change just a little too late. He sees some one making money on beef cattle, and he abandons dairy farming to breed fat cattle, only to learn that he ought to have bred hogs. He tries hogs, and becomes convinced that sheep are more profitable. He gives up a crop that he knows how to grow to take up some specialty that his neighbor has found a profitable one, and a few years' experience teaches him how to grow it, but it also teaches him that he could have bought his experience much cheaper. We do not mean that a man should not change his breeds of stock, his crops or his methods of farming, but he will do well to make his changes gradually, and not part with a good thing every time he thinks any one else has a better thing.—Exchange.

Killing Weeds.

When the land has been plowed in the fall the farmer sometimes objects to cultivating or cross-plowing the field early in the season because the hardy weeds put in an appearance almost before frost leaves the ground. This is in favor of the farmer if he will give the subject the proper view, as he can destroy the weeds by loosening the soil, allowing warmth to enter, thus forcing the weeds to germinate, so as to destroy them before the seeding of grain is done. The earlier the weeds can be started the fewer there will be later on if the cultivator is used frequently after the weeds begin to appear.

Salting Their Land.

Two farmers living near Iola, Kan., have received a 40,000-pound car of salt from Hutchinson, which they will use on their farm. Both have extensive farm interests which they look after themselves, and they propose to sow the salt with oats, wheat and flax, on the theory that land so treated is given the chemicals required by those grains and in the belief that chinch bugs will shun the fields. Some of their unpractical town friends have rather a hankering for the belief that wheat so treated will grow loaves of salt-rising bread. At any rate the test is one which will be watched with interest, and the farmers may reap good returns from the $100 or more invested by these gentlemen in an experiment.—Abilene Chronicle.

Stretching Wire Fence.

I want to tell how I "paid out" wire in an easy and expeditious manner. Bored a hole in floor of small manure sled and in it fitted a pin made of an old fork handle. On this pin put a buggy wheel, on the wheel inverted a bushel basket and tied handles to spokes to keep it in place. Put a coil of wire over the basket, put one end through end post and into ratchet, hitched horse to sled and drove across field, cut wire and stretched it up and fastened in proper place on post. Went back across field, stapling wire loosely to each post, turned up the ratchet and was ready for another wire. If on opposite side of fence from where wire is wanted, a person following sled can easily pass it over tops of post.—J. V. McElhenie.

Spring Wheat.

When the fall sown wheat has winter-killed, or where the Hessian fly has been troublesome, spring wheat may be sown. This crop was once the favorite in many sections, but has been abandoned to a large extent, excepting in some northern localities as in Canada. There they still grow it in preference, and they obtain as good crops as are usually grown from winter wheat. We see no reason why seed obtained from the North should not yield a good crop in New York or Ohio, on any land that would grow winter wheat, and in a place where the fly abounds it would have to contend only with so many of them as came on the field from some field of fall sown wheat near by. The winter wheat has to contend against both the fall brood and the larger spring brood which results from it.—Exchange.

Cure for Colic in Horses.

When a horse takes the colic, procure some gunpowder containing saltpetre, which acts upon the kidneys. Charcoal and soda, which act on the stomach and the intestines. To give relief drench the horse with this; or, better, take saltpetre, alum, charcoal and laudanum, equal parts, and make a drench and give the horse. These are all safe with the exception of the laudanum. Be careful not to give over an ounce of the laudanum. Keep horse well blanketed and in good warm stable. See that he is not driven hard nor overheated, as this will cause colic; also, see that he has plenty of water, but not too much, and feed.—H. A. Cooley.

Wooden Walled Cisterns.

Cisterns made in the form of a large tank and let into the ground possess several advantages over the walled and cemented affairs, aside from the first cost. While a good cemented cistern is hard to improve upon, it is a fact that there are but comparatively few that do not leak water out or in. And where a crack is once developed, it is next to impossible to stop it so that water will not pass through. The first cost of a wooden cistern that will hold seventy-five barrels will not exceed $25. And then the expense is stopped, for if well made of the right material there will be little danger of leakage. They seem to give the best of satisfaction where in use.—J. L. Irwin.

Overworking Boys.

I once knew a farmer who had four sons. They all left him and the farm before they were 18 because they were overworked, and now the old man is overworked, being left alone to run the farm. He threatens to disinherit them for leaving him in a time when he needed them so badly, but they are very indifferent to his plans, for they are all doing well and getting along very nicely. When a boy knows more than a mule he knows when he is overworked. A mule knows that much, and a son ought to be better than a mule.—Homestead Farm Furrows.

As long as men are at work in a mine their cards are all on file with the employing company, so that the alteration can be made on fully 2500 of them at once.

BARBER TO FOUR MILLIONAIRES

Thomas Whalen Shaves Armour, Fairbank, Allerton and Field.

Thomas Whalen shaves four millionaires a day. He makes the round of their residences every morning and uses his own fast pacer to save time. They all pay him a liberal salary and in three hours each morning he earns more than the average barber does in four days.

Mr. Whalen's clients are P. D. Armour, S. W. Allerton, Marshall Field and N. K. Fairbank. They employ him by the year, and his salary continues whether they are in Europe, New York, California or Chicago. His contract calls for a daily shave in Chicago, and if the millionaires' chins are not to be found, Whalen is not the sufferer. His "pull" is said to be of the gentlest, but his fellow barbers declare it is very strong, and besides the salary he gets there is always a liberal Christmas present.

The salaries paid are as follows: Mr. Armour, $75 per month; Mr. Field, $75; Mr. Allerton, $50, and Mr. Fairbank, $35. All of these gentlemen have their private barber shops, and Mr. Whalen has the running of them. He keeps each supplied with the finest razors, shears, strops, soaps, mugs, and other requisites of a first-class tonsorial parlor. He knows the turn of every whisker of his patrons, and there is never any kick about razors with a "pull."

His labors begin early. Mr. Armour's home is his first stopping place, though recently, during that gentleman's residence in California, he has not been getting up so early. Mr. Armour has always shaved by 6 o'clock and often earlier. From there it is only a block to Mr. Field's Prairie avenue mansion, and just across the street, a little to the south, he finds Mr. Allerton ready for his daily scrape. But to reach Mr. Fairbank he must make a big jump to the North Side, and his fast pacer comes in good use. Cars are too uncertain, and Mr. Fairbank cannot be kept waiting or disappointed, and before 9 o'clock Whalen is at the Lake Shore drive residence, ready for Mr. Fairbank to come to the private barber shop.

"Tom" Whalen is one of the best-known barbers in Chicago. He has made a competency out of his work, and his income now is by no means beggarly, averaging close to $3,000 for the year. His last shop was in the Methodist church block. This he sold several years ago. He now devotes his attention to his four millionaire customers and several fine horses.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Sun Worship.

The most complete system of sun-worship that we have any account of was that existing in Peru when discovered by the Spaniards in 1526. The Incas, as the Peruvian monarchs were called, claimed to be children of the sun and his representatives on earth. Their government was a despotic theocracy, of which the Inca was both high priest and king. In Cusco, the capital, stood a splendid temple to the sun, in which all the implements were of solid gold. On the west end of the interior was a representation of the sun's disk, and rays in the same precious metal so placed that the rising sun, shining in at the open east end, fell full upon the image and was reflected with dazzling splendor. In the plaza or square of the temple a great annual festival was held at the summer solstice. The multitude assembled from all parts of the empire, and presided over by the Inca awaited in breathless solemnity the first rays of their deity to strike the golden image in the temple when they all prostrated themselves in adoration. Sacrifices, similar to those of the Jews, were offered on the occasion, and bread and wine were partaken of in a manner strikingly resembling the Christian sacrament. The moon as the spouse of the sun, the planet Venus as his page, the Pleiades, and the remarkable constellation of the Southern Cross, were minor deities. The rainbow and lightning were also worshipped as servants of the sun; and fire, air, earth and water were not without adoration. In fact, there was little in Nature that the Peruvians did not contrive to make a deity.

Mr. Hobart's First Fee.

One of the neighbors has told how the Vice President made his first fee as a lawyer. He was employed to write the will of a well-known manufacturer of Paterson, who was wealthy. Asked his fee, Mr. Hobart, the legal fledgling, replied: "One hundred dollars." It was from this that he received a significant hint how to succeed as a lawyer. The manufacturer was well pleased with his attorney, and turning to his desk drew out a package of bank checks that had come in during the regular course of business. Taking up one for $800 he indorsed it and handed it to Mr. Hobart.

"With this start in life," said the narrator of the story, "Mr. Hobart married the daughter of Socrates Tuttle, who has been his helpmeet through all the years that have followed. Years afterward Mr. Hobart learned that the granddaughter of his first client was about to be married, and that the family had been reduced to financial straits. He sent to her his check for $150 to assist in purchasing her trousseau, and took steps to provide other members of the family with employment."—Philadelphia North American.

TO RETAKE BLOEMFONTEIN

BOERS ARE CONCENTRATING

Fifteen Miles North—Big Battle Imminent—Lord Roberts Sends Troops Forward—Farms Are Raided—Funeral of Joubert.

London, March 31.—The Boers are concentrating in force about 15 miles north of Bloemfontein, in the rear of Glen, and Lord Roberts is sending forward troops to engage them. The Seventh infantry division and part of French's cavalry have been sent to join the Fourteeth brigade and the two cavalry regiments that are holding Glen and its environs.

It does not seem probable that the Boers will give serious battle in the fairly open country north of Glen. Still their evident strength indicates more than a corps of observation. In small affairs the Boers are daringly aggressive in all parts of the field of war. The Johannesburg mounted police, esteemed by the Boers to be their best mounted commando, are raiding the country near Bloemfontein, harassing the farmers who have given up their arms to the British, and carrying off cattle. Theere is a Boer report from Natal that a Russian soldier of fortune, Col. Ganotzki, with a hundred horsemen, is operating near the British outposts on the western border. The Boers have reoccupied Campbell and are in strength near Taungs and Barkley West. They shelled the British camp at Warrenton Wednesday, but moved out of range that night. Yesterday (Thursday) two British guns enfiladed the Boer trenches, quieting their Mausers.

Lord Methuen and the forces that had been operating in the Barkley district, have been recalled to Kimberly by Lord Roberts. No explanation has been given, but the mounted troops are dissatisfied at having been ordered back.

The Boers and disloyalists at Kenhardt have been dispersed and caused to retreat. Gen. Parsons is about to enter the town unopposed.

Lord Roberts is making extensive arrangements to police and safeguard all the Free State towns and territory occupied. Dispatches from Maseru assert that the Boers who returned to Ladybrand from Coloolan have taken up positions and sent pickets far in every direction to watch Basutoland, in the expectation that part of Gen. Buller's army will invade the Free State on that side.

According to Pretoria advices, Mafeking was bombarded for seven hours on Tuesday.

It is reported in London in a well-informed quarter that Lord Kitchener will be offered the post of commander-in-chief in India, succeeding the late Sir William Lockhart, so soon as decisive successes have been obtained in the Transvaal, and that Gen. Sir Archibald Hunter will succeed him as Lord Roberts' chief of staff. The Indian newspapers have been urging Kitchener's appointment.

President Kruger's Plans.

London, March 31.—The Bloemfontein correspondent of the Morning Post, telegraphing Wednesday, says:

President Kruger boasts his intention to retake Bloemfontein within a week and it appears probable that the Boers are advancing in force southward.

Many a bearded fugitive from justice has escaped by a close shave.

—A brother of Dan Moore arrived here the past week from Canada to remain permanently.

—Judge W. E. Stoddard, wife and child came over from Leland this week to visit the Joe Richards people.

—No use to get excited over the strip of land near Genesee—no way to get any of it just now 'phoned Register West to the NEWS yesterday.

—Wm. Harris, the Leland druggist, and wife will move to Pullman soon. Their son Frank, we understand, has purchased the store and will operate it henceforth.

—H. A. Samsel has purchased Mrs. Culbertson's claim near Nez Perce city and intends building a house and making other improvements thereon at once.

—Rumor has it that H P. Glass has been speculating heavily on the Chicago board of trade and hit the ceiling hard. NEWS hardly believes the rumor as Hank has always been a very shrewd manipulator with his cash. However, the chances of losing on the board of trade are greater than running a store in Genesee.

—Fort Sherman is to be abandoned. The detatchment of the Twenty-fourth infantry now stationed at the post, will be sent to Fort Wright. The reservation covering 1000 acres will be turned over to the interior department. What disposition will be made of it is not known. The department will have full charge of the post and may dispose of it at public auction to the highest bidder, and it is believed the disposal of the grounds at public sale would result in their being purchased by a syndicate and converted into a summer resort.

—Judge Shepard, former U. S. commissioner at St. Michael's, Alaska, says: "Whatever else may have found its way into print regarding the new El Dorado at Cape Nome that are exaggerations, there have been no fanciful creations as to its marvelous richness in gold and the prolificness of the yellow metal there awaiting him who may find it. The output last year was $2,600,000 that we have any record of. Next season the amount will reach $10,000,000. I know of one man who will take out $1,500,000 from his mines. The season of 1901 will be the great year of Cape Nome. The output simply depends on upon the facilities the miners have in getting at the gold. The metal is there in abundance and is located to be easy of access. Bed rock is reached anywhere from a few inches under the sand and moss to from 3 to 6 feet and on, depending upon the surface."

—Miss Myrtle Durr, sister of Mrs. Seymour, returned to Spokane Wednesday with Mrs. Pears for a visit.

—While we were enjoying the finest weather last week the people over the mountains in Dakota and Minnesota were cooled off with a snow storm. Great contrast.

—Miss Lucile Severance was married at her home in Walla Walla last week to J. W. Palmerton, a Pullman druggist. The bride was handsomely gowned in cream silk and wore bride's roses. Will reside in Pullman.

—Many newcomers are arriving daily from the east. Agent Harney reports that a Missouri Pacific passenger coach filled with people, mostly from Missouri, came in this week on the O. R. & N. They are all substantial, intelligent people, and are looking for homes in the west, says the Moscow Star.

—NEWS does not know what to say relative to the skimming station. Mr. Wood, who has charge of the affair for the Hazelwood Co., has been away most of the time for two weeks, and the farmers are not signing the petition as rapidly as was expected they would, evidently preferring to raise wheat exclusively.

—Hon. J. H. Forney returned from Washington, D. C., where he was in attendance as a witness before the congressional committee having in charge the investigation of the Cœur d'Alene riots. The Star says he escaped with his life but Governor Steunenberg's fate is still unknown. During his testimony the New York World cartooned him as "James H. Forney, the attorney of the Standard Oil Trust."

—The Genesee NEWS tells of a full grown parsnip left at that office. It is a giant in height, measuring six feet and eight inches. It could not be considered of stunted growth with six feet of its length taken off. North Idaho is a great rich country. Nothing grows small in that land of big productions —Idaho World.

Rich soil here. One family had twin babies and one cradle, and the kid who had to sleep on the floor grew twice as fast as the other. A man dare not stand on one foot any length of time, less one of his legs becomes longer than the other and bother him in walking.

Wireless Telegraphy.

It is said that successful experiments have at last been accomplished in wireless telegraphy, and this would undoubtedly be a good thing, and revolutionize many ways of doing business. One writer has gone so far as to say that wireless telegraphy is the greatest discovery of the age. We beg to differ. Don't overlook Hostetter's Stomach Bitters when you talk about the great things of the world. A LIBRARY IN TWO BOOKS.—It has been said that the Bible and WEBSTERS INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY constitute a good library; and while this seems to be a strong statement it is in a great degree true, for these two books constitute a source of knowledge that no single intellect can exhaust in a lifetime, and a fountain head from which all can drink and daily grow wiser and better. At any rate these books form the best foundation for every library, and in reading, as in building, a good foundation is essential. They are also authoritative guides, each in its sphere, the one, that the heart and life may not offend against God, and the other, that the tongue and pen may not offend against man.

—Ed. Follett is among the lucky ones securing a white pine claim. According to Josh Lamphear—and he never joshes, that is hardly ever—a quarter section with those tall pines is worth big money, from $2000 up. When a railroad taps that belt diamonds will be as numerous as twenty dollar gold pieces in a print shop.

—Republican primaries for Nez Perce county for the purpose of selecting delegates to attend county convention to elect delegates to the state conventions, will be held April 21st, at the polling places used in the last election, between the hours of 4 and 6 o'clock p. m. The day is May 18—the day when the fair lassies and stalwart lads who will "launch out on the stern realities of life," as the essays will say. Luck to the young people. Here are the members: Miss Gussie Rosenstein, Miss Opal Swank, Miss Teresa Walby, Mr. Ora McMahon.

—A decision which materially affects this section of country bordering on the north boundary reservation line has just been received from the secretary of the interior. The case arises out of an error in the official survey made by U. S. Dep. Surveyor Briggs, it being claimed that the deputy ran a line about one-half mile north of the old reservation line as surveyed by Deputy Thompson a few years previous and that by this error certain lands had been allotted to Indians which were formerly surveyed as public lands of the United States and had been patented by settlers and occupied by them for many years. This decision involves 4000 acres of land, the Indians will be reimbursed and a re-survey ordered.

—The city election passed off good naturedly, Tuesday. A little quiet in the forenoon, but long about 4 o'clock a few of the disinterested got interested and the voters commenced to roll out. The ladies turned out well, particularly in the east ward, and by seven when the polls closed, 187 people had cast their ballots. The contest for mayor brought out people who had not intended to show themselves near the booths. The only other contest was that over alderman in the first ward, Charley Kennedy winning over Milt Johnston on a canter. The vote on mayor—Dr. P. S. Beck 113, Dr. J. L. Conant, Sr., 94; council first ward—Chas. Kennedy 77, M. F. Johnston 28. R. Pickering for clerk, F. K. Bressler for treasurer, W. L. Biram for engineer, and Jos. Geiger for alderman second ward went in without opposition. The new officers will take hold of the ribbons at the first meeting in May.

—O. L. Phillips, on the Goldsmith ranch, left Wednesday for Moscow to get his son who is seriously ill with a cancer and continue his journey on east to New York.

—Rev. Fowler will deliver a sermon for the Knight Templars at Moscow one week from next Sunday. Rev. Walters will occupy the pulpit here and at Uniontown on this day.

—Preaching at Congregational church next Sabbath, morning and evening. Subject in the morning, "Deliverance in Christ." Communion will be administered and members received. Subject of evening sermon, "The Prodigal on His Feet." Sabbath school at 10 o'clock.

—In order to show what fattening qualities our wheat has, we will say Mike Evits killed a hog recently that weighed 800 pounds after being stuck, but not dressed, says the Uniontown Gazette. The men folks, including the owner of the hog, lost a keg of beer on its weight. Mr. Evits has fall wheat that never looked better, and will only farm 200 acres this season.

—Dewey says he will serve the people as president of the United States. Does not state what ticket he desires to be placed on. Admiral Dewey's naval rank was reduced when he was married. He became Mrs. Dewey's second mate. If either of the great conventions had been held six months ago the admiral might have stood some show of securing the high honor he craves, but now, think it a little late in the day.

—Asotin Sentinel says that section now presents a picture beautiful to gaze upon. With every variety of fruit trees in blossom, the blending of various colors of the blossoms, produces a picture of grandeur that cannot be equaled in the whole country. Truly, Asotin is a Garden of Eden. At Lewiston peas, potatoes, radishes, turnips and cabbage are all growing nicely in the garden, while the season here is a little later, Genesee people are eating rhubarb, new onions and greens.

—Geo. Hobson invited the senior NEWS man to take a ride to Uniontown behind his high stepping horse, Sunday. The day was beautiful and we enjoyed the outing. Saw some beautiful fields of green—Clark De Bow having one and the Scharnhorst three or four. Charley Meyer has one of the prettiest places along the road. Our sister town just over the state line presented a lively appearance at high noon when the people came down from church. Tramps have no business to go hungry now as we saw fifteen million squirrels hanging up to dry on the wire fences.

Hobson Thursday night of last week, on the eve of their departure, and had an enjoyable time visiting, telling stories, singing, listening to selections from the piano, violin and the phonograph, winding up with a fine spread. Hearty goodbys were given Mr. and Mrs. Nelson at parting.

—At a meeting of the republican central committee held at Moscow last Thursday it was decided to hold the precinct primaries for the election of 29 delegates to the state convention at Lewiston May 8, and also at Boise July 17, on Saturday April 21, the county convention to be held April 28. —The Big 4 Theatre Co., which has been in winter quarters at Johnson, will play their opening date at Elliott hall next Monday night. They were billed to appear Wednesday and Thursday nights of this week, but owing to the heavy rains early this week and the bad conditions of the roads they were unable to get here, as they travel altogether by team. Mr. Knowlton is an old actor of 35 years experience and is a public favorite, and has nothing but professional people with him. The company may conclude to play three nights. The bill for Monday night will be Uncle Josh, the favorite New England drama. Owing to the change of date, the advance agent stated that Mr. Knowlton was sorry for it but would endeavor to make up for the disappointment. The show is moral and the company made up of ten people and fine scenery.

Second Time on Earth

No Boils Nor Carbuncles Now—A Good Blood Medicine.

"I became convinced of the merit of Hood's Sarsaparilla when I took it myself as a blood purifier. So, when my husband had boils and carbuncles I urged him to take Hood's and the result was that when he had used but one bottle the boils had nearly all disappeared. He continued the use of the medicine and after taking two bottles he was completely cured, and, as he expressed it, felt as if he was on earth for the second time. He has never had any boils since. We take Hood's as a spring medicine and gladly recommend it." MRS. A. E. STAYSA, Yonkers, N. Y.

Scrofula from Birth.

"I have found Hood's to be the greatest blood purifier I ever took, and I have tried many medicines. I was a sufferer with scrofula from birth. My eyes were so badly affected I would be almost blind for a week at a time. My neck began to swell so that I could not breathe freely. Medicines failed to do me any good until I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. Today I have excellent health and my eyes give me very little trouble. I owe it all to Hood's, which I recommend to all suffering from any disease of the blood." MISS KETTIE MCGUIRE, Silver Creek, Ky.

That Tired Feeling.

"I cannot say too much for Hood's Sarsaparilla as a remedy for that tired and worn out feeling one has in the spring. As a strength builder and appetite creator it has no equal." MRS. L. B. WOODARD, 285 Ballou Street, Woonsocket, R. I.

So many society women are going on the stage that actresses may be crowded out of the profession.

It can at least be said for the man with a hoe that his position is better than that of the woman with a rake.

The American postoffice at the Paris exposition will serve the double purpose of accommodating tourists and of exhibiting the postal devices in which Yankee ingenuity leads the world. A correspondent of "Figaro," writing from Madrid, gives a very favorable account of the present condition of Spain, which he says "is making rapid progress toward recovery, after a series of cruel disasters." The tendencies to disorder have subsided; the danger of revolution has passed; under the influence of a well-balanced budget, public credit is improving; the personal worth and practical wisdom of the Queen Regent have "made her the one fixed point around which all the wishes of Spain and all the sympathies of Europe gravitate;" and her son Alfonso, who will ascend the throne in two or three years, gives fine promise of intelligence, courage and virtue.

The need of attending closely to details, even to the smallest, was enforced by Sir James Paget, the great physician who recently died, in an incident of his career. After operating upon a patient's heart—a most delicate operation—he gave orders that he should be kept perfectly quiet, and subjected to not the slightest disturbance, since his recovery depended upon perfect rest of the body. A few hours later a nurse, disregarding the order, complied with the patient's request for a biscuit. The patient ate it, and in doing so scattered a few crumbs in the bed. One of the crumbs presently tickled his back. He moved his body to escape it, the movement caused a ligature to slip, and the man died. "That crumb killed him," said the physician; and his judgment is not to be disputed.

There is a growing disposition in this country to regard circumstantial evidence as insufficient to convict a man of murder and to impose the death penalty. The conviction of Roland B. Molineux in New York of the murder by poison of Mrs. Adams is an instance. The State depended entirely upon circumstantial evidence and expert testimony. Molineux was charged with sending a package done up as a headache powder and containing poison to a man who innocently gave it to his landlady, who died after taking it. It could not be proven that Molineux had purchased or sent the poison, and no motive for doing so was made apparent. Experts declared that the handwriting upon the package was that of Molineux. Molineux says he is the victim of yellow journalism. It may be so. Yet the newspapers of New York did little more than secure evidence against him.

The only people in the world who have ever beaten Great Britain badly in naval conflicts, and from whom she has condescended to learn new lessons in naval warfare, are the Americans. She has more respect for and fear of the American navy than for any other, and has borrowed more ideas of us than from all others combined. This sentiment has been pounded into her by repeated victories won by Americans in the naval engagements of two wars, in both of which not only our warships but our privateers demonstrated that Great Britain was far from being mistress of the seas. In the revolutionary war our navy and privateers together captured or destroyed 796 British vessels, and in the war of 1812 they captured or destroyed 1,554. These exploits included some of the greatest naval battles recorded in history, resulting in American victories that astounded the British and no less the rest of the world that had come to regard them as invincible at sea.

The estimate is made by a high authority that the standard of personal morality is higher in America than in England, the standard of commercial morality a little lower, and that of political morality decidedly lower. If this be so, the interesting question arises to what extent men can be honest in private life and dishonest in public life. It does not seem logical that a man should permanently differentiate between a few of his countrymen and the great mass of them, so that when dealing with his neighbor he is honest and honorable, and when dealing with the whole nation he is not. Soon or late, the same rule must apply in both and in all cases. The question is, whether the standard of public morality shall be brought up to that of private morality, or the latter shall be brought down to the former.

Prof. Sumner rests his criticism of marriage upon the assertion that "not more than 10 per cent. of married couples realize their ideal." He might truly have said that not one couple in a million, or even not one anywhere on earth, ever fully realized the ideal with which it set out. But what then? Is marriage a failure because it does not produce precisely the results anticipated by the parties to it? Measured by such a standard, must not all human endeavor be reckoned a failure? Who that ever lived has realized all the dreams of his youth? Who has ever found life precisely what he planned it to be? In hundreds of thousands of happy homes marriage has been and is to-day an illimitable success. It has in none of them "realized the ideals" cherished at the beginning, but it has brought something immeasurably better into the lives of those concerned. It has knitted two kindred souls together. It has surrounded the hearthstone with children whose welfare and education is a common interest to the parents. It has invoked both joy and sorrow to unite two hearts with links of steel, for sorrows shared are as potent for love as joys in common. Human life is not dependent upon ideals. And marriage, with all its disappointments, has contributed more to human happiness and human advancement than any other institution ever devised by God or man.

By the action of the Senate in ratifying the Hague peace treaty, the United States now stands before the world as a nation no less ready to practice than to preach arbitration. Its promptness in accepting the invitation to The Hague, the eminence of those who represented the country, its commanding position as one of the great powers of the world, and the government's well-known advocacy of the principles of arbitration, all tend to invest the action of the Senate with peculiar significance. By it we have now shown our good faith and other nations may follow. The aim of the treaty, stripped of complicating details, is merely to make peace easier and war more difficult. It can not compel peace, for it leaves each nation free to choose a course for itself; but it seeks to render the resort to arms the last resort. By providing for peaceful offers of mediation it paves the way for reason and sober second thought. By establishing an international court of arbitration it furnishes a simple and dignified method of bringing the question at issue before the great tribunal of enlightened public opinion. One of those who represented this country at the conference has told of the interest manifested by the American people during the meetings at The Hague. Day after day cablegrams, resolutions and letters of sympathy poured in upon the American delegates. Coming from all parts of the country, and from all kinds of people, their receipt not only strengthened the hands of the American representatives, but impressed the delegations from other countries with a profound sense of the zeal of the great republic for the cause of peace and arbitration. The public opinion of the United States spoke in those earnest and cheering messages. It has undergone no change since. The Senate's action shows a just comprehension of its great responsibility and a true estimate of the power and honor and sanctity of its opportunity.

Tailless Dogs.

The "schipperke," a small dog which comes from the low countries, is tailless. He is in his native country the favorite companion of the Flemish bargee, and hence his name, which, in English, means "little skipper." At the Fakenham dog show of 1876 the Prince of Wales exhibited a pair of Indian tailless dogs. Then there is the bobtail sheep-dog. Until within the last half-century sheep-dogs without tails were exempt from taxation, it being supposed that no one would keep a tailless dog who could afford to pay the tax. As a consequence, almost every sheep-dog had his tail cut off, and owing to this cause the tailless sheep-dog, still met with in some localities, has arisen. Darwin tells us that a mutilation of this kind will often become hereditary.

THE DREAM IN BABY'S EYES.

What is the dream in the baby's eyes,
As he lies and blinks in a mute surprise?
With little, wee hands that aimlessly go
Hither and thither and to and fro;
With little, wee feet that shall lead him
—God knows,
But a prayer from my heart like a benison goes;
Bundle of happiness, yonder he lies—
What is the dream in my baby's eyes?

What does he wonder and what does he know
That we have forgotten so long, long ago?
Bathed in the dawnlight what does he see
That slow years have hidden from you and me?
Out of the yesterday seeth he yet
The things that in living he soon shall forget,
All that is hidden beyond the blue skies?
What is the dream in my baby's eyes?

Speak to me, little one, ere you forget;
What is the thought that is lingering there yet?
Where is the land where the yesterdays meet,
Waiting and waiting the morrows to greet?
You wee, funny bundle who only will blink,
What do you wonder and what do you think?
Bright as the moonlight asleep in the skies,
What is the dream in my baby's eyes?

Story of a Shield Pin.

I DO not like to take up personal cases, as we detectives call a certain class of work, so when Miss Angell of Broadside street sent for me to take up a "small personal mystery" I responded with a poor grace.

Scarcely had she begun to tell her story, however, than I became so interested that I begged her to continue and tell me the details as far as possible.

Miss Angell was engaged to Mr. Cloud—a peculiar combination of names to begin with, and was devotedly attached to him. In fact, she confessed with tears in her eyes that his love was more, or had been more, than life to her.

The rest of the story I will let her tell in her own words.

"Mr. Cloud," she said, "is in the habit of calling on me almost every evening. About a week ago he came to dinner, invited by mamma. He was to attend a supper of the Phoenix Club at 10 o'clock, and wore evening dress.

"At the table we noticed an exquisite shield pin he wore. It shone so brilliantly that it caught the eye at once. Mr. Cloud took the pin off and it was passed around the table for us all to examine.

"It was a shield as large as a quarter with the outside edge bordered with pure rubies, blood red, all of a size and without a flaw. The center of the shield consisted of a large diamond cut not very deep, yet too deep to be sunken, so it was elevated in a wire setting. Around the diamonds were perfectly matched black pearls. The combination was so unusual that we exclaimed as we handled the jewel and I remarked that I had never seen it before.

"When we had finished examining it Mr. Cloud said: 'That is my Phoenix club badge. It belongs to the president. When I was elected the badge was presented to me by the members and when I resign, and a new president comes in, I must give up the badge to him. It is the president's badge, to be owned by him during his term of office. Of course, it is only to be worn at the meetings.'

"Mamma spoke of its great value. 'Yes,' said Mr. Cloud, 'it is indeed very valuable. It is worth thousands. If I were to lose it I should feel ruined, as I could never hope to replace it.'

"As he spoke Mr. Cloud's face became very serious. 'We once had a case of that kind,' said he—'a most curious case. The president lost his badge and committed suicide next day. You see he was suspected of having sold it.'

"After we had looked at the badge and talked about it, I very foolishly asked to wear it, and in a fit of waywardness I reached across the table, took it up and put it in the bow of ribbon at my throat.

"At the close of the meal, Mr. Cloud asked me for it, but I, to tease him, said I meant to keep it, and ran up stairs with it on.

"After they were seated in the parlor I stole quietly down the stairs and placed the pin in the lining of Mr. Cloud's overcoat, directly under the lapel.

"I went back up to my room and came down stairs again. I found mamma and my sister seated alone in the parlor. Mr. Cloud had gone out to send a telegram. He would be back in a minute.

"When he returned, which was after half an hour, he came in for only a minute, to say good-by, he said, and to ask for his pin: 'Come, Mazie,' he said, you have teased me long enough. Let me have the pin now. I must go.'

"'I gave it back to you,' I said, 'and you have it now.

Then I stood up and running my fingers along the lapel of his coat felt for the pin. It was gone!

"I turned as white as snow and as I felt the color leaving my face, I said: 'I gave it back.'

"My mother looked up surprised and Mr. Cloud stared at me. 'Yes, I gave it back. I put it on your coat. You must have it.'

"'Why, Mazie,' said Mr. Cloud, 'how can you say so?'

"I pass over the disagreeable scene which followed. I will not mention Mr. Cloud's chagrin or my mother's amazement, even as I explained how I had stolen down the stairs and had fastened the precious pin in the lapel of the coat, just for fun, and how I intended after teasing him to tell him that it was there. As I talked I could see my mother's incredulous looks and Mr. Cloud's absolute dismay. They did not believe me!

"After the most painful quarter of an hour which I ever expect to spend Mr. Cloud left, shaking hands cordially with my mother and saying a cold good-night to me.

"After he had gone my mother said: 'Mazie, my darling girl, tell the truth. It is not too late.'

"'There is nothing more to tell, mother,' I said. 'I have told you the whole truth.'

"After a while my mother saw that I was in earnest and she believed me. But as next day came and passed, and no word came from Mr. Cloud, I saw that he doubted me. The third day there came a formal note saying that if I would return the pin he would give me its value in money, paying me as rapidly as his circumstances would permit. As it was valued at many thousands, it was then beyond his means.

"I tore the note into bits and did not reply.

"That was a week ago. For the first three days I was too much overcome by mortification to take any steps toward establishing my innocence. But now that I am in a soberer mind I wish to learn, if possible, what became of the pin after I placed it in the lining of the lapel of Mr. Cloud's coat and where it now is."

The recital took some time, for the young lady's emotion overcame her more than once. And I must confess that I, too, felt indignant for her. First that fate should have played so unkind a trick upon so beautiful a young girl; and secondly, that her lover, Mr. Cloud, should have doubted her so easily.

"I am willing," she said, "to spend any amount to clear myself of this disgraceful suspicion, and hope, with your assistance, to solve the mystery."

"It is so long a time," I began, "if you——"

"Yes, I know," said she, impatiently.

"Still," I said, "I will do my best. But you must allow me to talk with Mr. Cloud. That will be absolutely necessary."

At this she became greatly alarmed, but finally consented.

That same day I called on Mr. Cloud and was received by him in his private office. He was not cordial, and I soon saw that, while he would not accuse the young lady, he thought she had kept the pin. He told me that, on leaving the parlor, he had put on his overcoat and and had gone to the nearest telegraph office to send a message. There, meeting an old friend, he had gone into a cafe and taken a drink, after which he had returned to the house of his fiancee, having been gone about half an hour.

"Tell me the name of the cafe," I said.

Having carefully noted the names and addresses of all concerned during that half hour, I left Mr. Cloud and I will do him the justice to say that I think he was half-convinced that he might have made a mistake.

Going first to the telegraph office, I walked from there to the cafe. At that moment a wagon stood in front of the door and they were bringing out the soiled table linen.

An inspiration came to me, and I said to the driver: "How often do you take away the linen?"

"Twice a week," said he. "But this week we had a breakdown and we are late, and it's almost eight days."

As the driver started away I said: "I want to search that load of napkins and if you will drive them into that vacant lot I will pay you well for your trouble."

Once in the lot I overhauled the contents of the wagon thoroughly; and was finally rewarded by feeling a hard lump of something which hurt my hand as I pinched it.

Looking closer I saw tangled in the fringe a glittering jewel, which, as I extricated it, proved to be the diamond set in the gorgeous pin which had been so accurately described to me by Miss Angell.

I did not let the driver know of my booty, but making an excuse that I could not find what I wanted, I walked away, nor did I stop until I had telegraphed to Mr. Cloud. A few minutes later I sat in the parlor of Miss Angell's residence talking to her. When I had told my story and laid the pin in her lap her joy knew no bounds. Just at that moment Mr. Cloud was announced, and Miss Angell then and there gave him the pin. I never saw a girl so happy. She almost hugged me.

As soon as Mr. Cloud saw his mistake he was humbly apologetic and tried to fall at her feet, but she waved him away, and Mrs. Angell delicately suggested that, as his presence would always remind them of a painful chapter, it would be better if he were to go away and stay away!

I may add that when Mr. Cloud went into the cafe the pin was in the lapel of the coat, but, becoming entangled in the fringe of his napkin, was pulled out and would have been lost forever had it not been for the perseverance of the plucky Miss Angell.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Growth of Human Hair.

Authorities differ as to the rate of growth of the human hair, and it is said to be very dissimilar in different individuals. The most usually accepted calculation gives six and one-half inches per annum. A man's hair, allowed to grow to its extreme length, rarely exceeds 12 or 14 inches, while that of a woman will grow in rare instances to 70 or 75 inches, though the average does not exceed 25 to 30 inches.

Women's Doings.

THE WELL-DRESSED WOMAN.

A well-dressed woman is not necessarily expensively dressed, and it is possible that clothes may be both costly and well made, and yet the general appearance of the wearer anything but desirable. The reason, then, will probably be that her clothes are not suitable for the work or the pleasure that she has in hand, or that their colors are not well chosen, or that they are not neatly and trimly put on. There is an immense deal in the way people put on their clothes; some people are always neat and dainty in every tiny detail, and others say that "so long as the general effect is good little things don't matter," for it never occurs to them that it is just the attention to "little things" which makes good general effect possible. The woman of refinement is never loudly dressed, but she is always absolutely dainty. She may be poor and have to earn her living, but still there will be no mistaking her. She will perhaps wear a somewhat shabby serge costume, but it will be well brushed, and instead of decking herself out with fluffy lace and ribbon neck arrangements, which soon crush and soil, you will notice that she favors linen collars and cuffs and a neat tie. She is never guilty of overdressing, a fault more common with the average than with the wealthy woman, for though "the sweetest blouse in the world—all tucked silk and lace," and "a darling little rose toque" are to be had in sale time for about the same sum as she would have to give for a well-made cotton shirtwaist and a simply trimmed straw hat, she knows that the former would be out of keeping with the rest of her clothes and her surroundings generally, and that, being unsuitable, they would look vulgar, however pretty they might be in themselves.

Men Admire These Girls.

Men admire the girl who is her mother's right hand in household matters, and who is not above taking an interest in the most trivial things in connection with household duties.

They admire the girl who is a bright, entertaining companion, and who has ever a kind word and pleasant smile for those around.

They admire the girl who is always neatly gowned, no matter if in inexpensive materials, and who never dresses loudly or in questionable taste.

They admire the girl who can adapt herself to any society, who never puts on affected airs, and who would scorn to do an action of which all the world might not know.

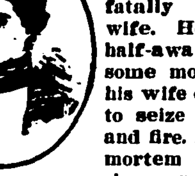
They admire the girl who in an emergency can turn her hand to anything, from cooking the family dinner to retrimming an old hat.

They admire the girl who is unselfish enough to give up some pleasure of her own to benefit another, and does not consider herself aggrieved at having to do so.

They admire the girl who can talk of more important things than dress or the last new play, and who can listen intelligently when deeper subjects are introduced.

Shot by Her Husband.

Alfred Morrison, a Mount Vernon, N. Y., teacher, had a great fear of burglars. He slept with a revolver under his head, and while dazed by nightmare and fear of thieves fatally shot his wife. He was only half-awake, and some movement of his wife caused him to seize a revolver and fire. In an antemortem statement she exonerated him.



MRS. MORRISON.

Wives, Remember!

That he is not in love with every woman he glances at.

That it is policy to let him believe he is "lord and master."

That your relationship is closer to him than to your mother.

That a prompt and pointed answer does not turn away wrath.

That he does not get sleepy the same moment that you do.

That there are letter drop-boxes on the nearest corners.

That you should not expect him to light the fire in the morning.

That you can't keep books, and there is no use of your trying.

That he expects you to look your best when you go out with him.

That it does not improve his razor to use it for chiropodical purposes.

That house-hunting is not reckoned by the average man as a pleasure.—Boston Journal.

The New Shirt Waists.

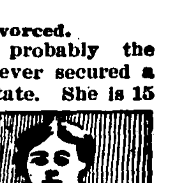
The stores are crowded with an enormous variety of shirt waists. It is difficult to predict, but it seems as if a white season is being inaugurated. Thin materials in these white waists are the rule. Lawns, organdies, batistes, silk-striped ginghams and many beautiful novelty goods make this year's waists really artistic creations. Yokes are seen rarely and the shoulder seam is directly on the shoulder as in dress waists. A new collar has made its appearance; it is cut with high rounded points under the ears, and closes at the back. On thin waists this collar may be made of linen, or of the material, but all are stiff. There are many turn-down collars—that is, collars turned down over a high soft band. Cuffs are also in many instances soft with turned-back edges. Sleeves are smaller than ever, and there is very little fullness in the slightly-bloused fronts. A dainty fancy is to wear a narrow black velvet tied around the collar of white waists. The waistband must then be also of black velvet ribbon about three inches in width.

One of Papa's Love Letters.

A girl recently played a cruel joke on her mother, and this is how it happened: She accidentally found a love letter that her father had written to her mother in the halcyon days of their courtship. She read the letter to her mother, substituting her own name and that of her lover. The mother raved with anger and stamped her foot in disgust, forbidding her daughter to have anything to do with a man who would write such nonsensical stuff to a girl. The girl then gave the letter to her mother to read, and the house became so suddenly quiet she could hear the snowflakes falling in the back yard.

Only 15 and Divorced.

Sadie Giannosa is probably the youngest woman who ever secured a divorce in New York State. She is 15 years old. She eloped with Giannosa last July, and left him one month later. Sadie has already received a letter and photograph from an admirer in Jefferson City, Mo., who wrote that he read of her application to the court, sympathized with her, and is ready to marry her whenever she is willing.



SADIE GIANNOSA

Stains Made by Vaseline.

Few stains are more obstinate than those made by vaseline. How to remove them was told recently by a domestic science teacher. "Have ready," she said, "a moderately hot iron and four pieces of blotting paper. Put two thicknesses of the paper on a board and wet the spot thoroughly with benzine. Lay on the stained cloth, cover with two other pieces of blotting paper, and press quickly with the iron. An old stain may need two or even three applications to remove the stain. The caution is repeated that benzine, being very inflammable, must be used with great care.

Keeping Cut Flowers Fresh.

"There are many ways to prolong the life of cut flowers," said a well-known florist recently. "The simplest one and usually considered the best is to put the stems into boiling water for two or three minutes, and then place the flowers in a vase of tepid water. A bit of stick charcoal in the vase will keep the flowers fresh for many days. A simple remedy for the unpleasant odor which is produced in the water in which mignonette has been placed is to put a little sal ammoniac in the vase."

Curtains Made of Cords.

In places where heavy draperies are unsuitable for separating small rooms from each other, or where there is a desire to separate an alcove from the main part of a room, a portiere of large silk cords ending in tassels or balls is sometimes used with good effect. This hanging is suspended beneath fretwork, and every few inches the cords or little ropes are broken by silk balls of a contrasting color, says the Kansas City Journal. A hanging of pale sage color has the balls alternately of old rose and old blue.

Woman's Way.

It was her very first love letter—
(With an exception or two).
She wrote a half a day or better
Before she said 'twould "do."
Note after note—she wrote, rewrote,
And finally wrote anew.

'Twas done at last—a tedious task,
To clear away the waste.
What wrote she? What need to ask?
Thus finished she: "P. S.—Pardon me
For writing in such haste."

MINES AND MINING NEWS

OUR NORTHWESTERN MINES.

Items Gleaned From the Late Reports—All Districts Are Being Developed—A Prosperous Year Is Predicted—Mining Notes and Personals.

Like every new camp Buffalo Hump has its advantages as well as its disadvantages and this was recognized by those earliest on the ground. The distance from transportation, about 100 miles, is recognized as a most serious drawback. Yet, notwithstanding this fact, investors readily availed themselves of the opportunity for investment. What has been the greatest attraction to parties who for the first time visit this section, is its wonderful surface showing and the only question has been, are the formation and characteristics of the ore-bodies such as would indicate permanence and depth. While it must be conceded that the great Idaho gold belt which trends through this district, is unequaled for richness and width, of course it cannot be expected that ore bodies will be found at every point along its line. However, after a careful and thorough examination by a number of the leading mining experts of the west, many of the largest operators in the country have thought sufficiently favorably of it to put in vast amounts of money.

REPUBLIC.

Only one shift is working on the Rebate tunnel. Progress is made at the rate of about two and a half feet per day.

The Golden Harvest adit is still moving forward about three feet per day. The average width of the ledge is about six feet.

The machinery of the Chico compressor plant is being put in place rapidly and it will probably be ready to start up the early part of this week.

On the Stray Horse the diamond drill has penetrated 290 feet. The drill is said to be working satisfactorily. It is yet too early to pronounce it an unqualified success.

Charles F. Potter, superintendent of the Golden Lion and Little Four Consolidated, states that he was making the needed preparations to begin prospecting with the diamond drill on the Golden Lion.

The local manager of the Quilp states that the values were improving, and that the quartz was rapidly coming in in place of some of the streaks of porphyry that have been encountered heretofore.

The wheat market shows slight change. Walla Walla was steady at 53 and 54c with the usual reports of fancy bidding in the interior, some reports getting the figure up to 55c. Valley is steady at 53 and 54c.

Superintendent James S. Wyatt, of the Mountain Lion, states that the mill is working in a satisfactory manner. The saving of the free gold on the plates continues to be satisfactory in the fullest degree, and the cyanide is doing its work far in excess of his expectations. As a whole, the saving is all that could be reasonably expected. The values are improving every day, and it is now no longer a theory, but a fact, that the treatment is a proper one for the ore of that mine.

Good progress is being made in laying the walls for the foundation of the Republic mill, and the grading is progressing favorably. The frame of the sampling mill is up and timbers are being rapidly framed for the big mill. Lumber is being rushed to the ground at a lively rate since the roads began to dry up. The framing would have been much further advanced if the timbers had been on the ground sooner. The plant of the Republican Reduction Company is getting in place fast and supplies are well nigh all in. It can not be stated with certainty when the machinery will start up.

Every day adds to the known length of the Princess Maud ore shoot. The face of the drift is 90 feet from the winze, and there is no ore in the entire vein for that distance on that level that does not show high values. The vein is slowly but steadily widening. It is five and a half feet wide now, which is about five inches wider than it measured a week since. The ore averages at least $43 per ton. Much of it is far richer. But 90 feet of ore of that grade and width marks the Princess Maud as one of the biggest things in the camp.

BRITISH COLUMBIA.

The California's compressor at Rossland has started up and is working in a satisfactory manner.

Rich ore has been struck in the Velvet, on Sophia mountain. Manager Morrish says that he has 12 feet of rich ore opened on the 300-foot level and the mine is ready to ship to Northport.

The recent explosion in a powder works house near Nelson, B. C., killed two men. William Way's body was torn in fragments, while Harry Gervan was terribly mangled. The building was literally blown off the face of the earth.

A ledge of almost pure limestone nearly 100 feet wide was recently discovered on John A. Manly's property about one and a half miles east of Grand Forks. It is situated on the slope of a hill near Echo creek, and can be reached by an easy gradient less than a quarter of a mile from the route of the proposed extension of the Granby smelter spur to McCool's.

There is promise of activity in the Lardo-Duncan this season. Already much talk is heard to the effect that both the Canadian Pacific railroad and the Kootenay Railway & Navigation Company will renew work on their lines in the district, while not a few prospectors are already waiting for the snow to melt to enable them to get on the hills.

Four feet of solid ore, giving average values of $80 per ton, was encountered last week in a drift from the 130-foot level of the Golden Eagle in Brown's camp, north fork of the Kettle river. The other claims in the group are the Leekey and Junction City Fraction. They adjoin each other. The ownership is vested in the Royal Victoria Gold Mining Company. The group is situated upon a spur of Volcanic mountain and about 1,000 feet above and half a mile distant from the river. The distance from Grand Forks does not exceed 10 miles.

The progress made in mining in southeast Kootenay during the past year settles the question beyond cavil that that district is bound to be one of the richest in British Columbia. Not only have the developments shown this to be a fact, but it has brought to the front another very important fact, and that is that the rich mineral deposits extent over a vast area. From the celebrated St. Eugene on Moyie lake to the wonderfully rich North Star to the north, the Tracy creek and Wild Horse properties on the east, and Bull river and Sand creek properties on the south includes a domain that has brought forth properties already that alone would give fame to any district. Last season was the first that any great amount of money had been expended aside from three or four well-known mines, and this money has brought forth results that convinces the most skeptical that southeast Kootenay has just entered upon an era of great prosperity. The developments of the past year have aroused greater interest and created confidence, which means that capital will come more readily into the district than ever before.

Moyie is on the boom and the present season will be a record breaker for development.

MINING NOTES.

The Great Western Mining Company operating on the Nespelim, on the south half of the reservation, is about to install a saw mill, having obtained a permit from the department of the interior. The shaft is reported down about 80 feet in high-grade galena ore with a more solid showing than at any earlier stage.

Among the most important mines of Baker City district is the Virtue-Collateral, which comprises the old Virtue mine and the Collateral mine, having a 20-ton stamp mill.

The Calumet and Hecla of the lake Superior district is an immense body of ore of an average value of about four per cent. This mine has paid more than $60,000,000 in dividends. The Butte, Montana, mines average about five per cent in copper and $2.10 in gold. The great Anaconda Copper Mining Company in 1889 reduced 1,525,749 tons of ore, which yielded on an average 4.64 per cent of copper, 4.16 ounces of silver and .014 ounces of gold. It paid in dividends during 1889 $3,000,000. The Butte & Boston Company's ore in 1897 averaged about seven per cent copper, and it made net $3,016,000 in round numbers.

The greatest of Arizona's copper producers, the Copper Queen, having produced millions, yields an ore averaging less than eight per cent, ore as low as 2 1-2 per cent being matted profitably.

The Quincy Mining Company of Lake Superior region in 1897 stamped 542,623 tons of copper ore, which yielded 1.58 per cent of copper. It sold $1,872,213 worth of copper and $18,025, making 4 1-2 cents a pound on each pound of copper.

Over $500 per day cleaned up in placer mining the surface of the ledges on Thunder mountain. The vein is said to be of enormous width, with free gold everywhere in evidence.

Rich is the Black Bear at Loomis. The mill is running again.

Ruddy gulch, midway between Wallace, Idaho, and Mullan, is now one of the liveliest spots in the Coeur d'Alenes where only prospecting work is being done.

The Bull Frog's big vein is proving a wonder. These are busy days in Okanogan.

ALL EYES ARE ON RUSSIA

WAR IS NOW MOST IMMINENT.

With Japan and Also Turkey—British Think It Is Bluff—Japan's Navy Unprepared—The Sultan Is for a Compromise.

London, April 2.—Russian activity has been the international factor of the past week and diplomatic functionaries attached to the court of St. James are asking themselves: "What does it all mean? Where will it end?"

The Russian ambassador smiles blandly and assures his dear friends that it means "nothing, absolutely nothing," but just the same, speculation is acute. There are many men of fair standing and a tolerable knowledge of international undercurrents who are willing to say that war between Russia and Japan has come within measurable distance. Of these Henry Norman, who has just returned from a trip to Russia, is one. But the Associated Press learns that no such view is taken by the British foreign office, which, during the recent troublesome times, has sized up the international situation with wonderful correctness.

The next few weeks may, perhaps, bring up a tremendous war scare, but the salient fact remains that Japan is not ready for hostilities. Alarming telegrams from the far east may increase and multiply and Korea may seem to be on the verge of annexation by Russia, but the calm of Downing street is not likely to be disturbed. Korean matters are arranged by treaty and Lord Salisbury does not believe than Russia intends to break the treaties, though her relations with Japan may become strained to a serious point. If all this rumpus in the far east had been postponed for a year there is scarcely a doubt that the war would be a serious probability, but those having intimate knowledge of Japan's far-reaching naval projects and her recent state of incompleteness, do not hesitate to say that Japan is not going to risk anything until her plans are matured.

Japanese naval maneuvers in the coming fall are to be carried out on an unprecedented scale and will partake more of the nature of a demonstration than of peaceful evolutions. Forty or more war vessels are expected to be present in Japanese waters.

There seems no longer to be any doubt that Turkey for her tardiness to meet the Russian demands regarding railroad concessions is being menaced by her northern neighbor and many signs point to the fact that Russia intends to settle herself in the northeast of Asia Minor unless Turkey gives in. Already a quarter of a million of Russian troops are maintained on those borders, while the Black sea squadron is ready for business at a moment's notice.

To what extent British moral assistance can be given to Turkey in offstanding the Russian demands is a question which at the present moment is occupying Lord Salisbury's attention to an even greater extent than the South African war. In view of the troubles of Great Britain in South Africa it is more than probable that Turkey will meet the demands and that the Russian troops will be withdrawn.

The scare anent Russian troops concentrating in Afghanistan apparently arose from this movement in the direction of Turkey in Asia Minor and Afghanistan has passed into the category of peaceful, uninteresting spheres.

With all these reports, to say nothing of continued rumors of Bulgaria's desire to throw off Turkey's suzerainty and become a vassal of the czar, it is evident that while Russia is observing in the latter her promise to England not to interfere in South Africa she is not idle in taking advantage of opportunities in every quarter of the globe. For the peace of the world, it is reassuring to remember that the fixed policy of Russia for years has been to take matters almost to the point of hostilities and then to settle diplomatically, the only exception of this in modern times being the Crimea, when the tone of the peace party in England led her to believe this country would not interfere.

Money for the Boers.

Berlin, April 3.—Dr. Leyds informs the Berlin press that 400,000 marks have been collected for the Boers.

Not Fond of Arbitration.

As a nation and as individuals the British are very wroth over the Delagoa Bay railway award. The average opinion is that this is merely the latest instance where the country has got the worst end by trusting to arbitration. All high flown prophesies that an Anglo-German secret African agreement would become operative through the decision have fallen flat, because the damages against Portugal are so small that she is amply able to pay them herself without giving either party to the secret agreement an opportunity of bidding for Delagoa bay. That this would occur was definitely stated some days ago in these dispatches, but right up to the last moment several of the most influential organs seemed to be almost sure that Portugal would be obliged to sell Delagoa bay to Great Britain in order to pay up. As a result Delagoa Bay railway debentures went up to 132 and the shares of the company to 7 pounds.

After the announcement of the decision the debentures went down to 100, while shares could be bought for 2s 6d, or practically nothing, as it was evident that the awards provided scarcely anything to make them good. After this tremendous drop it will be a long time before the city looks favorably on arbitration proposals.

Rev. Sheldon's issue of the Topeka capital as republished here, meets with more ridicule than anything else.

The Ideal Man.

There is much rivalry between the various colleges as to which will produce the ideal man. By this they mean a vigorous, honest, intellectual man, who will make the world better for having lived. Health will demand first consideration, for upon that depends brain and achievement. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will keep the bowels regular and the stomach healthy by curing all stomach disorders. It also prevents malaria, fever and ague. Try it.

Fire in Pittsburg.

Pittsburg, April 3.—Fire in the McClintock building caused a loss of $75,000. Among the losers is the board of missions for freedmen of the Presbyterian church. Rosenbaum & Co.'s retail millinery establishment on the ground floor was literally drenched with water, causing a loss of $50,000.

Some people who don't know what they want complain because they fail to get it.

Boiler Exploded.

Cherbourg, France, April 3.—The boiler of a French torpedo boat exploded during a trial of speed and five of the crew were badly burned. One died and another unable to bear the agony jumped into the sea and was drowned.

Coal Miners Strike.

Pittsburg, April 3.—From 12,000 to 15,000 coal miners in the Pittsburg district went on a strike through disaffection over the day work scale of the Indianapolis agreement. In the Irwin mines the men want an advance of 5 cents per ton.

General good order prevails.

ALABASTINE

WHAT ALABASTINE IS.

Alabastine is the original and only durable wall coating on the market. It is entirely different from all kalsomine preparations. Alabastine is made ready for use in white or fourteen beautiful tints by the addition of cold water. It is put up in dry powdered form, in packages, properly labeled, with full directions on every package. It takes the place of scaling kalsomines, wall paper and paint for walls. Alabastine can be used on plaster, brick, wood or canvass, and a child can brush it on.

WHAT "KALSOMINES" ARE.

Kalsomines are cheap and temporary preparations, manufactured from whiting, chalks, clays, etc. They are stuck on the walls with decaying animal glue. Alabastine is not a kalsomine. It is a rock-base cement, which sets, and it hardens with age. It can be re-coated and redecorated without having to wash and scrape off its old coats. Alabastine is utilized to a great extent in hospitals, as it prevents the accumulation of dirt and the congregating of disease germs, being disinfectant in its nature.

CHURCHES AND SCHOOLHOUSES.

The interior walls of churches, schoolhouses and all public halls should never be coated with anything but the durable and pure Alabastine. So evident has this fact become, that hundreds of tons are used annually for this work. The genuine Alabastine does not rub or scale off. It is cleanly during the long period of its usefulness. Every owner of a building should use it. Ask your paint dealer or druggist for card of tints, and write for free copy of our interesting booklet to Alabastine Co., Grand Rapids, Mich.

REJECT THE "JUST AS GOOD."

The dealer who tells you that he can sell you the "same thing" as Alabastine or "something just as good," either is not posted or is trying to deceive you. In offering something he has bought cheap and is trying to sell on Alabastine's demands, he may not realize the danger to himself as well as to you. Beware of all new substitutes. Dealers risk a suit for damages by selling and consumers by using an infringement. Alabastine Co. own the right to make and to sell wall coatings adapted to mix with cold water.

That broke us all up and we'll carry its remembrance to our grave. It puzzles us to know how a man can give so much corn to an editor for $20 in advertising. We should like to tell where this corn-wheat can be had, but the great offer has so prostrated us that we can't raise our voice to speak —Washington Independent. The details of the export and import figures for the eight months ending with February show surprising developments in our commerce, and especially that which relates to manufactures. An increased importation of raw materials for the use of our manufacturers and an increased exportation of manufactured articles, are the striking features of the February statement of imports and exports.

—The Statesman is in a position to state that W. E. Borah has said, since the recent committee meetings here, that he would support the republican ticket. There has been a great deal of discussion as to his attitude, but he has refrained, until this time, from separating from the organization with which he has been affiliated. He declared publicly a long time ago that he would never again support a fusion —he would await developments but he was positive on that point. Now that the central committee has arranged to go into fusion again, he has come back into the republican party —and he will be welcomed heartily by every patriotic republican in the state.—Statesman.

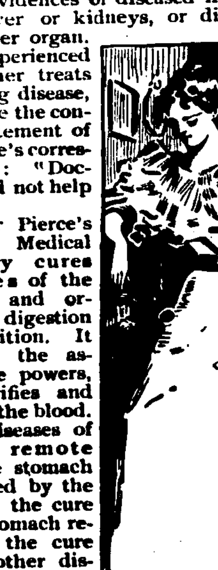
Few have cared to clash with him, because he does not fight with the weapons which the other senators are accustomed, matching his pitchfork and club against their rapiers. It is said that Senator Spooner has chafted under this domination and has at last taken the field against Mr. Tillman. Certain it is, that on the debate on the Porto Rican appropriation bill, Mr. Spooner locked horns with the big South Carolinian and finally drove him to his seat, almost silenced for the moment. The Senate is watching the contest with hope in its heart.

—Father, dear father, come home with me now, for ma has some carpets to beat; she's got all the furniture out in the yard from the porch clear down to the street. The stoves must come down and put in the shed, and the yard must be cleaned of dead grass, for it's time to clean house and the devil's to pay—and the front windows need some new glass. Father, dear father, come home with me now, and bring some bologna and cheese; it's most twelve o'clock and there is nothing to eat—I'm so hungry I'm weak in the knees. All the dinner we'll have will be cold scraps and such, and we'll have to eat standing up, too, for the tables and chairs are all out in the yard—oh, I wish spring house-cleaning was through! Father, dear father, come home with me now, for ma is as mad as a Turk; she says you're a lazy old thing and that she proposes to put you to work. There's painting to do and paper to hang, and windows and casings to scrub, for it's house cleaning time, and you've got to come home, and revel in suds and cold grub.

J. I. Carson, Prothonotary, Washington, Pa., says, "I have found Kodol Dyspepsia Cure an excellent remedy in case of stomach trouble, and have derived great benefit from its use." It digests what you eat and you can not fail to cure. KENNEDY'S PHARMACY.

HEART-SICK.

There are a great many people who have heart sickness, who have no chronic derangement of the heart. When the stomach is diseased it may affect many other organs, and produce all the evidences of diseased heart, diseased liver or kidneys, or disease in some other organ.



The inexperienced practitioner treats the wrong disease, and hence the constant statement of Dr. Pierce's correspondents: "Doctors could not help me."

Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition. It increases the assimilative powers, and purifies and enriches the blood. When diseases of organs remote from the stomach are caused by the stomach, the cure of the stomach results in the cure of the other diseases, in heart, lungs, liver, kidneys, etc.

"Six years ago my stomach and heart troubled me so much I had to do something, as the doctors could not help me," writes Mrs. S. A. Knapp, of San Jose, California, Box 392. "I went to San Francisco and had treatment for catarrh of the stomach, and was better for some time, then it came back. I then used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and 'Pleasant Pellets.' These medicines cured my stomach. I do not have the pain and indigestion as I did. It is very hard for me to tell you what I suffered before I commenced taking your valuable medicine. I recommend it to all the sufferers whom I meet."

To cure constipation use Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

—In an article entitled "The Constitution of the Territories," in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for April, Prof. Harry Pratt Judson, of the University of Chicago, defines the powers of Congress in relation to our new possessions, exposing some of the fallacies that have crept into the discussion of the subject, both within and without the halls of Congress.

—While exploring a coyote den on his farm this week in the Dry Creek country, Frank Billups brought to light an interesting family. Nine coyote pups were dug out, and in the den were three young kittens—house cats, two of which were living and one dead. Whether they were a part of the coyote litter or not is a puzzler to all the Dry Creek scientists, reports the Colfax Gazette.

Cleanse the liver, purify the blood, invigorate the body by using DeWitt's Little Early Risers. These famous little pills always act promptly.

"No family can afford to be without One Minute Cough Cure. It will stop a cough and cure a cold quicker than any other medicine," writes C. W. Williams, Sterling Run, Pa. It cures croup, bronchitis and all throat and lung troubles and prevents consumption.

—Hon. P. W. Lawrence, ex-state grain inspector of Washington, has purchased four large warehouses, one each at Pullman, Moscow, Genesee and Granite Point. It is not given out for whom he has bought them, but it is thought a new grain firm closely connected with the Northern Pacific.

—Conditions seems to be shaping themselves favorably for a world's exposition in St. Louis in 1903, the commemoration of the Louisiana Purchase. A report says congress will make a $5,000,000 appropriation and St. Louis the same. Save your nickels and dimes and take in the greatest show on earth.

—A disease, as to the origin of which opinion differ, has made its appearance among the horses owned in this vicinity and threatens to diminish them in numbers. A number of valuable animals have died of this disease and a number of others are now under treatment. The effect of the disease is a stiffness of the hind legs and is somewhat akin to paralysis.—Rosalia Citizen.

—The Rev. Charles M. Sheldon's new novel, "Edward Blake: College Student" will be published in the Chicago Inter Ocean, the first installment appearing April 12. This story is worthy of the author "In His Steps," and is a stirring tale, dealing with the struggles of a farmer's son who goes to a coeducational institution. The story is fascinating, dramatic and powerful. The Inter Ocean has shown its usual enterprise in obtaining this latest product of Mr. Sheldon's pen, whose recent experience as the editor for a week of the Topeka Capital has given him worldwide reputation.

—Here is the new homestead law about to pass congress: "Any person who has heretofore made entry under the homestead laws and commuted the same under the provisions of section 2301 of the revised statutes of the United States and the amendments thereof, shall be entitled to the benefits of the homestead law as though former entry had not been made, except commutation under section [illegible] the revised statutes of the United States shall not be allowed of entry made under the section of this act. Any person who, prior to the passage of this act, has made entry under the homestead laws but for any cause has lost or forfeited the same, and has not abandoned or relinquished such tracts for a valuable consideration, shall be entitled to the benefits of the homestead laws as though such former entry had not been made." This law will help many who are desirious of getting a home and NEWS thinks it a good move. Many have either abandoned their claims east or commuted after some length of time, and consequently did not enjoy the full benefit of the homestead law.

—The Nampa Leader is a bright newspaper, being illuminated by gas turned out at this foundry It gives a glowing account of the various creameries in that section of Idaho and says the demand for the butter is greater than the supply. The supply of milk is increasing and in that proportion the condition of the farmer is improving. Herds of cattle and hogs are growing numerous.

—Webster Davis, assistant secretary of the interior, has resigned his post and will lecture in behalf of the Boers. Mr. Davis has just returned from a long trip to South Africa, in the course of which he visited the Boer republics and satisfied himself that they had been shamefully misrepresented by the British. He said that he was beseeched by 2000 Boer women to lay the truth in regard to them before the United States and that he promised to do so —The mighty progress of this country at the present time can be estimated when it is told that the railroad earnings of the United States last year were $130,000,000 larger than in 1898. Think of that! That's enough to found an empire with. After the colonies had been working for 150 years it was with the utmost difficulty that after a year's hard work a loan of $10,000,000 was obtained from France to carry on the war of the Revolution to a conclusion. The railroad industry is but one in our country, and when it, in a single year, can increase its earnings $130,000,000, the thought comes to one instinctively that no other land, ancient or modern, has ever compared in material progress or in the majesty of the labor performed within it with our own. Salt Lake Tribune thinks this a wonder showing.

—Judge Stuart of the Boise district has decided the case brought by the state against Ada county for the collection of $700 of back taxes, due by the county to the state. The decision is in favor of the state, though the contention of the state is not sustained in all respects. This case is of general interest throughout the state, as nearly all the counties are indebted to the state treasury, many of them being in large amounts. Under the law of 1895 the state levies a lump sum against each county, but in collecting the taxes there are delinquencies, and the counties have generally remained in debt to the state to the extent of its proportion of these delinquencies. The state contended in this case the counties should pay in full, irrespective of whether or not there were delinquencies. Judge Stuart holds the state levy is an absolute debt, but the counties need not pay until it is collected. However, it is the duty of the commissioners to levy a special tax at the end of the year, to raise the state money involved in the delinquencies. Case will be appealed.

NORMAL NOTES.

Messrs. Thomas and Martin Korstad, Alva, Con and Iver Moen mounted their wheels and rode to Colfax to hear Bryan, "the orator of the west."

A number of Normal students are contemplating a surprise to be given the people at Cottage Grove. They are waiting for the apple blossoms to open.

The Normal Base Ball team has been organized and expects to participate in some interesting games before June 15. A game of ball is scheduled to take place April 21, L. S. N. S. against Clarkston.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson's timely arrival last Friday prevented their being drenched by an unusually heavy rainstorm. After a pleasant visit with their daughter, Miss Laura they returned to their home Sunday.

Other Genesee visitors were Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Snyder, who gave their daughters, Misses Inda and Laura, and their son Mr. Clarence Snyder, a very pleasant surprise. They too were in time to escape a wetting Friday.

—A bill extending the homestead laws to soldiers who served in the Philippines and in the Spanish war, passed the house last week. This bill provides that in every case a credit of two years shall be allowed upon the five years' residence required by law to each soldiers whose term of service was less than two years.

—Mr. Loud's bill as amended and likely to become a law, bars from the mails specifically all "publications purporting to be issued periodically and to subscribers, but which are merely books or reprints of books, whether they be issued complete or in parts, whether they be bound or unbound, whether they are sold by subscription or otherwise, or whether they purport to be premiums, or supplements, or parts of regular newspapers or periodicals." In this amended form the bill does not antagonize the country papers, as it does not touch on the question of sample copies, and in this shape will pass.

Best Remedy for Rheumatism.

QUICK RELIEF FROM PAIN.

All who use Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism are delighted with the quick relief from pain which it affords. When speaking of this Mr D. N. Sinks, of Troy, Ohio, says: "Some time ago I had a severe attack of rheumatism in my arm and shoulder. I tried numerous remedies but got no relief until I was recommended by Messrs. Geo. F. Parsons & Co., druggists of this place, to try Chamberlain's Pain Balm. They recommended it so highly that I bought a bottle. I was soon relieved of all pain. I have since recommended this liniment to many of my friends, who agree with me that it is the best remedy for muscular rheumatism in the market." Sold by all druggists.

W. W. Mayhew, Merton, Wis., says, "I consider One Minute Cough Cure a most wonderful medicine, quick and safe." It is the only harmless remedy that gives immediate results. It cures coughs, colds, croup, bronchitis, grippe, whooping cough, pneumonia and all throat and lung diseases. Its early use prevents consumption. Children always like it and mothers endorse it.

Caught a Dreadful Cold.

Marion Kooke, manager for T. M. Thompson, a large importer of fine millinery at 1658 Milwaukee Ave., Chicago, says: "During the late severe weather I caught a dreadful cold which kept me awake at night and made me unfit to attend my work during the day. One of my milliners was taking Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for a severe cold at that time, which seemed to relieve her so quickly that I bought some for myself. It acted like magic and I began to improve at once. I am now entirely well and feel very pleased to acknowledge its merits." For sale by all druggists.

The brass trust is the cheekiest proposition.

Poetic justice often compels barefaced men to run some close shaves.

And they still take up collections for foreign missions in Kentucky churches (Exclamation point.)

Not that the country ever disliked us, but since American coal has been imported to Germany there is reason for a warmer feeling.

People will believe that Andrew Carnegie really wants to get rid of his money when he begins giving away stel plants instead of libraries.

Criminal tendencies are frequently incorrigible. Procrastination is notoriously known as the thief of time, and yet it continues stealing away.

In Pennsylvania women of 70 are marrying third husbands. What could be more practical evidence of the gentle, loving nature of the masculine sex?

Henry James' income from his books during the year 1899 was over $8,000. This will cause a lot more people with no sense of humor to rush into literature.

Since he said such a big percentage of marriages are unhappy, many are asking whether that Yale professor talked through his hat or had his thinking cap on.

That burglar who was identified by the mark of his broken tooth, left in a piece of cheese that he stopped to eat while blowing open a safe after midnight, has reason to forswear late lunches as unhealthful.

The captain of the Infanta Maria Teresa in the fight off Santiago asserts in his official report to his government that the percentage of hits by American gunners was 100 per cent. greater than the estimates made by American experts, and he certainly was in a position to know.

A bill recently passed by the Ohio Legislature provides that in the absence of a contract agreement, women shall be paid the same wages as men. In the attempt to enforce a similar law in Kansas last year, many women lost good positions. Wages, in the case of both men and women, are regulated by something more powerful than legislation, to wit, conspicuous effectiveness.

The Samoan treaty was ratified by the Senate with scarcely any opposition—with none, in fact, which involved principle. So this country has become possessed of one large island and several small ones, 5,000 or more miles distant from the continent of North America, the very names of which few of us know how to pronounce. It shows what an excursion into the world we have made in the last three years.

It is, perhaps, one of the favorable signs of the times that women still indulge in that airy form of industry which is called fancy work. They do not carry this labor to the point that the women of long ago brought it. They have passed the "crewel" stage and the quilting era, and, happily, they have emerged from the pathological condition that found expression in crazy quilts. But even some large-brained women still have their bits of embroidery with which to while away "odd moments," and the making of a little linen scrap called a dolly is often the recreation of a weary feminine mind. Yet there is a story told of a man who was literally dollied to death, and who was obliged to break with the woman he loved because she went so far as to put these linen mats under the legs of his chair and beneath his feet. This, no doubt, is an extreme case, but it will be well that in this practical, realistic age all women who have acquired or are in danger of acquiring the dolly habit should take warning in time.

A striking change is noticeable in this country in the average citizen—the person whom the English describe as "the man in the street." If one indulges in a legitimate kind of eavesdropping in public places, he will often be surprised to find that the men whose talk he overhears are not discussing business or the weather, but are explaining why they sympathise with the British or the Boers; or are debating the rights of neutrals in war-time; or are exchanging views about the latest manifestations of Russian diplomacy; or are wondering whether the demand of the United States for "an open door" in China carries with it the necessity of leaving the door open in the Philippines. The views expressed may be based on imperfect information, or may imply crude notions of international law, but they are often carefully considered and spoken with sincere conviction. This kindling of eager interest among Americans in questions which once would hardly have been given serious thought is a symptom. It shows that the average American has a wider horizon than he used to have. He realizes the importance of international politics, and feels that his own country has come to stand in new relations to them. It was predicted in September, 1898, that one result of the war with Spain would be "a broadening and sobering influence" upon the public mind. The prediction already has been realized in a marked degree. There is room for a variety of opinions upon territorial expansion; but the expansion in intelligence, in keenness of interest, and in the sense of international sympathies and responsibilities which is going on is a subject for congratulation.

It would seem that the old prayer for deliverance from "sudden death" was no longer answered or even asked in many cases, for many think that deliverance from life is best attained in that way. Those questions as to how long one would wish to tarry in "the vale of tears," and in what manner one would wish to go, still occupy men's thoughts. Some cling to the cherished belief that those loved of the gods die young, while "those whose hearts are dry as summer dust burn to the socket." It is the burning process that sometimes seems so difficult. "What is it to grow old?" asked Matthew Arnold. "It is to spend long days and not once feel that we were ever young." And Stevenson, who, as Henry James says, met his end in the happiest form, "by the straight, swift bolt of the gods," dreaded above all things the slow process of dissolution. "If I could only secure a violent death, what a fine success! I wish to die in my boots; no more Land of Counterpane for me." If it were possible in this nervous age to live the quiet, normal lives that longevity demands, and if people could die in their old age, as some still do, like the deacon's "one-hoss shay," then the ripeness of three score years and ten would be a "consummation devoutly to be wished," otherwise perhaps the "straight, swift bolt" is best.

If any newly married couples have been horrified by a Chicago revenue collector's ruling on the matter of revenue stamps they may calm their fluttering hearts. The Tribune asserts it is a false alarm. The collector says that all marriages contracted since July 1, 1898, are void unless the marriage certificate has on it a ten-cent revenue stamp. But the collector is in error. A marriage performed by a minister or a justice of the peace in the presence of witnesses is valid even though it be performed without a license. The license, stamped or unstamped, is not the vital element in the ceremony. Even though the license were rendered invalid by the omission of a war stamp, the nuptial knots tied in such cases would be no less binding. But there is no reason to believe that a stamp is required on a marriage license. The war revenue law of 1898 says that a ten-cent stamp shall be affixed to a "certificate of any description required by law not otherwise specified in this act." Only by a considerable straining of the construction can this be supposed to apply to a marriage license. The license is not a public document, but is merely a convenient and specified form for the use of the minister or justice in reporting a marriage to the County Clerk. If a preacher marries a couple without a license he can be arrested and fined for the misdemeanor, but the marriage thus performed is valid. The taking of vows in the presence of witnesses is the essence of the ceremony, and constitutes a marriage whenever performed by a person with due authority. Such authority is not conveyed by the license. This paper is only a sort of regulation blank form by means of which the officiating clergyman is required to place on record the fact that he has performed such ceremony. There is no reason why a revenue stamp should be required on such a paper, and even if it were worthless without a stamp it would be a matter to concern the ministers and justices who have married couples since July, 1898, and not one to disturb the marital bliss of the bride and groom.

Plants in Mexico.

Down in Mexico the castor bean, which we think does pretty well for us if it stands up ten or twelve feet "in its stockings," grows to be a tree thirty feet high, with hard wood and orthodox bark. Our common field daisy is pruned into a shrub two or three feet high, and made to cover itself with a wealth of its yellow-eyed flowers; its stem becomes as large as one's wrist, and it is much used as an ornamental shrub, in cemeteries. Hibiscus, a rare greenhouse shrub with us, which has large, flame-colored flowers, with curious plume-like centers, is planted for hedges, and is said to make very beautiful ones. The foliage is a lovely green, and the freedom with which it produces its flowers makes it very attractive.

Her Indorsement.

A lady entered a bank in Syracuse, says the Herald of that city, and handed a check to the paying teller.

"Madam," said he, gently, "you have forgotten to indorse it."

"Indorse it?" she repeated, with a little worried smile.

"Yes; you must write your name on the back, to show that you will repay the bank in case the issuer of the check should fail to answer our call."

"Oh!" she said, accepting the pen.

When the teller looked at the check again this is what he read:

"The —— bank has always paid up what it owes, and you need have no worry. Therefore, I indorse this check. Very truly yours, Mrs. J. B. Blank."

Meaning of Doll Signs.

A traveler through Servia will often notice dolls hung up inside the cottage windows. He learns that the dolls are put up as a sign to announce to wayfarers that a marriageable daughter dwells in the house.

We have noticed that you seldom hear of a married woman crying over a novel; she has Other Things to cry over.

BIRTH OF LOVE.

For years I lived beside thee,
And saw thee day by day;
You often used to chide me;
We quarreled at our play.

And when, no more as children,
We'd roam and smile and talk,
Good comrades we were ever,
In hunt or dance or walk.

Your mien I saw was gentle;
Your judgment swift and sure;
Your words were strong, yet humble;
Your thoughts I knew were pure.

And so I called you "brother,"
Our confidence so free;
I ne'er had known another
Who meant so much to me.

I thought with eyes still steadfast,
To journey to the end,
Thro' life's bright paths and golden,
Thus holding thee as "friend."

But now the scales are fallen,
And joy all joys above—
O, ray direct from heaven,
I know, at last, I love!

THE DAISY CHAIN.

Mr. TRAVERS, pretending to rinse plates in the river Thames, looked perpetually toward Miss Daisy Middleton—industriously engaged in packing dishes. Over the meadow the rest of the picnic party was dotted, mainly in pairs, as is pleasant to look upon at a picnic. If the truth were known, Mr. Travers was pleased to see Miss Middleton sternly packing, for of late she had seemed to bestow too much of the honey of her smiles upon a certain bee (to give him no worse title) of the name of Congreve; and Miss Middleton was rejoiced to see Mr. Travers pretending to rinse, since she had a certain undefined objection to hear his praises sung by others of her sex—as recently.

People entertaining such approximate sentiments have no business to be separated by a distance of at least twenty yards. So at any rate Mr. Travers thought, for he left the meadow sweets that sucked in the eddying stream behind him, and, bearing the cleaned plates as a peace offering in his hand, approached the lady.

Miss Middleton lifted her eyes out of a hamper, and, perceiving his humility, smiled.

"With fingers weary and worn," he began, "and eyelids heavy and red—as you perceive Miss Middleton—a man answering to the name of Travers has been standing in mid-stream—more or less mid—on an undeniably rickety stone for half an hour—torrents foaming about him—fatal plunge imminent—and has rinsed picnic plates till he could no more."

"During which time," she asked, "he broke—how many?"

"That is hardly generous," said Mr. Travers, gravely. "How many exactly I started with I misremember. One—I admit it—'came to pieces in my hand,' as the kitchen maids say. Another I was compelled, morally and intellectually, to throw at a grasshopper that came up impertinently to sniff the mayonnaise. A saucer or two, by nature amphibious, started down stream. But what would you? I have four here as clean——"

"And I gave you eleven," said Miss Middleton, sternly.

"It's better than picking daisies, like Congreve," said Mr. Travers, slyly.

"Would you like to clean some knives?" she asked, willing to change the subject. "They don't break so easily, and we shall want some for tea."

"It's no relaxation cleaning things that don't break," said Mr. Travers, discontentedly.

"You intend simply to be idle till tea?" she asked, scornfully.

"If you think I deserve a little recreation for cleaning all those plates," he said.

"Breaking them!"

"Let us split the difference and say 'laving' them."

"You crack a joke and a plate in the same breath," she said.

"Don't you think I might take you out in that canoe?" he persisted.

"It's rather late," she said, doubtfully.

"We might find some of the floating saucers," he urged. "The grasshopper got on one and was piloting it magnificently."

"But canoes are so unsafe. Perhaps, if Miss Maltby would come with us, it would be steadier."

This was a distinctly unkind reflection on Miss Maltby, whose attractions, in the opinion of many, were not detracted from by her weight. Mr. Travers, however, saw light in the unkindness, and willingly sacrificed a victim.

"Without in any way wishing to deny the merits of Miss Maltby," he said, "she would add more than a feather-weight. Besides, in adopting an invention like canoes, from the Choctaws, one must conform to their custom."

"Which is?" asked Miss Middleton.

"Based on the tribal motto—'Two's company.' The canoes were constructed accordingly, and only hold two."

"Then there would not be room for Mr. Congreve?" she asked.

"I fancied he was making daisy-chains," said Mr. Travers.

Now, if Miss Middleton had been adverse to the voyage, this foolish remark would have left Mr. Travers solitary. But she was not. She suffered herself to be constrained—not too readily. Yet since, when once the canoe was launched, Mr. Travers seemed to sink into abstraction, Miss Middleton took up the ball. Since this is the very simplest story, devoid of incident or criticism, it is sufficient to say of Miss Middleton's conduct, "such is life," and to report her remarks.

"You'll be very careful, won't you?" she said. "I'm like a cat—very frightened of water."

"What cat's averse to fish?" quoted Mr. Travers, irrelevantly. "That is—I mean—I wouldn't let a drop of water touch you for—what I really mean is, the canoe's perfectly safe. It would hold five with ease."

"I thought that the Choctaws——" hinted Miss Middleton, well pleased with herself.

"Oh, yes, that's all nonsense," he said, distractedly. "I should say I'm talking nonsense now. What I mean was that if five people were in it, it couldn't be safer."

"It does sound rather nonsense," said Miss Middleton, unmercifully.

It is not clear why maidens at these critical times are so much more apt to keep their heads than are men. Mr. Travers thought it a hard dispensation of nature, and sought refuge from his distraction by jogging the canoe.

"Aren't we shaking terribly?" asked Miss Middleton.

"Not at all," he answered.

"Canoes seem so very frail," she explained.

"A girl I knew," said Mr. Travers, thoughtfully, "used to tell me that she was quite nervous until she had tried a canoe, but in the end she thought them otherwise. She even wanted to get engaged in a canoe."

"Did you gratify her wish?" asked Miss Middleton, with a rush of dignity.

"The girl was my mother, you know," said Mr. Travers, scenting a mistake. "It was a reminiscence of hers. She was wondering how I should some day——"

"Yes, yes—don't you think we ought to be going back?" asked Miss Middleton.

"I should like to know your opinion of a boat as a popping place," he persisted.

Miss Middleton supposed that a square, solid sort of boat in the style of Noah's ark—guaranteed not to upset—might not be unsuitable.

"But you would not approve of a canoe?" he asked.

"It would rock so terribly," she said.

"Why should it rock?"

"Suppose," she said, "the man wanted to go down on his knees—just to emphasize his wishes—that would set it rolling to begin with."

Mr. Travers was willing to entertain that supposition.

"Then suppose the girl said 'No?'"

Mr. Travers preferred not to suppose anything unpleasant.

"Still, if she did," said Miss Middleton, "the man would start up in a very bad temper and begin stamping about."

Mr. Travers was positive that no man would be guilty of such conduct. Miss Middleton failed to see how Mr. Travers could answer for men in general. Mr. Travers admitted that he was thinking of a particular case, which caused Miss Middleton to go on hastily:

"Then, again, if the girl didn't say 'No,' she would probably expect——"

"What?" asked Mr. Travers.

Miss Middleton had unfortunately forgotten the sequence of her sentence.

"But I must know, Daisy," he said, earnestly. He ceased to paddle, and the canoe began to roll. "Would she expect——"

Continuous was the rolling of the canoe.

"We shall be over, I'm sure," said Miss Middleton—"please—yes — yes — yes——"

"At any rate the man expects——" said Mr. Travers, and the rolling continued.

When some time later the canoe returned to the meadow from which it had started, the the voyagers were grieved to perceive the tea was already almost finished. The others observed that punctuality was particularly important at a picnic. Mr. Congreve especially insisted on this.

"You shouldn't have been making daisy-chains, Congreve," said Mr. Travers, irrelevantly.

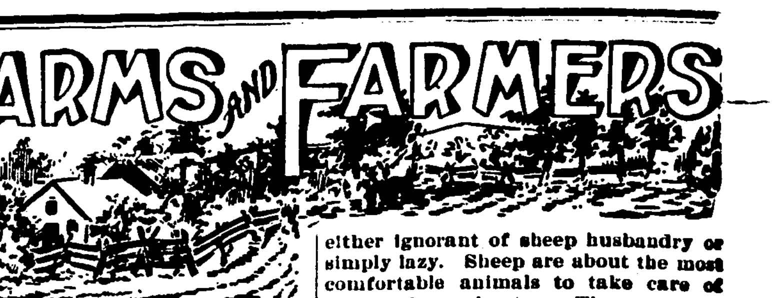
"What does he mean?" Mr. Congreve appealed to Miss Middleton for a solution.

"Mr. Travers has also been making daisy-chains," she said.—The King.

Three Court Clerks in a Century.

It is reported from Essex County, Virginia, as a fact worthy of note that there have been but three clerks of the Essex County court since 1814, viz.: W. B. Matthews, from 1814 to 1830; James Roy Macou, 1830 to 1887, and Harrison Southworth, the present clerk. Maryland, in the Federal court of this jurisdiction, can beat the above record, as the court has had but three clerks since 1799—100 years—namely, Philip Moore, 1799 to 1834; Thomas Spicer, 1834 to 1864; James W. Chew, from 1864 to date, and, as Mr. Chew is still in good health and active service, his term will probably last for some years longer. Prior to 1799 Joshua Barney was clerk of the court from its foundation, prior to 1790.—Baltimore American.

You can't make a girl with a new engagement ring believe all men are alike—and after she has been married ten years you can't make her believe they are not.



The Value of Mules.

The cause of the large order for army pack mules which the British Government has been buying in this country and mostly in Texas, was the recognition by English officers present during the brief campaign of Santiago de Cuba of the value of these wiry little animals in the transportation of supplies. The officers of our own regular army had long known and appreciated their usefulness during an active campaign. With enough of them an army can be kept well supplied with everything the departments may have in store during periods of bad weather when wagon trains could not be moved at all, and over a country too rough for vehicles. Their readiness at any time for service and the ease with which they can be kept together and moved over any sort of country in order to be kept within convenient reach of the troops will recommend them to all officers who see them in active campaigns. Every government of Europe is quick to appreciate anything that tends to improve the efficiency of an army in the field, and it is not improbable that other European governments will make requisitions upon this country for large numbers of pack mules. Texas can raise thousands of them on the range at little cost.

Wagon Lifter.

The accompanying illustration shows a cheap wagon lifter which any one can construct. The lever A is four feet long, while the upright, C, is four and a half feet long. The bottom pieces should be 2x8 and 20 inches long. The upright, as shown at E, is mortised at the top and receives the lever A. After the wagon is raised it is retained in position by means of a chain which is fastened to a hook in B.

Manure and Rotation.

Our garden contains one and a quarter acres and is twenty rods long. I made a great mistake in running it in garden truck and hoed crops for ten years with only two applications of stable manure. I thought commercial fertilizers were easier to handle and entirely free from weed seed or grass seed of all kinds, therefore I used it nearly every year till there was no humus left in the soil. It baked badly, remained wet late in spring and no crop did well. Last summer the bugs ate the leaves off of my potato vines when they were young and they all died. Bugs also devoured turnips, tomatoes, beet tops, bean vines, etc. I at first had a good garden and thought it would continue that way forever; but I now know by experience that I was mistaken, and there may be other mistaken farmers who will read these lines. My garden is now sowed to wheat, which looks fine. I shall give it a good coat of stable manure this winter, sow it to clover in the spring and plow under the next spring. In the meantime I have a strip elsewhere for garden.—W. T. Wright.

Paris Green.

There has been such general complaint of the adulteration of Paris green that we would certainly advise farmers to abandon its use entirely as an insectide, either on fruit trees, potatoes or other plants. There is said to be some of it on the market that contains no arsenic at all, and is probably some of the cheaper green paints. Other samples are made by mixing about one-half gypsum or plaster with pure Paris green, thus reducing strength in the same proportion, while others are simply low grades with not over 40 per cent. arsenius acid instead of 58 per cent. Some try to strengthen these cheap compounds or mixtures by adding white arsenic, which is cheaper than Paris green, but it is also more liable—in fact, almost certain—to injure the foliage, unless lime is used with it to the amount of about ten parts of lime to one of arsenic.—American Cultivator.

Caring for Sheep.

There are no secrets about the best way to care for sheep. The man who owns a farm and does not keep sheep, making an excuse for not doing so because they are hard to take care of, is either ignorant of sheep husbandry or simply lazy. Sheep are about the most comfortable animals to take care of that we have about us. They are quiet and gentle and are not very particular about their feed if they are kept in good health. They need to be fed regularly given sound and wholesome feed, but the feed not be of the costliest kind. Good, bright hay and a small amount of corn will keep them in good shape during the winter, and grass is all they want in summer, although if there are briers, elders or any other scrubby bushes in their pasture they will eat them up by way of relish. They should be protected from the storms of winter, and salted regularly the year through, and for the amount of labor involved they will make better returns than any other kind of stock.

Liquid Air.

The commercial probabilities of liquid air as a refrigerant lies in the fact that it is 344 degrees colder than ice, containing the same amount of cold in a space marvelously smaller. A liquid air plant, it is said, has already been started in California, and its value to that region is thus explained: "Most of the fruit shipped without ice is a loss. The cost of icing a car from Los Angeles to New York is $92, and $75 per car for freight on the ice. In addition the ice takes up one-quarter of the carrying capacity of the car. With a completion of the plant we can cool a car at a cost of less than $40 for liquid air for the trip, and no cost for the freight whatever. Here is a saving of $127 per car." What refers to the refrigerating for fruit means also for the refrigerating of meats or other articles requiring the use of ice.—Exchange.

Keeping Chimneys Clean.

After a winter's supply of wood or coal has been burned, much of it while rain or snow is drifting down the chimney, it is sure to be foul with soot, and any extra hot fire, especially with wood, will send sparks up that will set the soot afire and endanger the house. It is a good plan to poke a broom or brush with very long handle up and down the chimney to clear away the soot. If this is done and the soot is removed from below there will be little danger of its doing any damage. The chimney ought to be made smooth inside, so that the soot will not be caught by roughness as the smoke goes up. A chimney afire is a serious danger, especially when the hot fire that causes it is made just before the family retire for the night. Coal fires are less dangerous than those from light wood, which make a bright flame and send up many sparks.

Big Demand for Trees.

The wholesale destruction of orchards last winter has caused an unprecedented demand for trees, says the Denver Times, so that those who send in their orders late may be obliged to wait until another season. Fruit-growing might almost be classed as a profession. The successful orchardist insists upon having good trees or none at all. He studies his soils, climate and market and chooses his varieties accordingly. New varieties, with extravagant claims, have no charms for him. Others may try them if they see fit and he will profit by their experience, but he trusts to the kinds which have proved good.

Grease Heel Cure.

To cure grease heel on colts or horses, wash with strong solution of bluestone; two applications will usually cure if taken in time. All white spots caused by harness or saddle since last spring can be removed by rubbing well with lard twice a week, beginning before horses begin to shed their hair in the spring and continuing until the new hair comes in, when it will be the same color as remainder of horse. White spots of more than one year's standing can not be taken off as above.—G. H. Brown.

Gleanings.

A bushel of wheat, or an equivalent amount of flour, can be shipped from Minneapolis to almost any point in Western Europe for about 20 cents.

Californians are beginning to cultivate the tomato tree, which bears clusters of a delicious fruit, thousands of boxes of which are sent yearly from Ceylon to London, and for which it is believed a good market could be found in our Eastern States.

Many of the young trees die because of injury when taken up at the nursery. The tops of young trees may be cut back severely without injury, but it is very important that each tree be well supplied with an abundance of roots when they are translanted.

Canna roots should be kept in the cellar. They can stand cold well, provided they are in a dry location, but moisture will seriously injure them. Put the roots in the ground after danger of frost is over, in the spring. The canna is a beautiful plant, and the more rapid its growth and the larger the plant the better; hence the ground for the roots should be well prepared and manure used liberally.

The hyacinth is a favorite winter flowering plant. Fill a pot within one inch of the top with rich earth that has been sifted. Set the bulb in the center, leaving only the top of the crown visible. Water it and place it in a dark location in the cellar, to remain three or four weeks until well rooted, and it sends up a shoot, watering it slightly occasionally in the meantime. When brought into the light, in a warm atmosphere, it will grow rapidly.

Women, Remember This Fact

That in addressing Mrs. Pinkham you are communicating with a woman—a woman whose experience in treating woman's ills is greater than that of any living person—male or female.

A woman can talk freely to a woman when it is revolting to relate her private troubles to a man.

Many women suffer in silence and drift along from bad to worse, knowing full well that they should have immediate assistance, but a natural modesty impels them to shrink from exposing themselves to the questions and probable examination of even their family physician. It is unnecessary. Without money or price you can consult a woman, whose knowledge from actual experience is unequaled.

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to freely communicate with Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass.

All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women only.

This is a positive fact—not a mere statement. It is certified to by the mayor and postmaster of Lynn and others whose letters, all in a little book, Mrs. Pinkham has just published. Write for a copy, it is free. Thus has been established the eternal confidence between Mrs. Pinkham and the women of America which has never been broken and has induced more than 100,000 sufferers to write her for advice during the last few months.

Out of the vast volume of experience which she has to draw from, it is more than possible that she has gained the very knowledge that will help your case. She asks nothing in return except your good-will, and her advice has relieved thousands. Here are some of the cases we refer to:

Mrs. Pinkham Helps Two Women Through Change of Life and Cures Another of Sterility. Read Their Letters.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham—I feel that it is owing to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I am alive today. It has taken me out of a sick bed where I had lain for six weeks with a good doctor to tend me twice a day. My trouble was change of life, had frequent hemorrhages. Your medicine checked the flow right away. I am now able to do all my work, and backache is unknown. I am forty-three years of age and enjoying good health."—Mrs. Annie Foster, Cascade Locks, Oregon.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham—When I first wrote to you, I was in a very bad condition. I was passing through the change of life, and the doctors said I had bladder and liver trouble. I had suffered for nine years. Doctors failed to do me any good. Since I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound my health has improved very much. I will gladly recommend your medicine to others and am sure that it will prove as great a blessing to them as it has to me."—Mrs. Geo. H. June, 901 De Kalb Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham—It was my ardent desire to have a child. I had been married three years and could not become a mother, so wrote to you to find out the reason. After following your kind advice and taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I became the mother of a beautiful baby boy, the joy of our home. He is a fat, healthy baby, thanks to your medicine."—Mrs. Minda Finkle, Roscoe, N. Y.

Two More Women Who Acknowledge the Help they Have Received from Mrs. Pinkham.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham—The doctor says I have congestion of the womb, and cannot help me. There is aching in the right side of abdomen, hip, leg, and back. If you can do me any good, please write."—Mrs. Nina Chase, Fulton, N. Y., December 20, 1897.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham—I followed your instructions, and now I want every woman suffering from female trouble to know how good your advice and medicine is. The doctor advised an operation. I could not bear to think of that, so followed your advice. I got better right off. I took six bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and used three packages of Sanative Wash; also took your Liver Pills, and am cured."—Mrs. Nina Chase, Fulton, N. Y., December 12, 1898.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham—Have been suffering for over a year and had three doctors. At time of menstruation I suffer terrible pains in back and ovaries. I have headache nearly every day, and feel tired all the time. The doctor said my womb was out of place. Would be so glad if you could help me."—Mrs. Carl Voss, Sac City, Iowa, August 1, 1898.

"Please accept my sincere thanks for the good your advice and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me. I did everything you told me to do, and used only three bottles, and feel better in every respect."—Mrs. Carl Voss, Sac City, Iowa, March 23, 1899.

A QUEEN OF SOCIETY.

Plain, Poor Woman, Who Was Very Influential in Paris.

In the life of Madame Mohl, a woman who, without rank, fortune or beauty, held a controlling position in French society for the greater part of a century, there are useful hints for American women who wish to gain influence in the world.

Her dinners were famous. The most learned, wise and witty men of every country were her guests, and she gave much anxious thought to assorting them, to placing them at table, and to the suggestion of subjects which would draw from each the best he could give. The food was plentiful, but plain and simply cooked, and only a white-capped maid served it. There was no display of any kind.

Queen Sophia of Holland, when visiting Napoleon II., expressed a wish to dine with Madame Mohl, who asked a brilliant company to meet her.

"And what will be your menu?" asked an anxious friend.

"Oh, Marie must cook us a lobster," said the old lady. "She cooks lobster very nicely."

The usual simple dinner was served, with its sauce of rare wit and wisdom, and the queen was enchanted.

The next day, with her suite, she came to call upon her hostess. Madame Mohl, her gray hair in curl-papers, attired in a short jacket and skirt, was busy dusting the chairs, while the linen from the laundry was spread upon the table. When the royal party suddenly entered, the old lady laid down her brush, and after welcoming the queen, chatted away as gaily as usual.

"Were you not mortified at being caught in such a dress?" a friend asked the next day.

"Not a bit, my dear. I didn't mind it. Neither did her majesty. I suppose it was important to her maid and the flunkey who waited behind her, and they were mortified."

Once, as one of her favorites left the room, a fashionable woman asked, superciliously, "Who was Madame X. before her marriage?"

Madame Mohl turned. "She is my friend. What do I care for her was-es?"

She once said, "It is des ames bien-nees (well-born souls), not bodies, that we need in our friends," a maxim as profoundly true in America as in France.

Persian Wit.

The author of "Flowers from a Persian Garden" gives many examples of Oriental wit and humor, some of which ar extremely delicate and pleasing. Among them is the story of a professional scribe to whom a man went, asking that a letter might be written for him. The scribe said he had a pain in his foot.

"A pain in your foot!" echoed the man. "I don't want to send you to any place, that you should make such an excuse."

"Very true," said the scribe, "but whenever I write a letter for any one I am always sent for to read it, because no one else can make it out."

When a man becomes suddenly rich, it not unfrequently follows that he becomes as suddenly oblivious of his old friends. Thus, a Persian having obtained a lucrative position at court, a friend of his came shortly afterward to congratulate him thereon.

The new courtier asked him: "Who are you, and why do you come here?"

The other coolly replied: "Do you not know me, then? I am your old friend, and am come to condole with you, having heard that you had lately lost your sight."

Women Jewelers.

All the jewelers in the Philippines are women, and their skill is marvelous. The shops are small and gloomy and the stock displayed is meager and unsatisfactory. But if one wants to buy the jewelers will exhibit such treasures that any pocketbook is too lean to buy all the pretty things desired.

Necklaces of pale pink coral, statuettes of the coral, rosaries with beads and chains of pearls, white and pink and yellow—all these are to be seen.

There are a bewilderingly varied lot of garnets shown, blood, orange and yellow, the later set in silver; silver filigree work is popular and small bowls of mother-of-pearls. Gold is worked up in pattern-like lace. The women buy the crude gold, make their own alloys, draw out the wire thread and beat it with hammers. They are equally skillful with silver and do delicate filigree work, very original and striking.

Natural Bridges in the Andes.

In the Andes, in South America, are some fine examples of natural bridges. Nature has thrown two bridges of her own over a fearful chasm of Icononzo. The torrent which they span falls down a beautiful cataract into a murky crevice. At a height of 400 feet above the foaming waters the two bridges hang in midair, both of them apparently, though in different ways, the work of an earthquake. The upper one is a fragment of the original sandstone, which must have resisted the shock that formed the rent; while the lower, probably the most singular arch in the world, consists of three enormous masses of detached rock, so fallen as to support each other, the center one forming the key of the arch.

"A Card."

La Gaceta, a paper published in Guadalajara, Mexico, part in English and part in Spanish, prints in a prominent place the folowing:

Will the gentleman who embraced my wife at the entrance to the postoffice about 9 o'clock Thursday evening please send his photograph for my album of heroes? He will greatly oblige J. I.

Black eyes are beautiful only when given by nature.

Queen Victoria Denounced.

According to the Dublin correspondent of the N. Y. World, the copy of the United Irishman which was seized contained the following extracts from an article by Maud Gonne, entitled, "The Famine Queen":

"In truth, for Victoria, in the decrepitude of her 81 years, to have decided, after an absence of half a century, to revisit the country she hates, whose inhabitants are the victims of the criminal policy of her reign, the political necessity must have been terribly strong, for after all she is a woman, and however vile, selfish and pitiless her soul, she must sometimes tremble as death approaches, when she thinks of the countless Irish mothers, who, shelterless and watching their starving little ones, have cursed her before they died. Every eviction during 63 years has been carried out in Victoria's name, and if there is justice in heaven the shame of these poor Irish imigrant girls, whose very innocence renders them an easy prey, and who have been overcome in the terrible struggle for existence on a foreign shore, will fall on this woman, whose bourgeois virtue is so vaunted and in whose name they are destroyed. Taking the shamrock in her withered hand, she dares to ask Ireland for soldiers to protect the exterminators of their race."

He who buys popularity at the price of character is robbing the world of manhood.

England's Armored Trains.

The magnificent armored trains used by England in her war with the Boers will transport her troops, protect bridges and telegraphic communications in about the same way that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters drives dyspepsia from the human stomach and then mounts guard that it does not return. The bitters has won in every case of indigestion, biliousness, liver and kidney trouble for the past fifty years. It is invaluable at all times.

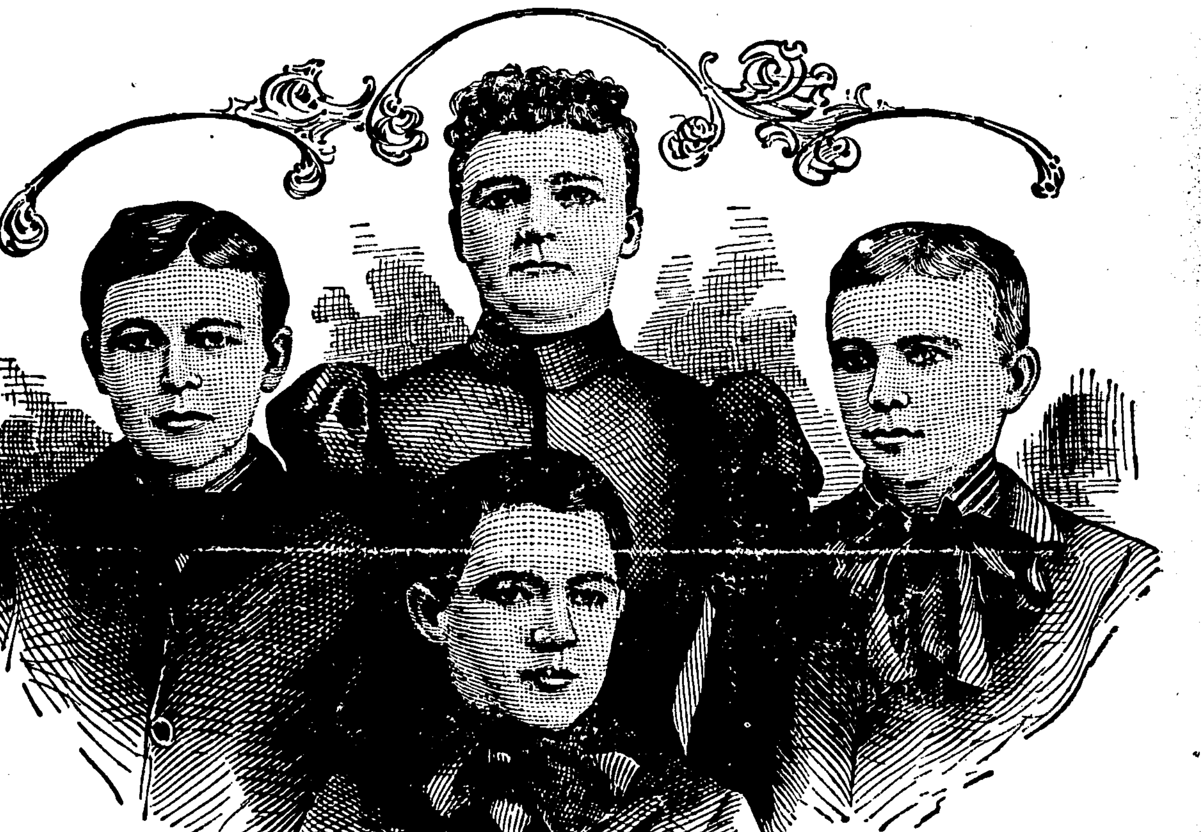
PERUNA PROTECTS OUR HOMES

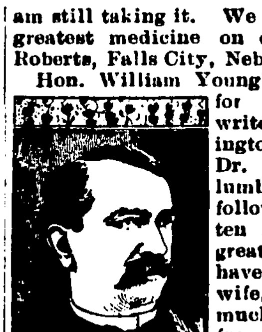


The Roberts Family, of Falls City, Neb., Are Healthy and Happy—A Rare Sight in These Days. They Say, "We Think Peruna Is The Greatest Medicine On Earth."

No man is better known in the State of Nebraska than Mr. Carl T. Roberts, contractor and mason. A typical American—active, shrewd, and full of business sagacity. He is not only a provider for his family, but a protector. In a recent letter to Dr. Hartman he writes, among other things, as follows:

"Our boy James, had the membranous croup, and repeated attacks of lung fever. Our boy, Charlie, was also subject to attacks of pnuemonia and pleurisy. Our third boy, John, was subject to fever and ague (malarial) and liver trouble. Your remedy, Peruna, cured my boys entirely, and now I have three of the healthiest boys in the State of Nebraska, which I attribute to your medicine. My wife had a stomach trouble which Peruna also cured. Altogether for my whole family we have used nineteen bottles of Peruna, and have thus saved $500 in doctors' bills. I am a contractor and mason by trade, and am known all over Nebraska. I have had a stomach trouble which has been greatly relieved by your remedy, Peruna, for which I am still taking it. We think it is the greatest medicine on earth."—C. T. Roberts, Falls City, Nebraska.

Hon. William Youngblood, Auditor for the Interior, writes from Washington, D. C., to Dr. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio, as follows: "I've often heard of your great medicine and have persuaded my wife, who has been much of a sufferer from catarrh, to try Peruna, and after using one bottle she has wonderfully improved. It has proved all you have claimed for it, and I take pleasure in recommending it to anyone who is afflicted with catarrh." Peruna has become, in a multitude of households, absolutely indispensable.



Hon. William Youngblood.

Mr. T. G. Walker, Carneiro, Kansas, writes: "It is with pleasure that I report that I am better than I have been for many years. I believe Peruna is without a doubt the best medicine that ever was used in a family. It has cured my nervousness, with which I had been afflicted for a great number of years."

It is a fact of ever increasing astonishment that so many otherwise sensible and provident people will, for the neglect of so simple a precaution as to have a bottle of Peruna at hand, bring upon themselves the needless suffering and foolish expense that a practitioner of medicine is forced to witness every day.

As soon as the value of Peruna is fully appreciated by every household, both as a preventitive and a cure of these affections, tens of thousands of lives will be saved, and hundreds of thousands of chronic, lingering cases of disease prevented. Peruna is the household safeguard.

A complete work on chronic catarrh sent free to any address by The Peruna Medicine Company, Columbus, Ohio.

Queen Honored by Children.

Dublin, April 9.—The children's demonstration which closed the queen's week in Ireland was probably one of the most gladsome days either the queen or Dublin has known in years. Certain it is that the queen is making fresh conquests daily, and her majesty's many acts of personal self-sacrifice have completely won the hearts of the people of Ireland.

An Excellent Combination.

The pleasant method and beneficial effects of the well known remedy, Syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., illustrate the value of obtaining the liquid laxative principles of plants known to be medicinally laxative and presenting them in the form most refreshing to the taste and acceptable to the system. It is the one perfect strengthening laxative, cleansing the system effectually, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers gently yet promptly and enabling one to overcome habitual constipation permanently. Its perfect freedom from every objectionable quality and substance, and its acting on the kidneys, liver and bowels, without weakening or irritating them, make it the ideal laxative.

In the process of manufacturing figs are used, as they are pleasant to the taste, but the medicinal qualities of the remedy are obtained from senna and other aromatic plants, by a method known to the California Fig Syrup Co. only. In order to get its beneficial effects and to avoid imitations, please remember the full name of the Company printed on the front of every package.

Over Fifty Lives Lost.

Dallas, Tex., April 10.—Reports received from the flood sections show that more than 50 lives have been lost, including those at Austin. Many of the localities where the lives were lost are off the railroad and telegraph lines.

Wires in the southern section are in a worse condition than ever before. Railroad traffic of the southern half of the state is abandoned.

Austin, Tex., April 10.—Reports from Bastrop, Fayette and Wharton counties, on the Colorado river below, are to the effect that the full force of the flood is just being felt there. Water is rising so rapidly that the people are preparing to desert their homes with all possible speed to protect their lives.

Reports from Bastrop state that 12 people were drowned there during the night.

In Wharton and Fayette counties the situation is even more grave and it is expected that yesterday's flood in that section will not only pile up the immense property loss, but that the list of lives lost will be considerable.

Bryan's Running Mate.

Chicago, April 9.—Robert E. Pattison of Pennsylvania for vice president is the very latest thing in democratic national slate-making. William Jennings Bryan's staunchest supporters in the party's national organization make the suggestion. The first hint heard here of the Bryan-Pattison combination came from a recent visitor to Washington. Highest sources of democratic information available in Chicago treat it in a way that is tantamount to confirmation.

General John Bidwell Is Dead.

Chico, Cal., April 6.—General John B. Bidwell, the prohibition candidate for president in 1892, died at his home near this city from heart failure. General Bidwell was a pioneer of 1841, and the founder of Chico. He was 80 years old, a native of Chautauqua county, New York. He leaves an estate valued at $1,000,000.

ALABASTINE is the original and only durable wall coating, entirely different from all kalsomines. Ready for use in white or fourteen beautiful tints by adding cold water.

LADIES naturally prefer ALABASTINE for walls and ceilings, because it is pure, clean, durable. Put up in dry powdered form, in five-pound packages, with full directions.

ALL kalsomines are cheap, temporary preparations made from whiting, chalks, clays, etc., and stuck on walls with decaying animal glue. ALABASTINE is not a kalsomine.

BEWARE of the dealer who says he can sell you the "same thing" as ALABASTINE or "something just as good." He is either not posted or is trying to deceive you.

AND IN OFFERING something he has bought cheap and tries to sell on ALABASTINE'S demands, he may not realise the damage you will suffer by a kalsomine on your walls.

SENSIBLE dealers will not buy a lawsuit. Dealers risk one by selling and consumers by using infringement. Alabastine Co. own right to make wall coating to mix with cold water.

THE INTERIOR WALLS of every church and school should be coated only with pure, durable ALABASTINE. It safeguards health. Hundreds of tons used yearly for this work.

IN BUYING ALABASTINE, customers should avoid getting cheap kalsomines under different names. Insist on having our goods in packages and properly labeled.

NUISANCE of wall paper is obviated by ALABASTINE. It can be used on plastered walls, wood ceilings, brick or canvas. A child can brush it on. It does not rub or scale off.

—Horace Sampson was over from Leland this week.

—Mrs. E. W. Baughman returned to Lewiston Monday after a two week's visit with Mrs. Thatcher.

—The Knowlton & Keller Theatre company entertained our people Monday and Tuesday nights in "Uncle Josh" and "Texas." Both excellent plays. Mr. Knowlton is an old actor and carries the heavy parts to perfection. The NEWS people heard him some seventeen years ago when he royally entertained the Dakotans. Mr. Knowlton is all right and has some good actors with him. The company will take in the reservation and Camas prairie towns and should receive liberal patronage in that section.

—Committeemen Thos. H. Brewer and Mrs. Joanna Hibbs have issued a call for a republican primary to be held in the vacant room next door to the NEWS office, Satuday afternoon between the hours of 2 and 7 o'clock, for the purpose of electing seven delegates to the republican convention at Moscow, April 28, which convention will elect delegates to attend the state convention at Lewiston, May 8, also delegates to the state convention at Boise, July 17. All republican electors, and all other electors within the limits of Genesee precinct, without regard to past political affiliations, who believe in the principles of the republican party and endorse its policies, are invited to assist in selecting delegates to said convention.

—NEWS has been informed that several new shacks will soon adorn the strip of land along the north boundary of the reservation. Speaking of this strip County Surveyor Briggs in Wednesday's Tribune says: As a result of the surveys a strip from an initial point on the Big Potlatch creek, widening to about forty-two rods when it reached the Boise meridian, was thus included definitely within the reservation boundaries. This strip is not affected by any allotment, and when the reservation was opened it became subject to entry as any other unallotted or unreserved land. At the time of the opening of the reservation people located on various parts of the strips, thus causing a conflict with the original settlers and not the Indians. At the time of the first conflict the department sent out an inspector who, after investigating the matter, reported that my survey had correctly re-established the Thompson survey. Later, contests developed and the matter finally came before the interior department, resulting in the decision just rendered. I notice that a new or readjusting survey will be made and I am satisfied that it will be found that my survey corresponds with the Thompson survey—the correct north boundary of the reservation.

—Guess Idaho will go strongly republican this year, judging from the numerous candidates springing up on that side of the fence for the office of governor. Here is the list of men being groomed this early: Judge Stanrod, A. B. Moss, Frank Gooding, Marshal Ramsey, John P. Vollmer.

—Steve Reuben, who resides a few miles out from Genesee, recently left for Washington with Chief Joseph to do a little missionary work, and soon after arriving there the Post had this: Attired in a pair of beaded buckskin breeches, a broad sombrero and a big government blanket, Steve Reuben, a brave from one of the Idaho reservations, arrived in Washington yesterday and put up at the Indian headquarters on Third street. He was imbued with a desire to see the capital by gaslight and accordingly sallied forth to visit various dens of iniquity, after properly equipping himself after the manner of his tribe with a big six-shooter and two quart bottles of firewater. He began to absorb the latter and as he did so there was a gradual transformation from a quiet and docile Indian into a wild and raving savage with all the bloodthirsty instincts of his tribe. He forgot he was in the city of the great father and imagined himself upon the vast hunting grounds of his reservation. In his mad stampede through Thirteen-and-a-half street he ran counter to a black man, a real African, whom Steve at once decided was no longer entitled to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness and, pulling his gun, he exclaimed, "Big Injun me, Steve, kille like bear d—n Kohnoncho to h—l." The black man did not stop to ascertain that "Kohonche," being interpreted, means "nigger, but became so thoroughly frightened that he faded several shades. Just then two minions of the law in the persons of Policemen Purks and Kilmartin came up and corralled the redskin and marched him a prisoner to No. 1 police station, where he was locked up charged with carrying concealed weapons.

Wireless Telegraphy.

It is said that successful experiments have at last been accomplished in wireless telegraphy, and this would undoubtedly be a good thing, and revolutionize many ways of doing business. One writer has gone so far as to say that wireless telegraphy is the greatest discovery of the age. We beg to differ. Don't overlook Hostetter's Stomach Bitters when you talk about the great things of the world. This peerless medicine has done more to promote health and settle stomach troubles than any other medicine in existence. It cures dyspepsia, indigestion, malaria and constipation. It never fails. Try it, and be sure and get the genuine, with Private Revenue Stamp over the neck of bottle. Don't let the druggist palm off a substitute.

—Con Monahan is still alive NEWS is pleased to report, and is "as healthy as a bull calf." He is still on Luzon Island, and judging from the tone of his letter to Mr. Cool he is enjoying the life of a benedict. Con says his letter is not for publication, but we've read it and will extract a note or two: The insurgents still congregate in knots and do mischief wherever they can. If more rigid laws were had, instead of "the milk and water and bible sentiment," it would be better for all concerned. There is no question of gold existing in great quantities in Northern Luzon. Lots of it there but the people are too lazy to dig it out. The island of Mindinauo, 600 miles south, is the richest of all, but very few care to go there yet on account of the tough natives. As Con is not caring to be devoured by the black cannibals he has decided to postpone his trip there for the present. He says it is still risky business on Luzon to venture out far —not only will the insurgents put him to sleep, but the cannibals in the timber will eat him up, hoof and all. Strong guard is kept on at Manila during the day and doubled at night. The hero of Magill winds up by saying that he is happy in his "Casa" with a pretty Senoritta of the bright Mestizo race.

The place has been quarantined by Dr. Phillips the county physician. If the patients had not refused treatment from the government physician death could have been avoided.

—Easter is celebrated in all countries in different ways. In Continental Europe the peasants formerly celebrated the day by putting robes on one of their number, crowning him with a tin crown and saluting him as king. In Russia the feast is celebrated on Easter eve. All night long the streets are brilliantly lighted and crowded with people in new clothes. At midnight mass is said in all the Greek churches. Russians call Easter "The Opener of the Gates of Paradise." The Greece men and women greet each other with a kiss, exchanging red eggs and the customary Easter greetings. In Rome, naturally, the celebration of Easter is most splendid. Formerly the pope himself said mass in St. Peter's. The day was ushered in by the firing of canon. St. Peter's was brilliantly lighted and splendidly decorated, and the papal guards, in full uniform, formed a double line from the altar to the shrine of the apostles. At night St. Peter's was lit by hundreds of thousands of tiny oil lamps. Later they were extinguished and as many basins of golden fire were lit at the same time. The ceremonies have lost some of their splendor in recent years, but are still magnificent. In Mexico booths are erected displaying every conceivable holiday ware lit up with candles. Boys go winding through the crowd selling little cakes like sepulchres, crosses and crowns of thorn. The wild gayety is intense.

COTTON

IS AGAIN KING.

FROM a price of 5 cents per pound a few months ago, raw cotton has gone up until it sells today at 9 cents per pound. Worse still—the supply is short, in the face of a demand larger than for many seasons.

The world looks to America for its cotton. As our new crop will not be marketed until 1901, it is unreasonable to look for a drop in cotton goods before that time.

But remember one thing: I purchased all my cotton goods before the advance and am selling them at the last season's prices, giving my customers the advantage of the increase instead of taking the extra profit for myself as our other merchants are doing all over the country.

My new spring stock is now complete and at the low prices of last year.

The Paris Exposition.

The advance guard of the army of foreigners invading Paris for the exposition has made its entry, and a very large proportion of them are Americans. Every moment of the day one now sees cabs flying about the boulevards loaded with Saratoga trunks, while the familiar American accent is heard in restaurants and other places of popular resort. The hotels are already filling up, and the prices of everything are rising. In fact these first arrivals form a sort of a forlorn hope on whom the hotel and shopkeepers are experimenting with increased charges. Not only the visitors, but permanent residents are beginning to feel the burden of the advanced rates, which most of the hotels have so raised, that the regular guests are obliged either to leave or accept other accommodations. Those who are unfortunate enough to have only monthly leases on their apartments have been notified that their rents will be doubled for six months after the opening of the exposition. The cab drivers have an eye on greater wealth, and are trying to arrange with the government for increased fares.

At the exposition itself everything is bustle and confusion. Heavy teams line the streets waiting to deposit their loads of exhibits. The American exhibitors are finding themselves seriously handicapped in preparing for the installation, owing to the unexpected congestion on the railways between Havre and Paris, and also on the tracks within the exposition grounds. There is a continual struggle between representatives of every nation to get cars in the grounds, but the French people hold the key to the situation, and take good care that their own cars are taken to their exhibit space and unloaded before those of the United States and other nations. Russia and Belgium are the only countries favored.

Ran Into a Washout.

Fort Worth, Tex., April 6.—The southbound passenger train on the Fort Worth & Denver City railroad was wrecked Thursday morning near Channing. The coaches caught fire and the entire train except one coach was burned. It is reported that six or seven people were killed, among them Wells-Fargo Express Messenger Chapman. Superintendent Goode and Trainmaster Mills in a special car with a number of physicians left for the scene. The wreck was caused by a washout. The fireman and express messenger it is believed were burned. The local Wells-Fargo office received a message from Channing to the effect that it was impossible to tell the number of passengers killed.

Box Factory Burned.

New York, April 10.—The Edward T. Smith box factory was destroyed by fire. The flames spread to the adjacent structures and caused a loss estimated at a quarter of a million dollars.

A RAGING FLOOD IN TEXAS

LARGE NUMBER OF LIVES LOST.

The Raging River Is Far Beyond Its Banks—The Big Dam in the Colorado River Has Gone Out—A Train Wrecked.

Austin, Texas, April 9.—This city Saturday night was in pitch darkness, with a raging river one mile wide and swollen far beyond its banks, roaring and surging through the lower part of town, having spread destruction and death in its wake. In addition to the vast loss to property interests, it is calculated that between 30 and 40 lives have been sacrificed, and the reports coming in from the tributary country do not tend to improve matters. The flood is not unlike the disastrous Johnstown floor some years ago, in that a raging river, already swollen far beyond its capacity, bore too heavily upon an immense dam spanning the river, breaking it and letting loose a reservoir of water 30 miles long, half a mile wide and 60 feet deep, to aid in carrying destruction down the valleys of the Colorado river.

The great dam in the Colorado river gave way at noon from the enormous pressure of water and debris, and with a roar and crash swept the valley below the city, wrecking the immense light and power plant and drowning eight workmen. Following is a list of known dead, including those killed in the power house: Frank Kincet, Frank Kinney, Walter Flower, Walter Johnson, Alfred Johnson, Frank Fitzgerald, Walter Blossman, Joseph Newman, Dick Morris (colored), John Proess, Charles Burchard, six negroes.

Great Wall Gave Way.

The crisis came shortly after 11 o'clock, then suddenly, with a report like the roar of the ocean, the great wedge, 25 feet high, 500 feet wide and about eight feet thick, rolled out of the center section of the dam, down the face of the 60-foot fall, deep into the river below. This left a hanging gap in the very middle of the dam, through which the debris and water fiercely poured, while the flood already raging was threatening everything in its path.

Whites and Blacks Missing.

A crowd of white people, numbering about 30, living just below the dam in tents, were seen at their habitations just before the dam broke, and have not been accounted for since. It is generally believed that all of them were swept away.

One man, in attempting to cross the roadway leading to the bridge across the river just as the big wave rolled down, was caught, and as he and his horse and buggy went down with the torrent and were heard of no more.

A family of six negroes living in the valley south of the city are known to have been drowned.

Heavy Property Loss.

It is estimated that more than 100 houses have been destroyed, and the loss to property will be great, the light and power plant costing $1,500,00. The breaking of the dam engulfed the old water company's plant below the city, and it is tonight lying 15 feet under water, while the city is in darkness and without water.

Wreck on a Railroad.

In addition to the losses here, the International & Great Northern and the Austin & Northwestern railroads, both entering this city, have suffered severely, the first named having a serious wreck by reason of the floods. The southbound Cannon Ball train from St. Louis on the International & Great Northern was wrecked at McNeil, nine miles above here, as a result of a washout. The engine and cars plunged into a culvert, demolishing the engine, the mail car, baggage car, two day coaches and one sleeper. The cars left the track and rolled over on their sides in four feet of water, but fortunately no lives were lost, nor were any of the passengers badly hurt.

Big Power House Went Out.

Austin, Texas, April 9.—The increased volume of water which came down the river undermined the power house at the dam and it fell into the river, carrying with it $300,000 worth of machinery.

All Streams Are Overflowing.

Waco, Texas, April 9.—Reports of loss of life and damage caused by floods due to the incessant rains during the past three days continue to pour in from all directions, indicating a repetition of the disasters of last year. All streams, including the Brazos and Colorado, are overflowing the lowlands and rising rapidly. The crops of cotton and corn are nearly submerged, and will have to be replanted.

Bryan at San Francisco.

San Francisco, April 9.—Colonel W. J. Bryan arrived here from the north, making a stay of half an hour at the Palace hotel, where an informal reception was held, several thousand people having gathered to greet the orator. Colonel Bryan made a very brief address. He refused to discuss the personal aspects of the campaign, especially declining to express his views in regard to the question of Admiral Dewey's candidacy for the presidential nomination.

Non-Union Workmen Beaten.

Chicago, April 9.—Nineteen non-union workmen were reported to have been assaulted and badly beaten by union pickets. Two of the men were injured seriously, one being a gray-haired man whose age may not withstand the shock. Six men are under arrest for the assaults.

Killed at the Crossing.

Antioch, Cal., April 9.—Mrs. Holly Ellsworth and Miss N. Hill, while crossing a railroad near Cornwall, in a buggy, were struck by a locomotive and instantly killed. A daughter of Mrs. Ellsworth was seriously injured.

Men may save money, but money will never save them.

Heavy Boer Losses Reported.

Carnavaron, Cape Colony, April 9.—It is reported that 200 insurgents, who were not aware that Sir Charles Parsons had occupied Kenhardt, rode into that place and were captured by the British troops. The Canadian artillery has returned here from Van Wyck's vliet.

Break for Liberty.

Cape Town, April 9.—A determined attempt to escape was made by the Boer prisoners at Simontown and 14 of them succeeded in getting away. In the confusion one of the prisoners was killed and another was wounded. One man was captured. Sentries have been placed at different points of the town and the station is under military supervision.

Threaten Brabant's Column.

London, April 9.—The Boers are in force at Wepener, north of Smithfield, in the Orange Free State, and are threatening General Brabant's colonial division, the main body of which, with the artillery, is at Wepener. A telegram which left Mazero, Basutoland, north of Wepener, at midnight, describes the Boers as being in "great force" and afraid to make a frontal attack, but it is added they were endeavoring to turn the British position by crossing the Basuto frontier by a road skirting Caledon river, which emerges south of Wepener.

The Basutos are excited. Assistant Commissioner Griffiths with a force of police left Mazero Friday, going where the Boers are about to trespass and the tribesmen engaged for railroad work at Bloemfontein are deserting to protect their villages.

Reports reach Mazero almost hourly of Boer activity in the Orange Free State.

British Loss at Reddersburg.

Bloemfontein, April 9.—The casualties at Reddersburg were: Officers—Killed, Captain Casson and Lieutenant Barclay, both of the Northumberlands; wounded, two; captured, eight. Non-commissioned officers and men—Killed, eight; wounded, 33. The rest were captured. Our strength was 167 mounted infantry and 429 infantry. The enemy was said to be 3200 strong with five guns.

Operations Against Buller.

It is reported from Ladysmith that the Boers are beginning to construe General Buller's inactivity as a sign of fear or inability to resume active operations. Hence they are showing much activity, particularly around Biggarsberg, and are said to be planning to outflank General Buller by an advance in force by way of Helpmakaar. As the plan is known it is not likely the Boers will find Buller unprepared. The Boers state that the Colesburg and the Stormberg commandos, numbering 6000 men and 10 guns, have reached Kroonstad.

The Republican Delegates.

Ellensburg, April 6.—J. H. Schively called the republican state convention to order Thursday morning. He made a brief speech. During his remarks he mention ed the name of President McKinley. This brought out a scene of riotous enthusiasm.

Madge of Thurston nominated E. H. Cuie of King for temporary chairman and he was elected. Madge and Major Weisenburger were named to conduct the chairman to the platform. He made only a brief speech, and the convention proceeded to business.

J. W. Lyons was made temporary secretary. After naming the committees on order of business and resolutions the convention took a recess till 1 o'clock.

As the result of nearly all night caucuses, C. B. Hopkins of Spokane withdrew from the contest for delegate to the national convention and King county likewise pulled down Hughes. A bitter fight was on against John L. Wilson, over the shoulders of Hopkins. Thursday morning the Spokane man withdrew.

It is now the program to give Spokane nothing and King county will ask only for Neufelder.

The following delegates were elected by acclamation:

J. M. Ashton of Pierce.
Levi Ankeny of Walla Walla.
S. M. Sims of Cowlitz.
E. C. Neufelder of King.
Herbert O'Conner of Skagit.
N. B. Kaufman of Lewis.
Fred J. Hayfield of Whitman.
George H. Baker of Klickitat.

Defaulter in a Prison Cell.

San Francisco, April 9.—Walter E. Groffe, the defaulting cashier of the Adams Express company at Dayton, Ohio, who left the city on October 6 last, taking with him $3000 of the corporation's money, has been arrested in this city. He had registered at the Brooklyn hotel under the name of H. J. Haline, but when taken into custody admitted his identity and said he was ready to go back and face the consequences. He stated that as all of his money was gone he had made two attempts at suicide and was contemplating another when he was apprehended.

Suicide of a Bank Cashier.

Oakland, Cal., April 10.—Banker H. H. Pitcher, who has had charge of the Livermore bank in the capacity of manager and cashier, blew his brains out at his Livermore home. Pitcher was trustee of the estate of the late Thomas Varney, deceased, valued at $600,000. His trust was being investigated in court. Pitcher was to produce his books in court and testify as to how he handled the bank and trust. Rather than appear in court he blew his brains out.

Circleville Washed Away.

St. Louis, April 9.—A special from Dallas, Texas, says: A bulletin from Taylor, Texas, says the town of Circleville was washed away. The place had 100 inhabitants. It is feared some were drowned.

An effort is being made by a number of women's societies in Germany to have the government include domestic servants among workmen who are insured against accidents.

The most important work for the present is that for the future.

MINES' AND MINING NEWS

OUR NORTHWESTERN MINES.

Items Gleaned From Late Reports—All Districts Are Being Developed—A Prosperous Year Is Predicted—Mining Notes and Personals.

The contract to continue the tunnel on the Canyon Creek Mining Co.'s property, which was let a few days ago, was for 200 feet. This is expected to reach their ledge. The point for which they are aiming is where the vein crosses the side line between the ground of that company and the Union. The old crosscut tunnel of the latter is used as far as it goes in the right direction, from which point 300 feet would reach the Canyon Creek vein, with no allowance for dip. The new company has already driven 150 feet of that since its incorporation the first of the year, and the vein is hoped for long before the present contract is completed. As it is uncertain, however, which way the ledge dips, it was deemed best to let a contract which would certainly reach it.

REPUBLIC.

Work on Flag Hill will be resumed about May 1.

The mill of the Republic Reduction Company is rapidly nearing completion.

The Nova has resumed operations, so says J. C. Cale, the discoverer and manager.

The Princess Maude ledge is still 5½ feet in width and the values average about $40 per ton.

There is nickle on the South half as a big strike is reported on a bridge creek fraction.

The Mountain Lion mill is a success and the people are well pleased. Fully as good as was expected.

Ninety-six feet of ore is the width of the Quilp vein at fifty feet below the tunnel level and the values are improving.

In the San Poil mine the winze below the No. 2 level was sunk to a depth of 55 feet from top to bottom, with a general value of about $30 per ton.

The average value of samples taken from the new strike in the Black Tail last Saturday was $36.40 per ton. The ledge is still six feet wide. and is all ore.

The sound of the steam whistle at at the Chico hoisting works reverberated through the neighboring hills for the first time last week, and it was heard throughout the town.

Superintendent Miller states that the ledge on the Ben Hur has not changed in width and there was no perceptible change in the values of the ore. The values average about $30 per ton.

The Murphey, which lies about one-half mile southwest of the Mountain Lion shaft, has a 50-foot shaft that is full of fine looking ore. It is said to run from $7 to $16 in gold per ton and an ounce or two of silver.

A private assay made on April 7th from samples taken from the Princess Maude ledge gave returns of $1.02 in silver and $2.06 in gold. Though the result was low the assay was not general enough to give assurance that this represents the average values in the ledge. It is possible that six inches either way in the ledge the values might be $50 a ton. The ledge is somewhat mixed with streaks of porphry, but is fully six feet wide. The samples assayed looked well.

BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Extensive developments and favorable returns are predicted for Ainsworth camp this season.

In the Jumbo, at Rossland, the large ore body which was found on No. 1 level has been found on the 350-foot level. It has been crosscut for 10 feet and carries the finest-looking ore that has yet been found in the mine.

Two promising Boundary properties are to be opened up. Work has started on the R-Bell and Remington. They were shut down two years ago. Many other claims are also to be developed during the coming summer.

The Hall Mines, Limited, is being reconstructed and there is a probability of a large interest being acquired by Canadian capitalists. The first steps were taken at a general meeting of the shareholders held in London March 16.

The Ymir Gold Mines, Ltd., Company's profits in 1899 were $100,155. The statement to the stockholders gives the results of the year's operations as over $1,500,000 worth or ore blocked out, tramway capacity doubled and a strike in the Nevada.

Great disappointment is felt by the management of the B. A. C., on account of the delay in the arrival of the new Le Roi compressor which was due on February 25. The mines cannot be worked to their full capacity until this machinery is installed.

The six 100-horse power boilers for the Le Roi plant at the Black Bear tunnel have been shipped from the east and are expected to arrive next week. Meanwhile the bricklayers are setting brick for the boilers which will be sufficiently advanced to receive them on their arrival.

That the Evening Star, at Rossland, may become one of the great producing mines of the camp, with careful developments on the lines now being followed by C. P. Chamberlin, will be evident to any man who pays it a visit and sees the great bodies of ore being opened out.

A number of the miners have resumed work on the Le Roi in a body. With the beginning of this week the making of contracts will ensue. The men are at present working merely to test the ground to determine what the work is worth, this being preliminary to agreeing on a contract price. A similar method will be followed in the War Eagle and Center Star soon.

The Iron Mask is likely to continue shipping about a carload a day, if not more. The Evening Star and I. X. L. will also make heavy shipments. Whatever decrease the shipments may show on account of the stoppage of the supply from the War Eagle and Center Star, it is likely to make up from other mines which will come forward into the ranks of the regular shippers. These include the Josie, Number One and the Nickel Plate, which are putting up hoists for the purpose.

Eleven hundred feet of ore has been passed through by the long tunnel on the Knob Hill mine in Greenwood camp. Three hundred and fifty feet from the mouth of the tunnel a winze was sunk 220 feet. For the first 145 feet down the winze was in ore, but at that point it dipped out. At a depth of 200 they are crosscutting back to the ore. In a distance of 950 feet in the tunnel a crosscut has been run east and west, all in ore for a distance of 300 feet. The shaft has reached a depth of 400 feet. W. Yolen Williams, superintendent, says that at the 300-foot level they are still driving north in ore, and have about 180 feet yet to run to get to a point where they will raise to connect with the 200-foot level.

MINING NOTES.

A strike which bids fair to be of even more importance than that of the Manila was made a few days ago on the Caledonia, near Keller, Wash., owned by Dan and Alex. McMaster.

There are hundreds of locations in close proximity to Baker City that owners can make pay their own development and a surplus by being afforded this opportunity to have their ore treated at a fair cost.

A remarkably large gold bearing ledge has recently attracted attention to the Rapid river district, which is the north slope of the Seven Devils range in Idaho. This mammoth ledge of low grade ore is said to be 800 feet wide and to extend for a mile and a half. There are very few as large bodies of mineral bearing quartz in the country, and it is attracting particular interest on this account. The ledge was located by W. A. Irwin in 1896.

The No. 4 tunnel on the Keep Cool mine on Lake Pend d'Oreille is entering the vein. This tunnel is a crosscut which will give a depth on the vein of 400 feet. In its course it has crossed several small veins and stringers all dipping toward the main ore body. The Keep Cool carries a pay streak of high grade ore, which has been opened for an average width of five feet on all the upper levels, and it is the expectation that it will be shortly encountered in this level. The Conjecture mine which is in the vicinity of the Keep Cool, is to resume.

There is excitement in Reddy gulch, Idaho. The two rich strikes of galena and carbonates on the Alice vein right upon the surface have stirred the district and there has been a stampede to the gulch. The vein has been traced and staked all the way through to the top of the hill just east of Canyon creek. It is farther south than any other vein upon which much work has been done and these discoveries are therefore of unusual importance. The course of the vein to the top of the hill indicates that it crosses Canyon creek not far from the baseball grounds, just above Wallace.

Messrs. F. F. Frisbee of Colorado Springs, Colo., and E. E. Savage of Butte, Mont., both practical mill men, who have been in Baker City and vicinity for several weeks looking over the mining field, have concluded to permanently locate here and have secured control of the 10-stamp mill located in East Baker, a well equipped plant, and are making preparations to operate it as a costom mill, either purchasing ore outright or milling at $2 per ton.

The experiment is worthy of the cooperation of every mine owner in this vicinity, and it is to be hoped they will show sufficient interest in the matter to test the practicability of the enterprise.

Activity of the Boers.

London, April 10.—The amazing activity of the Boers southeast and southwest of Bloemfontein continues, the Boer commands seemingly coming and going throughout as wide a region as they please, but taking good care not to throw themselves against the strong bodies of British.

The retirement of the Irish Rifles from Rouxville to Aliwal leaves Gen. Brabant without communication with the other British forces. He has 2000 or 3000 colonials holding a fine defense of the country, but he is apparently invested so far as London knows.

Five Men Were Executed.

Ponce, Puerto Rico, April 9.—The five men—Simon Rodriguez, Carlos Pachecho, Hermogens Pachecho, Eugenio Rodriguez and Rolano Santiego—convicted of the murder in October, 1898, of Prudencio Mendos at Yuaco after criminally assaulting the wife and daughter of their victim, who were compelled to dance about the corpse, were garroted during the early forenoon in this city at a spot about a mile from the jail.

Half the Village Burned.

Proctorville, Ohio, April 9.—The large flouring mill of G. D. Pugh at Proctorville burned and from this a conflagration resulted which destroyed half the village, clearing two squares of residences and business houses. The loss is estimated at nearly $200,000 with about 80 per cent insurance.

True patriotism always begins at home.

IDAHO.

A summer school is to be opened at the Idaho University. It opens Webnesday, June 20. Course will be in two sections, university and elementary.

Settlers won the contest for 4,000 acres of Nez Perce land. There was an error in the official survey. A parcel allotted to Indians turns out to belong to the white claimants.

An unknown man, about 50 years of age, was run over and instantly killed by the local east-bound freight near Ramsey, a small station six miles east of Rathdrum. It was evidently a case of suicide, as the man was found this morning by a section crew lying across the track and would not get out of the way of the section car.

Several hundred specimens of wood have been furnished the civil engineering department of the University by Ed. Rawson, the lumberman. These specimens are broken upon the testing machine in order to accurately determine their value for building purposes. Yellow pine, tamarac, red and white fir and spruce have been furnished, and white pine and cedar are to follow.

For months there has been an abnormal demand for houses of all kinds in Wallace, and the early coming of spring has given a start to building. It is usually a month or two later than this before much building can be done. Those in a position to build were generally unprepared for commencing so early, so thus far there is little done in the way of residences except to prepare.

Both the Canyon Creek Electric Light Company and the Wallace Manufacturing Electric and Water Company are making heavy increases to their plants. The Canyon Creek company is putting in a 100 kilowatt monocycle generator, together with transformers, arc lamps and various other improvements which, when completed, will more than double the capacity of the plant. The Wallace company is making much the same kind of improvements, but on a larger scale.

Hayes' grocery store at Caldwell was burglarized last week and $65 in money taken. The job bears evidence of having been performed by a professional cracksman. The burglar drilled a hole into the door of the safe and blew it open, using nitro-glycerine. The door was practically smashed to pieces. Dr. Ed. E. Maxey was asleep in his apartments over the scene of the robbery. A boy slept in a room adjoining the store. Neither of them was disturbed by the explosion.

MONTANA.

"Uncle Johnnie" Cowan, the man who discovered the egulch where Helena is located, is dead.

W. F. Jarvis, of Bozeman, who is employed by the government at the fish hatchery, has gone to Lake, Idaho, and will spend several months in gathering fish eggs for the hatchery breeding ponds.

The scaffold used at Glendive in the execution of Joseph C. Hurst was the one on which William C. Brooks, colored, paid the death penalty in this city on November last for the murder of his wife in November, 1898.

D. J. Hennessy, of Butte, returned from the east and declared that he would not comply with the demands of the Clerks' Union to close his store at 6 o'clock. The strike is still on and transparencies are being paraded around the streets. The working force in the store at the present time is 300 and Mr. Hennessy says the clerical supply is greater than the demand.

William Wenke was literally torn to pieces at the Parrot smelter last week, while endeavoring to replace a four-inch belt which had slipped from its pulley. He was whirled around several times by the pulley before the machinery could be stopped. Every shred of flesh was torn from his body and his feet and legs were severed from the body. Someone conveyed the information to the boy's mother and she got to the place of the accident before the undertaker arrived. The scene which followed completely unnerved everyone who witnessed it.

Poor, long-suffering Butte people, who cannot coax one solitary spear of grass to grow in their back yards, are to have a real park, and that, too, in conjunction with one of the finest natatoriums money can provide. Three Butte men of wealth have had the idea for some time and now that Butte is booming, consider it time to get to work. Construction work will commence next week and will be pushed through rapidly, two shifts of men working constantly. From $75,000 to $100,000 will be expended in completing this pleasure resort.

The Butte Street Railway Company, owned by Senator Clark, will build a double track to the grounds, which lie near the old Bell mine across the creek from the coke ovens. A big pavilion of wood will be erected first, one that can also be used for conventions, mass meetings, etc., as well as a place for exercise. A company of vaudeville artists will be engaged. There will be a bicycle track, baseball and football park and a large lake, which in winter will be used for a skating rink. Shooting galleries, bowling alleys, in fact everything which will contribute to the pleasure of the Butte people, will be added.

WASHINGTON.

King, the famous general will visit Spokane in June.

The expenses incurred in the hanging of George Webster amounted to $896.90.

Burglars blew open the safe at Spangle, took money orders and a watch; valuable papers are also missing, but no money was secured by the bold thieves.

Albert Michaud was hanged last week in Tacoma. He died in 12 minutes, his neck being broken by the fall. He was hanged for brutally murdering his divorced wife.

Arbor Day was celebrated in Spokane by the planting of trees, raking of lawns and the putting out of shrubbery, plants, flowers and vines, by private parties.

Bessie, the four-year-old daughter of John C. Hillman, who resides on the Ennis farm, near Osborne station, on the W. & C. R. line, eight miles from Walla Walla, was burned to death last Sunday.

The poultry men of the northwest are ambitious, as they have a new scheme for forming a general association to take in all the rest. The first exhibit will be held in Seattle, and Spokane hopes to capture the second one.

William T. Richardson, a well-to-do farmer residing two miles below Dayton, died at Portland Monday as a result of an operation. Mr. Richardson was 65 years of age, and had lived in this county for nearly 25 years.

The Cheney normal school won the second of the annual debates between that school and the Blair business college after a mental combat last week that took the judges 15 minutes to determine the winner. They were not unanimous then, but two voted for the normal and one for Blair.

The last sales of Yakima hops, made a few days ago, were 73 bales grown by William Davern, on the Cowiche, for 7½ cents, and Henry B. Scudder, 13 bales, which sold for 9 cents. These were bought by J. J. Carpenter, who estimates that there are only 700 bales of the crop of 1899 remaining in this valley. The growers are expecting at least 15 cents this fall.

Dr. Yount was summoned to the Grand Coulee country last week to attend young Walter Stevenson, who had been wounded by the accidental discharge of a shotgun. The young man was dead when the doctor arrived there. Deceased was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Sanford Stevenson, who conducted the store and postoffice at Barry. The family had been living in Wilbur until recently.

From all the country tributary to Cheney come the most encouraging reports of the prospects for grain, hay and fruit crops. Old settlers say they have never known the ground to be wet to so great depth as at present. Winter wheat, of which a large acreage has been planted, is springing up like magic. The seeding of spring grain is progressing rapidly. Fruit trees are beginning to blossom.

Mrs. Alice Parker, living four miles from Chewelah, on the Colville road, is testing the large Trout incubator which she had built last fall. The capacity is 2,500 eggs. She is putting in eggs as fast as she can obtain them, and at the present time has nearly 1,000 in process of hatching. She expects the first hatching April 8. As this is the only incubator of the kind built in the state, the results are being watched with interest by the poultry men.

The railway committee in the Canadian house of commons has killed the preamble of the bill for a charter to build the Kettle River Valley railway into Boundary Creek, to connect with the Great Northern, thus giving the Grand Trunk Railway, through Chicago connections, access to British Columbia. This is the charter so long sought by D. C. Corbin, and so persistently withheld by the Dominion government. The valley of the Kettle river offers the natural route into the Boundary country.

OREGON.

Cannerymen all along the coast are having difficulty in securing Chinese laborers.

A Minnesota man is inspecting a 10,000-acre tract of timber land near Aspen Lake, 14 miles northwest of Klamath Falls, with a view to its purchase.

Shearing machines are rapidly taking the place of hand work. The Antelope Herald is informed that several will be located in that section at an early day.

The old Perry Watkins ranch has been sold at auction under authority of the county court by the executor of the Watkins estate, C. E. Bayard, says The Dalles Chronicle. It was bought by C. W. Emerson for $4000.

Governor T. T. Geer of Oregon visited the state prison at San Quentin in California. He said that Oregon's big prison at Salem would in all probability follow California's example in employing her convicts in the manufacture of jute bags.

Sheriff William M. Blakley of Pendleton, who was appointed on the committee on memorials by the Oregon Historical Society, will go to Walla Walla in a few days to meet James McAuliff, for the purpose of selecting the place where a temporary monuments is to be erected to commemorate the battle fought by the pioneer regiment under the command of Colonel Kelly against Pu-pu-mox-mox and his Indian warriors in 1855. It is the intention of the Oregon Historical Society to erect monuments at various places of historical interest in this state. Later a permanent monument will be erected and dedicated.

THE BOERS WON AGAIN.

DROVE THE ENGLISH BACK.

Plumer Makes an Unsuccessful Attempt to Get Into Mafeking—The Garrison Then Assisted—Many Desertions on Both Sides.

London, April 6.—A special dispatch from Lorenzo Marquez says that sharp fighting occurred on April 2nd in the neighborhood of Mafeking. The garrison made a sortie while Colonel Plumer's cavalry attacked the Boers at Ramatahlabama. Both attacks were repulsed. Twenty of Colonel Plumer's men were found dead on the field and six others were made prisoners. The federal losses were small.

Was in Easy Reach.

Gaberones, Bechuanaland, April 6.—Colonel Plumer, with a force of British mounted infantry, started on a daring march Sunday, March 25, with the object of threatening the Boer lines of communication. After two rapid night marches through the Transvaal territory, he arrived at dawn March 27 within 12 miles of Zeerust and distinctly heard the bombardment of Mafeking. Having reconnoitered the country with a view of future operations without sighting a single white man, Colonel Plumer crossed the railroad south of Lobatsi, which he found in possession of a Boer force, and returned. Then finding the railroad hence damaged by General Shyman's main force, he returned to the vicinity of Mafeking.

Rumors reach here that a relief column is approaching Mafeking from the south.

Latest From Mafeking.

Mafeking, April 6.—There has been little excitement during the past week. The Boer shell fire comes in fitful gusts and has little effect. The Boers seem to be breaking up their main laager to the westward, but have taken up an entrenched position on the northward with the view of preventing the approach of relief. The sharpshooters keep up a steady interchange of fire. It is rumored that relief is near.

M. Shelto, a native chief southward, has broken out against the Boers. There was heavy firing in the direction of his chief kraal March 22.

An Irish-American trooper of the protectorate has deserted the British. A reward of $250 has been offered for his capture, dead or alive.

President Steyn Talks.

Pretoria, April 6.—In his speech at the opening of the Free State raad, President Steyn declared that in spite of the surrender of Bloemfontein he had not lost hope of the triumph of the republican cause. The war, he said, was forced upon the Transvaal and nothing remained for the Orange Free State but to throw in its lot with its sister republic in accordance with the terms of the treaty.

Tremendous Cost to England.

London, April 10.—It is known that in addition to millions expended from September to April, the British army will require more than 60,000,000 pounds during the next 12 months, and that will not include the transport from South Africa back to England. All estimates for ships, horses, forage and food supplies appear unduly heavy, and it is an open secret that rates of contractors have been abnormally righ. Probably there has been no way out of it in the sudden emergency of war, but there is frank admission by military experts in and out of parliament that England is paying too much for sea transport of freight, food stuffs, military stores and forage, and that contractors are making immense fortunes out of the business of war. The market is stripped and traders dictate their own terms and are fattening upon army rates.

Webster Davis Resigns.

Kansas City, Mo., April 4.—A Journal Hon. Webster Davis of Kansas City has tendered his resignation to the president as assistant secretary of the interior. Mr. Davis decided to take this course as the result of his visit to South Africa. He has decided to deliver a public address touching the entire scope of the present war and believes that he can best do so while free from any restraint which his present position would impose upon him. When taking his departure for home from Pretoria, 2000 people gathered to take leave of him at the station. They appealed to him in tears to state their cause to the American people and Mr. Davis says his conscience would haunt him if he proved recreant to that pitiful appeal. He believes the American people are not truly informed on the situation. He will therefore avail himself of an early opportunity to relate his experience and observations at a public meeting that shall be free to all.

Mr. Davis has decided on this course after mature deliberation and free consultation with his friends.

The Chase Given Up.

London, April 5.—Generals Colville and French have given up the movement against the Boers east of Bloemfontein and have joined the main army. It doubtless seemed to Lord Roberts a vain attempt to send 12,000 of his best troops into the wilderness with a field transport in a direction at a right angle with his chosen line of advance. The Boers have probably moved elsewhere and if to the southwest General Colville could as easily strike them from Bloemfontein as by following them up across the plains. These inferences still leave the situation bewildering for the time being.

The enormously superior British forces appear inactive in every part of the war field, waiting yet, probably, for the accumulation of material for a swift advance on the Transvaal.

The London commentators and the public to some extent are irritated and confused by the situation.

Report of Trade.

Bradstreet's report for the past week says:

Faverable features continue in the majority in the general trade situation. The hopes for the advent of seasonable spring weather have been realized and nearly all markets report an improved distribution at retail. This, as explained heretofore, was really the key to the general merchandise situation. The industrial situation is a rather spotted one. April 1, instead of May 1, seems to have been fixed upon as a date for presenting new demands as to wages and hours. Many thousands of men are directly or indirectly involved in the Chicago building trades strike and several thousands are out in the coal industry in the Pittsburg region, most of the building trade strikers in other cities have gained their demands and the machinists' strike at Chicago, which was regarded as threatening to the entire iron and steel industry, has been called off pending arbitration. The price situation, too, is encouraging, farm products easily leading in the upward movement.

Wheat crop advices are on the whole favorable except from the central west. Sympathy is shown with corn, which in turn has been influenced by the steady advance in hog products and by the known smallness of reserves in cribs and in store. Nothing like the speculative interests in corn has been seen for some years past and the price now is little below 50 cents at New York. Hog products are very strong statistically. Pork is 30 per cent and lard is 25 per cent higher than a year ago. Another product of the farm, cotton, has developed renewed speculative interest this week and a slight upward swing has occurred as the result of increased speculative attention working along previously mentioned lines. Cotton goods are seasonably quiet at first hand but a fair jobbing business is doing; the retail distribution is encouraging.

Steel rails are firm and quite active, particularly at the west and whatever weakness is noted is in some few lines of finished steel and in the low grades of foundry pig iron.

Recent advances in wages and the strong conditions in the bituminous coal and ore markets certainly point to no great shrinkage in prices, notwithstanding the fact that current demand is of a hand-to-mouth character and buyers are still waiting for a break. In addition expert inquiry is persistent and from all parts of the earth.

The better tone of the boot and shoe industry is lead by steady prices in leather and some advances in hides.

Copper and lead are steady, while tin is slightly lower as a result of speculation.

Butter of course reflects the advancing season and more liberal deliveries while the slight shading in petroleum is hardly significant.

Wheat (including flour) shipments for the week aggregate 3,386,963 bushels, against 2,962,349 bushels last week, 3,384,800 bushels in the corresponding week of 1899, 3,278,726 bushels in 1898, 2,036,700 bushels in 1897, and 1,764,805 bushels in 1896. Since July 1 this season the exports of wheat aggregated 151,009,643 bushels, against 188,345,545 bushels last year, and 183,846,278 bushels in 1897-98.

Corn exports for the week aggregate 4,361,591 bushels, against 3,193,638 bushels last week, 3,724,653 bushels in this week a year ago, 3,557,000 bushels in 1898, 4,645,585 bushels in 1897 and 1,391,846 bushels in 1896. Since July 1 this season corn exports aggregate 160,123,206 bushels, against 131,286,679 bushels during the same period a year ago, and 139,580,649 bushels in 1897-98.

Business failures in the United States for the week number 182, as compared with 178 last week, 190 in this week a year ago, 220 in 1898, 232 in 1897 and 231 in 1896. Business failures in the Dominion of Canada for the week number 25, the same number as last week and compared with 21 in this week a year ago, 39 in 1898, 32 in 1897 and 30 in 1896.

For the first quarter of the year failures are fewer in number than in 1899 and liabilities are 7 per cent. smaller.

THE CANAL RIGHT OF WAY

NEGOTIATIONS ARE CONCLUDED

To Lease a Strip of Land Ten Miles Wide—Constitution of the Republics Prohibit the Selling of Territory Wanted—The Administration Will Not Rush.

Washington, April 10.—An official of the administration is authority for the statement that arrangements have been practically concluded with the governments of Costa Rica and Nicaragua for the acquisition by the United States of a strip of territory 10 miles wide between Greytown and Brito, through which the Nicaragua canal will be constructed. There are certain diplomatic phases of the negotiations yet to be perfected, but it is understood that these are rather matters of detail than of principle. Rear Admiral J. G. Walker, president of the isthmian canal commission, sounded the Central American governments as to the action they would take in the event of a formal proposition from this government looking to the acquisition of the necessary territory, and the answers he received were generally of a very satisfactory character.

The action taken looking to the acquisition of the necessary territory was initiated immediately after the submission of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty to the senate and when it looked as though there would be no delay in accomplishing ratification. The administration is now disposed not to move so hastily, so that it is difficult to say when agreements will be finally signed looking to the transfer to American control of the necessary territory across the isthmus.

The determination of the president to secure control of Costa Rican and Nicaraguan territory indicates that after consultation with members of the isthmian commission he came to the conclusion that that body would undoubtedly recommend the construction of the Nicaraguan rather than the Panama canal.

It is stated that the commission will in all probability recommend to congress that it adopt the Walker route, favorably reported by the Walker Nicaraguan canal commission, modified slightly to take advantage of new discoveries made by the surveying party now there.

Rear Admiral Walker visited Managua and San Jose, and had very satisfactory interviews with President Zelaya and President Iglesias. In view of the fact that to construct the canal it will be necessary to build railroads and other appliances, Rear Admiral Walker considered it desirable to obtain five miles on each side of the route of the proposed canal and at least three miles on the southern shore of Lake Nicaragua.

The Nicaragua and Costa Rican governments seemed to think that three miles on each side of the line was sufficient, but the rear admiral finally prevailed upon them to accept his view. It was pointed out to him, however, that there was one insuperable obstacle in the way of the cession of territory. The constitutions of Costa Rica and Nicaragua prohibit them from alienating any of their territory.

No difficulty will be experienced, however, as shown by the information communicated by Rear Admiral Walker to the authorities, in obtaining control of the necessary strip of territory. While the two governments are prohibited from disposing of their territory, it is understood they have indicated that an indefinite lease can be granted to the United States.

Costa Rica has nobly come to the front in this matter. She has entered into no conventions or contracts which will affect in any way any concession she may make to the United States. The Maritime Canal company's concession is now said to be terminable at any time at the pleasure of the Costa Rican government. Nicaragua is said to have certain concessions which are terminable upon request, but they will not stand in the way of the construction of the canal by this government. There is some talk of the Managuan government demanding in consideration for the relinquishment of the control of a strip of territory to the United States certain concessions.

Costa Rica has, however, according to information which has reached here from San Jose, given her hearty consent to the proposition to transfer the necessary territory to the control of the United States, though she will not relinquish sovereignty over it, and she has promised her co-operation in the maintenance of the canal.

There is reason to believe that Rear Admiral Walker propounded certain questions to the Colombian government, but what their character is the authorities decline to state. It is understood they cover contingencies growing out of the possible purchase of the Panama canal by the United States. but the information obtained from the Bogota authorities is not considered as important as that which Admiral Walker got from Costa Rica and Nicaragua.

There are 1900 men at work on the Panama canal and progress is being made, though slowly, in constructing the waterway. The isthmian canal commission has a surveying party on the Panama waterway checking up the work done by the company and making borings to ascertain the difficulties remaining to be overcome.

Captain Louis Ostheim Dead.

Chicago, April 10.—Capt. Louis Ostheim of the First United States artillery was found dead in his room at the Auditorium Annex. There was a bullet wound in his right temple. Under his body was a new revolver. He had apparently been dead since Saturday night.

The St. Paul organizers are working on the organization of a hod carriers' union, with much success.

Democratic Convention Hall Burned.

Kansas City, Mo., April 5.—The mammoth and superb auditorium in which the democratic convention was to have been held July 4 was burned to the ground by a fire that started at 1:10 p. m. Within a few minutes after the fire caught the whole structure, taking in a half block each way on Thirteenth and Central streets, was a mass of flames, and 20 minutes after the first alarm was turned in the mammoth roof fell with a crash, throwing showers of burning embers in every direction. The fire started over the furnace room in the rear end of the building. Before the first engine had arrived the fire was beyond control. Within 20 minutes every engine in the city was at the scene, but the work of the firemen proved of no avail and their efforts were directed to the saving of surrounding property.

At 1:30 p. m. the fire jumped two ways, attacking half a block of three-story residences in the rear of the hall on Twelfth street, and across Central street, where it first caught the Second Presbyterian church, one of the finest edifices in the city, and then the Lathrop public school, which was partially destroyed by a tornado in 1888. Residences on Twelfth street, together with the church and school, are a total loss.

Loss $400,000.

At 2:25 p. m. the fire was pronounced under control, the flames having been confined to three or four small residences outside of the hall, church, school and the Twelfth street row. The total loss is roughly estimated at from $350,000 to about half of the loss.

The convention hall is well insured and will be rebuilt in time for the use of the democratic convention.

Twelve minutes after the hall was known to be doomed, the members of the Commercial club, through whose efforts the structure was built, began soliciting funds to begin rebuilding. The foundation remains intact.

Assassination Attempted.

Brussels, April 5.—The prince of Wales was shot at while at the railroad station here. He was not hurt. The attempt upon his life occurred at 3:55 p. m. The would-be assassin jumped upon the footboard of the prince's salon car as the train was starting and fired into the car, aiming at the prince. The man was immediately arrested.

The News at London.

London, April 5.—News of the attempt on the life of the prince of Wales spread with marvelous rapidity in all parts of London and created the most intense excitement and bitter indignation among all classes. The fact that the attempted assassination occurred in the city where Dr. Leyds, diplomatic agent of the Transvaal, has made his headquarters, was generally taken to indicate that the would-be assassin was a Boer sympathiser, and this so inflamed passions that the most bitter invectives were hurled against the Boers and everything connected with them.

The government was wholly ignorant of the attempt on the life of the prince of Wales until press dispatches on the subject were communicated to the foreign offices.

The water has been pumped out of the shaft and drifts on the Tom Thumb and work is now in progress in the south drift. There is eight feet of fine ore in the face of as high grade as has ever been taken out of the mine. The working shaft has reached a depth of 145 feet.

—Fremont county will have an exciting campaign this year. The county seat removal question is to be settled and already the fight is on.

—Easter as at first observed by the early Christians was a thanksgiving lasting eight days. This was at first reduced to three days, afterward to two, and finally to the single day, Easter Sunday.

—All Latah county warrants are at par. The current expense and bridge warrants have been at par for some time and now the road warrants will be worth 100 cents on the dollar. Latah can pay cash for everything she buys and make a big yearly saving.

—The state prohibition convention met in Boise last week and named a full state ticket, and also selected delegates to the national convention. Rev. W. J. Boone of Caldwell will head the ticket for governor, and Miss Amanda Way of Boise was nominated for congress.

—The cherry and peach trees are in full bloom and the apple blossoms just opening. The voice of the lawnmower is heard in the land. The Lewiston valley sends this cheering news to the storm-stricken east, where winter still lingers in the lap of spring, chirps the Teller.

—Mr. Thompson, of Alpowa, makes the poultry business pay. He states that from 100 chickens in one year he sold $190 worth of eggs and raised 500 chickens for market, which he sold at an average price of $4 per dozen. After keeping a careful account of the business, he figures out a net profit of $2.50 per chicken for the year.

—York Herren, son of S. C. Herren, has been expelled from the University for repeated infriction of the rules. The vote of the faculty is said to have been unanimous. The young man had been expelled before and reinstated. The boy's father is threatening to bring an action at law to compel the faculty to reinstate the son, says the Star.

—Plant fruit and ornamental trees. Soon it will be too late. Plant now. Trees invite chirping birds around your place and thus make it more cheerful. Shrubbery like Russian mulberry, Buffaloberry or some hedge bushes bearing fruit are pretty and furnish food for the feathery tribe. The warblers will wake the thoughtful planter with their notes of gladness and thankfulness to repay him for his labors. A few dollars spent in trees now not only beautifies your home but greatly enhances its value. On this point the Review sums it up correctly: In no other way can one obtain a like amount of assets at so slight an outlay. A $500 cottage, with shade trees and vines, and well trimmed lawn, is more pleasing to the eye than a $5000 mansion destitute of aboreal surroundings, and sitting upon a rocky ledge, or surrounded by a waste of ground or a wilderness of weeds.

—It is said a little town on the upper Clearwater railroad consumed more alcoholic liquor in the past six months than any other town in the U. S. And this is on the reservation. The whisky venders are called bootleggers. A correspondent writes: A man was arrested here by a woman for defrauding her out of $300. The lawyer for the defense had a bad case but he had a big bottle. The court got drunk and the defendant was declared not guilty. The injured woman got another warrant and the defendant's lawyer got another bottle. The deputy sheriff confiscated the contraband bottle. The man who stole the money went unpunished, and the lawyer drew a complaint charging the deputy sheriff with stealing a bottle of whisky valued at $1 50, the same belonging to the justice of the peace, and the justice of the peace signed the warrant. A constable signed the warrant but the deputy sheriff refused to answer the writ. The peace officer, however, secured the bottle and drank the whisky. That was the end of the burglary case. The peace officers had drunk the whisky and destroyed the evidence that would have established a penitentiary offense.

—The length of the time that it takes to build a warship is evident from the condition of the Kearsarge and Kentucky, the contracts for which were let five years ago, and which were to have been finished in three years, but which are not yet entirely complete. The delay is attributed to the failure of armor plate makers to deliver that material and to tardiness in completing the guns. These were built at the Washington gun shops, where the facilities are not sufficient, it is said, to manufacture them as rapidly as they are required and as promptly as the ships are ready to receive them.

OPENING COLVILLE RESERVATION

Since the announcement was made last week that the Colville reserve would be thrown open to settlement, there has been much inquiry regarding it by people wanting a slice. The dispatch from Washington reads:

The president has signed a proclamation opening to settlement the northern half of the Colville Indian reservation in Washington. The proclamation will go into effect October 10 next. The land opened to settlement is all that part of the north half of reservation which has not been allotted to the Indians, and comprises about a million and a half acres. It will be disposed of under the homestead laws at $1.50 an acre. The right to mine on the reservation was granted several years ago, and it is now opened for agricultural purposes.

The proclamation of the president is made under the authority of an act of congress authorizing the allotments to Indians and the opening to homestead entry of the remainder of the north half of the reserve. This act provides that no entry shall be received until six months after the proclamation. As these allotments have been made for some time it is contended there is no necessity for further delay.

Recently when Indian Agent A. M Anderson was at Washington he brought this matter to the attention of the members of the Washington delegation and a bill was introduced amending this six months' provision and providing for entries much earlier. That bill is now pending. It is presumed that to avoid any possibility of greater delay by the possible failure of passage of this special bill the president has signed the proclamation. Six months from yesterday entries may be made anyway, and earlier, possibly in June, if the special bill is passed.

—It has been strongly hinted for a couple of weeks that the Spokane-Lewiston through trains would cease running to Lewiston soon and instead operate between Spokane and Orofino, and that the valley metropolis would be given a mixed train similar to the one running into Genesee. We don't know how much truth there is in this report, but if it should prove true Moscow people would be mean enough to laugh right out loud at the misfortune of her ambitious sister.

—Much political significance attaches to the fact that the three greatest apostles in the senate of the cause of free coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1 have aligned with the republican party on the Porto Rican issue. Senators Teller of Colorado and Jones and Stewart of Nevada, who were supporters of Bryan in the last campaign, because of the silver issue, seem to be changing. From their recent actions on the Porto Rico bill it is believed the trio will henceforth cooperate with the republicans.

—The monster telescope at the Paris Exposition which will bring the moon within 36 miles, is 197 feet long and weighs 21 tons. The lenses, the largest in existence, measure over 49 inches in diameter and weigh 1320 pounds. The process of making big lenses, which is described in the current number of Pearson's Magazine, has for nearly two centuries been a most jealously guarded monopoly of Paris.

—The failure of the steamer Spokane to make her ascent over Wild Goose Rapids, last week, is a sore disappointment to Lewistonians. This fact will greatly hinder the developing of Imnaha copper mines and the shipping of ore. The people have come to the conclusion that a channel must be made, and there being little show to secure an appropriation from congress now, private subscriptions will be asked. Until navigation is had Pittsburg Landing will be a quiet city. Capt. Baughman found too many boulders in the Snake for the Spokane to climb over and in consequence a chill has passed over the valley.

—The coming year gives promise of great prosperity to the Pacific Coast country says the Oregonian. The prospect has two sides, domestic and foreign. The local field almost everywhere is encouraging. The crops promise to be heavy and at renumerative prices. Manufacturing enterprises are starting up and the savings of our people have increased enormously. Livestock, meat and wool are at high prices. The people do not realize the possibilities of our new Asiatic markets. The Philippines alone are capable of supporting as many people as the population of Japan, that is over 42,000,000. We ought to be able to do the bulk of the foreign trade of the Philippines. This trade in 1894 amounted to $24,000,000 in imports into the islands, and $33,000,000 in exports from the islands. In 1899 the United States sold in the Philippines only $400,000 worth of products. If this could be increased to $25,000,000 or $30,000,000 worth, the effect upon our Pacific states would be incalculably beneficial. Once the islands are thoroughly pacified and business can go on uninterruptedly, Manila ought to become the center of a tremendous tran-Pacific trade. Our annual sales to Asia have grown since 1895 from $17,000,000 to $48,000,000, and to all Oceanica from $13,000,000 to $30,000,000. With the open door at Manila and a liberal policy for trade between Manila and our ports, our sales to Asia may be depended upon to increase by leaps and bounds. It is an auspicious time for embarkation in new enterprises and for renewing confidence in the future. It is a most inauspicious time for a Bryanite raid on financial stability and for advocacy of abandonment of the Philippines.

C. W. HANSON, Artist.

W. W. Mayhew, Merton, Wis., says, "I consider One Minute Cough Cure a most wonderful medicine, quick and safe." It is the only harmless remedy that gives immediate results. It cures coughs, colds, croup, bronchitis, grippe, whooping cough, pneumonia and all throat and lung diseases. Its early use prevents consumption. Children always like it and mothers endorse it. KENNEDY'S PHARMACY.

—Jim Hill's new ships building for the carrying of our coast products to Japan and the Philippines are monsters. They are to carry 20,000 tons, and the square feet of deck room in each of the ships to be devoted to the carrying of freight will amount to over five acres. Of them Mr. Hill says: 'In order to handle these ships there must be the greatest dispatch, and we can't have any laying around for six or seven days waiting to be loaded, at Seattle, as it costs $1,800 to $2,000 a day to run them. The vessels will bring 10,000 to 15,000 tons of freight, say, and if we get fifteen tons in a car, which is a fair average, it means 1,000 to 1,500 cars to haul one of these loads, and the same to bring the outgoing cargo. We must have twenty-five miles of yard tracks to take care of the business of one cargo of these new steamers that will be here a year from next fall. It takes twenty-five miles to store 2500 cars. Our terminal tracks at the head of Lake Superior are 75 miles long and handle 1500 cars a day. Buffalo has 1400 miles of terminal tracks, or a total length three times the distance from Buffalo to New York, and yet there are times when Buffalo is stalled. We plan on doing an enormous trade on the Pacific." All of which means much to the Palouse country.

Spreads Like Wildfire.

When things are "the best" they become "the best selling" Abraham Hare, a leading druggist of Belleville, O., writes: "Electric Bitters are the best selling bitters I have handled in 20 years. You know why? Most diseases begin in disorders of stomach, liver, kidneys, bowels, blood and nerves. Electric Bitters tones up the stomach, regulates liver, kidneys and bowels, purifies the blood, strengthens the nerves, hence cures multitudes of maladies. It builds up the entire system. Puts new life and vigor into any weak, sickly, run down man or woman. Price 50c, at Kennedy's.

Caught a Dreadful Cold.

Marion Kooke, manager for T. M. Thompson, a large importer of fine millinery at 1658 Milwaukee Ave., Chicago, says: "During the late severe weather I caught a dreadful cold which kept me awake at night and made me unfit to attend my work during the day. One of my milliners was taking Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for a severe cold at that time, which seemed to relieve her so quickly that I bought some for myself. It acted like magic and I began to improve at once. I am now entirely well and feel very pleased to acknowledge its merits." For sale by all druggists.

A man who rescued a widow from death was married to her three days after his heroic act. When they have their first quarrel there will be an opportunity for him to say things that will cut her to the quick.

In England the sexes seem to be changing places. While women are going into the professions a London paper reports hundreds of young men from France, Austria, Switzerland and other continental countries seeking housework. The young men, it is said, are both faithful and competent.

A girl who was married to a man after an acquaintance of three days complains because he turns out to be a convict and not the naval captain he represented himself to be. While she undoubtedly has cause to mourn, it is hardly right that she should receive all the sympathy. The man, on his part, ran some risk. He was probably led to believe that he was getting a wife who possessed reasoning powers.

The frugality which impels millionaires to perjure themselves in order to avoid the payment of taxes is not confined to any one locality nor to any country. In this land of freedom we see gentlemen reputed to be habitual coupon clippers appearing before the Board of Review and swearing that they are upon the verge of starvation. In Germany tax-dodging is more risky business, but even there it is declared that the tax-gatherer is evaded to a very considerable extent by the extremely rich men. In England we have seen the late Duke of Westminster's estate declared at £504,229, though it is notorious that its real value is nearer $14,000,000. The object, of course, is to dodge the inheritance tax. All this perjury is confined to personal property taxes, because real estate can't be hidden from the assessor.

It is said that the ever-increasing lecture habit and the growing number of people who feel called upon to reveal the "whimsies" in their brains has caused the commonplace, listening soul to develop into a mere sponge, the clammy recipient of the unfiltered waters of knowledge. As a reaction against this attitude some specialists, with the fires of real genius in their brains, refuse to spread the flames, or to contribute one more bee to the bonnets already filled with the hum of these insects. These protesters go so far as to disapprove of the university extension movement, and to look upon it as an unwise method of distributing crumbs of culture that are calculated to create dangerous cravings. There is no doubt that people are being lectured to death and that the minds of versatile listeners resemble a junk shop, or the ragbag that is filled with handsome but useless scraps. Yet there is something to be said for the sponge. It is a responsive thing, and, if it takes in with greediness, it gives out as freely. But here the analogy fails. Too many people are occupied solely with taking in and are too little concerned with the thought that it is their duty to give out at least a part of that which they have taken in.

The care of the aged and the infirm whose poverty prevents them from providing for themselves is a matter of importance to every taxpayer. While the support of our almshouses and public homes is an expensive item in our system of charities, many of them furnish provision for their inmates that borders upon the barbarous, and at best the system seems something like consigning people to imprisonment for the crime of being old and poor. Germany and Denmark pay old age pensions. In Germany there is a system of compulsory insurance against old age, and that would seem to be the proper method. Dependent old age is very largely the result of improvident living. The average man could save enough between the ages of 18 and 65 to enable him to live better for the balance of his life than he could live in the average almshouse, if he would. In 1898 Germany paid to 400,000 pensioners $13,750,000. The pension fund, to which compulsory contribution had been made, amounted to $8,360,000. The deficit was furnished by the government. But a system that embodied the principles of life insurance and was also based upon incomes would supply the whole amount, and prevent the irritation which the taxpayer often feels when thinking that he is compelled to support an old man who has been wasting his means during his whole life.

In a State Supreme Court recently—we shield the State from the disgrace by not giving its name—a judge said: "If a railroad company kills a child, its parents should be satisfied with a dollar's damages. Children are a source of expense to their parents and are of no pecuniary benefit." An expression like that seems like an echo from the deluded mother on the banks of the Ganges, though her mistaken sentiment that leads her to the sacrifice of her babe clothes her with a nobility in comparison to which the heart of this civilized American judge, in this nineteenth century, is a hive of barbarism and heathenism. There is a widespread undervaluation of the worth of human life. The lives of men are crystalized into wealth—which others than they enjoy—and when death closes the scene of the individual's exhaustive activity, the event is as unimportant as was the slaughter of captives that were lashed to the wheels of Alexander's chariot. There is a brutal contempt for sanctity of life abroad, and as the spirit of greed develops, drying up human sympathies and benumbing the nobility of manhood, this contempt becomes more and more flagrant. But there are few men, even among the most hardened and degraded, to whom the life of a child is not beautiful and does not appeal for protection. It is a warped manhood and anything but a nineteenth century heart that can give birth to a thought like that which this judge expressed upon the bench. It is treason to humanity and an insult to our civilization.

In Great Britain the ministers of the crown have larger war-making powers than an American President employs at the opening of hostilities. They can give the signal for war without consulting Parliament—although Parliament must be summoned within ten days after the reserves are called out—whereas the President cannot enter upon a military campaign without the consent of Congress. In 1857 the House of Commons expressed disapproval of Lord Palmerston's war measures against China. He did not retire from office, but dissolved Parliament, appealed to the country, and after a general election was able to command a majority in the new House of Commons. Parliament can withhold the money required for the expenses of war, but this is seldom done, since the ministers can almost always enlist the support of the Commons when a campaign is considered necessary. The ministers of the crown are responsible for the declaration of war, and at the close of hostilities they can negotiate peace without the consent of Parliament. They have, therefore, supreme authority in the opening and closing stages of war with a foreign state. Parliament can pass votes of censure, move addresses to the crown, and withhold the money required for the military and naval services, but each of these acts can be made a challenge to a general election, in which the country will stand by the government. Under the American Constitution Congress alone is empowered to declare war, and at the close of a campaign the treaty of peace must be sanctioned by two-thirds of the Senate. The President does not have so free a hand in war-time as the British premier. War is, however, so terrible a calamity that the resposibility for it ought to be shared with the national legislature and not carried by any group of cabinet ministers. The American method may not offer any additional safeguard against unjust or unnecessary warfare, but it is in closer accord than the English system with the genius of representative government.

A Test of Amiability.

"Ordinarily," said Col. Stillwell, "I object to the conundrum. I regard it as a primitive form of humor. I also resent these constant gibes at the State of Kentucky. They represent both deficiency of taste and poverty of resource. But just to show," he continued deliberately, "that I am a broad-minded man who can accept a joke amiably I will ask you a question: What is the difference between the State of Massachusetts and Kentucky?"

"Give it up, Colonel."

"Massachusetts produces boots and shoes and Kentucky produces shoots and booze. And I want to say I'm glad I thought of it first, for if anybody else had sprung a remark like that on me unexpectedly I wouldn't care to answer for the consequences."—Washington Star.

The Kew Gardens.

The finest gardens in the world are the Royal Gardens, at Kew, England. They cover an area of about 270 acres, and are visited by about 1,500,000 persons a year. The gardens contain the finest collection of exotic plants in the world, a palm house, a winter garden, a museum, an observatory, and a school for gardeners.

Britain in America.

British landlords are said to own 20,000 acres of land in the United States, an area larger than that of Ireland.

When a school teacher is found who is a good cook, the impression is created that the general superintendent of destinies somehow got things badly mixed.

THE FREEMAN.

He is the freeman whom the truth makes free,
And all are slaves beside. There's not a chain
That hellish foes confederate for his harm
Can wind around him, but he casts it off
With as much ease as Samson his green withes.
He looks abroad into the varied field
Of Nature, and though poor perhaps compared
With those whose mansions glitter in his sight,
Calls the delightful scenery all his own.
His are the mountains, and the valleys his,
And the resplendent rivers. His to enjoy
With a propriety that none can feel,
But who, with filial confidence inspired,
Can lift to heaven an unpresumptuous eye,
And smiling say—my Father made them all!
—William Cowper.

THE TRUMPET CALL

THERE was something worse than weeping and wailing among the Pink dragoons when it became known that their pet squadron had been gobbled up by the enemy and sent off to languish in the retirement of the racecourse at Pretoria. Even their old rivals, the Tyrone fusiliers, with whom they had met and fought in all parts of the world with belts and fists, had nothing but pity for them, and delicately forbore to make any remarks upon the news.

Since they were under orders for the Cape the Tyrone fusiliers were on their best behavior, and the Pink dragoons at the depot felt too low and depressed even to desire a farewell fight with the Irishmen.

So they chummed instead. For the first time in the history of the British army Pink dragoons and Tyrone fusiliers were seen walking together, drinking together and smoking each other's tobacco. Some of them even walked out with the same girl, and proud were the damsels who walked out escorted by a fusilier and a dragoon, thus forming a link, as it were, 'twixt two gallant regiments which had been at enmity since the days of Wellington.

No man could rightly trace the cause of the quarrel between them. One historian claimed that at the battle of Waterloo the fusiliers had peppered the dragoons under the mistaken impression that they were French cavalry, thus adding injury to insult. Another authority held that the trouble arose between the regiments during the peninsular war, when, after the fierce battle of Albuera, the fusiliers had come up for their share of some pipes of looted Valdepenas wine to find that the Pink hussars had absorbed the last glassful and had filled up the pipes with water.

Perhaps the truest story of the feud was that which told how, when quartered in the same town, after the Crimean war, the dragoons and fusiliers had intermarried freely, so that they had become almost as one family. All had gone well until the daughters of the fusiliers who had wedded dragoons began to patronize the daughters of dragoons who had married fusiliers referring to their husbands as "fut sojers."

Anyhow, all these wrongs were forgotten in the one great trouble which had befallen the Pinks. Sympathy found beer to drown sorrow, and no one rejoiced but the wives of the men who had been made prisoners. When the day of departure came for the fusiliers, the band of the Pinks played them down to the station. Then the dragoons hung on the footboards of the carriages to bid them a last farewell, and close-cropped heads were cuffed affectionately.

"W'll bring 'em back, dn't you fear, an' their 'orses, too," said the Tyrone fusiliers.

"An' ould Kruger wid 'em," interposed a corporal on his own account.

Although there was plenty of room in the special train, the Tyrone fusiliers preferred to travel fifteen in a compartment, as being more sociable and convivial than the orthodox five a side. So the bugler had a compartment all to himself, and was spreading himself accordingly.

"Don't you be afraid, Danny," he said to the trumpeter; "I'll keep a good lookout for your chaps when we reaches pretorier, an' I'll see what I can do for 'em!"

"Don't you be too sharp an' get a-cuttin' yerself, Bugler Simmons!" replied the trumpeter, with gentle sarcasm, "especially along o' that new bay'nit o' yours, an' if you see my pertickler friend, Corp'ral 'Awkey along o' them pris'ners, give 'im my love an' arsk 'im if 'e likes Pretoria better'n Portland. All right, guv'nor—all right! Keep yer 'ands orf the army, carn't yer. It's a-lavin' its precious lives for the likes o' you, ain't it?"

These last remarks were addressed to the guard.

"Don't forget them calls I taught yer!" cried the trumpeter to his departing friend.

"Not 'arf!" shouted back the bugler appreciatively.

Then, having made a grimace at the guard, he pulled in his head and settled himself comfortably in the corner to start a tiny packet of particularly villainous cigarettes which had been pressed on him by a sympathetic friend as they marched out of the barracks.

Beyond the trumpeter of the Pink dragoons, Bugler Simmons had had no friends to see him off. He had not missed this last tribute to the departing soldier, since throughout his short life he had never enjoyed the privileges of relationship.

He had been an orphan at the tender age of 6 months, had been raised in a workhouse school, and had drifted into the army by reason of his proficiency in sounding wind instruments.

One lady, indeed, as the troops had marched down to the train, had, much to his indignation, lifted him in her arms and kissed him.

"Just as if I was a bloomin' baby!" he remarked scornfully to himself as he sat in the corner puffing bravely at his cigarette; "wait till we comes across some o' them Boers, that's all!"

* * * * * * * * * *

Five weeks later the bad luck of the Pink dragoons fell upon the Tyrone fusiliers, and Bugler Simmons had his first chance of tasting the stern realities of war to the uttermost dregs of the cup.

Of course, it was nobody's fault in particular, and everybody's fault in general, and the fusiliers cursed nothing but their own proverbial luck, when they found themselves at the nightfall of a day of battle cut off from the army and surrounded by an overwhelming force of Boers.

They occupied the position of some strength, such as the Boers themselves love—a bowlder-strewn kopje, standing high above the surrounding plain. In the middle of the afternoon an order had come that they were to take the position.

They had taken it, with a loss of over 100 men.

Later on a message had come, saying: "Hold position until you are reinforced."

They had held the position with the loss of another hundred men against an overwhelming Boer attack, but the reinforcements had never arrived, and the cartridges were beginning to run short. Then, with twilight, the heavy firing of cannon on the surrounding hills had died away.

The fire of their opponents, too, as the day drew to a livid streak of gray over the western mountains, had slackened down to an occasional sniping shot.

Bugler Simmons had been very happy all the afternoon. He had found a snug corner between two large bowlders, occupied by a wounded Boer, one of the defenders of the hill who had been left behind in the fight.

He had tied up the Boer's legs with tender fingers and an air of importance which had brought a quiet smile to the bronzed face of his patient.

"Now, I'm just a-goin' to borror that there Mouser o' yourn for a bit o' shootin!" he had remarked coolly when he had concluded the operation to his fancy; "that is, if you don't mind me pottin' at your pals," he added with some diffidence.

The Boer laughed. He was an Irish "Boer," and, although a citizen of the Transvaal, had no great sympathy with his friends, who had left him so precipitately when the Tyrones had rushed the kopje at the point of the bayonet.

"Never mind me, youngster," he replied as he slipped off his bandolier, which was well filled with cartridges. "I'm only a prisoner of war."

"You talk jolly good English for a Dutchy," remarked Bugler Simmons, as the Boer showed him how to load the strange weapon.

"My father was Irish," answered the Boer.

"Then you're on the wrong side, cocky," said Bugler Simmons with conviction.

"I sha'n't be to-morrow morning" answered the prisoner with grim meaning.

"You mean we shall all be dead if those reinforcements don't come up?" queried Bugler Simmons.

His prisoner nodded.

"Looks like it, don't it?" remarked the boy cheerfully; "but we ain't dead yet, wot ho! We ain't got much money, but we do live!" he added, as he sighted and fired.

"Hit anything?" asked the Boer with a laugh.

"Kicks a bit!" suggested Bugler Simmons, rubbing his shoulder.

"She's a bit heavy for a young 'un like you," answered the Boer, as he slipped another cartridge into the breech. "By the way, sonny," he added, "how old are you?"

"Fourteen last birthday," replied Bugler Simmons promptly.

"Too young for this business," murmured the wounded man to himself.

"Say, Dutchy," said the bugler, "d'ye see that chap down there, crawling behind that rock? Is he a pal o' yours?"

"I don't think so," answered the Boer. "Why?"

"'Cos I'm going to pot 'im," replied Bugler Simmons quickly, as he cuddled the stock of the rifle against the cheek which the lady had kissed, and sighted.

The Boer behind the rock was aiming at a wounded British soldier who had dropped in the rush for the kopje and was now trying to crawl to cover.

There was a sharp report, as the whole of the bugler's little body twisted with the recoil of the rifle, and the Boer behind the rock pitched forward on to his face.

"Got 'im!" said the small savage triumphantly; "my, but that was a close shave for Private Jones!"

He had certainly saved the wounded private's life.

"That was a clean shot, young 'un," said the Boer with approval, "but you mustn't show your body like that when you fire, or you'll get plugged, as safe as eggs!"

"Right, oh, Duchy!" acquiesced the delighted bugler. Then a thought struck him. "I say, would you like something to read?" he asked, thrusting his smoke-fouled little paw into the breast of his tunic. "'Ere's the ha'penny journal wot I take in when I'm at home. It's six weeks old, but there's some proper reading in it; all about pirates and snakes and buried money. The worst of it is that those chaps always knock off their stories in the most excitin' parts. Now, there's Jack Dashaway in that story, 'e's just going to get nobbled by the pirates wot are coming up the hill after him, and you gets so excited that it fairly makes you sick when it cuts off short just as the pirate king comes up the hill with his mouth full of knives an' about three thousand pirates behind him."

The Boer took the tattered dog's-eared paper, and a queer look came into his eyes as he regarded this remarkable youngster, who, in the very face of death, was more interested in the fate of a novelette hero than in his own.

"I say, youngster," he said; "why don't you clear out of this and get back to the army?"

"Wot! an' leave our chaps be'ind? Not me!" responded the bugler rather indignantly.

"There will be about seven thousand men on to you by daybreak, and your general seems to have forgotten you. If you keep those two stars in a line with the top of yon mountain peak, you will come to the horses of the commando which are surrounding us now. Why not take my hat and run down there, collar a horse and ride for reinforcements. Your general has mislaid you. There are some good horses down there, too; some that we collared with a squadron of your dragoons," added the Boer.

Then Bugler Simmons made no more demur. He sought his officer, who had been mourning him as dead, and laid a plan before him. His officer gave him his blessing and a compass, the face of which was painted with luminous paint, so that its points might be read easily in darkness, and explained to him the probable position of the British forces.

* * * * * * * * *

Half an hour later Bugler Simmons was crawling quietly among a dense crowd of Boer horses. Armed with a penknife, he cut hobble after hobble till, in the darkness, he came to a bridled and saddled horse, who attempted to bite him affectionately.

He felt the brute's knees. There was no doubt about it. He had happened upon an old friend, Corporal Hawkey's Ginger, late of the Pink dragoons, now serving in a Boer remount.

For reasons best known to himself Ginger always bit at a trumpeter, but he allowed Simmons to climb on to his back without resenting.

Some Boers on the outside of the crowd of horses moved backward and forward suspiciously, and Bugler Simmons lay low on Ginger's neck as he inflated his lungs and placed his trumpet to his lips.

The Boers and the besieged on the hill above heard a sharp succession of cavalry calls sounding from the midst of the horses.

They were answered by the tramp of disciplined hoofs as the horses of the squadron galloped toward the sound of the trumpet. In another second the whole mass of horses was in motion, surging round Ginger, on whose back lay Bugler Simmons, giving call after call, until he felt the troop horses responding, bringing their Boer brothers with them.

"Forward!"

"Charge!"

The calls rang out in quick succession.

The dragoons' horses set example, while the Boer steeds stampeded in sympathy. Picket ropes and hobbles snapped like pack threads and there was a thunder of hoofs on the plain. In vain the Boers shouted and tried to head them off. The mass had started, and from the center rang out the "Charge," which kept the leaven in a state of wild excitement. In a few minutes Bugler Simmons was surrounded by a racing crowd of 800 horses, against which nothing could stand.

They charged over a Boer encampment, and the twenty men who occupied it were found the next day beaten to a pulp beneath the thundering hoofs.

The pace slowed after six miles, when an English patrol hove in sight. The trumpet from the middle of the mob of horses sounded a signal of distress, and the patrol bore down.

"Are you a circus?" called the officer in charge.

He rode in and cut the bugler's horse out of the snorting, stamping mob.

"If you please, I've come for a little help for the Tyrone fusiliers," answered Bugler Simmons faintly, but with a tone of rodent sarcasm. "You can tell those blooming reinforcements that we couldn't send cabs for them, but I've brought them a few horses!"—Pictorial Magazine.

Hard Work at the Vatican.

I met a prelate employed in the Vatican the other day, and in the course of our conversation began to deplore my hard lot in having to stay in Rome during the heat of the summer and work, says Pall Mall Gazette. "Oh, well," he said, "you are not worse than we are in the Vatican. Now that most of the employes are away we who are left have to work hard."

"Work!" I exclaimed. "Yes, walk in the Vatican gardens and count the grapes of the Pope's vineyard!"

"Do you know that every evening the mail brings to the bronze doors of the Vatican an average of 20,000 letters and newspapers, to say nothing of telegrams? All the letters have to be opened, sorted and classified, while the newspapers are read and selections cut or extracts made during the night to be ready for perusal by the officers of state early next morning."

"And where does the Pope come in?" I interrupted. "They say he works so hard?"

"Much of this work is submitted to him, and he should read all the letters addressed 'Sanctitati Suae Leoni Papae XIII., feliciter regnanti.' However, as the whole twenty-four hours of the day would not be enough for the pontiff to even glance over them, he only sees what Cardinal Rampolla thinks necessary for his inspection."

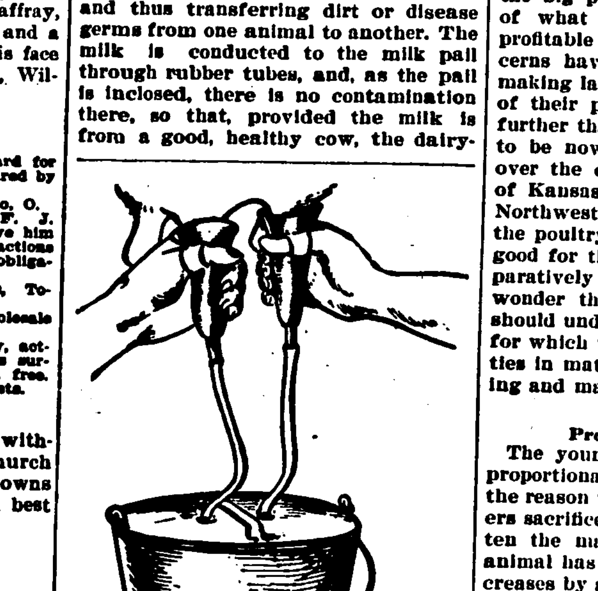
FARM AND GARDEN

New Milking Device.

Doctors, scientists and agricultural experts are all very much concerned at the present time about the contamination of milk and the serious consequences that are apt to result from it. In the up-to-date dairy every effort is made to keep the milk from being contaminated by stable dirt or foreign matter, which may adhere to the cow's teats or flanks, or which may be floating around in the air in the stable. Among the precautions suggested are mechanical milkers, but these have not come into extensive use, although in one form or another there are isolated examples of their use in dairies in different parts of the world. The illustration here presented is a suggestion along this line and represents the idea of John C. Dulgan, of Melbourne, Victoria. It comprises teat cups, with finger loops for the thumb and finger arranged longitudinally on opposite sides, which prevent the milker's hands from coming in contact with the teats and thus transferring dirt or disease germs from one animal to another. The milk is conducted to the milk pail through rubber tubes, and, as the pail is inclosed, there is no contamination there, so that, provided the milk is from a good, healthy cow, the dairyman is assured of milk as pure and free from contamination as it is possible to get it.



KEEPS OUT THE DIRT.

Small Garden Plots.

The small garden is the one that gives its owner pleasure. Probably the majority of those who cultivate small gardens make no profit, but actually suffer a loss, when the crops are compared with the cost of seeds, fertilizers and labor, but there is considerable pleasure derived, the value of which can not be estimated. No matter how small the plot owned or rented may be, the one who can bestow a portion of time to the cultivation of garden crops this spring should do so. There are some things grown in a garden that can not easily be procured in market, when the freshness and quality are considered. No one can buy tomatoes in market equal to those taken from the vines and placed on the table. If a plot is very fertile, and is no larger than half an acre, the amount of produce that can be given thereon will supply an ordinary family from early spring until late in the fall. Beginning with onions and green peas, with beets, carrots, parsnips and early cabbage, followed with string beans, Lima beans, tomatoes, sweet corn, turnips and late cabbages, two crops can be grown on the same location during the season. Potatoes need not be planted in a garden, as the crop demands protection from the beetle. This spring, if desired, a small strawberry patch may be started, which will come into bearing the following spring.

Farm Help Problems.

The greatest problem to solve by the farmer during his busy season is to secure capable help. Those who know nothing of the duties to be performed on a farm advise all unemployed persons to seek work in the country. The fact is that such persons are as useless on farms as they are in factories, yet the farmer cannot afford to teach his help during the busiest period of the year. What is meant by competent farm hands are those who can go on a farm and fully understand what is to be done without the necessity of the farmer being with them constantly to point out here and there what he wishes them to do. It is cheaper for a farmer to do the work himself than to be encumbered by an incompetent assistant.

Keep the Windmill Running.

"It pays to have the windmill so it can be thrown in and out of gear automatically, if it is located any distance from the house," says a writer in the Homestead. "There are many devices for doing this, and some of them are inexpensive. I once saw one that had an old-fashioned creamery can attached to the wire that put the mill out of gear. This had a very small hole in it so the water would run out of it very slowly. When this can was empty the mill would go in gear and pump the tank full. The overflow pipe from the tank would fill the can and the weight of the water would pull the mill out of gear. After an hour or so the water would leak out so the mill would again go in gear, and thus the business was kept up all the time. Should but little water be used the mill would only run long enough so the overflow would fill the can and the mill would be thrown out of gear."

A Honey Extractor.

The honey extractor is one of the principal sources of profit in connection with bee-keeping, says a correspondent in the Farm, Field and Fireside. This machine extracts the liquid from the combs and leaves the comb as clear of injury as before taken from the hive. In the accompanying illustration the inside gearing is raised up and exposed to view and shows two comb baskets, each to accommodate a frame of comb to be extracted, and by turning the crank the reel is turned with such velocity as to empty the entire comb of its contents by centrifugal force. The empty combs are then placed back in the hives of bees to again be filled.

Monopoly in Poultry.

The poultry trade, it is said, views with alarm the giant strides made by the big packing firms toward control of what has been for many years a profitable line of business. These concerns have for a year or more been making large additions to the capacity of their poultry packing plants, and, further than this, they are represented to be now reaching out for mastery over the chicken-producing territories of Kansas, Missouri, Illinois and the Northwest. The margin of profits in the poultry-packing business has been good for those who operate on a comparatively small scale, and it is no wonder that the big packing firms should undertake to monopolize a field for which they have exceptional facilities in matters of transportation, storing and market-reaching.

Profit in Young Stock.

The young animal makes a greater proportionate gain than the adult for the reason that it is growing, yet farmers sacrifice their young stock and fatten the matured animals. After an animal has completed its growth it increases by accumulation of fat, a large portion of the food going into the manure. While a young calf may apparently consume a large proportion of food, yet it increases accordingly. The farmer who has platform scales, and who will weigh the food and the calf, will find that the young animal increases rapidly, and that the food is yielding a profit.

Drainage Important.

Snow does much harm on farms that are not well drained. It not only remains longer than is necessary, but keeps the land wet and slushy. All drains should be opened to permit the surplus water to rapidly flow off. A heavy freeze coming on suddenly while snow is melting may damage wheat. The barnyard should be well littered with abundant absorbent material to prevent the stock from sinking to their knees in mud and becoming chilled by loss of heat from standing constantly in ice-cold water.

Gossip of Interest to Farmers.

In St. Louis 60 per cent. of the children are raised on the milk of cows.

The American crop of peas and beans is said to be 800,000 bushels short this year.

Prices for pure breeding stock are to-day higher than at any time since the early '80s.

The Standard Starch factory at Bradley, near Kankakee, Ill., when completed will consume 6,000 bushels of corn daily.

The directors of the Kansas penitentiary have decided to sell the product of the State binding twine plant directly to farmers.

Farmers seem determined to speculate in broom corn next season, if signs be truthful. It is said that Iowa, Texas, Nebraska, Kansas and Minnesota will all plant more broom corn than usual.

A North Dakota farmer, advocating the sowing of wheat and flax on the same land, said that last year he netted $23.73 per acre from forty-seven acres. He threshed it together and had it screened at Duluth.

Statistics which have been collected in Wisconsin show the average cost of raising wheat to be 54 cents a bushel and the cost of corn 27 cents. In both cases there are included interest on the value of the land, with the cost of implements and horses added in.

What will probably be the largest pear orchard in the country, or in the world, has been projected in Texas. A nursery company has contracted to have planted and cultivated for four years 2,500 acres of pears, the orchard to be delivered to the company in 1903.

One of the St. Paul creameries is shipping considerable quantities of butter to Japan. The butter is put up in one, two and three pound tin cans and shipped in refrigerator cars to the coast and thence in the refrigerators of steamers to Japan, where it arrives in good condition and brings a fancy price.

PARIS EXPOSITION OPENED

TAKE A MONTH TO FINISH IT.

A Picturesque Scene—President Loubet There—The Weather Nice—A Holiday in Paris—Traffic Arrangements Are Poor.

Paris, April 15.—The exposition of 1900 is opened, but it will be at least a month before anything but buildings is to be seen. The day's ceremonies were a peculiar mixture of sumptuous splendor in the Salles Des Fetes, and widespread confusion elsewhere. Nothing could have exceeded the picturesque stage setting in the beautiful building in which the ceremonies were held, the gorgeous uniforms of the diplomats and soldiers, the splendid orchestra and chorus and magnificent effect produced by the grand staircase up which President Loubet proceeded to view the exposition, lined with some 2 picked men of the Republic Guard, with jack-boots, white breeches, gleaming cuirasses and horsehair plumes streaming from shining helmets. At the top of this stairway was a room, the interior of which could be seen from the Salles Des Fetes, and this was hung with priceless Gobelins from the Louvre. Into this apartment President Loubet entered, and walked down the avenue to his boat. This part of the day's arrangement was perfect, and the rest was chaos.

The weather was luckily all that could be desired, 14,000 guests having been invited to the function, and they had, because of the fine weather, only the dust to endure. Had the day been wet the unrolled paths of the exposition grounds would have been turned into a mass of mud.

The afternoon was a holiday in Paris by general consent and a host of country people crowded into the city to swell the multitudes, who from an early hour surged in the direction of the exposition, and took up positions along the route of the presidential procession and at the approaches to the grounds. The immense number of guests practically swept the central streets clean of cabs, of which an unbroken stream, several deep, drifted slowly toward the gates between noon and 2:30 p. m.

Drifted is the correct expression for the rate of progress, because the traffic arrangements were so inadequate that hundreds of vehicles did not reach the exposition at all, and the occupants were either left stranded en route or were obliged to abandon their carriages and proceed on foot. This was the expedient ordinarily adopted, even by several members of the diplomatic corps, and two gorgeously attired officials of the Chinese embassy, after hastily walking several blocks, arrived in the Salles Des Fetes just in time to hear the cheering at the conclusion of the ceremonies.

The ceremonial within the Salles Des Fetes was simplicity itself. The reception to President Loubet at the entrance lasted but a few seconds, and on reaching the presidential tribune, M. Millerand, the minister of commerce, immediately delivered his speech, handing over the exposition to the chief of state, which address was couched in most eloquent terms and read in a resonant voice, heard throughout the vast hall.

M. Millerand's peroration was especially fine, and it brought forth a storm of plaudits.

President Loubet then replied, and the speaking part of the function here ended.

The spectacle that met President Loubet's eyes when, amid the resounding strains of the "Marseillaise," he stepped to the front of the presidential dais on his entry into the Salles Des Fetes, was probably never seen before within the walls of any building. The vast circus was filled with a sea of human beings, who overflowed the balconies jutting out from the sides.

The decoration of the interior was certainly a triumph of artists' skill, with a handsome stained glass dome, through which the rays of sunlight filtered down upon the concourse below, and a color scheme in mural painting with the strikingly executed frescoes of appropriate allegories in brilliant relief.

The galleries and balconies were draped with red plush, and the hall was profusely adorned with tropies of tri-colored flags, opening fan-like from shields bearing the letters "R. F."

Paris glowed with the myriads of decorative lights which shone from public buildings, the exposition structures and the boulevard resorts. Thousands of sightseers were riding through the thoroughfares or walking along the boulevards enjoying the perfect spring evening.

Itinerant bands played music to the festivities while fakirs amused the crowds gathered in front of the restaurants. The cafes within the exposition grounds, which are barred to the public until tomorrow, present a scene brilliant and attractive. Most of the buildings have a row of lights running about the frieze which bring into splendid view artistic bas reliefs, statuary and other effective art results with which they are decorated. It was long past midnight when the masses moved homeward, the day and the evening having been spent as Parisians enjoy fetes.

A HINT FOR SPRING.

When Housekeepers Are Brightening the Interiors of Their Homes.

Now that the backbone of this remarkable winter is broken, housekeepers are remarking the dingy look of the home interior. The question of new wall coverings is up. Paper is dear and short lived; kalsomines are dirty and scaly; paint is costly. The use of such a cement as Alabastine, for instance, will solve the problem. This admirable wall coating is clean, pure and wholesome. It can be put on with no trouble by anyone; there is choice of many beautiful tints; and it is long lasting.

Trouble Averted.

Croton Landing, N. Y., April 17.—There has been no move made by the contractors or their representatives to put men to work at the new dam. It was learned that applications for warrants for the arrest of the strike leaders may occur at any time.

In the morning the strikers were gathered on the top of a hill near what is called "Little Italy," and were talked to in Italian by the leaders. About 40 men on the hill were armed with rifles and shotguns. Many others carried revolvers and two had hatchets. The leaders refused to talk with representatives of their plans for today. Everything in the valley below was at a standstill.

There were over 200 deputies scattered around the works. The infantry and cavalry arrived today.

Famine Stricken India.

Boston, April 17.—The Rev. Rockwell Clancy, a missionary at Allahabad, who is visiting here, says:

"The condition of famine stricken India today is something perfectly awful to contemplate. I can not tell anything about the number dying, but when I left Bombay last February there were some 60,000,000 people suffering and over 30,000,000 were in dire distress, and of these but 5,000,000 were receiving government aid.

Fifty Insurgents Killed.

Manila, April 17.—Captain Dodd, with a squadron of the Third cavalry, recently surrounded a village in Renmu... province and surprised 200 insurgents living in a barracks, apparently a recruiting center for the province. The enemy lost 53 men killed. Our troops also captured 44 men and burned the village. But one American was wounded.

—John Johan's child has been quite sick. About well now.

—Thirty thousand Finns are coming to the Northwest, passing through St. Paul this week. Another large party for the coast will come over the Northern Pacific the last of April.

—Every indication points to an enormous crop of grain. The late rains did a "powerful lot of good" to wheat and grass. The fruit trees are in the pink of condition—could not look more promising.

—A rich strike is reported from the Couger mountain on the Middle Fork of the Clearwater and prospectors are going in from every direction. Ore taken from a ledge 35 feet wide, assayed $12 per ton in gold. Mt. Idaho is not far from the new discoveries.

—The new through trains of the Burlington and Northern Pacific railroads between St. Louis and Portland will make the second longest run in America. The distance is 2,374 miles. On and after April 29, daily trains will be run over this long stretch with outchange of any kind.

—The credit of the United States is now the best of any nation in the world at any time in the past. The recent 2 per cent bonds are now selling at $106, which makes the interest on them only .0175 per cent. In strong contrast is English credit, the recent loan of that country drawing nearly three per cent on the market price.

—The Nez Perce commissioners reduced the salaries of county officers to be effective in 1901. The sheriff's salary is reduced from $2000 to $1650; clerk from $2000 to $1650; assessor from $3000 to $2500; treasurer from $1200 to $900; probate judge from $1500 to $1200; school superintendent from $1000 to $750; surveyor from $800 to $500.

—The Genesee correspondent to the Moscow Democrat had better get a little closer to the truth or he will get himself into trouble. Some of the new city officers are republicans and will not allow any one to call them pops or fusionists. And besides, politics had nothing to do with the late election, whatever. The successful men will tell you that.

—More money per capita, more gold, more silver, and a larger total of money in circulation than ever before is the summarization of the "Circulation Statement" issued by the Treasury department for April 1, 1900. For the first time in the history of the country the per capita circulation has crossed the $26 line, and the year 1900 carried the total for the first time past the two billion dollar line, while the amount of gold and gold certificates in circulation is larger than at the corresponding date of any previous year.

—Did you get some of those trees peddled around town Wednesday? They were fine and very cheap—three for a quarter.

—Farmers have been very busy since Sunday putting in their spring crops and in consequence business in town has been quiet.

—Mr. Fred Woodcock left yesterday for Fruitland, north of Spokane, in response to a message stating his son-in law was dangerously ill.

—Adrain Nelson, one of Latah's representatives in the last legislature, is preparing to leave for Washington where he has a government position.

—Several petty burglaries in Lewiston Sunday night. The office of the Northern Pacific depot was entered and the cash drawer torn from the counter. No money was secured. The store of the Idaho Outfitting Co., was entered, and a Winchester was swiped. Henley Bros.' grocery was entered and a quantity of goods taken.

It is said that successful experiments have at last been accomplished in wireless telegraphy, and this would undoubtedly be a good thing, and revolutionize many ways of doing business. Don't overlook Hostetter's Stomach Bitters when you talk about the great things of the world. —J. J. Farly, an old miner and prospector, was down this week from his mining property in the Monumental Mining district, Idaho county. He reports some rich strikes, and predicts that that section will be the greatest mining camp in Central Idaho in a short time.

—In treking to the county seat of Shoshone county, Mallen, the Orofino people are compelled to travel 200 miles. The railroad fare is $35. It is pretty expensive to be obliged to do business with the county dads in person, but it's nice for the assessor to be thus located from the kickers.

—The free rural mail delivery system will be put in at Moscow about the middle of May. The special agent is in the country establishing routes and was within six miles of Genesee Wednesday. Ingwall Smith and his neighbors will be favored with the system and will have mails brought to them daily. Think of our farmers receiving the daily papers each morning before the city people are up. The farmer can ride the plow and read the world's happenings of the previous day. Let us move out.

—A pleasant evening was spent at the Mr. and Mrs. Gaffney home Monday by the Shakespeare Club. A literary and musical program had been previously prepared and was nicely rendered. Each person present represented the title of a book and after racking the brain for two hours Mrs. T. Driscoll was awarded the prize for guessing the most titles correctly. Miss Picking and Mrs. Gray sang a duet and so did Mrs. Gaffney and Mr. Brewer. Mrs. Lees read a selection. Miss Follett gave a couple of piano selections. Covers were then laid for: Misses Pickering and Lettie Follett; Mesdames Raymond, Lees, Grant, Burdic, Driscoll, Gray, Messrs. and Mesdames Fowler, Wood, Welch, Gaffney, Hopp; Messrs. Brewer and Cobbs. The choice viands made the tables look pretty. After inner man and woman was supplied then came the toasts: Mrs. Driscoll, "Our Heavyweights," and Mrs. Burdic, "Our Lightweights," elicited applause. Prof. Cobbs surprised the guests by reciting an original poem. Mr. Brewer stepped on corns in his 'Our Peculiarities," but of course as it was Mr. Brewer who showed up the peculiarities of the members, the sarcasms uttered were taken good naturedly by the ladies. —M. A. Means came down from Orofino the first of the week. Says a mining company is unloading seven or eight tons of machinery at that point for the development of the coal fields recently discovered there. It is believed large deposits of coal exists in that neighborhood and thousands of dollars have been expended in improvements the past six months. If expectations are fulfilled the price of fuel will be greatly reduced in north Idaho and eastern Washington. Those who did not go to church took advantage of the pleasant weather by taking strolls or by taking a ride into the country and viewing the green fields.

ROYAL
Baking Powder

The strongest, purest, most efficient and wholesome of leavening agents. Not lowest in price, yet the most economical; indispensable to all who appreciate the best and most healthful food.

Our country is enjoying prosperity almost unsurpassed in its history.

For every one there is money enough to buy that to eat which is pure, sound, good, wholesome.

Why should we use cheap, impure, unhealthful articles of food? There is no economy in them; they endanger the health, they may cost life. There are reported almost daily cases of sickness caused by eating cake, puddings or biscuit made with the cheap, alum baking powders.

In all articles for food buy and use only the best. The good health of the family is of first consideration.

Alum is used in many baking powders because it makes them cheap. It costs less than two cents a pound. Alum is a corrosive poison. Think of feeding it to children! Yet the manufacturers of well-known alum powders are actually denying that their goods contain it.

Wild With Eczema

Fire Could Not Have Been More Painful.

"After spending two years in taking all kinds of medicines that were suggested for eczema, but without avail, my mother was induced to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. The result was wonderfully gratifying. Her limbs had been terribly lacerated by the disease, and there were times when fire could not have been more painful. She was, in fact, almost wild. Two bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla completely cured her, and not a trace of eczema was left." E. W. DECKER, Gardiner, N. Y.

Eat Well, Sleep Well.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla has been a great blessing to me. I was weak, irritable, tired and nervous; had no appetite and was always sad and despondent. One day I got hold of a little book about Hood's Sarsaparilla. I looked it over and resolved to try a bottle. I was better before it was gone, so I kept on until I had taken five bottles. I can now sleep well, feel cheerful and can do all my work, including plain sewing, and I can walk two or three miles a day. I am 55 years old and now feel that life is worth living." MRS. EMMA SMITH, 68 E. Mitchell St., Oswego, N. Y.

Critical Period of Life.

"I took Hood's Sarsaparilla during the critical period of my life, and now, at the age of 60 years, I am strong and healthy. It is a great medicine for the blood. I find Hood's to be the best." MRS. H. POMROY, 22 Lansing Street, Auburn, N. Y.

COTTON
IS AGAIN KING.

FROM a price of 5 cents per pound a few months ago, raw cotton has gone up until it sells today at 9 cents per pound. Worse still—the supply is short, in the face of a demand larger than for many seasons.

The world looks to America for its cotton. As our new crop will not be marketed until 1901, it is unreasonable to look for a drop in cotton goods before that time.

But remember one thing: I purchased all my cotton goods before the advance and am selling them at the last season's prices, giving my customers the advantage of the increase instead of taking the extra profit for myself as our other merchants are doing all over the country.

My new spring stock is now complete and at the low prices of last year.

SITUATION OF BOER WAR

ENGLISH HOLDING THEIR OWN.

Boers in Strong Positions—Lord Roberts' Protest—Mrs. Kruger a Patriot—Gen. Cronje Landed on Island of St. Helena.

London, April 16.—Natives report at Kimberley that Colonel Douglass engaged the Boers near Zwart's Kop and succeeded in driving them back. The British casualties were light.

Elandslaagte reported that there had been no traces of the Boers in that neighborhood for the past two days. Their progress southward has been effectively barred by the British occupation of Jonenos Kop on the left and Umbulwana on the right. The belief that the Boer action recently was due to restlessness and dissatisfaction in the ranks is confirmed by natives, who say that the Boers have been ready for some time and wanted the British to attack them. In order to force this the Boers commenced shelling, at the same time sending a force to make a flanking movement on the left. The natives also confirm the statement that one of the Boer heavy guns was put out of action and the gunners driven off.

The scouts have located the Boers in a strong position 14 miles northeast of the British advanced position at Bloemfontein.

Lord Roberts has strongly protested to President Kruger against the treatment of prisoners, sick and wounded, in the hands of the Boers, and has formally demanded the observance of the Geneva convention.

It appears from every indication that the Boers are preparing, in the event of Pretoria being captured, to make a last stand along the line reaching from Leydenburg along the mountains into Swaziland. A traveler recently arrived at Bloemfontein says that the Boers are energetically working to persuade the Swazis that the British cause is lost and are seeking to ingratiate themselves, hoping to secure a footing in Swaziland peacefully or to seize hold of the country if necessary.

Mrs. Kruger, on being interviewed, said that she trusted God would soon stop the merciless bloodshed, but that the republic would be victoriously defended even if Pretoria were finally taken. She added that she had had in the field 23 grandsons, two of whom were killed, four sons, six sons-in-law and numerous other relatives.

Reports From Boer Sources.

Leemokop, Southeast of Bloemfontein, April 15.—The Boer commando, which it was feared had been cut off, has rendered a good account of itself with the Basutoland police who had invaded the Orange Free State. Four British scouts who were captured say that Bloemfontein is hard pressed for water.

Commandant Dewet has received a report that the British who fled from Smithfield southward were severely punished by the burghers of Rouxville.

News received here from Johannesburg Drift says a British force of about 1000 men, composed of Brabant's Horse, with General Brabant commanding, is surrounded at Robertson's mills, with a remote chance of relief or effective resistance.

(The British force reported in the dispatch above to be surrounded at Robertson's mills is probably the force of colonial troops previously referred to as surrounded by the Boers near Wepener. These British troops are not commanded by General Brabant in person. Brabant was last reported at Aliwalnorth with Kitchener.)

Gone to the Hague.

Milan, April 16.—The Boer peace commissioners have started for The Hague. Dr. Leyds, diplomatic agent of the Transvaal, accompanied them as far as Brussels.

British Troops Are at Deaar.

Deaar, April 16.—The main body of the Carnovoran field force, in command of Colonel Parsons, including the Canadian artillery and the mounted rifles, have arrived here after a five weeks' march from Victoria road by way of Kenhardt, a distance of more than 50 miles. They encountered no active opposition. Colonel Parsons pacified the country, which was previously in rebellion.

Prisoners Are at St. Helena.

St. Helena, April 15.—General Cronje, his wife and three of his staff, who with other Boer prisoners, arrived here April 10, were landed. They were met by the governor and commander-in-chief of St. Helena. General Cronje looks well and appears cheerful. The other Boer prisoners will disembark Monday.

Boers Retiring.

London, April 17.—A Ladysmith special says the natives report that the Boers in the Elandslaagte district have retired beyond Biggarsberg.

This information tends to confirm the report that the Boers blew up three important collieries near Wassels nek, completely destroying the same.

Fighting at Bammerberg.

Brandfort, April 17.—Fighting with General Brabant's horse at Bammerberg drift continues. Commandant Petrus Dewet is reported to have engaged the troops sent from Bloemfontein to Brabant's assistance. There has also been a brush with the British column advancing toward Bullfontein without decisive results. All foreign attaches are now here.

Victory Claimed for Brabant.

Cape Town, April 17.—It is reported that General Brabant has defeated the Boers at Wepener and captured their arms.

A Barbers' International Union has been organized at Denver, Colo.

Washington Fruit Outlook.

J. E. Baker, commissioner of horticulture, gives out the following information on fruit prospects:

The unusual forwardness of the season seems to have overtaken the fruit growers of Western Washington in a greater degree than those of the Eastern part of the state.

Yakima county leads off in making due efforts for the extermination of orchard pests by placing three active men in the field to enforce the state laws—County inspector Orlando Beck and two deputies—who seem to be doing effective work. This rare exhibition of good sense on the part of the county commissioners is to be highly commended, as work of this character, to be effective, must be done at the proper time or it is hardly worth doing at all.

Stevens county is up and doing also, the county inspector appointed last fall William H. Oakes of Meyers Falls, making the first general inspection the county has ever had. The fruit pests of this section are not of a highly dangerous character.

On this side of the mountains Clarke county leads off in point of activity. There are all indications of a heavy prune crop. County Inspector Gus Henrickson, enforces the spraying of orchards, and if not properly done refuses to accept the work, requiring it to be done again in a suitable manner.

The periodical pests are San Jose scale and twig borer, which the orchardists are in earnest this spring in fighting. It is to be hoped that they will attack codlin moth with the same vigor later on.

There are 3000 acres in bearing prune orchards in this county that is exceeding five years of age, with 70 evaporating outfits of a combined capacity of 290 tons of green fruit per day.

A full crop of prunes in this section will mean 300 car loads of the dried product this fall, making it the most important prune district north of California, and rapidly increasing in importance.

The variety grown is almost wholly Italien, which is a larger prune than that ordinarily grown in California, (which is called the "Petite," or French prune), and of higher commercial value.

A Wheat Trust.

All the farmers of the world in a sort of international trust to restrict the production of wheat and raise prices is the plan which it is hoped to carry into effect at the international conference in Paris, July 9-16.

It is proposed to ask the farmers of the world to reduce their wheat output by 20 per cent and not sell a bushel for less than a dollar.

J. C. Hanley, of St. Paul, executive agent of the farmers' alliance and industrial union, the national growers' association, the farmers' federation of the Mississippi valley and the national grain growers' association, is the chief promoter in th agricultural trust in America. Prof. G. Ruhland of the University of Freibourg, Switzerland, is the chief promotor of the plan in Europe.

The idea was conceived by these two men independently. Mr. Hanley, who has been interested in many hold-your wheat scheames, is prominently associated with the Farmers' elevators and various co-operative undertakings. He has long believed that if the farmers would only come to an understanding as to limiting production and agree to sell only when their price could be obtained they could easily master the situation.

English Officers Unsatisfactory.

London, April 14.—The unsatisfactory turn that has recently marked the campaign against the Boers is resulting in astonishing and sweeping criticisms by the English papers of their own army methods. When Buller struck snags in Natal, when General Methuen and General Gatacre made terrible mistakes and before the British arms had secured any progress, a somewhat similar wave swept over the press. But then it ws directed at individuals and chiefly confined to papers which were willing to condescend to "slang" one or several generals. Now names are not mentioned but there is widespread, deeply rooted conviction that the method of selection of British army officers is altogether wrong. About this conviction there is no bitterness, nor is it based upon conclusions rapidly arrived at. "Our officers," says the conservative, common sense Outlook, "are as brave as lions, but as a rule they are stupid."

Had to Jump to Escape Fire.

New York, April 16.—One man was killed and a man and boy probably fatally injured in a $400,000 fire which occurred in Brooklyn. The dead man is J. C. Donaldson, a bookkeeper. The injured are William D. Donaldson, the 17-year-old son of the dead man, and Stephen Moneypenny, a laborer. They were in an adjoining building fighting the fire when the flames made their position perilous and they were obliged to jump.

Attempted Suicide.

Mrs. S. W. Jackson, wife of the manager of the St. Paul Employment agency at Butte, attempted to commit suicide Saturday with the assistance of laudanum. The timely arrival of physicians defeated her purpose.

Shot His Sister by Accident.

Oakland, Cal., April 17.—Annie Nunes, a 10-year-old girl, residing with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Nunes, about five miles southeast of Haywards, in this county, was shot and instantly killed by her brother. The accident occurred in the kitchen of the family home.

In considering how we shall treat the Porto Ricans, tne country must decide whether it is to be our treat or theirs.

This being the first sale of importance that has thus far been consummated interest has been awakened and timber land is being eagerly sought for. It is conceded by eastern lumbermen that Idaho has the bulk of the accessible white pine timber of the United States since the supply of the northern middle states is nearly exhausted hence the eagerness to secure claims by settlers and larger holdings by men of means.

Fire broke out in Chases' saloon, resulting in the complete destruction of the following property in Hope: Chase's saloon, Leet's restaurant, W. J. Quirk's store and the postoffice, Joe Lawson's barber shop, Al Meade's restaurant, Spence Horning's house, Mrs. Lemley's house, Congregational church. By blowing up a number of adjoining buildings Wanamaker's store was saved thereby preventing a total loss of the western portion of town. As Harry Auxer was going to see why a charge of dynamite which he had placed in the barber shop did not explode, it suddenly went off, throwing him clear over the bank and below the tracks. He is seriously injured about the head and his life is despaired of at the present writing. After the fire was under control some boys were walking about the ruins, when one of them, Willie Munroe, found a loaded pistol near Mr. Horning's house. While handing it to one of his comrades with the barrel in his hand and pointing toward himself, the cartridge exploded, hitting Willie in the right breast. He died instantly. The pistol was hot at the time and it is believed the cartridge was exploded by the heat. Mrs. Mead and her son, Harold, were slightly injured by flying debris. The total loss is estimated at $25,000, Quirk being the heaviest loser. There was no insurance on any of the destroyed property.

MINES AND MINING NEWS

OUR NORTHWESTERN MINES.

Items Gleaned From Late Reports—All Districts Are Being Developed—A Prosperous Year Is Predicted—Mining Notes and Personals.

The smelter combine of Salt Lake has refused to grant a demand for increased wages at the Germania smelter, and the 450 employes are out on a strike.

REPUBLIC.

The record of development work for March in Republic camp was even less than in the month of February, which was the lowest for the entire previous year.

The Mountain Lion resumed work on the drifts last month and some stoping was done.

Four hundred feet of drilling was done on the Spotted Horse last month and it is probable that more than double that amount will be run the present month.

The Knob Hill drift was extended 50 feet during March. The total amount of development on the mine consisting of shaft, tunnel and drift, is about 800 feet.

The Golden Harvest had a good month of progress. The drift was driven 80 feet.

There was 78 feet of drift and crosscut run on the San Poil during the month.

One shift drove 35 feet of drift on the Morning Glory in the month.

The Lone Pine took second place in development last month. The total number of feet run was 130. This was divided as follows: East drift, 65 feet; west drift, 30 feet; adit tunnel, 35 feet.

The tunnel on the Rebate was driven a distance of 35 feet during March.

The two-compartment shaft on the Silver Dollar was sunk 50 feet.

There was but 25 feet of development work on the Insurgent mine last month.

A total of 60 feet was run last month on the Ben Hur. This work was done on the 240-foot level.

There were but a few days' work done in the way of developing the Republic last month. The situation of the mine was such that to have operated it would have been at a positive loss to the company.

The Quilp beat the Lone Pine by a few feet in the record of the month's development.

There was but 15 feet of development on the North Star last month.

Everything at the Mountain Lion mill is in fine shape.

Thomas Stacey, from the Ignace mine on the west fork of the San Poil, says that the two-compartment working shaft is down about 50 feet. It is being sunk directly on the ledge, crosswise of it, and so far no walls have been found.

Returns have just been received by the Zala Consolidated company from a small shipment of slightly less than 14 tons of ore recently sent to the Trail smelter. The ore gave values of $134.93 in silver and $9.12 in gold, a total of $144.05 to the ton. The net return to the company was $1808.03, after deducting the smelter charges.

The grading for the Republic mill is nearing completion, but a large force is still at work. The carpenters have many timbers in place and many others are ready.

The Republic Reduction Company is making good headway in getting its machinery into place. The boiler has arrived.

The Princess Maud mine has been seized by the Graves-Linnemann faction and work has been stopped.

BRITISH COLUMBIA.

From all the mining camps around Kaslo good news comes. The reports all indicate that the season of dullness is passing and that active months are in sight.

Andrew Laidlaw of Spokane has bonded the Moreen claim, in Deadwood camp, for $30,000. The claim is the south extension of the Buckhorn mine, and has its ledge. It is owned by Harry Shallenberger of Spokane, who has done considerable prospecting, preparatory to obtaining a crown grant. The bond runs till February next, and the first payment was made today.

Henry Hess and Charles Miller sold the Silver Tip on Toby creek, Windermere, in the northern part of East Kootenay, for $45,000. The first payment of $2,000 was made in cash. Sam Scander of this town made the deal on behalf of the Morris syndicate, a French company.

A remarkable body of ore has been encountered on the 100-foot level of the Buckhorn in Deadwood camp. The machines are drilling in a solid chalcopyrite that fills the breast of the drift. It is one of the most important strikes made in the Boundary district.

The Silver Slocan has long been famous for its high grade silver-lead properties. And that part of it near Silverton has held its own. In addition to its rich silver properties Silverton is blessed with a section of great veins of copper gold ores. The character of the ores in this gold belt is very like that from the great producers at Rossland. The area is of about the same extent and the formation almost identical. This gold belt is only three miles south of Silverton and when developed must be a great factor to the up-building of the town and country.

A big mining deal has been on the tapis in Cascade. A representative of the great Montreal Mining Syndicate, in which C. J. McCuaig is a prominent figure, was in town Wednesday and Thursday, closing a contract with John Beasley and J. A. Heard for options on the Zoie Belle and Little Jack, two claims just across the line in the direction of Hall's Ferry, about four miles from town.

Oregon Mines.

With two lines of railroad and a possible third projected into Granite, the Granite mining district is as active as any in the northwest. It is not the railroad probabilities alone, however, that are responsible for the activity in this camp and the boom of Granite. Mining men are learning that large bodies of ore and the most favorable formations exist in the camp. This is being well demonstrated by the Red Boy, Magnolia, Little Giant, Ibex, Bonanza, Pyx, Cougar and others, and also by hosts of prospects in various stages of development. Work has been in progress on a great many properties all winter and prospects are that a number will be added to the list of producers before fall.

The advance guard of prospectors has arrived, though the mountains are still covered with snow, the roads are almost impassable, and the weather has been cold and disagreeable.

It is reported that the Magnolia mine equipped with a modern 10-stamp mill and only four miles from Granite, Ore., has reverted to its original owners, by the failure of the purchasers to meet the last payment when due.

Much work is in progress at the Red Boy mine. A large force of men is erecting a shaft house, ore bins, etc., and about $50,000 worth of machinery is on the ground for the proposed sinking operations.

While little is yet being done on the placer diggings in this vicinity, preparations are under way for much work.

MINING NOTES.

George Connors, superintendent of the Hiyu mine at Florence, Idaho, reports that the snow is going off rapidly. This will give better opportunity for earlier development work in the wet claims than there has been for years. Preparations are being made to open the Hiyu as early as practicable.

It is quite probable that the Banner mine will resume operations this summer.

The Humming Bird Mining Company of Burke, Idaho, has four men at work on a new tunnel, which starts from the Tiger side, running northwest. The ledge is covered where it comes down the mountain side on the east toward Canyon creek, but it is expected that the new tunnel will cut it in from 150 to 200 feet.

Encouraging news comes from the Last Chance Group to be tapped by a tunnel from Government gulch.

In the Palmer Mountain tunnel the foot wall of the 20th well defined vein has been encountered. Lying next the wall is a foot of white quartz mineralized all through, and showing free gold. The next six feet, which is up to the face of the tunnel, is all ledge matter, thoroughly mixed with white quartz, while the face is full of quartz seams and mineralized ledge matter. This has the appearance of being one of the richest ledges cut into. The wall was cut at 2983 feet in and 1200 vertical depth. Assays are not yet out, but there is sufficient free gold visible to assure its high value.

The tunnel has reached a territory in which the surface showings are the best on the mountain, with one exception, the Grand Summit. The Helena Belle should be cut in the next 200 to 400 feet. The driving of the tunnel through this distance, and the cutting of the Helena Belle vein will be watched with much interest, not only by the tunnel people, but by every one interested in Palmer Mountain properties.

The Corea Mines.

Corea seems a good way from here, and it is, but we can ship a ton of freight from New York to our mines near the Yaloo river as cheaply as the same ton can be sent to the mountains of Idaho, and just about as quickly, too. We have been interested in mining for five years now on a concession covering 1000 square miles. Our lease has 25 years to run. We have the right to mine any mineral, but we have confined our attention to gold alone. All of our machinery is of American manufacture as this country makes the best machinery for mining purposes in the world.

Corea is picturesque, beautiful, fertile, with an excellent climate and an industrious and agreeable people. At our mines we employ 75 white men and 3000 coolies. We are the pioneers there and we had to overcome all the obstacles in a new and in most respects a wild country. There are many good fields in Corea, as the country possesses a continuation of the gold-bearing outcrops of Siberia and Manchuria, both of which are bound to be great gold producers. The Coreans have been mining with crude methods for many centuries, and they are still at it.

There is an immense opening for enterprise and capital there, which will undoubtedly be supplied as soon as it is understood that the United States government will protect its citizens in all legitimate foreign enterprises. The orientals are kindly disposed towards Americans for many reasons, but chiefly because they recognize that Americans are not seeking political empire, and they feel that from them they can receive the most desirable assistance in industrial and commercial improvement.

The enterprises which are now starting over there are bewildering, but it is hardly a poor man's country. The opportunity is favorable for associated capital in large amounts skillfully directed, but not for individuals.

In Scotland plowing matches are taking place all over the country. The chances for practice lately, however have been few.

BOERS ARE STILL ADVANCING

HEAVY CANNONADING HEARD.

Boer Headquarters Report British Retiring—General Brabant Is Still Alive—Boers Insist on Active Work in the Field.

London, April 13.—A special dispatch from Elandslaagte says:

"Fighting has been renewed beyond Elandslaagte. The Boers steadily advanced upon the British positions. There was a continuous rifle fire and the Boer big guns were in action. The British replied effectively, and after two hours' fighting the Boers were checked."

Still Fighting at Wepener.

Pretoria, April 13.—Advices from Wepener, where the British forces were surrounded, say the battle continues favorable to the federals. About 1500 British troops are said to be there. Heavy cannonade was heard in the direction of Bellefontein, situated midway between Windburg and Boshof, in the Orange Free State, and north of Brandfort. Advices from Boer headquarters in Natal say that after a heavy bombardment the British are retiring in the direction of Ladysmith and the federals are going to their old positions.

Details Are Scarce.

London, April 13.—Elandslaagte and Wepener still monopolize attention. At both places a series of indecisive actions are occurring. The Boer report of the fighting on April 10 at Elandslaagte avers that the advance on the British camp was made with the loss of only three mules and two horses, while the British losses, says the same report, must have been heavy. The bombardment lasted all day.

Nothing has been learned regarding the rumor of Colonel Baden-Powell's death, nor is there anything tending to show how long the general advance towards Pretoria will be delayed.

In the absence of exctiing developments public interest centers more upon the personality of the new commanders and in the supposition as to who the next general will be to be sent home.

Unimportant Victory.

The announcement of the reoccupation of Smithfield by the burghers, just received, is no news, as the small British force at that place withdrew thence after the Reddersberg affair.

It now appears that General Brabant himself is at Aliwalnorth and that only a portion of his column is at Wepener.

Boers Are Restless.

Bloemfontein, April 13.—According to information received here the Boer activity eastward of the railroad and in proximity to the border is largely due to the fact that Presidents Kruger and Steyn have found they are unable to keep their forces together in inactivity, the burghers declaring they are unwilling to remain with their commandos unless actively employed, as they are convinced the British game is a waiting one. It is believed the Boer movement was originally designed to oblige Lord Roberts to weaken his force at Bloemfontein in order to protect the railroad, when the Boers would have attempted to recapture the capital. But the burghers are evidently ignorant of the enormous forces Lord Roberts has at his disposal. Advices from Karoo siding say the Boers are busily entrenching their position east of Brandfort, running parallel with the railroad, while strongly holding the Waterval drift water works.

No Substitutes for Boers.

Pretoria, April 14.—The Free State Gazette publishes orders to the effect that no person commandered for active service has the right to send a substitute without the consent of the landrost. In reference to leaves of absence the Gazette says that 10 per cent of each command will be relieved by ballot for periods of 12 days. This is intended to meet the wishes of burghers desiring to plant crops.

The Peace Commission.

Naples, April 14.—The Transvaal commissioners, accompanied by Dr. Muller and Herr Van Booschoten, has started for Milan.

British Losses Heavy.

London, April 12.—The war office has issued returns of the total British casualties up to April 7. It was as follows: Killed in action, 211 officers, 1960 men; died of wounds, 48 officers, 405 men; missing and prisoners, 163 officers, 3722 men; died of diseases, 47 officers, 1485 men; accidental deaths, 3 officers, 34 men; repatriated invalids, 283 officers, 4934 men; total, 13,365, exclusive of sick and wounde now in hospitals. To the war office returns of casualties must be added the losses of last week and wounded aggregating about 10,000 men, making a total of upwards of 23,000 officers and men put out of action.

Brabant Holds His Own.

Aliwalnorth, April 12.—The British losses in the fighting at Wepener were 11 killed and 41 wounded. Fighting was resumed. The British are holding their own well.

Gatacre to Return Home.

Bloemfontein, April 12.—General Gatacre, commander of the Third division, is about to return to England. General Pole-Carew has been appointed to the command of the Eleventh division. Several changes are likely to be made in the brigade commands.

Russia and the Boers.

St. Petersburg, April 15.—The czar and czarina have started for Moscow. Extraordinarily persistent rumors are current in Moscow that on Russian Easter Sunday the czar will issue a manifesto containing an ultimatum to Great Britain, demanding that she conclude peace with the Boers forthwith under threat of occupying Cabul and Herat if Great Britain fails to comply.

Trade Report.

Bradstreet's report for the past week says:

Backward spring weather conditions have figured considerably in distributive trade rports last week and in connection with some weakness in prices of leading stocks have imparted an appearance of irregularity to the general situation. Another of these downward swings in the prices of agricultural staples is exhibited last week in slightly lowered prices for the cereals, partly because of the bearish sentiment of immediate supplies and partly because of the better than expected government crop report, which is taken to indicate a possible winter wheat yield in excess of all records. The crop outlet as a whole favors the expectation of a large yield of corn and cotton. Corn and oats have sympathy with the reaction in pork products, which reaction however, has not been universal as shown by the fact that lard is at the highest point reached on the present boom. Corn exports in March were three times those of last year, in value and for seven months are seven per cent greater in value, while 23 per cent smaller in quantity.

Evidences accumulate that active missionary work in favor of lower prices for iron and steel is at last bearing fruit. Prices were no lower and stocks as a whole are claimed to be no larger than a month ago, but steel products have weakened noticeably during the week, billets showing the sharpest decline, with corresponding decreases in some othr products. The other metals show little change on the week, copper being in continued good demand and firm, while tin is speculative weaker and lead is strong at previous prices. The hardware trade returns as a whole are better.

A slight upward movement in cotton is to be noted this week and southern mills have advanced prices. On the other hand, while the mills are active on old orders, new business is reported of smaller volume. Some more inquiry is noted in raw wool without, however, affecting values.

Wheat (including flour) shipments for the week aggregate 2,896,653 bushels, against 3,836,936 bushels last week, and 1,983,619 bushels in the corresponding week of 1899.

Since July 1st this season the exports of wheat aggregated 173,906,296 bushels against 190,329,159 bushels last year and 188,271,580 bushels in 1897-98.

Business failures for the week number 152, as compared with 182 in the United States last week, 243 in this week a year ago and 215 in 1898. Failures in Canada were 35, as compared with 35 last week, 25 a year ago and 27 in 1898.

No Officers to Man Ships.

The navy department is under the necessity of ordering the United States cruiser Detroit to the Portsmouth navy yard, New Hampshire, to go out of commission. In addition to this, orders have been prepared to put the Marblehead out of commissoin at Mare Island and telegraph orders have been sent to Admiral Watson to send the gunboats Bennington and Concord, now at Manila, to Los Angeles, where they will be also put out of commission. The battleships Indiana and Massachusetts, which have just been overhauled at the New York navy yard, are to be sent to League island about the first of the month to be laid up instead of being commissioned. This remarkable reduction of the number of ships in commission is ascribed at the navy department to the lack of a sufficient number of officers to furnish complements for the ships required for naval purposes. The battleship Kearsarge has just been put in commission and the Illinois on the Atlantic side and the Wisconsin on the Pacific must be also commissioned immediately in order that the ships can be taken over from the hands of the contractors. There are smaller craft like the Stringham calling for commissions and crews. The extent of the shortage may be suggested by the fact that for all the four great guns in the double turrets of the new battleship Kearsarge but one officer could be spared, causing a great risk. The navigation bureau is authority for the statement that there are 16 vacancies in the naval line and the total number of officers is really less than it was four years ago, notwithstanding the increase in the number of ships.

Carpenters at Victor, Colo., are now getting $4.00 a day for eight hours.

In the Senate.

Senator Burrows addressed the senate on the resolution relative to the seating of Quay as senator from Pennsylvania. Senator Burrows said he was forced to the conclusion that the power of appointment in the case was not lodged with the executive, and the majority of the committee so reported.

"And let me say, senators, that no sooner shall you have established the doctrine contended for by the majority than there will be a popular uprising in this country which no power can resist or suppress, to take from state legislatures and governors all power to appoint senators and lodge it with the people."

The definite intention of republican senators to seek to have the shipping subsidy bill passed at the present session was announced in the senate committee on commerce. The purpose is to have the bill given the place of "unfinished business" when the Quay resolution and Philippine bill are disposed of.

In the senate Saturday Senator Morgan offered and secured the adoption of a resolution requiring the attorney general to transmit to the senate all the papers filed in the Union Pacific case and to inform the senate why the Union Pacific received in settlement of the case $4,600,000 and the United States only about $800,000.

Senator Berry directed attention to the fact that the house had passed a resolution in favor of election of senators by the people and appealed to the committee on privileges and elections to present a report either in favor of or against the resolution. Senator Chandler said that personally he was oppsed to the election of senators by the people, but would be glad to have the question considered.

The Quay case was laid before the senate, but at the instance of Senator Chandler was laid aside until later.

The senator from South Dakota resumed his speech on his story of the Boer war, advocating the adoption of the Mason resolution expressive of sympathy for the Boers.

The senate then proceeded to the consideration of the Alaskan civil bill. The pending question was that relating to the location of mining claims by aliens, offered by Senator Hansbrough, but owing to the absence of the author it went over until Monday.

In the House.

The Puerto Rico bill passed the house Wednesday, the final unofficial vote being 163 to 153. Delay in the official announcement was caused by a recapitulation. The bill will now go to the president for his signature.

Mr. Cooper, chairman of the committee on insular affairs, called up in the house Thursday the resolution for which he has asked unanimous consent several times to authorize the secretary of the treasury to designate banks in Puerto Rico, Cuba and the Philippines as government depositories. A number of amendments were offered and rejected, the debate at times being quite spirited. The resolution was passed.

Ceremonies connected with the acceptance of the Richaus statue of Oliver P. Morton, Indiana's great war governor, which has recently been placed in statuary hall, were held in the house Saturday. They consisted of addresses by several members of the Indiana delegation and several others.

The Coeur d'Alene investigation was resumed Monday with W. R. Stimson, one of the former county commissioners of Shoshone county, on the stand to rebut features developed in previous testimony. His evidence was to effect that he was removed from office by the state and military authorities because they believed he would not serve their purpose. He declared in answer to questions that his removal was brought about by legal and judicial "tools" of the Bunker Hill mine and Standard Oil Company. Most of Stimson's testimony related to minor circumstances in the affairs under investigation.

Collision in the Sound.

Seattle, April 16.—The steamer Lakme and British ship Queen Elizabeth collided between Seattle and Port Townsend. The total damage is estimated at $3000. Both ships were about equally injured. The Lakme was outward bound with a load of lumber for San Francisco. The Queen Elizabeth was bound to Port Blakeley. The two vessels came together with great force. The Lakme is now at Seattle, and the Queen Elizabeth at Port Blakeley.

George Samuels of 76 East 113th st., New York, a watchman in the general postoffice of New York, formerly a prison keeper in that city, still keeps up a search he began four years ago, when his son Sidney, sixteen years of age, disappeared. The boy ran away from home on July 14th, 1896, with a boy companion. The other boy afterwards came back, and said that Sydney and he went to Toronto, Canada where Sidney obtained employment as coachman with a banker. Since that time Mr. Samuels has had no news of his boy, and says he would be thankful to any person who could give him any information regarding his lost son.

Owing to the expressed wish of the president congvress will endeavor to secure adjournment early in June, by the first of that month if possible, or at least before the meeting of the national convention at Philadelphia.

Senator Depew is of the opinion that had there been a successful national university at Washington 50 years ago there would never have been a civil war.

Since spring really began Congressman Littlefield of Maine has shown a fondness for voilets, and nearly always wears a bunch of those flowers in his coat.

REPUBLICS ONLY IN NAME.

Latin-American Countries Are Governed Upon Despotic Lines.

"The Latin republics," said a New Orleans man, who has recently been making a business tour in South America, to a few friends, who were dining with him in this city, "are the worst apologies for republics in the entire calendar of free states. Affairs in these republics are, I sincerely believe, becoming better of late, but it is the simplest thing in the world to provoke a revolution. We are all familiar with the changes of government that have taken place within the last decade, but few understand how easy it has been, and still is in some of these republics, to precipitate a rebellion, turn a ruler out of office, upset a government, and create general anarchy. I was in one of these republics some years ago when a revolution, or rather an attempt at revolution, occurred, for it was not a genuine success.

"I was, with a friend, about to go to breakfast when a party of about twenty men appeared in the street along which we were passing. About the same number of men came into sight from an opposite direction and the fun began. Every man had a cloak over his shoulders, though the weather was oppressively warm, and when they sighted each other the cloaks were thrown aside and more brass medals, rainbow-tinted ribbons, red sashes and other gorgeous insignia of something or other I never saw. They began firing at each other, and soon the street was filled with a multitude of troops and about an equal number of revolutionists. My friend and myself took refuge in a clubhouse over which the English flag was flying. The Government troops dispersed the rebels on this occasion, and when we left in the afternoon for our respective locations the same national flags that were flying at sunrise were still hanging at their staffs. It was on this occasion a bloodless and futile revolution, and people went about their business on the next day with the same composure and contempt for one party or the other as they had on the day before the opera bouffe rebellion."—Washington Times.

RECENT INVENTIONS.

In a new German device for cleaning large panes of glass a frame is attached to the window to support two endless chains, the latter carrying a horizontal bar, fitted with a cleaning strap to come in contact with the pane as the bar is raised or lowered.

Pneumatic tires are protected from puncture by a new guard, comprising a series of semi-circular scales forming an endless chain around the tire with eyelets formed at the ends of the scales, through which a wire is threaded to retain the guard in place.

A Texan has designed a handy twine-holder for use in stores, having a pair of horizontal spindles on which conical packages of twine are placed, with a vertical rod on which a weight slides, the cord being drawn through two eyelets and the weight, the latter taking up the slack as it falls.

A folding hat has been patented by a Scotch woman, a single sheet of stiff paper or other material being folded into transverse plaits, with a crease through the center at right angles with the plaits, which allows one portion to bend out and form the brim after the sheet is bent into a tube.

Oil cans are prevented from exploding by a new valve attachment, a chamber being formed at the inner end of the spout, with a spring-actuated valve to shut the opening from the chamber to the can, the entrance of the flame expanding the gas in the chamber and closing the valve instantly.

An improved folding tobacco pipe has the bowl flattened at the sides to fit in the pocket, with a hole drilled through one side in which the stem is inserted, the latter being bent at an angle and provided with a spring which allows it to be lowered and folded on the side of the bowl when not in use.

In Virginia a company has been formed for the manufacture of an artificial marble, which closely resembles the genuine and can readily be carved, the ingredients being milk of lime, glycerin, silicate of soda, soap, salt and marshmallow root, together with a cement which thickens and combines the components.

Poor Lo Opening an Account.

An Indian not long ago went to Rapid City, S. D., from his reservation, accompanied by his squaw, his daughter and two hand satchels. He proceeded to one of the banks, and, after some hesitation, produced $2,000 from the grips and proceded to open an account. He is entered as the only Indian bank depositor in South Dakota and as one of the largest holders of ready cash among his race.

Where the Air Is Pure.

An aeronaut says that there is the same difference in the air at the earth's surface and at an altitude of half a mile that there is between water in a muddy puddle and the purest spring water. He states that for a time one feels, after coming down from an ascent, as if one were breathing "solid dust."

Country-Bred Saleswomen the Best.

A New York expert says that a country girl is better than her city-bred sister as a saleswoman. He gives as his reasons for this that the country girl is not so likely to have her head full of social amusements; that she is, as a rule, more attentive to her business; and that she studies the wants of her customers more than the city maiden.

—Fifteen years ago the U. S. stood No. 20 in the list of naval powers. Since then it has spent for new ships $98, 525,000, and the vessels now under construction will cost $62,570,500. It now ranks fourth among the naval powers of the world—England first, France second, Russia third, United States fourth, Germany fifth. It is ahead of Germany today only by 2,730 tons—a crusier about the size of the Atlanta.

—W. E. Smith and sister Mrs. Allie Palmer, left on Wednesday for Trempleau, Wis., the home of their mother. Mrs Palmer will visit there while Mr. Smith will proceed leisurely eastward on his Paris trip. Mr. Meuli and family expect to start the 20th for Paris....Tim Sullivan says he is just loser $1600 by holding his crop two years and not selling last fall when wheat sold at 45 cents. This is adding interest on money borrowed, storage and insurance. It doesn't pay a farmer to speculate on the wheat market and we believe take one year with another the opening fall price is the best, says the Gazette.

—Senator Kyle of South Dakota, a former populist, chairman of the Industrial commission, returned from the south where the commission took testimony regarding labor conditions. Mr. Kyle is much surprised at the trade developments there. "I predict that within the next ten years the South will be a rival of New England in manufacturing. I was informed in Anniston, Ala., that a firm there was shipping a trainload of sewer pipes to Japan every week. Had it been cotton goods I would not have been so astonished, but I never thought the trade in sewer piping would be so brisk. The manufacturers are shipping hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of cotton goods to the Orient, and in some cases the whole supply of the mill is used in this trade."

—Our county of Latah will become rich and famous from her mica mines. Mr. Alex Munro, manager of a group of mines 18 miles from Vollmer, believes there is enough mica in these claims to supply the United States for 20 years. This group is owned by a Salt Lake firm and shipments have been made there. Mr. Munro says: "Idaho mica is fully equal if not superior to any in the United States, if not in the world. The color is uniformly, except in the Muscovite, which is a wine color. We import nine-tenth of what we use in the United States. The high value of the Idaho product is in the fact that the formation is perfect. The crystals are large, one crystal taken out recently weighing over 100 pounds, bringing $13 a pound. When development work is complete we will turn out two carloads of mine-run mica a month." Latah county is rich in hidden wealth and the near future will see great mines developed—gold, silver, copper, tin, mica, lead, opals, etc.

—We are soon to lose the celebrated geysers of the Yellowstone park. These marvels of nature, which for many generations have excited the wonder of visitors and formed one of the extraordinary natural phenomena of the United States, are rapidly becoming extinct. The Roaring Mountain geyser, although still emitting steam, has ceased to spout; the Black Growler is showing only the feeblest signs of life, and the renowned Fountain geysey, in the lower basin of the Yellowstone, and the Splendid and the Beehive, in the upper basin, are at the present time practically extinct. Thus five of the world renowned geysers of the Yellowstone have gone out of business without any new hot springs appearing. The other geysers in the neighborhood, including the magnificent Old Faithful, the Devil's Inkpot, and the Minute geyser all show that their power is rapidly diminishing and that their days are numbered. The celebrated European scientific paper entitled Ciel et Terre, in considering these facts, predicts that the geysers of the Yellowstone will exist for only a few more years, during which their activity will steadily diminish. Thus the Yellowstone Park, which has attracted visitors from all parts of the world, must needs be visited during the next few seasons if the most uncommon features of that wonderland are to be seen at work.

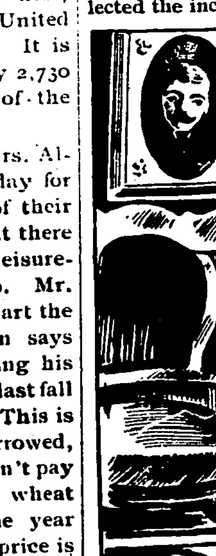
Symbols of Success

A vacant chair and a portrait on the wall—strange symbols of success! Yet, in many a home these are the symbols of the success of the man who did not find time to care for his health, or neglected the increasing warnings of disease which Nature gave him. When the stomach is "weak" and food is imperfectly digested and assimilated, it is only a question of time until the break-downcomes. The stomach is the very center of vital power and must be kept in health if sickness is to be avoided. Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It increases the supply of pure, rich blood, and gives the body strength to withstand the strain put upon it by the struggle for success.



"I was a sufferer from what the doctors called indigestion, but after trying several eminent physicians failed to get a cure," writes Mr. Frank Mericle, of Independence, Jackson Co., Mo., Box 473. "Some of my symptoms were soreness in pit of stomach, fullness, tired feeling, constipation; sometimes soreness would extend to bowels. Some one recommended me to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which I did, and after taking only a few bottles of 'Discovery' and your 'Pleasant Pellets' can say I derived more benefit from them than any other medicine I ever tried. I began to gain flesh from the start. Have recommended it to others and will continue to do so."

—A bullet-proof shield has been invented which, it now seems certain, will be adopted by the British infantry. Although less than one-eighth of an inch in thickness it is absolutely bullet-proof at less than 300 yards against Leet-Metford and Mauser rifles firing service ammunition. The shield, as described in the May number of Pearson's Magazine, is designed for the protection of the soldier when lying down to fire and also when advancing into action. When advancing in the face of a heavy fire the shield is fixed to the rifle and the rifle being carried in a vertical position, the shield swings in a way to protect the vital parts—the head and chest.

EASTER SERMON

Delivered by the Rev. W. C. Fowler Before Moscow Commandry, Knight Templars.

Christ promised a resurrection of his body, on the third day after his death. This fact was known in Jerusalem. The Pharisees, his enemies, said we will see to it, that no one steals his body from the tomb, and so creates the impression that he has risen, when he has not. Their precautions, in the matter, consisted in the rolling of a great stone to the mouth of the tomb; sealing it with the seal of the Roman Empire; the breaking of which, meant death: and the detailing of a detachment of soldiers from the Tower of Antonie; the Roman barracks at Jerusalem. This was done for them, at their request, by the Roman authorities. And yet on the morning of the third day, the body was missing. No wonder, the Pharisees in their desire to prevent a faith in his resurrection, bribed the soldiers to put into circulation the story, that while they slept, the body had been stolen by the deciples. After such precautions, they could do away with the impression that he had rises, only by some desperate shift. To be sure, this story as to the bribing of the soldiers comes from a deciple, and so interested party. But for sake of argument, we will admit that they were not bribed, but told this story of their own accord. It will make no difference, for the story is absurd on its face. All the facts of the case militate against this supposition, that the body was stolen by the deciples. How could the soldiers have been asleep? They knew, that to sleep at their post of duty, according to the military code of the Empire, meant execution. They were aware, that all things were favorable to a discovery of such negligence. It was the time of the Jewish feast of the Passover, always held in the full of the moon. Thousands of Jews, from every land round and about, were present at Jerusalem; and so the gates of the city, near which the tomb was located, were thronged with people coming and going: and so likely to witness their sleep. As soldiers of the Roman Empire, they were heathen by education and habit; and so had no interest in this question, as to whether this alleged Jewish Messiah, would rise or not; not enough at least, to sleep that his body might be stolen; and so the impression made that there had been a resurrection, when there had not. The only interest they could have possibly had in that tomb, was to see that it was not robbed, as they had been commanded. Their heartless conduct at the time of the crucifixion, when they gambled for his seamless robe, shows they had no reverence for him; that would lead them to enter into a conspiracy with the deciples, to make it appear that he had risen. They must have viewed him simply as one suffering for crime. To move the body, the deciples would have to roll away the stone; and its removal would have aroused the soldiers if they slept. As the tomb was hewn in a solid rock, there was no way for its removal save through its rock closed mouth. And is it possible, that a whole detachment of soldiers, should sleep at a post of duty; at the peril of their lives; at one and the same time?

If as they claim, they slept, what does their story that the deciples stole the body amount to? Do sleeping men know what transpires during their slumber. If asleep, they could but imagine as to its removal. Consider the mood of the deciples at the time, and the supposition that they stole the body, becomes absurd. They were as so many frightened sheep. In his fear, Peter had denied his decipleship. The rest of the Eleven, had fled. John alone, had been present at the crucifixion. None of them had attended his funeral. How despairing the language of two, on their way to the village of Emmaus? They said, "We thought it was he, who was to have redeemed Isreal" Think you, these demoralized deciples, planned a robbery of this tomb sealed; and so heavily guarded? They knew it would mean a struggle, in which they unarmed civilians, would be sure to be overpowered. Surely, those soldiers never slept. There was no theft, during their slumbers. Their story to this effect, was wholly the result of a bribe, as here stated. There was policy in doing as these Pharisees asked. It was their only way out of a dilemma. The body in their charge, was missing; and the seal of the Empire had been broken. All this, meant for them if known, death. They could not escape by telling the real facts of the case: how the angel appeared in such splendor, that they were as dead men. The Roman authorities, would in that they were heathen, have said, tell this to those who will believe it, but not to us. Their only escape, was through the influence of the Pharisees with the Governor; and if they could have, only as they put into circulation, this story of their dictation; namely that the deciples stole the body while they slept. They not only promised them protection from the death penalty because of the breaking of the seal, and the absence of the body, through their influence with the governor; but also much money.

We pass now to another supposition; namely, that the Pharisees being in collusion with the soldiers, stole the body. Is it reasonable? If they stole it, it must have been to be able to produce it, if the deciples should ever attempt to preach a resurrection. If so, why did they not present it on the day of Pentecost, when Peter so preached. Instead of so doing, at his allegation of a resurrection, they began to cry, "Men and brethren, what shall we do," and so confessed that they believed he had risen, and so was divine; and they his slayers, were deicides. More than this, they not only repented of his crucifixion, but joined his deciples, in his worship.

A word, as to the explanation of the Resurrection of Christ, given by Rationalists. The first, is to the effect, that the deciples really believed, that Christ had risen; but it was because they were subject to an hallucination, as was Luther; when he saw Satan, and threw his ink bottle at him; Joan of Arc; when she conversed with Michael the Archangel. And Aurelian, when he saw after his death, Appolonius of Tyana; the Messiah of the Heathen world. That Christ's resurrection was the result, of an hallucination, is tersely put by Renan, the French rationalist, when commenting on Mary's report to the Eleven, that she had seen the master and talked with him. He says, "The passion of an hallucinated woman, gives to the world, a resuscitated God." Now those versed in the science of the mind tell us that four things are true of hallucinated people. First they have seen that which they claim to behold in the same condition at some previous time. Was this true of the deciples? Whenever they had seen him before, he was like them subject to limitations. But now it is different. He is outside the chains of sense and time: He is as unrestrained in his movements, as the air. He comes through closed doors and walls; and finally in defiance of even gravitation, ascends into a passing cloud. Secondly they are at the time in an ecstatic mood. Were the diciples ecstatic at the time they claimed to see Christ alive from the grave? On the contrary they were despondent; thinking their hopes concerning him wrecked on the cross of his humiliation and shame. Thirdly, they are at the time expecting to see what they claim to behold. Were the deciples, expecting to see him alive from the grave? On the contrary, they were surprised; and thought they had seen his Ghost?. Fourthly, they are sanguine as to the reality of what they see. Were the deciples thus? On the contrary, they were slow to believe that the crucified one, was really before them. They would not admit it, till they had tested his reality, by a touch. One of them said, "Except I see in his hands, the prints of the nails; and put my fingers into the prints of the nails; and thrust my hand into his side, I will not believe." And would it not be passing strange, if all the deciples became subject to an hallucination, at one, and the same time? The second explanation of the Resurrection by Rationalists, is that it is a myth of the Apostolic age. Now a myth, is something that can be divorced in thought from the teacher with whom it is associated, without damaging his claim to our faith. Thus all the mythical stories associated with the history of Boodha, the law giver of India, may be disallowed; and his claim on our faith is not in the least impaired. His teachings, in that they are of an ethical nature, are still in the main true to us.

But suppose we reckon as false Christ's resurrection. What then becomes of our faith in him? If Christ be not risen, He is not divine. If not divine, He was either deceived as to himself, or a deceiver, for He claimed divinity. His resurrection is absolutely essential to faith in Him at all. Let us now look at the direct proofs of His resurrection. There was eleven different materializations of Him after His death. At one time, we are told, He appeared to 500 people at once; of whom there were in Paul's time; as he claims; Three Hundred still living. He invited His deciples to make sure of His reality, by touching Him. Even Thomas the sceptic, is convinced, and crys "My Lord, and My God." His resurrection was accepted as truth by Three Thousand people the first time it was preached; which was not in some out of the way place; but in Jerusalem, where all the facts pertaining to his life, were generally known. Within three centuries, he who went scorned into the gloom of Golgotha, was worshiped throughout the Roman Empire; which as we have seen, would have been impossible, if there was not a faith in his resurrection, equally extensive. The Sabbath, was changed to the day on which His resurrection, is said to have occurred; that it might become commemorative of it. It was changed by the Apostles themselves; and so immediately after the alleged Resurrection; while those Electric Bitters tones up the stomach, regulates liver, kidneys and bowels, purifies the blood, strengthens the nerves, hence cures multitudes of maladies. It builds up the entire system. Caught a Dreadful Cold.

Marion Kooke, manager for T. M. Thompson, a large importer of fine millinery at 1658 Milwaukee Ave., Chicago, says: "During the late severe weather I caught a dreadful cold which kept me awake at night and made me unfit to attend my work during the day. One of my milliners was taking Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for a severe cold at that time, which seemed to relieve her so quickly that I bought some for myself. It acted like magic and I began to improve at once. I am now entirely well and feel very pleased to acknowledge its merits." For sale by all druggists.

Is it possible for a jury to be too intelligent? One writer has recorded an answer in the affirmative. But if there may be overintelligent men in the panel are we not in peril also from an excessively impartial judge, unduly truthful witnesses, too much pure air in the court-room breathed by litigants anxious that their opponents shall win the suit? It may all be when men and women are really "too good to live;" but not until then.

A wealthy citizen of California has obtained, after some years of effort, the consent of the wardens of a church in Wiltshire, England, to the removal to America of the monumental tablet to Lawrence and Elizabeth Washington. They are supposed to have been the great-great-grandparents of George Washington. The slab is to be taken to Washington—the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury having taken in charge the matter of its transportation—and set up in the Smithsonian Institution.

The curious grammatical error—almost incoherency—of the famous Monroe doctrine has often been commented upon. Something near a parallel to it appears in the recently negotiated treaty between this country and Great Britain for the construction and control of the Isthmian canal. The text of that treaty provides that ratifications of it shall be exchanged "within six months of the date hereof, or earlier if possible!" And the treaty was written and carefully revised and re-revised by one of the most accomplished literary men of the age. It is perhaps because the slip is so obvious that it passed notice.

Prof. Sumner of Yale made a foolish speech on the marriage question. He said that ninety per cent of all marriages were failures. Still more foolish speeches are made by those annoyed by Prof. Sumner. What is the use of getting excited about the marriage question? It is true that about ninety per cent of those who are married are more or less unhappy. Of those who are unmarried perhaps ninety-eight per cent are unhappy. Marriage has nothing to do with it. It is just a question of human life. Human life begins as a general rule with brilliant hopes, which cruelly dwindle away. We aim to get what others cannot get—to have what others cannot have. Of course, not every man can excel every other man. In a state of civilization in which so-called "success" consists in enjoying amid plenty the contemplation of your neighbors' wants the great majority must be failures. Except for the man who is trying to do his own duty in his own line, life is pretty apt to be unsatisfactory toward the end. Ninety per cent at least are unhappy, married or single, because ninety per cent are miserably imperfect.

A dozen or more years ago a farmer twisted a bit of iron about a wire fence, and noticed that his cattle avoided it. Thus originated the use of the barbed-wire fence, which has cut the great free prairies into ranches. It has lacerated and cut from water countless numbers of the wild animals that once roamed the prairies, and is now classed as war material by the nations. Both in Cuba and in South Africa the demoralization wrought by the deadly barbed-wire fence was greater than that of the most improved guns and powder. The position of fence-cutter has promoted the drummer-boy into the forefront of danger. When Lieut. Ord led his men in a rush up San Juan hill, a boy private by his side fell, mortally wounded. Ord heard his faint cry and paused in his rush to say, "My poor fellow, I can do nothing for you." "I did not call you back for that," was the brave reply. "I am done for; but take my steel nippers. There may be another fence beyond that hill, and I won't be there to cut it for you." The boy lived to hear the shout of victory, but the gallant leader, with the boy's nippers in his hand and the boy's devotion last in his heart, lay dead not many yards away.

It is on record that Mary's little lamb, when it followed her to school, "made the children laugh and play," and consequently had to be turned out by the teacher. But it is also on record that in Boston there are several schools which have regularly maintained such pets as cats, guinea pigs and rabbits, and have allowed these animals to play freely about the school rooms, without any disconcerting or time-wasting effect. It is even asserted that the presence of the dependent and loving little creatures had a beneficial effect on the schools. They taught the little city children how animals familar to country people look, and also, by arousing their affection, inclined the hearts of rough children to humanity and tenderness. There was just enough recreation in the presence of the animals to do the children good, without distracting them unduly. The animals were, in the midst of the slums of the city, a connecting link between the children and God's beautiful natural world. It may not be practicable to provide all schools with animal pets, and in the country it may be quite superfluous to do so; but the proposition in Boston, which has the backing of a very distinguished man, the Rev. Dr. Edward Everett Hale, is at least an interesting one.

The greatest evil of divorce is the one of which little is said—the catastrophe to the children from the disruption of the family. An instance from current New York life will illustrate better than a thousand generalities: In a divorce suit that created a great deal of talk not long ago the court gave the father custody of the children. He has put them in charge of one of his female relatives. The younger child is a little girl just old enough to write in a large scrawling hand and to read words of one syllable if the type is large and her mind not too tired. A few days ago, about midnight, the nursery governess missed the child. She was not in her little bed, not in her room, not in the house—and the front door was unaccountably open. The governess ran into the street and to the corner, where she presently saw under a street lamp far down the block a small figure marching sturdily away from "home" through the lonely, "bogy"-haunted darkness. The governess called, the child looked back and then ran on until one of her shoes came off. This enabled the governess quickly to overtake her. She had on her hat, a coat buttoned all awry over her night gown. She had not stopped to put on her stockings or to button her shoes. "Oh, let me go on!" she sobbed. "Why, where do you want to go, you naughty little girl?" said the governess. "I waited till you were asleep," replied the child, "and then I started out to find my mamma." And they had thought that the child had forgotten because they had told her never to speak of her mother and she had said nothing about her for more than six months. There is much brave talk about "supreme duty to one's own individuality" and about "the irrepressible conflict of hostile temperaments." But it slinks away into shamefaced silence before the appealing voice of a forlorn little child looking for her lost mother.

Hunting Rabbits with a Hose.

Boys in Nebraska, a ferretless country, carry with them when hunting a coil of hose about an inch in diameter, which they pay out down a rabbit hole until the bottom is reached, meanwhile drawing the mouth of a sack over the hole. A cheerful shout down the hose brings the rabbit out at his best pace plump into the sack. The hose evidently does the business as quickly as the ferret, with no vexatious delays.

Rapid Time to the Orient.

From London to Bombay in eleven days is the remarkable program laid out by the Peninsular and Oriental Steamship Company. The journey will be made by the Brindisi route, and involves faster time than is usual on Italian railways. The chief item is the voyage from Suez to Bombay, which is made at the rate of seventeen knots an hour.

WORRY'S USELESS BRIDGES.

Where is the thrill of last night's fear?
Where is the stain of last week's tear?
Where is the tooth that ached last year?
Gone where the lost pins go to.
For last night's riddle is all made plain,
The sunshine laughs at the long-past rain,
And the tooth that ached has lost its pain—
That's where our troubles go to.

Where are the clothes that we used to wear?
Where are the burdens we used to bear?
Where is the bald head's curling hair?
Gone where the pins disappear to.
For the style has changed and the clothes are new,
The skies are wearing a brighter hue,
The hair doesn't snarl like it used to do,
And the parting has grown more clear, too.

Where are the bills that our peace distressed?
Where is the pin that the baby "blessed?"
Where are the doves of last year's nest?
Where have the pins all gone to?
On the old bills paid are new ones thrown,
And the baby's at school with her pins outgrown,
And the squabs are running a nest of their own—
You can't bring 'em back if you want to.

We stand the smart of yesterday,
To-day's worse ills we can drive away;
What was and is brings no dismay
For past and present sorrow,
But the burdens that make us groan and sweat,
The troubles that make us fume and fret,
Are the things that haven't happened yet—
The pins we'll find to-morrow.

NEMESIS.

"IT is easy enough to break off with a woman, Jack; don't worry so. She will take it hard for a time, but if you must break her heart sooner or later, save your own out of the wreck if you can. After all, a woman's heart is hard to break. It is 'off with the old love and on with the new' with the whole sex, I find."

"But you don't know the girl, Ben. She is a blamed sight too good for me. She is one of those sweet, refined girls, whose affection absorbs her whole soul, and I know she loves me as few men are ever loved. Every look, word or action tells me it is true, and, though I feel that I have made a mistake, Ben, I cannot tell her so."

"Don't tell her a thing, Jack. That is not the way to manage a woman. Simply disgust her with herself. Stop sending her flowers and knicknacks; don't take her out so much, and when you do, praise up some other woman to her. And, Jack, don't go over so often; tell her you are taking up a new study or working nights. She won't believe you, of course, but that won't matter. Make engagements and fail to keep them, or go over late, or be seized with a desire to return early. Oh, there are a hundred and one ways to aid you. You can tease her a little when she is serious and be serious when she is gay. In fact, differ with her as much as possible without being antagonistic, and find fault and pick to pieces the little arguments she may give in defense. And be as entertainingly disagreeable as you can without really appearing to be so. I will wager that within a month you will be as free as air. The girl will shake you. No woman can stand the pressure. I have tried it, my boy, and I know. My old-time sweetheart, Frances Grayson, is now the wife of a far better man than myself, and the happy mother of a charming boy. Of course she did not name the child for me—but I did not expect it."

"I believe I will try it, old man. But I am fond of the girl in a way, and if you hear of our marriage you can know I lost heart."

"Cheer up, Jack, my boy," said Ben Mallory, wringing his hand. "Love is a lottery, and Cupid is a merry little fellow when you know how to manage him."

Ben Mallory and Jack Downs had known one another but a month, yet in that short time had developed a firm friendship that only the confidence of youth can instill. They were both strangers in the city and brother lawyers in the same firm, which added to their congeniality.

Jack was an only child, adored by his parents, while Ben was one of a large family of two marriages, whose place in his home numerous brothers and sisters usurped. He had been reared by a wealthy uncle of no family, with whom he had lived for years, returning to his own home once a year for a short vacation. For his own people he cared little and seldom spoke of them, not wishing to explain their strained relations. Yet if Ben Mallory ever truly loved a being on earth he loved his sweet little half-sister, Kitty Kempster. She was now at college, and had lately ceased to write to her big, handsome brother as often as was her wont.

Ben had not seen Jack Downs since their talk, though he heard from him now and then from his home, whither he had gone for a rest. "I am taking your advice," he wrote, "but the girl baffles me. I don't know how to take her, and I feel like a confounded brute. I've a mind to make a clean breast of it."

The next letter said: "Ben, I am free. After all, I am not happy. I wish I had been square with the little girl. She let me down hard. Mother has set her heart on my marrying an heiress in town, but of the two the little girl suits me best."

"That fellow is a fool," murmured Ben, as he unfolded a small missive from home. "He loved that girl and didn't know it."

Ben smoothed out the paper and read: "Kitty does not seem happy. The child never complains, but she always loved you, and you might cheer her up a bit.
"MOTHER."

"Kitty unhappy!" Ben ran his fingers through his straight, black hair and thought hard. "It is some man," he said to himself. "I should like to put my two hands about his ugly throat and choke him, so!" and he crushed the letter in his strong hands, then threw it from him impatiently. "Yes, I will go and cheer up the little girl. Poor little Kit! She is not like other girls."

Two days later Ben sat in Kitty's cozy sitting-room, with the bright firelight shining on her pale little face, and reflecting the tears in her honest gray eyes.

Ben drew her down beside him on a divan. "Tell me about it, little girl," he said.

"There is not much to tell," she whispered, nestling close in his strong, loving arms, as a tired child might do when weary with play.

"I loved him, Ben. O, I did love him so! He was kind and true at first, and then he seemed to grow moody and sullen, and often cruel. I didn't understand at first."

Ben shuddered as a strange feeling of horror crept into his heart.

"Go on, little girl. His voice sounded unsteady.

"Sometimes I would not see him for days, and he got so I could never depend on him, and he never kept his word. He could not kill my love, Ben, though I finally tried to hate him. But he spoiled my life and killed my respect for him, and now I despise him, thoroughly despise him—yet love him still."

Ben's face had lost its gentle expression, and with stern set features he stared at the polished door.

"What is his name, and who is he?" His hard voice startled the girl.

"Jack Downs. I met him at college," answered Kitty.

Ben Mallory sank back among the soft cushions, while a look of pitiable remorse crept into his dark eyes, and the lines in his face deepened, as with age. Kitty crossed the room and gently stirred the coals in the open grate. The dying embers threw a shadow light on Ben's dark face as he watched the girl.

"May God forgive me," he murmured inaudibly. "I have broken the heart of the only creature ever given me to love. Frances, you are avenged."

Steamers for Crushing Ice.

The great and powerful ice-crushing steamers of the lakes are without exception car ferries—that is, they transport whole trains of passengers and freight cars from one terminal of a railway line to the other, thus controlling an important link where bridges would be impracticable.

These ice-challenging ferries ply the straits of Mackinac, the Detroit River and across Lake Erie from the American to the Canadian shore. They are huge steel-shod craft weighing several thousand tons and some of them have cost more than $350,000 each. Fitted with propellers at either end, they crumble the ice by the pressure of their bulk as though its three or four feet were but the thickness of a cardboard.

Whatever else is wanting, adventure is not lacking in the lives of the men who spend the months of snow aboard the majestic monsters which are to the lake tracks what the snowplows are to the railroad lines. A few winters since, with a thermometer ranging from 18 to 30 degrees below zero, one of the car ferries was caught in an immense ice field on Lake Erie and floated around for a few months with a great mass of ice piled mountains high around her. A portion of the crew was, of course, obliged to remain aboard and each day a couple of the men made an attempt—not always successful—to go ashore in order to secure provisions and supplies. Ofttimes this meant a long, dreary trip across the ice, and frequently, when a yawning chasm of dark-hued water intervened between the shore and the edge of the icefield, the foragers were not able to return to their imprisoned comrades for intervals of several days.—Self-Culture.

Receives a "Flower of Hell."

E. C. Downey, an attorney of Churubusco, Ind., who spent many months in Central America, has recently received from a friend in Guatemala one of the most wonderful species of flowers known to mankind. It is called the "rose of hell" and grows only in the vicinity of Antigua, near the crater of the volcano of Fuego. It is looked upon by the native Indians with a superstitious dread and is named the "rose of hell" because it thrives better near the steaming Fuego than away from it.

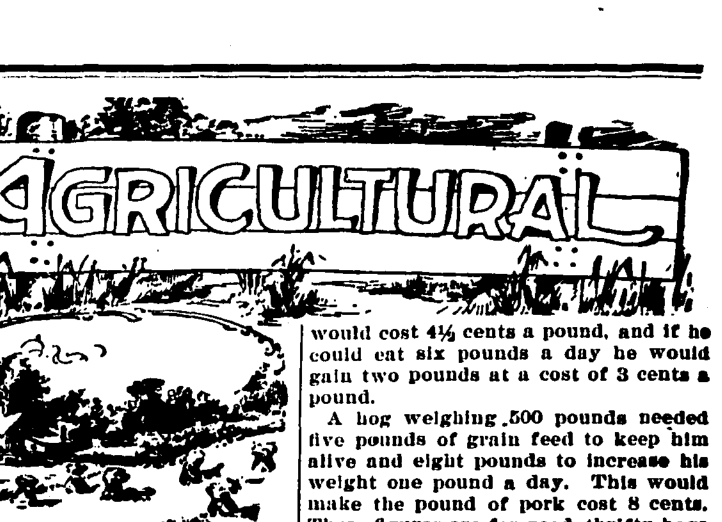
The Indians regard the crater of Fuego as the doorway of the infernal regions and this flower as being produced by the evil spirits associated with the demons of the sulphurous clime where the souls of the sinful all go.

The flower is very deadly and when boiled into a liquid and given to any animal death rapidly follows without pain, as quiet and peaceful as sleep. Science does not record another instance where this wonderful flower is found except in Guatemala, and the only place it is found in that country is near the doorway of the famous Fuego volcano. Several universities of this country will send after specimens of the rare flower and use it for experiments and demonstration to the classes in botany.

Gift of Stationery to Soldiers.

A London firm recently sent 100,000 packets of stationery as a gift to South African soldiers.

Sometimes a man starts out to be a social lion and ends by making a goose of himself.



Bran and Corn Prices.

As bran also contains a large proportion of fat and starch it does not differ very widely from some grains, and the only way to judge of the value of bran is to compare it with the price of corn. If corn is selling at $20 per ton and bran at $15, the farmer should then consider whether it would pay him to buy bran on a difference of $5 per ton, but in so doing there must be also considered the kinds of food already used, the location of the farm, the purposes for which the animals are kept and the value of the manure from the stock. The greater amount of protein in bran, as compared with corn, should make it more suitable than corn for cows which produce milk that is sold daily, as a large proportion of nitrogen is carried away in milk. There is also a gain in the mineral elements in the use of bran, as corn is deficient in that respect. For young and growing stock the foods that contain the mineral elements should be preferred, but where linseed meal and clover are used there will be no necessity for feeding bran. A large number of farmers purchase bran, and it will be to their interests to endeavor to know something of the various kinds on the market, as a falling off in the nutritious elements of the bran used may really cause it to be expensive.

Testing Seeds.

The farmer or gardener should test his seeds before planting them or sowing them, to see how large a proportion of them will germinate. We know of no better way to do this than to place them between two layers of flannel, which place in a plate, moisten with water and cover with another plate, then set in a warm place where it will not freeze nights, and keep the flannel moist. Most of garden seeds should germinate in a few days. Any which do not appear within a week after the first comes may be considered practically valueless, for although some might be more than a week behind the first, and yet sprout finally, where they start so slowly they seldom make vigorous plants. It is a good idea to count the seeds put in, say 100 of each for small seeds, and if 80 to 85 per cent. of them have put out good sprouts at the end of the test they are good seed, and 70 per cent. is a very fair seed, though we would not care to use any that did not test up to that. Of course the time before the first sprout appears varies with different seed. Lettuce might come in three days, and some kinds of grass not in less than three weeks. Carrots are said to germinate better in the soil than under this test, and the same may be true of beets.—American Cultivator.

A Traveling Pig Pen.

While among the farmers in Wisconsin we ran across a novel device—a movable pig pen, which many of our readers who keep in a pen pigs which they want to put out to grass will find very useful.

The illustration will show how it is made. A pair of old wheels of any kind will answer. One corner is roofed over and floored for a sleeping pen or shelter during a storm. A trough is also permanently attached to the opposite corner.

MOVABLE PIG PEN.

The pen can be readily shifted from place to place each day, thus giving the pigs a fresh place and new grass continually.—Farm News.

Oleo Not Steer Fat.

It is always in order to take a whack at oleomargarine, the greatest food fraud of the nineteenth century, says the Racine Journal. The kidney fat of a fat steer, such fat as it is claimed is used for the production of better grades of oleomargarine, will weigh about forty pounds. Assuming that the average cow will produce 160 pounds of butter in a year, it will take four steers to offset one cow as a butter producer. Enough oleomargarine was made last year to offset the product of over 400,000 cows; so, if this choice fat was used alone in its production, 1,600,000 steers were drawn upon, but there was not any such number of steers killed, and so it proves that oleo is not made of that sort of fat.

Feed to Make Pork.

The Wisconsin experiment station has proven that a pig weighing 100 pounds requires one pound of cornmeal and a half pound of wheat middlings to keep it alive without gain or loss. Three pounds a day of the same feed would make a pound of pork, and if the grain cost $20 per ton, the pork would cost 4½ cents a pound, and if he could eat six pounds a day he would gain two pounds at a cost of 3 cents a pound.

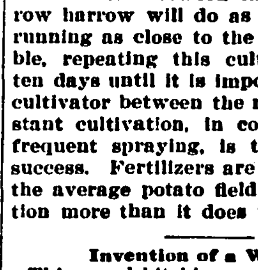
A hog weighing 500 pounds needed five pounds of grain feed to keep him alive and eight pounds to increase his weight one pound a day. This would make the pound of pork cost 8 cents. These figures are for good, thrifty hogs of good breed and are approximately correct, and they show very nearly the economy of killing hogs before they weigh 200 pounds if they can be made fat. But the profit on hogs to the farmer in the West is not so much in the gain from grain feed as that the hog turns unsalable products and the wastes of the farm into that which sells readily.

How to Grow Potatoes.

The natural soil for the potato is that which is fairly rich, warm and dry. The soil should be plowed in the spring (it would have been better to have plowed in the fall and again in the spring) at least a week or two before planting time. If the soil is so moist as to make the growing of late varieties hazardous this may be overcome by exposing the seed tubers to partial sunlight (spread them out under trees), which will cause the starch in the potato to be transformed to sugar. The buds will grow strong and large and the seed will come up much quicker. After planting, cover and ridge the ground so that there will be six or eight inches of soil over the seed. A few days before the potato plant would be through the ground use a cultivator between the rows, a narrow harrow will do as well or better, running as close to the rows as possible, repeating this cultivation every ten days until it is impossible to get a cultivator between the rows. This constant cultivation, in connection with frequent spraying, is the keynote of success. Fertilizers are necessary, but the average potato field needs cultivation more than it does fertilizing.

Invention of a Woman.

This novel hitching post is the invention of a woman. It consists of a pipe or hollow frame, mounted on a suitable base and provided with a hinged cap or cover. Inside this frame a hitching strap, coiled on a shaft actuated by a spring and carrying a snare or swivel at its end, is adjusted, so that it can be uncoiled and attached to the horse's bit in the usual manner. This construction results in a convenient and neat arrangement, as the strap is automatically wound up on the spring drum when not in use and the frame and cover protect it. It is always ready for use, and if the cover is locked or bolted and the frame firmly fastened in the ground, meddling by small boys or vandals is prevented.



HITCHING POST.

Weed Law Arouses Iowans.

Iowans are thoroughly aroused to the execution of a new law requiring weeds in the highways to be cut at a proper time. The statutes require that if in any case the weeds of lands in the public roads are not cut before Aug. 15 it becomes the duty of the road supervisor of the township to take the case in hand. In the event that the land owner does not within three days heed the written reminder given him of the law's requirement, then the supervisor shall cause the weeds on such land to be mown, and he shall make return of his bill for the work at a rate not to exceed $2 per day, which shall be paid from the district road fund. The amount so paid is then entered up and levied against the lands on which said weeds have been destroyed and collected by the county treasurer the same as other taxes. Auditor Millin, of Taylor County, has stated in the newspapers that the call for copies of the road law bearing on weeds was so great that the edition became exhausted, after which the same was printed as regular advertising matter in the newspapers of the State.

Care of Dairy Cows.

Every farmer knows how difficult it is to keep cows clean when they are stalled for the night, and to stanchion them is a system that is not approved by some. One farmer tested the plan of blanketing the cows as a protection against cold, the same as with horses, and found that the use of a blanket increased the flow of milk and made a saving in food, as well as preventing colds and sickness. The floor was littered to the depth of six inches with straw. The only drawback was that frequently the blankets would become soiled, thus necessitating labor in keeping them clean.

A Good Dairy Herd.

The question is often asked whether it is most desirable in developing a good dairy herd to use a full-blooded sire or to buy a number of full-blooded young stock. The quickest way undoubtedly is to buy the young stock, but if you have a number of first-class individual cows, no matter if their breeding is not gilt-edge, an exceedingly fine herd can be built up after a few years by buying a full-blooded sire. The dairyman is more apt to be satisfied with the final results, as in buying young stock there is always danger of getting poor individuals.

The Paris Exposition.

Paris, April 23.—Though work goes on incessantly night and day, the installation of exhibits at France's colossal exposition is greatly retarded. The gates are closed to visitors at 6 o'clock in the evening, when freight cars and wagons are allowed to enter the grounds, and from that time on the exhibition resembles a vast workshop, with its clanging hammers and swarms of French workmen busily engaged on the completion of the interior of the buildings and in arranging the exhibits. Even during visiting hours the work inside the palaces goes steadily forward. The immense crowd present on the opening two days—Easter Sunday and Monday—have now dropped to about half their number, but the exposition officials declare themselves thoroughly satisfied, as the figures still exceed those of the opening days of the exposition of 1889. The attendance now averages about 100,000 daily, about one-half of whom pay for admission. The rolling sidewalk, copied from the original of the Chicago exposition, promises to be a great feature, taking the place of the Eiffel tower of 1889. It is crowded all day long by Parisians, who regard it as much a source of amusement.

THE REBELS ARE AGGRESSIVE

ON THE ISLAND OF LUZON

General Pio del Pilar Has Reappeared—Several Skirmishes Take Place—Filipinos Try to Wreck a Train.

Manila, P. I., April 23.—The insurgents have been aggressive in almost every province of Luzon. Gen. Pio del Pilar's band, numbering 300, which was out of sight for three months, the leader being reported killed, has reappeared in its old field about San Miguel. Pilar is supposed to be again in command. He gave the American garrison at San Miguel, consisting of three companies of the Thirty-fifth infantry, with a Gatling gun, a three hours' fight during a night attack. The loss of the insurgents in this engagement is not known, as they removed their dead and wounded, but presumably it was considerable.

Twenty-two Filipinos in the province of Batangas attacked Lieut, Wende, who, with eight men, was scouting near San Jose. The lieutenant and five men were wounded and one private was killed.

Sergeant Ledonius of the Thirty-fifth infantry was badly wounded in an ambuscade near Baliuag.

Col. Smith of the Seventeenth infantry, who captured Gen. Montenegro and brought him to Manila, is in the isolation hospital, suffering from smallpox.

Col. Smith's command captured 180 officers and men with Montenegro, who was formerly one of the most dapper officers in the Filipino army, looks worn and haggard. He says he led a terrible life for months and he has offered to return to the north with Col. Smith to endeavor to persuade his former comrades of the uselessness of opposing the Americans.

One hundred escaped Spanish prisoners from the provinces of South Luzon have arrived at Manila. The insurgents have 400 more Spanish prisoners in that district.

Recently the Filipinos destroyed several rods of the railroad line near Paniquo, in an unsuccessful attempt to wreck a train.

REPUBLICAN VICE PRESIDENT.

Mr. Manley of the National Committee Names a Few Candidates.

New York, April 23.—Joseph H. Manley, member of the national committee from Maine, in speaking of the present condition of republican politics in regard to the coming vice presidential nomination, said:

"Every one is at sea so far as the vice presidency is concerned and there is absolutely no one of the republican leaders who can today say with certainty who will be nominated. If Theodore Roosevelt had accepted the nomination it would have been tendered him with practical unanimity. But since he has declined to allow his name to be considered the party ought not to force him further.

"Cornelius Bliss also would have been an ideal candidate. His able administration of the department of the interior has given him great strength throughout the west, in which part of the country he is very popular.

"New England can present many candidates who would be acceptable to the country and who would ably fill this high office, but it would be of no political advantage to nominate a man from New England. If, however, the vice presidency should go to this part of the country, Secretary of the Navy Long is the man around whom the delegates will rally.

"If the vice presidential nomination is not to go to New York, however, everything seems now to point to the candidate coming from the northwest and if the right man should be selected from that section it will greatly strengthen the ticket. Senator Spooner of Wisconsin would undoubtedly sweep the northwestern states if he would only consent to the use of his name.

"Senator Wolcott of Colorado has also been mentioned for the vice presidency and if he should be nominated he would add great strength to the ticket in the silver states. Ex-Senator Washburn of Minnesota would also be an admirable candidate. He has the benefit of having been born in Maine and of being a member of one of the most famous and distinguished of our great American families. Washburn has served his country well in the United States senate.

"There is a wealth of material for this great position in almost every part of our country and for that reason it is the more remarkable that as yet there is only one candidate who is openly seeking the office. The convention is less than 60 days off with no concentration as yet on any candidate and from all appearances there will be none until the convention meets."

Boer Guns Silenced.

Bloemfontein, April 23.—Continuing their march, Generals Chermiside and Rundle came into contact with the Boers near Dewet's Dorp. The fighting continued until dark and was principally carried on by the artillery, which temporarily silenced two of the Boer guns. The British guns command the hills for miles around. The Boers are reported to hold strong positions, but are probably retiring. The casualties on the British side were slight and most of them occurred among the Yoemanry and mounted infantry. The firing was at long range. None of the British troops were killed.

Millions for Baseball.

A million of dollars are spent every year upon the game of baseball, but large as this sum is, it cannot begin to equal the amount spent by people in search of health. It strengthens the stomach, makes digestion easy and natural, and cures dyspepsia, constipation, biliousness and weak kidneys.

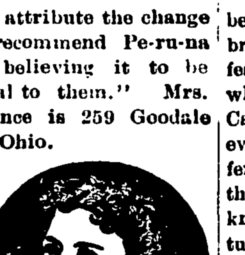
FAIR WOMEN SPEAK.

Pe-ru-na Works Wonders for the Gentler Sex in Catarrhal Ailments.

MRS. COLONEL HAMILTON. | MISS ANNIE WYANDOTTE. | MISS CLARA STOECKER.

That Pe-ru-na has become a household remedy in the home of Mrs. Colonel Hamilton is well attested by a letter from her, which says: "I can give my testimony as to the merits of your remedy, Pe-ru-na. I have been taking the same for some time, and am enjoying better health now than I have for some years. I attribute the change to Pe-ru-na, and recommend Pe-ru-na to every woman, believing it to be especially beneficial to them." Mrs. Hamilton's residence is 259 Goodale street, Columbus, Ohio.



Mrs. Margaretha Dauben, No. 1214 North Superior street, Racine City, Wis., says: "I feel so well and good and healthful now that pen cannot describe it. Pe-ru-na is everything to me. I feel healthy and well, but if I should be sick I would know what to take. I have taken several bottles for female complaint. I am in the change of life and it does me good."

Have you catarrh of the head, throat, lungs, stomach or any other organ of the body? If so, write to Dr. Hartman at once. He will send you directions for treatment without charge. Address Dr. Hartman, Columbus, O.

Miss Annie Wyandotte, queen of the operatic stage and dramatic soprano, says:

"Fifteenth St. and Jackson ave.,
Kansas City, Mo.

"Dr. Hartman:

"Dear Sir—Pe-ru-na has been my salvation. It has given me back a beautiful voice, a gift of God; it has brought me once more to my old profession. I can talk now, and sing, where before, I could scarcely whisper. Can you wonder at my delight? I wish every person who is suffering as I suffered might know Pe-ru-na. Only those who have been afflicted can ever know the intense satisfaction and gratitude that comes with a complete cure. My voice was completely gone. April 15 I felt so elated over the restoration of my voice that I inserted an advertisement in The Star for vocal pupils. The advertisement, which cost me 65 cents, brought me five pupils, and that was the beginning of my present large class. Yours gratefull, Annie Wyandotte."

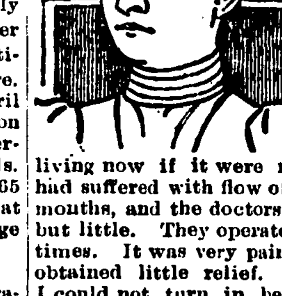
A congestion, inflamation or ulceration of the mucous membrane, whether of the head, stomach, kidneys, or other organ, is known to the medical profession as catarrh. It is known by different names, such as dyspepsia, Bright's disease, female complaint, diarrhoea, bronchitis, consumption and a host of other names. Wherever there is a congested mucous membrane there is catarrh, acute or chronic.

Miss Clara Stoecker says: "I had chronic catarrh for over a year. I tried many remedies, but found no relief until I saw an advertisement in the paper of your treatment for chronic catarrh. I tried it and I think I am now well. I recommend Pe-ru-na to all my friends who are afflicted with catarrh." Miss Stoecker lives at Pittsburg, Pa.



Mrs. Margareth Frits, Wilcox, Oklahoma, writes: "I extend my sincere thanks for the good advice you have given me. I do not believe I would be living now if it were not for you. I had suffered with flow of blood for four months, and the doctors could help me but little. They operated on me three times. It was very painful and I only obtained little relief. I was so weak I could not turn in bed. Then I applied to Dr. Hartman. I did not know whether he could help me or not, but I followed his advice, and used only three bottles of Pe-ru-na and Man-a-lin. Now I am well and strong as I ever was, thanks to your remedies." Pelvic catarrh has become so frequent that most women are more or less afflicted with it. It is usually called female disease.

Taylor Fears Arrest.

New York, April 23.—W. S. Taylor, governor of Kentucky, is in New York, in consequence of the finding of an indictment against him by the grand jury of Frankfort, charging him with being an accessory before the fact of the murder of William Goebel. He has appealed to Governor Roosevelt, asking that any demand for an extradition be denied.

Governor Roosevelt would not say whether he had promised to refuse to sign extradition papers if the warrants against the governor of Kentucky were pressed.

Governor Taylor will remain in New York until he hears what action the authorities of the District of Columbia will take on a requisition from Governor Beckham.

Plague at Manila.

Manila, April 23.—The sudden deaths of Filipinos and Chinamen in Quapaip market has led to an investigation showing that 15 cases of the plague, 14 of which were fatal, have occurred within a week. The market is located in the center of the city. In black, rotten, wooden buildings the keepers of the stalls live with their families, huddled together in great filth. Some of the victims were stricken and died within an hour. There have been several deaths in other sections of the city recently, which have been traced to infection from the market. The total number of bubonic deaths are 119 Chinamen and 66 Filipinos. The plague elsewhere has been suppressed.

—Samples of fall sown wheat have been exhibited in town this week taken from different farms. The grain is about 30 inches long and commenced to head out With a favorable season some of the farmers expect to start harvesting with binders the middle of July. The grain has a fine color and stands thick on the ground.

—Dan Healey had a "hot time" at home Sunday evening. While eating supper Mrs. Healey discovered that the house was on fire and Dan'l had to make some quick moves to save the mansion. He had to chop a hole through the ceiling and roof in order to get water to the blaze. While the damage was small, about $20, the scare was big. The fire originated between the rafters and undoubtedly started by some smoking on some matches. Mr. Brewer had the damage repaired for the insurance company.

—The Hazelwood people are great believers in diversified farming. Mr. Shanks tells the Colfax Gazette: "I cannot understand why the farmers of the Palouse country do not do something with their rich lands other than raise wheat—a crop that impoverishes the land, and can be rarely marketed at a profit. At the Hazelwood farm we make butter and cheese, and fatten live stock, shipping all these articles by the carload throughout the year. We produce and ship eggs by the thousand cases to points in Washington, Idaho, Oregon, British Columbia, and compete with eastern laid eggs. We also ship ice cream. Yet the Hazelwood people are only farmers, who have diversified. The experience of the Hazelwood people recently in fattening hogs is worth talking about. We bought a carload of stock hogs at Rosalia, and fattened them for market on mill feed and skim milk from the separator and whey from the cheese vats. The mill feed cost us at the rate of 40 cents a bushel for wheat and our experiment showed that the hogs fattened and ready for market cost us two cents a pound. I was talking with a farmer near Genesee last week, who, after telling me he had grown 300 acres of wheat last year, said he lost $300 on the crop, and then completed his demonstration of shortsightedness, by stating that he had 300 acres in wheat again this year. Surely, the methods pursued by which a farmer raises good crops, and disposes of them at a good price, without a possibility of making a profit—or even getting a fair return for his labor—is all wrong. Even if wheat farming did pay, the land becomes impoverished, and the profit from the wheat crop is less in amount than the damage to the land through waste and the lessening of the earning capacity of the land during a period not exceeding five years."

—Mrs. D. Watson, and aged lady living on Hatwai creek, died Friday night. The night previous she drank about half a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral and soon after was overcome by deep slumber. All efforts to arouse her failed and she remained in that state until she passed away. The deceased leaves two sons.

—To be sure prices on nails and all iron goods are very high. It is also true goods have advanced on account of the trusts. The trusts should be held in check and both of the great parties are in favor of enacting such laws. But to be effective the laws must be passed by the different states. The price of other products have advanced also. A conservative estimate places the value of products of the farm for last year at $1,600,000,000 more than in either of the preceding years, an average advance of 31 per cent in value compared with the low point. The live stock of the country is said to be worth $700,000,000 more than during the hard times, or a gain of 38 per cent. Staple crops are worth $400,000,000 more than then, while other crops show an increase of $200,000,000 in value, or a gain of 25 per cent compared with two years ago. The total value of cattle on farms is now 41 per cent more than four years ago. The total value of milch cows is 53 per cent greater than in 1896. Sheep are higher than for 20 years, being worth double on the farm what they were five years ago. Real estate which had greatly depreciated, has more than recovered in value, and is estimated to be worth $1,220,000,000 more than in 1888. The sales of poultry and eggs by the farmers' wives in the United States amount to over $300,000,000 last year. About 70 per cent of the farms of the United States are now occupied by their owners, and the amount of mortgages on the farms occupied by their owners is now about $300,000,000 less than they were ten years ago. There is an increased demand for labor, the railroads and manufacturers are taxed to the utmost capacity to supply the wants of the people. Do you wish to change these conditions? We do not believe you do.

—The freight came in yesterday promptly on time.

—R. R. Gray has been having a severe tussle with lagrippe

—Miller Kearns pulled out the first of the week for his old home in Baden, Germany, where his father died and left him a fortune. Mr Kearns loaded up with Genesee's best—product from Wood's Roller Mills—and will visit the world's fair and place same on exhibition. Hope he will come back with a pile of money.

—Catch the fever of improvement. Genesee is as pretty as any of her sister towns, yet improvements can be made. There are numerous places in town that should have attention. Every citizen ought to constitute himself a committee of one to do all within his power to advance the interest of his town. Keep improving. We have a pretty little park that will not only be an ornament to the city but of considerable use from this on if properly handled. The adjoining property is being finely improved by neighbors. Keep up the spirit of improvement. Plant trees, paint, build.

NORMAL NOTES.

This has been a busy season, and much of the time not used in the preparation and recitation of lessons, is profitably passed in social meetings and literary and debating clubs.

There are seven "booming" societies connected with the Normal. The Normal society includes the entire student body and meets every Friday at 2 o'clock p. m. in the auditorium. This society is the only means whereby the students can reach the public, and it makes a practice of giving two or three elaborate programs each year.

Immediately after the adjournment of the Normal society, the students divide into three groups and go into the Clionian, Excelsior and Athenian rooms respectively, where literary work is taken up. Every student must be a member of one of these societies.

One of the most active and instructive societies is the Young Men's Progressive Society. This is a secret organization, and will accept only earnest and deserving young men as members. There are no girls in this society to scare the bashful boys, who, forgetting themselves, become truly eloquent in their earnest discussions and debates.

When the twelve o'clock bells ring, the students get their lunches and gather under the shady trees which decorate the Normal campus to enjoy a hearty meal and a pleasant time, from the effects of the close attention Janitor Mohr gives the campus, it is in excellent condition.

It is with regret that we make known to our friends that Mr. Stephen Knudson, one of our most honored students, will soon depart to seek his fortune. He will leave Seattle on the transport Ohio for Cape Nome, on May 14th. Before leaving he expects to make a short visit with his brother at Nesperce, also with his sister in Spokane.

The Normal base ball team have played their first game. There was no lack of enthusiasm nor purple and white ribbons, but there was a lack of good playing on the part of the Normal team Score, 15 to 14 in favor of Clarkston. Next Saturday will decide whether or not the Normal boys can teach the Genesee boys how to play ball.

The fourth in a series of monthly socials was given at the home of Pres. Knepper, to his Normal Sunday school class. It was a very enjoyable affair. The class, composed of students, gathers in the east room of the M. E. church at 12 o'clock Sundays. The half hour devoted by Pres. Knepper to the study of the lesson passes only too quickly. Pres. Knepper brings out practical thoughts and makes them so forcible that interest never flags in this class.

—This note was found: Bob Wardrobe, one of our young farmers, changed his mind recently. Says he will summer-fallow his flower-garden this summer. Lilacs have lost their charm for him. Cheer up, young man.

—The eighty-first anniversary of the order of Odd Fellows occurred yesterday. The local lodge celebrated the event by giving a seven o'clock supper and a program immediately following. The order is one of oldest in existence.

—John Risse, the boss orchardist of Hatwai, was a Genesee visitor Monday. Said he never saw as fine prospects for all kinds of fruit as at the present time and he has been here many years. Peach, apricot, apple, prunes, plum and cherry trees are a sight to behold now, and the grape and berry bushes are not far behind.

—Fireman D. E. Smith has been a very sick man the past week, but is improved now Saturday he was in a bad condition with inflammation of the bowels. The railroad physician, Dr. Wilson, came down from Pullman Sunday to see the man, and on Monday his sister, Mrs. Dixson, arrived from Ft. Wright to remain a while. Mr. Haskins has been acting as fireman on the lightning express.

—The M. W. Ebel store is no more. The goods were attached by the Lewiston Mercantile Co., Monday, and are now in charge of Constable Hayes. —Emmett, aged 2 years and 4 months, son of Mr. Edwin Peterson, living two miles east of Genesee, was drowned, or rather strangled, in four inches of water Friday afternoon. That day the child was out to play as usual. When absent about half an hour search was instituted and the lifeless body found in a hog-trough into which it must have fallen from the fence. The body was yet warm, but all efforts to bring back life proved futile. The funeral took place Sunday afternoon from the Lutheran chapel, conducted by Rev. Chr. Anderson, and the little one buried in Genesee cemetery. The Peterson people have the sympathy of the entire community. They return thanks to all who so kindly extended assistance.

—Mr. and Mrs. Frank Geselichen royally entertained many of their and relatives last Sunday afand evening, some eighty or more. The guests were given two square meals, dinner and supper, and plenty to drink. The tables were loaded down with the very best of everything the markets afford—ham, chicken, cold meats, vegetables, fruits, jellies, and everything fine in the pastry line. Games of various kinds were played on the handsome lawn and in the house and it was nearly eleven o'clock at night before the happy people said good-bye and departed for their homes. The guests are unanimous in saying they never had a better time and think Mr. and Mrs. Geselichen hard to beat as entertainers.

—The man behind the hoe is in demand now.

—Herman talks Buckeye mowers and rakes in his new advt.

—Mrs. M. A. Means and Marguarite are visiting in Lewiston.

—Messrs. Geo. Vennigerholz and J. L. Naylor, two of Moscow's live citizens, were in Genesee this week.

—Cashier Will Palmer of the Uniontown bank was a Genesee visitor Sunday. Pres. Hilliard is off on a trip to Vermont.

—Attorney Herren has gone astray again, according to the newspapers. Too bad—bright man. His checks are again dishonored, in Portland.

—Morning subject at the Methodist church, Sunday, "The King's highway and its travelers." Evening subject, "False and true standards."

—The Genesee and Potlatch boys played a game of ball the first of the week and at last accounts it was not clear which side won. Better settle it by playing another game.

—Payette people expect to handle and market 1,000,000 pounds of wool this season and receive 20 cents for it. This with other industries will make any community prosperous.

—The secretary of the interior has rendered a decision in the contest case of Robert Shanks vs. Jerome Tierney involving a well improved and valuable quarter sect'on near Volmer The secretary orders a final receipt issued to Tierney, the devisee of Malcolm C. Monroe.

—Louis Olieges is out from Ruby Creek mining district. He brought sample of rich ore from the Providence mine in which H. J. Bundy, Joseph Moresch and others are interested. The ore shows up exceptionally good for the short distance they have penetrated the mountain, and the owners are sanguine they have something that will make them independently rich. Everybody sincerely hopes so Extensive development work will be made this year.

—Two prominent ladies of Moscow died last week—Mrs. Mary Manwaring, aged 85 years, and Mrs. Florence Torson, aged 30 years. The former was born in London, England, within the sound of Bow Bell, and said to resemble Queen Victoria.

—C. E. Wood is experimenting in growing spelt, or German wheat, Peter Johann having sown about 200 pounds of the seed for him. It is claimed to be more productive and will make stronger flour and feed. It is very extensively grown in Germany and Switzerland.

—Feed wheat to hogs. Dan'l Healey is feeding fine wheat to some fifty hogs and weighs them every few days. Each hog gains 1¼ pounds in weight a day and, at the prevailing price of pork Dan is getting fully 60 cents for his grain. Sam Oylear thinks there is big money in hogs. From one hood sow he sold $184 worth of pork the past year.

—Tuesday Commissioner Tweedt inspected the bridges of the Little Potlatch in the Lenville neighborhood. The Oylear bridge, which is about 150 feet in length, was found to be in a bad state of repair. Mr. Tweedt decided that it would be wise economy to tear the structure out, rebuild the same in a new location which will require a bridge of only 50 feet in length. A new bridge will also be built in the same neighborhood. This work can all be done with lumber from the old bridge, and at a cost to the county of less than it would take to repair the old one.

—The republican caucus in Genesee, Saturday, was quite well attended, considering the busy season for the farmers. Only one ticket was put in the field. Seven men were elected from a list of eleven names, as follows: J. W. Hopp, E. T. Platt, Thos. H. Brewer, Rev. W. C. Fowler, W. N. Gibb, Geo. Daggett, L. Jain. The ladies did not show as much interest in this caucus as in the one held two years ago. —Geo. Hobson has been doing considerable improving around his premises this spring. The interior of the dwelling, upstairs and down, has been altered materially—partitions taken out, rooms enlarged, papered and painted—additions and porches added on the east, front yard raised and seeded, and other improvements visible. A neat barn in the rear with a stylish horse and carriage. Mr. and Mrs. Hobson have a comfortable home—one of the very best in Genesee.

COTTON IS AGAIN KING.

FROM a price of 5 cents per pound a few months ago, raw cotton has gone up until it sells today at 9 cents per pound. Worse still—the supply is short, in the face of a demand larger than for many seasons.

The world looks to America for its cotton. As our new crop will not be marketed until 1901, it is unreasonable to look for a drop in cotton goods before that time.

But remember one thing: I purchased all my cotton goods before the advance and am selling them at the last season's prices, giving my customers the advantage of the increase instead of taking the extra profit for myself as our other merchants are doing all over the country.

My new spring stock is now complete and at the low prices of last year.

The appraised valuation of the estate of Cornelius Vanderbilt amounts to about $6,000,000. Exclusive of the residuary estate, which is held in trust for Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, the valuation of properties calculated from the amount of inheritance tax is only $32,000,000. This inheritance tax amounts to $320,272, which has been paid and receipted for by Comptroller Coler. This sum represents what was the property of Cornelius Vanderbilt in New York, but does not include the transfer tax on the $5,000,000 left to Cornelius Vanderbilt by his father, William H. Vanderbilt, with power of appointment. The estate of Cornelius Vanderbilt was supposed to have been worth at least $125,000,000. At the time of Cornelius Vanderbilt's death last September Chauncey M. Depew estimated that the entire estate was worth $70,000,000.

The will of Rufus Wright, who was mysteriously shot and killed in the Leland Hotel at Chicago, has been filed for probate. It disposes of an estate valued at $800,000. Rich Strike Near Nome.

Seattle, April 23.—A big strike, in which gold running as high as $40 to the pan was found, has been made 100 miles east of Nome.

This information was brought to this city Saturday by three men who arrived on the Steamer Cottage City from Nome. They are J. D. Morgan, J. H. Fredericks and E. Erickson. These three left Cape Nome January 6 and traveled overland to Kadiak, where they took a steam whaler to Sitka, there transferring to the Cottage City.

The strike was made on a creek. The first several pans ran from about $25 to $35. As bedrock was scraped, the amount reached $40. Great excitement followed. A stampede has taken place from Nome, but only those who were footloose took part in it, the rest believing that they had as good property as they wanted.

Mr. Morgan said today: "Cape Nome and the contigious country is richer than people have estimated. There will be this summer the greatest mining camp the world has ever seen."

The Morgan party is credited with having $60,000, all Cape Nome gold. The parties will equip themselves with everything of the best and return to Nome on the first steamer.

Uncle Sam May Interfere.

New York, April 24.—The capture of Bocas Del Toro and the threatened attack on Colon may compel forcible intervention by the government of the United States to preserve "the perfect neutrality" of the isthmus, guaranteed by the United States in the treaty of 1846. A treaty exists between the United States and Colombia by which, in exchange for certain concessions made by the United States, this country guaranteed "positively and efficaciously" the "perfect neutrality of the isthmus of Panama," and also guaranteed the rights of sovereignty and property of the republic of Colombia in and over the territory of the isthmus as included within the borders of the department of Panama.

Wheat Warehouses Leased.

Tacoma, April 24.—The Northern Pacific railway has leased three immense wheat warehouses to G. W. McNear & Co. of San Francisco, Balfour, Guthrie & Co. of San Francisco and Tacoma and Kerr, Clifford & Co. of Portland. They will hold 2,500,000 bushels, doubling the capacity of the local wheat warehouses.

Hanford Goes to West Point.

Seattle, April 3.—Edward C. Hanford, son of United States District Judge Hanford, has received word from the war department that he will be appointed a cadet at West Point next July.

Under the laws of Idaho all property sold for delinquent taxes becomes the property of the purchaser absolutely if not redeemed within five years. This relates to delinquent sales as far back as 1895, and the property sold then will thus pass beyond the right of redemption next July.

The Boise sub-committee that had an interview with Mr. Harriman and President Burt of the Union Pacific at Salt Lake last week, reported to the full committee that the decision of the railway officials in effect was that the plan for bringing the main line in there was not practicable. The company said that two of the main line trains would be run in there. President Burt will visit Boise in about two weeks and will go over the entire subject.

Edward McNally, whose home is in Rochester, N. Y., while on his way east last week on the Great Northern, when at Essex, several miles east of Kalispell, stepped to the platform and looked out. His head struck the coal chute and he was knocked off the train and badly mangled. One leg and one arm were severed from his body and he was injured internally. He died.

Citizens of Butte are becoming terrorized owing to the utter inability of physicians to cope with the disease which, for lack of a better name, has been called pneumonia. The death rate is alarming and is constantly increasing. One doctor when told that it was not pneumonia, asked: "Well, what is it, then? Heart failure after the disease has reached the climax?" The illness is always of short duration, from one to two days. Richard Trembath, telegraph editor of the Inter-Mountain, was taken ill on Saturday night and died Monday morning.

The Pendleton Weekly Republican, of which J. P. McManus was editor and manager, the plant being owned by Mrs. Mary A. Murphy, has been sold to Elmer P. Dodd, owner of the Pendleton Semi-Weekly Tribune, and the business of the two papers will be combined, the Tribune absorbing the Republican.

William Gibson of Pendleton, Ore., a buyer of cattle, has purchased 295 head from three stock men on Butter creek. J. B. Saylor furnished him 187, R. N. Stanfield 60 and Jesse Moore 45. They constitute a choice lot of cattle, which have been kept by the Butter creek stock men throughout the winter, and came through to the spring in fine condition. The Saylor lot average 1400 pounds apiece, and of the others 100 weigh the same as the Saylor cattle, and the balance average 1200 pounds. They will be shipped to the Sound. These 295 head constitute but a small portion of the total of 2000 head of fat cattle which are held in the Butter creek country, and the fact that these stock men sold yesterday may indicate that the expressed intention on the part of the stock men in that region to hold until fall has been changed, and from this time on frequent sales may take place.

Died on the Gallows.

San Francisco, April 24.—Joaquin Eslabe, the Oakland murderer, died on the gallows at San Quentin Monday. He met his death bravely.

BOERS CONTEST EVERY STEP

BOTH SIDES GET DRENCHED.

The Trenches Full of Water—Many Skirmishes Take Place—Quiet at Ladysmith—Boers Are Mustering Every Man Possible.

Wakkerstrom, April 24.—After yesterday's shelling it was expected that the Boers would open again, but Colonel Brabazon with the yeomanry made a thorough scout to the left. The Boers endeavored to turn the British right wing, but the movement was detected by the yeomanry and mounted infantry and the guns opened fire and drove them off, greatly extending the position. None of the Boer guns were in action. Many of the Boers are moving southward.

At Jammersburg Drift.

Boer Camp, Thabanchu, Orange Free State, April 24.—Fighting continues day and night at Jammersburg drift. The English entrenchments have been so full of rain that the men have been obliged every now and then to clamber to the banks, only to be shot down.

The Boers were so drenched on Saturday that they were unable to sleep, so they started a debate on the subject of the good to be derived from virtue and courage. The discussion lasted most of the night, shells at intervals interrupting the speakers.

Contesting Every Step.

London, April 24.—General Rundle is apparently advancing slowly toward Wepener, every step being contested by the Boers. From the republic side there is a good deal of interesting news.

A Thabanchu dispatch reports the arrival there of Commandants Dewit and Villers and an attack upon 3000 British under General Gatacre. The latter, of course, is a misstatement, and it is probable that General Rundle is meant. The British, it is added, occupied some kopjes, but their left wing was driven back. The Boer loss was one killed and five wounded.

From Brandsfort comes the news that a British patrol of ten men ventured near that place and suffered the loss of one man killed and two men captured, including a Free Stater, who was leading the party.

As Told at Pretoria.

London, April 24.—A Pretoria dispatch says the latest official news was that fighting was proceeding within an hour's ride of Dewitsdorp, with no results. The Transvaal government, it is added, has asked Lord Roberts to be allowed to send a clergyman to St. Helena and also a neutral consul to watch the interests of the prisoners in the same manner as Adelbert Hay guards the interests of the British at Pretoria.

A proclamation has been issued prohibiting the working of the mines on Sundays and inflicting punishment on managers paying over one pound a month to natives.

From Ladysmith comes a dispatch saying all is quiet and the Boer guns are silent. There is nothing further from Bloemfontein to indicate the progress of the preparations for the main advance.

At Cape Town a government contractor named Bam has been arrested for harboring three escaped Boer prisoners, dressed as clergymen.

The Boers are reported as mustering every man capable of carrying a rifle and as taking their ambulance corps into the fighting line. They are alleged to have from 8000 to 10,000 men in the district between Dewitsdorp and Wepener, where heavy fighting is reported Friday and Saturday. They are also described occupying a line ten miles long in upper Natal and as shelling the British positions at Elandslaagte on Saturday with unabated spirit. The motive of this activity is not clear, but it is surmised that the Boers are anxious to prevent the transfer of British forces from Natal to Bloemfontein and Boshof, which apparently is still in progress.

Horrible Accident.

Rossland, B. C. April 23.—Lilly Garland, a pretty, bright girl of 11, met with a terrible accident at the No. 1 mine Saturday. While the hoist cage was in the head works she looked over the guard rail of the shaft in a position where neither the engineer nor the brakeman could see her. The car, descending, caught her head between the stop bar of the car and the guard rail. The girl is sensible, feels no pain and has a slight chance of recovery, but there is danger of insanity.

Queen's Review at Dublin.

Dublin, April 23.—Special trains brought thousands of visitors to this city to witness the queen's review of the naval, cavalry and infantry brigades and the boys of the Royal Hibernian military school. Fifteen acres of Phoenix Park were occupied by troops under command of the duke of Connaught. It is estimated that 200,000 persons witnessed the review of the 10,000 troops and blue jackets. When the queen passed down the line the cheering everywhere was tremendous.

Colson Not Guilty.

Frankfort, Ky., April 23.—Ex-Congressman David G. Colson, who has been on trial here for the last few days for the murder of Lieutenant Scott and Leuther Demaree, was acquitted by the verdict of the jury. The jury was out only 18 minutes. The crowd of spectators had remained in the court room waiting to hear the report of the jury. There was silence as the jury filed into the room, but there was no demonstration until Circuit Clerk Ford finished reading the verdict, which read: "We, the jury, find the defendant not guilty."

After a struggle of fifteen years, the carpenters of Cincinnati have obtained the eight-hour work-day and $2.40 a day from the contractors and builders. The working agreement takes effect June 1.

Trade Report.

Bradstreet's report for the past week says:

More, rather than less, irregularity in the trade and price situation is to be noted this week, partly as the result of weather conditions, but partly in the case of the iron and steel trade, because of the continuance of those efforts in the direction of lower prices, which have been such a feature of the iron and steel trade of late. That the basic conditions of trade remain on the whole favorable is,, however, evidenced by a number of features. Railroad earnings continue heavy and the decrease noted in bank clearings is chargable largely to religious and other holiday observations and to restricted stock speculation. Heavy rains and a cool spell of weather early in the week had a depressing effect on trade and collections, but with the advent of a warm spring temperature improved conditions of retail demand, which is at present a most important element in the general trade situation, have been noted.

The bear campaign in iron and steel took on a new phase this week, when a number of new wire mills were shut down as alleged, because of an over supply of these goods. The announcement has had an unsettling effect upon general demand as was probably expected, and new domestic business is interfered with. The strength of the export demand previously noted in these columns, however, is still a feature, and we have the best of reasons for believing that a very large quantity of southern iron sold this week to go abroad at nearly or about full prices. The price changes are along lines heretofore noted, though some sympathetic weakening of pig iron is reported. Wire prices are apparently unchanged. Steel billets are weak at the decline.

Wool is weak, but there is rather more inquiry and now as one year ago relatively highest prices rule at points of production.

Backward conditions have affected the lumber trade demand, but in this, as in a number of other lines, the advanced prices demanded are credited with checking business. The pressure of heavy supplies is responsible for the slight weakening shown in the price of raw sugar this week, while the refined market remains unchanged. Weather influences are again reflected in the market for dairy products, which have weakened under large receipts.

Wheat (including flour) shipments for the week aggregate 3,898,351 bushels, against 2,896,653 bushels last week, 2,959,900 bushels in the corresponding week of 1899, 3,122,106 bushels in 1898, 1,654,668 bushels in 1897, and 1,286,490 bushels in 1896. Since July 1 this season the exports of wheat aggregate 157,804,507 bushels, against 193,262,119 bushels last year, and 191,503,636 bushels in 1897-98.

Business failures in the United States for the week number 161, against 152 last week, 187 in the week a year ago, 224 in 1898, 216 in 1897 and 240 in 1896. Failures for the week in Canada number 19, as compared with 35 last week, 30 in this week a year ago, 15 in 1898, 22 in 1897, and 28 in 1896.

Foreign Mission Conference.

New York, April 23.—Nearly every nation in the world is represented at the ecumenical conference on foreign missions, which began its session here Saturday, and Carnegie hall was crowded to its greatest capacity. Ex-President Benjamin Harrison occupied the chair as honorary president at the opening session, and tonight the delegates were addressed by President McKinley and Governor Roosevelt. When the time came for the opening of the conference, there were representatives from every branch of the Christian church except the Roman Catholic, the Greek and that branch of the Anglican church known as the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel. There were no decorations in the great hall except huge maps of the eastern and western hemispheres, showing the fields in which the missionaries labor. These were suspended back of the stage. General Harrison, escorted by a committee, appeared on the platform at 2:25 o'clock. He was applauded, and bowed his acknowledgments. He at once took his seat as presiding officer, Rev. Judson Smith, D. D., as chairman of the general committee, introducing him. Chairman Harrison then introduced Rev. H. C. Mabie of Boston, who offered prayer. General Harrison then took the platform and delivered his speech, reading from manuscript. General Harrison was applauded many times.

Nails and Wire to Cost Less.

New York, April 23.—At the local offices of the American Steel & Wire company an employe confirmed the report that the reduction of $20 per ton had been ordered in the price of wire nails, barbed wire and galvanized fence wire, with an $8 cut in annealed fence wire. This is equivalent to a reduction of 1 cent a pound in wire nails, making the price $2.20 a keg. The price for barbed wire is $2.80 a hundredweight, and for galvanized fence nails, $2.25 a hundredweight. The cut in annealed fence wire is from $3.05 to $2.15 a hundredweight.

Shingle Trust in Trouble.

Seattle, April 23.—The gravest crisis that has ever confronted the shingle manufacturers of this state is facing them now. There is a strong probability that enough of the mills will not carry out the request of their association to close down for the two weeks beginning April 28 to make it effective, and if this materializes several of the largest mills say they will withdraw from the association, cut prices and fight their battles alone.

His Last Hope Is Gone.

Washington, April 24.—The supreme court has refused to grant a writ of certiorari in the case of Oberlin M. Carter, convicted by court martial for irregularities while in charge of engineer work in Georgia.

A DESTRUCTIVE FOREST FIRE

WAS NEAR WINNIPEG, CANADA.

Flames Reach for a Distance of Fifty Miles—Five Hundred Men Are Entrapped—Number of Lives Lost and Much Property Destroyed.

Winnipeg, April 23.—The city Saturday was in a fever of excitement, caused by the bush fires raging along the line of the Southeastern railway. All the country from La Brouquire, about 50 miles down the line to Warren, a distance of 75 miles, is known to be in the grasp of the fire, which swept the forest in all directions, fanned by a strong easterly wind. The number of human beings entrapped is estimated at fully 500, composed chiefly of scattered settlers and men employed in the lumber camps of J. A. Buchanan, Neil & Keith and J. T. Heylan, who have 150 men and 50 teams at work near Vassar, a station about 80 miles out.

An operator at Woodbridge, 10 miles this side of Vassar, reports that the special bearing Buchanan and Keith's men and railway officials when within four miles of Vassar, had been driven back by the flames. From stragglers who have escaped it was learned that 100 teams had been abandoned and that the men scattered for their lives in all directions. One hundred thousand ties and 10,000 cords of wood were burned, and the camps were entirely encircled by the flames.

It is believed that Woodbridge is burned and the train entrapped. The forest along the track is dense, and retreat will be impossible. A train with a strong force of men, doctors and supplies has been dispatched and reached La Brouquire safely. Beyond that the whole forest is a mass of flames and advance is impossible, as the track is burned and the retreat of the special train is cut off.

Tonight the wires are down, and no news whatever can be obtained.

Reports Exaggerated.

Winnipeg, Manitoba, April 24.—The latest reports from the bush fires near the Minnesota boundary line show that there has been no loss of life. Several lumbering and tie camps were destroyed, but both men and horses escaped. The losses to Winnipeg contractors in lumber and wood destroyed will amount to about $100,000.

As England Sees Us.

London.—The Croton (N. Y.) strike calls forth many expressions of opinion. The Speaker deals with it lengthily as perhaps the first outbreak of the long predicted war between labor and capital the world over and says it "believes the United States will eventually be compelled to adopt more severe restrictions on immigration and strengthen its available forces for the immediate suppression of incipient insurrections," adding: "America, to remain as she is, must cease to be the refuge of destitute mankind." The same paper, dealing with the proposed amendment to the constitution providing for the election of senators by popular vote, declares that the senate "now swarms with millionaires, who are believed to purchase election by large gifts to campaign funds, and who make it nearly impossible for the president to have a foreign policy," adding: "The Hay-Pauncefote treaty, for example, was blocked, not because its provisions were disliked, but because it might help McKinley's candidacy. The people are growing weary of this and the vote of the house marks their desire to make in some way a radical change in the composition of their house of lords."

Poor English Generals.

London, April 23.—Last week was a sad week for the British generals. The brewing storm that was overhanging their heads received its electric spark through the publication of Lord Roberts' censures regarding the engagement at Spion Kop. It descended in a merciless torrent from an unanimous press. At the present moment General Buller could find no better way to endear himself to the hearts of the people than to request his recall; but one who knows the Natal commander intimately tells the representative of the Associated Press that he is far too thick skinned to take such a step and will stick to his post despite all criticisms and avalanches of adverse public opinion. Nor is Lord Kitchener spared in the present outbreak. There is a story going the rounds of the clubs that the "great man of the Soudan" has been severely sat upon by the "little man of Afghanistan," and specific instances of disagreements between them are quoted.

LABOR NOTES.

Japs are still continuing to come into the United States in great numbers.

Six hundred thousand trades unionists were represented at a conference recently held in London.

All the employes of the Robinson basket factory at Painesville, O., have struck for an increase of wages.

The Labor World (Japan) stigmatizes the factory system in Japan as "simply a slaughter-house of human beings!"

The New York Central Federated Union, with which a hundred district and local labor bodies are affiliated, has adopted a resolution congratulating "the united Socialist party on the achieved harmony, and that we endorse every sentiment expressed in the resolutions regarding organized labor."

Cigarmakers are still on strike against the Kerbs, Wertheim concern in New York, and nearly all employes in the Lancaster, Pa., branch factory have also gone out. The firm is now buying up sweatshop goods, which are palmed off on the trade.

All the carpenters on Staten Island, N. Y., are on a strike for an eight-hour day for five days of the week and a four-hour day on Saturday. The minimum rate of wages demanded is 40 cents an hour, with double pay Sundays and holidays.

In the Senate.

After a discussion lasting more than two hours Saturday, the senate agreed to the two resolutions offered by Senator Bacon, calling upon the secretary of war for information as to the allowances made to army officers stationed in Cuba and Puerto Rico and the sums expended in providing quarters, equipages and other conveniences for them. The debate took a wide range, many senators participating in it.

In an extended discussion of the subject, Senator Platt of Connecticut expressed the opinion that it would be found that no officer had received an additional salary. Allowances probably had been made, and he deemed such allowances as perfectly proper. He pointed out that Cuba was not now and probably never would be a part of the United States.

Senator Bacon, the author of the resolutions, discussed them at some length. He dissented strongly from the proposition that the president could collect and disburse, according to his unrestrained judgment, the resources of Cuba. He did not have that unlimited power.

The resolutions were agreed to without division.

A bill increasing the limit of cost for the Leadville, Colo., public building to $117,000 was passed soon after the senate convened.

At the request of Senator Cullom the conference report on the Hawaiian civil government bill was laid before the senate. It was disagreed to and a new conference requested, Senators Cullom, Morgan and Clark of Wyoming being named as conferees.

Senator Jones of Arkansas offered and secured the adoption of a resolution requesting the attorney general "to send to the senate a statement of the action taken by him in the case of George Cruse, a resident of Puerto Rico, alleged to have been brought into this country under a contract to labor and what steps have been taken or are in contemplation looking to proceedings against the said George Cruse or the party bringing him into the United States."

The Quay resolution was taken up and Senator Perkins spoke in favor of the seating of Mr. Quay as a senator from Pennsylvania on the appointment of the governor. He said he was not actuated by assuming this position by mere personal motives, but that he was controlled by the law and the constitution.

Senator Chandler, from the senate committee on privileges and elections, Monday submitted to the senate the report from that committee in he case of Senaor Clark of Montana. The report is comparatively brief, covering only about 15 pages of printed matter. It does not rehearse the testimony, but simply presents the findings of the committee and its reasons for its course.

The finding of the committee is that the election to the senate of William A. Clark of Montana was null and void on account of briberies and corrupt practices by his agents and the violation of the law of Montana defining and punishing crimes against the elective franchises. In view of the finding the committee reports and unanimously recommends the adoption by the senate of the following resolution:

"Resolved, That William A. Clark was not duly and legally elected to a seat in the senate of the United States by the legislature of the state of Montana."

The committee says the direct violation by Clark and his committee and agents of the provisions of the Montana laws are of the first importance in connection with the conclusions reached by the committee.

Lloyd Griscom, the United States charge d'affaires at Constantinople, has cabled the state department that the Turkish minister of foreign affairs has informed the ambassador that the porte will not raise the tariff duties without previous agreement with the powers.

In the House.

The house resumed consideration of the naval appropriation bill Thursday. A point of order raised by Mr. Cannon was pending against the appropriation of $350,000 for the naval academy at Annapolis. The decision upon it was waived temporarily and the section relating to ocean and lake surveys was taken up under an arrangement for an hour's debate on each side. Mr. Cannon offered as an amendment to the section which appropriated $100,000 for surveys of the islands of Guam, Hawaii, the Philippines, Puerto Rico and Cuba, and charting the obstructions of the great lakes, a provision appropriating $10,000 for continuing the ocean surveys. The amendment occasioned considerable debate.

The cross examination of Dr. Hugh France was continued Thursday before the Coeur d'Alene investigation. It was mainly directed to showing Dr. France's connection with the permit system. Representative Sulzer and Attorney Robertson asked a series of questions tending to show that the system was void of the fundamental right to seek employment and that those seeking work without a permit were committed to the "bullpen."

The house Saturday passed the naval appropriation bill without division. All amendments made in the committee of the whole were agreed to. The remainder of the session was devoted to eulogies of the late Representative Evans Settle of Kentucky.

The house committee on insular affairs voted to amend the Foraker resolution on Puerto Rico so as to make franchises and concessions inoperative until approved by the president, and placing rigorous restrictions on charters to private corporations.

In the house Monday, on motion of Mr. Hepburn, unanimous consent was given to set aside May 1 and 2 for the consideration of the Nicaraguan canal bill.

Massacres by the "Boxers."

Tien Tsin, April 24.—Members of the Boxers Society have massacred many Chinese Catholics near Taro Ting Fu, in the Province of Pechilli, southwest of Tien Tsin. The German gunboat Iltis has arrived at Taku.

Terry McGovern failed to whip Tommy White in six rounds at Chicago.

TO DESTROY THE MINES

A RUMOR IS AGAIN AFLOAT.

Another Attempt at the Relief of Mafeking — General Carrington Will Make the Attempt—Boers Said to Oppose Him.

London, April 20.—The arrival of General Carrington at Beira, Portuguese East Africa, and a reiteration of the report that the Boers intend blowing up the Johannesburg mines are the only items of news that mark recent war cables.

Weeks must elapse before General Carrington will be able to concentrate his force on the borders of the Transvaal or approach Mafeking.

According to a rumor in circulation at Lorenzo Marquez a Boer force has been sent to intercept General Carrington, but it is not thought to be of sufficient strength to cause any anxiety.

The Natal Mercury is responsible for the renewed fears concerning the mines, printing accounts from newly arrived refugees saying that elaborate preparations for the destruction of all the Johannesburg shafts have been carried on under the supervision of the state mining engineer, who is alleged to have requisitioned all the copper wire in the town for the purpose of making connections.

According to a dispatch from Ladysmith the Boers are much disconcerted by the present condition of affairs. Their fortifications and forces, numbering 15,000 men, are spread over ridges in contemplation of a British advance through the Waschbank valley north of Ladysmith, which has not been occupied. The Boer patrols are active and constantly laying traps.

A proclamation issued at Cape Town today allows trading between Cape Colony and the occupied portions of the Orange Free State to be resumed.

A patrol of cape police near Boshof yesterday captured two Boer oxen, some wagons and 200 head of cattle. Two Germans, who recently arrived at Cape Town, have been sentenced to a year's imprisonment for having suspicious possession of 100 rifles and 600 cordite cartridges.

No Guns at Pretoria.

London, April 20.—A dispatch to the Daily News from Cape Town says:

"A gentleman just arrived from the Transvaal assured me that not a single gun remains in the Pretoria forts."

Insurgent Leader Surrendered.

Manila, April 20.—General Montenegro, one of the insurgents' best fighters, has surrendered to Colonel Smith in the mountains near Camaling, in the province of Pangasinan, where, with General Macabulos, he had been trying to reorganize the Filipino army.

Colonel Smith, with five companies of the Seventeenth regiment, nearly surrounded the force of Montenegro, who, discouraged by the impossibility of making his men stand against the Americans, surrendered. Macabulos escaped. The insurgents have attacked San Jose in the province of Batangas and Santa Cruz on the lake fruitlessly.

Twelve hundred Tagalos attacked Case's battalion headquarters of the Fortieth regiment at Cagayon, island of Mindanao, on the 7th. The Americans had 15 casualties, while of the attacking force 50 were killed and 30 wounded or taken prisoners.

The enemy, numbering 150 riflemen, the remainder being bolomen, archers and mounted spearmen, swooped down in a howling mass at daylight, surprising and killing three of the sentries. They swarmed through the streets in small parties, some bearing scaling ladders by means of which they attempted to enter the houses.

The Americans tumbled out of the barracks and formed in the plazas and companies began swooping the town. The subsequent street fighting lasted 20 minutes. Twelve of the Americans are now on board the hospital ship Relief.

The enemy withdrew to the mountains in great confusion.

Sheepskins—Shearlings, 10c each; short wool pelts, 30-50c; medium wool, 50-75c; long wool, 75c-$1.

Tallow—No. 1, 4c lb; No. 2 3c per lb.

Hides—Dry, No. 1 (16 lbs and upward), 12-14c; salted hides, steers (60 lbs and over), 7c; cows and all steers under 60 lbs, 6c; calfskins, salted 8c, salted kip 7c; stags and bulls, 4½c.

The local mills pay the following prices for grain, delivered: Club wheat 40c bulk, 42-43c sacked; bluestem, 42c bulk, 45c sacked; red, 38c bulk, 40-43c sacked.

Portland.—Most of the wheat buyers were indifferent about quoting over 53c for Walla Walla, but an occasional quotation of 54c was heard. For valley 53c is about the best figure offered, and bluestem is easy at 56-57c. A reduction of 5c per barrel has been made in a few brands of valley flour.

Tacoma. — There is little doing in wheat and prices show no change. Bluestem 56c, club 54c.

United States and Turkey.

Unless the sultan of Turkey acts very promptly Ali Ferrough Bey, the Turkish minister, will be given his passports and diplomatic relations between the United States and Turkey will be suspended until the sultan pays $100,000 due citizens of the United States.

It is understood that an ultimatum stating that diplomatic relations will be severed unless the claims are paid is ready for presentation to the Turkish government. It is known at the department that the Turkish minister advised his government yesterday relative to the situation and time will be given for the sultan to act before the ultimatum will be issued.

There has been some discussion of the plan, in the event that the sultan still continues obstinate, to seize a port of Turkey and collect customs to an amount equal to the claim. It is believed that international complications could be averted by notifying the continental powers that it was the intention of the United States to remain in possession of the port only long enough to collect the money. The administration is adverse, however, to going beyond a severance of diplomatic relations. No serious thought has been given to a military or naval demonstration, as the administration has all the war on hand it cares to deal with for the present. Should Ali Ferrough Bey be given his passports it would amount to saying that Turkey is a dishonest government. The state department officials believe that the sultan will not be willing to have his country thus advertised to the world.

Inquiries made by the Associated Press regarding the attitude of Great Britain and other powers towards the American-Turkish difficulties reveal the fact that no one has any intention of interfering in any way. The British government officials do not disguise their delight at the stand taken by Washington.

Sultan Is Friendly.

Constantinople.—Mr. Lloyd C. Griscom, United States charge d'affaires, has had a long private audience with the sultan, which was very cordial. Such an audience with the American charge d'affaires is unprecedented and is, therefore, considered important in the present circumstances.

The United States legation is without information as to the state of the indemnity question at Washington, while the porte officials say they are unaware of the strained relations raised over this question.

THREE GENERALS UNDER BAN.

They Are All Roasted by General Roberts.

London, April 19.—Lord Roberts' criticism of General Buller, General Warren and General Thornycroft continues to be a topic of interest. All of the afternoon papers comment at length on the strictures of the British commander-in-chief in South Africa, taking the same lines as the morning papers and praising Lord Roberts for his frankness, and speculating upon what the publication of the dispatches at the present moment portends.

It is persistently stated in military circles that Lieutenant General Charles Warren, commander of the Fifth division of the South African field force, has been ordered to return home.

Some of them maintain that there is nothing left for General Buller but to resign. The St. James Gazette is particularly scathing. Referring to General Buller's report, it said:

"Never in the history of armies did it happen that generals scribbled their confessions of fault and defect, of useless deaths of men, and of discredit to the flag in a manner which suggests a careful selection from the jocular manner, the slangy language of the horseman, and the gabble of the smoking room in the evening."

The Globe declares:

"A more pitiable record of indecision in plan and confusion in execution we have seldom read," and adds that what little reputation General Buller had left has been scattered to the winds.

From the Seat of War.

Practically no developments have been reported so far in South African cables:

A dispatch from Warrenton, dated April 17, says:

"Finding that the Boers were busy making new trenches, we exploded lyddite shells, following up these with the Maxims. The enemy's ambulance was afterwards observed on the spot.

From Wepener there is nothing later than Lord Roberts' message of yesterday, and presumably neither side has gained any particular advantage at any point in the theater of war since the last official dispatches were received.

Colonel Dalgety's Losses.

Maseru, April 19.—Colonel Dalgety's casualties since he has been besieged at Wepener have been 20 killed and 100 wounded. The Boer losses are reported to have been considerably heavier.

After the night attack on April 12 the dead were left on the field, where they still lie unburied.

There is a conflict of opinion among the Boer leaders. Some want to attack again, while others refuse to do so. Desultory cannon firing and "sniping" continues.

The Calendon is rising, which alarms the Boers, who are now on both sides of the river and might be cut off if the stream was to become flooded.

Five Boer guns are believed to be disabled.

Appeal to the Colonists.

Cape Town, April 19.—The Boer governments are circulating the following manifesto to Afrikanders throughout the Cape Colony:

"We feel that our fate and the fate of the whole of Afrikandom is at stake, and we appeal to you to stand and fight shoulder to shoulder with us. You can not, you must not allow the tyrant to extinguish forever your finest traits of character as a nation.

With you on our side the issue can not be doubted. We must conquer. God grant that love for your country and your liberty and the noble virtues of men truly free may induce you to join us in the hour of our supreme struggle."

MINES AND MINING NEWS

OUR NORTHWESTERN MINES.

Items Gleaned From Late Reports—All Districts Are Being Developed—A Prosperous Year Is Predicted—Mining Notes and Personals.

A lode includes everything between the hanging and footwalls, and, even if outside, there may be an impregnation of country rock of equal value to that in the fissure that also is a part of the "lode."

REPUBLIC.

Kettle river falls power is to be used for development of Boundary mines.

Republic's big mill plant is to be shipped in by wagon and 70 teams are now hauling.

Good progress is reported by the drill on the Stray Horse. The new hole is 500 feet deep.

Frank Gauthier, superintendent of the Golden Harvest, states that the tunnel is in 90 feet, and that the average width of the vein is about six feet.

A watchman is holding the keys and looking after the machinery at the Princess Maud.

The new winze on the Morning Glory is going down about three feet per day. The ore values are not obtainable.

There is no change to report in the situation at the Blacktail. It is getting to be a bigger mine every day.

About the usual progress is being made on the Rebate tunnel—15 feet a week. Only a small force is employed.

The work of driving the south drift on the San Poil continues steadily. From two to three feet per day is added to the length of the drift. It is in about 550 feet.

The two compartment shaft on the Tom Thumb is 185 feet deep. The mine is said to be looking well. The values are as high as ever, and the ledge is still about eight feet wide.

The Butte & Boston shaft is going down at the rate of 18 inches per day, and has reached a depth of 115 feet. The mine is finely equipped and the work is done in the best manner. It will have to be sunk as much deeper before the ledge is cut. In the old shaft the ore was remarkably rich.

The plant of the Chico compressor is ready to run, and the superintendent is awaiting orders to start work. The plant is complete, and those who are judges of machinery claim that it is first-class in every respect. It is expected that the work of continuing the shaft will begin some time this week. It will take a day or two to pump the water out of the shaft and drifts. The shaft is 200 feet deep and there is at least 125 feet of water in it.

BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Development is being prosecuted on the Iron Mask mine by Superintendent Hall, with a view to blocking out a large reserve of ore before resuming regular shipments.

Canadian Queen and Dumas groups, two Ymir properties, are being opened up with good results. The Dumas, on Wild Horse creek, is soon to be incorporated.

Andrew J. Drewry who is in charge of operations on Sunset No. 2, has received a telegram from J. C. Drewry, the managing director of the Canadian Goldfields Syndicate, directing him to shut down operations.

Recent development in the North Star mine in East Kootenay has shown up another large body of ore and added fully $1,000,000 to the reserves in sight. They are running a five-drill compressor and employing 90 men, and are shipping 75 tons of high-grade ore a day to the Great Falls smelter.

The mining outlook is brightening all around Kaslo. English capitalists are becoming interested in adjacent camps. Ernest Mansfield, whose South Fork deals have won him notoriety, is returning from London to put another transaction through, while J. C. Blythe, who represents English capitalists, cabled from Liverpool that everything is most satisfactory regarding the proposed smelter.

It is probable that almost the entire output of the Rossland mines will hereafter be smelted at Northport. The Le Roi is already shipping its ores across the line for treatment, and it is expected that as soon as the other big shippers begin regular delivery of their products the Northport smelter will be the chief receiving point.

One of the most promising mining regions in British Columbia is the Lardo-Duncan district, and there seems to be every probability that 1900 will mark the turning point to prosperity there. Kaslo is the outfitting place for the mines of that section and the only communication in to the country is by way of that city. The Kootenay Railway & Navigation Company has just placed a fine steamer on the route from Kaslo to Duncan City. The Argenta, for that is the boat's name, made her initial trip up the Duncan river last week. She is the first steamer of any size that ever conquered the rapids.

MINING NOTES.

A cubic foot of quicksilver weighs 847.89 pounds. In a column of quicksilver every foot in height givs a pressure of 588 pounds per square inch.

Lee Davenport of Butte, claiming a small interest in the Original Lode claim, has commenced suit against the Colorado Mining & Smelting Company to recover $250,000 alleged to have been sustained as damages by reason of the company mining and extracting ore from that portion of the mine (25 feet) owned by him. He asks that a temporary injunction issue pending the determination of the suit.

A Milwaukee syndicate headed by Mr. Williams, who has charge of the development of the property, has just made a rich strike in the Copper Belle, at Clinton, 22 miles east of Missoula, Mont., on the Northern Pacific. Six feet of ledge samples 26 per cent copper, 100 ounces in silver and $5 in gold. The Copper Belle bids fair to rank first among the great copper properties of Montana.

Those who opened the wilderness of the great west and northwest know how difficult it was to persuade eastern capitalists to invest in mining properties. Even those who had advanced by hard work beyond the line which marks the boundary between prospects and mines were approached with discouraging timidity. Capital wanted more. It wanted evidences of stability, and yet it would not give a cent more than what the ore in sight was worth, and that must be closely calculated by assayists and surveyors chosen by the prospective purchaser, but paid for by the seller.

The Morning Mining Company at Mullan Idaho, is pushing work on its new flume. It will take the water from the South Fork a short distance below the Morning mill, to the mouth of Grouse gulch, where an electric power house is to be put in. When this work is completed the only part of the South Fork in the eight miles between the head of the Hunter flume and Wallace where the water will not be running through a flume will be that between Grouse gulch and the head of the Standard flume. W. A. Clark has that covered with a water right and he intends to flume it and build a mill this fall to concentrate the ore from his Sunset peak properties.

The last shot in the face of the Palmer Mountain tunnel last week broke into three feet of quartz and vein matter. The ore is similar to that in the big No. 12 vein, which showed assays from $173 to 248 in gold. The width of this 21st vein is [illegible] unknown. It was promised that the development of the ground the tunnel is now going through would probably prove interesting, from the fact that the surface above it is rich in good showings. The promise is thus amply fulfilled. The footwall of this 21st ledge is 3017 feet in and 1220 feet vertical depth. This is the third vein crossed since leaving the 2900-foot mark. They are all of good width, heavily mineralized between well defined walls, and with assays running $8.80 to $170 in gold.

It is now currently reported that Frank Turner and Al Keeton, who killed Thomas Eagleton, the well known miner, on the streets of Granite, March 22, had made carefully laid plans to escape from the officers of the law before reaching Canyon City, the county seat. As they were not arrested until two hours after the shooting occurred, the deputy sheriff having business elsewhere about the time of the shooting, they had ample time to fully plan their escape.

A law introducing compulsory insurance for work-people against sickness and accident has been passed by both of the Swiss legislative chambers, January 1, 1903, has been fixed as the date when it will go into operation.

The Granite Cutters' strike in the east is not yet settled, though many firms have granted the eight-hour day. Both sides are standing firm at present.

Last year the union tailors of America had 41 strikes and won thirty.

Switzerland has 328 co-operative societies.

EASTER SERMON.

acquainted with the closing scenes of Christ's life, were yet living. They knew whether there was any certainty as to his having risen. If there was none, they would certainly, have protested against a change of the Sabbath from its old setting in the week, to Sunday, that it might become commemorative of such an event. This faith in Christ's resurrection, has stood the siftings of eighteen centuries; in which the chaff has been mercilessly separated from the grain of truth, in all spheres of thought. The fact, that Christ's worship is today on the increase, rather than the decline, shows that the evolution of mind, is not to its elimination; but to a wider acceptance of it. And what martyrdoms in the interest of this truth? It has in all ages been a truth from which the fear of death was powerless to divorce. Those who first preached it, like the many of subsequent centuries, sealed their faith in with their blood. John was exiled. James was hurled from the battlements of Jerusalem. The other James was crucified in Asia Minor. Mathew received the crown of martyrdom in Abyssinia, Simon in Persia, as also did Jude. Thomas suffered on the coast of Coromandel. Phillip was hanged to a pillar in Hierapolis. Andrew was crucified in Patras. Luke was dragged to death, at the tail of a wild horse, at the city of Alexander, in Egypt. Paul was beheaded in Rome; and Peter was in that city, crucified head downward. Thus every land, opened its bosom, to receive a disciple, willing to die for his faith in a risen Saviour. Impostors do not die for their teachings.

Yea, Jesus has risen. One from the other world, has walked again among men. As Paul says, immortality has been brought to light. Science, approaches the grave, with its divining rod, the inductive method; and says the life to come cannot be so discovered. Logic, with its formulas, has come to confess itself powerless to reason the dead into newness of life. But faith, that strong grip of the mind, on this truth of Christ's resurrection, has prevailed. There is now certainty as to a future life No more skeletons of ivory and gold, are set as in the banquet halls of Rome and Greece, to remind the guests, that as death the probable extinction of man, may come on the tomorrow, it is wisdom to eat and drink to excess today. The high and glorious aspirations that wing the Temple of Life, at last seem to have a realization, in the Great Somewhere of faith. The stars that hold high festival around the throne of Midnight, are to us now, a kindling for our reception, of courts more glorious than any into which we have yet wandered. Christ lives today everywhere. The Sun never sets on his worship. Satan, is seen falling like lightning from the Thrones, Schools, and Sanctuaries of the nations, at the recitals of the story of the cross. Literature, is so starred with his ideas, and enthusiasms, that if shorn of them, it would be a desert drear. The world of Art, is radiant through its attempts, to picture the scenes of his life, and his visions of the Future. He believes not only in Literature, Art, and temples of worship, where men operate as individuals; but in the realm of Government, where they are active in a collective sense. There is not a Sovereign power, that has not come into the history of today, like Him, to minister to the weak. England has been christianized but a few centuries. A Thousand years ago, instead of its Parliament, awed by the diction of a Pitt, and the statesmanship of a Gladstone, there was a circle of savages, club in hand, sitting by the camp fire, counseling as to what village they would waste. Instead of its leviathans, with a monastery of the high seas, were the barges of the Northmen, their prows red with the blood of the innocent slain. And yet so deeply has she imbibed of the spirit of Christ, that she like an Atlas, simply staggers under the weight of a world, to its support. One fourth of the race waits on her for protection. She supports great Armies and Navies, for the preservation within the borders of distant lands, of that primal condition of progress; namely peace; and to protect them in the way to civilization.

Germany is also fast becoming a bright ministrant in the temple of the World's life. Having like Peter on housetop, reveled in visions of new truth, in the direction of Law and Government, we are with him, startled by the message, that the heathen are at the door, waiting instruction in our larger wisdom. There in the providence of God, are dusky millions, from Cuba, Furto Rico, and the Phillipines. We have been taught of God; and now it is becoming to us a conviction that we must teach.

Representatives of the far famed order of the Temple, formed at Jerusalem in Medieval times, for the protection of pilgrims from Christian Europe, on their way to the tomb of our Savior, may you never loose sight of the fact, that it is a vacated sepulchre. Rejoice in the truth of this hour, that he who was laid therein, has risen, and ascended into the Unseen Holy of the Universe, to intercede for the humanities of the Ages In this truth, your order grows; enlisting Kings and Emperors, its standard, floating in triumph from the Bosphorus to the Pillars of Hercules. How mightily the truth of the hour has this day vivified the Earth? First uttered in the crash of the bells of St. Petersburg; and echoed from the thousand ivy clad towers of Europe; and the Te Deums of this western world; it has thrilled every land in its turn. Truly this is the "Dominicia Gaudii" or Joyful Sunday. As waters, flowing through the Suez Canal, clothed its blistering banks with stately palms, so this tide of Easter Joy, in its flow around the Earth, has clothed many a desert place, with the bloom that is evermore.

SUNNY WOMEN.

Who has not known the woman whose disposition is described by that one word "sunny?" There's always a laugh lurking on her lips. Her cheeks are ever ready to dimple in smiles. Her household influence is as brightening and stimulating as the sunshine. Nothing can be crueler than to have this sunshine blotted out by disease. But this is a common cruelty. The young wife who was the sunaline of the home becomes its shadow. Every young wife should know the value of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription in the protection and preservation of the health. It promotes regularity, dries the drains which enfeeble body and mind, and cures inflammation, ulceration and female weakness. It nourishes the nervous system and gives to the body the balance and buoyancy of perfect health. It is a strictly temperance medicine.

"I can say that your medicine cured me," writes Mrs. Maud Pearce, of Stonteville, Fairfield Co., Ohio. "I had suffered about twelve years from female weakness and I had almost given up, thinking there was no cure for me. Then I heard about Dr. Pierce's medicine and thought I would try it, and can say that seven bottles of your 'Favorite Prescription' made me well. I am now able to do my own housework. I took about twelve bottles in all of Dr. Pierce's medicines. Took some of the 'Golden Medical Discovery,' 'Favorite Prescription' and some of the 'Pleasant Pellets.'"

Dr. Pierce's Pellets cure constipation.

ON MATTERS POLITICAL.

The Latah county republican convention at Moscow, Saturday, was quite largely attended, and from surface indications, everything passed off harmoniously. It was a regular love feast. Not a single contest. Several former silver republicans and fusionists took part in the deliberations of this meeting. Genesee fared well—securing the two most important positions—the temporary and permanent chairmanship of the convention and chairmanship on platform and resolutions. Thos. H. Brewer was honored with the former and Mr. Hopp with the latter. Every delegate present from this precinct managed to get on one of the delegations to the state conventions. Rev. W. C. Fowler warmed up the delegates with a speech. He recited briefly what had transpired during the past two years and declared if the republicans did their duty there can be but one result—the triumphant election of William McKinley. The applause given his remarks showed plainly that the republicans present were very much alive and hopeful. Light is ahead in state politics and the republicans know it. Judge Truitt was indorsed as a delegate to the national convention. The judge, Burton L. French, J. I. Mitcham and others briefly addressed the assemblage, and references to Hon. Geo. L. Shoup brought forth applause which showed that the Senator has many warm friends in Latah county. The delegates selected to attend the Lewiston convention next Tuesday, are: Wm. Buchanan, A. H. Charles, L. Jain, E. T. Platt, Thos. H. Brewer, J. W. Hopp, Hans C. J. Tweedt, Olaf Olson, C. Carpenter, R. C. West, John Ramstadt, R. P. Drury, Wm. Parkins, M. Cozier, D. W. Driskell, G. W. Gale, Wm. Carter, Maggie Donahue, C. H. Oderlin, J. R. Collins, J. L. Naylor, Thomas Vassar, Martin Salberg, W. Wilson, W. R. Trull, J. I. Mitcham, William Stillinger, G. W. Shepherd. Those selected to go to the Boise convention are: R. V. Cozier, C. O. Brown, H. C. Shaver, W. C. Lauder, J. D. Jolly, W. C. Fowler, Chas. Power, Geo. W. Daggett, Warren Truitt, R. H. Barton, F. M. Johnson, Louis G. Peterson, G. G. Pickett, W. E. Kerr, Jas. Peterson, T. H. Christie, J. L. Naylor, J. I. Mitcham, Wm. Buchanan, L. Keen, James Peterson, Geo. S. Strong, D. A. Wood, Calvin Shoop, A. L. McLeod, Geo. Matier, Burton L. French, F. A. David. The resolutions were received with enthusiasm and adopted unanimously.

Among the recent converts from the democratic to the republican side is Mr. M. A. Mr. Cornwall believes the retention of the Philippines will greatly benefit the inhabitants, thereof as well as the producers of the Pacific slope.

Who shall run for vice-president for the two great parties this year is still a mystery. What a warm campaign we would have if Gov. Roosevelt of New York, the rough rider, should accept the second place on the republican ticket, and Admiral Dewey the same on the democratic ticket. But Roosevelt will do nothing of the sort. He intends to camp in the White House some day himself.

The eastern gold democrats are anxious for concessions in the Kansas City platform, and say if Bryan will insert a financial plank upon which they can stand together, the elect'on will come their way. David B. Hill is an active spirit in the work of reconciliation and wants to swing New York into line.

This is Indiana's year to go democratic, if the pendulum makes its regular quadrennial swing. But the outlook is that the practice of the state since the '70s of reversing itself politically every four years will be broken. Indiana has been the most doubtful state in the Union, but from the large number of republican aspirants for governor, it look as though Bryan's chances of winning the state were not the best.

Ex-Congressman Chas. A. Towne, of Minnesota, chairman silver republican committee, says the issues of trusts and imperialism have obscured the silver question, and in his judgment the latter will not cut much of a figure in the approaching campaign. He has no objection to gold in itself, and says that as long as under the gold standard and because of the great increase in the output of gold and large gold imports, commodity prices have ceased to fall and tend to rise, he is content The name of the silver republican party is to be dropped, or changed to Lincoln republican.

Valley Oregon wool has seen some peculiar fluctuations during the past decade. During 1890 to 1892 it was bought in Salem at an average of 20 cents per pound. From '93 to '96 it averaged 10½ cents, the actual price paid by a Salem firm being 10 cents in '93, '95, and '96, and 11 cents in '94. In '97 wool picked up to 13 cents. In '98 and '99 wool brought 16 cents and this year the same wool bring 20 cents. Oregon farmers are going into sheep and cattle business heavily and will vote to continue such conditions.

Poor Senator Hoar, the anti-expansionist of Mass-achusetts, who has been making a holy show of himself along with Pettigrew and others in congress, was turned down by his constituents in convention the other day. A resolution endorsing his course was voted down and one adopted instead upholding McKinley in his Philippine stand. The four great states of Ohio, Indiana, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin held republican state conventions last week and reaffirmed the principles of the platform of 1896 and endorsed the record of the McKinley administration on the issues of war and expansion. There is no wavering on the question of American sovereignty in the Philippines. It takes men with a larger caliber than Hoar or Pettigrew possess to override the party.

—The Rev. Dr. Gibson has come to life, or at least is not dead, and writes to last week's Examiner as follows: "During the Durrant trial I was willing to bear my share of trouble and no one accused me of saying bitter things about my critics. Five years and more have passed since the murders were committed. I have remained in the city and in the same church. Now, after all these years, the Eastern papers are publishing the fact that I am dead, after having made a confession of the two murders. I have had the double pleasure of reading my death in three papers, and the news is going around. Had I retired into obscurity there might be some ground for the statement of my death, but here I am in a great city, preaching to hundreds of people every Sunday. I do feel like complaining now, for it seems like persecution from which I have no protection. I have remained at my post and stood every test that the public has applied to me. In spite of all plans formed against me; the church has prospered, and if I am not mistaken I do not occupy the lowest place in the San Francisco ministry. It is unusual for a man to ask a paper to announce that he is alive. I ask you to do it, however, in the hope that the Eastern papers, after a long while, may get the news"

"It is with a good deal of pleasure and satisfaction that I recommend Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy," says Druggist A. W. Sawtelle, of Hartford, Conn. "A lady customer, seeing the remedy exposed for sale on my show case, said to me: 'I really believe that medicine saved my life the past summer while at the shore.' and she became so enthusiastic over its merits that I at once made up my mind to recommend it in the future. Recently a gentleman came into my store so overcome with colic pains that he sank at once to the floor. I gave him a dose of this remedy which helped him. TIMELY TOPICS.

Naturally enough the brick trust has gone to the wall.

One of the get-rich-quick men has been disposed of satisfactorily by the get-justice-quick process.

Rev. Mr. Sheldon is now in a position to realize with what comparative ease the average preacher earns his salary.

At the same time it is not a bit easier for some folks to borrow trouble than it is for others to lend or even give it.

Nineteen hundred is a year that can be divided by 4, but nevertheless mocks the fond longings of many an eager spinster.

Evidently the judge that upheld a marriage contract made on Sunday went on the old theory that "It is lawful to do good on the Sabbath day."

The daughter of the Sultan, who eloped with a poet, probably figured that it would be impossible for him ever to support more than one wife.

When the Prince of Wales ate a 10-cent dinner the other day the fact was considered to be of sufficient importance to be cabled across the Atlantic at 20 cents a word. Yet some people claim it is the thing that is done which counts and not the person who does it.

The law which provides for the payment of prize money to the navy ought to be abolished. It is a survival of the days of pirates and freebooters, when the United States was unable to afford a respectable navy of its own, and it was necessary to offer inducements to get private owners and adventurous sailors into the business of killing pirates and sinking their vessels. The days of the necessity for blood money, however, are past, and the prize laws should pass with them.

Just as Hungary "is tired of having to stay in bed whenever Austria happens to be taken ill," Norway strains against pulling in team with Sweden, and has recently acquired a separate national flag. Some years ago the venerable Max Muller received a scholarly letter from Dom Pedro of Brazil, which he showed to King Oscar. The monarch of the Scandinavian countries read it with a sigh: "I have no such leisure for Sanskrit. The happy Emperor of Brazil has but one country to govern; I have two."

Rev. Samuel G. Smith in a recent article in Harper's Bazar on "The Place of Women in the World's Work," pleads for the limitation of women in factories and trade and strongly advocates the closing of all wage-earning occupations to girls under 18 years of age. The doctor evidently means well and perhaps in a good many cases his position would hold good and yet there is no doubt that such an arbitrary ruling would be an injustice to many homes. Take for instance the case of a woman bereft of her husband, and left without means with two or three young daughters on her hands. The mother has been a "home" woman, is unskilled in any kind of business or productive industry. Her oldest daughter is but 14 years of age, but is anxious to come to her mother's assistance. She leaves school, learns a trade and at 15 or 16 is qualified for some industry that gives promise of advancement in the future and helps the mother and younger sisters materially for the present. But Dr. Smith says she should be 18 before entering the industrial world. What would he have this mother and her daughters do in the meantime?

All good Americans will heartily indorse the vigorous patriotism of the famous physician, Dr. McBirney, in contradicting the story of his intended retirement to Europe, with the emphatic remark, "I hate Eupore. America is good enough for me." It is not necessary to hate Europe, and it is profitable to have seen and studied Europe. It has much that is worth seeing and studying and, moreover, the fair-minded American always likes to examine for himself the evidence on which he is to give an opinion. Travel is good for both mind and body; it is vacation and education. But after the American has taken a good look at Europe he need have no hesitation in declaring with Dr. McBirney that America is good enough for him. It is good enough for anybody. Nowhere else in the world can life be lived under better conditions than in the United States. Alike for the toiler and the capitalist, for ardent youth and tranquil old age, for manhood and womanhood, for the thinker or the worker, for all who really live, it is the land of opportunity, of hope, of progress, of possibilities on the whole surpassing those of the most favored countries of Europe. It is the most interesting country in the world. It is now at the most interesting period of its history. It is struggling with a greater number of problems and more important ones than any other country. And it is growing more interesting all the time. Its successes and its failures are fraught with vaster consequences for the welfare or detriment of the human race than those of any other country. The American who under any circumstances does not find America good enough for him is simply blind to the most attractive picture in world history.

The school savings bank system established in Champaign and Urbana by the Woman's Club of the Illinois twin cities is reported to be completely successful both in its plan and its execution. The banks are in connection with the public schools, and began three months ago when Mrs. Julian, a teacher in one of the Urbana schools, was induced to take charge of the savings. Already some twenty of her pupils have bank accounts, twelve of them being above $5. Since then the Woman's Club has provided blanks and the system is being followed throughout the cities. It is probable, however, that the plan will die when the novelty wears off, as has been the case with school savings banks established in other cities. The expenses and annoyance of management are too great and the reward in glory usually too small for private philanthropy. The only successful plan for encouraging school children to save is the postal savings banks. In Great Britain, for instance, children may obtain cards and paste penny stamps upon them until a shilling is had, and then an account may be opened with the government. A million accounts have been opened thus in England. In France and Belgium 5-centime stamps may be saved until a franc is gained; in Austria 5 kreutzer stamps until 50 kreutzers are had, and in the latter country there are 479,418 children who have bank accounts. To be sure there are dime savings banks in the United States, but they sometimes fail. If postal savings banks existed in America there would be certainly some provision for saving pennies as there is in Europe.

Propositions to abolish the death penalty have been under discussion this season in two or three Legislatures. The movement makes slow progress; for, after more than fifty years of agitation, there are only five States—Colorado, Rhode Island, Maine, Michigan and Wisconsin—in which the death penalty is forbidden by law. The advocates of the change insist that capital punishment is brutalizing; that it does not act as a deterrent to crime; and that it defeats the ends of justice by making juries reluctant to convict when they know that a verdict of guilty will carry with it the death sentence. Such a case as that which recently occurred in New York, where a convict, sentenced to life imprisonment for murder, was proved innocent and pardoned after serving twenty-two years, is cited as evidence of the irreparable wrong which would have been done, if the death sentence at first imposed upon him had been carried out. On the other hand, it is argued that the death penalty really does deter from crime; that statistics show that, through the abuse of the pardoning power, the average term of life imprisonment has been reduced to confinement for only ten or twelve years; that the increased prison population, where the death penalty is abolished, puts a heavy burden on the public; and that convicts under a life sentence are a dangerous charge, because they can murder their keepers without incurring any heavier penalty than that which they are already undergoing. The recent lynching of a Colorado convict, who had escaped from the penitentiary after killing a prison official, is explained as a protest against the disuse of the death penalty. In Michigan there is a strong agitation for the restoration of capital punishment. Iowa once abolished the death penalty, and later restored it; and Maine, after abolishing it, restored it, and later abolished it again. While the movement to do away with capital punishment makes slow progress, humanizing influences are gaining ground. The scandal of public executions has been abolished in most States; there are about twenty States in which the court may substitute life imprisonment, either at its own discretion or upon the recommendation of the jury; and three States, New York, Ohio and Massachusetts, have substituted the electric chair for the hangman's rope.

Kissing Our Boys Good-Night.

Oh, what a change comes over things,
What quiet fills the place;
The winter evening slowly drags,
The purple flames that race
Far up the chimney seem to shed
Less cheerful warmth and light,
When, putting on their little gowns,
We kiss our boys good-night.

We follow them as off they go,
With ringing laugh and shout,
To fondly tuck them in the bed
And turn the gaslight out;
And, clasped in one another's arms,
So warm and snug and tight,
They fill our hearts with worship
When we kiss our boys good-night.

And as they drift to Slumberland
We linger round their cot,
For lo! a strange enchantment
Binds us voiceless to the spot,
And life somehow grows sweeter,
And the vexing cares take flight,
When, bending o'er their sleeping forms,
We kiss our boys good-night.

Then, looking to the future,
Into whose mysterious years
They must go to meet life's issues,
Now with gladness, now with tears;
We pray that He may lead them
Ever in the path of right,
When no more beneath our rooftree
We may kiss our boys good-night.

Touch-Button Umbrellas.

Self-opening and closing umbrellas are being made in Germany, the handle and stick being formed of three telescoping tubes with a coiled spring in the upper portion of the stick, which is set after the umbrella is opened or closed in order to reverse the movement by touching a button in the handle.

A pretty and becoming new dress and hat are fountain of youth enough for almost any woman.

A cup has to be too small to drink out of before the women will admit that it is pretty.

BABY LOVE.

Baby Love came prancing by,
Cap on head and sword on thigh,
Horse to ride and drum to beat—
All the world beneath his feet.

Mother Life was sitting there,
Hard at work and full of care,
Set of mouth and sad of eye,
Baby Love came prancing by.

Baby Love was very proud,
Very lively, very loud;
Mother Life arose in wrath,
Set an arm across his path.

Baby Love wept loud and long,
But his mother's arm was strong.
Mother had to work, she said,
Baby Love was put to bed.

YOUNG MRS. MAYNARD.

THE late Joshua Maynard was good enough to accumulate a considerable fortune and considerate enough to leave the bulk of it to his widow. The estate was not in the least involved, and all the various charities and educational institutions benefited under the will were settled with long before the expiration of the year allowed by law for such business. Attention to these details did much to occupy Mrs. Maynard's mind during the first months of her widowhood. As she was young, she had often passed for her husband's daughter, her mourning was not overpoignant of long-enduring. There was an extended journey abroad, and then she settled in her New York City house to enjoy life in her own way.

This consisted in entertaining friends of her own choosing, among whom she became a social leader, but she never aspired to lead in high society, and lived quietly, considering the extent of her fortune. Having a dread of money-hunters, she skillfully spread abroad the report that she was determined never to marry again.

Among her friends was one Lewis Baxter, of whom she became quite fond. Baxter was a war correspondent, and as there was no war on at that time, and he wasn't of much use in ordinary journalism, he had no end of time on his hands, and, by the same token, no little difficulty in making both ends meet. The first time she saw him Mrs. Maynard said to herself: "Now, I should like to have that man for a friend." And soon she had him for a friend. He became her very devoted friend. "I shall see you next—when?" she often asked as they were parting. His answer generally was: "Whenever you like." But he never came uninvited. He never paid a formal call, or came, unless she specially wished it, on one of her "at home" afternoons.

Baxter grew communicative in his brusque way, giving the widow the benefit of his grumbling against fate for keeping him unemployed.

"So I want another war," he said one day. "It is terribly selfish—but we are all terribly selfish when we are hard up."

"But, look here; I heard several secrets of yours quite lately," Mrs. Maynard interposed.

"Secrets of mine? I don't think I have any."

"Oh, yes, I know. I have heard about it from grateful people whom you never supposed that I knew anything about——"

"Oh—that—there's nothing in that. It would be cheaper to be dead, if one might not do a good turn for some decent folks in distress every now and then. I don't do it because I am a charitable or generous sort of fellow. I do it because it pleases me."

Then they rambled on in a talk about charities, until Baxter arose to go, with the remark that he feared he was boring her. Mrs. Maynard assured him that if that were the case she would tell him so. Convinced of her candor and admiring her frankness, Baxter sat down again.

"I want to talk to you about yourself," said Mrs. Maynard, calmly, and if Baxter was surprised at this, he was astounded when she continued: "You don't know what to do with yourself. You are wasting your life. The truth is, my friend, that you ought to get married."

Get married. He sprung from his chair with a flush of anger on his face—and a perfectly new revelation in his heart. He had not known it before. He had sat with her and talked with her day after day; he had been her friend, and had heard her call him her comrade; he had found her friendship grow day by day more dear to him and more needful for him; but he had never until now realized the fact that he was absolutely in love with her. How did he come to realize it now? Just because of the few words of easy, kindly friendship she had let drop, in which she told him he ought to get married—to get married to some other woman, and be Mrs. Maynard's comrade no more! "So, then," he said, to his own soul, "she cares nothing about me—nothing at all—except as a friend!"

Mrs. Maynard went on without seeming to take any notice of his emotion—if, indeed, she had noticed it.

"Won't you sit down?" she asked, sweetly.

He sat down with something rather like a growl.

"Yes," she went on, "I am quite convinced that you ought to get married—and to a woman with money."

"Do you mean to annoy me?" he asked, angrily. "Do you really mean to say that you believe I am a man to sham love to a woman to swindle her out of her money?"

"I didn't say a word about swindling a woman out of her money."

"No, of course, you did not say that. But what else is it, if one makes sham love to a woman in order to get hold of her money?"

"But why make sham love to her? Why not get to love her—in spite of her money? Suppose I know a young woman who admired you greatly and has money, and who, I think, would marry you if you tried for her——"

"Tried for her! What a way of putting it!"

"My friend, do not be too exalted; do not insist on riding the high horse quite so much. We are people of the world, you and I——"

"I am not," he interrupted, "and I didn't think you were, either."

"Oh, well, we live in the world, and we have to recognize its ways and to fall in with them—more or less. Now, suppose this young woman did admire you, and that I told you I thought I could help you and make things easy for you—why should you not begin by making love to her and end by falling in love with her—before or after marriage? I don't think it matters very much, but on the whole I fancy it had better begin after than before."

"You are in a chaffing humor to-day," he said, moodily.

"I? Not the least in the world. I am thinking only for your good."

"Then please don't think of it any more—in that way."

"In that way? Why, what harm could it do you to marry a rich woman who would be very fond of you?"

"But I don't care about her—I don't want her. Who is she?"

"Oh, come now, as if I could tell you her name after the way in which you have taken my offer."

"Your offer! You have no right to make any offer of the kind. You are not the Matrimonial News, or whatever it is called.

"But now, seriously," she said, "is it fair that my friend should be cut off from all chance of marrying the man she admires—and very likely loves—or would come to love—merely because she has a lot of money? Is she to be left to the delicate attentions of the mere fortune-hunter?"

"Mrs. Maynard, I don't know anything about the young woman, and, without being rude, I hope, to her or to you, I must say that I can't get myself to take any interest in her, or to believe in her existence."

"Oh, yes, she exists, and I am sure she loves you."

"You are chaffing me again," he said, sternly.

"Indeed, indeed, I am not."

"Well, let the young woman be, at all events. I know nothing about her, and I don't believe she cares twopence about me."

"Is that all you have to say?"

"Well—if you press me—I can say that I don't care twopence about her."

"Oh; why?"

"You are in a teasing mood to-day, and I had much better go away. What could I say more than that I have never seen her?"

"But you can see her."

"I don't want to see her."

"But why?"

"Well, if you will have it, because I am in love with another woman! Good-by."

"No; I must hear more about this. You never told me you were in love with another woman. I thought you told me everything."

"I didn't know it until to-day."

She had guessed at all this, yet a flush came into her cheeks, and for a moment she was silent. Then she said: "I think now you had better go."

"I'll not go until I have told you all! I am in love with you, and I did not know it until this very day—until just now, when you talked so complacently of my marrying some other woman."

"But I didn't," she said, quietly.

"Didn't? Why, what do you mean? Didn't you urge me to marry a young woman with money? Didn't you urge it on me, and say the young woman was in love with me?"

"Why, of course I did, and I stand to it. But I didn't say it was any other young woman!"

"Oh!" he exclaimed, and his delight found no other word.

"Sit down beside me, Lewis," she said. "Don't you know that it is leap year?"

So he sat beside her.—Buffalo News.

The highest monument in the world is in Washington, D. C. It was erected in honor of George Washington. It is 555 feet high, 55 feet square at the base, and contains 18,000 blocks of marble, two feet thick. In the interior is an elevator, and 50 flights of stairs, 18 steps each.

DOINGS OF WOMEN

BUSINESS WOMAN AND WIFE.

ONLY a few among the ten thousands of home-staying and home-loving American women expect to become money-makers, while a majority of them may be money-savers or spenders, since the chief end for which most men toil is to pour money into the laps of their wives and daughters. With all our liberal education, our advanced mathematics, our long and laborious training, how much do most women really know about the management of their personal resources, about the keeping of accounts, and the relation of outgo to income? If we are merely grown-up children, with little outlook beyond that of the child who cannot be contented until his penny has been exchanged for a coveted sweet, are we the ones in fault, or is the fault to be laid at the door of a mistaken and semi-idiotic system, under which we and our forebears, mothers and grandmothers further back than we can count, have resignedly or rebelliously plodded along?

Women are often in the anomalous position of impecunious princesses. They are arrayed in purple and fine linen. They drive in their carriages with state and splendor, coachman and footman correct and obsequious, every adjunct luxurious and complete. From the top of her dainty head to the toe of her little foot, the lady is a vision of delight, and the laundress staggering homeward with her heavy basket of freshly washed and ironed clothes views her with a wondering regard, in which admiration predominates, and envy has no place. As well might a miner's lamp envy a star in the firmament. Yet, the laundress is an independent and thrifty member of the body politics, whose week's wages are her own, and the gentlewoman may be, and often is, a veritable pauper without a dollar to call her own. Her bills are made, audited, paid, sometimes indulgently, sometimes grudgingly, and she has no control of money.—Collier's Weekly.

American Nursed the Boers.

The first woman to volunteer as a nurse in what is called the very first skirmish of the South African war was an American, Mrs. Fletcher Webster Jewell. In 1895 Mrs. Jewell was residing in Johannesburg, where her husband had large business interests. When a battle between the Boers and the Uitlanders became imminent the great body of women and children in that city were sent to places of safety in Natal and Cape Colony. Mr. Jewell refused to sacrifice his business interests by departing, and Mrs. Jewell declined to desert her husband. She was a spectator of some of the exciting scenes in Johannesburg immediately preceding the arrest of Jameson, and, when the news of the latter's capture was received, she volunteered as a nurse upon learning of the necessity of nurses for the wounded in the improvised hospital at Krugersdorp. There were thirty-five wounded Englishmen and four wounded Boers in the hospital, and to these she ministered until she was relieved by the trained nurses attached to the St. John ambulance corps, from Cape Town. She was the only Uitlander woman in the hospital. Mrs. Jewell is now in America, having returned to her native land but a short time ago.

Teaching Home Duties.

If a girl be unfitted for household duties by her higher education, it is the fault of the mother, not of the school. High schools make no pretense of teaching home duties. The best place to teach these is at home, and, if the mother neglect the opportunity, she alone is responsible. The first object of all education is to fit the child for the duties of life. Inasmuch as the life work of the great majority of girls is apt to lie in the home, it is obvious that the most important branch of every girl's education is in the home. And it makes no difference how many thousands or millions of dollars her father may have, she is likely to be much more comfortable and happy in a home of her own when the time comes, if she know how everything should be done, from the simple dusting of furniture up to the management of household accounts.

Don't Toss Baby in the Air.

The foolish practice of tossing a helpless baby in the air, while it screams both with affright and delight, is a most dangerous one. A physician with a large practice tells the story of a precociously bright child which showed evident delight when tossed in this way by a doting grandfather who was accustomed to play with it every evening, says the Pittsburg Dispatch. The child trembled with delight when the night's frolic was over, but one evening from this trembling it passed into a spasm, the first indication of one of those fatal brain diseases against which medical science is helpless.

Feminine Helplessness.

Sweet feminine helplessness is very pretty in a girl, but men are usually very much annoyed by it in their wives. In the partnership of life there are certain things the breadwinner expects his helpmate to be proficient in. If the butcher bring bad steaks, he thinks she ought to be able to recognize the fact that they are bad before they are cooked. If servants be careless, he expects her to see that they either do their work properly or are replaced with new ones. He has a right to complain when he must suffer sloppy cooking because his wife is helpless and afraid the cook may leave, if cautioned about it. He knows that he must understand his business, or he cannot keep up in the race; and he sees no reason why she should not take the trouble to understand hers.

A Cotton Queen.

Three years ago, Mrs. Lelia Seton Wilder, of Decatur, Ala., took hold of an extensive estate that had been sadly neglected and determined to make a model cotton plantation. She succeded, and to-day, says Leslie's Weekly, the planters of her State are studying her methods. She visited New York in September and secured an order for all the cotton her plantation can produce during the coming year. She owns over 6,000 acres along the Tennessee River. Of this, 700 acres are under cultivation, the balance is timber of fine hard wood, principally white oak. She cultivates 100 acres herself; the balance is rented on the tenant system. She has negro families on the place, most of them hired by the year. Each family has a cabin, garden and pasture rent free, and firewood. We have had a number of cotton kings, and now, in the person of Mrs. Wilder, we have a cotton queen.

New Shirt Waists.

The new wash shirtwaists are very long-waisted in front and rather short at the back. Fitting correctly under the arms and with wide shoulders, they look a good deal like last year's waists till contrasted with a left-over. Then it will be seen that this season's waist is built along better lines and with more graceful jauntiness. Shirtwaists or wash silks are going to be worn a great deal, and the run on flannel waists is tremendous. Almost all waists are made with self cuff and a collar band, with an attachable shaped stock collar. When a linen collar is worn or a white stock and scarf are chosen, linen cuffs should be set inside the waist cuffs. Only a white stock should be worn with a colored or print shirtwaist unless the stock harmonizes with the shade of the waist.

Don't Be Too Brilliant.

For social success try to efface yourself. Once and awhile there are brilliant personalities we bow before. There's so much magnetism about them we can't help it, but in the long run a vivid personality is a dangerous social tool. It wounds people's self-esteem because it takes the edge off their own conceit. Coax other people to say bright things. Never mind about sparkling yourself. Put other people at their best and you will never appear at your worst. It's humiliating, this sacrifice of self, but it pays—that is, if you wish to have people stop long enough to consider you are living.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

"New Woman" in Hawaii.

A woman writing from Honolulu states that the native women of the Hawaiian Islands are most uninteresting from an artistic point of view. She says: "Originally there may have been something to them, but now they are fat and lazy and wear Mother Hubbard gowns. Picture to yourself a stout darky woman with bare feet, dressed in a black silk Mother Hubbard, riding a bicycle, and you have the 'new woman,' as she has appeared down here."

Horses in Large Cities.

The great cities of the world use up an enormous number of horses every year, and these must constantly be resupplied by horses from the country or from foreign parts. It is stated that in the suburbs of London alone there are 750,000 horses in use, and that 100,000 horses must every year be sent into these suburbs to take the place of those worn out. The city of Berlin takes 100,000 new horses every year. A large number of the horses used in omnibuses and on tram lines, both in England and on the continent, are imported from the United States. The horses from the United States are shipped from the ports of New York and Boston to the ports of London, Liverpool and Glasgow, and quite a large number are transhipped at London for the ports of Antwerp and Havre. The ocean rates on horses from New York and Boston are from £5 to £6 per head, including feed and attendance, insurance for the voyage and for ten days after landing, and dock charges.

To Hem in the Boers.

London, April 26.—The indecisive and slow progress of Generals Hart and Brabant are relatively unimportant when compared with the progress of General French. It is now evident that Lord Roberts' wishes are not only to defeat the Boers, but to pen them in as at Paardeberg. To this end 40,000 British troops are concentrating in the Orange Free State and are operating according to carefully devised plans and the delay may be due as much to strategy as to necessity.

The success of this important movement almost entirely depends upon General French. If he can swoop down from the north with the rapidity of execution which he displayed at Kimberley and Paardeberg, he will effect the same swift, sudden transformation which followed the cavalry evolution two months ago.

According to last accounts he was pushing on successfully. Every day the Boers remain at Wepener improves General French's chances of success. To put a girdle around the 25,000 Boers estimated to be in the southeastern part of the Orange Free State, Lord Roberts has evidently taken large chances. The British critics differ regarding the result, some declaring it is impossible for the Boers to escape from the net, while others reserve their opinion until more definite news of General French's progress is received.

Labor Troubles a Bother.

Chicago, April 30.—Mayor Harrison has issued an appeal to the citizens of Chicago to use their influence in settling the labor troubles here, which involve practically every branch of industry. The city administration, he says, has done all in its power to bring about a settlement by arbitration, but has failed, owing to the refusal of the Contractors' association to appear before the arbitration board appointed by the city council.

British Aristocracy Blamed.

Many people attribute the recent reverses of the British to the degeneracy of the aristocracy. The life of luxury certainly does not produce vigor. Indigestible suppers, late hours, constant nerve strain and lack of exercise upset the stomach and weaken both physical and mental vitality. The blood that makes men heroes must come from active, healthy stomachs. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters purifies the blood and strengthens the stomach. It cures constipation, indigestion, dyspepsia and biliousness.

FARMERS' CORNER

Cultivator Shield.

In the Ohio Farmer a correspondent tells of a good shield for a cultivator. He says: In cultivating corn when it is small, it requires the greatest care not to cover up or roll hard lumps of dirt on the tender sprouts. The shields that come with cultivators are very uncertain and unsatisfactory in their work. For several years we have tried this trough and find it a most satisfactory device. Take two hard wood inch boards eight inches wide and about five feet long and fashion the forward end of each in the shape of a sleigh runner. Then take a 2 by 4 the same length as the boards and bevel the edges in such a way that when the boards are nailed on they will spread out at the bottom until they are about eight inches apart. This trough is to pass, inverted, over the corn row between the shovels of the cultivator, its sloping sides catching the loose soil and leaving it lying loosely next the corn, but never on it. To fasten this trough to the cultivator, bore an inch hole through the sides near the front end and just beneath the top 2 by 4. Through these run a small, strong rope and tie each end to the cultivator in such a way that the trough will be kept a little in advance of the shovels. It is best to leave this rope to play loosely through the trough, as it would otherwise upset in turning at the end of the rows. The illustration shows the construction exactly.

HANDSOME SHETLANDS.

Permanent Pastures.

The easiest way that we know of to keep a permanent pasture in good condition is to stock it hard enough so that the grass will be eaten before it throws up a seed stock or becomes hard and woody, and then give extra feed at the barn so that the animals will return at least as much fertility to the soil as the grass takes from it. Of course manure or fertilizer may be carried out, and spread on the pasture, but that costs money, and Eastern farmers are often at a loss to obtain fertilizing elements enough for their mowing lands and cultivated fields. If they buy feed to use in summer when cattle are in the pasture, they hope to and usually do get enough in the way of growth, fat or milk production to pay for it, and look upon the increased quantity and extra quality of the manure heap as an extra profit. In this matter of overstocking the pasture it is best done and produces best results where there are two pastures, so that the animals can be changed from one to the other about once a week, or as often as the feed is eaten down smooth. This helps to prevent them from gnawing so closely as to destroy the roots, which they may do in some favorite spot if they are kept too long in one pasture.—American Cultivator.

Enterprise in Farming.

The farmer and his farm are said to be alike; that is, the farm is what the owner makes it, and it indicates his characteristics. The main desire of an enterprising farmer is to save as much manure as possible, and it is an old maxim that the best way to judge of the work of a farmer is to observe how he manages his manure heap, as in the manure are collected the riches of the farm. An enterprising farmer will also keep his buildings in repair and make the farm attractive in appearance, but at all seasons of the year, whenever an opportunity is offered for so doing, he will give a portion of his time to the manure heap.

Sweet Potatoes.

Sweet potatoes are grown successfully in one-half the area of the United States. The crop produces from 100 to 300 bushels to the acre in the States south of Nebraska and New York, and fair yields are reported from Maine and the warm valleys of the irrigated West. The last official census gives the yield for the entire country at 44,000,000 bushels. Expert growers estimate the actual cost of production from 10 to 20 cents per bushel. There is certainly good profit in growing the crop. A warm, sandy, well drained soil is the ideal spot for sweet potatoes. The crop will not be satisfactory on heavy clay land nor on old wornout fields. New land is very good for the plant if it has not been highly fertilized with barnyard manure. The potatoes will not grow to a very great success in the shade, nor on a cold hillside.

Growing Potatoes.

Potatoes will grow on a great variety of soils and produce excellent crops, but the soil has much to do with the quality. A soil that is full of humus will produce large tubers in abundance, but they will lack the quality of those that are grown in soil that has less humus, but is rich in potash and other minerals. The volcanic ash soils of the Pacific slope grow some of the finest potatoes in the world, both in size and quality. The mineral elements produce the splendid result. The application of stable manure to this crop is inadvisable, for if the crop escape scab, as the result, the quality of the tuber will pretty surely be injured. The following mixture is an excellent potato fertilizer: Muriate of potash, 400 pounds; nitrate of soda, 250 pounds; dried blood, 300 pounds; fine bone flour, 500 pounds; plaster, 400 pounds; salt, 150 pounds. This will contain about 4 per cent. of nitrogen, 7½ per cent. of phosphoric acid and 10 per cent. of potash. Soaking the seed in a solution of corrosive sublimate—dissolving two ounces of the sublimate in two gallons of water, and then adding thirteen gallons of water—will destroy scab germs, but it will not protect the crop from scab if it is grown in infected ground. Spraying with Bordeaux mixture, first when the vines are a foot high and then three or four times afterward at intervals of ten days, will practically prevent blight.—Epitomist.

Spring Swarming.

In getting hives ready for the spring swarms, make them double walled, with the outer shell of seven-eighths inch lumber and the inner shell of three-eighths inch lumber. Have the inner wall small enough to allow about one inch of space all around, then fill this space with some kind of chaff, which will act as a non-conductor. The hive will be cooler in summer and warmer in winter than a single-walled hive, and the bees will be more comfortable all the year around. They will also breed up quicker and stronger in the spring, and consequently will swarm earlier and gather more surplus honey. A double-walled hive will cost a little more, but it is a good investment. I have tried both kinds side by side, and am discarding all single-walled hives.—F. G. Herman.

Milking by Machine.

Men dislike to milk cows and numerous machines have been invented to do it for them, says Denver Field and Farm. Most of these machines are foolish contrivances and none are real successes. They are divided into four classes: Drainers, suckers, squeezers and suction-squeezers. No machine yet devised, however, has become a demonstrated success. Some are better than others, but none have proven desirable adjuncts to dairy equipment. Men will continue to devise, and it is not improbable that at some time large herds may be milked by machine. This opinion has many supporters.

Items of Interest.

The secret of success in truck farming is in the production of several crops from the same ground during the year.

It is generally those farmers who need the education the least who attend the farmers' institutes in the largest numbers.

Ask the horse buyers what kind of horses they want. Big ones—high-grade draft horses—are most in demand at top prices.

The Jewell (Kan.) Republican says that stockmen in that section feed cotton seed meal to their cattle whenever corn gets above 20 cents a bushel.

One really good cow will yield as much milk as two ordinary cows, and it will cost one-half of the feed and labor to keep her as to keep two.

One of the most important items in making pigs profitable is to keep them growing steadily from the time they are farrowed until they are marketed.

There has never been a time in the past five years when good rams and ewes are as scarce as they are now; especially is this true of the fine wool sheep.

The Kansas experiment station has purchased eighty steers for feeding experiments. This is to be the first of a series of cattle feeding experiments to extend over a period of years. The Kansas station will by these experiments attempt to show Kansas farmers how to produce first-class beef at the least cost.

WAS A BIG FIRE AT OTTAWA

LOSS OF TWENTY MILLIONS

A District Five Miles Square Burned—Wind Was Blowing a Gale—Flames Leaped the River—Fifteen Thousand People Homeless.

Ottawa, April 27.—Five square miles of territory burned over; more than 2500 buildings, factories, mills, stores and other buildings destroyed, entailing a loss estimated to reach $20,000,000, and between 12,000 and 15,000 men, children and women homeless, is a summing up of the havoc wrought by the fire raging at Hull and Ottawa since 11 a. m. yesterday, and at midnight was not completely under control.

Most of the lumber piles in Ottawa and Hull have disappeared, and are now heaps of charred wood and ashes. Half a dozen churches and schools, a number of mills, the Hull waterworks, the Hull courthouse and jail, the postoffice, the convent—almost every business place—and about 1000 dwellings and shops in Hull have been destroyed. Indeed, practically nothing of Hull is left but a church and a few houses beyond it.

The spot where the fire originated is about a quarter of a mile from the main street of Hull, and as a gale was blowing from the northwest right in the direction of the lumber piles and mills on both the Hull and Ottawa shores of the Ottawa river and Chaudiere Falls, it was soon seen that the fire was almost certain to be a large one. By 11:30 the fire had gotten a good hold on Main street, and the entire street, with dozens of cross streets, was burning. Practically there is not a house left in the street. About this time the fire made a jump of nearly half a mile and ignited Eddy's woodyard, near the match factory.

It was soon in flames, and the 50-mile an hour gale which was blowing drove a high column of flame across Bridge street and set fire to the Eddy paper mill and the other buildings of the company. The fire at this time also sprang across the Ottawa river and caught the sheds in the rear of the Mackay Milling Company, on Victoria island, and in a few minutes the lumber piles on Victoria and Chaudiere islands, one of the power houses of the Ottawa Electric Company, the Victoria foundry and half the buildings on the two islands were in flames.

Already 120 trades unions and Socialist organizations have declared their intention of participating in the mamoth May Day celebration in New York, and many more societies will doubtless vote to join the great affair before it takes place. It is estimated that no less than 50,000 men and women will be in line when the word is given to march, and the number may be increased to double that number. LADIES naturally prefer ALABASTINE for walls and ceilings, because it is pure, clean, durable. Put up in dry powdered form, in five-pound packages, with full directions.

ALL kalsomines are cheap, temporary preparations made from whiting, chalks, clays, etc., and stuck on walls with decaying animal glue. ALABASTINE is not a kalsomine.

BEWARE of the dealer who says he can sell you the "same thing" as ALABASTINE or "something just as good." He is either not posted or is trying to deceive you.

AND IN OFFERING something he has bought cheap and tries to sell on ALABASTINE'S demands, he may not realize the damage you will suffer by a kalsomine on your walls.

SENSIBLE dealers will not buy a lawsuit. Dealers risk one by selling and consumers by using infringement. Alabastine Co. own right to make wall coating to mix with cold water.

THE INTERIOR WALLS of every church and school should be coated only with pure, durable ALABASTINE. It safeguards health. Hundreds of tons used yearly for this work.

IN BUYING ALABASTINE, customers should avoid getting cheap kalsomines under different names. Insist on having our goods in packages and properly labeled.

When they are sent to us on a trading errand, we always remember that they are not discriminating buyers, and we take especial pains to see that they get what both you and they want. Then we always try to be prompt in waiting on them—there is always a little worry about them at home when they are sent upon an errand and stay too long, often through no fault of their own.

GENESEE ROLLER MILLS

Makes But ONE Grade of Flour for the Home Trade and That Is

THE BEST.

THE GENESEE NEWS.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT GENESEE AS SECOND-CLASS MAIL MATTER.
Subscription rates, one year, $2; six months, $1.

I. W. HOFF
CHAS. POWER } Editors and Proprietors.

—Miller Barron of the Asotin mills is assisting Mr. Wood in turning out high grade flour.

—Hayes and McRoberts struck out for the Potlatch with a can of worms and lines and poles.

—A heavy rain fell Wednesday two miles north of town. Mr. Grant received a good wetting at his farm.

—The Star Saloon has been painted inside and outside, nicely papered and arranged, and Mr. Johnson proposes to keep an orderly place.

—Chas. Watson and family, after roaming the hills and valleys of northern Oregon and southern Washington for six months or more, returned ten days ago fully convinced that this locality is as good as the best.

—Crops are booming. Grain could not look thriftier and better. Fields are as far advanced now as they usually are the first of June. The fall grain promise a record-breaker and the early sown is coming on finely.

—In the American Monthly Review of Reviews for May, there are interesting sketches of Generals Jonbert and Cronje, Commandant Botha, and other military leaders of the Boers, illustrated from photographs.

—The "old corner" in Lewiston was burned to the ground Monday morning. The old landmark was built in 1862. The Magrauder murderers were tried in it. One turned state's evidence and the other three were hung. Later the other was shot and killed in a fight. The building has been used for a saloon for many years, renting for $175 a month. There is rejoicing over the removal of this eyesore.

—Hon. Vic Bierbower died in Spokane Tuesday. He was afflicted with a stroke of paralysis while in Lewiston about ten days ago. He had been in failing health for several months. Mr. Bierbower was one of the best known men in Idaho and has long occupied a prominent position in the republican party of the state. He was lieutenant-governor during W. J. McConnell's first term as governor. He was a man of genial disposition and made hosts of friends throughout the state. He was unmarried and practiced law at Grangeville the past year.

—Nez Perce county will become well advertised if the many suits instituted against old and new officials are pushed. We are told that many suits have been entered of late. It means expense to the county and to individuals. Some estimate the cost to the county will foot up to $40,000. The Tannahill suits are known to all in the valley and it will be next to impossible to secure jurors for subsequent trials unless the mountains are searched. Hundreds of people will have to be summoned, changes of venue taken, and the bill of expense will burden the people for years. All this will help to drag Lewiston down.

Normal Notes.

The Normal boys are rejoicing over their victory gained on the Genesee ball grounds. Next Saturday Normals play the Potiatch team here.

Miss Mary Wardrobe returned to her home last Saturday. The Normalites will miss her greatly.

Clarence Snyder wheeled it home on Monday last.

Two of the brightest of last year's Seniors: Miss Gertrude Downer and Mrs. Herbert Lee, have been visiting our school this week.

All kinds of vehicles were called into requisition for the conveyance of the students to Genesee Saturday. There was the wagon filled with straw for an old-fashioned straw ride; the big lumber wagon with its load, The Bonnet Brigade; the Vineland bus filled to overflowing with the baseballists and best girls; and last but not least, the surrey which carried the chaperone and her body guard selected from the Bonnet Brigade. The members of the Bonnet Brigade vote Hon. T. E. Miller and Mrs. Miller the best kind of entertainers.

Miss Permeal French, state superintendent of public instruction, visited the Normal last week. She addressed the students on educational affairs, emphasizing the fact that the standard is being raised from year to year, and teachers must now possess greater ability to enter the field of their sacred profession.

A NORMAL STUDENT.

—C. M. Monahan writes a lengthy letter from Manila to the NEWS. He also sends us newspaper clippings. Little "Con" makes a big roar about the course pursued by our generals in governing the islands. The price of eatables have steadily advanced for some time, and the NEWS presumes Con has to rustle to get enough to eat. Meat retailing at from 40 to 60 cents a pound in Mexican money or 20 to 30 in our money at the time of the blockade, now is quoted at $1. Think of Monahan paying $1 for a pound of meat—he's not so foolish. It breaks his heart to pay $30 a month for a two-room house. Con's health is good and says he gets three squares a day—as he does not say square drinks, we presumes he means square meals. Says he is learning two things, to talk Spanish and eat rice straight, so in case he gets down to "hard pan" he will be able to weather the change. From the laundry blank sent us Con is charged up with some feminine articles, lace curtains, etc., with prices ranging about the same as those of the Spokane laundry. Eggs retail at 45 cents, chickens 90 a piece, salt 25 a pound, potatoes 7 cents, fish 20 cents, bananas 9 cents per dozen, oranges 50 cents. The native beef means caraboas or work bull. While a native buys a cut of steak at 40 cents a pound, a moment later an American is charged at the rate of $1 a pound. Other articles are sold in the same way and Con does not like such treatment. The native venders do not have any fixed price, and an American is forced to pay sometimes double that which the native puts up. The Americans are looked upon as easy marks.

—Court a woman and she will worship you, marry her and she will defy you.

—No man or woman can afford to be without good manners, when they cost so little and are worth so much.

—The "Little red wagon" of the Grand Central's is all right. Have Frank wheel you over to the depot in it—free for ladies.

—Joe Wells has been pushing farming operations of late and doing penance by eating bacon and shredded pancakes. Mr. Lees comes in for a square meal occasionally.

—Charley Kays, the handsome clerk, enjoyed a couple of days among Genesee friends this week. He is taking his vacation now and expects to go to work about the middle of the month for Kjos of Lewiston.

—Now that the Big Buffalo mine litigation has been settled and that Chas. Sweeney of Spokane has control of it, we look for great things from that camp the coming summer. The value of the mine is placed high. Close onto a hundred men are going in to do development work and may make the Hump the greatest gold mining camp in Idaho.

A Rich Man's Project.

A rich man's statement that he intends to devote almost his entire fortune to charitable works has aroused much discussion. This is because it will accomplish much good. It is a praiseworthy endeavor, but there are many other agencies which accomplish just as much good. Take Hostetter's Stomach Bitters for instance—the great American remedy. For fifty years it has cured constipation, dyspepsia and all the ills which arise from weak digestion. This medicine will keep the stomach in good shape and the bowels regular. It is a wonderful restorative tonic and health builder. It is also a preventative for malaria, fever and ague. Ask for it, and insist upon getting it. See that a Private Revenue Stamp covers the neck of the bottle.

"Preserve and prosper." Take Hood's Sarsaparilla faithfully and it will cure scrofula, salt rheum, boils, pimples and all blood humors; also dyspepsia, rheumatism, catarrh and that tired feeling. It never disappoints. Sick headache is cured by Hood's Pills. 25c.

—The mystery surrounding the body of the dead child found in the Moscow cemetery last week is still unsolved. The sexton cannot account for the deed. He accidently ran over some fresh dirt covered with old grass and leaves. He dug down about two feet and to his surprise struck a box and in it found a child covered with lime and wrapped in rags. A scar was found on the back of the head and many believe the child was murdered. Others think the child died from natural causes and, parents being too poor to buy a lot, buried it in this manner. The affair has created some excitement, and some one may yet unravel the gruesome mystery.

—The Secretary of the Interior has for several days been considering the cases on appeal from the opinion of the Commissioner of the General Land Office known as the "white pine contests in North Idaho." About half the cases have been disposed of, all of which have been decided in favor of the settlers, as against the State of Idaho.

—Friend Bratton of the Peck Press says there is serious talk of an electric road from Mt. Idaho to Lewiston, taking in all the towns on Camas prairie. Power is to be generated from the south fork of Clearwater and be distributed by wire. Mt. Idaho Mail says "such a road would be a dangerous competitor of a railroad should one ever be built onto the prairie, both for the freight and passenger traffic. It could be constructed for considerably less per mile than a good wagon road and over ground where it would be almost impossible to build any other kind of road."

—Married, in Genesee, on Tuesday morning, May 1, 1900, Mr. John Kempf and Miss Annie Jacobs, at the Catholic church, Rev. Father Keyzer officiating. Few relatives and friends witnessed the solemn ceremony after which the people drove to the bride's home at Uniontown where the remainder of the day was spent in games, eating and drinking. The young couple returned to Genesee next morning and at once commenced housekeeping in their residence formerly owned and occupied by the groom's parents. Mr. Kempf has lived here since boyhood, operating a blacksmith shop for the past few years. The bride is well and favorably known in Genesee and is a sister to Mrs. John Troutman. Their numerous friends extend best wishes as they start out on their matrimonial voyage together.

—If the programme was carried out as arranged Will Mertes was married last Tuesday to a Wisconsin damsel. Too bad Will is not here to receive a hot charavari.

—Miss Permeal French, state superintendent of schools, visited our schools Wednesday and found everything in excellent order. The lady is large and intelligent and is doing her duty in the upbuilding of the schools of Idaho.

—Ladies have courts, too, as well as the sterner sex. They arbitrate their difficulties, thus doing away with lawyers and juries.

—The new machines sold to farmers of late for the destruction of squirrels are accomplishing much good. Thousands of the little animals have turned up their toes and the machines are pronounced all right.

—G. L. Simpson, the hog buyer, is after more meat for the Spokane market. The price is about the same as it has been for a month. Simpson let a porker run over him the other day and as a result he is limping.

—Mr. and Mrs. Rue Burdic left on Monday's train for Urbana, Illinois, for a visit of several weeks. They will also visit in Nebraska. May they have a pleasant journey and return safely is the wish of all.

Cannot always win on your shape, boys; get in, and PLAY BALL!

Baking Powder Economy

The manufacturers of Royal Baking Powder have always declined to produce a cheap baking powder at the sacrifice of quality.

The Royal is made from the most highly refined and wholesome ingredients, and is the embodiment of all the excellence possible to be attained in the highest class baking powder.

Royal Baking Powder costs only a fair price, and is cheaper at its price than any similar article.

Samples of mixtures made in imitation of baking powders, but containing alum, are frequently distributed from door to door, or given away in grocery stores. Such mixtures are dangerous to use in food, and in many cities their sale is prohibited by law. Alum is a corrosive poison, and all physicians condemn baking powders containing it.

How a Little Boy Was Saved.

Washington, D. C.—"When our boy was about 16 months old he broke out with a rash which was thought to be measles. In a few days he had a swelling on the left side of his neck and it was decided to be mumps. He was given medical attendance for about three weeks when the doctor said it was scrofula and ordered a salve. He wanted to lance the sore, but I would not let him and continued giving him medicine for about four months when the bunch broke in two places and became a running sore. Three doctors said it was scrofula and each ordered a blood medicine. A neighbor told me of a case somewhat like our baby's which was cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. I decided to give it to my boy and in a short while his health improved and his neck healed so nicely that I stopped giving him the medicine. The sore broke out again, however, whereupon I again gave him Hood's Sarsaparilla and its persistent use has accomplished a complete cure. I do not think there will be even a scar left. I cannot speak too highly of Hood's Sarsaparilla and I recommend it everywhere I get a chance." MRS. NETTIE CHASE, 47 K St., N. E.

Like Magic.

"A complication of troubles, dyspepsia, chronic catarrh and inflammation of the stomach, rheumatism, etc., made me miserable. Had no appetite until I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acted like magic. I am thoroughly cured." N. B. SEELEY, 1874 West 14th Ave., Denver, Col.

If you have failed to get relief from other remedies try Hood's Sarsaparilla. It cures when all others fail, because it is Peculiar to Itself.

—Mrs. W. A. Lucas came down from Spangle Wednesday to visit Mrs. Geo. Hobson and people.

—Mrs. Geo. Wieber, Mrs. and Miss Thee and others were up from Uniontown Saturday on a shopping expedition.

—Fireman Smith, who has been a very sick man, is improved, Dr. Ehlen, the attending physician, informs the NEWS.

—Preaching at Cong'l church next Sabbath both morning and evening. Evening subject, "The Sympathy of the Worlds."

—R. Pickering knocked out the grip in the tenth round with a solarplexus blow and will try to come to his office today or tomorrow.

—Mrs. Seymour visited in Spokane several days the past week, returning Wednesday with her sister. The conductor keeps good hours now.

—F. D Hasbrouck presided over the Nez Perce county republican convention, Saturday, and was selected as one of the delegates to the Boise state convention.

—Operator Wheeler was called to Lewiston Wednesday to take charge of the station there for a short time. The enjoyable bicycle rides will have to be postponed for a while.

—The Rimrock Mill has been putting in over time the past week grinding flour for the reservation trade. Some of the new towns are using large quantities of Genesee flour.

—May baskets were distributed about town very generously. NEWS people were remembered with some handsome ones containing home-made candy, etc. Thanks to the donors.

—A new time table on the Northern Pacific R's went into effect this week. Train leaves Genesee 8:05 a. m. and arrives in Spokane 1:15 p. m. Returning arrives in Genesee 2:35. On the Clearwater branch trains will run to Orofino and Stuart Mondays, Wednesdays and Saturdays, leaving Potlatch at 8 in the morning —May first occurred the happy event. On this date Mr. Ole Miller and Miss Marta Loon were united in the bonds of matrimony at the home of Mrs. Miller, Rev. Chr. Anderson tying the knot. The ceremony took place in the presence of relatives and friends who gathered and enjoyed the afternoon and evening at games, eating and drinking. Mr. Miller is well known in this community as an exemplary and industrious young farmer, and displays good judgment in selecting Miss Loon as a life partner. Mr. Miller and his bride have a lovely farm home adjoining Genesee on the south and start out on their voyage with bright prospects. Their many friends extend hearty congratulations.

COTTON IS AGAIN KING.

FROM a price of 5 cents per pound a few months ago, raw cotton has gone up until it sells today at 9 cents per pound. Worse still—the supply is short, in the face of a demand larger than for many seasons.

The world looks to America for its cotton. As our new crop will not be marketed until 1901, it is unreasonable to look for a drop in cotton goods before that time.

But remember one thing: I purchased all my cotton goods before the advance and am selling them at the last season's prices, giving my customers the advantage of the increase instead of taking the extra profit for myself as our other merchants are doing all over the country.

My new spring stock is now complete and at the low prices of last year.

London, May 1.—The latest news from the Orange Free State indicates that, though the Boers have vacated Thabanchu, they have done so in order to occupy stronger positions.

On Sunday, April 29, General Dewet made an effort to turn French's eastern flank, which was only foiled by the timely after vigorous maneuvers. The Boers hold the ridges to the eastward, whence they will probably fall back when the pressure of superior numbers increases. The British casualties sustained during the Thabanchu fighting were slight.

MINES AND MINING NEWS

OUR NORTHWESTERN MINES.

Items Gleaned From Late Reports—All Districts Are Being Developed—A Prosperous Year is Predicted—Mining Notes and Personals.

Dan Reynolds of the Dixie Butte country, Ore., near Prarie City, brings particulars of the recent rich strike in the Copper King mine, owned by United Eastern Mining company of Portland, who is at the head of a working company of Pendleton people. The strike was made in No. 1 tunnel, and consisted of a two-foot vein of rich pyritic ore, assaying an average of $333.50 per ton in gold, with additional copper and silver values.

A rich strike has been made in the 300-foot tunnel on the Tip Top mine, two and a half miles from Bonanza, on the Sumpter-Prairie City, Ore., road. At a vertical depth of 90 feet a 12-foot ledge assays $25 across the face. Last week an 18-inch streak was encountered which assayed $200 per ton in free gold.

S. H. Hayes, an old-time mining man from Camp McKinney, B. C., has purchased the Rambler-Cariboo mine, near Quartzburg, from L. Lawrence, of Sumpter, Ore.

The exceptionally fine weather of the past week has done much to improve the condition of roads leading out of Sumpter, Ore., to the mines. The Granite road is still impassable, though the Geiser, Prairie City, Quartzburg, Lyon City and Robinsville roads are rapidly becoming good.

There are a number of ore pending, two on Palmer mountain and one on Mount Capacca. Details are not made public. It is known, however, that the three deals will be closed within a week and probably be consummated within 30 days. The capital comes from Indianapolis, Milwaukee and New York.

The main vein in the Fairview Mountain tunnel has not been crossed. Assays are running well and the vein continues of good width and to give good values.

Contracts will soon be let for the longest mining ditch in the world. It will be 93 miles long, beginning at Rogue River Falls and terminating at Gold Hill, southern Oregon. It will drain 100,000 acres of gold placer land, and will cost $700,000, a considerable portion of which amount is subscribed by Portland capitalists.

A rich strike of chalcopyrite ore has been made in the cross-cut at the 100-foot level in the Buckhorn mine in Deadwood camp. The ore has an exceedingly rich appearance and the management are well pleased. It is rumored that the Sunrise claim in Deadwood camp has been purchased from Frost and Bigley by the Mount Lade Company, whose property it adjoins.

The claim for the oldest copper mine in the United States is made for Santa Rita del Cobre mine in Grant county, New Mexico. It was worked by the Spaniards more than 100 years ago. Governor Otero of New Mexico also claims the first gold mining in the United States was in that territory, on the placers in the Taos valley, Taos county.

The strike in the Park, near Wallace, Idaho, continues to be the theme of conversation among the stock investors. The vein on which the Park is located is a large one, which has been traced for miles. There are four incorporated companies filing claims on it, the Park, Springfield, Comet and Champion, with 11 claims between them, besides a number not staked. Parties who have been over the ground say that they all present the same general surface showing.

The big strike made from the Chloride Queen, near Wallace, Idaho, are that the amount of ore in the face of the drift shows a steady increase, and for the first time since the tunnel cut the vein, over 500 feet back, there are two clean walls to the vein. There has always been one good wall, sometimes the foot and at others the hanging, but never both at once before.

A transfer of a half interest in the Big Buffalo mine, in Buffalo district, Idaho, by which Charles Sweeny of Spokane becomes the sole owner, was practically completed at Grangeville last week.

Activity in Granite, Ore., camp has received a renewed impetus during the past week through the starting up of the May Queen mill, a successful run of the chlorination plant just installed at the Cougar mine and a big strike at the Strasburg mine. The May Queen mine, which is about half a mile north of the Red Boy, and about four miles from Granite, promises to become one of the large producers of the camp. The mill is now dropping 10 stamps and four concentrators, crushing about 30 tons of ore a day, but the mill is so constructed that 20 more stamps and eight more concentrators can easily be added. It is the intention of the management to install this additional equipment, as the mill is running like clockwork and there are about 100,000 tons of ore blocked out. At the Cougar mine, the first run of the new chlorination plant proved an entire success. Manager John Larkin has gone to Everett with the result of his 12 days' run, which is valued at about $5,000. The Cougar is about three miles north of Granite, and also promises to take its place among the steady producers of the camp.

The Quilp ground is about the liveliest spot in Eureka district. The buildings for the concentrator plant are being rushed with all possible speed, and the machinery is being put in place, giving employment to a small army of men.

The Morning Glory is looking, as a whole, better than ever, there being some very rich ore, but it is not in large quantities. A new strike of soft ore from 12 to 18 inches in width and 70 feet long gives an average value of $40 per ton.

Another townsite has been started in the Myers Creek district. Molson is the name, and it is located on Baker creek, one mile south of the international boundary line and about five miles west of Chesaw on the Chesaw-Oroville road.

No work is being done on the Lone Pine except in pushing the tunnel. It will be completed in time to be used as an exit for ore. It is not probable that the custom mill, being put up by the Republic Reduction company will be prepared to handle the ore for several weeks.

Development is high in Chesaw when E. S. Jackson, an old-time prospector, arrived in Chesaw last week with an ounce of nuggets filled with coarse gold dust, the result of only two or three hours' work on the placer claim owned by Jackson & Quinn, on Mary Ann creek, about four miles east of Chesaw.

There seems no reason to doubt that the Republic Reduction company will have all the ore it can treat and that its capacity will have to be doubled within 30 days after it starts up, if the process is a success. All who have any knowledge of the treatment of ores like those of this camp seem confident that the process will be wholly successful. The last of the big tanks for the mill is here, and it will not take long to get it in place, and shortly thereafter the plant will start up. These tanks are the largest pieces that have ever been brought into camp. Each of the tanks weighs over 20,000 pounds. Their immense weight made it impossible to move them until the roads got hard.

In a Boiler Explosion.

Tifton, O., May 1.—Five men were killed and three injured by a boiler explosion here in the mill of J. N. Bray & Co. The dead are: Luther Bragg, Henry Chambers, Gus Nicholson, Jack Castle and Will Houston (colored). Injured: J. C. Chambers, Gus Nicholson, Jack Castle and Will Houston (colored). Injured: J. C. Crane, lumber inspector, may die; Westley McPhaul, and an unknown negro.

The cause of the explosion is not known.

Forest Fires in New Jersey.

Hammonton, N. J., May 1.—Forest fires at Pleasant Mills destroyed the Junior Order of American Mechanics' hall, including the lodge furniture and paraphernalia.

At Batso, one mile beyond, seven dwellings houses were burned.

This fire was started at Atsion, 10 miles away, by an old woman who was burning brush on a small cranberry bog. It has traveled over thousands of acres of timber land, and the lowest estimate of the damage done is $150,000.

The proportion of divorces to marriages in Australia is very much higher than those in other countries, except Denmark, Switzerland and the United States.

THE BOERS WERE TOO SWIFT

ENGLISH IN HOT PURSUIT.

They Have Plenty of Troops—Ought to Wipe the Boers Out if They Overtake Them—Several Transports Have Arrived.

London, April 30.—The total absence of war office news from the seat of war in South Africa, it is presumed, indicates that operations are progressing, while it is deemed prudent to keep secret. So far as the situation in the southeastern part of the Free State can be worked out from the latest dispatches the main body of the Boers, composed of the forces recently holding Thabanchu, Lecuw Kop and Dewetsdorp, is retiring, probably with a view to joining in the neighborhood of Ladybrand, the commandos from the vicinity of Wepener who, according to a dispatch from Aliwalnorth, dated April 28, made good their retreat to Ladybrand. The main body of the Boers is being followed by the Generals Hamilton, French, Brabant and Hart, while General Rundle also is on the spot.

The British thus have an overwhelmingly superior force and ought to wipe out the Boers if they succeed in overtaking them and bringing them to bay.

It may be assumed that the Boers are to the eastward of a line drawn from Thabanchu to Wepener. The retreat, it seems, is being carried out without fighting. The dispatches that the Boers have sent a good start and the dispatches say that they are not hampered much by transport and leave no visible wheel tracks behind them on the veldt. This militates against the probability of their being overtaken and forced to a decisive action. While the British outnumber them at such a battle they come at any moment the chance seems even that the retreating commandos from the forces of the centre of the Free State Queen mill, a successful run of the chlorination plant just installed at the Cougar mine and a big strike at the Strasburg mine. The May Queen mine, which is about half a mile north of the Red Boy, and about four miles from Granite, promises to become one of the large producers of the camp. The mill is now dropping 10 stamps and four concentrators, crushing about 30 tons of ore a day, but the mill is so constructed that 20 more stamps and eight more concentrators can easily be added. During the entire session of the United States senate the 16th Instant the Alaskan civil code bill, providing for the mining of gold along the Alaskan beach and other matters was under discussion. The measure was finally perfected and the following governing beach mining was incorporated: "That, subject only to general limitations that may be necessary to exempt navigation from artificial obstructions, all lands and shoal waters below mean high tide on the shore, bays and inlets of Bering sea, within the jurisdiction of the United States, shall be subject to exploration for gold and other precious metals by citizens of the United States, persons who have legally declared their intentions to become citizens under such reasonable rules and regulations as the miners in the several mining districts may have heretofore made, or may hereafter make, governing the temporary possession thereof for exploration and mining purposes, until otherwise provided by law."

BRITISH COLUMBIA.

The Athleson, in Boundary, owned by the Mack brothers, of Spokane, has come into a rich and large body of ore. It was discovered by Ben Bunnel who is engaged in the Big Bend country.

Thos. Bodie will be in operation again shortly. It is the southern extension of the San Poil. There is an incline shaft on the property that is 345 feet deep.

The Waterloo is now doing good work and treating between 80 and 90 tons daily. The work on the raise is progressing finely, and good progress is being made on the drift.

The Quilp ground is about the liveliest spot in Eureka district. The buildings for the concentrator plant are being rushed with all possible speed, and the machinery is being put in place, giving employment to a small army of men.

The Morning Glory is looking, as a whole, better than ever, there being some very rich ore, but it is not in large quantities. A new strike of soft ore from 12 to 18 inches in width and 70 feet long gives an average value of $40 per ton.

Another townsite has been started in the Myers Creek district. Molson is the name, and it is located on Baker creek, one mile south of the international boundary line and about five miles west of Chesaw on the Chesaw-Oroville road.

No work is being done on the Lone Pine except in pushing the tunnel. It will be completed in time to be used as an exit for ore. It is not probable that the custom mill, being put up by the Republic Reduction company will be prepared to handle the ore for several weeks.

Development is high in Chesaw when E. S. Jackson, an old-time prospector, arrived in Chesaw last week with an ounce of nuggets filled with coarse gold dust, the result of only two or three hours' work on the placer claim owned by Jackson & Quinn, on Mary Ann creek, about four miles east of Chesaw.

There seems no reason to doubt that the Republic Reduction company will have all the ore it can treat and that its capacity will have to be doubled within 30 days after it starts up, if the process is a success. All who have any knowledge of the treatment of ores like those of this camp seem confident that the process will be wholly successful. The last of the big tanks for the mill is here, and it will not take long to get it in place, and shortly thereafter the plant will start up. These tanks are the largest pieces that have ever been brought into camp. Each of the tanks weighs over 20,000 pounds. Their immense weight made it impossible to move them until the roads got hard.

In a Boiler Explosion.

Tifton, O., May 1.—Five men were killed and three injured by a boiler explosion here in the mill of J. N. Bray & Co. The dead are: Luther Bragg, Henry Chambers, Gus Nicholson, Jack Castle and Will Houston (colored). Injured: J. C. Chambers, Gus Nicholson, Jack Castle and Will Houston (colored). Injured: J. C. Crane, lumber inspector, may die; Westley McPhaul, and an unknown negro.

The cause of the explosion is not known.

Forest Fires in New Jersey.

Hammonton, N. J., May 1.—Forest fires at Pleasant Mills destroyed the Junior Order of American Mechanics' hall, including the lodge furniture and paraphernalia.

At Batso, one mile beyond, seven dwellings houses were burned.

This fire was started at Atsion, 10 miles away, by an old woman who was burning brush on a small cranberry bog. It has traveled over thousands of acres of timber land, and the lowest estimate of the damage done is $150,000.

The proportion of divorces to marriages in Australia is very much higher than those in other countries, except Denmark, Switzerland and the United States.

IDAHO.

The Boise chamber of commerce is to be incorporated.

The elocution department of the university is preparing to present "The Rivals."

Weiser now has five mails per day, as the four daily trains on the Short Line all carry mail.

W. A. Wright's flouring mill at Fletcher burned last week. Loss, $6000; insurance, $1000.

The annual encampment of the G. A. R., department of Idaho, will be held in Weiser, June 7 and 8.

The tenth annual convention of the State Christian Endeavor will be held in Caldwell from June 5th to 7th.

Two hundred and nineteen coal workers in the Lost River country are involved in a water suit in the Challis court.

The spring term of the district court will meet in Moscow June 4. Judge Steele held court at Lewiston last week.

The lawsuits now pending between politicians will cost Nez Perce county less than $40,000 before they are adjudicated.

At the state school land sale at Weiser George Lindsay disposed of 1280.58 acres for $13,258. The land is in the valley of the Snake in the vicinity of Weiser. One piece brought $16 and another $14, the remainder going at $10.

At Moscow the body of an infant was found in a plain pine box, which had been smuggled into the cemetery and buried without the knowledge of the sexton. Evidence was produced that a bludgeon had been used by the unknown murderer.

The sawmill of L. A. Porter was totally consumed by fire at Lewiston. The plant was under lease to Charles Rice for 20 years. It had a daily cut of 000 feet of lumber burned, besides a box car belonging to the Northern Pacific. The loss is about $6,000, with no insurance. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Postmasters have been appointed for Idaho as follows: Lenore, Lewis county, Lemhi county, vice William H. Brown, resigned; Ole H. Torgenson, Park, Latah county, vice Nelson Regua, resigned, and Harriet Haverfield, Roseworth, Cassia county, vice C. A. Owens, resigned.

Jarret Bolin, a farmer in the Clearwater valley, was killed recently by a train. He was crossing a bridge near the mouth of the Potlatch when the train overtook him. He stepped aside on the trestle to a safe position, but just as the locomotive reached him the current of air took his hat off. In reaching for his hat he was struck by the train and thrown from the bridge, a distance of 15 feet.

The rural mail delivery will be established over a route starting from the Moscow postoffice south to north line of J. H. Hibbs' ranch, a distance of 10 miles, thence east to Ingwalle Smith's place, four miles, thence north to Blaine, thence to Moscow. The route will accommodate 220 families, or an estimated population of 1000. A mail delivery every day except Sundays and holidays. Persons desiring the service, though they may not live directly on the route traversed, can be served by putting up a mail box at a point on the route the carrier can pass to and from. The box can be home-made or purchased for 75 cents apiece at local hardware stores. It is expected the service will be instituted May 10. Caleb Ayers has been recommended as carrier and J. H. Hibbs as substitute.

In the Senate.

A resolution introduced by Senator Perkins calling on the secretary of the treasury to send to the senate the imports by countries for the year under the reciprocity agreement that went into effect in 1898, was adopted Thursday.

Senator Pettus then addressed the senate in opposition to the resolution declaring that Nathan B. Scott is entitled to his seat as senator from West Virginia.

By a vote of 20 to 20 the senate refused to consider the resolution of sympathy with the Boers.

Claude M. Johnson, chief of the bureau of engraving and printing, has tendered his resignation to Secretary Gage.

The conferees on the Puerto Rico bill unveiling for the appointment of temporary officers in the island were unable to agree today. It was determined to report a complete disagreement.

The president signed the Hawaiian bill.

Mr. Dalzell of Pennsylvania presented a report from the committee on ways and means recommending that the Tawney resolution, calling upon the secretary of the treasury for information concerning the amount and character of material used in the manufacture of oleomargarine by manufacturers, as shown by duplicates in possession of the internal revenue bureau, lie upon the table.

Brigadier General Merriam was again on the stand in the Coeur d'Alene investigation Monday with Attorney Robertson conducting the cross-examination.

"Would you consider it right," asked Robertson, "that federal troops forced men at the point of the bayonet to protect the property of mine owners and that a similar protection be withheld from the men?"

"I would use just as much power and just as much influence," replied Merriam, "to have mine owners observe their obligations as to compel mine men to observe theirs."

Concerning the permit proclamation, Merriam said he had suggested to Bartlett Sinclair, the civil officer in charge, certain features which should be embodied. These were adopted by Sinclair.

When Robertson sought to show that the war department had not been sufficiently advised as to the permit system, General Merriam said that was for the war department to determine.

The witness was asked if the dispatches of Secretary Alger did not in effect say: "Let the permit system alone."

Merriam said he had not interfered in this system or labor affairs in any way, except for the purpose of maintaining order.

TAKES A WOMAN

To Insult Another Woman in a Sure, Effective Way.

"It takes a woman to insult another woman," casually remarked the man with a flower in his coat, "and I don't mean to insult the sex by saying it, either. It is simple fact." "Oh, very well," assented his listener. "But what do you call a broader 'simple fact' when you make such a sweeping charge?" "Well, for instance," said this man with a flower in his coat, "it was at a reception in honor of the wife of a very pretty young woman, a local artist, was bidden to sing. She happened to have with her a new song, which, rather than disappoint the hostess, who depended on her voice for entertaining the guests, she began bravely a well-known German song, which she does unusually remarkably well. And then was an eyewitness to a scene that illustrates my 'sweeping charge.' Seated within a few feet

DAWSON, N. W. T., CANADA, Apr. 9, 1900.

FRIENDS HOPP & POWER:—Mr. Harris, son Charlie and I arrived at Skagway and there joined a Portland party. With our possessions we made it over the White Pass R'y all right. Encountered a severe ten days storm at Skagway. With dogs we mushed it for some distance. At Bennett we bought a team of three dogs and started down the lakes, finding good trails and some bad. Frequently we got into the water. One of the party fell through the ice and came near going under. By the timely assistance of one of the boys he was dragged out and given a change of wearing apparel. At LaBarge we paid $5 for bunk privileges and used our own blankets. Paid $45 for a dog here and struck out for Hootchike, passing an Indian camp where a man was breathing his last. 60 below zero. We dress warm. Our parka is a drilling garment similar to a night-gown trimmed with fur. Along the Yukon oats sell at 25c per pound or $500 per ton. If Genesee farmers could market their crop here they would have a fortune.

We arrived at Dawson well. Here we are called chee chakos, an Indian name for tenderfeet. Sold our dogs at $40 a piece, and if we had arrived a month sooner we could have realized $100 each from Nome parties. The trio secured work with the North American Trans. & Trade Co. with good salaries. I believe this camp with the A. C. Co. and A. E. Co. own as much goods as you will find in Latah county. The people estimate that there will be more gold taken out this spring than ever before. Nearly everything is paid for in gold dust at $16 per oz. The saloons make big money. It would surprise your merchants to see the profits that are made here. I saw a wagon (3½ farm) sell for $1000 and it was second hand. There are hundreds of people walking the streets looking for work. As soon as the river opens a very large number are going to Nome. Some give it a black eye but most of them say this summer will see there the greatest mining camp in the world. At some future time I will attempt to send you more news. Regards to all. F. JONES.

B. M. EASTERBROOKS.

—Rents are on the decline in Lewiston.

—John Reilly was in Genesee from Uniontown the first of the week.

—The valley strawberries are ripening, and will be in the market soon.

—Farmer Beckman has fall wheat that is good for fifty bushels per acre if nothing happens it.

—August Beckman received news of the death of his mother, aged 70 years, who died in Michigan last week.

—W. A. Nixon last week received a message conveying the sad news of the death of his father in Iowa, aged 84 years.

—Liveryman Hickman took two loads of trunks and traveling men to Grangeville the past week, leaving Mr. De Bow in charge of the barn.

—The rattlesnake crop is reported fairly good in Steptoe canyon. One was killed last week with its caudle appendage ornamented with nine rattles and a button.

—Mr. Gus. Dochow has purchased the W. H. Glidden farm a few miles east of Genesee, paying $3000 for the 160 acres. Gus got a crop with the deal and says he will not need to worry about a Dakota storm destroying it.

—Miss Lottie Tillotson, an accomplished elocutionist of St. Paul, Minn., will give an exhibition at Elliott hall, Thursday evening, May 24, under the auspices of the Rathbone Lodge. The entertainment will include songs and instrumental music by local talent. The mandolin club will be present and render several selections. Price 25 cents, children 15 cents; no extra charge for reserved seats now on sale at Kennedy's store.

—Secretary of Agriculture Wilson, recognizing the fact that the extension of the rural free delivery service of the postoffice department opens up opportunities for extending the work of the weather bureau to the agricultural classes, has directed the chief of the weather bureau to take advantage of this system for the purpose of more completely furnishing the farmers and residents of rural sections with the daily weather forecast and cold-wave and frost warnings.

—The free homestead bill passed the house last week, and Senator Shoup wires "rest assured it will pass the senate." Good news. It is estimated that in the reservation there are 3000 quarter sections of land occupied by actual settlers. They were to pay $600 for each quarter section, or $1,800,000 in the aggregate. The passing of this bill releases the obligation of payment and gives to the settlers this large sum of money. Many of the people will prove up this fall without being compelled to pay a cent and thus put on a solid financial footing.

—The rain decended in torrents in the T. E. Miller and Homer Thomas sections last Friday. The old timers never saw the equal before. Water in the ravines attained a depth of four or five feet in about ten minutes, carrying farm machinery bridges, fences and rubbish down stream.

—Last week the car on the Juliaetta tramway, loaded with lumber and five men, in descending struck a pillar in the lower house that supported a scaffold with several tons of wheat. The grain came down with much force and the crew barely escaped death. James Bratcher was caught by the falling timber and greatly injured. Three of his ribs and left leg were broken. The Register says the man was seriously hurt but will recover.

—Some great fields of grain about Genesee. Nearly every farmer has a field which give promise of forty bushels or more per acre of wheat. Messrs. Haymond, Jain, Moersch, Davis, Mervyn, Gross and their neighbors have grain that would do an easterner good to feast their eyes on. If the prospects hold the Genesee valley this fall will be full of milk and honey, peace and plenty. The country never has had as fine a stand of grain as now. And along with these magnificent fields can be seen orchards white with blossoms, giving promise of a great crop. The trees are so heavily loaded that it will be necessary to thin the fruit out as it matures in order to save the trees from being ruined. After the rest last year every bush will be weighted down this season with fruit of the choicest quality. Give us a fair market for our products is all that is desired now.

EDITOR NEWS:—Through the columns of your paper it is desired to call attention to the fact that a Horticultural Inspector is soon to be appointed for district No. 1. Parties at interest may have an opportunity to express their preference to Prof. Aldrich, member of the state board, or state inspector, A. McPherson, who has been requested to be here the first of May. The orchard work, never before so well underway, should be completed and those who have not already done so should hasten to scrape the rough bark from orchard trees with a blunt edged tool and destroy the codlin larva and pupa found hibernating there, as well as in the ground underneath. All this should be completed forthwith and the orchard sprayed within ten days after the blooms drop, using one-fourth Paris green to fifty gallons Bordeaux Mixture. After doing all this render the new inspector all the assistance and co-operation within your power and you will get your reward from the increased value of your orchard products.

H. A. RUSSELL,
State Inspector Dist. No. 1.

—Wheat is beginning to head in the Tammany section. The harvester will be able to start up there next month if the dry season does not interfere.

—The graduating exercises occur next week Friday, the 1900 class being composed of Miss Walby, Miss Swank, Miss Rosenstein, and Ora McMahon. Flower gardens are being located and about Friday morning bombarding will commence, and will be kept up until the attackers are loaded with flowers of every color. The graduates begin to feel the flutter of excitement that will not wear off until the commencement exercises are over. The motto is Gradatim, and the class colors adopted, crimson and gold. The graduates are preparing essays and oration and will no doubt acquit themselves creditably. Neat programs and invitations have been issued at this office.

—Some excitement around town last Friday. The warm weather of that forenoon brought up a storm very suddenly about noon with a little thunder. About one o'clock a bolt of lightning descended, striking the hayfork track suspended from the gable of Flinn & Porter's barn, tearing a hole in the roof, then sliding down on the corrugated annex and jumping straddle of a large post, making kindling wood of it. Messrs. Thompson, Geo. Steltz and Deputy Sheriff Daylong were standing within a few feet of where the lightning was dancing a jig, and for a moment they thought they were elected for a hot time. George says the first thing he knew he was in the air kicking to come down and get out of there. Others thought they could taste brimstone. Some fainted. The scholars at the time were in Elliott hall, and Col. Hollister had all he could do with a club to keep them in and avoid a tumbling race down the steps. As it was they split bars on the floor. The teachers were not a bit frightened! Well, anyway, no one was hurt and it was the worst scare Genesee has had from that source. Little rain fell. Northeast of town the floodgates were left ajar, and in a couple of hours Cow creek overflowed and for half a day Genesee was located on a river quarter of a mile wide in places.

—The danger of counterfeiting has led Secretary Gage to adopt a new plan for the designs of our government paper money. Hereafter, all issues will have uniform designs whether they are treasury notes, greenbacks, gold or silver certificates. The $1 bill will bear a spread eagle, the $2 bills will have the head of Washington and the $5 bills will have an Indian head. The idea is that the people will grow familiar with these, as they never can with so many and such diverse designs as we now have, and that counterfeits will be more readily detected.

—From a letter H. Nelson sends to his daughter, Mrs. Geo. Hobson, we are permitted to make extracts. Mr. Nelson finds his son Ceph doing better than he had written—could easily sell his place for $3000 and has about $1400 worth of cattle and horses. All have enjoyed good health. Mrs. Nelson purchased a quarter section adjoining her son's and a house is now being built. Each of the boys secured a quarter 1½ miles from Ceph's'. Horses have been purchased and the boys will put in fifty acres to oats and barley. Mr. Nelson says that is a fine looking country and believes it is as fertile as the Palouse. Says the air seems a little bracing to him. The town of Wetaskiwin from a business point is like a bee hive; in resident population is but little more than one half of that of Genesee. It does a large business. Wheat is not a very sure crop. Potatoes do well, Ceph raising over 400 bushels per acre last year.. Mr. Nelson winds up the letter by saying he will send the NEWS something for publication.

"It is with a good deal of pleasure and satisfaction that I recommend Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy," says Druggist A. W. Sawtelle, of Hartford, Conn. "A lady customer, seeing the remedy exposed for sale on my show case, said to me: 'I really believe that medicine saved my life the past summer while at the shore,' and she became so enthusiastic over its merits that I at once made up my mind to recommend it in the future. Recently a gentleman came into my store so overcome with colic pains that he sank at once to the floor. I gave him a dose of this remedy which helped him. I repeated the dose and in fifteen minutes he left my store smilingly informing me that he felt as well as ever." Sold by all druggists.

Saturday two laborers discovered the body of a man in the smelter yards of the Montana Ore Purchasing company at Butte. They were unloading a car of coke, and they found the body in one end of the car, where it had evidently lain for two months. An old-fashioned revolver, four chambers loaded and two empty, was lying by his side. Near the heart were two bullet holes, and in the top of the head was a deep wound, sufficient to have caused death. No papers or letters and nothing to identify him were found. It is either a case of suicide or murder, probably the latter.

Members of the North Montana Roundup Association, in session at Helena, endorsed the bill pending in the United States senate to extend the maximum time cattle may be transported on cars without unloading from 28 to 40 hours, and also condemned the bill seeking to prohibit the making of oleomargarine. Such a prohibition, the association declared, would take $3 to $4 from the value of each animal, that being the worth of the butter fat in each carcas for the manufacture of substitutes for butter.

The movement of the hop growers to train only one or two vines in the hills is a good one. It will make a better quality, and there is always sale for good hops. The hops will be richer and heavier and less liable to mold, and there will be less money paid out for picking and more coming per pound for the crop in the bale. If all poor grades of Oregon hops could be eliminated it would be a good thing for Oregon.

MINES AND MINING NEWS

OUR NORTHWESTERN MINES.

Items Gleaned From Late Reports—All Districts Are Being Developed—A Prosperous Year Is Predicted—Mining Notes and Personals.

It may strike the average observer that Butte mining men are the most litiguous aggregation of mine operators ever thrown together in a western mining district. That is a mistake. They are nothing of the sort. As a body they are honest, intelligent, enterprising and law-abiding. But they are tenacious of their rights, simply demanding that which they conceive belongs to them, and do not hesitate to appeal to the courts to secure them. There is nothing wrong in this.

REPUBLIC.

The Republic mill is assuming shape rapidly.

The raise in the Lone Pine is in a fine body of ore that is six feet wide.

The Republic company was sinking a shaft in the south drift of the 600-foot level.

Information has been received that work will not be resumed on the Big Lion for some weeks.

Superintendent Crummer is preparing the San Poil and Black Tail for stoping and will have them in shape to take out ore within two weeks.

The Insurgent shaft is going down about a foot a day. There is considerable water coming in and it retards progress considerably.

Work is progressing favorably on the shaft of the Tom Thumb. It has reached 206 feet depth. The amount of water bailed out daily is nearly 6000 gallons.

At the Morning Glory only one shift is at work. No work is being done on the winze. It is down only about 10 feet. A raise is being made to connect the winze with the surface, which is only about 12 feet up.

The work of enclosing the boiler at the Quilp is progressing favorably and will be completed soon. The big engine is in place and the compressed air tank will be in position within a few days.

Machinery for the big Republic mill is coming in rapidly. There is said to be about 70 teams on the work. As the roads are in fine condition it will not be more than 10 days before the last of the plant will be on the ground.

The new compressor plant for the Tom Thumb will be of modern design and of capacity to drive five Ingersoll drills. The shaft is down 220 feet. No more drifting will be done on the mine until the new machinery is in place.

Nearly all the machinery for the Republic Reduction Company's mill is in place and about ready for use. The superintendent states that every part has arrived; the belt and shafts having been the last parts to arrive from Grand Forks. The large leaching vats, eight feet in diameter and 15 feet long, were put in place last week and the big boiler is also ready for use. The building is 100x250 feet in dimensions.

At the Mountain Lion mine 20 men are now employed under ground, 10 on each of two shifts. Stoping ore on both the north and south ends is the principal work in hand. In the mill the full 20 stamps are running and crushing about 85 tons per day. The Huntington mills are hung up for the present for the purpose of ascertaining what can be done with the stamps alone. The ore is fed slower and stamped to a finer mesh, and the stamps are dropping quicker than usual.

BRITISH COLUMBIA.

A station has been cut on the 200-foot level of the inside shaft below the No. 6 tunnel of the Columbia and Kootenay, and sinking has been resumed.

The work of extending the levels and blocking out ore by raises and winzes proceeds as usual in the Josie and No. 1 mines. The force will be increased as soon as the company can secure air to operate more drills.

The new Nickel Plate hoist is ready for the rope, and the head frame is being painted. Sinking on the shaft is being prosecuted vigorously. An ore bin will be built as soon as the Red Mountain Railway Company locates the spur.

There can be little if any doubt that in a short time the Sullivan, situated northwesterly from Cranbrook, in the North Star district, East Kootenay, will become one of the greatest silver-lead mines in British Columbia, if not on the continent.

The shaft which is being sunk from the surface to connect with the upraise from the Black Bear tunnel is down about 60 feet and as upraising proceeds at the same time connection will be made in about three weeks. The shaft will then be enlarged to its full size and timbered.

The Le Roi at Rossland is now working to the full capacity of its machinery. This is only 60 per cent of the producing capacity of the mine. During the last 14 days of April the total shipments were 6,700 tons, an average of 479 tons a day, and this output is being maintained with 362 men on the payroll.

Last week the St. Eugene Consolidated Mining Company shipped 230 tons, or 10 carloads of concentrates to the smelter at Great Falls. This was the first shipment since the new concentrator was put in operation. From now on the mill will be kept running night and day. In this way in every 24 hours 250 tons of ore will be crushed and between 50 and 60 tons of concentrates turned out. There is a scarcity of machine miners in the camp. A number of situations are awaiting good men.

MINING NOTES.

Flattering reports still continue to come from the Tom Quick mine in Sheridan camp, Washington.

Mineral specimen dealers throughout the country are looking for fine specimens of rhodochrosite, rhodonite, stibnite, in fine crystals and pyromorphite specimens are in fair supply, but particularly choice specimens are scarce.

Speaking of mines, there is one right on the Palouse river which shows rock and assays not beaten in the whole mineral range of Idaho and Washington. But because it is right under their noses, however, people overlook it like a clay bank and go chasing off over far away divides in search of hidden wealth, sensibly remarks the Gazette.

Senator T. C. Taylor, one of the Pendleton parties who are interested in Birch creek coal claims, states that it was expected another expert would be there within two weeks to make an examination and report.

Parties owning the 2000-acre tract which Mr. Wells explored, have made no secret of it, and in no manner have attempted to inaugurate any boom in connection with it. They claim to merely desire to ascertain the possibilities, and if sufficient assurances through the medium of expert examinations and reports can be secured, the property will be developed, and it will not be long before coal will be mined from that land.

The Northwest Mining Company has just completed its survey of the Acme group, seven miles south of Kettle Falls, Wash. The group consists of five claims, upon which the company have a bond and have done a large amount of work. Bad air has driven the men out of the winze which had been sunk 110 feet.

Another strike on the range between Osburn and the Beaver drainage, Idaho, was made last week on the Homestake, a claim located by Arthur Webb last July. It was found in an open cut, which showed two feet of good concentrating ore, and an equal amount of iron, while the farther wall has not yet been reached.

What is said to be one of the most promising copper finds yet discovered in eastern Oregon was discovered by J. S. Strock, an old prospector and mining man. The find was made last week on the west slope of Salmon creek, near the Tom Paine mine, about nine miles west of Baker City. The lode is about 20 feet wide and carries copper bearing about 30 per cent. It is in a district that has heretofore been practically overlooked for that valuable mineral. Should the values stay at par throughout the limit of the lode the find will prove to be of immense value.

Palmer Mountain District.

The production of gold bullion for April from the Black Bear, War Eagle, Okanogan Free Gold and Golden Zone mines will be of much interest. Enough has already been taken from the plates, and the value of concentrates estimated to form a good approximation of the total value of the ores milled. About 600 tons were put through at the Okanogan, 300 at the Bear and 900 at the Zone, nearly 2000 tons altogether. The value of the product will not fall short of $36,000 in gold and will probably run above $40,000. There remains but the amalgam to be taken from the mortars and retorted.

The work of the past month has been highly satisfactory in the Palmer Mountain tunnel; 150 feet has been made, and in the distance three well defined veins have been crossed at 1200 feet vertical depth. Each of these veins is more than 10 feet across, and carries high values.

The Black Bear is getting much new stoping ground opened up, and the company is making arrangements to open up the War Eagle soon.

At the Puritan on Gold Hill they are in about 500 feet. The tunnel is running toward a junction of three veins showing large on the surface. The junction should be reached in 500 or 600 feet further.

At the Golden Zone there is at least 50,000 tons of ore in sight.

The Bull Frog, on Palmer mountain, continues to improve.

The Lakeview has just completed a shipment of high grade ore to Johnson's Landing, where it awaits a steamboat, accidents having happened to two of them.

The district has been visited by a number of mining men, several of whom have expressed a determination to return here again this season.

Went Through a Trestle.

St. Louis, May 8.—A washed out trestle leading to the Black ridge, south of St. Charles, Mo., caused a wreck of the "Katy Flyer," a fast incoming passenger train on the Missouri, Kansas & Texas railway and resulted in the death of John Boyle, fireman, and the fatal injuring of E. L. Palmer, engineer. Fireman Doyle was crushed to death by the engine, while Palmer was terribly scalded by escaping steam. The accident was caused by the recent heavy rain storm that had washed out the foundation of the high trestle. The engine and tender went down without warning, carrying along the baggage and smoking car. None of the passengers were injured.

Typographical union of Toronto, Canada, has declared for independent political action.

On May 1 all of the freight handlers on the New York Central went on a strike.

The find was made last winter on a nameless tributary of the river which empties into the Yukon, 12 miles above the mouth of Stewart river. The Standard Oil company, the biggest dividend payer among American industrial corporations, gladdened the hearts of its stockholders Tuesday by declaring a quarterly dividend of $10 per share, payable on June 10. This makes an aggregate of $30 per share which the great trust has placed to the credit of stockholders since January 1, last. John D. Rockefeller owns individually 310,000 shares of stock of the Standard Oil Company. His fortune will therefore be augmented by $3,100,000 as a result of the action taken by the board of directors. Since Jan. 1 J. D. Rockefeller has drawn dividends aggregating $12,400,000. This is, however, only a small portion of the amount to which Rockefeller has been entitled by reason of the earnings of the Standard Oil Company. The company owns only 51 per cent of its many subsidiary companies. Rockefeller owns the other 49 per cent. His total income therefore from all sources allied with the Standard Oil Company has been since January 1, 1900, approximately $24,000,000.

When they are sent to us on a trading errand, we always remember that they are not discriminating buyers, and we take especial pains to see that they get what both you and they want. —Mr. Lawler, of Salem, So. Dak., arrived last week to look over Idaho with a view to finding a home. He is so well pleased with our country and climate that he has decided to locate permanently. Mr. Lawler is a man of means and will return to Dakota to dispose of his interests there.

—In Idaho there are 30,000 acres of orchards. Of this number 10,000 acres are apple trees, 12,000 prune, 3,000, plum, 2,000 peach, 1,000 cherry, 1,000 apricot, nectarines and almonds, 300 grapes, and 700 small fruit. A fine showing for a young state. And nearly every tree in the 10,000 acres is loaded with blossom and good for from $1 to $5 each. Figure out the revenue from this sonrce.

—Delegates to the republican state convention at Lewiston—Messrs. Jain, Tweedt, Brewer, Platt and Hopp—were in attendance and saw how the other fellows raked in the plums. South Idaho secured four of the six delegates to the national convention. The delegates selected—Senator Geo. L. Shoup, W. B. Heyburn, J. F. Ailshie, L. L. Ormsby, Frank Gooding, Geo. A. Robethan, Mrs. J. B. West, of Lewiston, was elected as one of the alternates to go to Philadelphia. Judge Truitt of Latah county was not allowed to go, Mr Ailshie of Grangeville having the key to the combination. Judge Heyburn made the address of the day and it was a masterly one, punctured with frequent applause. Many silver republicans were delegates to this convention, among the most prominent being Chief Justice Huston of the supreme court, Secretary of State Mart Patrie, and ex-Attorney General George M. Parsons. The latter, we understand, is a candidate for governor, as is also Mr. Gooding, state senator from Lincoln county, who was on the scene. Marshal Ramsey and Jno. P. Vollmer have friends pushing them for the same office. The republicans feel sanguine they will carry the state this fall. In the event the governorship comes north, W. H. Savage, the census enumerator for Idaho, will be brought out for congress. The personnel of the delegates made this the most representative gathering of the party ever assembled in the state. After the convention there were clouds of blue smoke from burning perfectos and an abundance of smiles and happy words from the delegates. The announcement of Senator Shoup's name in the gathering always brought forth hearty responses and showed that he has a strong following in every corner of the state. Wonder if the next republican convention will be as harmonious when the state offices are being distributed? We hope so. Excellent resolutions were adopted and we take the liberty of reproducing a portion of them:

True to the principles of republican faith and recognizing the duty and care of a government founded thereon to all its people, both rich and poor alike, and not to any favored class, we denounce trusts as the most dangerous product of aggregated capital and we recommend the early adoption of such cooperative national and state legislation as will destroy their power for harm.

We are proud of the heroic and patriotic record made by our brave and gallant Idaho volunteers in the late war with Spain and against the insurgent forces in the Philippine islands.

In 1896 the republican party gave its pledge to the people that if it was returned to power prosperity should take the place of the universal business depression then prevailing. It has kept its promise. It has restored prosperity to the country, and if retained in power it will continue such legislative and administrative conditions as are necessary to the maintenance of such prosperity.

We commend the constant vigilance of Senator George L. Shoup in all matters affecting the interests and welfare of the people of Idaho, and congratulate the people of the state upon the splendid results of his efforts and the material benefits they have brought to every section of the commonwealth. We heartily endorse Senator Shoup's course in matters of national legislation as well, and especially his consistent support of the truly American administration of President McKinley.

—Col Hollister caught the spirit of progress and has improved his premises.

—Grand Master Turner arrived on yesterday's train for a time with our three linkers.

—We desire to express our thanks to the many friends who assisted us during the illness of our husband and brother. It is a kindness that will always be remembered.

A Rich Man's Project.

A rich man's statement that he intends to devote almost his entire fortune to charitable works has aroused much discussion. This is because it will accomplish much good. It is a praiseworthy endeavor, but there are many other agencies which accomplish just as much good. Take Hostetter's Stomach Bitters for instance—the great American remedy. For fifty years it has cured constipation, dyspepsia and all the ills which arise from weak digestion. This medicine will keep the stomach in good shape and the bowels regular. It is a wonderful restorative tonic and health builder. It is also a preventative for malaria, fever and ague. Ask for it, and insist upon getting it. See that a Private Revenue Stamp covers the neck of the bottle.

"Preserve and prosper." Take Hood's Sarsaparilla faithfully and it will cure scrofula, salt rheum, boils, pimples and all blood humors; also dyspepsia, rheumatism, catarrh and that tired feeling. It never disappoints.

Sick headache is cured by Hood's Pills. 25c.

FRIDAY, MAY 11, 1900.

—Soren Halvorsen is up from Lewiston.

—Mr. and Mrs. Hibbs visited Lewiston Sunday.

—The democratic caucus will be held tomorrow.

—Hot game of lawn tennis each evening now. Spectators can see the fun without charge.

—Frank Standish is spreading paint all over the Higgins residence—inside and out—this week.

—Mr. and Mrs. Dave Sampson rejoice over the arrival of an eight pound boy, which was born last Thursday.

—The school entertainment advertised for last Saturday night was postponed until tonight and should be all the better rendered.

—Saturday was a good trade day in Genesee. The man with a squirrel band around his hat, entertained the farmers with machine talk.

—W. J. Herman took in Spokane the past week and had a visit with Dr. Cox, a former resident of Genesee but now located at Everett, Wash.

—About twenty boys took part in the belling—charivari—Wednesday night, and as many more stood on the corners waiting the return of Captain Pete.

—We are informed that a number of members of the Christian church will go to Lewiston Sunday. A prominent evangelist of that faith from Cincinnati, Ohio, will conduct services.

—The ball game at Lewiston last week between the Normal club and the Potlatchers resulted in a score of 7 to 9 in favor of Potlatch. A few of the Genesee boys assisted the winners. Potlatch also defeated Cornwall at Cornwall last Sunday.

—Mr. Burdic, a young inventor of Michigan, relative of Miss Burdic, tarried in Genesee a few hours the other day. He has been spending the winter in California and intended to visit here several days, but received a message to hurry home on account of sickness in the family.

—Johnnie W. Spencer will conduct the morning service next Sunday at the Methodist church. Subject, "God's Deliverance." Regular service in the evening. Theme, "The Gospel Invitation." The League service will be omitted, the members being invited to Moscow.

—Phil McRoberts boarded Wednesday's passenger for the north, his destination being uncertain. He may land in Nome before we see him again. It is believed three hundred Idaho people are flocking to the coast and preparing to leave for Cape Nome during the next two weeks.

—We invite eastern people to take a look at us now—at our grain fields, orchards and herds. If a finer agricultural country can be found NEWS would like to know where it is located. The grain fields can not be duplicated east of the Rockies. Our orchards are in the pink of condition —could not look better. Homeseekers should come this way.

—The old city council met Monday evening and turned over the reins to the new officers. The new organized and adjourned to Wednesday evening, when a quorum failed to materialize. Mayor Beck and one or two councilmen were on hand but could not transact any business. The mayor is anxious to get the road work preventative when he will take up the sidewalk question.

—Among those going to Lewiston on convention day were Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Lees, Mrs. Hopp, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Russell, Mr. Owen, Mr. Daggett, Nick Jacobs. The trip was enjoyed, but the politicians! "In the spring the young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love," and so, also does that of the politician about this time. Many boomlets were seen sailing in the air, but some of them at least will be frosted!

—The warm days for a week or more made the ground dry and the rains falling Friday and at intervals since have caused farmers to put on long smiles. The water has made the grain and grass and weeds jump out of the ground at a lively rate and is considered a godsend to all—to stockmen as well as farmers. Much grain had been sown that never saw a drop of rain, and with this soaking will jump skyward. The grain that was up a few inches isn't doing a thing but humping itself—can almost see it grow. The wet could not have come at a more propitious time. A rain shortly before maturity of grain is all that is needed by many fields. The rain is booming.

United in Marriage.

A pretty wedding took place at the fine home of Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Platt in Genesee last Wednesday evening at six o'clock, May 9, 1900, when their daughter, Miss Laura was united in marriage to Wesley J. Dorchester. The ceremony was performed by Rev. C. R. Howard in the presence of a large number of friends. John Platt acted as best man and Miss Mae Herman as bridesmaid. Miss Miller played the wedding march. The parlors were prettily decorated with flowers. The bride was charmingly dressed in white silk and carried white roses. The groom is a fine young man of good habits, industrious, and is engaged in the stock-raising business. The NEWS people have known "Wes" for many years, when a mere boy in Dakota, and can vouch for his excellent qualities. The bride is an estimable young lady of Genesee and has not an enemy in the city.

The guests were invited in an adjoining room where two long tables were loaded down with good things—the very best to be procured. It is needless to say that all did ample justice to the food before them in abundance and great variety. Here Mrs. Platt showed her rare taste and skill, not only in the preparation, but in the arrangement of the choice viands served by trained waiters.

The presentation of presents followed, each guest bringing something nice. The donors and guests were: Dr. and Mrs. Conant, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. James Hanson, Mr and Mrs. L. Jain, Mr. and Mrs. Daggett, Mr. and Mrs. Jno. Larrabee, Mr. and Mrs. Jno. Keane, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hickman, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McMahon, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Mervyn, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Richards, Mr. and Mrs. Hopp, Mr. and Mrs. Herman, Rev. Howard, Mr. and Mrs. Phipps, Mrs. Wm. —Mrs. Kennedy stepped on a nail and in consequence has a very sore foot.

—Mrs. Wm. Harris came down from Pullman for a visit and take in the wedding.

—Charles Bowman and two others struck out for the Hump to work placer mines for a couple of months.

—Shall we celebrate the Fourth? Plenty to enthuse over if we have the inclination. It is time for us to decide this matter.

—Miss Fulford and Mrs. Munden were up from Lewiston Sunday. Miss Montgomery returned with them for a couple of day's visit.

—It's a bouncing big boy at the town of Sprague, Wash., and Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Conway are the happy parents. Mr. Conway is a tickled man and likewise Grandpa J. J. Owen.

—Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gesellchen took their departure from Genesee Wednesday morning for Spokane. Mrs. Gesellchen will visit her mother while Frank will look around before locating. Their many friends wish them well wherever they may locate.

—Vincent and Joe Lorang have moved to the Salmon river country where they have taken up two claims and secured grazing lands. The boys have a garden, planted some trees, and in a short time will have pleasant homes. With a band of nearly too head of cattle it will not take many years to place them in easy circumstances. Their father, Theo. Lorang, will make them a visit next fall.

A single microbe contains the germ of the most malignant maladies. The blood is the means by which microbes are sent on their deadly mission. Small at first, the microbe soon becomes a giant. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the arch enemy of all germs of whatever nature. Its small doses master these microbes by dissolving and passing them off as refuse of the system.

COTTON IS AGAIN KING.

FROM a price of 5 cents per pound a few months ago, raw cotton has gone up until it sells today at 9 cents per pound. Worse still—the supply is short, in the face of a demand larger than for many seasons.

The world looks to America for its cotton. As our new crop will not be marketed until 1901, it is unreasonable to look for a drop in cotton goods before that time.

But remember one thing: I purchased all my cotton goods before the advance and am selling them at the last season's prices, giving my customers the advantage of the increase instead of taking the extra profit for myself as our other merchants are doing all over the country.

My new spring stock is now complete and at the low prices of last year.

Yours for Honest Goods and Low Prices,

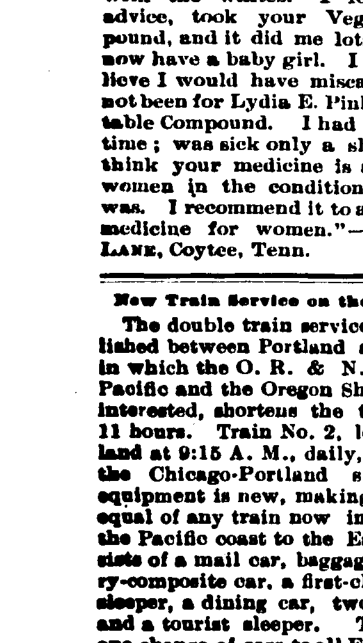
MY BEAUTIFUL BABY BOY

Weak Women Made Happy by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound — Letters from Two Who Now Have Children.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—It was my ardent desire to have a child. I had been married three years and was childless, so wrote to you to find out the reason. After following your kind advice and taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I became the mother of a beautiful baby boy, the joy of our home. He is a fat, healthy baby, thanks to your medicine."—MRS. MINDA FINKLE, Roscoe, N. Y.



From Grateful Mrs. Lane

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM: — I wrote you a letter some time ago, stating my case to you.

"I had pains through my bowels, headache, and backache, felt tired and sleepy all the time, was troubled with the whites. I followed your advice, took your Vegetable Compound, and it did me lots of good. I now have a baby girl. I certainly believe I would have miscarried had it not been for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I had a very easy time; was sick only a short time. I think your medicine is a godsend to women in the condition in which I was. I recommend it to all as the best medicine for women."—MRS. MARY LANE, Coytee, Tenn.

New Train Service on the O. R. & N.

The double train service just established between Portland and Chicago, in which the O. R. & N., the Union Pacific and the Oregon Short Line are interested, shortens the through time 11 hours. Train No. 2, leaving Portland at 9:15 A. M., daily, is known as the Chicago-Portland special. Its equipment is new, making it fully the equal of any train now in service from the Pacific coast to the East. It consists of a mail car, baggage car, a library-composite car, a first-class Pullman sleeper, a dining car, two chair cars and a tourist sleeper. There is but one change of cars to all Eastern points. The full time is three days through to Chicago, or four days and two hours to New York.

The second train, known as No. 6, leaves Portland daily at 6:20 P. M., connecting at East Portland with the Southern Pacific's overland train from San Francisco, and carries through equipment to Chicago via the Union Pacific and the Chicago & Northwestern, and also the equipment for the Washington division of the O. R. & N., in connection with the Great Northern for St. Paul. This train reaches Spokane at 10 A. M. A dining car serves breakfast into Spokane, and dinner is served on corresponding train leaving Spokane at 3:45 P. M. The new schedule as arranged, supplies the most complete service ever furnished on the O. R. & N., also provides increased service in Eastern Oregon, where it is greatly needed, and gives immediate connection with the Washington division at Pendleton. At this point there is a large interchange of traffic, on account of the various mining districts of Baker county, the Coeur d'Alene, the Republic and Kootenai mining camps. Portland is greatly benefitted by this change, in as much as increased service is given from Eastern Oregon and Idaho.

No. 2 arrives in Chicago at 9:30 A. M.; No. 6 at 7:45 A. M., as at present.

The Westbound train out of Chicago, corresponding with No. 2, is No. 1. This arrives in Portland at 4 P. M. The train corresponding with the Eastbound No. 6, is No. 3, out of Chicago. This reaches Portland at 7:30 A. M. Westbound train No. 1 leaves Chicago at 6:30 P. M., and Omaha at 8:20 A. M. the following day. The time is reduced two hours and 45 minutes. No. 3, Westbound train, leaves Chicago at 10:30 P. M., and Omaha at 4:25 P. M. the next day.

The service on the Union Pacific on all these trains includes buffet-smoking-library cars and dining cars. No. 6 carries a daily ordinary sleeper to Kansas City, with change en route to ordinary cars to Chicago.

Consult the nearest ticket agent for detailed information.

LABOR NOTES.

Workmen of Kansas City are on a strike for an increase in wages.

The campaign for national offices in the printers' union is at the seething point. Every printer seems to be taking a hand.

International convention of Boilermakers will be held at Kansas City July 4.

The unions of Vancouver, Wash., will put a labor ticket in the field at the coming election.

Skilled workmen were in demand just prior to the opening of the exposition in Paris. As much as $10 a day was paid.

According to Secretary Allen of the Allied Building Trades Council of Philadelphia, nearly 3,000 workmen, representing every branch of the building trades are on a strike.

During the past twelve months the coal miners issued 308 charters.

The bottom has dropped out of the cedar tie industry in the northern counties of Michigan.

The congressional investigation committee has by a partisan vote refused to call President Boyce of the Western Federation of Miners as a witness in the Wardner investigation.

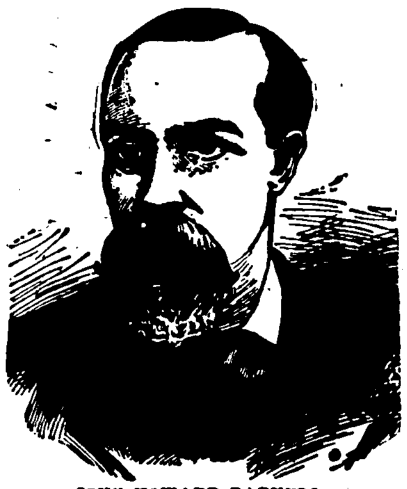
JOHN HOWARD PARNELL.

Quarreled with His Sister About the Queen's Visit to Ireland.

The visit of Queen Victoria to Ireland provoked a controversy in the Parnell family. Anna Parnell, sister of the late Charles Stewart Parnell, was displeased and said the country should wear mourning for the event. Her brother, John Howard Parnell, on the other hand, was enthusiastic over the royal visit and scores his sister sharply.

John Howard Parnell has none of the brilliant qualities of his brother, yet he has taken some part in Irish politics. In 1873 he and Charles Stewart Parnell came to this country, intending to locate here. In Georgia they bought peach-growing lands and settled down to fruit farming. Returning to Ireland to prepare for removal to this country, they found the home rule party in bad condition and its leader anxious that John should enter Parliament for the purpose of galvanizing it into new life.

He declined to permit his name to be used, but suggested that his brother, Charles Stewart, might make the fight. In this way it came about that the younger Parnell remained in Ireland and made history for his country while the elder returned to Georgia to become the first successful shipper of peaches from that State to the Northern markets. During the years that John Howard Parnell lived on his peach farm he was noted for his eccentricities. He hardly spoke to his neighbors, and when he did it was in monosyllables. He had a large library, in which he spent much of his time when he was not hunting.



JOHN HOWARD PARNELL.

He led this life year after year. When disaster came to his distinguished brother he refused to discuss the matter except to express confidence in his ability to triumph over all his foes. Upon the death of Charles Stewart, John returned to Ireland and was elected to Parliament. He attempted to make himself leader of the Irish party there, but lacked the qualities essential for leadership.

OHIO'S BIRTHDAY.

The State's Great Difficulty in Deciding on the Date Thereof.

Ohio finds itself in a peculiar dilemma. The State intends to celebrate the centennial of its admission to the Union, but, unfortunately, the date is not known. The United States census report gives Nov. 29, 1802, but this is not final authority, nor, indeed, is it generally regarded as correct in Ohio, inasmuhc as most people there favor holding the centennial celebration in 1903.

Ohio was like Topsy; it had no birthday, and it might almost be said that, like Topsy also, the State "just growed." Either a distinct act for admission or provision for admission on proclamation by the President was made by Congress in the case of each State except Ohio. The act of May 7, 1800, set off that part of the Northwest Territory now included in Ohio as a distinct territorial government, and the rest was organized as the Territory of Indiana. The act of April 30, 1802, authorized the people of Ohio to form a State government, and a convention held at Chillicothe on Nov. 1 to 29, 1802, agreed upon a constitution, which went into force without approval by popular vote. This constitution was submitted to Congress in January, 1803, and on Feb. 19, 1803, the President approved the first act which recognized the new State. This act of 1803 did not purport to admit the State, but declared that it "has become one of the United States of America," and provided for the extension of Federal laws to the new State.

Ohio historians differ as to which date should be recognized, but the opinion is that the later day, Feb. 19, 1803, is the date if the precedent in admitting other States is to be recognized, but the act of that date asserts that Ohio was then a State, and hence it must have been one on Nov. 29, 1802. The question is one of those upon which agreement is impossible, although the date decided upon for the centennial will make one or the other in some degree official.—Chicago Tribune.

False teeth, they say, are never just right until they are paid for.

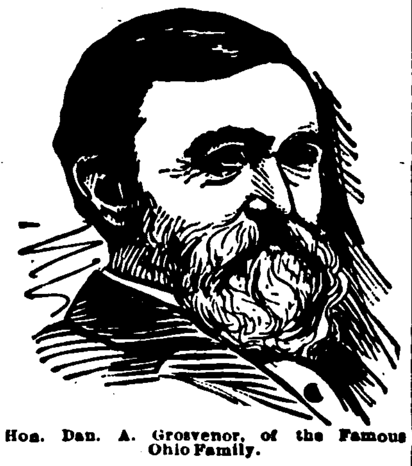
DAN GROSVENOR SAYS:

"Peruna Is an Excellent Spring Catarrh Remedy—I am as Well as Ever."



Hon. Dan. A. Grosvenor, of the Famous Ohio Family.

Hon. Dan. A. Grosvenor, deputy auditor for the war department, in a letter written from Washington, D. C., says:

"Allow me to express my gratitude to you for the benefit derived from one bottle of Peruna. One week has brought wonderful changes and I am now as well as ever. Besides being one of the very best spring tonics it is an excellent catarrh remedy." Very respectfully, Dan. A. Grosvenor.

Hal P. Denton, chief national export exposition, Philadelphia, Pa., writes: "I was completely run down from overwork and the responsibility naturally connected with the exploitation of a great international exposition. My physician recommended an extended vacation. When life seemed almost a burden I began taking Peruna, and with the use of the fifth bottle I found myself in a normal condition. I have since enjoyed the best of health."

Almost everybody needs a tonic in the spring. Something to brace the nerves, invigorate the brain, and cleanse the blood. That Peruna will do this is beyond all question. Every one who has tried it has had the same experience as Mrs. D. W. Timberlake, of Lynchburg, Va., who, in a recent letter, made use of the following words: "I always take a dose of Peruna after business hours, as it is a great thing for the nerves. There is no better spring tonic, and I have used about all of them."

For a free book on "Summer Catarrh," address The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio.

BILE BLOAT

Puffs under the eyes; red nose; pimple-blotched, greasy face don't mean hard drinking always as much as it shows that there is BILE IN THE BLOOD. It is true, drinking and over-eating overloads the stomach, but failure to assist nature in regularly disposing of the partially digested lumps of food that are dumped into the bowels and allowed to rot there, is what causes all the trouble. CASCARETS will help nature help you, and will keep the system from filling with poisons, will clean out the sores that tell of the system's rottenness. Arizona Has Showers of Frogs.

It rains frogs in Arizona. The old-timers believe there is no doubt of it, though the frogs were originally "lifted." But this much is straight—let there be a summer rain along the line of the Southern Pacific in Southwestern Arizona, and behold, the next morning every little pool has a myriad of little lean green frogs, with marvelous croaking powers. They don't wait for nightfall like their more civilized brethren elsewhere, but keep up the music by day as by night. They live where water comes only about once a year. They can't live over the interim under the sun-baked black rocks; they assuredly haven't hopped from the Colorado river, and they are all of a size, to boot. If they didn't come from the ground or from the river, they must have come from the skiees. And that's what the Hassayampers firmly believe.—Arizona Graphic.

New Artillery in France.

An innovation has been introduced in the French artillery service by the decision to furnish the guns with a smoke-shell. Hitherto the cannon had been provided with melinite and shrapnel shells only. This new shell is intended to be launched at an opponent's artillery which, on bursting, it will envelope in a dense cloud of smoke, thus hampering the return fire. The new shell is the outcome of the introduction of smokeless powder. Formerly with the old powder the result now aimed at was brought about by the guns themselves, the firing of which produced a smoke which blinded their own gunners. Experiments show that this invention creates a sort of veil before the enemy's artillery. Both the army and the navy will be supplied with these shells.

ALABASTINE Is a durable and natural cement-base wall coating, in 5 lb. paper packages, made ready for use in white and fourteen beautiful tints by mixing with cold water. It is a cement that goes through a process of setting, hardens with age, and can be coated and recoated without washing off its old coats before renewing.

ALABASTINE Is entirely different from all the various kalsomines on the market, being durable and not stuck on the wall with glue. Alabastine customers should insist on having the goods in packages properly labeled. They should reject all imitations. There is nothing "just as good."

ALABASTINE

Prevents much sickness, particularly throat and lung difficulties, attributable to unsanitary coatings on walls. It has been recommended in a paper published by the Michigan State Board of Health on account of its sanitary features, which paper strongly condemned kalsomines. Alabastine can be used on either plastered walls, wood ceilings, brick or canvas, and any one can brush it on. It admits of radical changes from wall paper decorations, thus securing at reasonable expense the latest and best effects. Alabastine is manufactured by the

—The Trade Dollar Mine on Snake river will invest $250,000 in a power plant for the purpose of generating power for its mines and mills. The power will have to be transmitted 26 miles to reach the mine.

—Out of 442 sailing vessels that left San Francisco last year, no less than 181 carried cargoes of American products and manufactures to the Hawaiian Islands. The value of these cargoes from this one port was $9,164,982, and it had almost doubled within two years. Expansion is a good policy for Pacific Coast trade.

—W. M. Welch reports having 63 signers for the Direct Legislation League. He says that an organization of a club will be the next movement. At which time he will spread himself, paragorically speaking.—From the Genesee correspondent in Democratic-Times, and we venture the opinion that the correspondent is in a position to know.

—Especial interest attaches to that plank of the Ohio platform which says: "The republican party of Ohio stands committed to legislative and executive opposition to the threatening combinations of capital that seek to restrict competition and stifle independent producers." The republicans at Lewiston took a similar stand against the trusts. If all parties take a similar stand, and of course they will, the trusts will be knocked into smithereens.

—We hear little of the Porto Rican law recently passed by congress. The 15 per cent. of the Dingley rates that will be collected in Purto Rico on goods brought there from the United States will be for the exclusive benefit of the island. On the other hand, the 15 per cent. of the Dingley rates that will be collected by our Atlantic seaboard custom-houses on goods brought here from Porto Rico will be scrupulously sent to the island, also for the exclusive benefit of the Porto Ricans. Goods from European and other foreign countries brought to Porto Rico will pay the Dingley tariff rates, exactly as if brought to New York. The Review of Review says let nobody feel in conscience bound to say that in passing such a bill we have selfishly and wickedly broken faith with the people of Porto Rico, and have invented an oppressive scheme for taxing them without their consent. A great deal of this sort of accusation has appeared in the newspapers, and it is remote from the truth. Under the arrangements provided by the bill, the Porto Ricans will enjoy the stability and general protection assured them under the sovereignty of the United States, without paying a penny, directly or indirectly, of federal taxes. The small duty they will pay on imports from the United States simply gives them an easy and convenient way to raise taxes for their local expenses of administration, schools and public works. As for the tax that will be collected in the United States on imports from the Porto Rico, this according to the unanimous opinion of all American free-trade authorities for the past half-century—will come out of the pockets of our people. Thus, to the full extent of this tariff on imports from Porto Rico, we shall be levying a tax upon ourselves for the benefit of the islanders, inasmuch as we are sending the proceeds to them. It is true they have wanted free trade, so as to be put, as far as possible, in the position of citizens of the United States. But apart from sentiment, and as a purely financial proposition, they would find it hard to prove that free trade would be as advantageous to their island treasury as this arrangement which gives their products easy access to the American market, while enabling them to collect a tax from the people of the United States on the entire volume of their export trade. An impartial analysis of the facts must give President McKinley much credit for his generous stand in this matter.

A Woman's Awful Peril.

"There is only one chance to save your life and that is through an operation" were the startling words heard by Mrs. I. B. Hunt of Lime Ridge, Wis., from her doctor after he had vainly tried to cure her of a frightful case of stomach trouble and yellow jaundice. Gall stones had formed and she gradually grew worse. Then she began to use Electric Bitters which wholly cured her. It's a wonderful stomach, liver and kidney remedy. Cures dyspepsia, loss of appetite. Only 50c. Guaranteed. For sale at Kennedy's Pharmacy.

A Cross Clerk

Is a rarity. For the most part the young woman behind the counter is smiling and obliging, though her back hurts, her side pains, or her head throbs distractingly. The wonder is, not that a clerk is sometimes irritable, but that she so rarely shows irritation, when every nerve is quivering and she hardly knows how to hold her head up.

The nervous condition, headache and weakness, which are the results of irregularity or a diseased condition of the womanly organs, can be entirely cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It regulates the functions, stops enfeebling drains, strengthens the nervous system and promotes the general health of the entire body.

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter, free of charge. All correspondence private. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

"Having used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Golden Medical Discovery' during the past year," writes Mrs. Mattie Long, of Pfouts Valley, Perry Co., Pa., "I can truthfully recommend the medicines for all female weakness. I have used several bottles of 'Favorite Prescription,' which I consider a great blessing for weak women. I was so nervous and discouraged that I hardly knew what to do. Your kind advice for home-treatment helped me wonderfully. Thanks to Dr. Pierce."

—Eugene Bertrand, one of the pioneer citizens of Spokane, died at Portland last week while on his way to a health resort. He was a distant relative of the Hobson people and visited in Genesee several years ago. For a long time he had been in poor health, suffering from catarrh of the stomach.

—Dr. Figgins, who commanded the Idaho volunteers during most of the time they were in the Philippines and who was mustered out as a lieutenant colonel, left last week for Nome. If he gains as much gold in Alaska as he did glory in the Philippines he can return soon and spend the rest of his days in ease.

—Andrew Olson has just shipped 500 barrels of flour to China and is now running on another order of the same size.—Ellensburg Capital. A new market is being opened for Pacific coast flour to Chili. Recently a trial shipment of 2,000 barrels were made from San Francisco which has resulted very satisfactorily.

—The federal court adjourned Saturday. The trials have been unimportant, and all the large cases were continued over until the next term, which will meet November 8. No indictments were found against Jack McBride, charged with stealing horses from Chief Saltese; Thomas Hill for forgery; Preeton Harris, for sending obscene literature; and Abram Sequaw and Percy Kyler, for introducing liquor. George Mox Mox was released.

—The Cœur d'Alene mining camps are enjoying an unparalleled season of prosperity. A quarter more men are now employed in the mines than at any previous period in the history of the district, and over a thousand men are in the hills prospecting. All the shipping mines are making improvements and extensions and more development work is going on than ever before. The Cœur d'Alenes, it is claimed, leads every other district in the production of silver-lead ores, and it is estimated that the present year's shipments will amount to 150,000 tons of concentrates, worth ten million dollars.

—The democratic county convention at Moscow Saturday passed a resolution directing the chairman and secretary to confer with the officers of the direct legislation and other organizations to the end that co-operation be secured and to arrange for a combined county convention. The delegates selected to go to the Lewiston state convention to select national delegates are: J. H. Gaffney, Fred Follett, George Langdon, W. L. Payne, Miss Isa Whitworth, F. E. Mix, J. S. Vincent, J. F. Collins, Thos. Stinson, Mrs. C. D. Huffman, Dr. Plummer. To Pocatello to nominate state officers: W. J Herman, F. K. Bressler, T. Driscoll, Charles W. Shields, Frank Moore, F. N. Gilbert, Mathew Jacobs, Ramsay Walker, P. J. Scallon, Sam Gray, Virgil Randall.

—The old soldiers of Genesee will observe Memorial day, next Wednesday, by quietly going to the cemetery and decorating the graves of the departed heroes and holding a short service. Members of the Relief Corps will assist in the decoration.

—Wheat and fruit, the two banner products of the Inland Empire, promise better this year than ever before. Even with low prices, this should produce a large degree of prosperity. Wheat prices are almost certain to be low, but fruit may fair better, and although the price will not be so high as it has been the past two seasons, it will undoubtedly make a very profitable crop.—Spokane West Coast Trade.

—We see a great deal in the newspapers regarding the Belgium hare. It is claimed people are fast becoming acquainted with their meat quality, which is all that is required to make them popular. The small quarters required to provide for the hare in comfort, thriving on anything a sheep will, and requiring but little care, and the meat as fine as a chicken, easy to prepare for the table, make them desirable and popular. Being prolific throughout the year and of quick growth is also in favor.

—Our people are feeling pretty good over the reduction of the railroad fare to be inaugurated on the Northern Pacific R'y July 1st, from 4 to 3 cents per mile. This action on the part of the Northern Pacific is entirely voluntary and it will be fully appreciated by the patrons. This makes the second reduction in fare by this road during the past year and the rate is now as low as made by the railroads in the densely populated states of the east. In fact, a three cent rate in this western country, Idaho, Washington and Oregon, with sparse settlements and expensive roadbeds, is relatively cheaper than a two-cent rate in the east. With the low rate and the improved train service this speaks eloquently for our country and for the Northern Pacific. The only kick the people have against the railroads of our land now is the high freight rates and that will be remedied soon. The increase in travel will offset the reduction in the rate, so the road will lose nothing by this move.

—Of the new financial bill passed by congress Judge Heyburn has this to say: "Under the provisions of that bill a national bank can be established anywhere without regard to population and under its provisions any community may regulate the volume of money in circulation, independent of the larger money centers, and it is no longer within the power of any financial combination to contract the currency or the volume of money in circulation to the detriment of any portion of our people. National banks may be established wherever desired or needed with a capital of $25,000 in places having a population of 3000 or less. The persons desiring to establish such a bank whether a few men or a whole community, must get together the sum of $25,000, or more if they desire, and purchase the amount of government bonds, which they then deposit in the United States treasury, whereupon the government of the Uuited States prints and delivers to the bank when organized $25,000 in paper currency, denominated national bank notes. With this money the bank is equipped for business; it has that amount of money with which to do business in this community, and if the community has any business to do or value to give for it the money will speedily be in general circulation. The amount of money in circulation in any community in the United States will therefore be under the control of the people of that community and the money so issued has behind it the faith and credit of the government of the United States represented by its bonds deposited in the treasury to secure the notes issued. A few farmers or mechanics or workmen or persons in any walk of life can thus increase the volume of money in circulation in their own community according to the demand for its use. The country districts are no longer at the mercy of the great financial centers. It was legislation in the interest of the people. It takes away the great objection which has been urged against the national banking system and its power to control the volume of the currency in circulation. If any community or section of the country shall hereafter suffer in this regard they must lay the blame at their own door. The act reduces the amount of capital required to a figure within the reach of small communities or a few individuals of very modest means."

—The supreme court has reversed the judgment of the lower court in the famous Big Buffalo grub stake case. The district court gave Jacob N. Rice and Perry Mallory a judgment for a half interest in the great property of the Buffalo Hump district. The supreme court finds the evidence was not sufficient. It is held that to establish a resulting trust in land, the evidence must be so clear and certain as to leave no well founded doubt upon the subject. It is further held that the admission of the evidence of Rice and Mallory concerning matters antedating the death of Robbins, one of the locators, was error.—Lewiston Tribune.

"It is with a good deal of pleasure and satisfaction that I recommend Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy," says Druggist A. W. Sawtelle, of Hartford, Conn. "A lady customer, seeing the remedy exposed for sale on my show case, said to me: 'I really believe that medicine saved my life the past summer while at the shore,' and she became so enthusiastic over its merits that I at once made up my mind to recommend it in the future. Recently a gentleman came into my store so overcome with colic pains that he sank at once to the floor. I gave him a dose of this remedy which helped him. I repeated the dose and in fifteen minutes he left my store smilingly informing me that he felt as well as ever." Sold by all druggists.

It is stated that within the last fortnight bankers of Paris have, through the Bank of France, negotiated a loan of $15,000,000 from New York bankers. This money is needed to finance enterprises incidental to the exposition year in Paris. While France is one of the richest countries in the world, its stock of gold was insufficient to meet all the demands that have sprung up this year, and the bankers of Paris have borrowed here at comparatively low interest rates in order to prevent any enterprise from lagging. The big loan is to be shipped in installments, averaging about $3,000,000 a week. The second installment has gone, and the movement will continue for about three weeks longer. The loan was negotiated by the National City bank and most of the foreign banking houses participated in it.

Washington Democratic Convention.

Spokane, May 20.—The following persons were elected to go to the convention at Kansas City:

Jesse M. Jamieson, Spokane; Wm. H. Dunphy, Walla Walla; J. D. Medill, North Yakima; O. G. Ellis, Tacoma; Dr. W. A. Mosier, Tekoa; J. W. Goodwin, Seattle; Thomas Malony, Olympia; D. D. Fagan, Whatcom.

Alternates—Val Heath of Pacific, F. L. Carr of Chehalis, N. V. Brooks of Klickitat, T. C. Van Epps of Thurston, E. M. Billings of Cowlitz, T. M. Cooper of Lincoln, E. H. Belden of Spokane, W. T. Beck of Ferry.

One of the most bitter fights in the history of the democratic party in this state ended in a victory for the supporters of J. W. Godwin of Seattle over the Lee Hart delegates in the state democratic convention.

The democracy of the state of Washington, in convention assembled, reaffirms the Chicago platform in its entirety and pledge our unswerving loyalty and fidelity to its noble principles.

We denounce the present republican national administration in its attitude towards the trusts, and we believe that trusts should be controlled by the national government so far as interstate in their operation, and favor rigid laws to this end.

We are opposed to the republican policy of imperialism.

We denounce the republican party for its previous attitude on bimetallism and point to the record of legislation in the last congress as indisputable proof of the party's former duplicity on the financial question.

We condemn the vacillating attitude of the republican administration on the Puerto Rican tariff and condemn the republican congress in passing the Puerto Rican tariff act as a measure towards the people of Puerto Rico of like character to that against which our forefathers rebelled.

We extend our sympathy to the heroic Boers now struggling for life, land and for liberty.

We recognize William Jennings Bryan as the great commoner of the present day, who ranks with and will have a place in history with Jefferson, Jackson and Lincoln, and instruct our delegates to the national convention to assist in making his nomination unanimous.

We are opposed to the unrestricted immigration of Japanese into this country and demand such legislation as will prevent them from becoming competitors with American labor.

The democracy of the state of Washington, recognizing the advantage to the cause, and the benefits to be derived in the coming election of having a Pacific coast man nominated for vice president, and here expressing our confidence in the abilities and capacity of our esteemed citizen and democrat, the Hon. James Hamilton Lewis, indorse him as the choice of the democracy of the state of Washington for vice president of the United States.

We commend and indorse the patriotic, just and economical administration of our present state officials, elected by the combined fusion forces.

We point with pride to the record of our representative in the senate of the United States, Hon. George Turner.

A Fenian "Outrage" Story.

Chicago, May 20.—A special from Vancouver, B. C. says:

Fenian sympathizers with the Boers have made an attempt to blow up the British fortifications at Esquimalt. The big naval docks, where $7,000,000 damage could have been done, were the objective point of the leaders in the plot, who barely escaped from the guard with their lives.

Fight With Insurgents.

Washington, May 22.—The war department received a cablegram this morning from General MacArthur at Manila, telling of an engagement on the 14th inst. at Agusan, in Cagyan province. The enemy's loss in killed was 52. The American loss was two killed and three wounded.

About a Section Hand.

A shooting scrape occurred last week about seven miles south of Goldendale, this side of Grants, Ore., in which John Thompson was shot. Thompson is in a critical condition.

FREIGHT TRAINS WRECKED

SEVEN EXPLOSIONS OCCURRED.

No One Was Seriously Injured—Two Large Engines Were Completely Wrecked—Three Carloads of Oil Caught Fire—Nine Cars Burned.

Spokane, May 22.—A shrill whistle, the grating of wheels, a terrible crash, a series of tremendous explosions, followed by the dazzling light of flames shooting 300 feet into the air—that is the brief story of the train wreck which occurred on the Northern Pacific at Trent, nine miles east of Spokane, about 1:30 a. m. Monday.

Strange to say, not a man was hurt, the engineers and firemen both jumping in time to save themselves. Had there been any one in the caboose of the log train there would have been scarcely one chance in a hundred for escape. This caboose was literally ground to pieces under two engines, the wheels and iron binding being the only reminder that ever such a car existed.

The wreck presents a remarkable sight. Two large freight engines are reared into the air, telescoped, and are linked together by the tender of the head engine. Six oil tanks, which were last night filled, are shattered and totally destroyed, while the tangled mass of iron and wire reminds one of a junk shop that had been hit by a cyclone.

Although the wreck occurred about 1:30 yesterday morning, it was not till 10:30 that the first train could pass. The road was opened by building a track around the wreck. The work might have been accomplished earlier but for the heated mass of iron that could not be handled.

How It Happened.

Shortly after 1 o'clock a log train coming in from Thompson's spur, about 50 miles east of the city, stopped at Trent to fix a hot box. Shortly afterwards an extra engine in charge of Engineer J. H. Montgomery came up and was flagged. The engineer stopped his engine a short distance behind the log train, waiting for it to pull out.

An extra freight of 40 cars, with Jake Palmgreen, engineer, was coming along a short distance behind the single engine. Whether any one went back to flag this train or not is the question that the officials of the road are trying hard to settle. The road here is a little down grade and a freight can get up good speed.

Just as the engine came across the high bridge which spans the Spokane river at that place the engineer saw what was ahead of him. Quick as a flash his whistle was sounded and the air brakes applied, but this was not enough to stop a train of 40 loaded cars in 150 yards. Seeing there must be a collision, the engineer and fireman jumped. Both had their faces slightly skinned, but were not otherwise hurt.

The Crash.

As the engine of the freight struck the single engine, the latter was driven with terrific force into the rear end of the log train. Such was the force that the lone engine was pushed right over the caboose of the log train, grinding it to pieces. It was followed in the mad plunge by the second engine, which telescoped into the first.

Ten seconds after the crash the train burst out in a mass of flames that mounted hundreds of feet in the air. Three oil cars that were near the head of the train, each with two loaded tanks, were thrown into the pile and caught fire. As the flames neared the oil it could be heard to sizzle. A tremendous explosion followed, throwing iron and scraps 300 feet into the air. Six other explosions followed in quick succession. One of these explosions was caused by an engine boiler bursting.

Although there was a bare ten seconds between the crash and the outburst of the flames, the train hands did not seem to lose their heads for one instant. The engineer of the log train put on steam and pulled his train out of the way, saving about 15 cars from the flames. The only damage done to the log train outside of the caboose was that the logs were slightly jarred, not badly enough to necessitate the reloading of the train.

As soon as the wreck occurred two brakemen ran to the rear of the freight train to flag another lone engine which was due about this time. This engine arrived shortly and was quickly coupled to the rear end of the freight and pulled most of the train out of danger. Altogether nine cars were destroyed and two engines.

Buller Delayed.

London, May 22.—The war office has received the following message from Lord Roberts:

"Kroonstad, May 22.—General Buller reports that his advance will be delayed for a few days on account of the way in which the railroad has been destroyed.

"Rundle reports that Ladybrand has been occupied.

"Hunter is pushing up the railway with supplies for the Mafeking garrison and is arranging a hospital train for the conveyance of the sick and wounded to Kimberley.

"Methuen has left Hoopstad to co-operate with this force."

Oregon Won.

Seattle, May 20.—The University of Oregon defeated the University of Washington in the interstate track meet here today. The score was close, being 62 to 60, in the visitors' favor. The result was in doubt up to the last two events. In the running high jump Knox of Oregon broke the collegiate record of his state, going five feet six inches. The visitors won seven firsts, six seconds and nine thirds.

In Redlands, Cal., all parties combined in a "Good Government League" to defeat the socialists.

The Boer Delegation.

Washington, May 20.—The Boer delegates devoted most of their time Saturday to receiving visitors and attending to their correspondence. It was made evident to Colonel O'Beirne today that the state department is disposed to treat the Boer delegates with absolute fairness and that their credentials consequently are to be considered on their merits. It is by no means a foregone conclusion that the delegates are to be denied official recognition. That was the first decision and it may after all be the outcome. But it is said much depends upon the character of the credentials and also of the attitude of the delegates themselves. It is said among certain officials of the state department that if the government should consider it necessary to cast about for warrant for accepting the Boers officially it might turn to the convention of 1884 between Great Britain and the Transvaal and declare that document is by implication to be found a renunciation of Great Britain's suzerainty and consequently there no longer exists any probation upon other nations in their dealings with the Boer republics, at least to the extent of offering official recognition to their diplomatic representatives. The fact that consideration has been given at all to this phase of the matter may be regarded as significant of the fact that at present the administration holds itself in a receptive state as far as the credentials are concerned and is disposed to consider them on their merits.

Intervention Impossible.

New York, May 20.—The general conclusion was reached at the cabinet meeting, according to the Washington correspondent of the Herald, to adhere to the former decision against intervention unless mediation should be requested by both sides.

The London Standard, says a special to the Herald from London, commenting upon the result of the cabinet meeting at Washington, says:

"As a final blow to the hopes of the enemy comes this news from Washington. If the Boers want peace they must sue for it from the imperial government."

Jollification in London.

London, May 20.—The whole British empire has been carried off its feet by the effect of the relief of Mafeking. The demonstrations of Ladysmith may pale before the spontaneous transports of delirium recorded in cablegrams from all parts of the world where flies the Union Jack.

The empire is en fete, and most of the people in the United Kingdom took a holiday in honor of the defenders of the little prairie outpost.

Traffic was practically suspended, and great crowds surround the Mansion house and all public buildings, shouting and cheering.

While all parts of the United States have been sweltering, England and most of Europe returned to winter furs and the heaviest overcoats this week. Northeast winds, amounting to a gale in many places, have devastated the fruit blossoms in the country, and the prospects of the orchards are decidedly unfavorable.

Story of a Railroad Man.

A good story is going the rounds in railroad circles, being the result of an order issued by the Rock Island railway not long since, requiring all its section foremen to report to an oculist on a certain day and have their eyes examined. One afternoon, after those present had undergone the examination and the eye doctor was about to close up for the evening, a messenger boy rushed in with a small package neatly tied up in tissue paper, and which proved to be a glass eye. The following and evidently hurriedly scribbled note was attached:

"Topeka, Kan.—Oye Inspector—Dear Sur: The day befoor yisterday, at nune, I got word to cume down and have me ise looked into for culur blindness as ye call it. I had 45 ties and 10 rales to put down beyont the sand cut, an' as jerry Sullivan an' Dominick Cooley hav bin indishposhed since the wake that was holded over the ded corpus of Danny doherty, me hands wor tue short to spare me. 'Twas lucky that the rite oye that wuz first in me hed were nocked out wid ao pik, an' me glass oye that is a purfect figger uv the oye that was not put out, is sint to you for hexamination. I cud spare the glass oye better than the oye in me hed, an' if she is culler blind I'll git me one what ain't. Yures thruly,

"MIKE DONOHUE."

J. C. W. Beckham Governor.

Washington, May 22.—The Kentucky governorship case has been decided by the United States supreme court in the interest of Beckham, affirming the decision of the Kentucky court of appeals.

The opinion was handed down by Chief Justice Fuller and the case dismissed for want of jurisdiction, and the opinion that the determination of cases of this character of contests for state officers must necessarily be settled by the political branch of the government. That branch had acted in the Kentucky case, when the general assembly took jurisdiction. There was no appeal from the assembly's decision, which was favorable to Goebel and Beckham, except to a tribunal of the people, which tribunal, the chief justice said, was always in session.

He also said the case was purely a state case—that Kentucky was in full possession of its faculties as a member of the Union, and there was no emergency which called for interference.

The opinion was not unanimous, some of the justices dissenting. Justices Brewster, Harlan and McKenna were the dissenting justices.

Prominent Railroad Man Dead.

Chicago, May 20.—Homer Earl Sargent, formerly general manager of the Northern Pacific and one of the founders of the Union Stock Yards here, died, Saturday, aged 78 years.

Printers issued eight charters last month.

THE STRIKERS ARE ENJOINED

MUST NOT INTERFERE MAILS.

All the Principal Officers Temporarily Enjoined—It Is Very Sweeping in Effect—Also One at Butte—Election at Denver.

St. Louis, May 20.—On complaint of Postmaster Baumhoff and other employes of the postoffice department, United States District Attorney Rozier has appeared in the United States district court and asked for an injunction restraining the strikers from interfering with the operation of mail cars. President W. G. Mahon, of the International Amalgamated Association of Street Railway Employes, Chairman Missick of the executive committee of the local Street Railway Employes' Union, district Organizer Bryant of the Street Railway Employes' Association and 47 others are named in the petition for the injunction.

When the United States circuit court was called to order Judge Adams announced that the injunction prayed for by the United States district attorney against the strike leaders and others who are interfering with the running of mail cars in St. Louis would be issued.

The injunction is temporary, and will stand until the motion for a permanent injunction is argued on May 26.

The injunction is very sweeping, and grants all that has been asked for in the motion of United States District Attorney Rozier.

The Strike Situation.

St. Louis, May 20.—The strike situation is unchanged. So far as can be learned the St. Louis Transit company today has in operation on 14 of its 22 lines composing its system about 150 cars. Eight hundred were in operation before the strike began. During the past few days interference by mobs has become so general and the casualties reported so many that it is stated today that the authorities will arm the police officers guarding the cars with shotguns loaded with buckshot and they will be instructed to fire into the mobs who attempt to interfere with the running of the cars or with the crews in the discharge of their duties. Nearly 70 employes of the Transit company, mostly motormen, have been under surgeons' care since the strike began.

The labor parade this afternoon was a success in point of numbers and enthusiasm, about 7000 being in line. Banners and transparencies carrying mottos indorsing the strike and pronouncing in favor of a sympathetic movement were numerous throughout the column, which marched through many of the downtown streets between 4 and 6 o'clock.

No progress was made today toward a settlement of the strike.

SERIOUS FACTS ABOUT FOOD.

How Can the Danger from Alum Baking Powders Be Avoided?

The reported cases of poisoning from the use of alum baking powder have awakened the public to the serious danger which menaces the health of the people of this country in the numerous alum powders which are urged upon consumers.

Among the leading physicians and scientists there is no question as to the detrimental effects which alum baking powders produce upon the system. In many foreign countries and in many cities of this country, the authorities have absolutely prohibited their sale or the sale of bread containing alum.

Even small doses of alum given to children, have produced fatal results, while cases of heartburn, indigestion, griping constipation, dyspepsia and various kindred gastric troubles from irritation of the mucous membrane, attributed to the continuous use of food prepared with the alum or alum phosphate powders, are familiar in the practice of physicians generally.

Congress has recently been investigating the subject of food, and in its official report to the senate the committee says: "So far as the use of alum in the manufacture of a food product, such as baking powder, is concerned, the committee, in view of the overwhelming mass of evidence antagonistic to its use, recommends that its use in food products and baking powders be prohibited by law."

It is not possible that any prudent housewife, any loving mother, will knowingly use an article of food that will injure the health of her household, or perhaps cause the death of her children.

How shall the dangerous alum powders be distinguished? And how shall the danger to health from their use be avoided?

Generally alum powders may be known from the price at which they are sold, or from the fact that they are accompanied by a gift, or are disposed of under some scheme. The alum powder costs but a few cents a pound to make, and is often sold at 20 or 25 cents a pound; sometimes as low as 10 cents.

It is impossible to name all the alum powders in the market, but any baking powder sold at a low price, or advertised as costing much less than the well known, high class powders, or accompanied by a present, or disposed of under any scheme, is of this class, detrimental to health and to be avoided.

These facts should incline consumers to turn a deaf ear to all importunities to buy the inferior powders. The wise housekeeper will decline in all cases to take them.

Trade Report.

New York—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Review of Trade for the past week says:

Business is not what it was a year ago, but men do not agree in defining the difference. The working force, then increasing fast, is now decreasing. Works are stopping to relieve excessive output in manufactures of paper, cotton, wool, leather and some forms of steel, while prices are suddenly reduced for the same purpose in lead, wire and nails. What seems to some "merely spring dullness" others think the "beginning of reaction." The remedy for one difficulty does not fit the other and there is more need than usual for close attention to the meaning of events.

In place of the wild speculation in securities which swelled exchanges a year ago, there has come such liquidations that 20 preferred industrial stocks have sold this week at prices averaging $83.14 per share, though the same stocks sold in April last year for $99.66 per share, and 20 common have sold this week for $38.49, which sold last year at $76.99, double the price. Yet many of these have earned and paid good dividends and all have enjoyed a year of extraordinary business.

The industrials have reached the lowest average they have ever known, while the 60 most active railway stocks, though depressed about $4 per share since early in April, are higher now than a year ago. Business in some lines has been hindered by the holding of prices so high as to check consumption. The closing of works by the steel and wire company, followed by the reduction of $20 per ton in prices of its products, the closing of many paper mills because of over-production, the sudden reduction of 70 cents per 100 pounds in lead from the price to which it was raised late in December; the report that tin plate works may be closed awhile for similar reasons, create a feeling that some business has no longer the guarding and guiding influences of prices answering quickly to the demand for consumption. Transactions at Pittsburg in Bessemer seem to be largely at "guaranteed prices," so that definite quotations are avoided, though much Bessemer from the east is offered at very low figures. Grey forge is a shade lower there and local coke at Chicago, while No. 1 Lehigh is quoted at $21.50 here. Bars at Philadelphia are 1¾, while the Pittsburg association reaffirms its quotation of 2c, which is shaded. Plates also sell there at 1.7 cents with 1.75 cents quoted at Philadelphia. The demand for structural products has been decreased by building strikers.

Atlantic exports of wheat (including flour) in three weeks of May have been 8,232,041 bushels, against 7,016,540 bushels last year and Pacific exports 2,203,903 bushels, against 1,367,906 bushels last year. Wheat has advanced over a cent.

Failures for the week have been 117 in the United States, again 147 last year and 30 in Canada, against 17 last year.

PROCEEDINGS IN CONGRESS

THE BOER CAUSE IS UP AGAIN.

Many Speeches on the Subject This Week—The Clark Case Will Be Up This Week—Eight-Hour Bill Passed—Notes of the House.

In the Senate.

After a spirited debate the senate Saturday, by a decisive vote of 32 to 16, laid on the table the whole proposition relating to the transportation of mail by the pneumatic tube system. The closing hours of the session were occupied in accepting from the state of Missouri statues of Benton and Blair, located in statuary hall of the capitol, and from the G. A. R. of General U. S. Grant, located in the capitol rotunda.

The statue of General Grant, presented by the G. A. R. to the nation, was unveiled in the great rotunda of the capitol at Washington, D. C., last Saturday, and elaborate ceremonies commemorative of the event were held in the hall of representatives in the presence of a vast concourse of people, who included the widow, daughter and descendants of the hero of Appomattox, hundreds of his comrades in arms, the officers and committee of the G. A. R. and many distinguished in military, political and social circles. The statue of the pre-eminent chief of the union forces in the civil war represents the contributions of thousands of his comrades of the G. A. R., none of whom was allowed to subscribe more than 15 cents, and is the result of a movement started shortly after General Grant's death at McGregor in July, 1885. It is the work of Franklin Simmons, an American sculptor. Of marble, of heroic size, it stands on a pedestal emblazoned with the seal of the G. A. R., representing the grim old hero in the full uniform of a general, equipped for the field, with top boots and gauntlets, his cloak over his left arm and his right hand resting on the hilt of his sword. The counterfeit likenesses of statesmen, soldiers and pioneers in marble and bronze adorn the house of representatives chamber of the capitol, now statuary hall.

In response to the senate resolution of the 16th the secretary of the treasury has sent to the senate a statement concerning the immigration to the United States of Japanese laborers. From this statement it appears that 2230 of these laborers arrived in 1898, 3395 in 1899, and for the 10 months ending April 30, 1900, 7181. These figures indicate only those who have come direct to the United States from Japan, but do not embrace those reaching this country via Canada. How many there are coming in this way the department does not know, but the commissioner expresses the opinion that the number is large. The opinion is expressed that there will be large increases the coming year. He also states that strict examination is made to prevent the entrance of laborers under contract.

Governor Smith has sent dispatches from Butte to Senator W. A. Clark, Senator Chandler, chairman of the committee on privileges and elections, and Senator Frye, president of the senate, saying he had disregarded and revoked the action of Lieutenant Governor Spriggs in naming Mr. Clark to succeed to the vacancy caused by his own resignation, and saying he had named Martin Maginnis of Helena to fill the vacancy. The governor gives as his reasons his opinion that the appointment of Mr. Clark by the lieutenant governor was tainted by collusion and fraud. The dispatches are practically the same, that to Mr. Clark reading:

"I have this day disregarded and revoked your appointment as United States senator made by Governor Spriggs on the 15th inst., as being tainted with collusion and fraud, and have this day appointed Hon. Martin Maginnis United States senator to fill the vacancy caused by your resignation."

Those to Frye and Chandler are of the same tenor, notifying them of his action.

The Boer question came up in the senate Monday afternoon on the resolution of Senator Allen to admit the Boer representatives to the floor of the senate. Senators Allen and Mason made pro-Boer speeches on the resolution.

Senator Davis delivered a vigorous speech on the question of the Boer representatives. He said their mission was well understood and known. They had, however, proceeded in a manner irregular and highly improper.

Senator Davis said he didn't want to discourage the sympathy of American people with the Boers, but these representatives had been taking an unwise course, premature and undiplomatic. Before presenting their case to this government they were going about the country attending public meetings and attempting to enlist the people of the United States to bring pressure to bear to influence the action of the government.

Senator Davis moved to lay the Allen resolution on the table, which was carried, 36 to 21.

The Lodge amendment to the postoffice appropriation bill, continuing the pneumatic tube service in cities where contracts have been made and appropriating $225,000 for the same, was adopted by the senate by a vote of 38 to 20.

The Clark case went over until Thursday.

The reading of the resolution was greeted with rounds of applause. At Payne's request the resolution was referred to the ways and means committee.

The eight-hour bill was passed by a vote of 15 to 24.

Mr. Gardner then moved the passage of the bill to prohibit interstate traffic in convict-made goods. It passed without division.

Commander Todd Suspended.

New York, May 20.—A special from Washington says:

Secretary Long has relieved Commander C. C. Todd from duty as hydrographer of the navy and placed him under suspension. It is confidently expected by Commander Todd and his friends that when the facts receive further consideration he will be restored to duty and proper steps taken to relieve his record of the stigma now resting upon it.

FIERCE BATTLE IN MAFEKING

BOERS FORCED THEIR WAY IN.

They Met Defeat—Ninety Men taken Prisoners and Seventeen Killed—Many Rumors Are Afloat—Boer Account.

Cape Town, May 19.—A dispatch from Lorenzo Marquez says that Commandant Eloff, grandson of President Kruger, with a patrol, entered Mafeking, whereupon Colonel Baden-Powell opened fire on the burghers, killing 17 of them and taking Eloff and 90 of his men prisoners.

London, May 19.—In the committee room of the house of commons Sir James Kitson announced that Mafeking had been relieved. The war office, however, is unable to confirm the announcement.

Everyone is talking of Mafeking and the latest exploits of its defenders. Rumors continue rife that the relief of the place has been accomplished, but all official confirmation of the reports is lacking.

There was considerable speculation as to what Colonel Baden-owell would do with his 90 prisoners and whether victory has not so depleted his force as to render him open to annihilation in the event of another attack by superior Boer numbers.

Boers Leaving atal.

Volkstrust, South African Republic, May 19.—The federals have abandoned the Biggarsberg and it is believed they also abandoned New Castle this morning, though their mounted men are still on the other side of the border keeping the British at bay.

London, May 19.—The war office has received the following dispatch from General Buller:

Buller at Dannahauser.

"Dannahauser, May 19.—The second division has reached Dannahauser, and I hope that my advance patrols are at New Castle. The fifth division is at Echelon from Elandslaagte to Glencoe, repairing the railway. The fourth division is at Sunday River drift on the old New Castle road. Several Natal farmers are handing over their arms. All reports agree that about 7000 of the enemy passed north very hurriedly May 14 and May 15."

The resident commissioner in Basutoland reports that a number of Boers living in the Ficksburg and Bethlehem districts have applied to him for advice and as to the conditions of surrender. This is very satisfactory.

Kroonstad, May 19.—Rundle has occupied Mequatlings Nek and Modderport without opposition. Hunter has entered the Transvaal and has advanced within 10 miles of Christiana. Methuen has reached a point 1 miles on the Hoopstad road without seeing the enemy. Natives and local whites have confirmed the previous reports of the disorganization of the Free Staters. The situation here is unchanged.

Boer Account of Mafeking Fight.

Pretoria, May 19.—An official bulletin announces that the federal troops stormed and occupied the forts around Mafeking. The same night the federals were surrounded, losing, so far as known, seven killed. 17 wounded and a number taken prisoners. The British casualties are said to have been 50 killed or wounded. It is reported that the advance guard of the force proceeding to the relief of Mafeking from the south was repulsed.

A Stylish Wedding.

New York, May 20.—It is now announced that Senator Clark will give his daughter, Miss Katherine Clark, jewels valued at $85,000 upon the occasion of her marriage to Dr. Lewis Rutherford Morris. A work train on the Guadalajara branch of the Mexican Central road ran into an obstruction, wrecking the engine and a number of cars. The American engineer and 10 Mexican laborers were killed.

MINES AND MINING NEWS

OUR NORTHWESTERN MINES.

Items Gleaned From Late Reports—All Districts Are Being Developed—A Prosperous Year Is Predicted—Mining Notes and Personals.

The deepest bore in the world, says Mr. C. Rundel, in a late communication to the Industrial society of Mulhouse, is one of 6,571 feet below the surface of the soil, made at Parnschowitz, near Hybrick, Upper Silesia. The previous record for depth was the 6,733-foot hole drilled some years ago at Schladeback, near Leipsig.

REPUBLIC.

From an inside source the following results of the test runs of the Mountain Lion have bee secured. Hitherto no information has been given out for publication regarding the results of these tests, but it was stated that they were highly satisfactory. The actual results of the tests, as given in the official returns, it is claimed, show that the mill is doing all, if not more, than was hoped from it.

The expense of milling is said to be about $2 per ton and of mining possibly from $1 to $2 per ton, giving a net gain of from $6 to $7 per ton. Reports have been that the Mountain Lion has large quantities of $20 and $30 ore, so that the profit can be very largely increased.

Total from plates alone, $2377.14.

The Quilp compressor plant has started up. The machinery works excellently.

The Republic Reduction company turned the wheels of the new plant last week. The plant is a very complete one, and it will have plenty of ore to reduce.

John Sund, one of the best known mining men of this section, has returned from an inspection of some of the properties on Bridge creek, on the south half. W. A. Hunt and himself own what is known as the Keno group. Speaking of the mines he said: "The outlook for the Bridge creek country I consider very promising. It will certainly compare very favorably with any that I have seen in Washington or Idaho. The ledges are strong and have the appearance of being permanent."

Superintendent Maurice Downey states that the double compartment shaft known as No. 3 was down 240 feet. While the shaft was passing through the slate formation progress was made at the rate of two feet per day.

The Slate Creek district is coming to the front. The results of development on the Mammoth have drawn to that camp a number of men of means, and at present there are five companies opening up properties on a large scale as well as much work being done on smaller holdings. It is stated that the Eureka had, last December, completed a ten-stamp mill and before the heavy snows came had built part of a tramway from the mine.

The Chico machinery has at last started up. It has been in place and ready to operate for the past 10 days. It is probable that work will be resumed on the shaft. It is now 225 feet in depth, and it is estimated that the shaft will have to be sunk to at least 350 feet before the ledge is cut by the shaft. At the 200-foot level a drift was run west for about 60 feet, where the ledge was struck. It was found to be 25 feet wide and carried uniform values high enough to induce the company to put on an extensive plant.

BRITISH COLUMBIA.

The Granby smelter is adjacent to Grand Forks, on the north fork of the Kettle river. Construction was begun in June of 99, and the smelter is now ready to treat ore. It is expected that it will blow in within the next thirty days. It has a capacity of 500 tons per day.

Despite the hardship that the fire at Sandon inflicted on the Slocan mining town, it is reasonable to declare that in the end it will turn out to be a good thing.

The announcement has been made that the Jumbo, at Rossland, is to commence shipping as soon as a tramway can be built. The tramway will be about 500 feet in length, and will be of the gravity type, with three tracks, a switch in the center and a drum upon which the cable will run.

The Mountain View, in Summit camp, and immediately adjoining the shipping B. C. mine, was bonded last October to John Dorsey and associates for $25,000, who immediately formed the Mountain View Copper Company, Limited, to develop the property. The first payment was promptly made, and when the second came due, both it and the third were made at the Merchants' Bank of Halifax in Grand Forks, leaving only the last conditional payment to be made to complete the terms of the bond.

Shipping will commence immediately on the Sullivan, in East Kootenay. At present ore has to be hauled by wagons from the mine to the siding, about two and a half miles, but the company expects to put a tramway in before long, after thorough tests have been made along the lines at present planned. There are big plans ahead, but the commencement of regular shipments is what is being worked for now. There is a large body of ore on the dump ready to be sent out, and the mine is turning out more with regularity. Fifteen men have been at work in the mine all winter, and they have it in excellent shape for shipping.

Several important strikes were made last week in the vicinity of Ymir camp. The May Blossom claim is one from which some remarkable specimens of ore have been brought to town. This property lies between Quartz and Boulder creeks, about two and a half miles from Ymir.

Over 1000 tons of concentrates have been shipped from Moyie since the new St. Eugene concentrator was started up. The 7-drill air compressor which was formerly at the Lake Shore mine is being run a good portion of the time in connection with the 10-drill compressor. The payroll of the St. Eugene Consolidated Mining Company for the month of April was $15,000.

MINING NOTES.

R. K. Neill, the Spokane mining man, practically purchased the water power at Post Falls, Idaho. Mr. Neill is the promoter of an enterprise that may make Post Falls a thriving town in the near future. The water power included in these negotiations comprises all but 1500 horse power out of the 11,000 horse power supposed to be in the river. The proposition is to erect a $500,000 electric power plant at Post Falls to furnish power for the operation of the mines in the Coeur d'Alene country. Wires will be strung for 65 miles, or as far as the town of Burke, Idaho. By this plan some of the largest mines in the Coeur d'Alenes will be operated by electricity. This is probably the largest enterprise ever undertaken by Spokane capital, and as many of the most wealthy mining men in this city are interested in the proposition its success is assured.

Furnace No. 3 has been blown at the Northport smelter. The other two furnaces will follow as quickly as is expedient. Ore is coming down from the mine at Rossland at the rate of over 500 tons daily, and a continuous run is looked for the coming year. Men are being put to work daily and the city is taking on a more prosperous look than it has for some time.

The Montana Summit Mining company has set three men to work on its ground near the head of Prichard creek near Murray. The tunnel will be driven in until connection is made with the shaft, after which the air will be good and two or three shifts will be put on taking out ore.

The Tiger-Poorman at Burke, Idaho is temporarily closed down, while a lot of retimbering is being done on the shaft. The work is already complete far enough down that a few men are working on the upper levels, but it will be two or three weeks before the full force will be back to work and all the levels running.

The shaft in the Amador, on Iron mountain, is showing better ore than ever. A considerable part of it is of shipping grade, and the quality is improving with every shot. It will be only a short time before a mill will be on the ground. For this reason little time is spent in sorting the ore, except where there are large chunks of shipping ore.

—A brother of this writer, with a P. M.'s commission in his pocket and divers schemes in his head, sailed from Seattle on the fine U. S. Senator for Cape Nome, Saturday. Just before the boat pulled out he scribbled a few lines for us, saying they expected a fine trip and a good time after they arrive among the loosening icebergs along the gold-lined shores. Many are going to court Dame Fortune. He says "you have no conception of the number of people going. It is just simply wonderful. We have over 500 on the Senator, and there are at least half a dozen other boats in the harbor heavily laden with people ready for the race. We all expect to get sea sick. Will write you at Dutch Harbor and after I get to Nome."

—Next Friday, June 1st, the census enumerators will take the field and their work of canvassing must be completed by July 1st. They are in duty bound to ask all sorts of apparently foolish questions which people must correctly answer, a refusal to do so is a misdemeanor and is punishable by a heavy fine. The enumerators must keep all information secret. Parties will confer a great favor to the enumerators if they will have prepared a list of their chattels, number of acres sown to grain, ages and places of birth, etc., etc. The time of taking census is short and if parties will make themselves acquainted with such information in advance and when interviewed civilly answer all questions it will greatly assist in the work. Herman Nebelsieck will canvass Genesee and Juliaetta precincts and F. D. Hasbrouck Rimrock and Hatwai.

NORMAL NOTES.

Next Thursday the Seniors will take the annual Lake Waha trip.

Steve and Sam Knudson are in Seattle and expect to leave for Cape Nome gold fields May 24.

Miss May Calkins has been seriously ill but is, we are glad to say, much improved in health now.

The ball game between the Lewiston Amateurs and Moscow, Sunday, resulted in a defeat for the Lewiston team. Score 11 to 10.

T. E. Miller and daughters, Stena and Lottie, visited Lewiston Friday. Miss Stena will remain until commencement week is over.

The work of the training department will close next Tuesday with an entertainment given by the little folks of the first and second grades.

The Excelsior Society will give its closing program in the form of a decennial celebration of the admission of Idaho to statehood. We expect to learn much of the early history of Idaho from this program.

The Nez Perce County Institute held in the Normal building last week was largely attended. Beside the teachers from various parts of the county, the twenty three Seniors and many of the Normal students enrolled. It was an interesting session but when Prof. Wright, principal of the public schools arose, disagreeing entirely with Miss Bloom on methods, the Seniors began to turn pale with fear. Many points of interest in all branches were brought out and the teachers returned to their schools with a new inspiration and enthusiasm, an effect which characterizes the County Institute and forms its chief value.

—C. W. Hanson has opened an art gallery in Uniontown. The people there will find him a No 1 artist.

A Rich Man's Project.

A rich man's statement that he intends to devote almost his entire fortune to charitable works has aroused much discussion. This is because it will accomplish much good. It is a praiseworthy endeavor, but there are many other agencies which accomplish just as much good. Take Hostetter's Stomach Bitters for instance—the great American remedy. For fifty years it has cured constipation, dyspepsia and all the ills which arise from weak digestion. This medicine will keep the stomach in good shape and the bowels regular. It is a wonderful restorative tonic and health builder. It is also a preventative for malaria, fever and ague. Ask for it, and insist upon getting it. —Martin Meyer came down from Spokane latter part of last week.

—Miss Ella Walby came up from Lewiston Friday to attend the graduating exercises.

—Rev. Harris received a large consignment of the Dwight L. Moody books this week for delivery. The books are up to expectations.

—Geo. Steltz, the contractor, says there will be considerable building done in Genesee this year, he having already enough work to keep several men going until harvest time.

—A neighboring editor who places his profession a little ahead of that of the legal light, says: A lawyer may, in a court room, call a man a liar a villian a scoundrel or a thief and no one makes a complaint when court adjourns If a newspaper prints such a reflection on a man's character there is a libel suit or a dead editor. This is owing to the fact that the people believe what an editor says; what a lawyer says cuts no figure.

The Deming Investment Company of Colfax, Wash., has a special fund to loan on improved farms at 7 1-2 per cent interest; no extra commissions. Favorable terms to pay off at any interest payment. Call on R. Pickering, Genesee, Idaho.

—Attend Fruit Association meeting Saturday, June 2nd.

—Mr. and Mr. J. J. Brown occupy their own quarters now.

—Mesdames Brown and Seymour visited Pullman Monday.

—Ground has been broken by the school board for the planting of a row of trees around the school grounds.

—Mrs. Ouse and children left Wednesday morning for a visit with her sister at Medical Lake, Mrs. Ira Wolfe.

—The Uniontown schools closed Friday with creditable commencement exercises. The three graduates received eighth grade state diplomas, Raymond Hilliard, Fred Herman and Miss Anna Dahm.

—The boy of O. L. Phillips, after suffering for several months with a cancer in his head, died last Friday at his home southwest of Genesee, and was buried Sunday on Fix Ridge. As New York physicians could render no relief it is far better that death came to relieve the sufferer at this time.

—Fred Rieck, one of our prosperous Lenville farmers, has let the contract to Dutton & Co. for the erection of a substantial residence. It will be 46x28 in size and two stories high. It will contain seven rooms of fourteen feet square in addition to a large pantry, bay window, hall way and two porches.

—The councilmen had a bout on the sidewalk question Monday night. Mr. Jain's proposition to have the city own and control the walks about town did not receive a favorable hearing. Mr. Jain gracefully bows to the majority and will work for whatever is considered best. The council decided to condemn all the poor walks and have new constructed of inch and a half material. The inch boards are of but little value—rot and warp in a year's time. It is claimed the inch and a half material lasts from ten to fifteen years, and the cost is but a trifle more. Genesee walks are in need of attention from the city administration.

—A. McPherson, State Horticultural Inspector, accompanied by the county inspector, Mr. Russell, spent several days among the orchardists of the Potlatch, American and Fix Ridges and near Genesee. Mr. McPherson found our many orchards free from the worst pest, the San Jose scale. This is good news when it is considered that many of the fine orchards about Lewiston have been entirely ruined by the scale. The scale is bound to come here unless the people take every precaution to keep it out. The inspector advocated dilligent search and frequent spraying. The worst foes found in orchards hereabouts are the apple scab and the codlin moth. We have here in many orchards, even within the city limits of Genesee, and if steps are not taken to eradicate them it will not be long, a couple of years, before the trees are ruined and will have to be chopped down. A good remedy for the moth is the banding process. The moth will cling to the band and can thus be destroyed. The Bordeaux Mixture is recommended for spraying and the best time for spraying is before the foliage appear as then every spot can be reached. The aphis has natural enemies that destroy them and consequently go and come. He advocated and assisted in the organization of a fruit growing association for self protection, destroying of pests, packing, shipping and marketing of fruit, etc. Last year the south Idaho association sold eight car loads of fruit in London and other cities across the sea which netted orchardists $400 per acre. An individual cannot get the price that an association can. Every state in the union is infested with the scale and other pests, and with proper care now, Mr. McPherson stated that Idaho in the near future would supply a large share of the fruit for the eastern cities at good figures. Believed apples and prune orchards would prove better than gold mines. The inspector has full power under the law to enforce the measures he may prescribe, and if the people will not take the proper steps and prevent the spread of these pests he will take the matter in his own hands. Our trees are young and as the pests are just appearing, the remedy is easy. Had the Lewiston people pursued a more pugnacious spirit toward the insects two years ago many of their fine orchards and beautiful shade trees would now be spared from the ax. Of all the pests the scale and the moth are the only ones not having natural enemies to destroy them, hence people must fight them at every turn.

—Judge Steele at Mt. Idaho sentenced Irvin Holt to six years in the state penitentiary for cattle stealing. On with the good work.

—Merchant Kinnier took out a load of goods for his Lenville store Wednesday. Reported the grain fields in his locality looking the very best.

—U. G. Dickson sold his reservation farm last week for $3000 and is to give possession after he takes the crop off. Mr. Lauer of South Dakota is the purchaser.

—The F. F. Burdic people have moved to the farm for the summer. Miss Maude will rusticate for a couple of weeks and then go to Medical Lake and Spokane.

—Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Dorchester returned Friday from their bridal trip to Spokane and other points. They will leave forepart of next week for the Salmon river home.

—The following themes will be discussed next Sunday at the Methodist church. In the morning, "The Christian's warefare and reward." Evening, "Words to the weary and oppressed."

—Mr. Denning was not pleased with Saturday's convention at Moscow—in short he was turned down—and after adjournment took revenge out of one of the delegates, Cashier Gilbert, by kicking his pants across the street. Now he's looking for more cashiers!

—Among those who attended the Christian services at Lewiston last Sunday were the Patterson, Baxter, Chas. Spurbeck, Swank, Easterbrook and Goodnight families, Emma Nebelsieck, the Misses Walby, Hartzell Cobbs and F. D. Hasbrouck. In all about twenty were in the party.

—J. M. Jeffreys and wife, of Silver City, south Idaho, old friends of the Platt people, visited here the past week and fell in love with our country.

—Jimmie Bell came down from Greer Thursday where he has charge of a stock of good. Mrs. Bell and daughter will return with him to reside there.

—W. M. Thompson has secured grounds and as soon as lumber arrives from the mountains will commence the erection of a warehouse east of the Genesee Roller Mills.

—Guess the people are not caring very much about celebrating this year. At least no one appeared on the scene Wednesday night. If we are to celebrate this year action must be had very soon.

—Members of the G. A. R. and W. R. C. will observe May 30th as a day sacred to the memory of those who have fallen in the service of our country, and departed relatives and friends. Ritualistic services only will be held at the cemetery. A special invitation is extended to the soldiers of the present war to join in the services, and a cordial invitation is extended to the general public to observe the day in all that it implies. The members of the G. A. R. and W. R. C. will start from their respective places of meeting at 10 o'clock a. m.

BY ORDER OF COM.

—Died, on Sunday, May 20, 1900, at her home north of Genesee, Inga J. Holvorsen, wife of John Holvorsen, thirty-five years of age. She was suddenly taken ill Saturday with inflammation of the stomach and died the following day. The funeral occurred Wednesday and the remains interred in the Norwegian cemetery five miles north of town, Rev. Chr. Anderson preaching the sermon. The deceased leaves a husband and six children to mourn her departure She was born in Norway and came to Chicago in 1880. Was united in marriage in 1882 and that year with her husband came to the Pacific coast and settled at Astoria. In the year 1893 they moved to this community where they have since resided Mrs. Holvorsen was a fine lady and highly esteemed by all her neighbors and acquaintances. The many friends extend sympathy to the bereaved ones.

—Rev. Fowler visited Lapwai and Cul de Sac this week.

—Rev. Carl J. Heuer will hold services in the Chapel at Genesee, May 27, at 11 a. m., and in the country at 3 p. m.

—Grip and John Larrabee have been fighting for two week, but John is slowly worsting his foe. Ed. Keane is having a similar experience.

—Mark Means of Genesee, and Jimmy Clark, late of Lapwai, are, we understand, preparing to open up a big implement house in this city next week.—Lewiston Daily Patriot.

—Fred Nagel and J. L. Goodnight, about the fifth of next month, will ship to the Montana ranges about 500 head of cattle. They are all "feeders" and having already been sold will be delivered to the purchasers there.

—Mr. Baxter has lost four head of young cattle on Steptoe from the disease known as blackleg. It is not believed the disease is contagious. A remedy that is given: Cut the hide of the animal where effected, insert a quantity of salt peter and then sew up the gash made.

—The Genesee Bloods, or what is known as the third nine, played the Kendrick Terrors a game of ball at Kendrick, Saturday, and were worsted to the tune of 40 to 7, a score which would have been a credit to our second nine. The boys had a nice trip nevertheless for on their return Saturday evening, in ascending the Potlatch steeps, their "carriage" was so disabled that it was necessary to put in the night in the shade of a barb wire fence. They arrived home with excellent appetites Sunday morning just in time for Sunday school.

—At a meeting held Wednesday evening, at the conclusion of Horticultural Inspector McPherson's talk, an organization was effected to be known as the Genesee Fruit Growers' Association, having for its objects the stimulating of the fruit industry of this section, the fighting of insects, care and marketing of fruit. The temporary officers elected, T. E. Miller president and G. H. Raymond secretary. Unity and cooperation must be had to obtain the best results to the growers. The following gentlemen were elected a committee to meet similar committees from other similar organizations: G. W. Follett, C. H. De Bow and T. E. Miller. It was urged that all fruit men be seen and asked to join and cooperate in this move. If the association is properly managed it will accomplish much good to the members as has been demonstrated in Washington, Oregon and California the past two or three years. It costs nothing to join, benefits are many, and a person can withdraw at any time. Push it along. Another meeting will be held Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, June 2nd.

—The commencement or fifth graduating exercises were held Friday evening at the Congregational church as per program published. The building was filled to the doors. The stage was nicely decorated with the class colors, crimson and gold, and flowers, many of the flowers coming from California and Oregon and from near by towns. The audience consisted of happy people who came out to encourage the graduates on their journey past one of life's chief mileposts. The program, consisting of music, singing and essays by the graduates was well rendered. The young graduates committed their efforts and recited them off to very good effect. Opal Swank appeared first, with "The Power of Confidence in Life." Then followed Ormond McMahon with "The Crusades." Gussye Rosenstein came next with "Purpose." Teresa Walby was the last with "The Tragedy of Genius." To each of the orations the auditors were free with their applause and praise. Nearly a wagon load of bouquets were strewn before them. Prof. Cobbs delivered a fine and appropriate address. Rev. C. R. Howard, in presenting the diplomas to the graduates, spoke to them about the meaning of life, their duties in the future, and believed they would each make a creditable record, a record that all Genesee would be proud. Congratulations were then in order. The grade mates have quit school, and in taking up life's duties have the best wishes of the NEWS. May they always follow their motto, Gradatim, advance step by step.

AS AN INDUCEMENT for intending purchasers to buy THE BEST and not ride an interior wheel, I am instructed to accept orders for Columbia ladies' wheels at $35 each for the next 30 days.

ROYAL

The Absolutely Pure

is the baking powder of general use, its sale exceeding that of all other baking powders combined.

Royal Baking Powder has not its counterpart at home or abroad. Its qualities, which make the bread more healthful and the cake of finer appearance and flavor, are peculiar to itself and are not constituent in other leavening agents.

Great efforts are made to sell alum baking powders under the plea that they are so many cents a pound cheaper than Royal. The admission that they are cheaper made is an admission that they are inferior. But alum powders contain a corrosive poison and should not be used in food, no matter how cheap.

The Kearsarge rules the waves.

How many people can find a chapter in the Bible without looking at the index?

One way to live 100 years, now that the subject is up, is not to be emperor of China.

There is only one man who finds that it pays to make a fool of himself—the circus clown.

The Prince of Wales will probably never found a society for the improvement of markmanship.

Burglaries on American principles are reported from parts of Cuba. Another phase of the "open door" question.

There are lots of morals in these old classical stories. Achilles being wounded where he was shows the advantage of being well heeled.

The curfew takes its name from an old custom of putting out lights at a given signal. Nowadays it's supposed to mean: "Light out for home!"

There is said to be a popular demand for half-cents, and the government is thinking of supplying them. We frequently find people who haven't half-cents.

Since its export from this country to Turkey averaged only $13 per year, it isn't likely that the Sultan's embargo on American pork will cause much of a squeal.

An Ohio man who is in good health has bought a grave and a coffin for himself. Perhaps he is afraid the trusts may put these things beyond the reach of people who wait too long.

An American palmist has been sentenced to five years' imprisonment in England for stealing. Evidently he couldn't read his lines well enough to tell where the police would be waiting.

A Chicago man is trying to break a will in which a legacy of $500,000 is provided for him. There are, however, plenty of Chicago men who would be pretty well satisfied with provisions of that kind.

R. D. Blackmore, the novelist, left instructions in his will that no biography or memoir of him was to be written. He must have produced popular songs or done something else that he was ashamed of in life.

Arbor Day is the only holiday which speaks for the future; all others celebrate the past. Yet even Arbor Day begins to have a past. Eighteen years ago, during the first forestry congress in this country, the children of Cincinnati marched to Eden Park and planted a young tree for each President. Washington would be prouder of his Cincinnati oak than of his mythical cherry tree; and Jackson would find his hickory harder to break down than was the United States Bank.

The War Department has lately published a list of the officers and men of the United States army who have received medals or been especially commended for gallantry during the last two and a half years. Two of the fifty officers whose names are mentioned, and thirty-three of the enlisted men, are colored. In view of the relatively small number of negro troops in the army, this is a record of which our dark-skinned brother may well be proud. Evidently the color-line is not drawn at the firing line.

To that large number of people who are lacking in admiration for mere muscle it must be agreeable to note the growing strength of expert testimony on the injurious effects of violent exercise. In the first flush of the athletic movement in this country the natural impulse was toward muscular development regardless of its cost. Every right-minded boy wants to be stronger than the other boy, the obvious way to be strong is to take exercise, and the harder the exercise the better. Faithful adherence to this impulse has given the country an army of young athletes with abnormal knobs of muscles and impaired hearts and doubtful digestion. But we live and learn, and we are beginning to learn that there is such a thing as overexertion of the muscle, and that in taking exercise, as in all other things, the rule of moderation is the rule of reason. We are learning from experience that bodily fatigue is not a cure for mental fatigue; that violent straining on gymnastic apparatus hurts more than it helps, and that the real benefits of exercise, which are health, good digestion, good temper, good spirits, resistance to disease and resultant longevity, are acquired by moderate exertion in the open air, rather than by unnatural exertion in the achievement of feats or the breaking of records. These teachings of common sense, we may add, are not the teaching of the "gridiron" or of the athletic meeting.

It must have been apparent to any one who has given the subject the slightest attention that the fire insurance companies have been hit very hard during the last year or more. The number of large and disastrous fires has been very great, and no one can have failed to note the great losses that have been incurred. The general estimate is that of the premiums received 55 per cent. go for losses and 35 per cent. for expenses, leaving a profit of 10 per cent., but this proportion for cost of doing business, large as it is, was far outrun in 1899. Figures recently published show that the loss rate ran very little short of 93 per cent., and that while the expense ratio fell a little below the average, namely, 33.33 per cent., the total cost entailed upon the insurance companies exceeded 126 per cent. Out of 168 companies doing business in New York State the net excess of loss and expenses over premiums exceeded $5,000,000. Moreover, this unsatisfactory result followed upon another year in which the losses had already been high. This is a very serious matter, not only for the insurance companies, but for business men throughout the country. The present disastrous conditions undoubtedly mean considerably higher rates, and, in addition, are likely to put a stop temporarily, at least, to the rate cutting which has been carried on so freely in the past. The entire subject is receiving very careful consideration on the part of the insurance companies.

The bird life of the nation is being sacrificed to the whims of fashion. Birds are an indispensable factor in successful agriculture. They feast upon crop-destroying bugs, vermin, rodents and worms. Aside from their practical contribution to the plans of nature, with exquisite beauty and sweet song, they give in common with flowers and trees a perfectibility to rural life. Caring nothing for the destruction of the crop-protectors of the farmers or the despoliation of the landscape, women continue to demand that nature be robbed for their ornamentation. The women of the country, the fashion plate women, are responsible for the decimation of the birds. They demand birds for their adornment. But they do not stop with the robbery of the people's common property in the rural districts, but have started a decimating raid upon the sea gulls, those winged beauties that relieve the dreary monotony of the sea coasts. The gulls, too, have their uses. They perform a sanitary service that is most valuable. The amount of putrid matter that they consume, preventing its floating about to form noxious gases and spread disease, is inconceivable. Millions of these gulls gorge daily at the refuse places of the cities, removing an insalubrious mass of matter that would otherwise be a menace to the public health. But fashion has decreed that the gulls are fit for woman's adornment and the work of devastating the coasts has begun, despite the efforts of the ornithologists and the sanitarists. This slaughter of the innocents, this robbery of nature, this inhumanity, is chargeable to the women and every woman who wears a trophy of the slaughter is a confessed accessory to the crime.

The objections so vigorously put in several cities to such plays as "The Degenerates" "Zaza" and "Sapho," and the absolute ban put upon them in many others, has revived the old controversy as to whether newspaper denunciation, or even public prohibition, does not act as a mere advertisement and consequently do more harm than good. Those who hold to the former opinion point to the well-known fact that mere mention of certain immoral features in a play or book attracts many readers or theater-goers. This has been shown by the number of thousands of Daudet's salacious story sold since the prosecution of Miss Nethersole in New York for acting it upon the stage. On the other hand, it may be said that the object of such newspaper denunciation or municipal prosecution is not the protection of the class of prurient-minded people who would be led by such criticism to see the book or play. These are people whose moral standards have already been wrecked and fixed in the wrong direction. What such criticism does do is to place a ban upon a book or a play, and thereby prevent parents from allowing immature sons and daughters to read the book or see the play. This stigma also makes the play or book unpopular with the people whose moral standards would not be shocked by it, and they are therefore more careful about being seen at the play or to talk about having read the book. Thus, in time, even a class which no immoral play or book could seriously harm, from the fact that their standards are already so low, are brought into line against such disregard of the conventional, at least, as is shown by the immoral playwright or novelist. These considerations show that balance is in favor of press and pulpit condemnation as aids in setting up a standard of morality too often lowered in the specious plea, so frequently advanced, that condemnation acts only as an advertisement for vice.

The Imperial Eagle.

The Imperial eagle, the largest of the species known, flies to a height of from 10,000 feet to 15,000 feet. It is a native of South America, and its habitat is among the lofty mountains of that country. Its power of flying to high altitudes is only exceeded by the condor of the Andes, which is said to have attained the height of six miles, or within one mile of the greatest height ever attained by a balloon. The eagle sails in the air at heights ranging from three to five miles, and, when seen to soar upwards by an observer on the earth's surface, disappears from sight in about three minutes.

Blind Horses' Sense of Smell

Blind horses will gallop wildly about a field without striking the surrounding fence. The sense of smell informs them of its proximity. The horse, when browsing, is guided entirely by the nostrils in its choice of proper food, and blind horses are never known to make mistakes in their diet.

A MOTHER'S REASONING.

I miss the little laughing baby faces,
The loving eyes that always turned to me;
I miss the roguish ways and elfish graces
Of little forms that clustered at my knee.

Of rosy lips that left such happy kisses
Upon my ever-willing cheek and brow,
And, oh! the thousand nameless joys and blisses
That once I had, but only dream of now!

And yet I know full well if Time could bear me
Back to the days of proud young motherhood,
I'd miss the gentle presence ever near me
Of those who as my grown-up babies stood.

To be without my boy's strong reassurance,
To be without my girl's sweet sympathy,
Would go beyond my heart's most firm endurance,
E'en though my babies clung again to me!

Well, mother-like, I miss the bonny tresses
That lay upon my breast in tangled curl;
Yet I would die to lose the love that blesses
My whole life, in my grown-up boy and girl.

—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

A Dangerous Game.

CARL, I don't believe you truly love me.

Mildred Reynolds looked at her lover half-archly, as if she defied him to say he did not love her, half-pleadingly, as if she longed for him to contradict her warmly.

Carl Langlois reddened under her gaze. "What nonsense, Mildred, of course I love you. Why else would I come a hundred miles to spend an evening with you?" he replied a trifle impatiently.

"Then, why"—Mildred began bravely, but she in turn colored and looked embarrassed. Surely Carl knew that she longed to ask him why he had twice postponed their marriage, and on this visit, when she had expected him to ask her to set the day for the ceremony, he had not done so. True, he had brought her a beautiful bracelet and had seemed affectionate and loving; yet somehow Mildred felt that caresses, and the fact that he did not broach the subject which she had hoped he would settle on his visit vaguely alarmed her. For she loved Carl deeply and was unhappy in the home of a relative upon whom she was partly dependent and longed to have a home of her own.

Carl had said, the last time he had visited her, that they would arrange their plans for the future when he next came, but when Mildred had made the remark that she did not believe he really loved her he was on the verge of departure and still had not asked her to name the day which would make them husband and wife. He must have known what the question was she wished to ask, yet he did not help her out, and so the question died, unasked, upon her lips. Instead, he turned suddenly to the clock. "I'll have just time to make my train," he said, hurriedly, "so good-by, my sweetheart. Give me a kiss and take good care of yourself, for my sake," so tenderly that for a time all doubts as to his fidelity were dismissed from Mildred's heart. Only for a time, however, for while his farewell kiss was still warm on her lips the question returned to her mind:

"Why does not Carl, if he really loves me and wants me to be his wife, claim me for his own? Perhaps he is growing to love some one else. I believe I am strong enough to bear it if it is true—better to know now than when it is too late—and uncertainty is hard to bear. I must find out, and if it is true that he no longer loves me as he did I will release him. But if I have wronged him by my doubts, I will atone by giving him added love and affection."

Carl's mother had often sent her kind messages, and had also sent by Carl some very beautiful table linen for Mildred to embroider for use after marriage. She knew that Mrs. Langlois was her friend, although they had never met, and determined to go to see her and discover whether Carl had confided in her any change in his desire to marry Mildred. She shrank from the trial, yet felt it must be made for the sake of her future happiness. Accordingly, a few days after Carl's visit she took a trip to his home, arriving there, as she had planned, when Carl was absent at his business. When she introduced herself to Mrs. Langlois she was warmly greeted, but when she told the object of her visit her host was visibly surprised and disconcerted.

"My dear child," she exclaimed, "there must be a mistake somewhere. Carl assured me only yesterday that you kept putting him off whenever he mentioned your marriage. I cannot understand it."

"I can, Mrs. Langlois," said Mildred, proudly. "Your son has grown tired of me and is seeking in some way to free himself. But, thank heaven, his fetters are not yet riveted, and are easily broken. I will release him from an engagement which is no longer a pleasure to him."

"My dear Mildred," begged his mother, "do not speak so bitterly. I am sure there is some misunderstanding."

Mildred had turned very pale, and an overwhelming conviction that Carl was false to her came upon her with crushing force, but she summoned up courage to face the truth.

"We must find out," she said, very gently, for the mother's distress was also very great, "whether he is attentive to some one else. Have you ever noticed his taking pleasure in the society of any girl here?"

"Oh, no," Mrs. Langlois replied, hastily, but suddenly her face changed. "Surely," she said, as if to herself, "he cannot care for Marion Reed? And yet, now that my mind is drawn to it, I have noticed him often with her. But Marion is such a gay little flirt, and then she knew of Carl's engagement—"

"Ah!" Mildred said quickly, "that is not enough to keep some girls from trying to win away a man's love. It may be that she has drawn him away from me. But we must make sure, my dear friend—for I feel that you are my friend—and if it is true I will willingly give him up to her if it is for his happiness."

They arranged it that Mildred's presence in the house should be kept a secret from Carl and that his mother at meal time should question him in a way not to arouse his suspicions; so, as the two sat alone at dinner, Mrs. Langlois carelessly said:

"What a charming girl Marion Reed is, Carl!"

"Isn't she, mother?" he cried enthusiastically. "Do you know she quite fascinates me?"

"Carl," his mother said gravely, "that is not the way for a man soon to be married to another woman——"

"Pshaw, mother!" Carl exclaimed, impatiently, "you know I told you Mildred would never set the day, and we may never be married at all."

"You are right, Mr. Langlois," said Mildred, who had been unable to resist the temptation of listening unseen; "you are right. We never will be married. You are quite welcome to ask the fascinating Miss Reed to be your wife, for I am henceforth a stranger to you."

Before Carl could recover from his astonishment she was gone, and as her train was just ready to depart she was out of his reach, and the passionate protests of affection which he was prepared to make, the promises of future fidelity, were never uttered.

Now that he had lost her, Mildred appeared to Carl as a precious treasure which he would give anything to possess. The attractions of Marion Reed paled into insignificance and he took the next train in pursuit of Mildred, hoping that he could win her back.

But once assured of the flaws in her idol Mildred had cast him out of her heart, and though it was sore it was not broken, because she realized his unworthiness. She refused to see Carl and returned his letters unread. Within a week, mortified at his rejection, he had offered himself to Marion Reed.

"Why, you're going to marry some girl in Lawrence," she replied, opening her blue eyes wide.

"No, I am not," he said, shortly. "I am going to marry you if you will have me."

"Well, I won't," replied the pretty flirt, decidedly. "I was only amusing myself with you, my dear boy. I hope your heart is not broken," she added mockingly, for rumors of the true state of affairs had reached her ears.

"Flirting is sometimes a dangerous game, my friend, especially if there is a jealous sweetheart at the other end of the line," she announced laughingly. And with her mocking laughter ringing in his ears Carl Langlois walked away to repent of his folly, by which he had lost that greatest of gifts—a woman's love.—The Columbian.

Clung to Border Vernacular.

Rev. Cyrus Townsend Brady, giving his experiences as "A Missionary in the Great West," tells of the baptism of a little daughter of a big cattle owner in Indian Territory. "In our baptismal service we sign those who are baptized with the sign of the cross," he explains, "and when the little girl returned to school after the baptism the children pressed her with hard questions, desiring to know what that man with the 'nightgown' on had done, and if she were now any different from what she had been before. She tried to tell them that she had been made a 'member of Christ, the child of God, and an inheritor of the kingdom of heaven,' but did not succeed in expressing the situation very well, and they pressed her for a clearer explanation. Finally, when she had exhausted every effort, she turned on them, her eyes flashing through her tears. 'Well,' she said, lapsing into the vernacular, 'I will tell you. I was a little 'maverick' before, and the man put Jesus' brand on my forehead, and when he sees me running wild on the prairie He will know that I am His little girl.'"—Ladies' Home Journal.

The Family Coaches of Genoa.

A curious custom exists in Genoa. Many of the well-to-do people as well as those in moderate circumstances do not own either horses or coaches; they own only an interest in them. Four or five or a half dozen great families club together and buy a coach and horses, then they arrange among themselves the days the different families will use it. Thus one family uses the coach on Mondays, another on Tuesdays, and a third on Wednesdays, so that an establishment that would be impossible for one family becomes perfectly practical when the cost is divided among five or six. Each family has a set of doors for the coach, with their own coat of arms on the panels, which are changed according to the family which is going to use the coach. The builders of these vehicles seldom think of building a coach without five or six sets of doors, and arrangements are made so that they are very easily changed.

One woman seldom calls on another unless she has a secret to tell.

In the course of time we will all go the earth.

AGRICULTURAL

Derrick for Stacking.

The arrangement illustrated is intended for stacking hay, fodder, etc., out of doors, and is also useful, if of convenient size, for loading shocks of fodder on to a wagon in the field, one team being used to haul the derrick from shock to shock. It can also be used to advantage in loading hay from a stack on to a wagon. A telegraph pole is best for the center pole, which turns in any direction. It is made with a shoulder to fit in the hole in the cross plank at the bottom. The bottom frame should be about one-half the height of the entire device. It is made principally of scantlings 4x4 and 2x6, as occasion requires. Three pulleys are necessary to operate the derrick, and the crane can be swung around whenever wanted. This stacker can be built on runners and may be hauled from place to place. A correspondent, describing this derrick in an exchange, says one of the kind will pay for itself several times over in convenience in handling many heavy articles, and will last a long time if well taken care of.

Measuring Irregular Fields.

A method for measuring and finding the number of acres in a field shaped as shown in the accompanying diagram is to add together the widths of the two ends, halve the sum thus obtained, and multiply this by the length. The result will give the area of the field. The problem is one of the simplest in geometry. When the two widths are added together and the sum halved, the width will be precisely as much as if one of the sides were cut off and reversed, as shown by the dotted lines, thus making a rectangle of the same area exactly as the original figure.

How to Raise Watermelons.

An Iowa contributor to the Farm, Field and Fireside says: Select a rich loam—sandy loam is best—and dig holes six feet each way, or in one long row, and put a shovel full of well-rotted manure in each hill, covering with two inches of dirt. Plant about a dozen seeds in each hill, covering one inch deep. Plant from the 5th to the 10th of May. Soon after planting these, say five or six days, plant a hill between each two of the first ones. These will come up about the time bugs show up generally, and they will not touch the first vines, but will destroy the second planting. This is much easier than putting ashes on the vines, and surer, too.

The main thing after this is to keep the ground loose around the hill, and you can raise melons in spite of drouth. Should the bugs come early and attack the first vines, they are all gone before the others are up. A wheel hoe is the best tool to use, hoeing twice a week at least. The seeds should be saved from the earliest and largest melons, providing they are sweet.

Sunburned Potatoes for Seed.

In answer to the inquiry of A. W. Merton, sun-burned or green potatoes are all right for seed. Forty years ago when we raised our potatoes on new burned land, we had a great many sun-burned potatoes, and, as they were not good for cooking purposes, we saved them for seed. It came to be the general opinion among farmers that the green end of potatoes was much the best for seed. They were considered more hardy and produced earlier potatoes. I am not well enough informed on this point to claim any advantage in this direction, but can safely say that the green ends, or if they are green all over, will not injure them for seed.—E. E. Parkhurst, in Orange Judd Farmer.

Angora Goats.

In Texas Angora goats have been cultivated for some years, and Farm and Ranch says there are 75,000 of the animals within its borders, while nearly fifty tons of their fleece, commercially known as mohair, were shipped last year from Uvalde alone. It now sells at prices ranging from 25 to 35½ cents a pound for average grades, while some of the very finest quality not yet marketed is expected to command 40 cents. Not only is the fleece of considerable value, but the hides and flesh are also said to be in active demand.

Apparently there is an excellent opportunity for many American farmers in the raising of Angora goats. It is asserted that these animals can be kept at much less expense than sheep, while their fleece is of far greater value than wool. It requires a dry climate and short grass, while a country of broken and hilly nature, with scrubby tree growths, is well adapted to its requirements. The statement is also made that breeding the Angora with the common goat produces an animal of greater size than the latter, while the fleece is soon graded up to a profit-yielding quality.

Why Incubator Chicks Die.

At the Rhode Island station careful investigation has been made of the cause of the death of young incubator chickens. The total number of dead chickens examined during the spring and summer of 1899 was 826. It was alleged that about one-third of the chicks had been more or less injured by uneven heat during incubation. Another common cause of trouble was in overcrowding of brooders, resulting in death by suffocation, trampling, etc.

Tuberculosis was found to be very prevalent, and 15 per cent. of the chickens were more or less affected. For guarding against this disease it is recommended to give the interior of the brooders all the sun and air possible on pleasant days. Bowel troubles were a common cause of death. Feeding should be as nearly as the time of the attendant renders profitable a continuous operation, but by no means a continuous gorge. Sometimes too much animal food is given, but in moderate quantities animal food results in rapid growth. Lack of animal food sometimes causes diseases of the liver and gall bladder.—Orange Judd Farmer.

Queenless Hives.

If any of the hives have a number of bees hanging idly around the entrance during March and April, and do not carry pollen like other normal colonies, it is a pretty sure indication that they are queenless. They will need watching until some pleasant day when they can be examined. Queenless colonies are in danger of being robbed, for discouraged bees are not inclined to protect their stores as a prosperous colony would. If they are not provided with a queen they will gradually dwindle away.

Simple Irrigation.

The course of a hillside stream can be changed to go around the hill instead of directly down the slope, and by partially damming the stream at intervals the water can be turned off in small streams over the sward. The water is used to best advantage if not allowed to run over one place more than four or five days at a time. The pasturage on a hillside can sometimes be doubled by this simple and inexpensive arrangement.

Onions.

Onions, unlike most other crops, delight in being grown on ground previously used for onions. An onion patch, to be profitable, must be very rich, and free from weeds. It is less work to keep one clean if properly tended the first season. Great care should be taken in the manure used, well-rotted stable manure being the best.

General Interest to Farmers.

It is estimated that the loss of cattle on the range in Montana the past winter will not exceed 4 per cent.

Mixing about one pound of oil meal with five of wheat and wetting it up with skim milk makes a good feed for growing pigs.

Governor Richards of Wyoming has issued a quarantine proclamation with instructions governing the shipment of cattle into Wyoming.

A bushel of wheat, as an equivalent amount of flour, can be shipped from Minneapolis to almost any point in western Europe for about 20 cents.

Every fruit-grower and horticulturist should have a scrapbook wherein he may place formulas, hints on culture, etc., and where he can also keep a record of varieties planted.

At the recent congress of veterinary physicians at Baden-Baden, Dr. Hecker, of Halle, maintained that the foot-and-mouth disease can be transferred to healthy animals by birds, etc.—a fact which, if substantiated, will call for a modification of legislation.

The largest orchard in South Dakota is owned by Mrs. Laura A. Alderman, near Hurley, Turner County, and contains 150 acres with 8,000 trees. Two acres are covered with plum trees. Besides the trees, there are 1,000 currant bushes, 1,000 gooseberry bushes and 500 grapevines. Three acres are devoted to strawberries.

FOR MIDDLE-AGED WOMEN.

Two Letters from Women Helped Through the "Change of Life" by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—When I first wrote to you I was in a very bad condition. I was passing through the change of life, and the doctors said I had bladder and liver trouble. I had suffered for nine years. Doctors failed to do me any good. Since I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, my health has improved very much. I will gladly recommend your medicine to others and am sure that it will prove as great a blessing to them as it has to me."—MRS. GEO. H. JUNE, 901 DeKalb Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Relief Came Promptly

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I had been under treatment with the doctors for four years, and seemed to get no better, I thought I would try your medicine. My trouble was change of life, and I must say that I never had anything help me so much as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Relief came almost immediately. I have better health now than I ever had. I feel like a new woman, perfectly strong. I give Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound all the credit, and would not do without her medicine for anything. I have recommended it to several of my friends. There is no need of women suffering so much for Mrs. Pinkham's remedies are a sure cure."—MAHALA BUTLER, Bridgewater, Ill.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address

Murderer Electrocuted.

Sing Sing, N. Y., May 22—Fritz Meyer, murderer, was put to death in the electric chair at Sing Sing prison Monday.

Women's Doings.

WANTS TO BE PETTED.

ONE of the woman's chief charms for a man is the motherly element in her character, says a writer in the Self Culture Magazine. Possibly such a man exists, but it would be hard to find one who does not enjoy being genuinely petted and made much of. And this the older woman generally does. If a man marries a young girl she generally expects and demands all his attention, and never suspects that her husband might sometimes like a little coddling. It is this thought of caring for her husband and looking after him that is the attraction of the affair to the mature woman, and it is generally the young man who shows the first symptoms of abandoning the platonic attitude for a warmer feeling. At first the woman hesitates, then denies his plea; for, being bound by the traditional idea of the subject, she is sure she would injure him, that he would repent, and so on. Generally, however, he knows what he wants, and persists until he finally convinces her that she only can satisfy him, and she yields.

Every man who has searched the depths of his consciousness knows that the thing he most wants and longs for is a sympathetic companion, a kindred mind. Some few men find this in their mothers and are blessed. Some find it in their wives who are younger than themselves; but the young man who marries a woman older than himself has probably grown weary of seeking an ideal companion among the girls of his acquaintance, and has turned perforce to the older woman. Whether the young men who take this course are of a more steadfast type than usual, or whether the reason lies with the women, I cannot say. But certain it is that in the vast majority of cases the attraction lasts.

Kissing Children.

Children are kissed too freely by relatives, friends and strangers. I know a lady who insists always on kissing her friends upon the lips when she meets them. The ordeal for her friends is a terrible one, yet not one of them has the heart to refuse the proffered caress, or to give the cheek in place of the lips. They would love her just as dearly and thank her just as feelingly if she pressed their hands merely and withheld her lips.

Parents ought to teach their children from their very earliest years to be chary in giving their lips. Parents themselves ought to avoid kissing infants on the mouth. The sweet cheeks, the dear little soft necks, the dimpled hands, all offer tempting nooks for kisses without endangering the child's comfort or health. I have seen a father, whose breath was vile with stale tobacco smoke, press his mouth to that of a tiny infant, never thinking that the poor baby's lungs were being poisoned by the contact, says a writer in the New York Telegram.

Call Her Nervy.

Miss Rose Weibel, a saleswoman in one of Cleveland, Ohio's, big stores, has made herself a heroine to other women of the city. At the busiest hour the other afternoon, a big rat promenaded leisurely in the aisles of the store. As many women as the counters would hold sought safety there, and the rest just screamed. Miss Weibel killed the rat, and when the women congratulated her, she said that she had done nothing remarkable.

MISS WEIBEL.

A Lost Gentleman.

What has become of that amiable representative of his sex who, by a strange irony of fate, used to be known as the "lady's man?" He was a decorative feature of society and stood as a sort of compromise between a feminine confidant and a masculine adorer. He had a fine taste in fancy work, could always be found at a lady's cafe, and had a kindred fondness for vanilla soda water. His knowledge of woman's dress was not limited to the depressing generalities with which the ordinary man is wont to describe feminine attire, and he knew real valenciennes from the plain patent variety. He was not the kind of man to have won a tear even from a melting "Alice," but he seems to have joined that lachrymose lady in the exile to which her enemies have consigned her.—Chicago Tribune.

Conventional Woman's Danger.

Women little realize how the conventional ideals of self-possession and good form are sapping up the vital life of affection that is within them. One hears often the expression "colorless women," and many women pride themselves on the adjective—consider it the hall-mark of refinement, of good breeding, like an etching as compared to a gaudy thing in oils! One wonders whether the inner life of our cold and correct women will not blaze out some day, uncontrollable for its long confinement. Or will it die for lack of fuel?—Temple Bailey, in the Woman's Home Companion.

When Slumber Is Elusive.

If you cannot sleep at night, get up and walk around your room a few times. A long drink of cold water will effect a cure, and taking a bit to eat—half an orange or apple or a small cracker—often will result in the desired sleep, says the Philadelphia Inquirer. Try to compose your face when you go to sleep, and practice to keep it that way. More wrinkles are bred in slumber than the average person has any idea of. The short, stout woman will find, too, that it helps her to lie at her full length, rather than curled up. On awakening in the morning she should push her feet down and her hands up as far as possible, if she would increase her height.

Rainy-Day Dresses.

Letter Writing.

Business letters must be concise and clear, because business people are supposed to be busy.

No letter is complete without the date.

In writing to solicit employment of any kind, on no account should personal perplexities or needs be mentioned. The world is full of unfortunate persons, and to a stranger the troubles of one are no more than those of a host of others.

Letters of introduction are left open when written.

Elaborately ornamented note paper, as well as highly perfumed notes, are vulgar.

When answering letters remember:

That written words stand as everlasting witnesses.

That an ambiguous sentence is likely to be misinterpreted.

That friendly words never harm.

That a written word of sympathy can sometimes do much good.

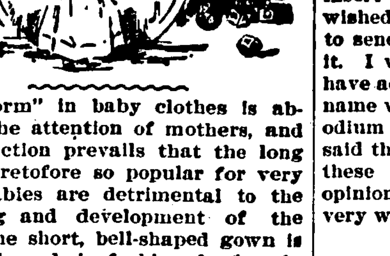
That a letter written in a kindly spirit should be answered in the same way, even though the message is disliked.

That business letters and invitations must be answered at once.

That one should acknowledge any friendly offer of hospitality, even though it be not accepted.—Kansas Journal.

Be Companionable.

The art of being companionable is a secret worth finding out, even if it takes time and patience to learn it, says the Pittsburg Dispatch. Some people are born with the happy knack. There is a spontaneous gayety that you expect women to have, just as you expect the birds to sing and the sun to shine. Many a very bad quarter of an hour has been averted in the domestic circle by a bright laugh or a gay rejoinder. The laugh may be saucy and the rejoinder a bit of verbal buffet, but if it is only done good-naturedly it will be all the more effective.



A "reform" in baby clothes is absorbing the attention of mothers, and the conviction prevails that the long frocks heretofore so popular for very young babies are detrimental to the well-being and development of the child. The short, bell-shaped gown is advocated, and is fashioned of soft, clinging material.

A new method of bathing babies is that which has been brought from Russia, where it is much used among the peasants. A flannel sheet is laid in the tub, with the corners hanging outside, and a flannel pillow is placed at one end of the tub to make it resemble a bed. Water heated to the proper temperature fills the tub to below the level of the pillow, on which the baby's head rests while the bath is in progress. When the bath is over the flannel sheet is folded around the baby, and the drying process is accomplished.

Diet for the baby is a mooted question. One child will thrive on a diet that seems to be almost fatal to a less robust child whose powers of digestion and assimilation are so limited as to require special precautions in the matter of diet. Some of the foods given at this time are the following: Beef juice or beef tea, soft boiled or poached eggs, rice that has been cooked until it forms a jelly and bread and milk. In beginning to give solid food it is necessary to experiment slowly, starting with only one food at a time, and in small quantities, until its effect upon the child is established. The following preparation of beef juice has been found valuable in building up frail children: Beef from the top of the round should be cut in slices one inch thick and broiled over a coal fire until a little less than medium cooked, after which the juice should be pressed into a heated cup by means of a lemon squeezer or meat press. A tablespoonful at a time should be poured over a piece of bread and given at regular intervals.

RE-FORMING THE RIVER NILE.

Great Engineering Feat Designed to Equalize Its Flow of Water.

One of the most ancient islands, and one rich in historic associations, is threatened with destruction. When the Nile reservoirs planned by the great Willcocks were first made known to the world, and it was found that he, although offering six or seven sites for his cyclopean designs, really only highly recommended one, the construction of which would wipe out the island of Philae, the loveliest spot on the Nile, there was a universal howl of opposition. This got to such a height that Sir W. Garstin and his engineers may have felt a grim kind of relief when they found that the French would allow them no money from the Caisse to realize their scheme for storing the blessed water, and they had for a time to abandon the whole affair. So when, one fine morning, John Aird, Sir Benjamin Baker and their friends unexpectedly called at the office of works in Cairo and offered to make any amount of dams, canals and locks wherever they pleased, for no present cash payment, in accepting their wonderful offer the government cut down the level of the great reservoir by nearly one-half. Willocks wanted to store up 120 feet of water. Sir Benjamin Baker was told to content himself with twenty meters (about sixty-five feet) of Nile storage.

And so the artists and the tourists and the general opponents to the drowning of Philae were appeased, or at least silenced, and the greatest engineering work that the world has ever seen was quickly started and within a year 20,000 men were employed at Assouan and at the supplemental dam at Assiout.

When the dam is completed and at its high level Philae will have its temple pylons and a few of the higher ruins standing out of the water just to mark where its ancient beauties were, but all its loveliness, its verdure, its palms, several of its temples, its storied walls and its Nilometer, its colonnades, its Roman quays, will disappear beneath the waters. An island will be lost, but a continent will be saved.

The Hero of Mafeking.

Of the hero of Mafeking's school days Dr. Haig Brown, the former head master of Charterhouse, has been telling a correspondent: "I notice that the name is invariably mispronounced," said the doctor. "The 'a' in Baden is generally given the sound 'ah,' but it should have the usual sound of 'a' as in 'bathing towel,' which was his nickname among the boys at school. The boy was essentially the father of the man; he was very active, lively, full of fun and amusement, and exceedingly popular with his schoolfellows. An extremely clever boy in every sort of way, his accomplishments were numerous. He was fond of athletics of all kinds, and in all he undertook showed faculty of resource, coupled with a keen sense of humor." Col. Baden-Powell, two days before he left England for South Africa, paid a visit to Dr. Haig Brown, and characteristically remarked: "I hope they will give me a warm corner." He was given his wish.

Napoleon and the Press.

"When I returned from Elba," Napoleon is quoted as saying, in the Century, "I found, among other papers of the Bourbons, an account of 6,000 francs paid monthly to the editors of the Times, besides taking a hundred numbers monthly, and I had an offer from them to write for me for payment. I had offers from the editors of several English newspapers to write for me, even during the time of war, previous to my going to Elba, and to insert news and everything else I wished, and that money would be taken to send them to France. I did not do it. I was wrong, however; I ought to have accepted their offers, and then my name would not have been held in such odium in England as it was. This they said themselves to me. For in the end these newspapers formed the public opinion, and always will do. I was very wrong; I see it now."

Why She Refrains.

"It is true. My wife never scolds, never scowls, never frowns."

"Do you expect us to believe such nonsense?"

"I do. Why not? I can explain."

"Then explain."

"She doesn't scold because it twists her mouth; she doesn't scowl because it gives her crowsfeet, and she doesn't frown because it brings wrinkles."

"Good. But inwardly?"

"Don't ask me. The question is too harrowing."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

American-Made Shoes the Better.

It is the uniform testimony of Americans when they return from an extended visit abroad that they can get neater, better and more durable shoes here than they can in England and Germany, and for less money. The dexterity of the American operatives and the perfection of the American machinery are combining to bring to this country the shoe manufacturing business of a large part of the world.—Burlington Hawkeye.

STATE OF THE AFRICAN WAR

BOERS ASK FOR CESSATION.

President Kruger Was Against It, but Strong Pressure Was Against Him—British Still Advancing—Will Defend Johannesburg.

Lorenzo Marquez, May 20.—The Transvaal government has decided to send a message to Lord Roberts requesting cessation of hostilities, demanding a guarantee that the lives of all colonials fighting with the Boers shall be spared and stating that unless these terms are granted mines will be blown up and Johannesburg destroyed.

President Kruger and the executive council were against the proposition, but strong popular pressure was brought to bear in favor of it. The Boer president told me yesterday that he would fight until the last cartridge was used, but many officials and burghers are shaky and desire a compromise. They do not want to defend Pretoria, fearing that their property will be destroyed by bombardment.

A few hundred men of the foreign legion attacked Mafeking Saturday and carried several forts, but the Boers failed to support them and the result was a fiasco. The relieving column of British was within a few miles of town and the Boer government has stopped all telegraphic news going out.

Relief Column Unopposed.

London, May 20.—A Cape Town dispatch says:

The relief force entered Mafeking unopposed, the siege having been already raised. The latest news received at Cape Town from the relief column which left Kimberley secretly shows it passed the Vryburg district without encountering the federal column. It was 1500 strong and composed the Cape police, Diamond Fields Horse, Imperial Yeomanry and a mounted regiment with three Maxims. The force reached Marizan river, 20 miles south of Mafeking, May 11. The baggage was conveyed on led horses and light mule wagons. Colonel T. B. Mahon, who, it is understood, commanded the relief expedition, served in the Donga and Nile expeditions with General Kitchener.

Relief Column Was Attacked.

Berlin, May 20.—A special dispatch from Cape Town says that the relief column as it approached Mafeking from the south was attacked by a strong force of Boers, who were then repulsed. The column then pushed on and the Boers retreated hurriedly. The rear guard continued in action for some time. The British casualties were slight.

Will Defend Johannesburg.

Pretoria, May 21.—It is officially announced that Johannesburg will be defended. The consuls of neutral powers have been notified to look after their citizens, as the government will not hold itself responsible for injury or damage to property.

Commandant Botha, commander-in-chief of the Boer forces, reports the burghers are joining in great numbers.

Buller Pushing Right Along.

London, May 20.—The war office has received the following dispatch from General Buller, dated New Castle, May 19:

"General Clery moved to Ingogo and General Dundonald to Laing's Nek. We almost caught up with the tail of the enemy's column and have captured a few prisoners and wagons.

"The men have marched very well indeed. I left Ladysmith May 10 and by the road used am now 138 miles from there. The telegraph section has been indefatigable and the army service corps has kept us full of rations all the time. The fifth division has also done great service."

IN a recent interview Senator Geo. L. Shoup said: "Idaho will, I hope, reverse its electoral vote for the president this year. I hope to find Idaho recorded in the electoral college for the re-election of President McKinley.

"Lead forms a very interesting object lesson in Idaho. Under the republican administration of Harrison the price paid for lead in our state ranged from $4.20 to $4.30. In the same month in 1893, lead sold at $3.80. In 1894 $3.20, and in 1895 as low as $2.30. With such an experience as that I cannot understand why it is that our state went for Bryan in 1896.

"President McKinley assumed office in March, 1897. Two months later the price paid for lead in Idaho was $3 12½. In 1898 $3.50, in 1899 $4.10, and this year it has touched $4 70, exceeding the good prices under President Harrison.

"Stock growers in our state," continued Senator Shoup, "also realize the benefit derived from protection. When wool was protected by the McKinley tariff, sheep in our state were worth from $2.25 up to $2.50 per head. Just as soon as the democrats began to tinker with the tariff and prepare to pass the Wilson bill, down went the price of sheep until they were worth only $1.41 each in 1895, and $1.27 in 1896, just one half their value in 1893.

"In 1897 sheep in Idaho were worth 45 cents a head more than in 1896. In 1898 they were worth 92 cents a head more than in 1896. In 1899 they were worth $1 38 more than in 1896, and this year, according to the Department of Agriculture's figures, the average price of each sheep in Idaho was $2.80 on January 1, as compared with $1.27 in 1896. The increase in their value within that period has been 120 per cent, and they are now worth more per head by 30 cents than they were on the 1st day or January 1893, before President Cleveland assumed office.

"In 1892 there were 527,000 in Idaho, and they were worth $1,265,000. In 1896 there were over a million sheep in Idaho, twice as many as in 1892, and their value was only $17,-000 more.

"In 1897, just before this administration came into power, there were 1,376,000 sheep in Idaho, and their value was $2,346,283. At the beginning of this year there were just twice as many sheep in the state, and their value had increased up to $7,-445,000, showing a gain of more than 200 per cent in value, while the increase in quantity was only 100 per cent.

"Can you imagine that any stock grower, in any part of the country, would be indiscreet enough to vote the democratic ticket with such facts as these staring him in the face? Take the price of our wool, it sold at 13 cents per lb in Idaho in 1891 and 1892. In the Cleveland years it sold anywhere from 6 to 6½ cents. Under this administration we have of course got back to 13 cent wool again. The amount of money paid to farmers in Idaho for their wool in 1895 was $418,539, the amount they are getting this year will exceed $2,300,000, an increase of 400 per cent. Every sheep in Idaho from yearlings up could be marketed today at $3.25 per head. Wool is being sold at 18 cents to 21 cents per pound. Cattle have advanced $10 per head, and horses are worth $5 to $10 per head more than a year ago. I think Idaho will go republican."

—Sam Jones says that the worst fighting whiskey in the world is made in the Ozark mountains in Kentucky. Three drinks of it will make a rabbit spit in the face of a dog.

Miss Maud Kenyon,

Of 1533 Orange Street, Los Angeles, Cal., writes: "I had been afflicted with my eyes for over a year with such a dreadful itching and inflammation that I could not use them for anything. Physicians had given me many different remedies which were like using so much water; they measured my eyes for glasses, which I got and wore for some time, but they did not benefit me in the least. My mother desired me to write to Dr. R. V. Pierce and explain the condition of my eyes. I did so, and after following your advice, and using eight bottles of the 'Favorite Prescription' and eight of the 'Golden Medical Discovery,' can say my trouble is entirely cured. I would advise any one so afflicted to try these wonderful medicines. My health was never so good as it is now, and I shall never tire of praising Dr. Pierce's medicines."

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter and secure a specialist's advice free of charge.

—The Troy News chronicles the death of A. B. Chaney which occurred recently in Oregon. He was one of the first settlers of American Ridge and was prominent in the early politics of the state, having been a member of the convention that framed the state constitution. His death was caused from Bright's disease.

"I had stomach trouble twenty years and gave up hope of being cured till I began to use Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. It has done me so much good I call it the savior of my life," writes W. R. Wilkinson, Albany, Tenn. It digests what you eat.

KENNEDY'S PHARMACY.

Beware of a Cough.

A cough is not a disease but a symptom. Consumption and bronchitis, which are the most dangerous and fatal diseases, have for their first indication a persistent cough, and if properly treated as soon as this cough appears are easily cured. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has proven wonderfully successful, and gained its wide reputation and extensive sale by its success in curing the diseases which cause coughing. If it is not beneficial it will not cost you a cent. For sale by all druggists.

COTTON IS AGAIN KING.

FROM a price of 5 cents per pound a few months ago, raw cotton has gone up until it sells today at 9 cents per pound. Worse still—the supply is short, in the face of a demand larger than for many seasons.

The world looks to America for its cotton. As our new crop will not be marketed until 1901, it is unreasonable to look for a drop in cotton goods before that time.

But remember one thing: I purchased all my cotton goods before the advance and am selling them at the last season's prices, giving my customers the advantage of the increase instead of taking the extra profit for myself as our other merchants are doing all over the country.

My new spring stock is now complete and at the low prices of last year.

—Custer county people are enjoying prosperity according to the Blackfoot News, and yet the News wants Bryan elected.

—L. A. Porter is shipping from 300 to 400 boxes of cherries daily to Montana. He has en route nine carloads of boxes and expects with his customers to use $20,000 worth.

—Mrs. Adele T. Piper, wife of the late Judge W. G. Piper, was last week ordered committed to the asylum at Medical Lake. Her mind seems to have become unbalanced from grief over the death of her husband and son. She had recently attempted to jump from windows and in other ways injure herself.

—A capital account of water-life in China, a description of the most remarkable cemetery in the world—you find this at Genoa—a superbly illustrated paper on Natural History photography, the experiences of a lady lion hunter in East Africa, a popular explanation of the principle involved in an astounding new invention called the Spectre-scope, a stirring article on The Treble X-rays, with six complete short stories, forms the contents of the June Pearson's, a magazine which in fifteen months has come to occupy one of the leading positions in the periodical field. It is the most profusely illustrated magazine in the world. Out of the common run, bright, etc.

—Mr. McPherson says the Potlatch and the Genesee orchards are entirely free from San Joe scale, and he says these sections are destined to become prosperous fruit-growing localities. Some time since two orchards on the Potlatch became affected with the scale, but prompt action on the part of the owners soon removed the danger. "The fruit growers there are earnest and intelligent," says Mr. McPherson, "and as a result they have well-kept, healthy orchards that make the work of inspection a pleasure." Mr. McPherson will not return home until the steps he has inaugurated to destroy the San Jose scale in the Lewiston valley are put into definite effect.—Lewiston Tribune.

—The Americans are gradually getting a hold in China, as will be seen from the following Russian, or more strictly speaking, Siberian expression, recently appearing in Japanese papers: "Flour, iron, household goods, utensils, furniture, etc., are eagerly imported through the free port of Vladivostock, and the Americans have captured the markets at busy Khabarovsk, at Blagotchensk and the whole of the River Amur territory, as well as the eastern Russian gold mining districts with their teeming population. While the proposed duties are being considered the Americans will secure all the Siberian markets, erect factories, buy up the gold mines, dominate the country and then take possession of the portions of China which Russia is trying to get."

—A wagon bridge across Big Bear creek, two miles above Kendrick, collapsed last Thursday, with Ed. Barker and Joseph Campbell and a load of wood on. The bridge span is 35 feet, and twelve feet above water, and in the January flood was damaged, but never repaired. The bridge broke in the center and the wagon landed in the stream bottom side up. Barker, who was driving, managed to extricate himself and get out, but Campbell was less unfortunate. He was buried under the whole load and breathed his last as he was taken out. He had struck his head on a rock and was pinned face down in the water. The man is about 50 years old, unmarried and has no relatives here.

—The fruit for the farmer to raise is the apple, says the Pacific Homestead at Salem, Ore. It is the standard of fruits and should have the most attention. The apple is the king, and should rule in the realm of fruits. And particularly the winter apple. The world will never get tired of good apples. The good apple can be shipped nearly everywhere in its green state—it will go to all points reached by fast trains and swift steamships. In its evaporated state, the whole world is its market. It will pay to give this fruit intelligent attention, and to the careful and painstaking man, with the right kind of land, it will pay big. And it will last. The future for good apples is bright.

—Looks like Steunenberg had been put on the rack—skinned. Custer, Bingham, Ada, Nez Perce, Idaho, Shoshone and other counties failed to endorse the governor. Likewise Owyhee and Elmore counties. Custer and Elmore democrats will work for Fred Dubois for senator. While it is none of our fight, the NEWS believes the democrats would strengthen their fusion deal by taking up Dubois. Mr. Steunenberg has made an excellent governor as far as known, and his stand in the Cœur d'Alene riots is commendable. A series of outrages had given that section a bad name and it was generally considered that with the anarchistic element dominant there was little security offered for property or even life. It is different now. The governor's stand has brought about a new state of affairs. The camp was never as prosperous as now. Of course Steunenberg has made mistakes—the permit system and the tardiness in prosecuting the criminals brought curses upon him. Many of his friends have deserted him, and the democrats of the east want to see him shelved. He seems to have as many friends among the republicans as in his own party. Such men as Jim Hawley, Dr. Morris, Parker, Hailey, and others are now prominently brought out for the higher positions. It must also be remembered that the Heitfeld and Dubois friends will exhibit the marble heart toward Governor Steunenberg at the approaching conventions.

—Mrs. McConville and a numer of Lewiston Rathbone Sisters organized a lodge at Kendrick Tuesday night.

—The creating of a new county out of south Shoshone and parts of Idaho and Nez Perce counties, and the same to be known as Clearwater county, is all the talk now says the Orofino Courier. Those living in the proposed county are in favor of the move to a man. Shoshone county is larger than many states, being about 108 miles long by fifty wide. To make Wallace, the county seat, Orofinos are compelled to travel 500 miles, taking six days to make the round trip.

—Buffalo Hump will be a world wonder says Mr. Sweeney. The Big Buffalo mine, including the expense of development under the original bond that he secured on the property has cost Mr. Sweeney and his associates, $291,750. Mr. Sweeney has also secured thirty-five other claims in the district, including extensive water right holdings, timber lands, etc. These have been acquired at a cost of $380,000, making a total expenditure to date of $671,750. Mr. Sweeney will spend $200,000 more before he expects to receive the first dollar in dividends. This shows the magnitude and importance of the Big Buffalo. A fifty stamp mill will be put in this summer. The ten-stamp now on the ground will be used to test the ore during the sinking of a 300-foot shaft to determine the best treatment required for the ore. Mr. Sweeney tells the Grangeville Press that other large mining capitalists are coming into the district and that Buffalo Hump will soon become one of the great camps of the west. "It is destined even to be a world wonder," he repeated.

—Hetty Green was recently induced to talk to a writer for the June Ladies' Home Journal of her business methods that have won her sixty millions of dollars or more. The secret of her success is worth knowing: "I don't believe in speculation as a rule, and I don't speculate as much as people think. When offered so many shares of stock at so much I buy one share and then send out to see what it will bring. If it's a good advance I buy the rest. If not, I don't. This was my plan when I used to deal in horses. I would get a day's option on a horse, and see what it would bring before buying it. I attribute my success chiefly to the rule of always buying when every one wants to sell, and selling when every one wants to buy. There's a price on everything I have. When that price is offered I sell. I never buy anything just to hold on to it. Not much! And I try to steer clear of Wall Street. I do everything with all my mind. If there is a lawsuit on hand I go into every detail of it with my lawyer. It's the same with everything else."

—Sheep pasture should be dry. The ideal pasture is one which consists of blue grass and white clover. Timothy is good if assisted with other grasses. Clover will do well at certain seasons, but sheep have to be watched closely on account of clover bloat. Rape will make a good feed for sheep at a time when blue grass is resting, and if a blue grass pasture is treated in the right manner it will afford pasture the greater part of the year. It should rest in midsummer.

—Exports to Asia and Oceania in the fiscal year which ends with the month of June, will for the first time in our history exceed $100,000,000. In no part of the world has our export trade grown with such amazing rapidity, with the single exception of Africa. In 1893 our total exports to all Asia and Oceania amounted to only $27,421,831, so that in the fiscal year now about to end they will be about four times as great as those of eight years earlier. Imports from that part of the world are also growing rapidly because of the large increase in the share of our sugar supply which now comes from the islands of the Pacific. More than one-half the sugar imported into the United States now comes from the East Indies and Hawaiian Islands.

Mr. W. S. Whedon, cashier of the First National Bank of Winterset, Iowa, in a recent letter gives some experience with a carpenter in his employ, that will be of value to other mechanics. He says: "I had a carpenter working for me who was obliged to stop work for several days on account of being troubled with diarrhoea. I mentioned to him that I had been similarly troubled and that Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy had cured me. He bought a bottle of it from the druggist here and informed me that one dose cured him, and he is again at his work." For sale by all druggists.

It acts immediately and cures coughs, colds, croup, grippe, bronchitis, asthma and all throat and lung troubles.

A Good Cough Medicine.

It speaks well for Chamberlain's Cough Remedy when druggists use it in their own families in preference to any other. "I have sold Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for the past five years with complete satisfaction to myself and customers," says druggist J. Goldsmith, Van Etten, N. Y. "I have always used it in my own family both for ordinary coughs and colds and for the cough following la grippe, and find it very efficacious." For sale by all druggists.

German soldiers get a ration of sugar; so do British and French soldiers when on duty in the tropics. And now, by advice of the medical staff and with the approval of army officers, the United States Commissary Department has been shipping many tons of confectionery, put up in pound packages, for the use of our soldiers in Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines.

Prof. Sheldon, of the Boston University, says that if a grand inquisition should get after the clergy three-fourths of them would be convicted of heresy upon some point. Another Eastern divine says that Dr. Sheldon is too modest in his estimate, and that nine-tenths would be more nearly right. The point is of less importance than the palpable fact that the average pulpit heretic refuses to be honest either with himself or the people to whom he ministers as the representative of a certain creed. Why should the ministerial profession be exempt from the laws of candor and moral honesty that are considered essentials in all secular callings? If this is an age of heresy let the heretics stand up and be counted like men. The cause of true religion would gain rather than suffer from the showing, although a good many comfortable pastoral berths would necessarily become vacant.

In one of the statistical divisions of the Department of Agriculture in Washington may be seen a machine resembling a typewriter, which multiplies and divides with unerring accuracy and with great rapidity. Give its operator a multiplicand of six figures and a multiplier as large, and he will write them out as upon a typewriter; then he turns a handle a few times, and before the onlooker knows what is going on the product is written out before him. The machine performs examples in division with equal ease. Does any one of our young readers fancy that he sees in this invention an emancipation of boys of the twentieth century from the vexation of the multiplication table? Alas! that is too much for him to hope. Nobody seems to have devised a machine for adding common fractions of different denominators, although many a young school boy has concluded that this is one of the "long-felt wants" of the day.

Several agricultural newspapers, among them Wallace's Farmer and Hoard's Dairyman, comment upon the decline of dairying in Iowa. The general reason given is the high price of calves. The failure of Iowa to maintain private dairying interests would be a great mistake and would mean a serious loss to the farmers. As Hoard's Dairyman says, no branch of farming promises better return than dairying when carried on with scientific attention to the business and with regard to all economies, as well as the best utilization of the resources at hand. The importance of modern methods, however, is shown in nearly every locality by the amazing range of cash returns per cow. In Wisconsin, Minnesota and Illinois the farmers have been paying more attention than ever to dairying and have reaped corresponding financial benefit. In Iowa, however, they have yielded to the temptation to sell their animals for slaughter. The agricultural papers are convinced that the Iowa farmers will find in the end that their policy is wrong.

If the present tendency to carry things to the extreme continues it will not be long before checkers and tiddle-de-winks will be the only "sports" which can be safely indulged in or patronised without first taking out an accident insurance policy. Boxing has degenerated until it has become simply an alias under which toughs and pluguglies pommel each other under police protection, with now and then a man killed outright in the ring by way of variety. Horse racing is merely a gambling game, with special trains running out to some remote point in the country, where in an old tobacco shed or other building odds are laid and bets made on races which are supposed to be run in New Orleans or San Francisco. Foot ball as sometimes played is more brutal and dangerous than prize fighting. Baseball is purely a commercial pursuit, with no more sport in it than is to be found in a grocery store. Now wrestling has reached the point where he is the champion who can break his opponent's ribs and crush the life out of him. It no longer suffices to bring two shoulders and a hip or two hips and a shoulder to the mat in order to win a fall. Now after the man is down it is necessary to fall on him with all your weight, and if you weigh 300 pounds so much the greater is the glory of your victory. No wonder the Filipinos are surprised that their great national sport of cock-fighting should be forbidden under penalty of arrest.

The use of 8,500 gallons of oxygen in saving the life of a pneumonia patient in New York the other day is an incident worthy of more than passing notice considering the great apparently increasing mortality from this disease. That doctors are less successful in coping with this disease than with almost any other ailment, save cancer and consumption, is evidenced by abundant statistics. During the seven days of a recent week there were 159 deaths from pneumonia in Chicago, while in other cities the mortality from this cause is proportionately large. It seems to be generally recognized by physicians and laymen that when a sufferer from pneumonia reaches a certain crisis in the development of the malady he is beyond medical aid and all hope is abandoned. He simply suffocates while medical science stands by in helpless impotency. It is very clear, even to the laymen, that medicine will not reach the inflamed lung tissue and that pouring medicine into the stomach of a pneumonia patient simply impairs vitality and retards the recuperative efforts of nature. Pure, life-giving oxygen is wanted, not drugs. Aside from the mild medication necessary to reduce fever and stimulate heart action the need of the patient is for a process that will impart oxygen to the blood and enable nature to heal the inflamed tissues of the respiratory organs. The restorative efficacy of oxygen in the treatment of pneumonia has been demonstrated by physicians in such numberless instances that a failure to resort to it may be characterised as almost criminal. It is true that it has not always saved lives, but how many physicians have used 8,500 gallons of oxygen in the treatment of one patient? In the New York case the number of cylinders of oxygen used each day increased rapidly as the disease developed. On the day when the crisis was reached and passed twenty-two cylinders, each containing 100 gallons of the gas, were used. In all eighty-five cylinders of gas, costing $425, were used, and the patient is now recovering. Is a life worth 8,500 gallons of oxygen? The earth is full of it; there is no limit to the supply. The New York experiment suggests the use of much greater quantities of it in each particular case than was ever before attempted by physicians.

Half Pennies.

A movement is on foot to put a one-half cent coin in general use in the United States. Several suggestions have been made to the government, and recently a document was presented, signed by the heads of the big department stores of New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and Pittsburg, showing the need for this money in making change where articles are sold at 3½, 7½, 12½, and at similar prices. The half cent coin has been in use in Chicago for the last two years. So far the United States government has nothing to do with issuing this new money. It is put out by individual firms and is only recognized at the store from which it is issued.

Memory Stronger in Summer.

Scientists have discovered that the memory is stronger in summer than in winter. Among the worst foes of the memory are too much food, too much physical exercise, and, strangely enough, too much education.

One of the most cruel impositions in the world is to convince a child that the Lord has been good to it in bringing it a little red baby brother.

JAMES B. DILL.

Trust Lawyer of New York City, Who Received a Million-Dollar Fee.

James Brooks Dill has organized trusts in the United States having a total capital of $793,050,000. He is the lawyer of New York City who received a fee of $1,000,000 from the Carnegie people for organizing their new industrial combination—the greatest ever put together in this country. The new capital of the Carnegie concern is $160,000,000. Mr. Dill was born in Spencerport, N. Y. When a baby his parents moved to Chicago. His father lost his life in the civil war and the son had to make his own way in the world. He paid his way through Yale by writing for the newspapers and organizing eating clubs for boarding-house keepers. He graduated as a lawyer from New York University in 1878. A chance discovery on his part of a flaw in the New York law on business failures brought him fame and clients. After that he made a specialty of corporate law. He is counsel for twenty-five banks and director in six.

JAMES B. DILL.

FLAT FLAME BURNER.

Ingeniously Constructed Tips Which Accomplish the Result.

It is generally realized that the larger the area of a flame without a break (referring, of course, to the luminous part of it), the greater its efficiency. Consequently every effort is being made by means of ingeniously constructed tips, etc., to obtain a "flat" flame. One method which has been proposed for accomplishing this object, is the use of a draft attachment for the burner. This consists of a hood adapted to be readily placed over the burner. The lower part of this hood is a broad opening, while the upper edge is contracted so as to represent a thin, narrow slit, through which the air is fed to the gas flame. The nipple of the burner is arranged with its mouth lying in the same direction as the slit of the hood. By these means the escaping gas is fed with fresh air for its complete consumption over quite a large area, the result of which is the much desired flat flame.

LAW AS INTERPRETED.

Taxation of a city for its franchise is upheld in Newport vs. Com. (Ky.), 4 L. R. A. 518, in case of a franchise to operate waterworks, as it is held that the city in respect to them occupies the position of a private corporation.

An assessment on a street railway for the expense of paving the space occupied by the roadbed and tracks and for a distance of two feet from each side is upheld in Shreveport vs. Prescott (La.), 46 L. R. A. 193. With this case is an extensive note on the liability of a street railway for paving assessment.

Interest in a benefit certificate in an association whose by-laws entitle the member to designate and change the beneficiary is held, in Thomas vs. Cochran (Md.), 46 L. R. A. 160, to go, on the member's death after that of the beneficiary, without any attempt to change the beneficiary, to the latter's representatives, and not to those of the member; and it is held not transmissible by the member's will.

An injury to a railroad-track inspector by an iron pin thrown off from a tender on a train run by a company other than his employer while he was standing more than ten feet from the track, is held, in Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis Railway Company vs. Berry (Ind.), 46 L. R. A. 33, to give him no right of action against the owner of the train without showing its negligence. With this case is a note, which at great length discusses the right of a servant to recover damages from persons other than his master for injuries received in the performance of his duties.

Your mind is strong enough for all daily purposes if you can read a patent medicine circular, and not be convinced that you have all the diseases it mentions.

THE STAGE DRIVER'S BLUFF.

Hairbreadth Tales of Accidents Failed to Awe Passengers.

As we left Sandy Gulch for Rising Sun there were six male passengers to go by the stage, and the route was over the mountains and full of chances of disaster. The driver came out from breakfast as soon as the stage was ready, and looking about on the passengers he selected a small, pale-faced man and invited him to climb up beside him. While the pale-faced man was climbing up the driver whispered to the rest of us:

"I picked him out in order to scare him to death. You fellows will see a heap of fun before we've gone ten miles!"

Two minutes west of the gulch the road made a sudden turn, with a sheer fall of a hundred feet down to Wild Cat Creek, and the driver put his horses at the gallop and said to the man

"We may get around all right, or we may fetch up down below. Hold yer breath and say yer prayers!"

The passenger made no move and did not change countenance, and, after making the course all right, the rider rather indignantly demanded:

"Didn't you see that the off wheel run within a foot of the edge of the precipice?"

"It ran within six inches, sir!" was the reply.

Beyond the curve was a down-grade of a mile, and with a yell and a flourish of his whip the driver urged his horses to a dead run. The five of us inside had to hang on for dear life and every half minute the stage seemed bound to go over.

"Did ye know that if we'd struck a rock we'd all been dead men in no time?"

"Of course."

"And ye wasn't prayin'?"

"Not at all."

Three or four miles further on the driver tried his man with another curve. In his determination to make a close call of it one wheel ran off the edge of the precipice, and only a sudden effort of the horses saved the coach. We were flung in a heap and frightened half to death, but the man beside the driver never lost a puff of his cigar. When things were safe the driver turned on him with:

"That surely was the brink of the grave."

"Guess it was," was the quiet reply.

"The closest shave you will ever hev till the last one comes."

"Yes."

"See here, now, but what sort of a critter ar' you?" was the query. "Don't you know 'nuff to git skeart?"

"Nothing has happened yet to scare me."

"But mebbe ye want me to drive plumb over a precipice a thousand feet high?"

"If you conveniently can. The fact is, I came off up here intending to commit suicide, and if you can dump the whole of us over some cliff you'll oblige me."—Atlanta Constitution.

LITERARY LITTLE BITS

John Strange Winter (Mrs. Arthur Stannard) has an annual income of nearly $10,000 from the sales of her books.

Anthony Hope's new novel is to be called "Tristram of Blent," and is in the style of the "Princess Osra" stories and others.

"Trinity Bells," by Amelia E. Barr, a story of old New York, has passed into a new edition, with sixteen beautiful illustrations.

"Sketches of Lowly Life in a Great City," by Michael Angelo Woolf, have been issued in book form by G. P. Putnam's Sons.

The story of "Betty," by Carolyn Wells, is the wonderful history of an Irish foundling who turned out to be an heiress. The story as originally told in St. Nicholas had many old admirers and is likely to have many new ones.

One day a well-dressed child, about 8 years old, called at the house of Prof. William Grimm, the man who wrote the delighted fairy tales, and asked to see him. Looking at the professor, the child asked: "Is it thou who hast written those fine fairy tales?" "Yes, my dear," replied the professor; "my brother and myself have written the tales." "Then thou hast also written the tale of the little tailor—the one where it says at the end that whoever will not believe the tale must pay a dollar?" "Yes, I have written that, too." "Well, then, I do not believe the tale," said the little one, "and so, I suppose, I have to pay a dollar; but I have not so much money now and can only give you part on account. I will give thee 7 cents now and pay the rest by and by."

SOLDIER OF '98 JOINS THE NORTH AND THE SOUTH.

Since the close of the war with Spain Memorial day has assumed a new significance. The dead of two wars are honored, and the real meaning of the day is brought home to the later generation as it never has been before. The business that time gives to memories of those who have gone to their last resting place is brushed aside and the real import of the day stands out with more distinctness. One day in the year may well be given over entirely to honoring our soldier dead. It is not too much. They gave up their lives, some to hold the country undivided and some to relieve a down-trodden people at the threshold of our republic. We owe them a debt of gratitude that we never can repay, whether they fought in the civil war or the war with Spain. Their devotion and their courage entitle them to the grateful remembrance we show, and the recent additions to their number make the real significance of the exercises more distinct.

DECORATION DAY.

Wal', now, it don't seem like a year hev gone—a hull roun' year—
Sence we was fallin' into line to celebrate this here.
It don't seem possible, yit that's the trick time allus plays,
'N' every year'll git more short 'twixt Decoration days.

'N' every year the roll-call 'll be gittin' shorter, too;
We're missin' lots o' faces that we didn't use to do.
The names is droppin' off—no tellin' which one of us may Be counted out at muster on next Decoration Day.

It's gittin' kinder funny, too, to see the o' gray heads—
Fer blame if every one of us ain't showin' silver threads.
Ol' fellers! yes, the youngest ain't got nothin' else to say;
It war'n't so ten years ago on Decoration Day.

Why, we was on'y boys—mere boys—ten years ago; but then
We'd somehow got the notion up to think ourselves ol' men;
'N' so, p'r'aps ten years from now, if any of us stay,
We'll think that we was on'y boys this Decoration Day.

Then close in, veter'ns, close in, men; ol' comrades, git in line,
Touch elbows once again—that's right—it warms you up like wine.
Pr'aps 'tain't often more we'll meet—brace up 'n' step out gay;
We might be angels touchin' wings next Decoration Day.

So close in, veter'ns, close in, men; ol' comrades, git in step;
Play up the tunes we used to march—we'll keep the time we kep'.
We ain't too ol' for three times three; God save the flag, hurray!
Shake hands all roun' 'n' fall in, boys, fer Decoration Day.

ON THE ROLL OF HONOR.

He always knew when Mike was coming; the manner of his entrance never left room for doubt. There was always the confused murmur of a wordy dispute with the elevator boy downstairs who refused to operate his machine for newsboys, the quick rush of bare feet up the stairs to the shrill accompaniment of "Mah Coal Black Lady," or "Mr. Johnson, Turn Me Loose;" the door would fly open with a crash and Mike would be in the center of the room shouting "Ev'nen Journal! Lat'st war news!" from a golden imagination yellowing the already very yellow news of his paper in a manner that must have won him an editorship could the proprietor of the sheet have heard him. This particular May afternoon the method of his entrance differed in no way from the usual routine, save that the door flew open a little more suddenly and swung to again with a little louder crash if possible. But once inside it was evident that Mike was unduly excited. The papers which he usually held out in front at arm's length to display to the best advantage their half-page scare heads were tucked securely under one arm; his big black eyes danced jubilantly and he entirely forgot business and the startling news of his papers in the vastly greater importance of his own news.

"Say, wot yer tink! De ol' man's 'listed fer a soger; he's go'n t'war! Ain't he a bird?" he shouted.

"Whose old man?" I inquired.

"Mine! Me dad! Whose'd yer suppose? Git de wool out o' yer t'inker!" he replied scornfully.

"But, Mike, who is going to support the family?" I inquired, remembering a vivid description Mike had once given me of six little Murphys of whom he was the eldest and only "leven" at that.

"De fam'ly's all right. Dad says dat if he goes off to de scrap de folks wot stays home is boun' to take care uv his fam'ly. Say, yer ought to see 'im. He's all right, ye bet! De reg'ment marches to-morrer."

It was the first time I had ever heard Mike speak of his father with anything like respect. I knew him to be a drunken ne'er-do-well, who abused his wife and children and contributed little to their support. The days were on. Regiment after regiment passed through the city en route for the South and Mike was joyously full of excitement. Every afternoon he blew into the office and every day his stories of the news grew bigger and more yellow. He followed every move of the army and his imagination ran riot with the possibilities of the world-changing drama being enacted. Every scrap of news in regard to his father's regiment was on his tongue's end, and I soon found that with the donning of his blue coat his father had become a hero. As for Mike himself he was the same impudent, sharp-eyed, dirty, ragged little gamin as of yore, one of the most successful newsboys on the street, an inveterate scrapper and gambler, and on his own confession, rarely at night having more than half his day's earnings to take home. When I remonstrated with him and pointed out that he should take his father's place, he was always ready with an answer, falling back on the old argument that if his father fought for his country it was his country's place to look after his family.

The summer wore on. The Fourth of July dawned hot and sultry. The temperature rose with the sun; at 10 o'clock it was 80; at 11 o'clock 90 and at noon it registered 96 in the shade. The glare from the asphalt streets blinded the eyes. Men panted for breath and now and then one fell. The water front and the parks were thronged with women and children seeking relief. Those who succumbed were taken to the hospitals, but no one minded them. Down before Santiago 16,000 men in dingy brown canvas blue trimmed uniforms in the blistering heat of a tropical climate were fighting against overwhelming odds. On the day before had come the news of a disastrous defeat, and the night had closed down in gloom. To-day the defeat had been turned into a victory and the cable had flashed home the details of a great naval victory besides. The great city sweltered and sweated and waited for confirmation and for the list of dead.

That afternoon business called me to the office. For an hour I worked and then fell to thinking of the great tragedy being enacted. Suddenly I became aware that someone was standing by my desk. "Ev'nen Journal, sir? List uv dead and wounded."

It was Mike, but I hardly recognised the voice. All the impudence, the old-time braggadocio was gone, and he had come in so quietly. "Why, Mike——" I began. Then I noticed the trace of tears furrowed through the dirt on the two grimy cheeks. There was an unwonted seriousness in the deep black eyes and an unmistakable quiver in the voice as he repeated, "Ev'nen Journal, sir? Extra, jes' out. 'Plete list uv dead an' wounded."

I snatched the paper eagerly and tossed Mike a nickel. "Never mind the change," I said, and plunged into the details of the fight. When I glanced up Mike was still there.

"If yer please, sir," he began, standing on one leg and uneasily rubbing it with the dirty brown foot of the other. "If yer please, sir, could I count yer reg'lar fer a poiper every night? Oi—Oi got ter s'port de fam'ly now 'cause Oi'm th' head uv it. He—he's dere, sir," he finished with a dry sob, pointing to the open page before me. Glancing down the column in heavy black, bold-faced type, I saw the name of Private Dennis A. Murphy on the roll of honor with the brief, explanatory line, "Shot through the head."

Mike drew a step nearer. "Say," he said, with just a touch of his old-time eagerness, "he's a hero now, ain't he?"

Mike has several regular customers in the office now, but he no longer blows in like a miniature hurricane. He comes and goes quickly but quietly. He is full of business, and although his former impudence now and then flashes out it is in a guarded way that will lose him no customers. He is always ready for a scrap when anyone intrudes upon his rights, but he has given up fighting for the fun of the thing, and he no longer pitches pennies and gambles away his hard-earned money. "Yer see, Oi'm de head uv de fam'ly now, an' have ter help me mither," he explains.

The other day he came into the office with the old-time rush. "They've got me father's body, an' it's ter be buried here," he cried. Then after a moment's thought he inquired wistfully, "Say, do yer s'pose de sogers'll march ter his grave an' put a flag an' flowers on it 'Morial day?"—Thornton N. Burgess, in Orange Judd Farmer.

THE MODERN SAINT.

No monkish garb he wears, no beads he tells,
Nor is immured in walls remote from strife;
But from his heart deep mercy ever wells;
He looks humanely forth on human life.

In place of missals or of altar dreams,
He cons the passioned book of deeds and days;
Striving to cast the comforting, sweet beams
Of charity on dark and noisome ways.

Not hedged about by sacerdotal rule,
He walks a fellow of the scarred and weak;
Liberal and wise his gifts; he goes to school
To Justice; and he turns the other cheek.

He looks not holy; simple is his belief;
His creed, for mystic visions, do not scan;
His face shows lines cut there by others' grief,
And in his eyes is love of brother-man.

Not self nor self-salvation is his care;
He yearns to make the world a sunnier clime
To live in; and his mission everywhere
Is strangely like to Christ's in olden time.

No mediaeval mystery, no crowned,
Dim figure halo-ringed, uncanny bright;
A modern saint! A man who treads earth's ground
And ministers to men with all his might.

The Cat or the Comet?

WHAT was that? A confused noise, as of shattering glass, a heavy fall and then a pistol shot, all at once.

Then Aunt Samyra rapped on the door and called to me in excited tones through the keyhole:

"Alicia Dean! Alicia Dean! Get up and dress, quick! There are burglars upstairs!"

Fortunately I was already dressed, having sat up later than usual that night, waiting for my roommate, Susan Ellen, to come back from the concert.

So I opened the door at once, and as I did so Susan Ellen almost ran into my arms, looking white and scared and almost ready to drop.

Aunt Samyra appeared a moment later, her hair done up in curl papers, armed with a lighted candle, a revolver and a poker.

I got possession of the revolver immediately; not that I expected to do any more good with it than she could, but I hoped to do less harm.

"Susan Ellen," said I, in a stage whisper, "did you see anything of the robbers as you came in?"

But Susan Ellen seemed so paralysed with fear that she was incapable of answering, and simply clung to my left arm like a frightened child, shaking from head to foot.

"Now, girls, follow me, and don't speak a word!" commanded Aunt Samyra, ascending the stairway, protected by her helmet of curl papers, as it were, and with the candle in one hand and the poker in the other.

We followed at a safe distance, and I confided to Susan Ellen on the way that the pistol shot seemed to have come from Uncle Ralph's room, and I was afraid the robbers had hurt him, or he would have come to our rescue in this time.

She opened her mouth to answer, but her teeth chattered so that she could not.

We now saw that Aunt Samyra had stepped in front of Uncle Ralph's door and was making ineffectual attempts to rouse him.

By accident I had the key of my room in my hand, having unconsciously taken it out after opening the door to Aunt Samyra. This key I now applied to Uncle Ralph's lock. The door opened readily, and Aunt Samyra stepped in, but sprang back instantly with a cry of horror, for Uncle Ralph lay on the floor, under the window, with a pistol beside him.

It did not take me many minutes to decide that he was dead, with a bullet through his heart.

After becoming convinced of this fact, all my nerve left me. While gazing vacantly about with dazed eyes, vaguely conscious that Aunt Samyra was sobbing and that the cook, who had just come on the scene, was uttering horrified ejaculations, I felt some one pull my sleeve. It was Susan Ellen.

"Take me away," she said; "it's chilly up here."

"It is chilly," I answered, drawing her arm through mine.

Then I noticed that a strong gale was sweeping through the room, and that the upper sash of the window was out.

"Look!" I said. "No wonder we are cold!"

But she paid no attention.

After I had put Susan Ellen to bed and managed to get her warm and quiet with the assistance of smelling salts and a glass of wine, I went back upstairs.

I had already decided in my own mind that Uncle Ralph had been murdered by a burglar, but the first glance round the room seemed to disprove this theory, for on the dressing case lay the watch and the purse of the murdered man. Nor, after thorough search, could I find even a pin missing.

Of course we had a coroner's inquest, and this developed the fact, which we already knew, that "Ralph Morton had met his death at the hands of a party or parties unknown."

When the verdict had been rendered I returned to the scene of the murder and made another investigation. Under the window I discovered some bits of broken glass. On examining the window itself I not only found that the upper sash was out, but that one pane of glass in the lower was missing. As I failed to draw any conclusion from these circumstances I went back to Susan Ellen and asked if she supposed the murderer had carried off the upper window sash.

She burst out crying hysterically, and for a long time I could get no answer out of her at all. But it transpired, at last, that when Aunt Samyra had been apprised of Uncle Ralph's unexpected visit the day before she had sent Susan Ellen upstairs to get his room ready. Susan Ellen, thinking she had plenty of time, before his arrival, to clean the windows, took out the sashes—they were old-fashioned windows—in order to wash them.

But Uncle Ralph got in two hours ahead of time, having come on an earlier train than he expected. The result was that Susan Ellen had not finished the windows.

"But it was so warm," she wound up with another burst of tears, "I did not think it would matter to leave out one sash; and I meant to clean it and put it in to-day."

I understood now why it was that Cousin Susan was so powerfully affected by the death of a great uncle whom she had never seen till yesterday; she thought, if she had not left out that window, the murderer could not have gained entrance.

Aunt Samyra employed the finest detective to clear up the mystery, but it remained a mystery still.

"Alicia," said my aunt, about six months after the murder, "what is your theory on this subject?"

"I have none," I answered, "unless it was a case of suicide."

"Impossible!" she ejaculated.

"What sort of mood was he in when he bade you good-night?"

"Very bright and cheerful."

"How long was it, after he left you, before you retired?"

"I hadn't retired at all, but was putting up my hair in curl papers, when I heard the pistol shot and went after you."

"Then you heard the report of the pistol shortly after he bade you good-night?"

"I did."

"And you say he was in a bright, cheerful frame of mind?"

"Yes; he went off with a laugh about being in the top story, saying he could get a better view of the comet than any of us, as he would be so much nearer to it."

At the end of this conversation I was as much in the dark as I had been at the beginning.

But one thing had been borne in upon my mind very forcibly of late, and that was the change in Susan Ellen. Ever since that memorable night she had been a different girl, and seemed only the shadow of her former self.

I attributed this state of things to a morbid, oversensitive conscience which would persist in attaching great blame to herself for having left out that window sash. One phase of her character, however, I was at a loss to account for, and that was the sudden and unaccountable aversion she had taken to Aunt Samyra's poor old yellow cat.

Formerly, I remembered, she had been the cat's greatest champion, and many a time had shared a meal with pussy; but now she actually shivered if the animal happened to brush against her.

But it was many years before I discovered the cause of that aversion. Aunt Samyra was dead; pussy had died and been buried by me with many tears under the cypress tree in the back yard; Susan Ellen had married Mr. Wentworth, the young man who had been her escort to the concert, the night of Uncle Ralph's death; the old home had been broken up, and I was drifting about the world in an aimless way.

Susan Ellen had invited me to spend a week with her, as her husband was away on business, we had ample opportunity for the exchange of long confidences about old times.

One night, as we sat by the fire, the subject happened to turn on Aunt Samyra's old yellow cat. I asked her why it was that she took such a sudden and unaccountable aversion to that poor animal.

"It is something I have often wanted to tell you," she answered, "but somehow always shrank from doing so. At first I was afraid, and afterward I just kept putting it off because I knew I ought to have told it at first. You remember the night Uncle Ralph was killed?"

"I certainly do."

"Well, that evening I went to a concert with Mr. Wentworth. We got home about 10:30 and stood talking at the front gate a few minutes, he meanwhile calling my attention to the comet, which was then the universal topic of conversation. I felt guilty standing at the gate, for Aunt Samyra had often told me not to do so, and involuntarily I glanced toward the house, expecting to see her poking her head out of the window, looking at me. Instead, two curious objects in Uncle Ralph's window caught my eye.

"You remember it was such a bright moonlight that one could see very distinctly; you remember, also, about my washing the windows. The bottom sash was in, but hoisted on a piece of broom-handle so as to take the place of the top sash, leaving the bottom of the window open.

"Now, then, on the window sill, walking backwards and forwards, looking at the comet, too, I suppose, was Aunt Samyra's old yellow cat, while Uncle Ralph, with his head poked out from the window, was also regarding the comet with rapt intentness.

"My first feeling was one of guilty dismay; he was looking at the comet now, to be sure, but if he were to glance in my direction, and then to tell Aunt Samyra!

"While I hesitated what to do, pussy began rubbing herself against the piece of broom-handle that held up the window. The broom-handle, I am afraid, had been put up in a very slanting, insecure fashion; I realized this in a flash as I noticed Uncle Ralph's pistol lying on the window sill. And I had barely realized it when the broom-handle slipped, the window came down on the pistol, and you heard the shot, and know the rest."

She paused and took a deep breath.

"And now I want to know which was responsible for the murder, the cat or the comet?"

Earth Is Growing in Weight.

Scientific men assert that the globe we now inhabit is growing heavier at the average rate of 500 tons a year. The meteors or shooting or falling stars (of which now and again such brilliant displays rejoice the careful watchers) in passing through the earth's atmosphere are burned up and fall on to the earth's surface, occasionally in a heavy mass, but most usually in small meteoric dust. Prof. Nordenskjold, from his great experience, estimated that, from the cause named, 500 tons fall uniformly and steadily over the whole globe in each year, and the observations of Russian scientists yield a similar result.

These meteroic streams, says another astronomer, are really small planetary bodies, revolving around the sun in fixed orbits by the force of gravity. The earth revolves on its axis at the rate of 1,000 miles an hour, and speeds through space in its orbit around the sun at the rate of 1,000 miles every minute, and in August and November plunges into the very midst of the meteoric stream going in the opposite direction. The rapidity with which they enter our atmosphere and the friction thus generated are so enormous that they are set fire to, the smaller ones being consumed and falling in dust, while the larger ones occasionally reach the earth in the shape of meteoric stone or iron.

Preached in His Shirtsleeves.

Not long ago Bishop Dudley of Kentucky went to preach in a little town in the western part of the State, where there are no Episcopal churches, and only one, in fact, of any other denomination. The people are unfamiliar with any but the plainest and most simple church service and entirely unaccustomed to the vestments which the Episcopal clergy wear. The pastor of the "only church," a good, conscientious, narrow-minded man, hearing that the bishop was coming on a certain Sunday to preach at the courthouse, told some of the "pillars" of his congregation that he hoped they would not desert their own church to hear the Episcopal service.

On the appointed Sunday what was the pastor's surprise to notice half of his flock absent, and upon inquiry he learned that the courthouse was thronged with the villagers. The next day he met one of his chief supporters, whose accustomed seat had been vacant at the weekly service, and the pastor questioned him as to his whereabouts on Sunday. The man replied that he had gone to hear Bishop Dudley. "What!" replied the clergyman. "Desert me to hear that pompous prelate!" "You're mistaken in the man," answered the culprit. "Bishop Dudley is no pompous prelate. He preached in his shirtsleeves."—Louisville Courier Journal.

The Kaiser's Stenographer.

It is not generally known that under the present Emperor a new office has been created, that of personal stenographer to his majesty. William I. but rarely delivered a speech, and, when he did, the text was always decided on beforehand in consultation with Prince Bismarck, and the monarch either learned the speech by heart or read it from a manuscript. He knew that he possessed no gift of language and had no confidence in his ability to improvise in public. William II., soon after he came to the throne, gave orders that a stenographer should always be present during his speeches, whether at home or on travel. This duty is fulfilled in Germany by one of the official stenographers of the Reichstag, who took down the speeches of the Emperor and Prince Henry at Kiel. The Emperor himself supervised the shorthand writer's transcript before it was transmitted to Wolf's telegram bureau—the German Reuter. The speeches of the Emperor, sent over the official wire, are therefore ipsissima verba. A different shorthand writer accompanies the Emperor abroad, where the speeches are, for the most part, delivered in a foreign language, and could not, therefore, be noted down by a German stenographer.

Son-in-Law Granted It.

"Son-in-law," he said, as he called him into the library and locked the door, "you have lived with me for two years."

"Yes, sir."

"And I have not charged you a penny?"

"No, sir."

"In family quarrels I've always taken your part?"

"Yes, sir."

"And always helped you along?"

"You have, sir."

"Certainly, sir?"

"Then let it appear that the foot-ball season ticket my wife picked up in my room was yours, and call it square."

No Misunderstanding.

"You are welcome," said the man who had just given up his seat in the crowded street car.

"I didn't say anything, sir," haughtily answered the woman who had just sat down.

"I know you didn't, ma'am," he rejoined, beaming upon her with great cordiality.—Chicago Tribune.

STATE OF THE AFRICAN WAR

THE ADVANCE IS UNCHECKED.

British Troops Rapidly Moving Towards the Transvaal Capital—With But Little Opposition—Boers Are Keeping Out of the Way.

London, May 25.—General French has reached Prospect Station, about five miles north of the Rhenoster river. The Boers are retreating straight on to the Vaal.

A dispatch from Rhenoster says:

"The general opinion is that we will arrive at Pretoria as fast as we can march, though the Boers have announced to all the country that they intend to fight to the death."

General Ian Hamilton is co-operating in the advance on the right

General Roberts, who is presumably a few miles behind General French, will reach the Vaal before the end of the week.

Natives report that the Boers have buried two guns in the Rhenoster river.

In Natal General Buller's forces have crossed into the Transvaal near Ingogo, but are still held at bay at Laings nek, where the Boers are entrenching themselves. With the exception of this pass, Natal is clear of the Boers. They have a big gun posted, but it is doubtful if they will be able to hold the position when threatened by a flanking movement from the force that crossed the Ingogo river.

A dispatch from Pretoria says:

"It is said that the relief of Mafeking was due to a blunder of one of the federal officers, by which General Delarey was foiled in his plan to cut off the relief force after driving them away from the Molopo river." It is added that the federals have resolved to make a determined defense of the city of Johannesburg.

Fight at Cheperso Nek.

Pretoria, May 25.—An official bulletin issued here says that sixty British cavalrymen came into a collision May 20 with eighty of the Swaziland commando at Choperso Nek. The fighting lasted an hour. The British lost twenty-seven killed, twenty-five wounded and eleven were taken prisoners. Twenty-five horses, two Maxims and a quantity of ammunition were also captured.

The federal loss was one killed and one wounded. They assisted in removing the wounded and burying the dead. The advance guard at Heilbron retired on the main body at the northern border.

According to Free State advices, the British yesterday were at Greylings drift, on the Vaal river, twenty-five miles from Wolmarans, with a large force.

On Sunday General Kalbe engaged the British between Heilbron and Lindley. The federals had to retire because of the overwhelming force, losing one killed and seven wounded.

Big Battle Expected.

London, May 26.—Another advance along the railroad towards Pretoria has brought Lord Roberts' troops to Stredfort road, a few miles north of Prospect. In the meanwhile General Methuen is progressing along the southern bank of the Vaal river, with the object probably of making a dash at Klerksdorp, when he arrives opposite that railroad terminus.

General Hutton's column is apparently in the neighborhood of Vredefort, 15 miles west of the railroad, whence it threatens the federals' right flank.

A few days ought to settle whether Lord Roberts will encounter serious opposition south of the Vaal, but it is believed the next big engagement will be fought just south of Johannesburg, and the fight there and possibly one at Laings' Nek will prove the last pitched battles of the war.

The latest indications point to the latter being the more stubborn of the two. It is hoped here General Buller will delay until Roberts is able to detach a force to seize Heidelberg and sever railroad connection between Laings Nek and Johannesburg.

Boer Positions Were Strong.

Kroonstad, May 26.—Although the Boers retreated without a shot, their late position showed that they meant to fight. Along the steep sides of the south bank were cunningly constructed rifle pits, resembling the defenses of Paardeberg. These pits extended for ten miles. A number of gun emplacements had been blasted in the rocks and for seven miles the grass had been burned in patches with a view of marking the ranges.

Hunter Has Occupied Vryburg.

Warrenton, May 26.—Operations have been pushed forward 80 miles, one of General Hunter's brigades having occupied Vryburg last night. Considering the difficulties of the road, this is a remarkable achievement for a mixed force, short of rations, making forced marches. Water is scarce. Some portions of the brigade covered 18 miles without a break. General Hunter personally goes to Vryburg today by train.

Hutton Has Reached Vredefort.

Vredefort, May 26.—The British columns, after an unopposed march, have reached the Vredefort road, and are now only two marches from the Vaal river.

British Across Buffalo River.

Boer Camp, Volksrudt, May 25.—The British crossed the Buffalo river within sight of our position yesterday. They are busy placing heavy cannon at Schuinshovgte, near the scene of the battle on the Ingogo river in 1881. It is reported that fighting occurred at Botkas Nek yesterday. Chris Botha, brother of the commander-in-chief, has been appointed assistant to the commander-in-chief, and has given great satisfaction. He has revived the fighting spirit in many of the federals. In an ambush between N'Qutu and Mount Prospect eight British were killed and thirteen wounded.

Carpenters' union No. 25 at Toledo, O., recently broke all records by initiating 108 new members in one meeting.

The tunnel is in 1,000 feet, and there remains a comparatively short distance to run until it is under where there is an abundance of ore in the upper works, with a strong probability of finding ore before that point is reached.

THE GENESEE NEWS.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT GENESEE AS SECOND-CLASS MAIL MATTER.

J. W. HOPP, CHAS. POWER } Editors and Proprietors.

—Antone Mertes has enlarged and painted his residence and is now one of the finest in west Genesee.

—Our jeweler made $1.50 Tuesday by having his wood corded as it was rolled off the haulers' wagons.

—Frank Snyder, chief cook for our soldiers in the Philippines, and Misses Gibson and Laura Hazen, were Genesee visitors last of last week from Kendrick.

—Francis Price, an inmate of the asylum at Blackfoot, committed suicide last week. He was a patient who with others was allowed out-door exercise. While out on the grounds he went into one of the farm buildings and with binder's twine quietly hanged himself.

—Lenville is to have a daily mail Good. Commencing June 5th George A. Vowels will make his daily trips if nothing interferes. This will be a nice thing for the people in the Lenville neighborhood and will place them not far behind the fellows enjoying the free rural mail delivery.

—Tim Driscoll and Dr. Scroggins were visitors in the city yesterday from Genesee. Mr. Driscoll is a delegate from Genesee to the state convention, which meets in this city June 5, and he says there will be a large attendance at the convention from Latah county.—Lewiston Tribune.

—A more prolific growth was never seen than is growing at this time in the Tammany district across the river. In the progressive future all these fields will be provided with a system of irrigation says the Teller. Water will make that section equal the Genesee valley—the most productive spot in the United States.

—The Moscow Democratic-Times has lost its editors. Last week Editor Eddy wrote: "Owing to the overwhelming flood of McKinley prosperity we are constrained to retire from the field of journalism to live upon the interest we owe." The plant is for sale. The paper did not lack for brains the past year. Such bright luminaries as Herren, Preacher Anderson, Eddy, and Poet Sutton, all versatile writers with a fountain of information, mounted the editorial platform and exploded, each descending like a sky-rocket, in rapid succession. The paper had talented correspondents, but to no avail. In the past Moscow papers unwisely cut the rates of printing down to a starvation point—turning out work at the cost of white paper, not allowing margin enough to pay the board of the printer—and now suffer the consequences. In order to keep his head above water at the county seat, the editor must mount the tripod, set type, hustle for news, etc., etc., just the same as the lads are doing on the less pretentious sheets of smaller towns. Work, and get something for it.

—Mrs. Phipps, son and daughter, Uniontown, were among the visitors and shoppers Saturday.

—Deputy Sheriff Daylong was in the city Monday summoning jurors for the district court which convenes in Moscow next week. E. C. Swensen is the only man drawn from here and Frank Grieser from Thorn Creek.

—The Juliaetta Chronicle is on deck as a continuation of the Clarkston Chronicle. Though small, it's as lively as a cricket It is all right—wants the town painted, red or any old color will do. Chronicle says report has it that Frank Bauer, who went to Manila with Company "D," died there recently, of fever.

—For the public convenience the P. O. Department is furnishing stamps in small books to carry in your vest pocket, retailing as follows: Book with 12 2-cent stamps, 25 cents; with 24 2-cent stamps, 49 cents; with 48 2-cent stamps, 97 cents. Mr. Owen has received a load of these books and would like to fit you out.

—Monday evening this section of the country was visited by one of the heaviest hailstorms known here. The storm came from the northwest and in a few minutes the ground was covered to the depth of an inch with good-sized hailstones. The trees suffered somewhat; leaves and small twigs were cut off, and the fruit thinned out quite a little. The wheat was beaten down to some extent, but will rise again as it has not headed yet.....Rev. Fr Keyzer of Genesee had a very large audience Sunday at the Catholic church and preached an eloquent sermon.....The citizens of Colton and vicinity have decided to hold a grand celebration here on the Fourth of July.—News-Letter.

Printing Without Ink.

A company has been formed to control the process of printing without ink, by using electricity and chemically prepared paper. In a short time, it is expected, this innovation will be completely introduced, and old methods revolutionized. There is one thing however that has resisted all innovations; that is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which has many imitators, but no equals as a cure for stomach, liver and bowel troubles. This peerless remedy has been the standard medicine of the American people for the past fifty years. It is a wonderful medicine for dyspepsia, indigestion, biliousness, insomnia, constipation and nervousness. It also prevents, malaria, fever and ague. It keeps the stomach in good condition, and the bowels regular. Try it, and you will not be disappointed.

—A fair-sized audience attended the entertainment given last week by Miss Tillotson and the Rathbone Sisters. The program was entertaining throughout.

—Rev. Carl J. Heuer came down from Endicott Saturday, preached two sermons Sunday, shook hands with his many friends and returned Monday. Said his people are well.

—L. D. Martin, the heavyweight, has been up looking after the coal mines near Orofino, being one of the principals in the Duffey. They have just put in a mining pump and believe a fortune awaits their pick and shovel.

—U. G. Richardson, a laboring man from Genesee, was robbed of $80 in this city Thursday afternoon. He visited a resort north of C street, where he imbibed beer at one dollar a bottle until he got sick or drunk or both, when he was kindly taken to bed to sleep off the effects of beer and its probable mixture of something stronger. The sleepy sick man aroused about 3 o'clock in the afternoon and discovered that he had been robbed of his coat, a roll of bills and a certificate of deposit for $120. The city officials informed the unfortunate man that his case was not plain enough to justify an arrest. They claimed his evidence was incomplete, so the robbed man is wiser and poorer, and the robbers are richer and ready for the next victim.—Lewiston Teller, 23.

—Complaints are coming in from the farmers east regarding the noise and actions of the hoodlum element of the Kendrick ball club, in Genesee recently. On the way home the boys gave war whoops, coyote yells and uttered vulgar language when passing people. The Chronicle says the boys passed through Juliaetta still whooping. Such boys should stay at home until they have been taught a few manners at least.

—Capt. Oylear drove in from the Potlatch Monday and had a big roar to make. He told the News to jack up the road supervisor in charge of the district to the east of Genesee, but we positively declined as his name is T. E. Miller. Excuse us. The captain was not pleased at the way he was jolted in coming to town. Said it took a mighty sober man to remain in the seat while driving over a long stretch of road, and it was out of the question to haul a big load. We told Mr. Oylear that Mr. Miller was a great believer in good roads and they would be forthcoming in time. He departed saying he would pass the senator's way and give him a free lecture. Later—Comm'r H. C. Tweedt was seen going out yesterday with the big scrape, so we'll get the roads mended where it is so badly needed.

—A Bryan club was organized in Genesee Saturday evening with W. M. Welch as president, W. J. Herman and Dr. P. S. Beck vice presidents, J. H. Gaffney secretary. —John Halvorsen was in to make a correction in the notice regarding the death of his wife. The lady had been ill for four weeks and died at noon on the 21st. Mr. Halvorsen feels the loss very keenly, having six children and his aged mother to care for.

—Memorial Day was quietly and pleasantly observed in Genesee. The day was fine. At 9:30 the old comrades commenced to assemble until some fifteen had responded to the roll call as follows: Jake Kambitch, M. Beechler, C. H. Murphy, Soren Halvorsen, R. Pickering, G. W. Daggett, Wm. McMahon, J. J. Owen, J. Swank, Geo. Riley, D. S. Henry, Pat Ryan, T. E. Miller, John H. Shutte, Sam'l Nulph, Mr. Wymer. At the hour of ten the old veterans with a firm step marched to the Genesee cemetery, followed by the members of the Relief Corps and numerous citizens, where a short and appropriate program was carried out. The many graves of the heroes and citizens were strewn with flowers of every description. After a fine visit with each other and the exchange of mutual love and comradeship the "boys" departed for their homes feeling as though they had done their duty. There was not as large a turn out of soldiers as we have had in the past which is not at all surprising when it is considered that death is invading their ranks.

"One by one they are passing away,
One by one we shall see them no more
Until life with all its cares are passed,
And we meet them on the golden shore."

As the years slip by and one by one they answer the last roll call, fewer are left to meet on Memorial day and stronger seems the love of all true citizens for the old boys of 61-5. How glorious will be their reward, and how well it has been earned by them words cannot tell or minds conceive, but certain must be the judgment "Well done thou good and faithful servant." Some of the boys wore the blue and some the gray but are now of one united people—greater, grander than those of any other earthly army. The Catholic people also celebrated the day in a fitting manner. At nine o'clock requiem mass was sung at the church after which the many people proceeded to the cemetery west of town and profusely decorated the graves of the dear friends who have taken their departure for the other world. This cemetery was sown to clover a year ago and now presents a fine appearance.

REVIEW OF THE AFRICAN WAR

FROM THE SEAT OF THE WAR

Lord Roberts is Cautious—Whole Army Change Direction to the Left—British Honor the Dead—A Free State Magistrate Surrenders.

London, May 28.—Spencer Wilkinson, reviewing the situation at the seat of war in South Africa for the Associated Press, says:

"Lord Roberts is keeping a tight hand on all telegrams in order not to disclose his movements. After occupying Rhenoster, he pushed his left wing at once toward Parys, where the Vaal river was crossed on Thursday. The whole army seems to have changed its direction to the left, as General Hamilton's right wing was today at Boschbank, half way from Parys to the railway bridge at Viljoen's Drift, which is being watched by Roberts' scouts. General Hamilton probably crossed the Vaal river today, assisted, if necessary by a march up the river of the force that crossed at Parys. The whole force probably will be across the Vaal by Sunday afternoon. Johannesburg will then be two marches distant.

"I suppose that Lord Roberts will push forward General Hamilton and perhaps General French to turn the Boers, while Generals Tucker and Pole-Carew will attack in front.

"The Boers as usual must be enveloped or go. Special efforts will be made to cut off their retreat, as Roberts is now determined to capture them if possible. He relies fully on General Hamilton, whose combination of fire and prudence justifies every confidence.

"If the Boers escape toward Pretoria, Roberts will likely follow swiftly and be at Pretoria in less than a week.

"The Boers say they have retaken Heilbron. General Roberts will neglect that but will guard the railway, which, I think he will not wait to repair before going to Pretoria.

"General Buller, at Laing's Nek, is eight or nine marches distant from Johannesburg, supposing that the road is clear. Roberts' advance must make the Boers at Volksrust uneasy and so will facilitate Buller's advance.

"General Hunter, when at Mafeking, will be 11 marches from Pretoria and it is impracticable therefore for the Boers to make any serious resistance at Pretoria, where, to wait, would mean to be hemmed in between three British armies.

"The Boer plan is to retreat to the Lydenburg hills to postpone the catastrophe, but the condition and strength of the difficulty of securing supplies may compel General Roberts to pause on the Vaal and repair the railway, thus giving time to General Buller and General Hunter to invade the Transvaal. I fancy, however, that Lord Roberts will prefer the bolder course and try to end this war right now.

"Many points in the recent operations are obscure. Thus the long pause of General Lyttleton at Sunday's river and the subsequent silence suggests that he may co-operate with General Rundle to finish the Free Staters' resistance. There has been no distinct report from General Methuen since that from Hoopstad. He probably crossed the Vaal near Parys.

"Lord Roberts marches in a very broad front with his cavalry wing thrown forward. General Buller probably can not adopt the same plans in the rugged country of northern Natal, but once Buller is up the hills or on the table lands of the Transvaal he will be able to spread out and move rapidly.

"Lord Roberts has a wonderful power of picking a special man for every special work. Ian Hamilton, the brilliant general was shot to pieces at Majuba in the first war. Since then he has made a great mark in training the Indian army to shoot straight, and was himself one of the best officers in India.

"Another able officer is Sir Henry Nicholson, who was chief of staff to General Lockhard in Tierah. He is now running all the transports for General Roberts, whose army, since it reached Bloemfontein, has been well supplied. Nothing shows the great commander more than his finding his men and giving them free hand. Roberts has incomparable dash and boldness, coupled with great circumspection, hence I expect rapid strides now that the crisis is at hand."

Honors the Dead at Mafeking.

Mafeking, May 28.—The entire garrison paraded to thanksgiving service. Colonel Baden-Powell addressed the men, saying:

"We have been unable to fire a volley over the graves of our killed, being fearful of drawing the fire of the enemy's guns."

The garrison paid the last honors to the dead, assembling in the graveyard and bidding good-bye to their fallen comrades.

Mafeking, May 21.—The Boers to the south retired from Kunana,, 10 miles east of Martiza, and are falling back further on Burpilspan. The Boers routed here rallied a few miles east of Polfontein.

Boer Retreat From Mafeking.

A field cornet who failed to support Commandant Eloff in the latter's attack on Mafeking, in which Eloff was captured wrote a letter sympathizing with him. Eloff replied that he hoped the devil and all his angels would torment him eternally, and that he and his would rot.

Boers Admit It.

Pretoria, May 26.—An official belletin says:

"The British have crossed the Vaal at Grobler's drift near Parys. The high level bridge at Vereeningening has been blown up by federals. General Dutort advises that the burghers are coming, followed in force, and determined to fight to the end.

"After retaking Heilbron, the federals followed the British as far as Wolvehoek."

Free Staters Surrender.

New Castle, May 28.—Louis Koch, a magistrate of the Free State, has surrendered. He says that all the burghers in the Harrismith-Vrede district have returned to their farms and refuse to continue fighting. If, as si reported, President Steyn is in Vrede, he will probably go northward towards Laing's Nek if he finds any followers.

College Athletes' Contest.

New York, May 27.—Once more Pennsylvania university athletes proved their skill and stamina against all their collegiate opponents in track and field events by winning the championships of the Inter-Collegiate Athletic Association on Columbia field Sunday afternoon. The Pennsylvanians can not do too much honor to their wonderful athlete, A. C. Kraenzlein. In the history of the association's games no athlete has done what Kraenzlein did today. Yesterday he qualified in four events—the 100-yard dash, the high and low hurdles and the running broad jump. This afternoon he won three of the events, namely: The 100-yard dash and the high and low hurdles. Having had to use all his reserve strength in these events Kraenzlein did not take part in the final contest for the running broad jump, which was delayed purposely for his convenience, and Myer Prinstein of Syracuse won out with a jump of 23 feet 8 inches. Kraenzlein's jump in the preliminaries proved good enough to give him the second place.

The weather was most unpleasant. Almost from the beginning of the games there was a continuous downpour of rain, but the athletes and the thousands of spectators stayed all through the drenching downpour, and the games wound up in what might be well termed a Scotch mist.

Alex Grant of Pennsylvania made the two-mile run in better time than it has been done before. He had the distinction of breaking his own record of last year, of 10 minutes and 35 seconds, by winning in 9 minutes and 51 3-5 seconds. Princeton's representatives were shocked when they saw Cregan quit at a mile and a half. The race was simply a gift for Grant, who won by 10 yards.

At the conclusion of the semi-final heats the score stood: Pennsylvania 28, Princeton 15, Yale 12, Harvard 8, California 8, Cornell 7, Williams 6, Syracuse 5, New York 5, Brown 3, Columbia 2.

Bryan's Running Mate.

New York, May 28.—James J. Coogan, president of the borough of Manhattan, has promised to contribute $100,000 to the democratic national campaign fund and by that token added his name to the list of possible vice presidential nominees on the Bryan ticket. Coogan is a ten times millionaire. He became rich in business and made a fortune in real estate investments. He is 50 years old and a great favorite of Richard Croker, at whose request he was named by the Tammany machine for the office he now holds.

The news was given out when a committee of five of the personal friends of Bryan had left Coogan's office, where they went in quest of campaign funds and where they remained closeted for several hours. No one heard of the conference until after it was concluded. Mr. Coogan then admitted that he had pledged a personal contribution in the sum named, but declined to tell who his callers were. It was learned, however, that at least two of the gentlemen are members of the democratic national committee and that their reports of success and the promises they have obtained throughout the eastern states prompted Coogan to make his generous contribution.

Tammany is For W. J. Bryan.

New York, May 28.—The Evening Post says:

Ex-Senator David B. Hill and ex-Senator Edward Murphy had another talk with Elliot Danforth, chairman of the state committee, at the Hoffman House this afternoon. Mr. Hill is satisfied with the result of his trip to New York. He has conferred with the leaders of Tammany Hall and of the Kings county democracy, and it was announced authoritatively before noon that the program for the state convention had been agreed upon by all parties concerned. The features of the program are:

First—The convention will indorse the candidacy of William J. Bryan and recognize him as "our national leader." Second—The Chicago platform will not be affirmed. Third—The delegates to the national convention will not be instructed.

Norway to Buy Guns.

Christiana, May 28.—The storthing unanimously has voted credit to the amount of 1,000,000 kroner for new quick-firing field guns. It has also voted 500,000 kroner for the first installment for fortifications. The ministry has announced its determination to resign because the prince regent has refused to sanction the tonnage tax.

Assets Pan Out Well.

New York, May 28.—According to late reports the liabilities of Price, McCormick & Co., who suspended last week, may be even greater than originally stated, but the indications are that the assets will be large enough to pay at least 75 cents on the dollar. This statement was authorized by a member of the firm.

Weekly Bank Statement.

New York, May 28.—Following is the weekly bank statement for last week: Surplus reserve, increase, $2,257,100; loans, increase, $4,695,600; specie, increase, $1,783,300; legal tenders, increase, $2,471,300; deposits, increase, $7,990,000; circulation, increase, $342,500.

The banks now hold $18,812,325 in excess of legal requirements.

Killed by Outlaws.

Salt Lake, May 29.—A special from Thompsons says: A cowardly assassination occurred about 50 miles north of here yesterday at noon. Sheriff Tyler of Grand county and Sam Jenkins, a cattle owner, were shot and instantly killed by outlaws on Hill creek, about 50 miles north of here.

AT THE PARIS EXPOSITION

OUR BUILDING IS THE BEST

All National Buildings Are Now Opened—Much Suffering of Americans in Paris—No work For Americans—Wearing the Stars and Stripes.

Paris.—Now that all the national pavilions in the Rue des Nations have been opened to the public a comparison of the artistic effect of our building with that of its neighbors is undoubtedly unfavorable to the former. While the general exterior appearance is a matter of architectural taste, the nudity of its interior elicits the harshest criticism. Seldom is a word of praise of it heard from visiting Americans and the building has been already christened various uncomplimentary nicknames. Many officials recognize the disparity and the present condition of the pavilion will be much improved.

A number of unfortunate cases of suffering are coming under the notice of the American officials in Paris. Many bright, energetic young Americans, having just means enough to transport them here and being anxious to see the exposition, came with the idea of finding some small occupation which would provide them with the means of existence during their stay. Some also hoped they might strike occupations which might develop remuneratively. There is no false pride about them and they are willing to accept even menial employment such as selling papers, blacking boots and hawking exposition tickets. They have, however, met with unexpected obstacles, against which all their pluck and vim are unavailing. Instead of the freedom of labor which obtains in America and which insures success to the willing, intelligent worker, they find every outlet hedged about with red tape regulations or prejudice against the employment of foreigners. Newspaper stands are accorded only to pensioners and a license for bootblacking is practically unobtainable, owing to the interminable period occupied by the preliminaries to the application.

Some boys attempted to obtain a pittance by selling exhibition tickets at a profit of two cents each, but their efforts were stifled by the interference of their French competitors, who are able to draw off all intending purchasers except Americans and Englishmen by proclaiming the Americans as foreigners.

These unfortunate experiences should warn venturesome American youth against setting forth in hopes of finding employment here. Neither the embassy nor the consulate has funds to be used in giving assistance in such cases and the youths will be obliged to get home as best they can.

While this antipathy holds against those who are trying to compete in the French labor market, pleasure-seeking American visitors have no reason to complain of their welcome. The feeling which now is so bitter against Englishmen, with whom Americans are so often confounded, owing to their language, does not exist toward the latter when their nationality is established. The fact is now becoming recognized among the Americans, many of whom have adopted the habit of wearing a miniature enamelled stars and stripes as a distinctive emblem. The French newspapers have remarked this and have called the attention of their readers to its significance.

Fired Upon by an Assassin.

Anoka, Minn., May 29.—While William Wise, a farmer living 10 miles north of here, was playing cards with his wife and four children at his home last night, shots were fired through the window from a shotgun and a Winchester rifle. William Wise, 7 years old, was instantly killed. James, 11 years, was shot through the right lung. William Wise, Sr., was shot in the right shoulder, and will die.

Eliza and Martha, the daughters, escaped by jumping into a closet. It is not known who did the shooting. The Wise family recently moved here from Wisconsin, where they are said to have been involved in a feud. They have also had some litigation since coming to Minnesota.

Held Up in a Sleeping Car.

Kansas City, May 29.—A Star special from Falls City, Neb., says: The passengers of the sleeping car on train No. 1, which left Kansas City, were robbed between here and Stella by a lone highwayman, who compelled the porter at the point of a revolver to proceed and aid him. There were not many passengers in the sleeper and he did not get much.

A. J. Frederick, a Kansas City traveling salesman, resisted the robber's demand to surrender his valuables and the latter fired a shot at him. The bullet grazed Frederick's head. The robber was young and seemingly well educated.

Amusements Under the Ban.

Chicago, May 28.—By a close vote and after a debate which exceeded in bitterness and feeling displayed, anything yet heard during the session, the Methodist general conference practically decided to make no change in the attitude of the church in regard to card playing, dancing, theater going and other forms of amusement, which since 1872 have been under the ban of the church.

Travis is Golf Champion.

New York, May 28.—Walter J. Travis defeated Herbert M. Harriman, the present title holder, in the final round of the Metropolitan Golf Association championship at the Nassau Country club Saturday by a score of 3 up and 2 to play.

Timothy Blackstone is Dead.

Chicago, May 28.—Timothy B. Blackstone, formerly president of the Chicago & Alton railroad and one of the oldest and prominent officers in Chicago, died suddenly at his residence in this city Saturday.

MINES AND MINING NEWS

OUR NORTHWESTERN MINES.

Items Gleaned From Late Reports—All Districts Are Being Developed—A Prosperous Year Is Predicted—Mining Notes and Personals.

By an explosion in the Florida Mountain tunnel of the Trade Dollar mine at Silver City, Idaho, last Saturday, Dan Joyce was instantly killed and Asher Jessie died from injuries received. Joyce came from Alma, Colo. He was 35 years of age and had no family. Jessie was from Nampa, where his parents reside. He was 22 years of age. Andy Davis was terribly injured, the left side of his face being blown away and his left eye destroyed. It is thought he will recover. Joe Nelson had a shoulder broken by flying rocks. Two other men were stunned.

REPUBLIC.

The machine drills on the Chico are running most satisfactorily.

The ledge in the intermediate level of the Black Tail is fully eight feet wide.

The Virginia Gold Mining Company is driving a tunnel nearly due south to prospect for blind ledges.

The last assay across the face of the south drift in the San Poil showed a value of $55 per ton.

The machinery of the Republic Reduction Company's custom mill is in operation and is running smoothly.

Superintendent Maurice Downey of the Tom Thumb states that the new ledge has filled the shaft, which is 6x10 feet in size.

H. L. Neville and John A. Bauer have sunk a shaft 75 feet deep on the Silver dollar claim and are drifting southeastward.

The Quilp will start up this week. Lack of the drill steel has been the principal cause of delay in starting up the compressor plant.

At the Princess Maud a solitary watchman is still in charge. Not a wheel has been turned for weeks and the mine is as still as a graveyard.

The double compartment shaft on the Butte & Boston is going down slowly. Hand drills are used and only about two feet each day is made.

The general improvement that is taking place in the Black Tail mine is highly gratifying. The stope above the intermediate level is looking very fine, indeed.

An important strike was recently made on the Tom Thumb. The discovery was of a new ledge in the shaft at a depth of 250 feet. It dipped almost perpendicularly and filled the bottom of the shaft.

At the Ben Hur the crosscut at the 115-foot level is in about 22 feet and may have from 20 to 30 feet further to run to cut the vein. On the 230-foot level the north drift is running on second-class ore.

At the Nob Hill mine work has been resumed on the winze, which goes down from the upper tunnel. It is now between 80 and 90 feet deep and will require to be sunk to a depth of about 150 feet to reach the level of the lower tunnel.

At the San Poil the ore chute is looking very well. A break in the roof of the south drift, back about eight or 10 feet from the breast, dips about 25 degrees almost due north, and the ore chute is bending westward into the hanging wall, widening as it goes south, and looking as if it might expand largely above the level of the drift.

BRITISH COLUMBIA.

General Manager Geo. B. McAuley of the Cariboo left Camp McKinney last week with two gold bricks, the result of the clean-up at the Cariboo's mill for the month from April 15 to May 15. The weight of the two bricks was 1446 ounces, and the value was over $20,000.

It is reported that the smelter at Grand Forks has been completed and that the workmen have given the last stroke. All that remains to be done is some work on the dam. On account of high water this can not be done at the present time and the owners are waiting for the river to go down. The flume has been built and by means of a hose has been filled with water to swell it so as to be ready for use. Ore has been hauled and is ready for the smelter as soon as it opens.

A discovery which promises to be important has just been made on the side of O. K. mountain, near Rossland. It is a find of free gold. W. J. Pascoe has owned the Pascoe claim there for the past year, and has put in his spare time for some months past in endeavoring to locate the ledge upon it. The claim is near the top of the mountain. He finally has done so, and has found what is either a very wide ledge or a series of ledges. He thinks, however, that it is one large ledge, and that it is the mother ledge of the mountain.

What is said to be the first machine drill ever run by air direct from a column of water was started up at Ainsworth, B. C., last week. This unique compressor has just been completed by the Taylor Air Compressor Company.

Foreman Oxley of the Winnipeg, in Phoenix camp, started the pumps on that property preparatory to resuming development at an early date. Since closing down a couple of months ago the levels of the Winnipeg have filled with water for a distance of 3000 feet. It will take at least three weeks to clear the mine, when a full force will be put on once more. Mr. John Mack is now manager of the mine.

The development of the War Eagle at Rossland is now confined to the 625 and 750-foot levels, all work being done by contract. On the former level drifting is in progress on the north vein. About 150 feet from the end of this drift a raise is being made on ore, and is up about 60 feet in ore of good value, the full width of the raise and possibly more. Another party is stoping on the 625-foot level.

A tunnel has been driven from the surface on the Center Star at Rossland to connect with the raises through the large ore body, and connection was made a few days ago. The raises referred to were made from the 160-foot level in the shaft. On the 200-foot level contractors have been engaged in squaring out the large stopes for the reception of square sets of timber.

Ymir camp is coming to the front as a district of large, true fissure veins of both low and high grade ore. The great majority of the properties are still prospects, but there is much development going on and there are many indications that there will be a number of large mines in the district before long. With the exception of the Ymir, with its 80-stamp mill, and the Puerto Rico, with its 10-stamp mill, very few properties have been developed by outside capital. The conditions are, however, changing noticeably, and this year there has been a decided outside interest taken in the camp.

New York, May 29.—The wedding of Dr. Lewis Rutherford Morris and Miss Katherine Stauffer Clark, daughter of William A. Clark of Montana, took place Monday afternoon in St. Thomas' Protestant Episcopal church. The incidents which attended the union were of such a character as to render the event quite as splendid as the Paget-Whitney nuptials and other notable weddings that have taken place in fashionable St. Thomas' in recent years.

BOERS GETTING RECRUITS

RUMOR FROM CAPE TOWN.

General French Supposed to Have Entered Johannesburg—Delay of Roberts—Casualties at Mafeking—Large Number Killed.

Cape Town, May 29.—It is rumored here that General French has entered Johannesburg.

Boers Shelled Out of Sennekal.

Sennekal, May 29.—General Rundle, with artillery, Yeomanry, Wiltshires and Middlesex and Leicester regiment, under Major Dalbiac, has occupied Sennekal, whence the Boers were driven out by a few shells. A field cornet and a number of other Boers were killed. The British casualties numbered 11. The Boers are believed to be concentrating near Bethlehem.

Boers Get Recruits.

London, May 29.—Advices received here assert that supplies continue to go to the Boers from Lorenzo Marquez, and that foreign recruits for the Boer army proceed from the same point.

No Serious Resistance.

London, May 29.—Although the federals are said to be preparing for a strong resistance at the Klip river, those who have most closely followed the progress of the war since the British and Boer armies came in touch at Brandford are skeptical as to the burghers seriously disputing Roberts' advance even there. If no stand is made at the Klip river the safety of the Boers' guns at Laing's nek will be seriously imperiled, for there will be nothing to prevent Roberts from seizing the Johannesburg Laing's Nek railroad. Indeed, it is already reported that the railroad has been cut and it is quite possible the first official news will record the occupation of Heidelberg.

Roberts may be forced to halt at the Vaal river to repair the bridge and get his guns and transport across, but the mounted men will not be delayed. It is said in high quarters that the speedy announcement of the arrival of the British cavalry at Johannesburg will not surprise the war office.

A dispatch from Mafeking says the total casualties since the commencement of the siege were 83. Out of 44 officers 22 were killed, wounded or missing, and 190 men out of 975 privates were killed, wounded or missing.

MINING NOTES.

Considerable California capital has been invested in an extensive mining enterprise in Siberia and Manchuria. Concessions for large tracts of land have been obtained from the Russian and Chinese governments and the work of development will soon begin. The Chronicle says that a representative of the syndicate has engaged 52 experienced miners in California and ordered $300,000 worth of modern mining machinery, besides making arrangements for the shipment of $1,000,000 worth within a year. Part of the machinery has already been shipped from San Francisco and New York. The mines are placer in character and will be worked on a very extensive scale.

Papers have been signed at Wallace by which Wash Snyder agrees with the Golden Chest Mining Company to transfer all his interest in the Paymaster group of claims, Idaho stamp mill and other property in connection therewith for the consideration of $24,305.

The street railway strike at Dayton, O., has been compromised and declared off.

Kinley Mack Won.

New York, May 27.—Kinley Mack, at 7 to 1, won the Brooklyn Handicap at Gravesend in hollow fashion, while Raffaello, the favorite, landed in second place comfortably and Herbert, the second choice, could do no better than third. The time, 2:10, was slow, but the track was very heavy and the crack horses were out of the race.

MINING NOTES.

The Lone Star and Washington claims in Central camp, a few feet this side of the American-Canadian boundary line, which are owned by the Reservation Mining & Smelting Company are to be regular shippers.

One of the most promising properties on Clear creek, above the town of Alamo, Ore., is the Coeur d'Alene, owned by Dr. Wheeler of Baker City. The development of this property is in the hands of A. M. Curtiss. Mr. Curtiss expects to put another shift to work immediately. The tunnel on the Coeur d'Alene is in 240 feet and exposes some finely mineralized ore.

Wire gold has been found at the 4[illegible] foot level of the Columbia mine, on Cracker creek. This property has been recently equipped with a cyanide plant for the treatment of the tailings. Heretofore from 15 to 40 per cent of the values have been lost in milling, and it is for the purpose of saving these values that the cyanide plant has been installed. It is the intention of manager Baillie at an early date to also add 10 more stamps to the Columbia mill.

Word has been received from Black Tail mountain, Lake Pend d'Oreille that the third shipment of the season has been made. There are reported to be 17 men at work in the mine, work on which is being carried on with satisfactory dispatch and results. The long crosscut tunnel on the Hope, which is being run to cut the Blue Bird's two veins, which extend into Hope ground is reported to be in 31 feet, and is being rapidly extended. The Conjecture has 10 men and the Keep Cool has increased its force considerably. The number of men at work in mines about the lake is claimed to be greater than ever before.

The Buffalo Hump syndicate is now employing 70 men on the Big Buffalo, Vesuvius and other claims. They are putting in a sawmill and preparing for a busy season. At Stewart, to which point Northern Pacific trains are now running regularly, there are two carloads of hoisting machinery for the Big Buffalo syndicate. The Buffalo-Idaho people are putting in an upraise, getting ready for the hoist, which is on the road, and are working 12 men. A fine showing has been made on the Spokane group, three miles south of the Big Buffalo.

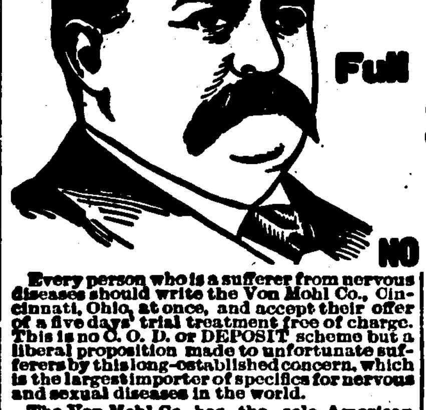
PERFECT MANHOOD



Prof. Jules Laborde's Marvelous French Preparation of

"CALTHOS"

For Lost Manhood.

Full 5 Days' Treatment SENT FREE By Sealed Mail.

NO C. O. D. OR DEPOSIT SCHEME.

Every person who is a sufferer from nervous diseases should write the Von Mohl Co., Cincinnati, Ohio, at once, and accept their offer of a five days' trial treatment free of charge. This is no C. O. D. or DEPOSIT scheme but a liberal proposition made to unfortunate sufferers by this long-established concern, which is the largest importer of specifics for nervous and sexual diseases in the world.

The Von Mohl Co. has the sole American rights for Prof. Laborde's French preparation of "Calthos," the only remedy known to advanced medical science that will positively cure nervous debility. This remedy has for years been used as a specific in the French and German armies, and since its introduction into the United States has cured many thousands of sufferers, and the remarkable success of the remedy in Europe has been repeated in this country.

In order to place this wonderful treatment in the hands of every person who suffers the mental and physical anguish of sexual weakness, The Von Mohl Co., has decided to send a free trial treatment to all who write at once. The remedy is sent by mail in a plain package, and there is no publicity in receiving it or taking it. Accompanying the medicine there is a full treatise in plain language for you to read. Take the medicine privately with perfect safety, and a sure cure is guaranteed.

Lost vitality creeps upon men unawares. Do not deceive yourself or remain in ignorance while you are being dragged down by this insidious disease. No matter what the cause may be, whether early abuses, excesses or overwork and business cares, the results are the same—premature loss of strength and memory, emissions, impotency, varicocele and shrunken parts. This specific remedy will cure you at any stage before epilepsy results, with ensuing consumption and insanity. "Calthos" goes directly to the seat of the trouble, no matter of how long standing, and the patient feels the benefit of the first day's treatment. In five days the medicines sent free will make you feel like a new man.

The Von Mohl Co. often receives the most astonishing testimonials from persons who have taken only five days' treatment. They have thousands of testimonials from those who have been permanently cured after having been given up by doctors, misled and ruined in health by disreputable medical schemers, and when they had given up their last hope for health and happiness. No sensible person will permit his name to be used for a testimonial as an admission that he had any of the diseases for which the preparation of "Calthos" is a specific cure. Some irresponsible advertisers are using "made-up" testimonials, but the Von Mohl Co. invariably declines to make public the names or correspondence of any patients who have been cured by "Calthos."

Five days' treatment will be placed in your hands free of cost, and you are earnestly urged for your own sake to send for it without delay. Write to day and send your address. It is not necessary to give embarrassing details of your symptoms. The book accompanying the five days' treatment will enable you to take the medicine in private and treat yourself successfully at home. It costs nothing to try this remedy. It may cost you a great deal more to let this offer go by. Write today. Address THE VON MOHL CO. B, CINCINNATI, OHIO. Largest Importers of Standard Preparations in the United States.

TAKING THE CENSUS.

Today marks the beginning of the census taking. Superintendent Savage gives out some of the details.

The population schedule calls for a return concerning every man, woman and child who are alive on the first day of June, 1900. There is also a special population schedule for Indians living on reservations or lands allotted to them. The mortality schedule will give an account of all persons who have died during the census year, that is, June 1, 1899, to May 31, 1900. Special schedules for agriculture will be filled out for ranch, farm, market garden, fruit garden, nursery, etc. There is also a special schedule for manufacturers, covering every imaginable manufacturing industry.

Special effort is also being made to get the complete and accurate information regarding foreigners and in every locality where these are found enumerators will be given the aid of interpreters. These interpreters will receive $4 per day.

There are four regular and several special schedules and each requires the asking of a great multitude of questions. While the questions to be asked will be numerous they will not include some of those that were considered most objectionable in 1890. These have been abolished, not because people objected to answering them, but because they proved utterly worthless as a basis for statistics on chronic diseases, for which they were designed.

SCOPE OF THE WORK.

The schedules to be used by enumerators are as follows:

Schedule No. 1—Relating to population.

Schedule No. 1—Relating to Indian population.

Schedule No. 2—Relating to agriculture.

Schedule No. 3—Relating to general manufactures, and special schedules relating to particular industries.

Schedule No. 4—Relating to persons who have died during the census year.

Special schedule relating to persons defective in sight, hearing or speech.

Special schedule relating to statistics of crime.

Special schedule relating to live stock not on farms or ranges.

Under the population schedule there are 28 questions for the enumerators to report on. They are:

Number of dwelling house in the order of visitation.

Surname, Christian name, initial.

Residence street, number of house.

Relationship of each member to the head of family.

Color or race.

Sex.

Age at last birthday.

Day, month, and year when born.

Are you single, married, widow, widower or divorced.

Number of years married.

How many children?

Number of children living.

Sex of these children.

Where were you born? If in the United States, give state or territory; if of foreign birth, give name of the country only.

Where was your father born? Your mother? (Same condition as the foregoing.)

If of foreign birth, when did you come to the United States?

How many years have you resided in the United States?

Have you been naturalized? How many years since you became a citizen?

What is your occupation, trade or profession? (This question applies to persons 10 years of age or over.)

How many months during the year are you employed?

How many months have you attended school?

Can you read?

Can you write?

Give the main facts concerning your education.

Do you own the house in which you live?

Do you rent the house in which you live?

If you own the house is it free or mortgaged? (The same questions apply to farms.)

The agriculture schedule is enough to strike terror to the heart of the bravest enumerator. The questions are subdivided under 46 distinct headings, with anywhere from 3 to 25 questions under each. The information gleaned from the farmers will not be used as a basis of taxation nor communicated to any assessor. It will under all circumstances be treated strictly confidential. A heavy penalty is provided for divulgence of any of this information by enumerators. The acreage, the value of crops of grain, fruit, vegetables, domestic animals, farm buildings and improvements, etc., the amounts received from the sale of various products for 1899, will be ascertained if the questions be truthfully answered.

The schedule governing the statistics of crime is designed to give a complete history of every criminal incarcerated within any penitentiary or jail. People awaiting trial will also be enumerated.

The mortality schedule contemplates a record of all persons who have died between June 1, 1899, and May 31, 1900. A complete record of the deceased is required, including the birthplace of his parents.

A schedule is also provided for live stock not in pasture or on range—all stock in barns or small enclosures. In addition a special live stock census has been provided.

The law requires the truthful answering of all questions and a penalty is provided for failure to do so.

Enumerators are required to work ten hours a day, Sunday excepted.

A Business Proposition.

A successful business career cannot be achieved without sound health. The business man should guard his health as he guards his capital; for health is part of his capital and the impairment of that capital affects every business interest. A sedentary occupation and quick lunches, soon show their effects in a sluggish liver. The use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will cure "liver trouble" as well as indigestion and other diseases of the organs of digestion and nutrition.

The "Discovery" strengthens the body by supplying Nature with strength making materials. It contains no whisky, alcohol or other intoxicant.

"After three years of suffering with liver trouble and malaria," writes Mr. Edward Jacobs, of Marengo, Crawford Co., Indiana, "I gave up all hopes of ever getting stout again, and the last chance was to try your medicine. I had tried all the home doctors and received but little relief. After taking three bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and one vial of his 'Pleasant Pellets' I am stout and hearty. It is due entirely to your wonderful medicines."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets assist the action of "Golden Medical Discovery."

Glorious News.

Comes from Dr. D. B. Cargile, of Washita, I. T. He writes: "Electric Bitters has cured Mrs. Brewer of scrofula, which had caused her great suffering for years. Terrible sores would break out on her head and face, and the best doctors could give no help; but now her health is excellent." Electric Bitters is the best blood purifier known. It's the supreme remedy for eczema, tetter, salt rheum, ulcers, boils and running sores. It stimulates liver, kidneys and bowels, expels poisons, helps digestion, builds up the strength. Only 50c. Sold by Kennedy's pharmacy. Guaranteed.

"After suffering from piles for fifteen years I was cured by using two boxes of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve," writes W. J. Baxter, North Brook, N. C. It heals everything. Beware of counterfeits.

KENNEDY'S PHARMACY.

A Life and Death Fight.

Mr. W. A. Hines of Manchester, Ia. writing of his almost miraculous escape from death, says: "Exposure after measles induced serious lung trouble, which ended in consumption. I had hemorrhages and coughed night and day. All my doctors said I must soon die. Then I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery which wholly cured me. Hundreds have used it on my advice and all say it never fails to cure throat, chest and lung troubles." Regular size 50c and $1 00. Trial bottles free at Kennedy's pharmacy.

"I had stomach trouble twenty years and gave up hope of being cured till I began to use Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. It has done me so much good I call it the savior of my life," writes W. R. Wilkinson, Albany, Tenn. It digests what you eat.

KENNEDY'S PHARMACY.

COTTON IS AGAIN KING.

FROM a price of 5 cents per pound a few months ago, raw cotton has gone up until it sells today at 9 cents per pound. Worse still—the supply is short, in the face of a demand larger than for many seasons.

The world looks to America for its cotton. As our new crop will not be marketed until 1901, it is unreasonable to look for a drop in cotton goods before that time.

But remember one thing: I purchased all my cotton goods before the advance and am selling them at the last season's prices, giving my customers the advantage of the increase instead of taking the extra profit for myself as our other merchants are doing all over the country.

My new spring stock is now complete and at the low prices of last year.

—Bryan was given considerable embarassment four years ago by the nomination of two vice-presidents to run with him—Sewal and Watson. Already there are two vice-presidential nominations for the colonel to wink at, and another will be forthcoming at the Kansas City convention. But Bryan is resourceful, and heretofore he has shown much ingenuity in worrying through trouble some complications.

—Some of the Palouse farmers have become somewhat alarmed over alleged insect injury and rust to wheat. Walla Walla farmers have thought the same thing and have forwarded to the botany department of the Pullman Agricultural college samples for examination. After examining the professor wrote: "The wheat which you send has probably been injured by a 'scald' or some similar condition. That is, it has been exposed to wet weather, and then to a hot sun. There is rust on the leaves, but 'leaf rust' is not very injurious to wheat, even in large quantities, and there is not enough rust present to cause the injury which has been done. 'Stem rust' of wheat is very injurious, but it does not seem to be present on the material sent."

—War vessels have been gathering in the Chinese waters of late and maybe another war can be scared up. The foreign powers are anxious to see a scrap which would give them an excuse to get in and assist in carving up the empire. France, England, Russia, Germany, and Italy each would like to get a slice, and we imagine Uncle Sam has designs on the country. Riots have been frequent of late in the Shantung province. The "Boxers" have been making it warm for the Belgian and German railway engineers and graders who are invading their territory. The natives have been treated in a most shameful manner and the riots have been provoked by the foreigners. That portion of China is one of the most densely populated sections of the earth, and the people have a desperate struggle for existence. Every inch of ground is cultivated, every straw and every sprig of vegetation is utilized in some manner for the support of life. The country is divided into little farms, which are cultivated almost with a microcope, one might say, because it is necessary for the subsistence of some family, and the dead are buried in the gravel hills, where nothing can grow. The railway lines are run across the rich farms, houses are torn down, villages burned, crops destroyed, supplies seized, and the inhabitants cruelly treated. The "Boxers" were organized to resist and revenge these outrages and cannot be blamed. But the Chinaman gets no sympathy here or elsewhere. The Boers have a picnic in comparison and yet our people lie awake nights in extending sympathy.

—Brigadier General Charles King, the famous soldier, novelist and lecturer, will speak at the University on the evening of June 14. His subject will be, "With the Volunteers at Manila." The lecture will be illustrated by many battle scenes and historic places at Manila and is sure to be interesting.

—The condition of the country would not be bettered if the "outs" were in. The ultimate purpose today in national, as well as in state and municipal affairs, is to oust the other fellow. The republicans want the democrats out, the democrats want the republicans out, and the populists want them all out, while the socialists and anarchists want them all in—to mention just where would not look well in print. The time and energy of many able men are devoted entirely and alone to supplanting someone else. The whole game is, get into office and while there make sufficient appointments so the respective pull of the various offices will insure your re-election. There should be a national unity of all voters, working for national measures.—American Progress.

—A new science has been launched which is called paidology, which means the study of children. Dr. Macdonald of Washington city, who has had conferred upon him the degree of "correspondant du service pedologique scolaire," by the Antwerp institution, the only one in existence, examined 20,000 children, and says in the Chicago Record: "It has been demonstrated that the children of the laboring classes—that is, of parents who are engaged in manual labor—are not so strong, either mentally or physically, as the children of the professional, mercantile and clerical classes which are not engaged in manual labor. This may be due in a measure to their food, their habits and their manner of living. Girls are generally superior to boys in their studies, although there is greater degree of adaptability in boys than in girls. Children of the non-laboring classes shower greater ability in their studies than those of the laboring classes. The mixture of races is not favorable to mental development. Boys of the non laboring classes are more susceptible than the boys of the laboring class. Boys show a much greater percentage of unruliness and laziness than girls. Dull boys are more apt to be unruly than bright ones. Boys are less sensative to pain and heat than girls, and children of the laboring classes are less sensative than those of the non laboring classes. Colored children are more sensative than white and have keener perceptions. Bright boys are generally taller than dull boys. For a certain period before and after puberty girls are taller and heavier than boys, but at no other time. While girls are more sensative to pain than men, they can endure more.

—Henry Wendt, a member of Capt. Fenn's company of Idaho volunteers, who became insane on the voyage from San Francisco to Manila, committed suicide in the Soldiers' asylum at Washington a few days ago says the Blackfoot News. The Idaho boys will remember his antics on the Morgan City.

—The silver republicans of Idaho will go to the national democratic convention to be held at Kansas City. Ex-Senator Dubois, Congressman Wilson, Lieut-Gov. Hutchinson and Littleton Price head the appointed delegates. Lindol Smith is named from Latah county and George Lake from Nez Perce. Every person wanting to go will be given that privilege.

—The harvest-time of 1900, now approaching, has been hitherto unapproached in its promise of fruitful abundance for the Pacific Northwest, says the West Coast Trade. Never with an equal acreage have the conditions governing been so favorable for a great crop of wheat. From the Walla Walla district, where the song of the reaper will be furnishing music long before the close of the month, up through the Palouse and Big Bend countries, where the harvest will be continuous until snow flies, roports are equally sanguine. Estimates vary as to the probable outturn of wheat, but none are given which do not show a liberal increase over the total of any previous year in the history of grain raising, and it may be regarded as conservative to place the yield of the three states of Washington, Oregon and Idaho at upwards of 25,000,000 bushels. Puget Sound and the Columbia river will send abroad approximately 35,000,000 bushels of wheat and flour during the coming cereal year. Of this flour exports will form no inconsiderable part, shipments of the commodity promising to reach a total approximating 2,500,000 barrels at least, but leaving some 25,000,000 bushels for the wheat exporters to care for. The price is all that is lacking to make us all happy.

Printing Without Ink.

A company has been formed to control the process of printing without ink, by using electricity and chemically prepared paper. In a short time, it is expected, this innovation will be completely introduced, and old methods revolutionized. There is one thing however that has resisted all innovations; that is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which has many imitators, but no equals as a cure for stomach, liver and bowel troubles. This peerless remedy has been the standard medicine of the American people for the past fifty years. It is a wonderful medicine for dyspepsia, indigestion, biliousness, insomnia, constipation and nervousness. It also prevents, malaria, fever and ague. It keeps the stomach in good condition, and the bowels regular. Try it, and you will not be disappointed.

—Men are wanted to help build the Idaho Midland railway. Contractor Wilkerson wants 3000 men and thinks he may have to import Italians and negroes to fill out.

—Census Enumerators Nebelsieck and Hasbrouck are busy finding out the ages and habits of the people. Thousands of enumerators are now at work all over the United States taking the census of over seventy million people.

—Hon. J. B. West, register of the U. S. land office at Lewiston, was in the city Sunday with his family, the guests of Mrs. Moss. Mrs. West and a woman from Utah are the only lady delegates chosen to go to the republican national convention.

—It is reported that while the delegates at the Lewiston state democratic convention were cheering the remarks of a prominent speaker, Tuesday, the news reached the hall that Oregon had gone republican, electing the legislature and both congressmen—Moody and Tongue. Cheering stopped, but the lads kept up a whistling tune.

—Dick Ruddy thinks he has something good in the mines of Thunder Mountain, where several claims have been sold the past year at big figures. Here perpetual thunder roar every day in the year, and to our surprise Dick's mine does not contain a bit of brimstone—it's all gold-bearing quarts. Hope it will make Richard great.

—Aguinaldo is killed every week or two and then comes to life again. Must have more lives than a cat. The latest yarn cabled is to the effect that a battle was fought at Lagat and the insurgent leader was bagged. The officer shot was either Aguinaldo or his adjutant, and, as his horse was richly caparisoned, it is presumed it was Aguinaldo.

—The young and ambitious man frequently asks what business he should follow to be most successful at. That is hard telling. Professions are all overcrowded. We do not need more lawyers and doctors, but better ones. The first step is to make a choice of life work and then equip for it. Success in many professions is a matter of years, sometimes coming too late to enjoy it. It does not do to sacrifice life for wealth. If you are skilled in anything, industrious, the country has use for you.

Your health depends largely on your teeth, but poor dental work makes matters worse. Get the best. Call on Dr. Lemman. Prices lower than the lowest.

Reports show that over fifteen hundred lives have been saved through the use of One Minute Cough Cure. Most of these were cases of grippe, croup, asthma, whooping cough, bronchitis and pneumonia. Its early use prevents consumption.

KENNEDY'S PHARMACY.

Mr. W. S. Whedon, cashier of the First National Bank of Winterset, Iowa, in a recent letter gives some experience with a carpenter in his employ, that will be of value to other mechanics. He says: "I had a carpenter working for me who was obliged to stop work for several days on account of being troubled with diarrhoea. I mentioned to him that I had been similarly troubled and that Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy had cured me. He bought a bottle of it from the druggist here and informed me that one dose cured him, and he is again at his work." For sale by all druggists.

All who suffer from piles will be glad to learn that DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve will give them instant and permanent relief. It will cure eczema and all skin diseases. Beware of counterfeits.

KENNEDY'S PHARMACY.

A Good Cough Medicine.

It speaks well for Chamberlain's Cough Remedy when druggists use it in their own families in preference to any other. "I have sold Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for the past five years with complete satisfaction to myself and customers," says druggist J. Goldsmith, Van Etten, N. Y. "I have always used it in my own family both for ordinary coughs and colds and for the cough following la grippe, and find it very efficacious." For sale by all druggists.

Ivy poisoning, poison wounds and all other accidental injuries may be quickly cured by using DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. It is also a certain cure for piles and skin diseases. Take no other.

KENNEDY'S PHARMACY.

Sprained Ankle Quickly Cured.

"At one time I suffered from a severe sprain of the ankle," says Geo. E. Cary, editor of the Guide, Washington, Fa. "After using several well recommended medicines without success, I tried Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and am pleasad to say that relief came as soon as I began its use and a complete cure speedily followed." Sold by all druggists.

W. E. Borah of Boise will deliver the Fourth of July address at Caldwell.

Fifteen carloads of fruit boxes have been delivered at Lewiston for the coming season.

Commencing June 5, Lenville, six miles north of Gennesee, will have a daily mail instead of a semi-weekly.

The Gennesee Fruit Growers' Association has been organized, with T. E. Miller as temporary president, and G. H. Raymond as temporary secretary.

What the Potlatch country needs now is a spell of sunshine. The soil has sufficient moisture to mature big crops but needs the rays of the sun to make them grow.

The shipment of cattle from the Salmon river district during the last 90 days has made several good trainloads, and shows the advantage of the country for the cattle raising industry.

While engaged in playing a game of ball George Crum of Lewiston fell and broke his left leg about an inch above the ankle. The accident happened while Crum was trying to steal a base.

Ever since the declaration of martial law in the Coeur d'Alenes there has been trouble more or less pronounced between the authorities and some of the saloon men, and it has been a common occurrence for the saloons to be closed. The latest was the closing of three in Mullan last week.

The agregate value of the property transferred in Shoshone county during the month of May, as shown by the records of the county recorder's office, was $230,381.92, as compared with $278,913.66 for the same month last year.

In deciding a criminal case from Blaine county the supreme court has laid down the rule for this state that, in a case depending upon circumstantial evidence, it is not necessary for the prosecution to conclusively prove every link in the chain.

While a work train was backing down from Stuart, about three miles above Kamiah, the other day, the caboose and tender left the rails and turned completely over. A laboring man in the caboose jumped and had his leg broken just below the knee.

The Lewiston city council opened bids for the purchase of machinery for street improvement, but decided to reject them all. The bids ranged from $2500 to $3750. The council decided that the contemplated improvements did not justify such an expenditure.

Eddie Conner and Joseph Malloy have received commissions as special enumerators for the Nes Perce Indians. The census of this tribe taken in 1892 showed over 1900 Indians of Nez Perce blood upon the reservation, but it is thought the tribe has rapidly diminished during the last five years, and the present census will show a loss of over 25 per cent in population.

MONTANA.

Troy is making preparations to celebrate the Fourth of July.

A Florence Crittenton home is being organized at Helena.

Alfred Moa, an employe of the Nipper mine, at Butte, was caught by a fall of ground and badly injured.

Judge Knowles has allowed Eugene Carroll, receiver of the Butte City Water Company, the sum of $6000 per year salary, pending a final settlement of the receivership matter.

In the leading editorial in the last issue of the Libby News the editor vigorously attacked Fred Whiteside for being "so officious" at the late democratic meeting of the county central committee. Whiteside met the editor, L. H. Faust, in the courthouse lobby shortly after, and a hot war of words flowed freely, after which Whiteside gave the editor a thrashing. They were separated by the sheriff, into whose office they rolled in their fight.

Mrs. L. R. Rutherford. nee Miss Katharine Clark, daughter of Senator W. A. Clark, has made it known that she had not forgotten her home friends nor the people of Butte. She telegraphed to Alex Johnstone, cashier of the Clark bank, instructions to disburse the following sums in her name for charitable purposes: Mayor of Deer Lodge, where she was born, $500; to the associated charities of Butte; to the mayor of Butte, $2000; to every church in Butte, $2000. As there are over 20 churches in Butte the latter item is an expensive one.

WASHINGTON.

Registration in Spokane has passed the 4000-mark.

Spangle public schools held commencement exercises last week.

Cheney debaters won from the Spokane high school by one point in their recent meeting.

Jack Cooke, "the boy preacher," is drawing sensational crowds to the meetings now being held in Spokane.

Cadet Charles Sweeny, Jr., of Spokane, has left for West Point. He is the first Spokane boy to attend that school.

The rust which has been reported in the wheat is beginning to show itself near Dayton, but no fear of results is entertained.

The Spokane County Teachers' Association met Saturday in the Spokane high school building. There was a large attendance.

John C. Johnson, a laborer, was drowned in the Spokane river Sunday morning. His remains were discovered in the mill pond near the Phoenix mill.

The hop prospects in Yakima valley are better than for many years. The vines are well trellised and in fine growing condition. Several contract sales have been reported at prices ranging from 9 to 12 cents per pound. The growers think the picking season will come on fully two weeks earlier than last year.

The eagle will scream in Pullman on July 4 as it never screamed before. Preparations are being made for the biggest celebration in the history of the town.

A bold but fruitless attempt at robbery was made at Cheney. Two burglars entered Rickert's saloon and Switsere's drug store in the rear by cutting a hole in the door of the saloon.

June will be a lively month in Pullman, being crowded with social events, the chief of which will be the commencement exercises of the Washington agricultural college, beginning June 17 and ending June 21.

OREGON.

Portland has been selected as the next place of meeting of the biennial convention of the Oregon Federation of Women's Clubs, which will assemble there in 1902.

Mrs. Naomi Moss, wife of Riley M. Moss, was shot through the heart and killed near Willamette Heights Park, Portland. Suspicion rests upon the woman's husband and jealousy is believed to have been the motive.

Live stock shipments from the northwestern parts of the state continue active, with a large number of cars due out in the next few days, and large shipments going out at the present time.

Pendleton is now supplied with district hose carts and companies under the reorganization plan recently adopted. Chief Greulich has received the new carts and hose and is expecting other apparatus to arrive at any time.

BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Successful as last year's games were, Nelson is determined to have a record Dominion day celebration this year. The horse racing has been cut out of the program owing to there being no suitable course, and attention will chiefly be devoted to sports, boat racing and a big water carnival.

Three more names may be added to the list of missing miners from Kaslo. L. A. Lemon, well known in British Columbia, went up Kootenay lake the other day, and an upturned boat, supposed to be his, was passed by the steamer Argent. There are also rumors around Kaslo that Charles Freeman and Ralph Kenyon have been drowned, but it is hoped there is no foundation for the report. They took a rowboat for Salisbury creek, 14 miles up Kootenay lake.

Adam Baird and Harry Sutherland are missing and it is feared they are dead. They left aKslo some time ago to go to some claims above Baird's Landing, on the upper Duncan river, and nothing has been heard of them. Searching parties have failed to find any trace.

John Malkson, a Swede, employed at the Le Roi mine, Rossland, fell through an ore bridge in a stope on the 600-foot level last week. He was breaking down the caked ore, which suddenly gave way, buried and killed him.

The first freight train carrying ore exclusively ever shipped over the Phoenix spur of the Columbia & Western has just been sent to the Trail smelter.

Kaslo is to have what it has long asked for—a local registry of the supreme court. Smith Curtis, minister of mines, has notified the authorities to that effect, and Donald Kurtz, mining recorder, has been appointed registrar without extra expense.

"Boxers" Are Growing Aggressive.

Peking, June 5.—Most alarming reports are constantly coming from the country, and particularly Pao Ting Fu. The telegraph wires are cut and all news comes via Tien Tsin. A serious crisis exists at the palace; the ultra conservative party advocates not taking repressive measures, urging the dowager empress to allow the Boxers to finish the work of driving the foreigners out of the country. The moderate party, led by Prince Chinle, is representing the serious danger of provoking a conflict with the powers. All the foreigners have fled. The Chinese government seems either unwilling or unable to suppress the trouble. Troops show no energy in attacking the Boxers.

The National Brickmakers' Alliance and the Illinois Brick Company have reached an agreement, whereby union labor shall be exclusively used in the brick company's yards.

The locomotive firemen have gained over 3700 members during the past fiscal year.

THE ALUM BAKING POWDERS.

Names of Some of the Principal Brands Sold in this Vicinity.

The recent discussion in the papers of the effect upon the human system of food made with alum baking powders and the opinions that have been published from noted scientists to the effect that such powders render the food unwholesome, have caused numerous inquiries for the names of the various alum powders.

The following list of baking powders containing alum is made up from the reports of state chemists and food commissioners, of Minnesota, or other reliable authority:

Baking Powders Containing Alum;

K. C. .... Jaques Mfg. Co., Chicago.	Contains Alum
Calumet .... Calumet Baking Powder Co., Chicago.	Contains Alum
Home .... Home Baking Powder Co., San Francisco.	Contains Alum
Washington .... Pacific Chemical Works, Tacoma.	Contains Alum
Crescent .... Crescent Mfg. Co., Seattle.	Contains Alum
White Lily .... D. Ferrera & Co., Tacoma.	Contains Alum
Bee-Hive .... Washington Mfg. Co., San Francisco.	Contains Alum
Bon Bon .... Grant Chemical Co., Chicago.	Contains Alum
Defiance .... Portland Coffee & Spice Co., Portland.	Contains Alum
Portland .... Beno & Ballis, Portland.	Contains Alum

In addition to these, it is learned that many grocers are selling what they call their own private or special brands. These powders are put up for the grocer and his name put upon the labels by manufacturers of alum powders. The manufacturers, it is said, find their efforts to market their goods in this way greatly aided by the ambition of the grocer, to sell a powder with is own name upon the label, especially when the grocer can make an abnormal profit upon it. Many grocers, doubtless, do not know that the powders they are thus pushing are alum powders which would be actually contrabrand in many sections if sold without disguise.

It is quite impossible to give the names of all the alum baking powders in the market. They are constantly appearing in all sorts of disguises, under all kinds of cognomens, and at all kinds of prices, even as low as five and 10 cents a pound. They can be avoided, however, by the housekeeper who will bear in mind that all baking powders sold at 25 cents or less per pound are liable to contain alum, as pure cream of tartar baking powders cannot be produced at anything like this price.

Free Homes for Boers in America.

Chicago, June 1.—A special to the Tribune from Denver says:

Governor Thomas has given his indorsement to a gigantic proposition having for its object the bringing of the defeated Boers to the valley of the Platte in Colorado.

The Union Pacific Land Company proposes to give a million acres of land, to be taken up under the Carey land act, on the Julesburg and Wyoming divisions. There is to be no charge for the gift and the company will undertake to transport the Boers to Colorado, being repaid on the installment plan after the communities are established and prosperous.

E. C. Wantland, agent of the Union Pacific, left for the east last night, where he will meet the Boer envoys and explain in detail the proposition.

Feudal War in Texas.

Nacogdoches, Tex., June 5.—A triple tragedy at San Augustine occurred in the court house Monday, in which Felix Roberts, a newspaper correspondent, Sid Roberts and Sheriff Neel Roberts were killed. The tragedy was the result of an old feud between the Wall and Roberts factions on one side and the Brooks and Borders faction on the other.

Anti-Trust Amendment Lost.

Washington, June 1.—In the house the anti-trust constitutional amendment was defeated by a vote of 154 to 133, the requisite two-thirds not having voted for it.

A DESPERATE HIGHWAYMAN

NO RESPECT FOR THE CAVALRY.

Single Handed a Bold Californian Robs Three Stages—Booty Scarce but Easily Gotten Away With.

Wawona, Cal., June 4.—The "Black Kid," single-handed, armed with a magazine rifle, about 10 o'clock yesterday held up and robbed at one time two wagons and three coaches of the Yosemite Stage and Turnpike company, carrying 27 men and five women; then, without firing a shot, stood off a small squad of United States regular cavalry and escaped into the woods.

The first stage left Raymond about 5 o'clock a. m., carrying nine stonecutters for Fish camp. The second regular passenger stage left at 7, preceded by a troop of United States cavalry on their way into Yosemite.

The second stage overtook the cavalry at Daisellos and began the long ascent to Grub gulch. About three miles from the latter place the road turns sharply to the right and runs straight across a little sand flat with a low bank to the right and a slope to the left covered with bushes and a few small trees.

As the stage swung slowly around the curve its passengers saw the first stage drawn out to the left of the road, two cavalry horses tied to the wheels, next the passengers lying underneath a tree; then on the bank on the right a solitary figure with cocked revolver, grasped in a blackened hand, with a mask made of a blue cotton handkerchief with white dots moving gently in the wind and covering the whole of his face except pale blue eyes encircled with black. It is hard to understand how one man could hold up 27 unless one happened to be one of the 27. The "Black Kid" has peculiarly effective gestures with his rifle, so persuasive that his orders were immediately and carefully obeyed.

"Climb down, there; hurry up; no exceptions. Line up there. Now, you, there, pass the hat."

The dignified gentleman indicated by effective gestures with the rifle, walked bareheaded up and down the line and collected. Then he was ordered to chip in himself.

A sound of voices and hoof beats interrupted an examination of the valises, but it turned out to be a stageload of Chinese. The other passengers were ordered to look the other way while this load was being held up.

An express wagon, with the mail and express box, arrived next, and the driver was compelled to put down the box and his lunch. His work was well done.

Two stonecutters were ordered to mount the cavalry horses and ride back. The stages and wagons were ordered one by one to move on with a "ow, you," and a persuasive gesture of the rifle. They moved on. The men on horses rode back and informed the advance guard of soldiers. They hurried forward, but practically unarmed, since their weapons were not loaded. They were held off until "Kid" made his escape, leaving the express box unopened, a box containing clothing for a disguise, cartridges and field glasses. From three stages the robber collected about $250.

Except a bag and a bit of paper on which was printed in lead pencil: "The Black Kid," and written, "The Lone Highwayman," he left no trace.

Among the passengers robbed was Professor Benjamin Ide Wheeler, president of the University of California.

Major Rucker and Captain E. E. Wilcox, in command of 67 men of Troop F, Sixth cavalry, from the Presidio, were close behind, en route to the Yosemite National park.

Big Cargo Goes to Nome.

Seattle, June 4.—The steamship Charles D. Lane sailed for Cape Nome at 9 o'clock this morning from the White Star dock with 406 passengers and about 2500 tons of cargo, probably the largest cargo sent north this season. The Lane's most prominent passengers are Charles D. Lane of San Francisco, her owner, and J. H. McGraw, formerly governor of this state.

Mr. Lane is taking the largest and most expensive single outfit ever sent to Alaska from this or any other port. He has 100 men, all employes of the Wild Goose Mining company, of which he is the principal stockholder. His freight includes all the rolling stock for a seven-mile railroad which the company proposes to build from Nome City to its mines on Anvil, Glacier and Dexter creeks. Besides the railroad equipment there are 8 or 10 large boilers and much mining machinery. The mining machinery outfit is said to be the largest and most complete ever sent to Alaska. Mr. McGraw goes to Nome to assume the duties of United States coast commissioner for the district, having been appointed to the office several months ago by the Hon. C. S. Johnson, then judge of the district of Alaska. His official headquarters will be at Nome City.

Chasing Insurgents in Albay.

Manila, June 1.—Lieutenant Jens Estedje, of the Forty-seventh volunteers, commanding a scouting party in the southern part of Albay province, had several engagements with insurgents, in which 17 of the enemy were killed and 23, including a captain, were captured. Six explosive bombs and a number of valuable insurgent documents also fell into the hands of the American scouts, who burned the town of Yubi, headquraters of the rebels. Sergeant Brickley was killed during a light engagement near Higmo, in the province of Albay, yesterday. Scouts of the Thirty-sixth and Thirty-fourth regiments have captured 32 rifles and 500 rounds of ammunition in Pangasinin province.

The 8-hour system has been inaugurated on the police force at Memphis.

THE MESSENGER WAS NERVY.

Frustrated the Attempt of Robbers to Loot an Express Car—Engineer Also Performed a Brave Act After Being Captured.

St. Louis, June 5.—A special from Longview, Tex., says the northbound Cannon Ball train on the International & Great Northern was held up after midnight near Price's Switch, 60 miles south of this city, and but for the plucky fight of Express Messenger Rutherford and Baggagemaster Strong and the strategy of Engineer Rich, another robbery would have taken place.

The engineer saw a pile of cross ties and lumber on the track and stopped. He was ordered down by three masked men, who forced the engineer and the fireman to uncouple the mail, baggage and express cars and pull about two miles from the remainder of the train.

The robbers then commanded the messenger to open the door of his car, and failing to get any response made Fireman Love break a hole in the end with a coal pick. While this was being done the fireman begged the messenger and baggageman not to shoot. The messenger, who was well protected by a barricade, said he would kill the first man who entered the hole. Love was forced in, and the messenger shouted "Get aside, Love!" as he fired through the hole. His shot just missed the robbers, who undertook to kill the messenger by shooting through the side of the car.

In the confusion resulting, Engineer Rich crawled upon his engine, pulled the throttle wide open and left the robbers behind. A quick run was made to Jacksonville, 15 miles north. At daybreak penitentiary bloodhounds were brought from Rusk and put on the trail. This hold-up occurred near the place where the same train was robbed five years ago.

In the Senate.

When the senate convened Monday morning Senator Morgan reported from the canal committee a resolution declaring the Clayton-Bulwer treaty abrogated.

Several private measures were passed, and after a great number of bills had been blocked by objections, Senator Teller addressed the senate on the Philippine question. He said he was one of those who believed that American sovereignty attached to the Philippines—to the island of Luzon at least.

"When we have become masters of Luzon," said he, "we become practically masters of all the islands."

Continuing Senator Teller said: "I believe a republic may have and may hold colonies, but those colonies must be founded on a participation in the government of the people by the colonies. I see no way to surrender the Philippine islands."

In conclusion, Senator Teller said he would not support the republican party in the approaching campaign.

"I didn't support its financial policy and I do not support its Philippine policy as foreshadowed in the pending measure (Spooner bill), and I do not want to give up the islands, either. They should be a source of great advantage to us. They stand in the great pathway of the commerce of the world and they can be made of immense value to this country."

All scenes about the house presaged the near approach of the final adjournment. The leaders in charge of the appropriation bill were all in attendance. The galleries were thronged with advocates of the belated bills, the engrossing clerks were hurrying about, and the speaker was constantly besieged by members with private bills which they desired to get through.

In the House.

The minority report of the committee on the Coeur d'Alene investigation was given out Monday by Representatives Lentz of Ohio and Hay of Virginia, who drafted it.

The report points out that the investigation shows that when the federal troops arrived on the scene, quiet had been restored and no resistance was being made to the state authorities, who were arresting suspected persons as rapidly as possible.

Continuing, the minority report states that the president has kept and is still keeping soldiers in that community and by doing so is upholding the tyrannical course of conduct pursued by the governor of Idaho.

The report then points out what it considers flagrant instances of abuse of power and violation of law by General Merriam. In summing up, the minority say that they are satisfied from the evidence adduced before the committee that Merriam was wholly mistaken as to his powers and duties, and that his conduct resulted in the gravest injustice to the liberty of individuals. Innocent men have been kept in prison for months without trial and have finally been discharged without any charges being preferred against them.

In conclusion, the minority holds that the president is not justified in keeping federal soldiers indefinitely in Shoshone county at the mere will of one man, when the legislature, the representative of the people, could and ought to have been convened and their wishes ascertained.

The conferees of the two houses of congress have agreed upon about two-thirds of the 185 items of disagreement on the sundry civil appropriation bill and have decided to report a disagreement on a hundred items. The items of disagreement include those making an appropriation for the St. Louis exposition and all those relating to rivers and harbors and lighthouses and public buildings.

Closed for All Time.

San Francisco, June 1.—Advices from Honolulu received per steamer Mariposa, which arrived today from Australian ports via Honolulu, state that on June 14 the United States consulate at Honolulu will be closed for all time. Consul Haywood will arrive at the island shortly with orders to that effect. The consulate in Honolulu has had a continuous existence of nearly 60 years.

BOER WAR WILL SOON END

SEEMS TO HAVE GIVEN UP HOPE

The Boers Are Preparing for a Last Stand but Realize Its Hopelessness—Johannesburg Peacefully Occupied.

London, June 4.—A cablegram from Lord Roberts, dated Johannesburg, has been received by the war office. It says:

"The occupation of Johannesburg passed off quite satisfactorily, thanks to the excellent arrangements made by Dr. Kraus, the Transvaal commandant here, and order prevailed throughout the town. Dr. Kraus met me on my entrance to Johannesburg and rode by my side to the government offices, where he introduced me to the heads of the several departments, all of whom acceded to my request that they would continue to carry on their respective duties until they could be relieved of them. Johannesburg is very empty, but a good crowd of people assembled in the main square by the time the British flag was being hoisted. A royal salute was fired and three cheers for the queen was given. At the end of the ceremonies the Seventh and Eleventh marched past, with the naval brigade, the heavy artillery and two brigade divisions of the Royal field artillery. General Ian Hamilton's column and the cavalry division and mounted infantry were too far away to take part in the ceremony.

"The Fourteenth and naval brigades have been left in Johannesburg to preserve order while the remainder of the force is encamped north of the town on the Pretoria road."

Kruger Is Out of Harm's Way.

Lorenzo Marquaz, June 4.—President Kruger yesterday was still at Machadodorp (about half way betewen Pretoria and the Portuguese frontier on the railroad between the Transvaal capital and Delagoa bay). Boer commandos, totalling about 10,000 men, held Saturday all the positions and hills around Pretoria. Another large command was at Bronkhurst spruit (about 40 miles from Pretoria), on the railroad leading to Delagoa bay. Telegraph communication with the Transvaal is closed to the public. Feverish excitement prevails here owing to the almost total absence of news from either side. The object of the trip here of Freichee Eloff, President Kruger's son-in-law, and Dr. Heyman, the president's physician, appears to have been to place a large amount of gold in safety.

Roberts Is Silent.

London, June 5.—London enjoyed Whitsun Monday bank holiday undisturbed by the descriptions of engagements between the British and Boers in South Africa, and the public here is full of confidence in Lord Roberts entering Pretoria before many hours have elapsed. The latest theory of the day is that Roberts is moving his flanks so as to envelop the Boers in the neighborhood of Pretoria.

In the Orange river colony the burghers are reported to be keeping a close watch on President Steyn to prevent him leaving the commandos in the lurch.

Cape Town, June 5.—The telegraph to Pretoria is still open, but the town is in great confusion. There has been a general exodus, among those taking part in it being the foreign fighting legion. Six special trains left on Wednesday, and one of them is reported to have been derailed. No British refugees have arrived.

Anti-Trust Measure.

Washington, June 4.—Only one vote was cast in the house Saturday against the Littlefield anti-trust bill, to amend the Sherman anti-trust act to make it more effective in the prosecution of trusts, their agents or attorneys.

Mr. Mann, republican, of Illinois, cast the negative vote. The ..., according to the statements of the republican leaders, goes to the limit of the authority of congress under the constitution. The bill declares every contract or combination in the form of a trust or conspiracy in restraint of commerce among the states or foreign nations illegal, and such party to such act or combination guilty of a crime, punishable by a fine of not less than $500 or more than $5000, and by imprisonment not less than six months or more than two years. It provides that any person injured by violation of the provisions of the law may recover threefold damages. The definition of "person" and "persons" in the recent law is enlarged so as to include the agents, officers or attorneys of corporations.

For purposes of commerce it declares illegal all corporations or associations formed or carrying on business for purposes declared illegal by the common laws, provides that they may be perpetually enjoined from carrying on interstate commerce and forbids them the use of the United States mails. It provides for the production of persons and papers, and confers jurisdiction upon United States circuit and district courts for the trial of cases under it, and authorizes any person, firm or corporation, or association to begin and prosecute proceedings under it.

Electricity in Capsules.

This new compound, which is made from cheap chemicals, is put up in capsule form and when added to a certain quantity of water will furnish electricity enough to light a house, drive an automobile or even a railroad train. But this is nothing compared to the strengthening power contained in a bottle of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. It cures indigestion, dyspepsia, biliousness, liver and kidney troubles and fills the system with the vigor of health.

Gomez Arrives at Havana.

Havana, June 5.—General Maximo Gomez has arrived here. He was met by representatives of the various political societies and an enthusiastic crowd. On reaching the palace Gomez stood up in his carriage and saluted General Wood, who was on the balcony.

Trade Report.

Bradstreet's weekly report says:

Readjustments of price quotations to meet the changed condition of supply and demand are still the leading features of the general trade. In volume the business doing is of a between season character, improvement in some lines being counterbalanced by increased dullness in other branches. That the basic conditions of the trade are in the main of a favorable nature, however, is proved by the continued good railroad earning returns which come to hand. The fact seems to be that the volume of business offered the transportation interests of the country continues considerably in excess of a year ago. Crop reports are relatively most favorable as regards corn and oats. In the southwest wheat crop prospects are still maintained at a high average. In the northwest wheat has been helped by late rains, but owing to their late arrival it is not certain how much benefit was obtained thereby.

Most prices are lower on the week, wheat noting a fractional drop, despite unfavorable French crop reports, where an enormous reduction in yield is predicted, and also rather blue reports from the northwest early in the week, mended in some respects by the rains mentioned. Pork products have sympathized with the downward tendency of values, aided thereby by increased receipts of hogs.

Some further liquidation has been noted in cotton, and the price has sunk to 9c. In textiles the situation is rather depressed, although some improvement in re-orders for dry goods is noted at leading jobbing centers. Print cloths have been marked down by the Fall River committee, but this is merely a tardy recognition of hitherto known facts. Manufacturers of woolen goods are out of the market for raw wool, and the outlook at present favors the light weight woolens opening at lower values. Boots and shoes are dull, and a number of eastern factories are short of orders.

The hand to mouth domestic demand for iron and steel continues, but the number of small orders received is taken to indicate that consumers are practically bare of stocks, and any general shutdown for a month's time, such as is proposed, might lead to a scramble for trade supplies.

Export business continues good, although limited by scarcity of freight room. Southern pig and steel rails note the most inquiry. The situation in the pipe market is no better, and plates are weaker. Concessions of fractions of a dollar are apparently easily obtained for pig iron, but throughout the trade the feeling is rather more cheerful, the feeling being that lower prices will on the one hand encourage consumptive demand, and on the other hand tend to restrict production by less economical plants. The settlement of the wage situation this year might also be a possible source of restriction of production.

Wheat (including flour) shipments for the week aggregate 4,533,140 bushels, against 3,698,968 bushels last week, 3,596,065 bushels in the corresponding week of 1899, and 5,247,085 in 1898.

Since July 1 this season the exports of wheat aggregate 182,916,596 bushels against 217,065,374 bushels last year, and 216,145,055 bushels in 1897-98.

Business failures for the week in the United States number 135, as compared with 167 last week, 120 in this week a year ago, and 178 in 1898. Business failures in Canada for the week number 21, as compared with 17 last week, 18 in this week a year ago, and 21 in 1898.

Li Hung Chang for Reform.

San Francisco, June 4.—Advices from Honolulu state that Li Hung Chang has written a lenghty letter to the Bow Wong adherents in Honolulu indorsing their cause and expressing a hope for the ultimate success of the Bow Wong reform movement. It is also said that the Bow Wong sympathizers in China have forwarded several thousand dollars to be distributed among the Chinese sufferers of the plague and fires in Honolulu. Long Yem Mann, a prominent merchant in Honolulu, in an interview stated that Li Hung Chang is favorable to the Bow Wong cause and that if the Wong adherents prove to him that they will protect the young emperor he will give them all the official encouragement and support in his power, whereat the Wongs of Honolulu express themselves as greatly encouraged and say they will carry out the work of the organization at the risk of their lives.

The Strike in St. Louis.

St. Louis, June 5.—Citizen members of the posse comitatus had their first active service Monday, when several companies were assigned to guard duty at the power house of the Transit company. About 900 deputies were armed yesterday and spent the day in drilling. None of the deputies will be sent out to guard the cars, police being retained for that purpose. All but two or three divisions of the Transit system are operating cars today. Interference with passengers in some sections of the city by the strike sympathizers is becoming serious. Men, women and children join in the assault on any one caught riding on the cars, sticks, stones and fists being used on all alike. Several women have been brutally beaten and had their clothes torn from their backs.

Neely Goes Back to Cuba.

New York, June 5.—Requisition papers having been signed by Governor Roosevelt, the federal government is making preparations for the transfer of Charles W. Neely to Havana.

It is believed that habeas corpus proceedings will immediately be brought in Neely's behalf, who is still confined in the Ludlow street jail.

The American Tin Plate Company has granted an advance of wages of 2 per cent to its 8000 employes.

MINES AND MINING NEWS

OUR NORTHWESTERN MINES.

Items Gleaned From Late Reports—All Districts Are Being Developed—A Prosperous Year Is Predicted—Mining Notes and Personals.

REPUBLIC.

A 50-pound sample has been taken from the south drift of the lower level of the San Poil, where across the face of the drift the ore body is five feet wide. The value was $136.30 per ton. This is the best yet obtained, and shows a wonderful improvement over the five assays of the past three days. In the stopes two samples were taken from a seven-foot face. One showed $29, and the other $27.07. Four samples were taken from the Black Tail stopes that showed values of $29.25, $156.15, $21 and $125. These were taken across the stopes at different places.

BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Work on the Silver Bell in McGuigan basin, near the Last Chance in the Slocan, will be started on Monday.

The upper ore bunkers of the War Eagle at Rossland have been destroyed by fire, inflicting a loss of $10,000. The fire started in the tramhouse, in which was located the machinery of the tramway.

In addition to a rotary mill, the Venus company near Nelson, B. C., is putting in a complete steam plant, consisting of a 40-horse power boiler, a 35-horse power automatic engine which will give sufficient surplus power to run some 200 electric lights for the mine and mill.

For some time the Old Ironside Mining Company has been getting ready to equip the two shafts on the property with steel cages. The first of these was placed in position in the No. 2 shaft Tuesday, and is now running in good shape to the 400-foot level.

The ore bins of the Old Ironsides, Knob Hill and Victoria mines at Phoenix camp are full to overflowing, containing between 8000 and 9000 tons of chalcopyrite ore. This will be shipped to the Granby smelter at Grand Forks as soon as the Canadian Pacific railroad is able to furnish the requisite cars.

Word has been received from the Inter-Mountain mine, in the Greenhorn district, that a rich body of ore has been cut in the Cayuse claim of the group, which gave values of $45 in gold. The strike was made at a depth of 140 feet in the tunnel. There has been stoped out a body of ore of this character 140 feet deep and 100 feet long.

MINING NOTES.

The excellent conditions existing in the Coeur d'Alenes are well illustrated by the enormous daily out put of the principal mines. The average per diem production from the 10 leading producers is approximately about as follows:—Bunker Hill & Sullivan, 1000 tons; Morning, 700 tons; Frisco, 750 tons; Standard, 700 tons, Tiger-Poorman, 500 tons; Mammoth, 300 tons; Hunter, 200 tons; Last Chance, 200 tons; Hecla, 150 tons; Silver King, 60 tons—A total of 4,560 tons.

A letter from the foreman of the Lily mine, received by President M. A. Dehuff yesterday, told of a big strike in the mine which will put in a prominent place among Washington producers if future developments keeps up the magnificent showing that has just been made. The strike is of a high grade free milling ore 20 feet wide at 185 feet in depth, and assaying from $10.20 to $178.75 in gold. The work on the Lily for some time has been the running of a cross-cut tunnel to explore the six ledges on the property. No. 1 ledge was cut some time ago 385 feet in. It was ten feet wide, with four feet of good milling ore. Drifts were run 25 feet both ways, and the good value and the amount of the ore was found to continue uniform. The present strike is the second ledge. It was first encountered several days ago at 415 feet in. Work was driven ahead to find its width with all haste, and the reaching of the opposite wall with 20 feet of ore has just been made. 12 assays were made across the cut, and the lowest was $10.20 with the next $22.60. The foreman, according to Thomas L. Brophy, the consulting engineer for the company, is a conservative and experienced miner, and his statements are thoroughly reliable, even under the excitement of so important a find.

One of the most important and valuable discoveries that has been made in the Baker City country for years is reported from the Greenhorn mining district. The discovery was made in an old placer mine that was thought to be worked out, but which was very rich in early days. The ground has been washed to a clay bed many years ago. This was supposed to be bed rock. While rigging out the roots of a petrified tree, a prospector recently discovered a bed of gravel lying underneath the clay. On prospecting the gravel, It was found to contain large quantities of gold. A nugget weighing $284 was taken out two days ago, and several smaller ones, weighing from $5 to $51 have been found. The mine is one and a half miles east of the Bonanza quartz ledge.

Reports of a rich strike in the Homestake and Nonpariel claims, owned by Wilson, Robinson, Johnson and Benson, came down to Baker City from the North fork of the John Day river last week. The new discovery is about six miles west of Lawton, on a line due north of the Red Boy and Concord mines. Returns from the surface gave average values of $8 per ton. The Homestake ledge is 17 feet wide, and the Nonpariel from $8 to $12. The discovery has created considerable excitement and many prospectors are headed that way.

Over three thousand men are idle owing to the fires in No. 2 Hecla shaft of the Calumet nd Hecla mine. The management decided to close down all except the north Hecla and Amydolid shafts on account of the gas from the fifth, which has gone to all parts of the Calumet branch and part of the Hecla. It can not be told how long the men will be idle. The fire may spread to other parts of the mines.

J. C. Kurtz and Norman Smith, who left Cape Nome March 16, two months later than any other arrivals, reached Seattle on the Bertha. They made the trip overland, and caught the Bertha at Kodiack. They refuse to tell their detailed route, but claim to have cut down the distance several hundred miles. They report that several thousand men are already at work on the partly frozen beach, and taking out good pay. Several new pay streaks have been found and a number of rich quartz strikes are reported. The miners have organized, and fix the amount of beach territory each man shall have. Every claim of any value in the entire country has been staked and restaked, and the new arrivals figure that it will take a year's solid legal work to establish the ownership. The miners say they will surrender the reins of government to General Randall upon his arrival.

A letter received from F. W. Rosenfelt, postmaster at Bodie, Wash., a mining man well known in Washington, gives the news of a rich strike in Toroda camp of ore running as high as $15.70 in gold and 255 ounces in silver.

The Palmer Mountain tunnel has reached over 3200 feet length and 1250 feet vertical depth. While the work in the tunnel changes little from month to month, there are always new features coming into the work.

The resuming of work on the Okanogan Free Gold Mines, following a reorganization of the company, shows about the same results with 10 stamps, the monthly returns being very uniform.

An accident occured in a little shack at one of the Pitney Butte mines recently. Three men had been drying some giant powder in the oven of the cook stove and on removing it a stick of powder was overlooked and left in the stove. Later in the evening the stick of powder exploded, completely demolishing the stove and blowing pieces of iron into the legs and bodies of the three men. Fred Teter was standing over the stove at the time. His legs, from the hips down, were cut and torn in a frightful manner. He was also bruised on the breast.

John and Charles Taylor of Farmington, have gone to the Mascott mining camp, taking their families and full equipment to spend the summer. These men are the discoverers and owners of the Mother lode the original quartz discovery of the district, on which they have a two-stamp mill.

Now comes the news that the famous Dewey is again running into native copper. The ore taken from the upper tunnel went as high as fifty per cent in copper, and it is believed that it will be even richer in the lower tunnel which they are now working and in which they are finding the native copper. It lies a short distance south of the Humboldt and also adjoins the new town. The Dewey is considered by mining experts to be a wonder, not because of the size of the ore body, but because of the high grade ore found.

Are Landing Troops.

Tien Tsin, June 1.—American, British, Japanese, German, Italian, Russian and French troops to the number of 100 each have been ordered to guard their respective legations at Peking, but the viceroy here will not allow them to proceed hence to Peking on the railway without the authority of the Tsung Li Yamen.

One hundred and eight Americans with a machine gun and a field gun landed here Tuesday night, amid great enthusiasm on the part of the residents. Five Russian and one British warship have arrived at Taku, and the British are now landing. Other warships are hourly expected.

Three thousand Chinese troops from Lu Tai are expected here today en route to Fang Tai. There is a disposition to believe that the "Boxers" will disperse before the foreign troops are ready to act.

It is hinted in diplomatic circles that this sudden increase of activity on the part of the Boxers is nothing more than a part of a well conceived plan by England or one of the great European powers to secure a permanent lodgment in Peking. It is further intimated that the plan has proved abortive, owing to the alertness of other European powers represented in Chinese waters.

Boers Still Fighting.

London, June 1.—The war office has received from Lord Roberts a dispatch dated Germistown, saying: The brunt of the fighting fell upon Ian Hamilton's column. I have sent him, as already mentioned, to work around to the west of Johannesburg in support of French's cavalry, which was directed to go north near the road leading to Pretoria. I have not heard from French yet, but Hamilton, in a report which has just reached me, states that at about 1 o'clock in the afternoon he found his way blocked by the enemy strongly posted on some kopjes and ridges three miles south of the Rand. They had two heavy guns and several field guns and pom-poms. Hamilton forthwith attacked.

Veterans of the civil war are dying off at the rate of about 3 1-2 per cent per annum. Commissioner Evans estimates that there are about 925,000 survivors of the civil war. Of this number, there were on the pension rolls last year 724,467. During the year 24,787 pensioned veterans died.

The strike at the Westerly (R. I.) granite works has been settled, the men securing the 8-hour day and $3.

WOMAN'S REALM

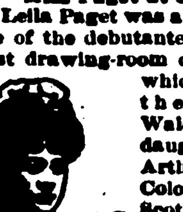
BEAUTY'S GRAVEST FOE.

BAD temper and worry will trace more wrinkles in one night than hot and cold bathing and massage and complexion brushes and creams and lotions can wash out in a year's faithful application. Physicians assert that an immense amount of nerve force is expended in every fit of bad temper; that when one little part of the nervous system gets wrong the face first records it. The eyes begin losing the luster of youth, muscles become flabby, the skin refuses to contract accordingly, and the inevitable result is wrinkles, femininity's fiercest and most insidious foe. There is no use attempting to reason with a woman about the evil ffects of ill-temper while she is in an ugly mood. She knows perfectly well that it is bad form; that it savors of the coarse and underbred; that it is weak and belittling and immoral, and that it hurts her cause to lose her temper. But she does not stop at just that time to think about it, and to remind her of the fact only adds fuel to the flames.

But when she is cool and serene and at peace with the world, if you can convince her that each fit of temper adds a year to her age by weakening her mental force and by tracing crow-tracks about her eyes and tell-tale lines around her mouth, she will probably think twice before again forgetting herself. For no matter what she asserts to the contrary, woman prizes youth and beauty above every other gift the gods hold it in their power to bestow upon mortals.—Woman's Home Companion.

Miss Paget at Court.

Miss Leila Paget was among the most notable of the debutantes presented at the first drawing-room of the season, which was held by the Princess of Wales. She is the daughter of Col. Arthur Paget, the Colonel of the Scots Guards, who is serving in South Africa, and Mrs. Arthur Paget, who was Miss Paran Stevens. Mrs. Arthur Paget, who inherited her great wealth from her father, occupies a leading position in London society, as was shown by the success of the brilliant tableaux vivants entertainment she recently arranged in aid of a war charity fund.



MISS PAGET.

The Woman Physician.

The London school of medicine for women, in its report for 1899, appends a list of 254 medical women it has trained. They seem now to be called to the furthest ends of the earth to serve in hospitals and as medical missionaries. Nearly every important town in India has a qualified woman physician. China claims a large number. Even Persia claims one, and South Africa has several. Among the different posts held by women doctors are those of medical examiner to a life insurance company and to the women's staffs of postoffices. Women are medical inspectors to high schools for girls, and to children boarded out under the Church of England society for waifs and strays.—Chicago Times-Herald.

The Mistaken Man.

The man who thinks that women are angels.

The man who thinks he can keep house better than his wife does.

The man who cannot remember his wife's birthday.

The man who forgets his manners as soon as he crosses his own threshold.

The man who labors under the delusion that his wife's money belongs to him.

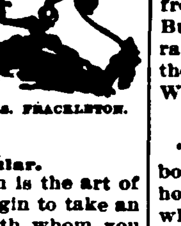
The man who thinks that nobody but an angel is good enough to be his wife.

The man who thinks that his wife exists for the comfort and convenience of his mother and sisters.

The man who thinks there is "no place like home" for grumbling and growling.—Palmyra Spectator.

Woman Artist.

Mrs. Susan Stuart Frackleton, of Milwaukee, is well known in Europe and America as a ceramic artist. She has written a number of valuable books on china painting, and perfected several inventions which simplify the mechanical processes of the art. She is the only woman in the country who exhibited at the Centennial among the men.



MRS. FRACKLETON.

How to Be Popular.

What you want to learn is the art of self-forgetfulness, and begin to take an interest in the people with whom you are thrown in contact during the evening. Probably your idea of a popular girl is above all others the girl who can talk, but has it ever occurred to you that the art of being a good listener in these rushing days, when every other person you meet is overflowing with importance and talk of their own affairs, is now considered a most attractive thing in a girl?

Most people, you know, love the sound of their own voice, and their vanity is sure to be pleased when they find a congenial soul who is content to simply listen and let them do all the talking. So when you meet anyone, be it man or woman, and they have a particular fad or a hobby, as you will find nearly every one has these days, let them talk on it; above all things [show] them you are interested and in sympathy with them. Just try this and see if the charm doesn't work. "Charm," David Dudley Field defines it, is the ability to place yourself and others at the best.

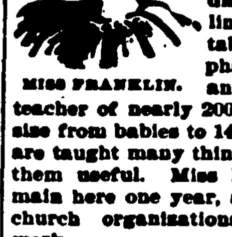
The bell-shaped or slightly-flowing sleeve is seen upon all the most recent coats, whether of Eton or long-cut, and no fashionable woman can afford to ignore its presence. Sometimes the flaring bell is finished at the head in scallops, or often with a band of stitching silk or several bands of narrow-fringed braid. When the bell cuff does not appear, a deep-turned back one is used to give much the same effect of a sleeve that widens as it reaches the wrist.

The solid and substantial silks have receded far into the dim past. No one pines nowadays for "a silk waist that will stand alone." Everything must be soft and clinging and picturesque while it has not the severe plainness of the tailor made. Even the rustling taffeta, so long popular, has been pushed aside by the apparently unaggressive foulard. Crepe de chine has resumed the sway it held some years ago, and has been apotheosized in a fabric like, yet unlike, called satin crepe de chine—an exquisite thing with the softness and sheen of dew on a cobweb. The satin foulard is a similar evolution of the somewhat commonplace silk that so long has represented "beautiful utility" in the wardrobe of the well-dressed woman.

A revival of the no-collared bodice is rumored. Women with round, white throats may be depended on to push the fashion for all there is in it. The cut advanced stops the neck finish at the collar band. The round must come at the very beginning of the rise of the neck; in other words, at the most trying place. To take out a little more runs the gown toward evening cut. Some stage beauties have worn lace-covered gowns of delicate color and successfully stopped at the rise of the neck, especially when strand of pearls were clasped about the throat. The only dress seen of black in this cut was rather trying, though the woman's throat was lovely. For receiving gowns the neck may be squared down a little bit front and back, but this line at the side must touch the rise of the neck.

Returned Missionary.

Miss Josephine Franklin has returned to her home, in Bedford, Ind., after an absence of seven years as a missionary near Bombay, India. She is the daughter of Joseph Franklin, a minister of the Christian church, well known over Indiana. Miss Franklin assisted in establishing the orphanage at Damoh, and has charge as a teacher of nearly 200 boys, ranging in size from babies to 14 years. The boys are taught many things that will make them useful. Miss Franklin will remain here one year, and will speak to church organizations regarding the work.



MISS FRANKLIN.

Where the Fault Lies.

Women make society; they are accountable largely for the faults of the male portion of it, at least for the growth and extent of fault; if men fall short it is because women have not demanded higher standards. And if the woman who works is not treated with the same courtesy as she whose delicately gloved hand holds her own bank book, it is the fault of that same dainty hand which is not held out in kind comradeship to one that wields pencil or scissors. Men get their cue from woman's treatment of woman. But men are rarely unkind; theirs is rather the absence of kindness; and of the two the latter were preferable.—Woman's Home Companion.

Packing Books.

"If you will only pack things in small boxes," says the woman who knows how to move, "you will have the men who move you in a comparatively beatific state of mind. Books, for instance. It is strange, but every woman who has books to move immediately gets the biggest box she can find for them. Books are heavy anyway, and big boxes are liable to break with their weight, and it is almost impossible to move them. They will fit just as well into small square boxes in which packages of starch or oatmeal have come, and they will pack into the moving van better and the men can handle great numbers of them with little trouble."

Dress of the British Soldier.

The British soldier's dress was not always red. It was white in the reign of Henry VIII., and dark-green in the time of Elizabeth.

—A rancher near Bonner's Ferry sold over one hundred dollars worth of strawberries from less than an acre, and sold $60 worth of hay from one acre. This country of ours only needs advertising to double the population quickly.

—The Lewiston Patriot, by F. M. Roberts, is no more. It got aboard the cars and was taken to Orofino, where there is more congenial surroundings. Editor Roberts is an entertaining writer.

—Lewiston has been a hot political storm center. Monday the democrats held their county convention and the anti-Steunenberg captured the delegates after one of the stormiest bouts ever taken place in north Idaho. All the names known to man and not found in the vocabulary were hurled at one another, when finally the minority chaps withdrew from the convention. The Tribune says much bad feeling was engendered. The following day the state convention took place. In selecting a temporary chairman another storm cloud arose. The Steunenberg forces were worsted in a close vote. Mr. Jackson was selected and made an eloquent talk. A contesting delegation from Shoshone county was a bone of contention, both factions be determined to gain admittance. The day was fritted away and nothing was accomplished. The selection of six men to go to the Kansas City convention was a question of importance to the governor. Adjournment was taken to Wednesday and in the mean time James Hamilton Lewis made the people a masterly address. Wednesday was occupied in sparring for points and adjournment was secured at night. The administration delegates from Shoshone county were seated. The following gentlemen were named to go to the national convention: Col. W. H. Dewey, W. B. McFarland, J. W. Reid, E. J. Dockery, C. O. Stockslager, John Brown. The Tribune feels sore, and it has a right to feel that way, because the convention failed to endorse the state administration. It had nothing to say regarding Steunenberg's action in the Cœur d'Alene riots, in suppressing murder, robbery, etc. The antis had the sinch. The Tribune says: "Speaking as one who expects and desires nothing from party politics except to see the largest possible agencies at work for the common good, to see the whole people happy and prosperous, the government clean and strong and honest, and just laws faithfully and efficiently enforced, the Tribune should have been glad to have had the party write in plain and thrilling words the commendation and encomium due to the faithful executive and sterling men for the courage, fidelity and efficiency with which the public business has been administered in its present hands." And the Tribune is the governor's organ.

—Gen. Otis is on American soil once more. Says the islands are rich and the American soldiers standing the campaign very well. Gen. Otis will make a statement regarding the Philippine war, the present state and future prospects of the islands.

—The Boer war is believed to be practically over. With the occupation of Pretoria by the British troops hostilities must cease. The fear that any considerable body of the Boers will carry on a guerrilla warefare against the English is not felt by those who know the character of the men in the Orange Free State and the Transvaal republic. They are a home-loving, law-abiding people, having none of the traits that usually belong to the guerrilla type. When they went to war they knew they could not whip England unless they secured aid from some other power. When their appeals were denied they gave way and are prepared to recognize the futility of further fighting. The Boer towns and settlements will continue to be controlled by them as in the past, the same as the people of the South—they manage their affairs the same after the civil war as before. The English politicians will do the bulk of the fighting in South Africa from this on.

It was he who came to Genesee in '92 on a similar mission and returned greatly disappointed. We remember this game as though it took place last week. Considerable Lewiston cash remained in Genesee as a result of that exciting combat.

—At Monday's election in Oregon the republicans carried the state by a larger majority then they did four years ago, thus giving Bryan little encouragement in his race for the presidential chair. McKinley won the state four years ago by 2117 votes. The fusionists won in 1892 by 811. Republicans won two years ago by 10,000, and this year by about 8,000. Oregon, being a Western state and in close sympathy with those of the Rocky mountain region, its decision will have some significance. Yet the West cuts little figure in the election of a president.

—A fine boy was born to Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Power Thursday morning, but it was not permitted to live long. It was buried in the Genesee cemetery at four o'clock in the afternoon.

—Miss Kate M. Higgins arrived in Genesee from Chicago the past week to visit her brother and family. She thinks Idaho a charming spot and was pleased with her brother's home.

—The Rebekahs elected officers for the ensuing term as follows:

May Hobson, N. G.
Clara Hanson, V. G.
Mabel Montgomery, R. C.
Sadie Follett, S. C.

—Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Herman, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Welch, J. H. Gaffney and Fred Follett attended the Lewiston convention this week. The convention lasted so long, on account of so much harmony, that they came home before the real work was performed. Report Lewiston a hot place.

—It will be up to the council again for consideration. The members will have another opportunity to grapple with the sidewalk question—whether to have the city own the walks or the property owners. A petition was circulated this week, and of course signed by many, as all petitions are, asking the august body to deliberate on this important question and if found practicable, adopt the system. It is claimed if the city owns the walks they will be kept up better and will be more uniform at no extra expense to the property owners.

—Carpenters are all at work. Mr. Stamps has lots of work ahead.

—Mr. and Mrs. Stuart have moved into the Burr residence opposite the Methodist church.

—The city is putting down pipes for drainage purposes. The pipes look small but it is thought they will answer every purpose in a town situated like Genesee.

—Fred Nagel and J. L. Goodnight started for the Montana ranges, Wednesday, with fifteen carloads of cattle Dr. Scroggins and Paul Rock accompanied the gentlemen.

—J. L. Naylor was around Wednesday advertising the pioneer picnic to come off next Friday. He recently purchased the Vennigerholz farm and is now harvesting his turnip and mustard crop.

—H. B. Hodgins is nearly through making improvements on his premises. He has added more room to his house, re-arranged the interior, papered and painted, improved the yard in front and in the rear. Not a finer place in Genesee.

—The Woodmen of the World had a good turn out last Sunday at their decorating of the graves. The members marched to the cemetery with flowers, many carrying an ax to blaze their way through the timber. They will go to Moscow next Sunday to assist in the unveiling.

—Gus Peterson, after visiting Seattle, Tacoma, Portland and other coast cities for two weeks, returned home Tuesday, alone. He enjoyed his trip, but he saw no country while away that looked as fine to him as the Genesee valley. Saw the Levy people in Seattle and reports them prosperous and happy.

—The pastor of the Methodist church left this week to attend the District Conference at Leland, from Thursday the 7th to the 10th. The conference will be followed with a camp meeting. The following persons are in attendance from Genesee: Rev. J. M. Harris and wife, Mrs. Phoebe Rogers, Miss Carrie Whitted, Miss Mabel Houston and Johnnie Spencer. There will be no preaching next Sunday Sunday school at 10 o'clock a. m.; Epworth League at 7 o'clock.

—Marshal Driscoll had but one case before the magistrate this week and that was caused by the dog poisoner.

—Wm. Chamberlain, a prosperous farmer near Moscow, twin brother of Mrs. Thompson's mother, visited here Saturday and Sunday.

—Henry Flomer is a pretty happy man since the advent of a new boy at his home. We smoked to the kid's health—long life to him.

—Miss Teresa Bomberg arrived in Genesee from British Columbia the past week to spend a portion of the summer with her sister, Mrs. Nagel.

—We are told that yellow bloom we see east and southwest of town is not mustard but wild turnip. Should be plowed under and not allowed to go to seed.

—J. R. Collins and J. L. Whitted, two old Juliaettaites, were Genesee visitors Tuesday. Mr. Collins is an old timer and said he never saw better prospects for big crops than we have at the present time.

—The dog poisoner is again at work and no less than half a dozen canines have ceased to bark. The large black dog of Rue Burdic's is no more. The man with the poison had better make tracks out of town.

—The new brick just turned out in Genesee are pronounced superior to any shipped in from outside points. NEWS is glad to hear this. Buy home brick and help home industry. Keep money at home and help to build up Genesee.

—The last hours of congress were utilized by members in throwing hot words at one another. Lentz and Pettigrew as usual made fools of themselves. One consolation, their time in the halls of congress is drawing to a close and we will see but little more of them.

—Here is a good one on somebody. H. A. Morgan on the Rim Rock was invited to attend a caucus as the good people desired him to represent them at the Lewiston convention. Being a newcomer he did not know the political complexion of his neighbors whom he accompanied to the meeting. About the close of the meeting Mr. Morgan discovered that it was a democratic love-feast and here he put in a vigorous protest—said he was a republican and could not serve them at the convention. The matter created considerable laughter, but it was a close call for H. A.

Four women in a buggy were driving on a road across the railroad tracks in Ohio recently, when a train came whizzing by. At the sensitive time the whistle, "for down." The horse ran away, the women were thrown down an embankment, and the railroad company had a just suit for damages. It is not reported how much the "fun" cost the joker, personally, but we suspect that he does not now control a whistle on that line.

In the interest of public decency, the City Council of Mount Vernon, N. Y., has passed an ordinance, two years and a half ago, providing, under penalty, that one handbill, circular or poster of any kind should be displayed in that city without being submitted to the Mayor for approval. The present Mayor writes that, although the ordinance is most stringently enforced, it has proven a burden and a restraint, so that theatrical companies and bill-posters are very careful as to the class of advertising matter they distribute in the city. This plan seemed more effective and less vexatious than the prosecution of particular offenders.

Prof. Pictet, of Switzerland, has discovered a method of extracting oxygen from the air. With an expenditure of 800 horse power 50,000 cubic feet of oxygen can be obtained from the air. The commercial use of this oxygen, it is said, will be to produce higher temperatures in furnaces. In the process of course, the oxygen will be converted into carbonic oxide which is a poisonous gas. This discovery has led some thoughtful men to asking whether or not modern invention may not become a menace to human life by exhausting the life-giving properties of the atmosphere. As the atmosphere is pretty large and the invention is not likely to come into general use for several generations there is no immediate call for an injunction against the inventors. Nevertheless the time may come when some big trust will get a corner on the air in its immediate neighborhood and like the highwayman demand your money or your life.

A Philadelphia judge has denounced the habit of women carrying their purses in their hands. The denunciation was caused by the trial before him of a man who had snatched a pocketbook from a woman. As the woman kept her presence of mind, gave chase to the thief, and called for aid, the man was captured almost immediately. The Judge sentenced the culprit to two years in prison, and then, looking at the prosecuting witness, said: "The careless manner in which women carry their purses nowadays imposes an unnecessary burden upon the police, though their conviction is no excuse for theft." The subject of a woman's pocket and the carrying of her purse in hand is not a new one. No adequate solution seems to have been suggested. If she carries her purse in her hand it is likely to be snatched. Usually she has no pocket, and if she had one it is made use of it the purse might cause the pocket to bulge, which would spoil the fit of the gown. If the Philadelphia Judge would devote his energy and talents to devising some solution of this question of feminine purses he would be a benefactor to his race and human race. If he cannot do so his criticisms are not likely to be heeded.

If women are not to be reached on the bird millinery question on moral or esthetic grounds, if they refuse to see the cruelty and the ugliness of modern millinery, there is still the financial ground upon which they may be met. Of course, this is putting the matter into the hands of man, for the ladies he still pays the majority of the millinery bills, and if tradition be true he will welcome any cause for complaint. Let him refuse to pay for the bird hat or to be seen in company with its wearer. There have been societies formed having for their object the purpose of boycotting the smoker, and why should not men thus protect themselves against a worse evil? Of course, some women go so far as to wear the four-and-twenty blackbirds gathered into a pie for masculine consumption is a great deal more sinful than wearing the placing of this same feathered tribe upon a hat for the gratification of "female vanity." And deep in the feminine heart lies the conviction that if tobacco plants were live things there would never be any protest against the sin of taking life for personal gratification. But a opportunities for admonishment are rare, and though he himself is an imperfect being, let him not throw a stone at those who exhibit his disapproval and hurl masculine maledictions at this wanton display of "female vanity."

At every meeting of secondary teachers addresses are made urging the importance of thorough instruction in English. This is not only proof that English is now taught thoroughly in most schools, but it also shows an awakened interest which cannot fail to be of effect. The time may come when English will be studied as much in English schools as French is in the French school or German is in those of Prussia. One of the best addresses on the teaching of English was that by Mrs. May Wright Sewall, teacher, clubwoman and author, at the North Central Association's meeting in Des Moines. She declared that the defects which exist in teaching composition in the secondary schools may be traced directly and principally to defects in elementary teaching in composition. Children are not taught from the start correct sentence structure, pains, and the habit of selecting the right word and careful punctuation. Just as a foreign language can be most easily assimilated by a young child so can these fundamental elements of composition be most easily acquired, not only as matters of knowledge but as habit by children in the primary grades. As such instruction is seldom given in the lower grades pupils are weak in the mechanical part of composition. A point made by Mrs. Sewall is that the teacher of English in secondary schools ought to realize that in all his intercourse with his pupils he is teaching them English, and many times the defects in English which the teacher condemns in a large portion of the recitation time in endeavoring to correct have been acquired through the hours when not teaching English and he was, so to speak, off his guard. It is also true that teachers of other subjects than English are careful in their use of language, and while giving instruction in mathematics or history a teacher may be unconsciously giving his pupils direct instruction in bating or a bad one in a hippergrass."—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Oil Lighthouses.

The oldest lighthouse in existence is believed to be that at Corunna, Spain. It was built in the reign of Trajan and reconstructed in 1584. Britain and France have lighthouses which were built by the Roman conquerors. The famous Cordovan Tower of France at the mouth of the Gironde, in the Bay of Biscay, was completed in 1611, in the reign of Henry IV. After standing for years it was still considered by Sir Walter Scott as one of the finest lighthouses in the world, although its height has been increased. The famous Pharos of Alexandria antedates both of the above by many years, as it was built 250 B. C., but it is not always considered a lighthouse.

THE AMERICAN NEGRO TO-DAY.

New Generation Objects to Thorough Industrial Training Work.

The distaste which the new generation of blacks feel for thorough and continuous work is most conspicuously shown in their objection to following trades, says the Contemporary Review. Owing to the distance caused by the size of the estates in the age of slavery, which made it inconvenient to send for white mechanics, who generally lived in the villages, it was the custom to train negroes to most of the common handicrafts. There were blacksmiths, carpenters, wheelwrights, masons, bricklayers, shoemakers and saddlers on all of the most extensive plantations, and many of these men were very skilful in their trades. They had from boyhood served an apprenticeship with older slaves, and for years had been called on to do a great quantity of work. A craft was often passed down from father to son, and had thus, on the same estate, been in the hands of the members of the same family for a century or more. One may travel now many hundreds of miles through the rural districts of the South and not come upon a single black mechanic. And this seems all the more remarkable when it is recalled that in the numerous colleges for the higher education in all parts of the Southern States manual tasks have been used as an important branch of the system of instruction. The graduates of these industrial schools either give up their trades altogether or they do not return to their old haunts and rural districts as the most promising field for such pursuits. In most cases the trades are abandoned, because to follow them would make necessary a coaching and practice daily in one place. White men have practically usurped all the handicrafts in the rural districts, while the negroes still continue to look to the tasks of the field for subsistance. These tasks they can drop in one locality without risking their chance of securing work in another, but not so the case if they were mechanics. Such tasks they can also perform with as many intervals of indolence as they like.

He Missed the Motive.

This is a story which Representative Eddy of Minnesota tells on himself. Mr. Eddy not only enjoys the situation when the laugh is turned against him, but has a sense of humor which leads him to start the laugh sometimes himself.

"In making the campaign in my district one year," said Mr. Eddy, "I took along as an attraction a veteran of the war of 1812 and of the civil war who was a famous hand at boating the drum. He was a drummer from away back, and could beat about the same time a colonel, his wife and his daughter. Apparently they did not intend to reside here permanently—they took a furnished house by the month—however.

"I met the three of them in the gardens constantly. Like myself, they had obtained a private pass and used to stroll about in the early morning to eat. They were seldom in the gardens when the general public were admitted.

"To be candid with you, the beauty of the colonel's daughter was to me far more enchanting than the beauty of the gardens. Yes, it was a case of love at first sight.

"I am not going to describe her except to say that every man before he reaches my age experiences the sort of infatuation that I did once, and to him but it takes a genius to hold a child.

"So, after the speaking, I went down and spoke to the little fellow, and after I had shaken hands with him asked him how he liked my speech.

"'Oh, it will do,' he said; 'but if I was you I would keep the captain a-drummin' all the time.'"—Washington Star.

Youthful Classification.

In this household the true and only Vermont maple sirup has never lost its delicious flavor, and several times a week from the head of the table paterfamilias pours out judiciously measured quantities of it on the plates of his offspring. To give piquancy to the ceremony, he always explains that this time he is going to give Bob an ostrich and Mary a crocodile, with something else from the nursery books for Teddy. One day the latter small philosopher was seen to regard the various plates for a considerable space of time in silence. "What is it, Edward?" his mother asked.

"Why, Muffin," replied the hopeful. "I was just finkin' that me an' Bob an Masie allus seems to get birds an' snakes an' flings wiv skinny legs, but pop he gets really quite a elephant or a hippergrass."—New York Commercial Advertiser.

A Beauty of the Arctic.

There is a beautiful bird called the ivory gull, a few specimens of which exist in any museum, and whose entire life is spent in the immediate neighborhood of the eternal ice that surrounds the north pole. A paper describing these curious birds was read at the recent meeting of the American Association in Boston by John Murdoch. They follow the advance of the ice toward the south as winter comes on, keeping near the loose edge of the floating pack ice, and then retreat with it toward the north when the summer sun begins to rise high upon the Arctic circle. The bird is small and of a deep rose color, whereas all other gulls are white.

Angora's Silky Fur.

A recent writer on the Angora goat calls attention to the fact that the climate of Angora possesses some remarkable peculiarity causing the development of a silky coat on animals of various kinds. Not only the famous goats which produce mohair, are thus furnished, but a similar tendency is exhibited among such animals as cats and greyhounds living in the same country.

Some men think they are good citizens because there is no snow on their grains in July.

PLANT NO. 9,063.

MY friend Wilmore told me a surprising story the other day. Doctors—and Wilmore is one—do meet with surprising cases at times. Wilmore invited me to spend a few days with him at his pretty villa overlooking the Royal gardens at Kew. On the first evening of my visit I sat with him on the balcony of an upper room.

Close to us was the great palm house. Wilmore pointed to it.

"Whenever I look at that house," he said, "I think of the events of a night that I spent in it with a man who would have committed murder had it not been instrumental in preventing him."

I did what any one else would have done—asked Wilmore to tell his story.

"Don't mind if I do," he replied, "only I must not be too long about it."

"Well, it is almost twenty-five years since I settled down to this wonderful garden. I put up my brass plate and waited for patients. I could do this with little anxiety, for I had a slight income to keep me going.

"There came to Kew about the same time a colonel, his wife and his daughter. Apparently they did not intend to reside here permanently—they took a furnished house by the month.

"That evening the director of the gardens was to hold an at home. I decided to go, to confide in the director. He had given me many invitations to the Thug plant might be in the gardens. I found the director's house crowded—it was an old-fashioned place, with lots of rooms. When the host saw the urgency of my case, he arranged with some special friends to go through the conservatories with me alone. Then he listened patiently to all I had to say, making particular inquiries concerning the Thug plant.

"'We have a specimen,' he said, 'if you come with me, we will obtain more information about it.'

"In a few moments we had crossed Kew Green and entered the herbarium, having with us the curator, one of the guests. We consulted there a ponderous book and read all about the Thug plant and its properties. Then we went to a department containing a multitude of drawers, labeled and numbered. An envelope, or capsule was produced. As the curator opened it I exclaimed:

"'That's it! I smell it from here!'

"'Has any one lately inquired about this plant?' asked the director.

"The curator again consulted the books.

"'There is an entry here—yes, Colonel ——— made special inquiries about the Thug plant, and was taken to see it in the palmhouse.'

"The director asked its number.

"'Nine thousand and sixty-three,' was the reply.

"'We will go to the palm house,' said the director, 'and have a look at nine thousand and sixty-three and see if it has been disturbed. I believe it is a good size. It is some time since I saw it on its arrival.'

"He procured a dark lantern and the key to the palm house. We started for it. The director told me what he knew of the colonel and family. It had occurred to me many times how little the girl resembled the colonel. She was his step-daughter, I was now told. The colonel's wife knew the girl's mother. She had married a second time. In a few months on coming of age the girl would inherit a considerable fortune—the reversion of her property in case of her death would be to the mother—and that,' said the director, 'is likely the colonel.'

"We were going through the herbaceous garden and just emerged into an avenue when we saw a figure passing the other end of the avenue.

"'Who's that?' said the director in a low tone.

"'The colonel!' I answered, grasping his arm.

"'What is he about?' he asked.

"'Let us follow,' I said, 'and carefully, lest he may see the plant.'

"Down through the avenue of cypress trees we kept the colonel's shadow in view. Then we watched him pausing along the margin of the ornamental water. The shrill cry of a startled sea gull made us clutch one another.

"'Let us stand here,' said the director. 'We can watch the house well.' We stood by a magnolia. The colonel, with rapid strides, made for the great house of glass. He had to cross a wide, unsheltered space. My companion has had his doubts, but the identity of the figure was now too clear.

"'It's he!' he ejaculated.

"The colonel went round to a side entrance. We glided round also to keep him in view.

"'Why,' said the director, 'he's in without a key! Some one has been bribed. We will go to the opposite door. I know where the plant is.'

"We went. Outside the door we removed our boots. Taking them with us, we crept in like burglars.

"The colonel's shadow reached the foot of a winding iron stairway, partly hidden by creeping plants and the surrounding palms and shrubs. We ascended noiselessly.

"Presently the director caught my arm, stopped me and pointed below. There was the colonel. He was leaning against a palm trunk looking down intently at a bush covered with a white cloth.

"For five hours we remained there, stirring only to ease our positions.

"As morning approached we saw the colonel look at his watch, which he had done many times, then remove the bandage from the plant, fold it, place it in what was plainly an oilskin case and put it in his pocket. He left it as stealthily as he came in. So did we.

"We followed him to his house. He opened the door with a latchkey.

"Some thousand and sixty-three," was the reply.

"'Sir,' said the director, 'we must be admittance.

"'Colonel,' said the director, 'we must speak to you.'

"'Why now?' he answered.

"He was shaking with fear. The surprise was too much for him. He staggered to a sofa in the hall and lost all control of his muscles also. He recognized the director, and doubtless he knew me also. We held him each by an arm, because he fell on the floor unless and put him in a chair. He was in a pitiful condition. I saw what was coming on; I was paralyzed at the sight.

"I need not say that the stepdaughter recovered. I believe she is gossiping with the director's wife at this moment. When next you meet them I introduce you. She's my wife."—Waverley.

A Sugar Barrel.

"A sugar barrel, boys!" What a scampering that announcement used to cause among the boys in the vicinity of a country store, a few years ago, since a settled home was the wonderful garden. I put up my brass plate and waited for patients. I could do this with little anxiety, for I had a slight income to keep me going.

"There came to Kew about the same time a colonel, his wife and his daughter. Apparently they did not intend to reside here permanently—they took a furnished house by the month.

"That evening the director of the gardens was to hold an at home. I decided to go, to confide in the director. He had given me many invitations to the Thug plant might be in the gardens. When the host saw the urgency of my case, he arranged with some special friends to go through the conservatories with me alone. Then he listened patiently to all I had to say, making particular inquiries concerning the Thug plant.

"'We have a specimen,' he said, 'if you come with me, we will obtain more information about it.'

"In a few moments we had crossed Kew Green and entered the herbarium, having with us the curator, one of the guests. We consulted there a ponderous book and read all about the Thug plant and its properties. Then we went to a department containing a multitude of drawers, labeled and numbered. An envelope, or capsule was produced. As the curator opened it I exclaimed:

"'That's it! I smell it from here!'

"'Has any one lately inquired about this plant?' asked the director.

"The curator again consulted the books.

"'There is an entry here—yes, Colonel ——— made special inquiries about the Thug plant, and was taken to see it in the palmhouse.'

"The director asked its number.

"'Nine thousand and sixty-three,' was the reply.

"'We will go to the palm house,' said the director, 'and have a look at nine thousand and sixty-three and see if it has been disturbed. I believe it is a good size. It is some time since I saw it on its arrival.'

"He procured a dark lantern and the key to the palm house. We started for it. The director told me what he knew of the colonel and family. It had occurred to me many times how little the girl resembled the colonel. She was his step-daughter, I was now told. The colonel's wife knew the girl's mother. She had married a second time. In a few months on coming of age the girl would inherit a considerable fortune—the reversion of her property in case of her death would be to the mother—and that,' said the director, 'is likely the colonel.'

"We were going through the herbaceous garden and just emerged into an avenue when we saw a figure passing the other end of the avenue.

"'Who's that?' said the director in a low tone.

"'The colonel!' I answered, grasping his arm.

"'What is he about?' he asked.

"'Let us follow,' I said, 'and carefully, lest he may see the plant.'

"Down through the avenue of cypress trees we kept the colonel's shadow in view. Then we watched him pausing along the margin of the ornamental water. The shrill cry of a startled sea gull made us clutch one another.

"'Let us stand here,' said the director. 'We can watch the house well.' We stood by a magnolia. The colonel, with rapid strides, made for the great house of glass. He had to cross a wide,

Mrs. Cohn Writes to Mrs. Pinkham, Follows Her Advice and is Made Well.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—For nearly two and one-half years I have been in feeble health. After my little child came it seemed I could not get my strength again. I had chills and the severest pains in the muscles and back of head and an almost insensible at times. I also have a pain just to the right of breast bone. It is so severe at times that I cannot lie on my right side. Please write me what you think of my case."—MRS. CLARA GATES, Johns P. O., Miss., April 25, 1898.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as advised by you, and send you a letter for publication. For several years I was in such wretched health that life was a burden to me. I could hardly walk across the floor, was so feeble. Several of our best physicians attended me, but failed to help. I concluded to write to you for advice. In a few days I received such kind, motherly letter. I followed your instructions and was cured. I am well again. Was greatly benefited before I had used one bottle. May God bless you for what you are doing for suffering women."—MRS. CLARA GATES, Johns P. O., Miss., Oct. 6, 1899.

Missing Rifles Recovered.

Manila, Aug. 4.—Colonel Emerson H. Liscum of the Twenty-fourth infantry at Tarlac, island of Luzon, reports the efforts of the local president, have resulted in the recovery of 33 Krag-Jorgensen rifles in good condition, stolen from the regiment December 1 last. The search for the rifles has continued unceasingly since they were lost. Some scouts on Tuesday very early discovered the rifles, but the enemy removed them and concealed them in the bush. A captain and 30 rebels armed with rifles surrendered at Quingua.

Nueva Ecija, a town in Candaba, has been burned and many poor families are homeless. General Wheaton recommends government succor. The fire, is it supposed, was accidental.

Germany Needs the Protest.

Berlin, June 4.—Prince Hohenlohe, imperial chancellor, gave assurances to a correspondent today that the bundesrath, in drawing up the paragraphs for the carrying out of the provisions of the meat inspection bill would frame them in such a manner as to consider the legitimate wishes of the American and Brush governments as much as the tenor of the law will permit.

Diana of Philadelphia.

At the mint in Philadelphia are a number of coins far more precious than any which find their way into circulation. They are a number of coins, and many of them date from times of great antiquity.

Perhaps the most interesting among them is a handsome coin bearing on its face the profile of a woman, which has a striking resemblance to the Goddess of Liberty of our own currency. Underneath is the single word "Demos," which is the Greek for "The People."

On the reverse of the coin is a beautiful figure of the goddess Diana, striking her bow, and the inscription, translated into English, reads, "Diana, Friend of the Philadelphians."

The coin was minted more than two thousand years ago at the city of Philadelphia in Asia Minor, where, as we know, there grew up in later years one of the seven churches of which St. John writes. The prize was discovered some years ago in Europe by Joseph Hickley, of Philadelphia, a well-known banker and an authority on coins. By him it was appropriately presented to the mint in Philadelphia.

Unsettled.

"Can you tell me what sort of weather we may expect next month?" wrote a subscriber to an editor; and according to the Cumberland Presbyterian the editor replied as follows:

"It is my belief that the weather next month will be very much like your subscription."

The inquirer wondered what the editor meant, till he happened to think of the word "unsettled."

Senator Pettigrew's resolution calling on the secretary of the interior for information as to the leasing of grazing lands in Oklahoma, offered yesterday, was agreed to.

Another resolution offered by Pettigrew, calling upon the secretary of the treasury for all communications, reports and charges he has received relative to the management of the Whole Root reservation in South Dakota, was passed.

The Teller resolution expressing sympathy for the Boers, was then laid before the senate, and Senator Bacon addressed the senate.

The senate committee on appropriations has agreed to Senator Cockrell's amendment to the sundry bill appropriating $5,000,000 for the Louisiana purchase exposition at St. Louis in 1903.

The senate committee on finance has completed a favorable report on the bill amending the law concerning taxation on beer so as to eliminate packages of less than one-quarter of a barrel.

Mr. Allen has presented a special rule ordering the previous question on the pension bills, 190 in number, favorably acted upon by the committee of the whole last Friday, in order to not interfere with the conference reports. He explained that the rule was made necessary by the obstruction which the senators from South Carolina (Talbert) last Friday. This Talbert denied. He said that had a quorum been present the bills could have been passed. He attempted to have the rule included the bill for the relief of Charles B. Dougherty and the officers and men of the Ninth Pennsylvania regiment, but the control of the rule was adopted, but was immediately displaced by ——. Foss of Illinois, who presented the conference report on the naval appropriation bill. The conference report was agreed to without division. The house then proceeded to consider items which had been passed over. Mr. Foss moved that the senate recede from its disagreement and agree to the amendment striking out all the surveys, but increasing the appropriation from $150,000 to $170,000 etc., from $120,000 to $200,000. This was agreed to. Mr. Wheeler's motion to recede and concur in the senate amendment was lost by a vote of 107 to 194.

Business was suspended in the national capital Wednesday while thousands of veterans of the civil war and their descendants paid tribute to the nation's heroic dead. In the eight cemeteries services were held. Orations were delivered by some most able orators whose duties call them each session to the national capitol. Upon the graves loving hands placed memorial wreathes. "Taps" were sounded by scores of bugles as the nation paid its tribute to the heroism of the departed.

PUMPING INTO THE BARN.

being filled with hay to keep the pump from freezing. This is not a difficult job, and the results are often worth a great deal during a single winter even. The pump can be lowered again for the summer use if desired, setting the elevated platform away for use again the following winter. Where water can be run into the barn in the way suggested, it will, on standing a while, acquire the temperature of the barn, being then much more suitable for cows to drink, while the latter will also be saved the exposure to cold winds.

Popular Breeds of Geese.

The most popular breeds of geese are the Toulouse, Embden and Chinese. The first named are great in size, proportions in breast and body generally. The Embden are white, somewhat longer in the leg, but possessing many characteristics worthy of attention. Both of these breeds require a pond, as necessary in geese. The Chinese are "pretty," perhaps, in point of feather, but as a table bird they do not compare with either of those named above.

How to Make a Handsome Lawn.

Lawn-making is not so difficult as most persons seem to think. You must begin right if you would attain a satisfactory degree of success. Much of what thing to do is to grade the ground evenly. Most persons prefer a lawn that slopes away from the house to one that is almost imperceptible incline of surface. Such a lawn is easier to make than a level one, because any little depressions in a perfectly even surface will be far less noticeable. To secure the necessary slope, earth will have to be filled in near the house if the lot is comparatively level one. Wherever there has been an excavation made for the house walls or a cellar there will generally be enough earth near the house to furnish all the filling needed in making the required slope. This soil, which is almost always hard, should be worked over until it is as fine and mellow as possible, for a good lawn can not be made from a soil that is coarse and lumpy.

If the soil is not rich, it should be made so. I would advise the use of bone meal in liberal quantity in preference to barnyard fertilizer, because it never introduces the seeds of worthless weeds in the lawn, as manure from the stables is very sure to do. Coarse bone meal, in the proportion of a half pound to each square yard, will give a soil of ordinary quality strength enough to produce an excellent growth of grass.—Eben E. Rexford, in the New Lippincott.

Packing Butter.

The firkins or tubs should be made of white oak and new. They are soaked in cold water for twelve hours, while the butter is waiting for the final working, then are soaked in boiling water, rinsed and rubbed with fine salt on the inside. The butter is then packed in layers of three inches, with salt lightly sprinkled over each, says the Country Gentleman. The pail or tub is then filled to a quarter of an inch of the top and a clean new cover of cheesecloth is laid on the butter. This cover should be an inch larger each way than the tub, leaving a margin to be turned over. The cloth is covered with fine salt and the edge of the cloth is turned over it. The pail is then even full, no air space left. The cover, previously treated as the cloth has been, is laid on and fastened down securely. Butter well made and thus packed as soon as made and kept in a cool, dark place will keep six months or even a year and come out as good as—to some tastes better than—when it was packed.

of Barrington 40th, 65350. He was bred and exhibited by Mr. R. H. Dyke, Banbury, Oxfordshire, England. He was in the first prize of 450 in his class at the recent Birmingham Shorthorn Show, and was sold for 510 guineas, or nearly $2,700.

Late on Fruit Trees.

There is more or less complaint in fruit sections about the ravages of ants on cherry trees. The grower who thinks that ants are making trouble for him does not observe very closely, or he would notice that the ants are not only harmless, but do much good. The real enemy is the minute aphis, which frequently attacks the young growth on cherry trees, sucking the sap through the easily pierced bark. As these insects are about the same color as the bark, they are readily overlooked, while the ant which follows and eats the exuding sap are noticed. To rid the tree of the pest, use a spray with bordeaux mixture or kerosene emulsion. The aphis feed on the tender growth early in the season, if the tree has put on its new leaves, so that they must be closely watched, or they will will do considerable harm.

Pruning Small Fruits.

I find the reason why we have such poor crops of berries is that we allow the bushes to grow too high before we trim in the spring. Some do not trim at all, allowing the canes to grow six or eight feet high, which gives the wind a great hold on the bushes and also lets the growth remain green much longer, not giving the wood time to ripen before the hard freezing weather, which freezes the bushes about half way down to the ground, and injures the entire plant. Raspberries, other than the tip kinds, should be cut about three feet from the ground; blackberries, 2½ to four feet.—F. G. Duffin.

Adulterated Milk.

Judge Bishop, of Trenton, decided that if a person buys milk with the knowledge that it contains boracic acid or any harmless article put in for the purpose of preserving the milk, there is not adulteration, and that the statute does not apply, but that if a harmful article should be added to milk and it was put in and the milk sold without giving notice of its use, it would amount to adulteration in the meaning of the statute. The case was under consideration the purchaser had full knowledge of the fact that boracic acid was used.

Plant Corn Early.

Experiments at the Indiana station for six years in succession indicate that corn planted the first week in May gives the heaviest yield. During the same series of years corn planted two inches is as deep as the cultivator should be run in corn fields at any time. The yields on plots where corn was three inches deep were about as heavy as on any of the others. There seems to be but little difference between hill and drill planting.

To Destroy Beetles and Borers.

Scrape off the rough bark of apple trees. Thus you destroy the chance of the beetles or flat-headed borers finding a lodging in which later to lay eggs and hatch. You can destroy 200 or more tent caterpillars on apple trees now about as easy as you can kill a single worm in June. Their nests encircle the twigs near the ends, and on a sunny day they can easily be seen. Clip and burn.—Vick's Magazine.

A Byers, while looking over a tract of desert land south of the Snake river, where Pasco is now located, saw the wind had got action on a spot of earth and blown it out to a depth of a few feet. —The new flour mill at Cul de Sac is to be operated by water power. A ditch from Lapwai creek of one mile in length is to be constructed. The water will have a fall of seventy-five feet and it is believed one hundred horse power will be developed.

—The Chicago Record is a great newspaper. It is clean and fair. Has correspondents all over the globe who furnish a mass of interesting mail matter and cable it daily more substantial meaty news than any other paper in the country receives. The Record has few equals and we cannot resist saying a good word for it now and then.

—Last Thursday the senate passed the sundry civil appropriation bill, which has been under consideration for nearly a week. The amendment providing for an appropriation of $5,000,000 for the Louisiana purchase exposition to be held in St. Louis in 1903, was continued in the bill. An effort was made to reduce the amount to be appropriated, but it was unsuccessful.

—The portage railroad at the dalles of the Columbia is being rushed to completion. The company proposes to open a line from Lewiston to tide water, and evidently means business, as three-year contracts have been made with scores of farmers in Whitman and Garfield counties, the agreeing to carry grain for $3.20 per ton, and furthermore obligates itself to meet all reductions that may be made by competing lines. The rates should come down.

—The secretary of the treasury has taken radical steps to prevent the plague being transferred beyong the limits of San Francisco. In addition to authorizing the surgeon general to forbid the transport of infected articles and permitting the transportation of bodies only in hermetically sealed coffins, the secretary gives the surgeon general authority to prevent altogether the travel of Asiatics or any other class of people who are peculiarly subject to the disease. Railways are forbidden to sell or give tickets to persons of the classes so designated.

—The British ship Wendur, carrying the largest cargo of grain bags that ever entered the Pacific Northwest, arrived at Portland last week after a passage of 122 days from Calcutta. The Wendur has abroad 6,498,000 grain bags, 274 bales of hopcloth, 750,000 bales of jute and 125 bales of burlap, and the total value of the cargo is close to $500,000. It would have been a heavy loss for Uncle Sam had the vessel failed to show up, as there will be duties amounting to nearly $90,000 collected from the cargo. As soon as the cargo has been discharged she will load outward with wheat.

—The details of the April exportations, just completed by the treasury bureau of statistics, show that the exportation of manufactures during the month were by far the greatest of any month in our history and within a fraction of $40,000,000. This gives assurance that the exports of the fiscal year which ends June, will considerably exceed $400,000,000, and be nearly three times as much as a decade ago Great Britain's exports of manufactures show but slight increase since 1890, and an examination of the export record of the principal European countries fails to disclose an instance in which the increase has been as much as 25 per cent, while that of the United States has been more than 150 per cent.

—"Woman was created after man, that her virtues might be sifted from his faults, and after the flowers, that her charms might be kindled from their beauty." A writer says through the love of a good woman, by her wisdom and virtue, men are redeemed from vice and unbelief. Intellectually she is man's equal—often his superior. She has aroused the best in man since time commenced. Poets and painters have alike drawn their inspiration from her beauty and chastity, and made her the theme of all their great and wondrous works. We have Raphael and his virgins, Angelo and his madonnas. We never separate Dante from Beatrice, nor Shakespeare from his many heroines. "There is hardly a play," says Ruskin, "that has not a perfect woman in it." We have our Magdalen and our Tess—yes, always! But, perchance, could we know their hidden thoughts and miseries; their few delights and many tears; their firm resolves, terrible temptations and hard-won victories; their half born hopes, crushed by environments, we should have a song of sorrow in a most plaintive, pitiful key. Even in her lowest stage woman is better than man. He is oftenest the tempter; she the tempted. She wants to live an upright life.

House Work

Seems easy to a man, but there is a great deal of lifting and reaching to do; a great many trips up and down stairs to make in the course of day's house work. It's hard where a woman is well. For a woman suffering with some form of "female trouble" it is daily torment. There are thousands of such women struggling along, day by day, in increasing misery. There are other thousands who have found a complete cure of their disease in the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It stops debilitating drains, cures irregularity, heals inflammation and ulceration, nourishes the nerves, and gives vitality and vigor. It makes weak women strong and sick women well. It contains no opium, cocaine nor other narcotic.

"For a number of months I suffered with female trouble," writes Miss Agnes McGowne, of 1212 Bank St., Washington, D. C. "I tried various remedies, but none seemed to do me any permanent good. The doctors said it was the worst case of internal trouble they ever had. I decided to write to you for help. I received a very encouraging reply, and commenced treatment at once. I had not used your 'Favorite Prescription' a week before I began to feel better, and, as I continued, my health gradually improved. It is improving every day."

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay cost of mailing only. Send 21 one-cent stamps for a book in paper covers, or 31 stamps in cloth, to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

—The first real step towards remodeling the White House and making it at least partially adequate to the needs of the President, were taken in the senate last week when an item was placed in the sundry civil appropriation bill, authorizing the President to appoint an architect and a landscape gardner, to be associated with the chief of engineers of the army to make an examination and to report to congress at its next session plans for enlarging the executive mansion. The business of the President and the social obligations imposed upon him are increasing every year with the growth of the country, yet the President's house remains the same as it was at the beginning of the century, when the entire population of the country was not much greater than that of some of the states. Plans of enlargement have been discussed for years, but heretofore they have stopped with the discussion.

ESTIMATES FURNISHED ON ALL KINDS OF MASON WORK

B. M. EASTERBROOKS.

—J. L. Naylor is on a trip to Sedalia, Mo., to visit his aged people.

—The women will not vote in the state of Oregon for a while yet, the question being voted down at the late election.

—H. J. Bundy and Henry Fleener have gone to the Hump country and may remain until October to do development work.

—Harvesting began in Kansas this week—and the biggest wheat crop the state has ever had. The estimate is put at 80,000,000, which will send the calamity howlers to the rear.

—Many people came west over the Great Northern railway from St. Paul the past week, people with means to buy homes along that enterprising road. Let more such people come.

—There is a heavy travel to the Hump, Thunder Mountain, Elk City and Florence mining districts according to the Grangeville papers. The increase of the output of gold should be greatly increased this year from these camps.

—N. L. Griffith, representing Crescent Coffee and Spice Co., Spokane, was in Genesee this week placing their make of goods including baking powder with our merchants. The goods are made under Washington's pure food laws and the company offers $500 for any injurious properties, or alum, found in food resulting from the use of Crescent Baking Powder. Their fruit flavor and cream coffee are also guaranteed.

—The republican majority in Oregon keeps increasing as the rerurns come in from the back districts, and is now up to the high water mark of 10300. And this in the face of the small registration. Expansion is an issue that comes home to the Pacific coast more vitally than to any other part of the country. The extension of American rule to Hawaii and the Philippines not only promises much for Pacific coast industries, but the people perceive that West Indian expansion makes imperative the construction of the long-desired Nicaragua canal. Meat and wool producers of the west will vote for the party of expansion whenever they have an opportunity.

—Many of the oldest settlers have told us the past week they never saw such grain as now stands in the Genesee valley. If ever nature smiled benignly upon our people and made them rejoice that time is now. Everyone is rejoicing in the best crop prospects ever known at this time of year. Wheat fields give promise of 40 and 45 bushels per acre. The heads are forming long and large and there is plenty of moisture in the ground to perfect the berry. No pest is troubling the grain, except the red rust and that is not feared, and an unusual yield is anticipated. With a heavy crop of fruit coming on this valley should be prosperous. The warehouses will be taxed to their limit if nothing interferes.

THUNDER MOUNTAIN ROMANCE.

Thunder Mountain is attracting attention from the mining people, even from around Genesee. C. A. Dinsmore in the Idaho Mining Journal writes: "Such a peculiarity of Nature as this mountain, which apparently breeds perpetual thunder, has led to more than the customary inquiry; and in answering of course the mining paper must be foremost. That Thunder Mountain has a pathetic side is not to be wondered at in the least.

Many years ago, before the foot of the whites had trod the soil of the inland empire embraced within the now State of Idaho, there wandered up the Valley of the Snake a small band of Indians of the Siwash tribe, a people whose home was on the shores of Puget Sound; a band of braves sent forth in search of a branch of their tribe thought to be lost in the fastnesses of the mountains of this region. It seems that some twenty years before a brave of the Siwashes had met, loved, wooed, and won a fair Bannock; and after their union he with all his relations came here with her, to visit their new kin. They camped at the confluence of the Weiser and the Snake full two moons, engaged in hunting, fishing, and pleasant games. All went merrily, till one of the western Indians was stricken with terrible rheumatism, a thing unknown in his own country. He was immediately too ill to be taken the thousand miles to his own home. His relatives suspicioned the affliction was the result of the coming from their own to this section; they thought the Great Spirit was angered, and that the disease was an urgent expression of the Holy will that they make all haste returning. So all but ten went back to Puget Sound, but these others remained with the sick brother. Since that time no sign had the home people of those who were left behind.

So the latter party was organized, and at its head was Docewallips, the namesake of Rapid River. This band came, also, to the junction of the two rivers, having as guide one of the members of the old party, one of those who had gone back. Knowing nothing of the way beyond this camping ground, they determined to remain, the hope that ere long some members of the Bannock would appear and give them enlightenment. Three days did they lie beside the Snake, and at midnight of the fourth, when the stars were brightly shining, and a breeze like balm rolled o'er the plain, the Chief Docewallips heard the calling of his name—once, again and thrice—and the voice was to him the sweetest melody. Rousing quickly, he answered the summons by emerging from the tepee—and he saw, silently standing 'pon gorgeously-carpeted earth, a lovely Bannock maid, and the moonbeams so enveloped her as to make a living dream of enchantment. He stood enthralled; and the maiden spake, and her voice was like the purling of the happy streamlet in its native place. She was the daughter of the chief medicine man of the tribe, and had been sent down from the hills to tell the Siwash people the story of their lost brethren, and to guide them into the mountains did they wish to make the journey. She had not been quite sure of her reception and so had come in the night and awakened the Chief, of whose protection she felt convinced. Docewallips assured her of no harm; and they sat in the gathering day talking of that which is yet to be recorded, and imbibing in look and word the old story so dear to all peoples. In the morning Docewallips called his people about him, and silently they listened to the girl's story, which was this:

'When the greater portion of the bridal party had gone back to their homes, the Bannocks had led those who remained into the interior to a hot spring noted for its health-giving powers [judging from the circumstances, it is safe to say this must have been the Burgdorf spring], and here the stricken brave regained his wonted health; but by this time winter had come, and deep snows were on the ground. Being from a milder climate, the visitors found the rigors of the season most trying, and their energies and ambitions were dulled. Apparently, however, they were in accord and peace with their entertainers, and largely this was the case. But still, the gaining of the flower of the tribe in wedlock by a stranger and an alien racked the minds of many members of the Bannock tribe, this being especially true of a noted sub-chief named Red Heart, who, for many years, had loved and wished to wed the maid; but all to naught, for he was an unlovable man, and she would nothing of him, spurning all his advances. And Red Heart had a great following in the tribe, and these he incited to a deed atrocious. And one dark, drear night, when all at the spring were lying in slumber, Red Heart and his following stealthily entered their habitations, and put to the knife—happily to instant and painless death—every Siwash in the land. But his victory was short.

Two days after the massacre his party, returning home, reached the skirts of a great mountain, at whose base and upon whose sides these Indians had for ages gathered glittering baubles for sweethearts and babies. It was night; not a sound disturbed the serenity, the awful solemnity, of the day's transition; and around great campfires lay the sleeping horde; and none dreamed of the great vengeance soon to be performed by the Great Spirit, whose arm was steeled in wrath and humiliation. The camp was at the confluence of the two streams named Mule and Monumental; and suddenly the sleepers were thoroughly awakened by a tremendious Voice; and the words spake by the Voice were these:

'Red Heart, you have broken the covenent; you have murdered men of your race and blood who were with you in peace—prepare quickly for your doom, for it comes ere the dawn.'

And then was heard a noise, low at first, but increasing in volume and tremendiousness, till at last it was Thunder. And the mountain shook, and quaked, and groaned—and from its side came forth a terrible Being, whose height was thrice the height of any Indian, whose step measured a rod, whose breath was fire. And he stayed not his step till he came to Red Heart's tent, and this did burn from his breath; and then the Being took up Red Heart in his arms and carried him into the bowels of the mountains; but none may find the way they went, for it is closed. But one time more did the Voice give utterance, and it was heard above the Thunder, and it said:

'The Great Spirit mourns; his anger is like the mightiest spring-time river, but his heart is like the dove. He demands somewhat reparation for the great wrong done, but he cannot feel to doom ye all, who were but Red Heart's slaves; but his wrath is not the less great, and he will show his indignation through to eternity by causing this mountain to perpetually mourn your crime. It will mourn forever—and while it mourns it will grind your leader's soul in eternal anguish—and its voice shall be heard at all times and for unknown distances. Make your peace with the Great Spirit, but do it not in boasting, but in great humiliation.'

And the Voice was heard no more. But the anguished voice of Red Heart's soul is heard at all times and for great distances, for thunders continually roar on the mountain—it is the Home of Thunders.'

And as the followers of Docewallips listened to the maiden's story, a great sorrow o'er swept them—sorrow for their lost friends, and for the slayers of their friends—and when they left the Weiser it was toward their homes on the headwaters of the Hoh that they traveled—and with them went the maiden, who came to be their brave chief's bride."

The above is the true story of the now famous Thunder Mountain, where not only do perpetual thunder roar, but where also is said to be the largest gold bearing ore in the country.

The only nail some women can hit on the head is their thumbnail.

It's strange that people who are always talking about themselves never seem to exhaust the subject.

Falling into the sea is the latest advertising scheme scheme. Falling off the earth has not yet been tried.

In time bribery as a sometimes alleged national disease may not be of the taking character it has been.

The fellow who emphasizes "My forever" and otherwise then ought to himself that there are 74,999,999 other people who have their views and who don't care a continental for his views.

A New York physician has come out with an attack on the "deadly linen handkerchief" and wants paper used instead. The suggestion may be good, but the public is apt to turn its nose up, as to speak, at the idea.

The announcement that a Missouri duchess "eloped with a boy" is not so surprising after all. If she had eloped with a girl it would have been different. A young woman always have a penchant for running away with boys.

In Chicago the other day a woman was arrested charged with being a vagrant. The legal definition of a vagrant is "a person who is idle, remains idle and refuses to work." The defendant in this particular case made an assignment that woman was not intended to work, and the jury returned a verdict in accordance with the argument, dismissing the defendant. The verdict established a ground all future controversies the law of nature above that of man, as it was upon nature's law that the argument was made. But there is danger in the verdict. It may be taken as an authoritative example by other courts which would be a terrible nuisance to masculinity. Hitherto courts of justice unquestionably have supported them for years would be no longer safe, should the verdict come to be accepted as an example worthy of her subsequent action. Young men who have lived lives of indolent ease and luxury through the energy and insistence of fond mothers are in dreadful danger. Universal acceptance of the fact that woman was not intended by nature for toil would work the awful blasting of sweeping the industrial employment upon many men.

A certain clergyman in a manufacturing town in Pennsylvania was recently surprised to find a number of empty pews in his congregation and referred to the subject in the pulpit, saying that there were 600 young unmarried women in the parish and blamed the young men for the lamentable situation. He charged it to their bashfulness and their being too avaricious. The newspapers got hold of his complaint and their reports were published in other places, and soon the good man was overwhelmed with letters inquiring about the ladies, with evident desire on the part of many of the writers to open correspondence with some of them. He was very polite with the business he had unintentionally got himself into. He was mistaken, we think, in charging the young men with avariciousness as the reason for avoiding matrimony. The reason would be better stated by saying that they did not feel able to support wives in the style that modern society requires. Wages, in other words, are too low, in most cases, to allow of incurring the expenses of family life, and the young communities in the west is not so bad, and so far as we have learned there is about as much marrying and giving in marriage" among the young people in the country as was the case a score of years ago; and this is one of the many important advantages the country has over the towns and cities.

When women pay attention, send flowers and delicacies to one another's sensational crimes—usually connected murderers—the other men produce them morbid. They are held up and referred to in choice secretary language by the superior sex. But the superior sex is in extreme danger of shattering the chances by the indiscriminate and reckless flinging of stones at a weaker sex for its offenses. Let a man be recorded in the public mints as doing something unusual, and he is immediately besieged with proposals of marriage and the recipient of the amorosities that would pale into insignificance the most ardent billet doux ever sent to a convicted criminal. The latest proof is accumulating voluminously at Chicago. A school teacher —it is not known that she is either young or beautiful—recently delivered an address on "Why the Hate of Celibacy Among College-bred Women Is So High," and gave, in partial explanation of her spinsterhood, the excellent reason that "he had never asked her." "He," in large quantities all over the country, is seeking to make amends for the delinquency. Thousands of proposals of marriage have been received, and the mail on the route of the maiden who naively declared one reason of her celibacy exceeds that of the starter of an endless chain. It shows that men are the greater number of the population in the region of vanity and nonsense. The women who display a morbid affection for a convicted criminal or worship at the shrine of a matinee idol have at least seen the object of their misdirected affections. The man who propose to the Chicago schoolmarm know absolutely nothing of her except that she gave as one of many reasons for being a celibate that she had never been asked to marry. The path that is contrary to wisdom leading to the hymeneal altar is not traveled exclusively by the weaker sex.

Some years ago the ancient saw to the effect that birds that can sing and won't sing should be made to sing was amended by adding, "Birds that can't sing and will sing should be sent to Sing Sing." That some such drastic remedy is necessary seems to be the increasing boldness of those who can't sing but will sing. A young man in Pennsylvania shot another one the other day for saying to him, "John, let fellows sing who can sing." Plainly, the time has arrived for revolutionary methods, and fortunately science has come to the rescue at the right time. A scientist is showing by illustrated lectures that beautiful geometric figures are thrown upon the surface of a soap bubble by various tones of the human voice. When a young lady sings "My country, 'tis of thee," there is a mass of violet surrounded by a yellow border of the spectrum; then it changes to red, green or yellow. That must be only because she has a good voice. Science must be accurate and truth must not be inconsistent with any other truth, so it follows that when the man whose voice sounds like the filing of a saw, or the girl whose vocalization recalls a crew suffering from tonsilitis, attempts to sing, the phonoscope will represent octopuses and microbes in yellow. As the atmosphere of the problem clears we may see how the old saw may be reconciled with its amendment. The person who can't sing and will sing will be taken by the ear and made to sing to a phonoscope and a series of soap bubbles until the cure is complete or the patient is dead. Those who like to hear themselves sing because they think they have mellifluous voices can be more mildly disciplined in the same way. Nobody need sing at all. It matters little whether he talks, plays the cornet or whistles ragtime; if he did, much disillusionment would ensue spontaneous combustion, and the scientific treatment "by hand" will have to give way to disillusionment by scientific machinery. The scientist may begin to choose a design for his own statue as a public benefactor.

CAPTURING A PYTHON.

Great Strength of a Philippine Island Serpent.

Pythons are numerous in the Philippines. We often heard of very large ones, says Dean C. Worcester in his interesting account of these much-talked-of islands, but the largest we got to them the smaller they grew. Finally, however, we got a fine specimen. Some men had found him coiled up under a fallen tree. Arranging a noose, with a noose so that he could not well escape them, they had then poked him till he crawled into their snares, when they jerked the knot tight, and made the lines fast to trees and rocks.

When we reached the python I nearly stepped on him, for he was stretched out on the ground and looked for all the world like a log. A venomous bite warned me of my mistake, and caused me to beat no sudden a retreat as to afford great delight to the assembled crowd of Tagbanuas.

The reptile had about three feet of play for his head, and I thought it wise to treat him with respect. Drenching a handful of absorbent cotton with chloroform, I presented it to him on the end of a piece of bamboo.

He bit it savagely and it caught on the end of his long, recurved teeth, so that he could not get rid of it. Then I saw a most remarkable exhibition of brute force.

Under the stimulus of the chloroform that python broke green rattans three-quarters of an inch in diameter, and that without apparent exertion. There was no thrashing about. It was all quiet, steady pulling. He soon broke or twisted out of every one of his leaderings except a running noose around his neck; and getting a hold for his tail around a stump he pulled until it seemed as if his head would come off.

Eventually the chloroform quieted him somewhat, and I gave him more. When he was still I stabbed him to the heart to prevent further difficulty, and removed his skin. He measured twenty-two feet and six inches.

Had Had Experience Enough.

A LAZY PHILOSOPHY.

I reckon I'm kin to the lilies; I toil not, an' never spin.
I only answer to roll-call when the winds
from the west blow in
Over the dew-drenched medders—over the sage-scent hills,
An' the sun with a glad "Good-mornin'" reads the dreams o' the drowsy hills.

What do I want to toll fer, when the golden bee contrives
To feed a feller on honey stored in the drippin' hives;
When I see the color creepin' to the peach's rosy roun',
An' the red-ripe apples are fallin' an'
denin' the wet, sweet groun'?

Reckon I'm kin to the lillies—that's what the workers say;
Brother-in-law to the medder dressed fer
the marriage with May;
But I allus answer to roll-call—though
I toil not, an' never spin:
The roll-call o' the roses when the winds
from the west blow in!

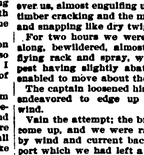
The Diver's Stratagem.



N 18— I found myself aboard the brig Mermaid, bowling along through the Persian Gulf on her way to Constantinople.

There were two passengers — a stately, fierce-looking Turk and a young Circassian girl, whose surpassing beauty it was impossible to perfectly describe.

Her motions were as graceful as those of the crested waves that threw rainbowed spray around our bows; her skin was as white as pearl; the cheeks had tinged with a delicate rose color, so that, in the sunlight, they looked almost transparent. Her eyes were almond-shaped, of a dark, bewitching blue color, and her lather shining, glorious hair—fell almost to her feet, in thick, undulating masses.

Meek and melancholy, she would stand by the side of the Turk, her tapering fingers interlocked across her breast, the blue eyes often suffused with tears.

How could she help feeling melancholy? She had been sold to the Turk by her own father; sold for the Turk's harem; snatched away from a young man whom she tenderly loved—a stately, handsome pearl-diver, the bravest and most skillful on the Persian coast, near which this girl had lived.

When I learned this from our steward, an inquisitive, talkative Frenchman, I must confess that my heart was stirred with pity for the unfortunate damsel, and I felt that it would be no more than right for some good-natured person to snatch the girl from the Turk and restore her to the arms of her lover. This, however, seemed an impossibility, as she was bought and paid for, and the lynx-eyed Turk followed her carefully wherever she went.

We had gained considerably on our course, when to windward we beheld one morning a gigantic cloud, shaped like a human being, striding along toward us at a great rate. It whirled round and round as it advanced. Presently off went its head; a flash of lightning darted up from its trunk, and then a clap—spoke! what a crash—what a whirling—what a humming!

As far as we could see to windward the water was one mass of boiling, blasting spray.

Then there was a strange, rumbling roar, as of an earthquake under the sea, and vast columns of water, tossed far upward, mingled with the sound and rack of the storm. The captain had every stitch of canvas taken in, so that the tempest struck us away we went, driving along before it on our beam-ends, under bare poles. On our beam-ends, with the water plowing over us, almost engulfing us, with every timber cracking and the masts swaying and snapping like dry twigs.

For two hours we were thus driven along, bewildered, almost blinded, by flying rack and spray, when the tempest having slightly abated, we were enabled to move about the deck.

The captain loosened his topsails and endeavored to edge up close to the wind.

Vain the attempt; the brig would not come up, and we were rapidly driven by wind and current back toward the port which we had left a few days before.

The Circassian girl came up; and when she divined what was taking place her blue eyes shone with joy.

In tolerable English she explained to me, during a few minutes' conversation which I held with her while the Turk was below filling his pipe, that she believed in the power of Mohammed, would start in pursuit of the brig in his little fishing smack the moment he should hear that she had been carried away, and she hoped that now seas would soon fall in with it. Even as she spoke an erratic blast struck the brig. Down went the vessel making a furious plunge. There was a loud, snapping sound, and over went the mainmast by the board. The wreck was cleared with axes, but the brig now rolled wildly, shipping enormous seas every time.

"Man the pumps!" was the order.

LITERARY LITTLETBITS

Max Pemberton's serial novel, "Feo," will soon be published in book form.

"Toomey and Others" is a volume of short stories of the East Side, by Robert Shackleton.

The manuscript of "Lorna Doone" was submitted to eighteen publishing firms before it was finally accepted.

"The Black Wolf's Breed," a romance of the time of Louis XIV., is by Harris Dickson, a young Southern writer only 31 years old.

"The Dear Irish Girl," by Katharine Tynan Hinkson, is published by A. C. McClurg & Co., and is pronounced a very charming story.

Mr. Anstey has made a play out of his really humorous Punch novel, "The Man from Blankley's," and it will soon be produced in London.

Constance Garnett has made a translation of "The Jew and Other Stories," by Ivan Turgenef. This volume consists of Turgenef's shorter novels, and contains an introduction by Dr. Garnett, in which he places the Russian above all other novelists as the supreme artist.

William Pett Ridge's new novel, "A Breaker of Laws," will be published in this country by the Macmillan Company at once. Many people will recognize her this writer's earlier work in a story of the east end of London called "Mord Em'ly." He has already written four or five other novels, among which "A Son of the Sea" and "A Second Opportunity of Mr. Staplehurst," attracted some attention. "A Breaker of Laws" takes its name from the chief character in the book, a cockney burglar.

Apropos of the vogue of the historical romance, it is related of "To Have and to Hold," Mary Johnston's story of the Jamestown settlement, that it has been followed throughout its career in the Atlantic to within a month or two of its conclusion by a practical, hard-headed man of business. The practical, hard-headed man of business one day had occasion to call on the publishers of the book. He espied the book upon a desk, and though he had come to sell paper, not to buy books, he refused to do anything until he had sat down in an out-of-the-way corner of the office and finished every story which had so seized upon his fancy.

TROUBLES OF POOR LO.

This Indian Says John D. Rockefeller Wants His Land.

Waw-aleep-eshee-ka, the Delaware chief, who is at war with John D. Rockefeller, declares that if there ever was a time when citizenship was desirable that time has passed. He does not wish to be a citizen of a community which pays rent to foreign landlords and receives wages from foreign taskmasters. He says that his tribe has been moved again and again by the greed of the white man, and will move no more. He is wealthy and educated, and is willing to use all his money and

RAISE OF SALARY WAS FATAL.

Method a Merchant Took to Get Rid of a Contract with an Employe.

"I wouldn't give a cent for a contract with an employer," said an advertising man. "Contracts are useless. If a man hires you for a certain sum to do certain work, he pays you that sum because you are worth it to him, and it keep pays without a contract just as long as he will keep you with one. If he agrees to pay you more than you are worth he'll find it out sooner or later, and your contract isn't worth a fig. I know it shouldn't be so, but it is so. I've got in mind now a case in which a merchant, who boasts of forty years of business integrity, figured. He employed a buyer in one of his departments at a yearly salary and contracted with him for five years. This buyer was one of the best in the business. He worked along for about a year, and then something happened that made the merchant dissatisfied. Of course, the buyer was under contract, and the merchant could get rid of him without violating it. What did he do? He called the buyer into his office and said to him:

"'Mr. ——, you have done splendid work for us, and we are more than satisfied. We find that you deserve some reward, and we have determined to increase your salary $1,000 a year.'

"Well, the buyer said he was very grateful and that, and went out and put in some of his best licks. He got the increased salary for two weeks and signed a receipt for it. Then the merchant sent for the buyer and said:

"'Mr. ——, we were mistaken in our estimate of you, and we have determined to let you go. We don't need you any longer.'

"'Well, I don't want to stay where I'm not wanted,' said the buyer, 'but I have a contract, you know.'

"'Contract be damned,' merchant. 'What contract? Oh no, you have no contract. You consented to the abrogation of the contract two weeks ago.'

"'Well, I didn't think that—' the buyer began.

"'It doesn't make any difference what you think,' said the merchant with forty years of business integrity, 'you did abrogate it. We don't need you any longer. Good-day, sir.'

"Well, now, probably if that buyer had taken the case to court he would have succeeded in enforcing the contract, in spite of the fact that he had accepted an increase of salary over the contract price. But, suppose he had tried to enforce it. Where would he have been? Employers don't like to hire men who might make trouble for them. If that buyer had tried he would practically have shut the door to every other establishment that hired buyers against himself. Then, again, if he had gone to other places, of course, he had to depend on his former employer for a recommendation, and where would he have been if he had made any trouble? He'd have had to let the matter drop as if he had no contract, and I tell you that, unless you are dealing with an absolutely honest man, a contract with an employer is worth no more than a scrap of paper on which it is written on."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

What Puzzled a Cuban Boy.

"It was a puzzler for a Cuban boy with an American friend on his sugar plantation in Cuba," said a Congressman who recently visited the island, "and one day as I was riding out a few I came across one of the wagons loaded with cane broken down in the field. A hind wheel had come off, and the driver of the wagon, who was a boy about 19 years old, was taking things as cool as ice, not even having unhitched his beasts.

"'When did it happen?' I asked, as I got down.

"'Hours ago, senor,' he replied.

"'And haven't you reported to the overseer?'

"'No, senor.'

"'But why have you wasted all this time when there is need of hurry?'

"'Will the senor tell me,' he replied, as he lasily scratched his head, 'what has happened to the wagon?'

"'Why, a wheel has come off, of course.'

"'Then I will go up to the mill and report. I should have done so long ago, but I wasn't sure.'

"'Sure of what, you dolt?'

"'Of whether the wheel had come off the wagon, or the wagon had come off the wheel.'"—Washington Post.

How He Lost His Job.

An exchange tells the story of an old colored man who asked a white man for a job, and was given him. The white man asked the negro if he had a boat. When the negro replied, "Yes, boss," the white man responded:

"Well, you see that driftwood floating down the river?"

"Yes, sah," was the reply.

"Well, then," continued the white man, "you now out in the river and catch that driftwood, and-I'll give you half you get."

The colored man worked hard for a while, when all of a sudden he stopped and pulled for the shore.

On being asked the reason for his return, he replied: "Dat wood is just as much mine as 't is his. I ain't gwine to give him any, and so I'm out of work ag'in."

An Old Lawyer's Advice.

Congressman Brosius is telling a story about the advice given by an old Lancaster County lawyer to his son, who was about to practice law. "When the law is against you," he advised, "tell the jury they must regard justice; when justice is against you, direct the jury's attention only to the law." "But if both are against me?" asked the son. "Then talk around," replied the father.—Savannah News.

FARM AND GARDEN

Cow Rears Two Lambs.

The accompanying picture might have been thought a fancy of some artist of fertile imagination, were it not a photograph. A photograph never lies; it may distort the truth when it is the work of a bungler in the art; but there is none of this in this picture. It is due to show the good nature of the Jersey cow, whose kindly expression betokens that she is greatly pleased with her foster family. These lambs were unfortunate orphans, resulting from an accident to the ewe. As a temporary expedient they were held to the cow's teat, and immediately accepted the services of the foster mother, who reared them, as well as her calf. These lambs, pure bred Southdowns, are valuable, being of superior stock, and the incident goes to show not only the usefulness of the substitution, but of the good temper and disposition of the Jersey cows so often denied to them. The cow is a pure-bred Jersey only two years old.

There is one more lesson given in this picture, which is timely; it teaches how lambs should be docked. The tails are docked when ten days old by simply clipping off, with a sharp pair of pruning shears, the tail at a joint, first dressing back the skin, so that when the bloosms receive pollen from some other source the fruit receives nearer perfection. Self-fecundated pears have been known to be deficient in seed, and plums of the same variety have given the same unsatisfactory results. Prof. Fred. W. Card, of the Rhode Island Experiment Station, has found that the size of tomatoes may be quite dependent on the amount of pollen they receive while in bloom. one receiving a larger amount growing four times as large as one receiving only a small quantity. The number of insect visitors in an orchard determines, to a large extent, the amount of cross-pollination carried on, as the pollen of the apple and pear is not produced in sufficient quantity, nor is the proper consistency to be carried by the winds. Three or four varieties of fruits should be planted together; that is, three or more varieties of apples, the same of pears, etc., and every fruit grower should have at least one hive of bees.

Parasitic Insects.

A certain authority has stated that a single female louse may become the grandmother of 10,000 in eight weeks' time. Some other parasitic insects are said to breed even more rapidly. There is but one way to exterminate them, and that is to kill the first one as quickly as possible before it has an opportunity of breeding. This is not so difficult if one pays attention to the matter, and as soon as their presence is suspected use any good reliable remedy for them, of which there are many, although we know of none more efficient than kerosene emulsion, or a mixture of kerosene one pint in four pints of skimmilk. The application it may be made safely by a sponge or cloth, rubbing it in to reach the skin. We remember when it was unusual to see horses in the spring that were not troubled with lice as it is now to find a flock of poultry without them, and we hope another half century will banish them from the poultry yard as generally as the last half century has from the calf pen.—Exchange.

Use of Plaster.

Before the use of artificial fertilisers became so generally known, many farmers made a practice of putting a handful of land plaster or gypsum around each hill of corn. They claimed that it caused the corn to grow faster or a darker green, and that it grew faster. Then they were instructed by the agricultural papers that chemists said plaster had no fertilizing property, and that they should use superphosphate at five or six times the cost. Perhaps the papers were right, but few can see why the chemists let them the power which plaster has of absorbing and holding ammonia until it is washed out by the rain, or know how ammonia might be in the air to be brought down by rain and dew. We think that if we should to use plaster in that way now, and be sure of nothing else, that we would do as good at so small a cost. It would probably be of most benefit where there was manure decomposing in the soil, for if ammonia is not yet converted into nitrates.—American Cultivator.

Chicken Cholera.

I have successfully used this simple remedy for years, and never failed to cure a sick fowl, if the medicine was given before the bird was in the last stage of the disease, when no remedy will cure. Boil three ounces of green tea in one pint of water; when it is of a white ash bark in two pints of water; when both are cool mix corn meal with it till it is of the consistency for proper feeding. Then add a teaspoonful of cayenne and a tablespoonful of black pepper to from one to two quarts of the feed, and force the fowls to eat it. In a few days the sick ones will be well and will cure every time. Chicken cholera is a diarrhea, and the pepper and tea are astringents. Most of the so-called chicken cholera, and gapes in little chickens, are caused by drinking water which stands in the poultry yard and barnyard. These diseases can be largely obviated by having the land well drained and perfectly smooth, so that no water can stand on it after a rain, and by keeping pure, fresh water where the fowls can drink at will.—Martha E. Norris.

What to Plant.

There are three things a farmer or gardener should consider before he puts seed in the ground. First, what crops his soil is best adapted to raise. To try to grow that which is not adapted to the soil is a waste of time and labor. Next what does he understand the care of best? This is less important because if he is not very stupid experience helps and books or some kind neighbor may teach him enough to make him successful with a crop of which he has had no previous experience. Third, what can he find a good market for without too much expense for transportation? Nearly all the farmer's crops are in demand but not all crops will grow well in his own neighborhood. Think it over before putting in the seed.

Swill for Pigs.

I see that some one says that swill is not good for pigs. I am sorry of this, for several reasons; first, it ruins the old poet who spoke of the swine squealing for swill. He will now be compelled to say they were squealing for more "balance rations," etc. Then it does away with mother taking that poor little scrubby pig and wanting to know if nothing that will do so much

Comrade Murphy was promoted to senior vice-commander. The next encampment will be held at Cœur d'Alene.

—John A. Leitch was a welcome visitor the first of the week. He has been on a trip to the Kamiah country and reported great progress being made in developing that section. A great change is taking place—new buildings are being constructed, nice farms opening up, great crops growing, hills full of cattle, and the people contented.

—Messrs. Al. Haymond, Fred Zabel, Uhre and Roth returned from a trip to the Colville reservation. They drove 700 miles in nineteen days, and saw the best part of the reservation. Mr. Haymond says it is rather a dry country and does not in any way compare with the Palouse. Thinks it all right for a summer stock range but too much snow in winter to make the business profitable. The Indians have secured the best land for farming purposes.

—Mr. Edwin Peterson and Miss Pauline Krick drove to Moscow Saturday, June 9, secured a marriage license and were married by Rev. Booth. The bride has lived in Genesee the past year and made many friends. All unite in wishing the bride and groom a happy and prosperous future in their fine farm home. May their joys be many.

—Timothy Driscoll returned Sunday from his trip to Portland, Seattle and Tacoma. Says the towns display considerable activity and are building large warehouses in which to handle our grain. At Tacoma is being constructed a warehouse 600 feet long—as long as two business blocks in Genesee—and as much space is being made for ships loading for the orient. Last week the first straight cargo of wheat was sent out for Japan where it will be transformed into flour by mills recently constructed. Mr. Driscoll says the three cities are planning on doing an enormous business in the future with the orient—China, Japan and the Philippine islands—all of which will be of great help to the entire Pacific slope.

—The Genesee ball boys were very much disappointed in the non-appearance of the Indian club. The boys had planned on giving the reds the best they knew how. The Indian war dance at Lewiston Saturday was probably the cause of their not being able to appear in Genesee. Lo had a big time at the war dance. Jack Allen opened the ball with this speech reported in the Tribune: "This a war dance—this is not a war dance, this is a peace dance, but we dance it for fun just as we used to dance it for mad; a man who make newspaper he said Nez Perce, he make war; he lie—Nez Perce white man's friend." Then the tribe sang, being accompanied by the squaws who each hit a big base drum. The dance then began in earnest and was, to say the least, picturesque, and although the Indians lacked the grace of Carmencita, yet the poetry of motion was not entirely lacking and they made some pretty and difficult steps. A number attended from Genesee.

ROYAL Baking Powder

Absolutely Pure

Makes hot breakfast-breads wholesome—no yeast germs, no alum. Makes cake, biscuit and pastry of superior fineness, flavor and delicacy. Makes food that will keep moist and sweet. Is most economical, because it is the purest and greatest in leavening strength. In the easy, expeditious preparation of the finer cakes and pastries, Royal is indispensable.

Care must be taken to avoid baking powders made from alum. Such powders are sold cheap, because they cost but a few cents per pound. Not only will they spoil the cake, but alum is a corrosive acid, which taken in food means injury to health.

Forestier-Walker's dispatch in full is as follows:

"Cape Town, June 12.—The following telegram was received from Charles Knox:

"'Kroonstad.—The following casualties are reported from Roodeval, date Rhenoster River, June 8, received here by flag of truce June 10: Casualties to the Fourth battalion of the Derbyshire regiment, the Sherwood Foresters: Killed—Lieutenant Baird-Douglass and Lieutenant Hawley and fifteen of the rank and file; wounded—Colonel Wilkinson, Captain Bailey, Lieutenants Hall, Lawder and Blanchard and 59 of the rank and file; the Shropshire Light infantry, one; Cape Pioneer Railroad regiment, seven; Ammunition Park, Royal Marines and Imperial Telegraphs one each; Post Office Corps, one.

"'Stonham reports that many were severely wounded and the remaining of the Fourth Derbyshire, except six of the rank and file, are in his camp. All the wounded are in his camp, lately occupied by the Fourth Derbyshire. Inquiries are being made as to the names.'"

It is inferred that the Boers captured over 500 men as late as June 10, and held positions cutting off the British forces north of Kroonstad from reinforcements.

Methuen Is Engaged by the Boers.

A dispatch from General Forestier-Walker says General Methuen was fighting within 10 miles of Heilbrun as follows:

"Cape Town, June 12.—General Kelly-Kenny reports from Bloemfontein that Methuen with the greater part of his division was fighting early in the morning of June 8, 10 miles south of Heilbrun, where Colonel Ville was reported to be with the Highland brigade.

"Methuen left Lindley June 5 with ample supplies for himself and Colonel Ville, leaving Paget to hold Lindley with a sufficient force.

"Kelly-Kenny has ordered Knox to press on the enemy's outposts, believing the enemy's strength to be exaggerated.

"All is quiet and there is no anxiety as regards the district to the south. Communications north of Kroonstad have been cut since June 6."

News that the shutting off of Roberts' communication with the outer world was accompanied by a serious loss came like a thunderbolt.

In the Free State.

New York, June 12.—A dispatch from London says:

The Boer commandoes in the Free State, commanded by Dewet and Olivier, probably muster about 5000 men. Opposed to them are about six divisions, exclusive of the troops lining the railway. General Methuen with the First, at Lindley; General Chermside, with the Third, at Kroonstad; General Rundle and General Brabant, with the Eighth and Colonial divisions, at Ficksburg; General Clement, with the Twelfth division, at Senekal, and General Kelly-Kenny with another brigade of the Sixth and probably other forces at Bloemfontein. There must be 30,000 British troops available for operations against Dewet and Olivier, and each of these six columns is too strong to be attacked. Only two of the six columns are supplied directly by the railway, and the remaining four are each dependent upon convoys or endeavoring to live off the country. The difficulties of transport were serious enough to cripple these scattered forces, and when General Roberts was cut off from communication with Kroonstad there were six generals waiting orders, and there was nobody in supreme command in the Free State. There is no official news from any of these columns. Dewet could hardly have hit upon cleverer tactics for throwing the British plans into confusion.

Boers Surrendered.

Mentersspoort, June 12.—Two hundred and fifty Boers have surrendered to General Hunter and the remainder in this district have promised to give up their arms.

All in all the dispatches reveal that the situation is far more serious than any one imagined. There is no further word of General Buller.

Gen. MacArthur Active.

New York, June 12.—A special from Washington says:

It is the understanding of the war department that Major General MacArthur has sent officers of the army to various points in China under instructions to intercept filibustering expeditions. The information will at once be communicated to the naval authorities, who will take measures for the capture of expeditions. In addition to looking out for the expeditions it is expected the officers in China will report upon the situation so as to keep the authorities advised of the feeling among the Chinese.

Mrs. Gladstone Is Ill.

London, June 12.—Mrs. Gladstone has suffered another relapse and is unconscious.

Killed in St. Louis Strike.

St. Louis, June 11.—The day just ended has been one of the most eventful and bloody since the great strike on the St. Louis Transit began more than a month ago. There were numerous encounters between strikers and other individuals and the constituted authorities resulting in three deaths and the wounding of five or more persons, mostly strikers. One of the latter will die.

The dead:

C. Edward Thomas, striking conductor on the Chouteau avenue line, shot in breast by a deputy sheriff; died on the way to the hospital.

George Rine, striking motorman on Delmar avenue line, shot in the abdomen by a deputy sheriff; died at the city hospital.

Fred Boehm, aged citizen, shot and instantly killed while standing in his front yard, by a deputy sheriff.

E. D. Burkhardt, striking conductor on Delmar avenue line, shot in the head.

The wounded:

Oscar Marvin, conductor on the Lee avenue line, shot in the right hand and arm; serious.

August Smith, shot in the right arm and breast; not serious.

Charles Luswig, shot in the hand; not serious.

Ed Barry, motorman, hit on head with a brick, badly injured.

James McQuire and McElroy, severe scalp wounds, received in trouble with the strike sympathizers.

To Rob the Mails.

Seattle, June 11.—Attaches of the United States attorney's and marshal's office have unearthed what they believed to be a systematic plan to rob the United States mails between this city and Everett. They have arrested a man who gave his name as A. T. Fraser, and found on his person $4100 in Tacoma bank checks, which had been cashed by local banks in Everett and had been forwarded by mail over the Great Northern railway to Tacoma for collection. Absolute proof has been obtained that the checks went into the United States mails at Everett, and were deposited in government mail pouches and delivered aboard the mail cars.

Fraser, when arraigned before a United States commissioner in this city, maintained he had found the checks near the railroad track at Everett, and that his only connection with the case was in an attempt to obtain a reward from the banks. His arrest was the result of letters which he wrote the Everett banks demanding that they provide him with a ticket to Cape Nome for the return of the vouchers. He called at the postoffice in this city for the responses, and was arrested by a United States marshal. Government officials believe that they have conclusive evidence that employes of the railway mail service are connected with the attempted steal. Further developments are looked for soon.

England and Chinese.

London, June 11.—The Chinese situation, which at the beginning of last week was merely a small cloud on the international horizon, now overshadows every other topic. England, according to most authorities, save those who control her foreign policy, is face to face with a crisis in far eastern affairs, which, though it may not result in any immediate partition of China, must determine the part that England shall play when the partition eventually occurs. That such an emergency should have arisen at a moment when England is least able to utilize it, when almost all her land forces are 6000 miles from home, and when there is a paramount necessity for keeping an extra strong fleet in European waters, is deplored by all shades of statesmen and politicians.

Lord Salisbury stands almost alone amidst his own party in believing that the results of the "Boxer" outbreak will be neither serious nor permanent.

Gov. Oates Killed a Negro.

Montgomery, Ala., June 11.—Ex-Governor Oates shot and killed a negro man at his residence in this city Saturday. He heard a pistol shot in his kitchen, and on going to investigate, found his cook lying on the floor, killed by a negro. The negro who did the killing started toward Governor Oates with his pistol in hand. The negro, not paying any attention to warnings not to advance, Governor Oates shot and killed him.

Four Believed Burned.

West Newfield, Me., June 12.—The farm buildings of George W. Goodwin, situated two miles from here, were burned Monday, and it is believed that Mr. Goodwin, the housekeeper, Mrs. Elise Horton, an adopted son and Fred Bierch lost their lives.

Accident at Brick Works.

Anniston, Ala., June 11.—By the explosion of a boiler at the Duke brick works John Ryan and Will Stovage were instantly killed, George Wetzell and Asa Wilkerson seriously injured and six others slightly hurt.

It is reported that the shingle mills of Washington will resume operations. This will give employment to about 5000 men.

THE UPRISING IN CHINA

RUSSIA WILL LAND TROOPS.

The Boxer Movement Is Spreading—France Will Take Active Steps—Foreigners Are Seeking Safety—American Mission Destroyed.

London, June 11.—The situation in China appears distinctly graver. The destruction of a Russian chapel at Tung Tingan has provided Russia with the desired pretext to land more troops. The dispatch from St. Petersburg this afternoon that the government is resolved if the dangerous situation in China continues to take military action to repress the anti-foreign movement, at the same time declaring that it has no intention of dissociating itself from the joint action of the powers, may be regarded as semi-official utterance, meaning that if there is any hesitancy on the part of the powers Russia will not act alone.

All reports agree that the "Boxer" movement is spreading. The report is confirmed that the French agents at Mong Tse and Yun Nan Fu have been compelled to retire, and this shows that the foment has reached southwestern China and has provoked France into taking active steps.

Sir Claude Macdonald, the British minister at Peking, has wired the British consul at Shanghai confirming the reported outrages and the fact that the throne and government have been actuated by a secret sympathy with the "Boxer" movement, which the government has ample power to suppress if it so desired. His dispatch, however, is in no way of an alarmist nature.

The latest Tientsin dispatch, saying that the dowager empress has appointed anti-foreign generals with the pretended mission to suppress the "Boxers," makes it impossible to doubt that the time has arrived for energetic action.

It is expected that the British government will utilize the Chinese regiment which has been in training at Wei-Hai-Wei, as it would be dangerous to remove the garrison from Hong Kong at the present moment.

A special dispatch from Shanghai says: "The tsung li yamen has protested to the ministers against the presence of such a large number of foreign forces, asserting that it can not be only for the protection of the legations, but for the establishment of a garrison in the capital of an independent friendly state. The answer which the foreign ministers returned to this protest is unknown.

"The American mission at Pei Tang Chow was destroyed, but the missionaries fled to a place of safety.

"It is reported that the viceroy of Che Li has resigned.

"It is proposed to bring Li Hung Chang back from the south, but Prince Kang Yi proposes to give the post to the infamous Li Ping Hen, the former governor of Shan Tung.

"Pao Tung Fu is burned. The Tientsin railway has finally ceased to be operated. All the English missionaries are encamped inside the legation."

Diligence Not Desired.

Tientsin, June 11.—It is said here that General Nieh-Si-Chung has been officially ordered to protect the railroad and disperse the "Boxers" without violence, and that he has been severely censured for killing over 500 of them and burning three villages. About 1500 of his troops have returned to Iupai, and more of them are returning there.

It is announced on creditable authority that unless a foreign guard is sent to Tong Shan by June 12 all foreigners in southern China will leave. The four foreign gunboats in the river at Taku are considered able to frustrate any trouble at that station or at the forts.

General Nieh's troops are now fighting beyond Yang Tsun.

Election in B. C.

Vancouver, B. C., June 10.—The Martin government has been overwhelmingly defeated as a result of recent election for members of the provincial parliament. The legislature is composed of 38 members and at midnight returns have been received from 35 constituencies, indicating the election of 28 opposition and only seven straight supporters of the government. The three seats which are still in doubt will probably return opposition members. Premier Martin does not acknowledge an absolute defeat, but claims his ability to induce half a dozen members-elect counted among the opposition to support his government upon a vote of want of confidence in the house.

The straight conservatives will have the strongest individual following, having elected 13 members. Martin, the premier, is elected in Vancouver, as is also Smith Curtis, minister of mines, in Rossland district, and J. C. Brown of Westminster, minister of finance. Two of the ministers, Yates of Victoria and Beebe of Yale, are defeated.

New Cruiser Albany.

Southampton, June 12.—The United States cruiser Albany, which was placed in commission at Newcastle-on-Tyne May 30 and under orders to proceed to the Mediterranean, arrived at Southampton today. The United States training ship Buffalo, which sailed from New York April 19 for a cruise in the Mediterranean, has also arrived.

Revolution in Water Travel.

Experiments have proven that vessels, fitted with propellers which imitate the fish's fin, develop a remarkable propelling power. It will cause a revolution in water travel. Men gradually learn that Nature's ways are best. One cause of the remarkable success of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters springs from the fact that it is a harmless, natural medicine, made of Nature's most strengthening herbs. It is a sure cure for constipation, indigestion, dyspepsia, biliousness or weak kidneys.

The lot for the labor temple at San Francisco, Cal., is expected to cost $50,000, and the building $125,000 to $150,000; 1200 shares at $5 each have been taken.

At Paris Exposition.

Paris, June 11.—The golden harvest of the exposition has at last begun. Twice last week the number of visitors exceeded half a million, which surpasses the figures of the 1889 exposition at a similar period. It is estimated that over 8,000,000 people have now passed the turnstiles.

The juries have begun their tasks, and the American representatives in each group are hard at work seeking honors for United States exhibits.

Parisians who so long have revelled in the cabarets representing death, heaven and hell, which almost every visitor considers a part of the sights of Paris, are now offered another morbid attraction in the shape of a drama written and performed by a couple of Parisians who have just been released after serving terms of imprisonment for attempted murder. One is an actress who was convicted of attempting to dispose of a rival by a diet of pins concealed in a pudding. The other was the heroine of a cause celebre last year. She had tried to poison her husband with strychnine, and on conviction attempted to commit suicide by driving a hat pin through her heart. The women made acquaintance with each other while in the prison of St. Lazare by rappings on the wall dividing their cell. On their release recently they wrote a play, which is very sensational, and which will shortly be produced at one of the small theaters within the exposition grounds.

Trade Report.

Bradstreet's report for last week says:—New business at wholesale was of a between stations character, but warmer weather has offered a stimulus to retail business in some sections. Chief activity and most attention are, however, still concentrated on the price situation, and efforts to adjust quotations to most current demand and supply conditions go forward steadily. The exceptions to the general downward tred of prices are those furnished by leading farm products, notably cereals, but here this moving cause is hardly favorable, being the result of less favorable crop reports, particularly from the northwest, and it is to be noted that advices from the central west, where the winter wheat yield promises to be very short, are less favorable. The northwesterns had some rains, but it is claimed not enough to render the southern free from danger. Corn crop conditions remain favorable, as likewise do those of oats, but the grains and hog products have sympathized in the upward movement of wheat, which has at last broken from its lethargy and is again attracting speculative attention. Foreign crop advices, it might be added, are not flattering. The German rye crop promises to be short; the same report comes regarding French wheat, and English crop advices are not of the best. Southern iron mills are shading quotations in sympathy with similar actions taken in Pittsburg, Chicago and other markets. Prices at Birmingham are now on a parity with those of Europe, freight charges considered, and here, as in the north, the possibility of labor strikes intrudes itself. Cotton is slightly weaker. Wool is dull and on the whole slightly weaker at eastern markets. Mills engaged on women's wear goods are fairly well employed, the outlook favors lower prices for the new spring weights. There is little new in shoes. Leather is dull and rather weak. Price shadings are reported the rule in lumber, and this coupled with low water in the northwest, it is hoped, may restrict new productions.

Surplus visible wheat supplie are decreased. The decrease in American stocks as reported to Bradstreet's in May was 13,330,000 bushels against a falling off of 9,033,000 bushels in April. Supplies in Europe, Australia and Argentine also decreased, though to a much less marked extent and the result is an aggregate world's supply on June 1 of 143,583,000 bushels, a supply of 15,660,000 bushels less than on May 1, and comparing with a decrease in May a year ago of less than 1,000,000 bushels and two years ago of an increase of nearly 2,000,000 bushels. The decrease in American and European supplies is the largest reported in any month since 1898, and is the largest reported in May since 1895. Business failures number 184, as compared with 135 last week, 178 in this week a year ago, 221 in 1898, 216 in 1897 and 274 in 1896. There were 96 failures in Canada in May, involving $931,280 of liabilities, an increase of 13 per cent in number and 75 per cent in liabilities over the same month a year ago.

MINES AND MINING NEWS

OUR NORTHWESTERN MINES.

Items Gleaned From Late Reports—All Districts Are Being Developed—A Prosperous Year Is Predicted—Mining Notes and Personals.

A short time ago, while making a cleanup in his placer mine at Winterville, Ore., in the Greenhorn district, Minton Austin picked up a nugget weighing $312. He came to town last night, bringing with him the large nugget and several smaller ones, amounting in all to several hundred dollars. There have been several rich strikes in the Greenhorn this year, and placer mining is fast gaining prominence there.

REPUBLIC.

The total amount of drift run on the San Poil in May was 87 feet.

Arrangements are being made to resume work on the Lake View claim.

The Lone Pine received about 40 feet less than its average development last month.

Work on the Ruby is progressing rapidly. Some exceptionally fine ore is being taken out.

The Ben Hur made nearly the usual monthly record. About 65 feet of raise and drift were run.

May was a remarkably poor month in the matter of the regular development in Republic camp.

Work on the Chico was not resumed until near the end of the month; 34 feet of shaft was completed.

It is admitted that the Mountain Lion mill is a great success. It is treating ore at a cost of $2.50 per ton.

The Republic mine is in such shape that ore can be broken much faster than it can be used for a long time.

The Knob Hill made a slight improvement of the amount of development in May, a total of 100 feet being cut.

Work on the Rebate was suspended on May 19, and being but a short month only 26½ feet of tunnel was driven.

The Mountain Lion still takes the lead in point of development. During the past month the total number of feet run was 341.

The Quilp winze is down 350 feet, giving a depth from the surface of about 250 feet. About five feet a day is the usual progress.

Many of the immense tanks for the Republic mill are completed, and most of the heavy masonry is well along. Work is progressing rapidly with a large force.

Some fine ore is being taken out of the Nova. This claim is on what is supposed to be the Mountain Lion ledge, and lies about half a mile south west of the big mine.

The Tom Thumb compressor arrived. The shaft has passed the new ledge, and is down 275 feet, making about three feet per day. There has been no increase in the inflow of water.

When the 70 tons of high-grade Black Tail ore recently shipped has been run through the custom mill, it is announced that the company will be ready to give out its rates of treatment and to bid on ore. It is expected that this will be early this week.

The drifts from the cross tunnel at the 320-foot level of the Knob Hill are showing up a high grade of ore. The ledge is three feet wide. The rich pay shoot that was opened some time ago will be reached in about 15 days, and then it is expected there will be some big news from the mine.

Excellent progress is being made on the shaft of the Chico, which is down 260 feet and is being extended about five feet each day. Three shifts of eight hours are employed. The mine is equipped with a Griffith & Wedge compressor of five-drill capacity, an air receiver 42 by 96 inches, a Heaney & Baltroff high-speed double boiler, 7x9 hoist, and a Cameron sinking pump that a has a capacity of 5000 gallons of water an hour. The drills are of the Sullivan pattern, and are said to strike harder and can be run at a higher rate of speed than any other in use.

MINING NOTES.

The Black Bear-War Eagle gold mine at Loomis is in a most satisfactory condition.

A reduction plant is to be placed on the properties of the Oro Fino Quartz Mining Company in Pierce district, Shoshone county, Idaho.

Three teams are hauling ore from the Cleveland to the Springdale depot. It is reported that 11 men are at work on a new wagon road from Cedar canyon to connect with the Camas prairie road leading to Springdale, for the shipment of Deer Trail and other ores.

An important strike has been made on the Black Jack, Near Myers Falls. Work for some time has been on an overflow on the surface. This has been prospected by a tunnel and the main body of ore has just been found 163 feet from the surface. Assays have given $41 in gold.

Assay returns from a sample of ore from the Mars Hill Mining Company's property, on the north half of the Colville reservation, were received in Danford, Wash. The returns gave 36 cents in silver and $948.42 in gold, making a total of $948.78.

In the Bull Frog, at Loomis, a drift from the crosscut tunnel on the vein east has reached a point under the old Phantom shaft. A raise has been started from the drift to tap the bottom of the shaft, for the purpose of giving a good circulation of air. The raise will be 80 feet long.

B. B. Hill, one of the owners of the Roaring Eagle, on Bridge creek, has reached Keller, Wash., with news of a strike of a three-foot pay shoot in their 80-foot tunnel. According to Mr. Hill, an average assay from the new discovery ran $65 per ton, and picked samples would run much higher.

News has been received from Chewelah, Wash., that the famous Eagle mine, on which considerable work has been done of late, is ready to resume shipments, having a considerable quantity of good grade ore ready to send out. The return of this old property to the list of shippers recalls its interesting history.

While at work in the Elkhorn district, near Baker City, Ore., John Deerman discovered a quartz ledge six feet wide, the ore assaying $108 per ton. This is one of the richest strikes that has been made in that section for a long time and is causing considerable excitement, as the claim was supposed to be of little value.

Word has been received from Mount Idaho that another shipment from the Dewey-St. Patrick is shortly to be made, and that the 100 tons of ore of which it will be composed will soon be ready to be sent out. The force on the mine is shortly to be increased to 35. The company is building a wagon road over the five miles from the mine to Harpster to facilitate shipment.

It is reported at Wallace, Idaho, that the Empire State-Idaho Mining and Development Company has finally decided on the location for its works. It has begun work preparatory to putting in a flume 14 miles long to carry the waters of Pine creek to Government gulch, where the two-mile deep tunnel is being run to reach the lower levels of the Last Chance and Skookum.

The Northport smelter is running two blast furnaces, and it is expected that the third will shortly be blown in. Preparations are going forward to meet the increased shipments expected from the mines in the next 60 days. Two new boilers, with a capacity of 240 horse power, have been ordered and will shortly arrive. This, with two more blast furnaces added, will bring the capacity of the plant up to the required amount to meet the tonnage expected.

Some rich dirt has been discovered in the old Spanish gulch placer claims, in Spanish gulch, near Rock Creek, Ore. These diggings, which were very poor in early days, were supposed to be worked out and were abandoned. Last spring they were relocated and several hundred dollars was washed out as a result of a few weeks' run. This spring the owners again began work on these claims, and in two weeks washed out and cleaned up $2000. In the cleanup was one nugget weighing a pound and several others of large size.

A double cylinder hoist has arrived at Stuart, Idaho, for the Big Buffalo mine. It will be held at Stuart until the road is opened to allow it to be taken through to the Hump. The road will be commenced immediately. Charles Sweeny of the Big Buffalo has subscribed $400 and the Grangeville chamber of commerce added an equal amount, so that $800 is now on hand for the prosecution of the work. Not a day will be lost in getting the connection made, as it is expected that before that time there will be other important consignments of mining supplies for Hump properties awaiting its completion.

BRITISH COLUMBIA.

One of the mines in Phoenix camp which is attracting a good deal of attention is the Snowshoe, adjoining the Gold Drop, east of that camp.

Lot No. 30 copper matte was shipped by the City of Nanaimo last Saturday. The smelter is running on Cornell and Copper Queen ores, making high grade matte.

The sinking of the working shaft of the Cornell mine is down 65 feet, while the winze on the same level is down 38 feet in high-grade sulphide ore, which has continued in the winze from the 80-foot level, the shaft being sunk on the footwall of the vein, and the winze on the hanging wall, and both showings continue in ore.

The cable and trucks for the Iron mine were sent over from Van Anda last week. The cable is 2400 feet long and will be used on the incline between the stope and bunkers for the shipment of iron ore to the smelter.

The mineral output of Canada for 1899 is officially set down as $47,275,512. Three years earlier, in 1896, the mineral output was only $22,609,825. This means that in three years this item of the countries production has more than doubled.

Ore that is believed to carry the highest value in silver of any ore in Republic camp was uncovered recently in the San Poil. There is only a 12-inch streak of this ore, but its great richness, both in gold and silver, makes it a very valuable discovery. The assay for the entire streak as far as it has been uncovered is $377.25 in gold and 88 ounces of silver to the ton. Even at the present width, if this wonderful pay streak holds out, it will be a big addition to the already remarkable wealth of the mine.

Before its second 40-drill compressor has all arrived from Sherbrooke, the Le Roi Mining Company is calling for tenders for a third compressor of the same capacity, which will be needed as soon as the contract can be let and the machine built and installed. There is now in use one 40-drill and one 12-drill compressor, and the second 40-drill machine is on the ground and being installed. Two carloads of it have not arrived, but as they include the parts which will be needed last, they will not delay the work of installation. When the new compressor is in operation there will be capacity for 92 drills, but it is proposed to then lay off the 12-drill machine, except in emergencies, on account of the high cost of operating it, compared with the larger machines. This will leave 80 drills, which will be about enough to operate the mine to its full capacity when the new hoist is in operation, and at the same time to carry on the development of the Josie, No. 1 and Nickel Plate.

GEN. BOTHA WILL FIGHT IT OUT

HE WOULD NOT SURRENDER.

After Consulting With His Men—Ventordorp Accepted by Hunter—Boers Are Active in Orange River Colony.

London, June 11.—A belated dispatch from Mount Prospect, via New Castle, Natal, throws light on the armistice agreed upon by the British and the Boers recently. It appears that General Buller met General Christian Botha June 2 at O'Neill's farm, between Umguela and Majuba, and summoned Botha to surrender. Botha said he was not empowered to accept the demand.

General Buller replied: "Very well," and turned to go away, when General Botha pressed him to make a proposal. General Buller said he had no proposal to make, but pointed out that the Boers were surrounded and referred to the uselessness of shedding unnecessary blood.

"What do you want us to do?" asked General Botha, beseechingly.

"Return to your farms, leave your big guns and await Lord Roberts' decision," replied General Buller.

The federal commander said he would refer the question to the burghers. General Buller then acceded to his (Botha's) appeal for armistice until daybreak June 6, showing the reports of General Buller having requested an armistice to have been incorrect.

The dispatch adds that the federals are understood to have 23 guns in position, but it is doubtful if they can remove them. Their only line of retreat is in the direction of Lydenburg. General Buller's dispatch shows that the burghers ultimately decided not to surrender.

Hunter Meets With Success.

Lichtenberg, June 11.—General Hunter's advance column has occupied Ventordory, the Boers quietly surrendering in small bodies. Considerable plundering has been done. Mahon's column has rejoined Hunter.

Activity Is Not Agreeable.

London, June 11.—London is somewhat disgusted at the "disagreeable activity" manifested by the Boers in the Orange River colony in cutting Roberts' telegraphic communication at Roodeval, north of Kroonstad. As yet there are no indications whence came the strong body of 2000 Boers that has arrived at Roodeval, unless it is the force mentioned in a recent Boer dispatch as having started from Standerton with this very object in view. Apparently the authorities on the spot regard the situation as at least temporarily serious, as they are not only reinforcing the garrison at Kroonstad, but are sending up troops from the lines of communication in Cape Colony.

Roodeval is a fairly strong position, 35 miles north of Kroonstad, capable of giving General Kelly-Kenny trouble should the federals elect to dispute its possession, as General Kelly-Kenny cannot be overburdened with cavalry with which to threaten the burghers' lines of retreat. The news somewhat discounts the flattering deductions the Britishers have been extracting from Roberts' silence, as it indicates that the menace of the Boers to carry on a prolonged guerrilla warfare is no empty threat, and that President Steyn is still capable of creating a serious, if only temporary, trouble.

Parliamentary returns just issued show that 36 members of the house of lords and 28 members of the house of commons are serving with the British troops in South Africa.

Ordered to the Philippines.

Washington, June 11.—Orders have been issued at the war department for the first squadron of the Sixth cavalry, consisting of headquarters and Companies A, B, C and D, and the Third squadron of the same regiment, consisting of Companies I, K, L and M, to proceed without delay to San Francisco for transportation to the Philippines on the first available transports. So far these are the only troops selected for service in the Philippines under the plan of bringing home the entire 31,000 volunteers and of maintaining the regular army in the Philippines at a strength of 40,000 men.

No Trace of Adolph Kuhn.

Chicago, June 11.—Investigations of the affairs of Adolph A. Kuhn, junior member of the mortgage brokerage firm of Kuhn Brothers, who disappeared about two months ago, leaving, it is alleged, a shortage of between $700,000 and $1,000,000, resulted in the arrest today on charges of conspiracy and forgery of John Anderson, formerly in Kuhn's employ. Anderson admitted his guilt. So far as known no trace has been found of Kuhn.

Victory for Revolutionists.

Washington, June 12.—The following dispatch has been received at the navy department:

"Colon, June 12.—It is reported that an engagement has taken place resulting in the defeat of the national forces yesterday. The national forces retreated with ammunition nearly exhausted. They have been reinforced and ordered to renew the attack. The loss in killed and wounded was five officers. Reports are very conflicting. I shall remain here.

"LOGAN."

Suicide of James Rounds.

Portland, June 11.—James L. Rounds of Indianapolis committed suicide at the Hotel Portland by shooting himself. Rounds came here recently to take charge of an agency of the Atkinson Circular Saw company. No motive is known for the suicide.

Clark Received Ovation.

Butte, Mont., June 11.—The Hon. William A. Clark, who resigned his position as United States senator for Montana, and who was immediately appointed to the vacancy by the acting governor, reached home Sunday afternoon and was given a tremendous ovation.

Boers Will Fight It Out.

London, June 8.—The Lorenzo Marquez correspondent of the Times says:

"According to refugees from Pretoria, thousands of burghers under General Botha have taken an oath to continue the struggle to the bitter end.

"United States Consul Hollis has started for the Transvaal. The nature of his mission is not made public here."

According to a dispatch from Lorenzo Marquez, the Boers under General Botha are again concentrating in the neighborhood of Hathely, 12 miles east of Pretoria.

From the same source it is reported that the British prisoners are being removed to Nooitgedacht from the unhealthy spot in the Elands valley. About 500 men reached there June 5 and 700 June 6.

The strained relations between the secretary of state for war, Marquis of Lansdowne, and the British commander-in-chief of forces, Lord Wolseley, appear to have reached such a pitch that but for the exigencies of the situation Lord Wolseley would have resigned. It seems that Lord Lansdowne attempted to usurp some of the authority always heretofore wielded by the commander-in-chief, and the latter is now said to have laid the whole matter before Lord Salisbury.

The list of casualties now coming through indicates that there was severe fighting before the Thirteenth Yeomanry surrendered. Already the names of 19 men killed and 28 wounded have been issued.

The killed includes Sir John Elliott Cecil Power, baronet, and among the wounded is the earl of Longford.

In response to a telegraphic inquiry to President Kruger informing him of the offer of 100 acres of land in America to each burgher, the president replied:

"We thank you for this generous offer of land, but the burghers are determined to fight for their own land and independence to the end.'

Customs Officials Blown Up.

Oporto, June 11.—An explosion, caused by mining fuses, at the customs department killed two persons and injured 13.

More than 75,000 men are said to be today walking the streets of New York seeking employment. Attracted by reports of the work to be done on the rapid transit tunnel, laborers from the four quarters of the globe are hastening there in shoals. Every ship from Europe, every train from the west, east and south brings its freight of would-be workmen. Men fight each other for jobs and hundreds live on soup dished out by charitable organizations and individuals.

The American Bicycle Company (the bicycle trust) refuses to have anything to do with labor unions.

There is a general strike in all the cigar factories of the Havana-American Company at Tampa, Fla. About 1000 men are out.

Farm laborers are in grea demand in the San Joaquin valley, Cal.

—War to the bitter end say Paul Kruger.

—Troy, according to large posters, will have a big time on the fourth.

—A Rhode Island man has swelled the census more than any other man in the country. His name is Levy Brisson and he has had 41 children, 32 of whom are still living. He has been married three times and is over 90 years old. He has at least a hundred grandchildren living, but has lost count of the latter generations.

—Mr. Hearst is not satisfied in publishing a paper in San Francisco and one in New York City, but now contemplates establishing his third daily at Chicago. If this new adventure is to be similar to the Examiner, we pity the people of the windy city. Talk about trusts. And the million-aire is talked as a running mate to Mr. Bryan.

—Fred T. Dubois, former U. S. senator from Idaho, is circulating among friends in North Idaho. His friends assert that he will be the choice of the silver republicans, democrats and populists of the state for senator. Mr. Dubois believes the three parties will work harmoniously and carry Idaho by an even greater majority than in the last campaign. Evidently he does not heed the warning Oregon sends out.

—Tellurium has been found in the Dewey group on Middle Fork and in the Klondike mine in Pierce district. In '62 or '63 two unknown prospectors left a sack of tellurium at a tent and later samples of it were taken to Portland and assayed, going $132,000 to the ton. This created a stampede to the Orofino district. The Teller says: There is no longer much doubt that a mine as rich as the old Independence at Cripple Creek only wants to be rediscovered within a few days' journey of old Oro Fino camp. Prospectors, don't fail to keep an eye open for "a dull gray rock" that looks like mineralized limestone when in this newly discovered old belt this summer.

—The awaful famine scenes in India are reported beyond description. The camps are swept by starvation, cholera and small pox. Those whom the one spares the others capture. In two camps 5,500 died in four days. The death rate at some points is 90 per cent. A dispatch reads: "Every day new patients are placed with corpses. The thermometer is 115 in the shade. Millions of flies hover around the uncleansed dysentery patients. Vultures, dogs and jackals are devouring the dead. Dogs have been seen running about with children's limbs in their jaws. Between the famine the plague and the cholera, the condition of the Bombay presidency is now worse than it was at any previous period in the nineteenth century."

—The late congress will go into history as one of the most industrious on record and the session as the shortest "long session" on record. In 137 working days both houses have passed 1,215 bills, of which 283 are public acts of general importance and 932 are private acts granting pensions, paying claims and giving relief to people. The bulk of the business exceeds the work of the four previous congresses combined. Two most important bills that failed to pass are the Nicaragua and to tax oleomargarine. The house passed the former but it was held up in the senate until the Clayton-Bulwer treaty could be amended. That treaty pledges the United States not to build a canal across the isthmus. The joint resolution to amend the Constitution of the United States so as to clothe Congress with power to dissolve corporations, associations and partnerships organized and conducted with a view to prevent free competition, was defeated by populists and democrats, lacking 36 of securing the requisite two-thirds. Thus the trusts have another lease of life.

Printing Without Ink.

A company has been formed to control the process of printing without ink, by using electricity and chemically prepared paper. In a short time, it is expected, this innovation will be completely introduced, and old methods revolutionized. There is one thing however that has resisted all innovations; that is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which has many imitators, but no equals as a cure for stomach, liver and bowel troubles. This peerless remedy has been the standard medicine of the American people for the past fifty years. It is a wonderful medicine for dyspepsia, indigestion, biliousness, insomnia, constipation and nervousness. It also prevents, malaria, fever and ague. It keeps the stomach in good condition, and the bowels regular. Try it, and you will not be disappointed.

It's Time Wasted

And strength wasted, to try to push back the rising tide with a broom. It's just as great a waste of time and a far more serious waste of strength to try to push back the rising tide of disease with the "nervines," "compounds" and "nerve foods" which simply drug the nerves into a drunken stupor. They make you feel good? So does whisky, while the feeling lasts, but the reaction is dangerous and deadly. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a temperance medicine. It contains no alcohol, opium, cocaine or other narcotic. It strengthens the body by purifying the blood and increasing the supply of that vital fluid. It heals diseases of the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition and thus removes the obstacles to a perfect nourishment of the whole body.

"Six years ago my stomach and heart troubled me so much I had to do something, as the doctors could not help me," writes Mrs. S. A. Knapp of San José, California, Box 930. "I went to San Francisco and took treatment for catarrh of the stomach and was better for some time, then it came back. I then used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and 'Pleasant Pellets.' These medicines cured my stomach, so I do not have the pain and indigestion as I did. It is very hard for me to tell you what I suffered before I commenced taking your valuable medicine. I recommend it to all the sufferers whom I meet."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets strengthen and stimulate the liver.

—The Mirror says this is the first term of district court in Latah county at which there has not been a single criminal trial. Judge Smith tried a number of cases in the justices courts and brought no actions where a conviction could not be made, thus saving the county costs. The Eves case, for contempt of court, is the only one that will be heard this term and that was not instituted by the county attorney.

—The people of the United States are paying a million dollars a day for tropical products used in manufacturing or food and drink, and most of which are produced in greater or less degree or can be readily produced in the islands which have come into closer relationship with the U. S. thro' the events of the past two years. The Dutch East Indies, which lie just alongside of the Philippines, furnish us much sugar, coffee, cocoa, etc. We imported $70,000,000 in rubber the past ten months and nearly as much of fibers, silks, gums, cotton.

Glorious News.

Comes from Dr. D. B. Cargile, of Washita, I. T. He writes: "Electric Bitters has cured Mrs. Brewer of scrofula, which had caused her great suffering for years. Terrible sores would break out on her head and face, and the best doctors could give no help; but now her health is excellent." Electric Bitters is the best blood purifier known. It's the supreme remedy for eczema, tetter, salt rheum, ulcers, boils and running sores. It stimulates liver, kidneys and bowels, expels poisons, helps digestion, builds up the strength. Only 50c. Sold by Kennedy's pharmacy. Guaranteed.

BETTER OUTLOOK FOR WHEAT.

There has been a marked advance in wheat during the past few days, and there is good reason for believing that most of the increase may be held, and perhaps more added. The premier cereal has been dragging along at pretty low ebb for many months, and anything like a show of returning strength will be of special interest to farmers of the Pacific Northwest. With present favorable weather conditions continuing for another thirty days, Oregon, Washington and Idaho will undoubtedly harvest the largest wheat crop on record in this territory. The 1900 crop under such conditions, will, with the carry-over stock which will remain on hand at the end of the present season, amount to about 50,000,000 bushels. Every cent added to the price per bushel accordingly means $500,000 added to the wealth of the Northwest, so that the ill wind plastering Ohio, Indiana and Dakota farms with mortgages and sending wheatgrowers all over those big states into bankruptcy is certainly blowing good to the farmers of the Pacific Northwest.

The present advance in wheat is due largely to natural conditions. For weeks the Argentine Republic has been pouring into the markets of the Old World record-breaking shipments of wheat, sufficient, with arrivals from other ports, to meet all the demands and to keep the market at very low ebb. The foreign buyers were fully aware that the big country to the south of us could not keep up such enormous shipments throughout the summer. They were also aware, however, that under normal conditions by the time the Argentine shipments began dwindling the Atlantic and Gulf ports of the United States would be shipping 1900-crop wheat to make up any shortage which might exist. Normal conditions no longer exist in the big wheat belt of the Middle West, and the expected shipments will not be forthcoming. The Chicago market, that storm center of wheat speculation, has become somewhat panicky over the crop damage, and within five days a net advance of 5½ cents per bushel has been scored in the July option. Naturally enough, the advance in the Pacific Coast markets has been small in comparison with that of Chicago. Liverpool, which is the world's market, has not yet become imbued with the scare which is pervading the American markets, contiguous to the affected portions of the wheat belt. She has advanced slightly in sympathy with America, but before going the limit will cast her eyes up and down the world to see if the shortage cannot be made up from other countries without advancing prices to correspond with Chicago. With political complications likely at any moment to close the granaries of Russia from her buyers, the outlook is not reassuring; but at the same time, Liverpool can be trusted not to get panicky and send prices up in a hurry unless there is cause for it.

The Pacific Coast cannot market its wheat in Chicago, and accordingly our farmers cannot expect a 5 cent advance when Liverpool refuses to raise her bids more than 2 cents per bushel. If crop conditions in the Middle West continue as bad as represented, a substantial advance in the price of Pacific Coast wheat may be expected, but, owing to the long distance from the world's market, and a scarcity of tonnage, a portion of this advance will be demanded by the shipowner. England has become accustomed to cheap wheat, and also to carrying light stocks, and, as the Pacific Coast is dependent on her for a market, prices at our ports will be governed entirely by the Liverpool market and the ocean freight rate, and not by the gyrations of the Chicago market. Another thing to be considered regarding the handicap which Pacific Coast wheat always suffers in the European market is the fact that by the time the first cargo of 1900 wheat from Oregon or Washington reaches Liverpool early steam cargoes of new-crop Argentine wheat will be trailing right after it.—Oregonian.

—It is said the free homestead act does not apply to the Colville reserve. The settlers will be required to pay $1.50 per acre. This being the case few people from this section will care to go to take up a homestead as they would be paying all the land is worth.

—The first step looking to the organization of a national negro party have been taken in Philadelphia. Prominent negroes—bishops, ministers, editors and lawyers at a meeting decided to place a presidential ticket in the field, with negro candidates. The plan is to organize the party in every state of the union and nominate candidates for state and congressional offices.

—Judge Steele is winding up matters in the district court this week. The following cases were disposed of last week: J. Kasper vs. the Syndicate Gold Mining Co., suit on account, judgment for plaintiff; L. D. Arnold vs. R. S. Browne et al, foreclosure of mechanic's lien, judgment for plaintiff; the Vollmer Milling & Mercantile Co. vs. A. Munroe, claim and delivery, judgment for defendant for $14.50, the verdict not disposing of the property in question; M. A. Means vs. J. W. Brigham, appeal from justice court, judgment for plaintiff; Geana Ryberg vs. Charles Ryberg, decree of divorce granted plaintiff and the custody of the minor child was awarded the defendant; Nancy J. Stewart was granted a divorce from her husband, Isaac Stewart on account of failure to support, and she was granted the custody of a minor child.

—Senators Shoup and Heitfeld will each appoint a cadet from Idaho to the Military Academy at West Point. The appointments are to be made before July 10 and the appointees must report at the academy July 25 for examination.

—Troy country was visited with the heaviest storm, accompanied by hail, in its history last Friday, which lasted about three minutes. Hail stones were the largest ever seen, measuring over an inch in diameter, and doing considerable damage to fruit and heavy grain.

—This morning when the regents of the University left on the train for their homes a large number of students gathered at the depot and cheered Regent Good and Parkinson and President Blanton and hooted the other regents. Considerable feeling had been worked up among the students on account of a rumor that President Blanton was to be "fired" and a petition was presented asking for his retention as president which was ignored and they took advantage of the opportunity to express their disapproval.—Mirror.

—Sam Wilson, one of our most entertaining Nez Perces was a pleasant caller Monday. He was not looking his best, being still decorated with the trade marks of small pox. He was among the crowd of eight who were afflicted with the disease last winter and he has not the kindliest feeling for the white tourist who arrived at his place looking for work. Sam hired him and got the disease in return. Says the Indians at Lapwai will wear their war paint for one full week about July 4th in a big celebration and race meeting. Chief Joseph who is already on the ground, will be followed by the principal part of his tribe. He also informed us that Hon. Stephen Reuben is now counted as chief of the tribe.

—Wheat speculators are watching the spring wheat in the Dakotas and Minnesota. There has not been enough moisture in these states recently to make the crop grow, and reports have never been so numerous or so unanimous in predicting damage as for the past week. The most reliable persons place the damage at 25 to 50 per cent, with more in prospect. Exciting scenes have been witnessed in the pit and as a result wheat is 8¾ cents higher than a week ago. There are more new faces around the board of trade than have been seen in three years. They are mainly people from the outside, who are buying wheat on the crop damage. Old-time operators, who have not been in the market for two years, are also on the buying side, and they have great confidence in higher prices. The foreigner is not showing any uneasiness, and is letting operators here mark up prices without his help. Flour has advanced 30 cents a barrel within a week, in sympathy with the bulge in wheat.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

COUNTY CONVENTION CALL.

In pursuance to a joint meeting of the central committees composing the direct legislation league, the democrats and silver republicans of Latah county, held in Moscow June 16, a general county convention is hereby called to meet in Moscow, on July 10, 1900, at 10 o'clock a. m. of said day for the purpose of placing in nomination a full county ticket as follows, to-wit: County attorney, five representatives in legislature, one senator, three county commissioners, sheriff, treasurer, probate judge, county school superintendent, assessor, coroner, surveyor.

The number of delegates apportioned each precinct is one for every thirty-five votes, or major fraction thereof, based upon the whole vote polled for governor at the last general election, and one delegate at large for each precinct in the county. The respective precincts are entitled to representation as follows:

Palouse	4	Thorn Creek	5
Four Mile	3	Cornwall	3

All supporters of W. J. Bryan, regardless of past political affiliations are cordially invited to take part in said primaries and are entitled to vote in the same.

It is recommended that the primaries be held on Friday, July 6, from the hours of 2 to 6 o'clock p. m. of said day, and the central committees of the parties above mentioned are requested to meet at the polling places in each precinct and organize by appointing judges and clerks to conduct the primaries, and in the event that any or all the said committeemen are absent at the hour of opening of said primaries, then such citizens as are assembled shall organize and conduct such primaries.

All who suffer from piles will be glad to learn that DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve will give them instant and permanent relief. It will cure eczema and all skin diseases. Beware of counterfeits.

KENNEDY'S PHARMACY.

A Good Cough Medicine.

It speaks well for Chamberlain's Cough Remedy when druggists use it in their own families in preference to any other. "I have sold Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for the past five years with complete satisfaction to myself and customers," says druggist J. Goldsmith, Van Etten, N. Y. "I have always used it in my own family both for ordinary coughs and colds and for the cough following la grippe, and find it very efficacious." For sale by all druggists.

Ivy poisoning, poison wounds and all other accidental injuries may be quickly cured by using DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. It is also a certain cure for piles and skin diseases. Take no other.

KENNEDY'S PHARMACY.

Sprained Ankle Quickly Cured.

"At one time I suffered from a severe sprain of the ankle," says Geo. E. Cary, editor of the Guide, Washington, Fa. "After using several well recommended medicines without success, I tried Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and am pleased to say that relief came as soon as I began its use and a complete cure speedily followed." Sold by all druggists.

CHAS. POWERS } Editors and Proprietors.

—Nagel and Scroggins are home from Montana.

—A. E. Wold, the Seattle Times rustler, hustled for subscribers in Genesee this week.

—Dutton & Co. moved out to Fred. Rieck's Wednesday to commence the erection of that large house.

—Judge Stuart held court a couple of days this week in place of Judge Steele to hear the McGrew grain case. McGrew lost the case, over $4,000.

—The Rimrock Mills have orders ahead for 700 barrels of flour but are handicapped by not being able to secure a sufficient amount of good milling wheat.

—The Daily Tribune reports convention doings and other gatherings in a creditable manner and is deserving of the best support that Lewiston can give it. The paper is a credit to North Idaho.

—Gen. King's audience Thursday night was not very large, at Moscow. Dr. J. L. Conant, Frank Standish and W. E. Gage attended from Genesee. The general is not a great orator, but has lots of hard sense. He came to talk to the Idaho volunteers under him in the Philippines. He spoke at length of the bravery of the troops while at the front and of the part they took in the fighting. Eulogized McConville for his active part and modest bravery. Gen. King spoke of Gov. Roosevelt as the highest type of the American college-soldier. The lecture was interesting throughout.

—The NEWS is sorry to learn of trouble at the University at Moscow. Trouble in any state institution is to be deplored, but in our highest educational institution it is certainly to be regretted. Our finest men are to be found there. The university was just beginning to make itself felt on the rising generation. It was generally believed the instution was doing a fine work and was getting along better than most similar young institutions of learning. It surprised our people to learn that the regents had let out J. P. Blanton, president; A. S. Miller, professor of mining and metallurgy; F. A. Huntley, professor of horticulture, and Prof. Beans, assistant chemist. The action was taken by the regents, it is understood, is the result of the local contentions in which members of the faculty became involved and which was detrimental to the work and purposes of the university. These institutions should be above politics and the sooner they are thus situated the better and stronger they become. Let high minded men take control of the University and of the young that are sent there. The Pullman college is working up a great reputation and it is because of the calibre of the men in charge. Perhaps political enemies want to tear down our grand temple of learning?

If you want to buy a new header and pay for it by cutting grain see Mr. Driscoll or Mr. Thompson.

—The Northern Pacific has just completed plans for a Howe truss bridge to span Bear creek near Kendrick.

—The latest candidate for honors in the field of Idaho newspaperdom is the Idaho State Journal, which was launched at Boise last week. It is republican without any kinks.

—The Heistand-Warner warehouses in the Palouse, twenty-one in number, were sold last week, Mr. Wilcox of the Portland Mill Co. securing six teen of them. Mr. T. Driscoll secured the one at Genesee.

—E. T. Platt returned the first of the week from his Salmon river trip. Says the cattle men up there are busy making hay and are prosperous and happy. John Platt came out as far as Spalding with a car load of fat steers. Says that on the road out they passed through a severe hail storm. Mr. and Mrs. Mervyn also returned Tuesday.

—Messrs. U. G. Dickson, J. J. Keane and Dr. P. S. Beck attended the district convention of the Woodmen of the World held at Moscow Tuesday of this week, the two former being delegates from the Genesee camp. Dr. Beck was elected to represent this district at the head convention of the Pacific jurisdiction to be held at Salt Lake August 15.

—The first steamer from Cape Nome has arrived. From it we learn that the frigid gold fields are "richer and more productive than has yet been represented." This may be true, but we'll wager a last year's bird's nest that not one in fifty persons who went up this spring, and are still on water dodging great chunks of ice, will be able to get a claim.

—The price of wheat at Chicago is soaring skyward and in consequence our producers are donning broad smiles. The price has been pushed up some fifteen cents the past two weeks in the eastern markets. This is due to the drought reports from the Dakotas and Minnesota. Saturday and Sunday were the two worst days of the season and many sections will not raise enough wheat for seed. The three states combined cannot raise over 100,000,000 bushels, a decrease from last year of 120,000,000 bushels. Notwithstanding the "bumper crop" of Kansas, the entire yield of wheat will not be over 500,000,000 bushels, say the statisticians. In sympathy with eastern markets the price on the coast has raised a few cents. With a big crop almost assured the heart of the average Genesee farmer may well beat with joy as he reads the market reports. Keep soaring.

F. I. WHITNEY, Gen'l Passenger and Tkt. Agt., St. Paul, Minn.

FRIDAY, JUNE 22, 1900.

—Mrs. Halterman is visiting friends at Johnson.

—Mrs. E. A. McKenna and children returned to Sprague Monday.

—Ladies' Aid Society meets with Mrs. Herman Wednesday afternoon.

—Landlord Robinson visited Lewiston Sunday and brought back a new cook.

—W. T. Bennell came down from Orofino last week to assist in the M. A. Means store.

—Rev. Chr. Anderson will conduct services in the Lutheran chapel next Sunday morning at 11 a. m.

—The Grant and De Bow people left Tuesday for St. Mary's to charm the trout with flies and grasshoppers.

—Miss Marie Nebelsieck has been under the doctor's care the past week being afflicted with pneumonia. She is now rapidly recovering.

—Misses Fulford and Montgomery came up from Lewiston Tuesday after their household goods. They expect to remain permanently in Lewiston.

—Fix Ridge people are prospering and doing considerable building. Mr. Stamps moved out Monday with his kit of tools uncertain to the length of time he would remain.

—Arrangements are being made for a union service between the Moscow and Genesee Epworth Leagues to be held in Genesee on Sunday evening, July 1. Program later.

—The Lewiston postoffice is now one of the second class with a salary of $2,100 attached and in addition to that amount $1000 is allowed for clerk hire. Lewiston now is entitled to a free delivery system.

—H. E. Church left a box of the largest strawberries we ever saw at this printshop Wednesday and they were as lucious as they were large. Some of them measured close on to six inches in circumference. Mr. Church goes Rev. Fowler one better.

—Wm. Biram returned latter part of the week from his trip to Ruby Creek. He reports the camp quiet, little being done except assessment work. Peter Jackson will put in about three months there this summer and the Providence company are working two men.

—Mr. and Mrs. Fred. Follett returned Monday evening from their overland trip to Dayton. This has been an unusually favorable year for that section and Fred states that their crop, which is largely barley, promises great returns. Like this section they have some rusty wheat.

—The Christian Endeavor convention at Spokane is very largely attended. Those in attendance from Genesee are Mrs. W. C. Fowler, Mrs. W. J. Herman, Mrs. Agent Gray, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Harris, Miss Edna Pickering, Miss Maude Burdic, Miss Pearl Follett, Miss Mae Herman, W. E. English, Thos. H. Brewer, Will Herman. Our people had a special car beautifully decorated with bunting, flags and flowers and no doubt will have a pleasant and profitable time. Will return Monday.

—The western part of town presents a busy scene. The 80x26 warehouse being erected by W. M. Thompson is enclosed and nearly completed, Dan'l Healey has a cellar nearly completed, brick on the ground for a foundation and will soon be ready for carpenters to commence work on his substantial new residence. What is known as the old brick yard district is a changed spot. The unsightly litter has been removed by Mr. Scharnhorst, the place neatly fenced and he will soon commence the erection of a large barn. Next year the place will undoubtedly be graced by a large new residence. Around the Catholic church grounds everything is being put in readiness to commence work on the new school building and the pastor's residence and when they are completed will add much to the appearance of that part of town.

—W. J. Herman, for amusement and honey, is becoming an extensive bee raiser. His several stands have been doing considerable swarming of late. Last week he was unable to hive a large swarm which got away and was last seen headed for the Moscow mountains. Monday he hived a swarm and in doing so discovered that they are a great thing to have around to rid the place of tramps agents and newspaper solicitors. One of the latter who wished to tell his troubles to Mr. Herman was asked to assist and willingly assented before he understood the nature of the work. Mounting the fence he walked into the swarm before he discovered them and when Mr. Herman yelled "Put them in the hive!" Mr. Solicitor in one bound cleared the garden and fence and was soon lost to view in a cloud of dust.

—Mrs. Means and Marguerite returned from Lewiston Saturday.

—Geiger & Kambitch are in their new quarters and there is no cooler place in town.

—Mrs. Hennon returned to Colton yesterday after an enjoyable visit with relatives and friends.

—Miss Emma McNeill left yesterday via Lewiston steamer for her home at Dayton, Wash.

—Pretty happy people around the W. H. Thompson home since Sunday morning. It's a big boy and "as fine as silk."

—E. L. Parker and W. L. Frink, of Nez Perce, tarried in Genesee this week. Likewise Chas. Holgren of Cul de Sac.

—Rud Miller came down from his home on the reserve and will proceed to Ruby creek to perform assessment work on his mining claims.

—Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Lamphear came down from the white pine district last week and returned this. Josh made a bluff for the Stamps fine horses with harness and was called. Mr. Stamps thinks he can get along without a team.

—A pleasant tea party was given by Mrs. R. H. Russell Sunday afternoon, the following guests being present: Mesdames Hodgins, Welch, Gaffney, Lees, T. Driscoll, Wood, Nagel, Misses Burdic, Hodgins, Bomberg, Kate Driscoll.

—Jim Doyle's team objected to being loaded too heavily from Herman's store, Monday, and skipped out at a lively rate for the flour mills, scattering cordwood and store goods along the road. Jim Doyle was hurt some as he made a lunge for the lines on the ground, but he's all right now.

—The Woodmen people had an all-night session, Saturday, putting the brand on eight persons. Refreshments were served. When the members retired at three in the morning the floor of the hall room was covered with goat's hair. Monday night Lecturer Williams gave the boys a good talk.

—Dr. Frank Leitch, who recently arrived here from Charleston, Ill., Martin Williams and Marion Leitch left early this week on a prospecting trip up the Clearwater. They will take a pack outfit and expect to reach a point sixty miles above Clapman's mill on the Little North Fork.

—John Swank had on exhibition the first of the week some specimens of coal which he had taken from a prospect of his in the Blue mountain district. The ledge which the samples were taken from is an extensive one and promises good returns. A number of adjoining prospects have been bonded.

—There will be no service in the Methodist church Sunday morning. Regular services in the evening. The pastor goes to Pine Grove to hold a basket meeting. Preaching at 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. Sunday school at 10. The home Sunday school is invited to join in the service. A way will be provided for the children to go out.

Genesee Will Celebrate.

Genesee will celebrate the fourth—Independence day—in a grand style. The whole world is invited. The park will be put in proper condition and there will be seats and shade for all who may come. Various amusements will be had.

The grand parade takes place at 10 o'clock a. m. in which the horribles and the bicyclists will be the main features. Business houses are invited to participate.

Then will follow the speaking and literary program in the shady park. Orations by Senator J. W. Brigham and W. M. Welch. Singing by chorus of 20 voices. Flag drill will follow.

A big dinner will be served in the shade by the Congregational Ladies' Aid Society and there will be an abundance to eat and drink for everybody. Barrels of lemonade and ice cream! Dianer 25 cents.

The entire afternoon will be devoted to sports. Bowery dance during the day and a grand ball in the evening.

The game of base ball will be between the Cornwall Warriors and the Potlatch Champions for a purse of $25.

Tug-of-war, between the Bryan Shouters and the McKinley Fire Eaters, for a purse of $2.50. Peter Johann and G. W. Daggett will captain the respective teams.

There will be two bicycle races, one open for all with two purses, $2.50 and $1, and a ladies' contest.

Free for all foot race, 100 yards, $2.50 and $1. Then there will be the fat man's race for men weighing over 200 pounds. Tall man's race for men over six feet. Boys' foot race for boys under 14 years, and a girl's race each 50 yards - Suitable purses for all.

Wheelbarrow race, sack race, potato race, relay race, with suitable purses.

Greased pig race, swine goes to the one that catches him.

Ten salutes at sunrise by captured cannon.

Marshals of the day, Peter Johann and J. J. Keane. Committee on bicycle parade, Mrs. Gaffney, Emma Neheisieck, Ed. Walters, Ira Hanson, Thos. H. Brewer. Committee on horribles, Frank Standish, captain. Committee on sports, Dr. J. L. Hayes, M. D. Glover, Al. Whitted, Ralston Vollmer, Chas. Kennedy.

—Mrs. Orcutt and Miss Tonning left Wednesday morning for Kellogg.

—Geo. Raymond, who has charge of Geo. Follett's big orchard this year, is devoting his time picking off the superfluous fruit.

—Mrs. J. W. Hopp secured a pass and departed for the coast—New Whatcom, Wash.—for a visit with her sister, Mrs. S. E. Leitch.

—The Hayes boys are having lots of fun riding a fine Hambletonian racer. Though the animal is not much larger than Gage's dog, it can make a mile in ten minutes say the boys.

—Monday evening, Laura, the four-year-old daughter of Ed. Overacker, whose mother died at the time of her birth, died of inflammation of the stomach and was buried Wednesday in the Pine Grove cemetery.

—Lots of whooping-cough in town.

—Pretty warm here Wednesday—80 in the shade.

—Mow down the weeds and have some style about you.

—W. M. Welch mourns the loss of one of his driving horses.

—The grass-widower list is growing to alarming proportions.

—McKinley and Roosevelt were nominated yesterday. All off with Bryan now.

—Ernest Miller is now chief engineer at the Rimrock Mills, Dan'l Carvey having resigned.

—The second oldest boy of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Williamson, while playing horse last Sunday, fell and broke an arm.

—It is comforting to know, no matter how homely a man may be, there is always one woman who thinks he is handsome.

—Lost, a black ladies jacket, on the Moscow road between Genesee and the John Lorang place Finder will greatly oblige loser by leaving same at NEWS office.

—The Congregational people, who are getting up the celebration for the fourth in Genesee this year, say they will entertain the crowd the best they know how. The committee on horribles and sports will please get down to business.

—Newt Hollister of Genesee was in Troy this week looking for woodcutters to take to Pierce City to cut wood for the Crescent mine at that place .... The town has been full of strangers—laboring men, railroad men and traveling men ... This is the idle season for the farmers. They are putting in the time hauling cordwood to Moscow and Genesee.—Troy News.

—Now the Asotin girls say they are not surprised to hear that he had both arms full last Sunday evening, for he had them full every evening of the week while here; but they didn't think Mr. Watts would go to Genesee and tell it around that the Asotin girls had big feet—for they can't help it, don't you know. It's liable to be all off with George when he returns to Asotin.—Sentinel.

—A fitting welcome was given to Rev. and Mrs. Chr. Anderson Tuesday afternoon, June 19, by the united efforts of the Genesee Valley Band, and the members of the United Lutheran churches. The people gathered at the parsonage five miles north of Genesee, where the Reverend and bride are preparing to reside, and in a short time the yard was full of vehicles. The people were in their best attire with happy smiles and heavy baskets. After greeting Rev. and Mrs. Anderson the Old Professor called the band, and to the surprise of the originator played a march in good musical style. The piccolo player of the band stepped to the porch, and extending his hand to the reverend, said, "We welcome you home," and then in good elocutionary style delivered a beautiful poem written for the occasion by a member of the band. After more music a sumptuous repast of ice cream and cakes was spread on tables inside and on the lawn. Everybody enjoyed the cooling refreshment and social treat. After the tables were cleared the band favored the people with another selection. Now the cornet player stepped to the porch, and greeting the reverend and lady, presented them with the most beautiful tripple silver-plated and burnished cornet ever graced this part of Idaho. It was finely engraved, "Presented to Rev. C. Anderson by the Genesee Valley Band, June 1900." Instrument in case and Hamilton music stand in case, valued at $55. The presentation speech, like the welcome, was nicely worded and appreciated. No sooner had the cornetist closed his duties when a member of the united church advanced, and in kind and fitting language, presented the young spiritual teacher and his helpmate a fine carriage in behalf of his congregation. Rev. Anderson's reply was full of feeling. The afternoon was spent in song, instrumental music and a lawn party and young and old enjoyed themselves very much.

Red raspberries are coming in; cherries for canning and preserves. Leave orders for the best fruit in the market. Strawberries will so be gone.

ARTHUR HARRIS.

—Since Ohio democrats turned down Lentz it is fair to presume he will not be Bryan's running mate.

—Announcement is made that the war in the Philippines is over and that a beginning will be made in November in the work of bringing home the volunteers. The fact that thousands of the soldiers are to be brought home this year, although their term does not expire until the middle of 1901, will knock the force of Bryan's main political argument.

—Chief Joseph, of Nez Perce fame, has gone to Wallowa county, Ore., accompanied by Interpreter Ed Raboin and Inspector McLaughlin. They will inspect the chief's old stomping ground and see about getting it back for him and his one hundred warriors. This action is the result of the visit which Chief Joseph made to Washington in April, but from dispatches sent out the chief's desires will not be granted. And why should they be. The old grounds are thickly settled and it would require much cash to secure them. We cannot afford to pay out thousands of dollars of good money for poor Indians. No, the chief has caused too much suffering and damage to our people to permit of anything of this kind now. Any old place is good enough for Joseph.

—The exquisite colored cover of The Designer for July will recommend this number of the popular monthly to the feminine public before even a peep is given at the contents, which, however, are all that can be desired in interest and artistic display. Many improvements are evident, which betoken that The Designer's publishers are quick to grasp every new idea that is of benefit to its readers. There are over a hundred fashion illustrations, and a dozen millinery designs in black and white and color, and all are refined, stylish and effective. "For Health and Beauty" tells how to care for those much abused members; "Ideal Travelers," "Points on Dressmaking," "Summery Trimmings," "A Fourth of July Marguarite Luncheon," "In Old Frenchtown," "The Canon's Kate," "Her Little Brother," "Living Out of Doors," "Etiquette Hints," "Among Ourselves," "The Kindergarten in the Home," "Frozen Dainties," "Hints for the Household" and many other good articles. Only $1 a year, 10 cents per copy.

—A few Chinamen have been killed but otherwise nothing of consequence is happening in the Flowery Kingdom. Though the leading powers of Europe are acting in apparent concert in China, nevertheless the rivalry between them is the spring of their action, and it can scarcely be expected that they will go far without serious disagreement among themselves, very probably culminating in war. Japan, too, is seeking a place among the world powers, and her position justifies her fully in striving to check aggressions of others in the Orient, especially Russia, whose steadily advancing ambition, supported by her colossal and evergrowing power, is manifestly a menace to Japan. The internal condition of China invites this interference of the powers, in which, however, the United States cannot participate further than the call of humanity for protection of its own people in China will warrant. Several nations interested have large guns on the scene of action and it will be strange if they can withdraw without a brush. Each are anxious to secure more territory. Report says the Emporer of China has appealed to the European powers for joint intervention in his behalf. That is, depose the Empress Dowager, declare a joint protectorate over the country, assume control of the customs, post, and telegraphs, and so on. If this is true, it means the end of China. Joint control by rival nations is the doom of any country accepting it. History tells us this. The powers seeking the downfall of China are likely to see it very soon.

Printing Without Ink.

A company has been formed to control the process of printing without ink, by using electricity and chemically prepared paper. In a short time, it is expected, this innovation will be completely introduced, and old methods revolutionized. There is one thing however that has resisted all innovations; that is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which has many imitators, but no equals as a cure for stomach, liver and bowel troubles. This peerless remedy has been the standard medicine of the American people for the past fifty years. It is a wonderful medicine for dyspepsia, indigestion, biliousness, insomnia, constipation and nervousness. It also prevents, malaria, fever and ague. It keeps the stomach in good condition, and the bowels regular. Try it, and you will not be disappointed.

Conway of Seattle stating that the hemp market was dead, and tendering the sad information that he would not be in Colton again for two or three months. . . J. J. Daggett was out with his gun Friday morning and came in —with his gun.—Colton News-Letter.

—General Miles has been commissioned Lieutenant General, and General Corbin Major General, by the President. They will take office immediately, although their nominations cannot be sent to the senate for confirmation until next fall. Gen. Miles will not increase the number of his staff, but the effect of his promotion will be to give his present aides, the rank, pay, and allowances Colonels of cavalry. Gen. Miles will prescribe the insignia of rank he wishes to wear, and there is little doubt that it will require a smoked glass to look at him when he has it all on.

Hundreds have used it on my advice and all say it never fails to cure throat, chest and lung troubles." Regular size 50c and $1 00. Trial bottles free at Kennedy's pharmacy.

JUDGE TAUFFT of Moscow is a candidate for supreme judge.

D. B. HILL is talked for vice-president on the democratic ticket. If the silver forces could go David, Teddy would have something to think about.

THE Tammany braves have the floor now. If they can pick out one from their number at Kansas City for vice president who can carry New York state against the Rough Rider the opportunity is theirs. Towne cannot do it in a thousand years.

CANDIDATES for county offices are beginning to loom up. The office of sheriff is mostly sought after, candidates bobbing up from many precincts. Genesee, Moscow, Juliaetta, Vollmer each will have a candidate or two before the approaching conventions. The reform forces hold their convention first—July 10—and if a harmonious time is had in naming a ticket they intend to make it lively for the republicans. So far the aspirants are working good-naturedly and it is hoped this feeling will continue until the end of the campaign. Life is too short for bitter fights over a little office. Let the best men be put up and the best elected.

BRIGHAM H. ROBERTS, the rejected congressman from Utah, has been convicted of the offense for committing which the house of representatives refused him a seat. Roberts made no defense and submitted his case to the jury upon an agreed statement of facts thus a confession of guilt. The jury, four members of which were members of the Mormon church, in fifteen minutes returned a verdict of guilty. The Mormon trick, to force a self-confessed polygamist upon congress as the representative of a sovereign state, and thus pave the way for absolute annulment of the compact under which Utah was granted statehood, did not work. 'Tis well.

THE time for holding the state conventions is drawing near—July 19. No one seems to have a walk-over in either party for any office. About the only person who seem to have the long end of the pole, in case the party wins, is Senator Shoup. South Idaho has at least three republican candidates for governor. A. B. Moss is not a candidate, but the News believes he is the strongest man that could be named at this time. He is a business man and made a favorable impression two years ago when he stumped the state. While North Idaho is backward in her claims for the high honors, South Idaho is making up for it. This is true in both parties. In the democratic party much hinges on what disposition will be made with the senatorial question. Dubois and Steunenberg each want the indorsement of the Pocatello convention and a lively scrap is promised.

To show there is considerable feeling among the silver forces in Idaho over the U. S. senatorship we quote from two democratic papers from the southern part of the state. The Pocatello Advance says: "Still another candidate for senatorial honors has appeared to make it more evident that a senator must not be nominated at the state convention if harmony is to prevail throughout the election. Col. Dewey is announcing that he 'would be honored in accepting' an election as senator, puts another hustler of the first magnitude into the field. Nominate a candidate and the ticket will be supported by the friends of one candidate; leave the question open and the ticket will receive the support of all candidates." The Blackfoot News says: "The nomination of a U. S. senator by the reform forces at Pocatello is practically agreed upon and will certainly be made unless the best signs fail. With the number of delegates instructed, and those in sight favoring the measure the victory will be easy. The people will like this step and indorse it."

THE nomination of Wm. McKinley and Theodore Roosevelt gives entire satisfaction to the republican party from coast to coast. Of course the ticket does not suit the democratic party or there would be no use to put up another team. With expansion in the west and protection in the east, the republicans have reasons to believe they can win with this team on a canter. A good platform was adopted. McKinley's tin pail brigade will vote to continue the factories. On the question of trusts the platform is clear and explicit. It commends our open-door policy in China, favors such measures as will develop our merchant marine, approves the suggestion of a department of commerce with a seat in the cabinet for its secretary, promises a reduction of war taxes, and so on. The nomination of Roosevelt will be received with a satisfaction and an enthusiasm which no other name could command. Many believe if Roosevelt occupied first place the ticket would be much stronger with the independent voters, with republicans who have become disgusted with Hannaism and with the gold democrats. The dashing Roosevelt is the most popular man in the party today. Watch him knock the stuffin' out of Bryan.

Reports show that over fifteen hundred lives have been saved through the use of One Minute Cough Cure. Most of these were cases of grippe, croup, asthma, whooping cough, bronchitis and pneumonia. Its early use prevents consumption.

KENNEDY'S PHARMACY.

—Over a hundred people were killed the past week in the east in two railroad wrecks and in two small cyclones.

—A disastrous hailstorm visited the Camas prairie country Sunday after noon, causing much damage to wheat and fruit crops. The hailstones came down with great force, killing small pigs, chickens, and stripped orchards of fruit. Reported damage in Idaho county exceeds $25,000.

—Messrs. Nagel and Scroggin, who returned from the northern Montana ranges last week, think that a great stock country, but to make the business profitable one must go at it right. Men who have been up there three or four years have become wealthy, and especially the sheep men.

—J. Weldon was drowned in the Clearwater Friday evening and the body was found in the Silcott slough two days later, Sunday afternoon. It is thought that in returning from the island where he went to hunt his cows, his horse left the ford in the darkness. He was probably thrown into the water and not being able to swim soon perished. He leaves a wife and five children.

—At 5 cents a pound, the annual lead output of the Coeur d'Alenes would be worth $8,000,000; at 4 cents, $6,400,000; at 3 cents, $4,800,000. Every unit of price is therefore equivalent to $1,600,000. Few pause to consider the magnitude and the importance of the lead yield of the Coeur d'Alenes. It is equivalent to the entire wheat crop of the state of Washington, with a yield of 15,000,000 bushels and an average price of 40 cents.—Review.

—Gus. Johnson, while descending the Finney grade on Craig's mountain the first of the week, came near shuffling off this mortal coil. At the steepest point in the grade the wagon brake gave way letting the wagon rush onto the horses. So sudden was the start that Gus. was thrown between the horses striking on the side of his head, the wagon wheels passing over his left hand severely crushing the same. In the fall his right ear was partially torn loose from his head.

—One of the most remarkable holdups ever heard of on Camas prairie occurred between Grangeville and the Hump country on the 13th, says the Free Press. Felix Warren, one of the best known stage drivers in the west, as he reached the gulch near Mount Idaho with his coach full of men, was commanded to halt, passengers made to line up and disgorge. One robber stood at the horses heads with a big gun covering the driver, one stood at the end of the line covering the passengers, a third gathered the coin, while the fourth drew a kodak on the boys and took a snap shot and had the nerve to send the roll to the sheriff of Idaho county a few days later.

—The big gun roared Friday evening. Owen and Daggett touched it off just to let McKinley and Roosevelt know that Genesee is alive.

—A boy of Liveryman Potter was kicked on the nose by a horse and it was with difficulty that life was brought back, says the News-Letter. A bum printer causes Editor Gibb some trouble while absent from the shop taking the census.

—Genesee merchants were kept on the jump for a while Saturday. This is only a forerunner of what is coming this fall in the event the big grain crop is saved. This is a good trade center and our merchants are always ready and willing to show goods and quote prices.

—Great heat and lack of rain last week have put wheat into such bad shape in North Dakota that Dalrymple, the bonanza farmer, started out forty gangs of men Monday with orders to plow up his 10,000-acre wheat field. On the Grandin farm, containing 15,000 acres, sixty plows are turning the wheat crop upside down.

—Friday Clem Harris and Dave Peterson started for Genesee, each taking a four horse load of lumber. When about half way to their destination they were overtaken by a heavy rainstorm which made the roads so slippery that further progress was impossible. They abandoned their loads in disgust and returned home. Clem said that he didn't care if he never did get the measley stuff to Genesee. —Troy News.

—Grain Expert Snow of Chicago made a tour through the states of Minnesota, North and South Dakotas and declares the wheat failure a national calamity. He estimates the Dakotas are promising only 20,000,000 bushels each and Minnesota 35,000,000, a total of 75,000,000, against 200,000,000 last year and 225,000,000 in 1898. Unless the foreign crops are exceptionally large, and it is not believed they are, we shall see wheat climbing considerable higher than present prices—may reach $1 in Chicago. The drought is so great that it has reduced the value in railroad stocks on roads passing through the affected section.

—Farmers seem to have more work to do this season than in former years and this is attributed to the fact that diversified methods have been adopted. Some of them have so much work that it seems necessary to use a portion of Sunday to perform it. This shows a progressive spirit. It means prosperity. We are happiest when we work. It is a mistake to suppose the idle are happy. Labor provides all the necessities and comforts of life and the means of moral and intellectual enjoyment. We have a productive country and if we direct our energies in the right direction we can live and dress well and in old age take the world easy.

I mentioned to him that I had been similarly troubled and that Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy had cured me. He bought a bottle of it from the druggist here and informed me that one dose cured him, and he is again at his work." For sale by all druggists.

"I have always used it in my own family both for ordinary coughs and colds and for the cough following la grippe, and find it very efficacious." For sale by all druggists.

TIMELY TOPICS.

War nowadays largely consists of moving capitals.

Is this really a free country? A woman aged 75 years was refused a marriage license in Philadelphia.

The blank charge is justly entitled to a place in the same rank with the didn't-know-it-was-loaded gun.

Fortunately this country is not under bonds to engage in all the wars cut out for it by the Paris papers.

All the world's a stage and there are some people who think the thunder and lightning accessories the main show.

Newell Dwight Hillis' "Young man, dare to be poor," promises to be more generally followed than the old "dare to do right."

A poker game—no limit—between J. Pierpont Morgan, John D. Rockefeller and Andrew Carnegie would be an event well worth chronicling in United States financial history.

The Texas woman who insisted upon getting a divorce from her husband before she consented to elope with a married man certainly gave an exhibition of fine ethical discrimination.

The new mustache-shaping apparatus brings the Kaiser Wilhelm style of upper lip adornment within the reach of the humblest individual who can raise the mustache and the price.

Every boy criminal nowadays is said to owe his penchant for crime to degeneracy. In the old-fashioned days it was called by the more expressive, but less euphonious name of general cussedness.

More than a thousand libraries have been placed on American naval vessels by the Seamen's Friend society. This class of philanthropy should not be limited to the navy. There is a generous field for it on the great lakes.

A whole baggage car has been stolen in Italy. However, the Italians are not "so many" after all. It will be recalled that a house was stolen in Chicago not long ago, and somewhere out West a whole town was taken from one site to another.

A New York chorus girl has married a London diamond dealer scheduled at $85,000,000. The wedding announcement is accompanied by the information that the young woman will continue in the chorus. There are times when devotion to art appears to be unreasonable.

Have you an ideal in your life? If you have not you must be of all men most miserable. Life, without ideals, is to a thoughtful man unendurable. Yet Mrs. Burton Harrison says "Inconstancy to ideals is part of the spirit of the age." If Mrs. Harrison is correct in her diagnosis of our modern society, much of the spirit of unrest and riotous thought is explained. Ideality puts moral courage into the human soul. The loss of ideals is the loss of the soul. To be sure it is easy to lose one's ideal and it is a fine art to preserve it, but it ought to be cherished as the dearest possession of mortal existence. The pessimist has lost his ideal and the logical end of his thinking is despair. The optimist may lose an ideal but he selects a better one in its place and the logical end of his thinking is happiness.

The proverbial foible of many persons for concealing or misrepresenting their ages is proved by the census to be a reality. Careful scrutiny of the returns of population according to ages in successive census years shows that there is a wide-spread tendency among boys and girls to report themselves older than they really are, as if to anticipate manhood and womanhood. Among those who are approaching middle age, the tendency is in the opposite direction, namely to report themselves younger than they are. Finally, in the case of the very old, there is an inclination to add to their years. They seem to take pride in every year they have lived since they could boast that they were octogenarians. It is a little strange that this weakness of human nature should be so widespread, and that both men and women should be so sensitive upon the subject of their ages, seeing that there is no condition or circumstance of life for which the individual is less responsible than his age.

The Des Moines Register suggests that every village in Iowa should have a canning factory. The idea is a good one, and as the Register estimates that a canning plant, including a three horse-power boiler, can be set up for $150, the plan is quite possible and is worthy of consideration not only in Iowa but in Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, or other States where the vegetables and fruits are raised than are needed for immediate local consumption. Such factories would not only be a profitable investment for those who supplied the capital but they would be of great advantage to the town. Products that are perishable would be saved. Fruit and vegetables could be sold for better prices than if they were to be shipped in the raw condition to a larger city, where a cannery might be in operation. The canning season comes at a time when school is not in session and children could find profitable employment in the factories. The trifling sum that it costs to start a factory would make it possible on a co-operative basis and the operation of the cannery would be advisable if only to preserve a sufficient amount of fruit and vegetables for the winter consumption of the people of the neighborhood. It would merely be the usual summer preserving done by the thrifty farm-wife on a rather large scale.

A correspondent says there is a "crying need" in this country of a 75-cent piece. He believes the minting of such a coin would stimulate trade, for, according to him, the consumer is struck more forcibly by the cost of a 75-cent garment when he hands over for it half a dollar and a quarter dollar, being two coins, than he would be were he to hand over a 75-cent piece. This is not a convincing argument, and the Chicago Tribune thinks it is not inclined to agitate for the new coin, as the correspondent wishes it to. With the 1, 5, 10, 25 and 50 cent pieces it is easy to make change even when buying 39-cent and 49-cent articles, of which there seems to be about as many as there are 75-cent articles. There used to be 3-cent, 5-cent and 20-cent silver and 3-cent nickel pieces. Their coinage has been discontinued because it was found they answered no good purpose. During the fractional currency era 15-cent shinplasters were put in circulation. It was claimed that they would be quite useful because there were so many articles which cost just 15 cents. The public did not take kindly to them, however. The silver dollar is too heavy to please the people. The weight of the half-dollar they do not complain of. It is possible they might not find fault with the weight of 75-cent pieces, though for a time they would confuse them with halves and dollars. There is absolutely no popular demand for this new coin, however. It never has occurred to anybody, except this correspondent, that a man will spend a 75-cent piece with less reluctance than a half and a quarter dollar.

The railway train service of the United States has always been esteemed the most enterprising as well as the most luxurious in the world. With the great American motto of "hurry up and don't waste time" as their incentive, the railroad companies have stopped at nothing in their efforts to increase the speed of their trains, while at the same time making it possible for the passengers to enjoy every comfort and convenience which they might have at home. To this end they have employed cooks, barbers, stenographers, telegraph operators, librarians, ladies' maids, and representatives of other trades and professions to travel on their trains and lend their ready services to the passengers. Now, as a climax, it is suggested that it may be well to employ ministers to hold services on the through trains which run on Sunday. It is announced that the object of the proposed arrangement is to make Sunday travel less objectionable to those who believe in a strict observance of the first day of the week. Railroad passengers, however, are likely to be of many different creeds, so that the same service will not appeal to all of them, and it is hardly to be expected that even the most enterprising of the railroad corporations will engage ministers representing all the different denominations. So long as trains run on Sunday there will doubtless be people who from choice or from necessity will patronize them. But before starting a "railway religious service" there would seem to be other reforms which are more pressing and more practical. The sometimes outrageous price charged for sleeping car accommodations might be made more reasonable; the dining car service on many roads might be improved in quality and made less expensive; the ventilation and heating of trains might be better looked after. Meanwhile the man who is forced to travel on Sunday and who at the same time wishes to observe the day properly may be able to do so without the necessity of bringing ministers into the corporation service.

Distinguished Opponents of Exercise

A story is going the rounds that when William M. Evarts was asked the other day to what he ascribed his long life and excellent health, he replied:

"I don't know, unless it is because I don't take any exercise."

Mr. Evarts isn't the only public man who has a theory that physical exercise, added to mental effort, is a waste of tissue which tends toward debility and shortening of life. Joseph Chamberlain is a conspicuous example. He spares himself all physical effort so far as he can. He will not walk up a single flight of stairs if he can help it. Senator Hanna is, perhaps, the most notable exponent of this practice in Washington. Vigorous as he is in speech and in mental effort, the Senator is seldom seen save in an attitude which suggests physical repose. The president walks daily. He feels badly without his constitutional. Nobody can remember to have seen Senator Hanna accompanying the president on a walk in the three years at Washington.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

MOUNTAIN TROUT IS BITIN'.

When the mountain trout is bitin', in the
lazy days o' May,
Why, the spirit leaves the body, an' goes
wanderin' away—
Strayin' by the fields o' clover, whar' the golden sunshine seems Silenced waves o' song still hoverin' on the pastur's an' the streams;
An' you loll within the shadders nigh
some blossomin' wild rose,
Jest a dreamin',
Dreamin',
Dreamin',
Half awake an' half adoze!
All the glory o' creation is compressed in one short day,
When the mountain trout is bitin' in the
lazy days o' May.

Now an' then across the medders rings
the tingle o' the bells—
Like the orchestry o' Nature somewhar' hid among the dells;
Orioles wing up and over, an'—infloatin'
from the hills—
Comes the bluebird's hallalooyer in the softest thrills an' trills.
"Tain't unnaterel for a feller, ef he's ever loved at all,
To be thinkin',
Thinkin',
Thinkin',
Of some one beyond recall,
An' to wonder ef her spirit ain't still with you anyway,
When the mountain trout is bitin' in the
lazy days o' May.

The Odd Thing About It.

I HAD been poring over a fourteenth century manuscript in the window seat, behind the library curtains. The twilight and the end of the faint, crabbed writing came together, and then I supposed I fell asleep. I woke at the sound of Vera Rutherford's voice.

"The oddest thing about it is that I don't really dislike him at all."

"You will tell me next that he doesn't really dislike you," said Maud Leslie, with an unbelieving laugh.

"I am afraid," said Vera, "there is no doubt about that." I could have pointed out grave doubts; but I wasn't more than half-awake. Besides I couldn't be quite sure that they referred to me."

"Did you say 'afraid,' Ve?"

"You needn't quibble over my words," she answered, impatiently. There was a pause.

"Dear old Ve!" said Maud, in a moment. Here again I ought to have pretended that I had just woke up, and announced myself.

"I hate him," Vera observed, inconsistently.

"So," said Maud heartily, "do I!" I could not well proclaim my presence after these remarks.

"At least I think I do."

"I am sure I do," said Maud, positively. "I consider him horrible."

"Oh, Maud; you know he isn't."

"He must be, or he wouldn't be so rude to you."

"I—I provoke him, you see."

"That is no excuse at all. Look at the way he contradicted you about those Tuscan vases, or whatever you call them."

"I contradicted him first."

"Why shouldn't you?"

"Because he was right."

"Which made it all the more annoying."

"Yes," said Vera, with a sigh. I wished I had let her have her own way."

"He is a great deal too 'superior,'" stated Maud. I felt myself blushing."

"He really knows a great deal," suggested Vera, timidly. I made up my mind not to quarrel with her any more.

"A lot of antiquated rubbish of no use to any one," scoffed Maud. I could feel that she was tossing her head. "Jack calls him the 'lumber-room!'" Jack is a young ass!"

"I don't agree," said Vera, hotly, "Jack is—"

"No, he isn't!" He's very nearly engaged to Maud."

"A charming and intelligent fellow, I was going to say."

"Nasty little story-teller!" I thought they were going to quarrel, but they didn't.

"Well, I'll admit the learning of your Mr. Norton," said Maud, when they had done laughihng, "but—"

"He isn't my Mr. Norton," Vera objected. There was a further pause. If Maud had gone I should have felt inclined to come out and place "Mr. Norton" at pretty Vera's disposal, but Maud didn't go.

"Do you really like him, old Ve?" she asked.

"Only just a little."

"Sure?"

"Yes—almost sure."

"You are rather hard on him, Maud, I think." So did I. "Won't you admit that he has many good points?"

"Oh—he can talk! He's very amusing when he comes out of the shell. I rather like to talk to him myself." Indeed! "But I don't believe he has a bit of sentiment in him. I'm sure he's never kissed a girl in his life." Hasn't he! "Unless"—she laughed mischievously—"it's you."

"You are ridiculous," protested Vera. "He wouldn't dream of such a thing." Obviously Miss Vera understood me no better than other antiquities.

"Perhaps he—Why don't you leave off squabbling with him?"

"He won't let me. He generally begins by asking whether I am ready for our usual quarrel."

"Why don't you say no."

"Because he ought to say it." I resolved that he should.

"Then you will find him deadly dull."

"I—I don't think I should."

"Whatever would you talk about?"

"Oh—the usual things!"

"My dear Ve, he couldn't! Just fancy him whispering soft nothings in your ear!" Maud laughed. Personally, I didn't see anything to laugh at. "And you blushing and looking down—"

"Don't be so silly!"

"Whilst he imprinted a chaste salute"—

"It is time to dress for dinner," said Vera, frigidly. She walked toward the door.

"He has a ginger mustache," said Maud, as a parting shot. This remark was absolutely untrue; it is golden almost.

"He has not!" Vera departed.

Maud hummed a queer little tune to herself for a minute. Then she sighed twice—presumably for Vera. Then she shrugged her shoulders once—I fear for me! Then she went out also. After a prudent interval I followed.

At dinner Vera and I were neighbors. I avoided antiquities, and told her amusing stories, just to hear her laugh. She looks very pretty when she laughs. She also looks very pretty when she doesn't.

After dinner our host, who is proud of his scenery, suggested that we should go and see the moon rise over Tall hill. I managed to escort Vera and to lose the others.

"Shall we have our usual quarrel?" she asked, when we had perched ourselves upon a big stile at the foot of the hill.

"No," I replied; "I don't want to quarrel, please."

"Don't you?" she said, brightly. "Aren't you afraid we shall be dull?"

"Not in the least; but if you are—"

"Oh, no. We can talk about—let me see—"

"The usual things?" I suggested. She looked swiftly at me, and gave a little start. I took hold of her arm. "I thought you were falling,' I explained. "Perhaps it would be safer if I—held you.' She didn't seem to mind, so I gathered her arm comfortably in mine.

"I can't imagine you talking 'usual things,' you know,' she said, with an uncertain little laugh.

"Everybody says 'usual things' in the moonlight," I explained. "See, it is just rising over the hill."

We sat a few minutes in silence, watching the yellow rim appearing, and the pale light streaming down the fields, dotted here and there with tall trees.

"It is very, very beautiful," she said softly. "It makes one feel good. I am so glad you didn't want to quarrel to-night."

"Or any other night. I have been going to tell you so for a long time." She laughed.

"How strange! Do you know, I have been wanting to say the same thing to you?"

"It was right that the overture should come from me." She started and glanced at me again. The moonlight lighted up her pretty, thoughtful face and glinted in her golden hair. "The prettiest effect of the moonrise is invisible to you," I told her.

"I think,' she said, smilingly, "its nicest effect is that it has made two quarrelsome people—" She hesitated for the word.

"Good friends?" She nodded. "One of them is very glad."

"So," she said almost inaudibly, "is the other."

"Do you know, little Vera, dreadfully as we quarreled, I liked you all the time. Only I thought that you disliked me so much."

She would certainly have fallen off if I had not had the presence of mind to put my arm around her waist.

"Oh, no!" she cried, quickly. "Indeed I didn't."

"That," I said, "was the odd thing about it."

She gave such a jump at the quotation that she would certainly have fallen off the seat—if I had not had the presence of mind to put my arm around her waist!—Mail and Express.

Cotton Manufactures.

"The South," says a Fall River cotton manufacturer, "has gone into the cotton-milling business very extensively. With the cheap labor and long hours of the South a cheap grade of cotton goods can be turned out at much less expense. The Northern manufacturers could not stand this competition. They decided to make a better quality of goods. Heretofore the fine qualities were imported from abroad. Now as good a quality is manufactured by the mills of Fall River, and is for home consumption. New machinery was substituted for the old. The old hands employed in the mills were of sufficient experience to turn out the good quality. This has resulted in a decline of imported goods. I do not mean by this that the South has all the cheap cotton trade. There are ten mills in Fall River and New Bedford which turn out the cheap grade. The other seventy or eighty mills are devoted to the finer grades."—New York Tribune.

Buried with $500 in His Pocket.

It is not often that a man is buried with $500 in his pockets. His relatives generally look to that. But such a case has actually happened.

A few days ago Don Sabino Trujillo died and was buried in Dolores on Monday last. After the funeral the niece of the deceased informed the relatives of the dead man that he had at the time of his death the sum of $500 in one of his pockets; for he was buried in his ordinary clothes. She had seen him pay the doctor, a short time before his death, some money and put the remainder, $500, in his breast pocket. As no one had thought of looking for the money, and as the young lady was prostrate with grief at the death of her uncle and so did not remember anything about the matter until after the funeral, the money was buried with the corpse.—Two Republics.

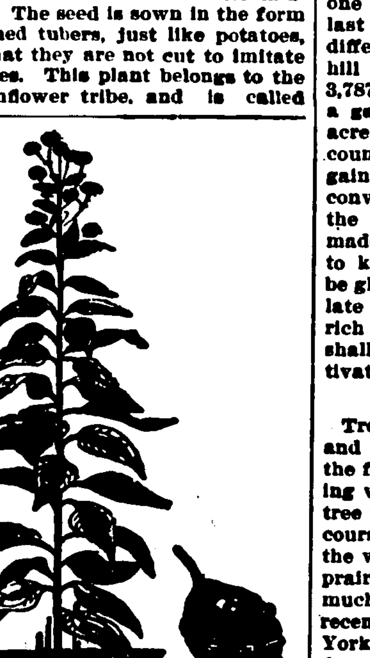
Jerusalem Artichokes.

The Jerusalem artichoke is of the easiest culture. Its treatment is essentially that of a potato. If grown for the tubers, the stalks should be allowed to mature, so that if it is the purpose to allow the hogs to have the run of the lots and root for themselves, they should not be turned in till after midsummer. The seed is sown in the form of detached tubers, just like potatoes, except that they are not cut to imitate single eyes. This plant belongs to the great sunflower tribe, and is called



JERUSALEM ARTICHOKES.

Helianthus tuberosus. A recent report of one of the experiment stations states that in fatening hogs excellent results have been secured, by giving them the run of the artichoke plot, and supplementing this food with a small amount of cornmeal each day. Artichokes will persist in the ground from year to year, wherever the soil is covered with a fair amount of snow during the winter. In case it was thought that the soil was too poor to give good returns, it might be enriched by sowing in the drill, at the time of planting, superphosphate at the rate of eight hundred to ten hundred pounds per acre. The feeding value of the Jerusalem artichoke has not been investigated to the extent that its importance deserves.

New Hay Stacker.

A Colorado man has invented a haystacker which is very simple in construction, strong and durable, and has no castings. It is a combination of base frame, swinging derrick and stationary standard. The standard is the most novel feature about this machine. It serves to shorten the draft and elevate the draw rope to the arc of a circle, the derrick being pivoted in the center of gravity, thereby minimizing the power required to elevate. The draft is the same at all points until the hay is delivered. One horse does the elevating. It is claimed that the new invention will do an equal amount of work in less than one-fourth the time required by the old-style derricks. Its capacity is estimated at from 75 to 100 tons a day.

STANDARD HAY STACKER

Tomatoes as a Farm Crop.

The tomato seed was planted in a bed made by driving down stakes and nailing up wide boards and covering its nights and cold days. It was planted April 15 in rows 5 to 6 inches apart and covered one-half inch deep. The plants came up slowly, but grew well, and we raised about 8,000 from one-fourth pound of seed. The variety was Stone. The ground was plowed 7 to 8 inches deep, harrowed, cross-harrowed and marked in rows 3½ feet apart. We set just an acre, beginning to transplant May 24 and finishing June 7, setting the plants 3 feet apart and using 4,136. A few plants had to be reset, principally on account of cutworms.

The young plants were hoed June 12 and the weeds were cut out with a hoe on June 19, 24 and July 11. They were cultivated June 14 and 22. The tomato worms were not bad, but we went over the patch and killed 100. Some of the tomatoes were in bloom July 6 and the first were ripe Aug. 12. We began picking for the canning factory Sept. 1, and until Sept. 28, when we had a severe freeze, sold 14,530 pounds at $5 per ton, 18 bushels to the neighbors at 25 cents per bushel, and used 8 bushels at home. At the time of the freeze there were 3,000 pounds of tomatoes on the vines. Besides the above, there were sold 1,600 plants at 10 cents per 100, making a total of $44.43 received. The picking cost 2 cents per crate, or 70 cents per ton. The cost was as follows: Preparing ground and planting seed $2.25, seed 30 cents, transplanting and resetting $3.05, cultivating $5.50, harvesting and marketing $12.95, total $24.05, and profits $20.38.

Distance Apart of Corn Hills.

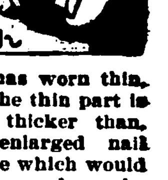
When we were young we were taught to make the furrows for corn hills four feet apart each way, but later on we decided that 3½ feet each way was better, as giving many more hills to the acre, and afterward when truck farming we put sweet corn 3½ feet apart one way and three the other for all but the large evergreen varieties, and we found it to produce just as many ears to the hill and to fill them out just as well as when we used more space. We manured liberally, had the wide rows run nearly north and south to let the sun in, and used the cultivator only one way. The difference between the last method and the first one was the difference between 16 square feet to a hill and 11½ square feet, or we had 3,787 hills to the acre instead of 2,722, a gain of 1,065 hills or nearly a half acre. We never weighed the crop or counted the ears to know the actual gain in production, but our observation convinced us that there was a gain in the closer planting. If anyone has made or will make the test carefully to know the exact results we should be glad to publish it, but we shall stipulate that it must be on god soil made rich enough to produce a good crop and shall be well cared for.—American Cultivator.

Value of Shade Trees.

Trees have a distinct value on a place and add greatly to the enjoyment of the farm as a home and also to its selling value. The worth of a well grown tree will differ in different localities, of course, and there are few places in the west, comparatively treeless as the prairies are, where trees are worth as much as in the Eastern States. In a recent lawsuit in Niagara County, New York, a row of shade trees had been destroyed in front of a country home by the building of a trolley line, and expert testimony was called to settle their value. The trees had been planted twenty-six years and were mostly maple. The testimony showed thirteen of them to be worth $100 each, nine were worth $65 each and a few others were appraised at $125 each. These values were not reduced by the testimony of the defendant company that had destroyed the trees. As a country grows older adornments of this kind become more valuable because more appreciated and it would be hard to predict what a good, well-located shade tree would be worth twenty-six years hence.

Improved Horseshoe Nail.

Here is an invention which will not only decrease the cost of keeping horses shod, but will also be the means of preventing many cases of sore feet and lameness. All horseshoes wear unevenly, and when so worn, though thick and unworn in many places, the whole shoe has to be removed on account of a part which has worn thin, but with this invention the thin part is made up level with, or thicker than, the thick part by the enlarged nail heads. By their use a shoe which would otherwise have to be removed can be retained, and the expense of a new shoe thereby be avoided, in adddition to which a better grip or adherence on the surface of the road is obtained by a horse's foot so shod.



Wool Prices.

It is evidently safe to predict that there will be higher prices on wool, both in this country and England, for the next five years than we have now, and it is not all due to the tariff. The number of sheep destroyed in Africa will have some effect in reducing the amount of wool produced there, but probably the largest falling off in wool production will be due to the number of sheep killed in Australia to furnish mutton for the armies in South Africa and the Philippines. There is little gain if not a decrease in the sheep kept in the Argentine Republic, as they have been killing many for mutton since the United States has ceased killing off her flocks. We anticipate an advance of 50 per cent. above present prices within five days.—American Cultivator.

Egg Eating.

A recent Canadian government report advocates beheading as the best remedy for egg-eating. This plan is too radical. Often egg-eating hens will be cured simply by furnishing dark nests. At other times, the cause of the habit is thin-shelled eggs, and feeding oyster shells will stop it. Furnishing animal food, especially chopped veal, is sometimes a cure. In some cases the fault is confined to two or three hens in the flock, and removing them will prevent the habit from spreading.

Rat Remedy.

Our barn and outbuildings were overrun with rats. Tried wire, water and steel traps—all to no purpose; neither would poison do the business to our satisfaction. At last, catching a live rat, she was promptly tarred with coal tar; after that released to have her own way. Well, she must have told the other rodents of how she had been treated. We do not see or hear much of them since.—Herman Ockels.

MINES AND MINING NEWS

OUR NORTHWESTERN MINES.

Items Gleaned From Late Reports—All Districts Are Being Developed—A Prosperous Year Is Predicted—Mining Notes and Personals.

The meeting of the lead producers of the United States to be held at New York city will probably result in a combination such as was had about a year ago. This former combination lasted about six months. Recently the lead producers of Utah, Idaho and Montana united, and by their combined effort had been able to maintain the price of lead for about three months in the neighborhood of $4.57½ per hundred. The cause of the recent slump in price was the refusal of the Missouri lead producers to share any portion of the burden, while they were unloading all the lead they could mine at the price which was being maintained by the western producers. There are about 250,000 tons of lead produced in the United States every year.

REPUBLIC.

There is considerable free gold in the ore being taken out of the north drift on the intermediate level of the San Poil.

The Chico shaft is 290 feet deep, and is going down about three feet each 24 hours. The shaft was thoroughly inspected. It is well timbered and lined, and straight as an arrow.

Ore phenomenally rich in silver has been discovered in the Quilp. Assays of the face of the raise being made from the tunnel level yesterday gave 50 ounces of silver and $58 in all values.

The work on the station at the 285-foot level of the Tom Thumb is going forward rapidly, and is nearly completed. It is conceded by the superintendent that the drills will not be started much before July 1.

Some rich ore is being taken out of a raise in the Black Tail. It is said to be equal to any found in the mine. The difficulty in the way of crowding work on the Black Tail mine is found in the disposition of the ore. The ore bin is full and so are the stopes and levels of the mine. There can be no change until the custom mill starts up.

Good progress was made on the Moulton tunnel, which is one of the properties of the Eastern Star company. It has been driven 60 feet. An extension of the tunnel 75 feet will bring it to the ledge. This it will tap at an estimated depth of 100 feet. The formation that is now being passed through in the tunnel is very heavily mineralized, and is apparently close to a ledge of some description.

Joseph Dederichs of Salt Lake, the contractor for the erection of the new Republic mill, says that the buildings for the mill are completed, the crushers are up, the rolls set and the machinery practically in, with the exception of the roasters. The 16 cyanide solution tanks, 22x22 feet square and 16½ feet high, will be put up in 14 days. Mr. Dederichs calculates that the mill with a capacity of 550 tons a day, will be completed in two months.

MINING NOTES.

The International Mining Congress, in session last week in Milwaukee, Wis., transacted the most important business connected with the congress, that of the adoption of the report of the committee on a plan of permanent organization. The report provides that the name shall be the "International Mining Congress." Its object shall be the fostering of fraternal relations among those engaged in mining and kindred pursuits in various countries and portions of the United States, the improvement of the mining laws of the United States and the submission of a national department of mining. The congress will meet annually. The next convention goes to Boise City, Idaho. The report of the committee on resolutions, which calls upon congress to establish a department of mining, was carried. Officers were nominated as follows: President, L. Bradford Prince of Santa Fe, N. M.; vice president, A. P. Swineford, Alaska; treasurer, Mrs. E. C. Atwood, Empire, Colo.; secretary, H. M. Ryan, Colorado; executive committee, J. W. Adams, Georgia; Mrs. Haskell, Helena, Mont., and Philo Orton, Darlington, Wis.

The deal wherein the Bunker Hill mine, in the Cracker district, Ore., was involved, was closed last week.

John Vas, one of the best known mining experts on the Pacific coast, died of consumption at Baker City, Ore., last week, after an illness of nine months.

It has been definitely ascertained that there is a proposition on foot to purchase the smelter which is a few miles below Spokane and put it in running order for permanent work.

The North American Mining Company, operating at Copper Butte, about 18 miles northeast of Baker City, Ore., is going to work as if they mean business. A carload or two of machinery has arrived from the Denver Mining Supply Company, Denver, consigned to the above named company, in care of Captain T. L. Evans, and is being unloaded and transferred to the scene of mining operations. The machinery consists of a hoisting engine, air compressor, pumps, cage, car, bucket, pipe, etc., in fact, everything necessary for a deep sinking plant.

Loomis Camp.

At the Black Bear the work of opening up new stopes goes steadily forward. The quality of the ore being mined shows that values are gradually increasing, and there is no diminution in quantity. By the time the extra stamps now at the mill are installed the mine will be fully able to supply the mill with all the ore it can crush. The opening up of the War Eagle will give an ample reserve at all times. This will enable them to develop each property without any hurry and in an economical way.

The Palmer Mountain tunnel is in nearly 3300 feet, and the first objective point, the Helena Belle ledge, should be reached within a few weeks. This is the point the management has been anxious to reach before beginning to mine its ore. Steps have been taken to put the company's water right on Touts Coulee creek in shape to furnish power for a large number of drills, and the next six months' work will be of a very important nature.

The machinery for the compressor plant at the Puritan mines is on the ground and will soon be put in place. The dam, reservoir and flume bed are nearly completed, and it is expected that by the time the compressor is ready to start the water to furnish the power will be ready to turn on.

The Golden Zone has been shipping a large amount of concentrates the past few weeks, taking advantage of the return teams hauling in supplies for Loomis.

Some very good ore is showing up in the Utica-Oro Fino, in the upper shaft.

The upraise in the Bull Frog will soon be completed from the drift to the old Phantom shaft, thus giving a good circulation of air all through the mine. When this is done the force will be largely added to.

Kruger Mountain camp is a young Okanogan district that is growing after several years of quiet. There is a considerable revival and work is being done on many promising claims. The discovery of tellurides and free gold float is frequent.

BRITISH COLUMBIA.

A report was received in Spokane last week of a remarkable strike on the Buckhorn, in Deadwood camp.

The British American Corporation being now satisfied as to the intrinsic merits of the Mist group, owned by them, have decided to install a compressor plant and other machinery necessary for systematic mining.

The Big Four group of claims, which has been taken over by the British Lion Mining & Development Company, limited, is being actively developed, under the direction of A. Vernon. This group, which lies on the divide between Porcupine and Hidden creeks, is one of the most promising properties in this district.

The recent development on the Wilcox mine, owned by the Broken Hill Mining and Development Company, has disclosed more high grade ore. The tunnel on the Fourth of July has been driven to a distance of 195 feet, and has now reached a spot 40 feet below the bottom of the shaft.

A good strike has now been made on the Snowslide claim, which lies about two miles up Wild Horse creek. Mr. Dodd, the owner of the property, has uncovered a fine shoot of solid galena ore about eight to ten inches wide and averaging $35 per ton. This shoot was discovered at the depth of 20 feet.

While William Hatton, a carman at the Le Roi mine, was riding a car loaded with rock down the track to the edge of the dump about 9:30 one evening last week, the car struck some obstruction and jumped over the end of the track and down the dump. Hatton was flung over the dump ahead of the car. The ton of rock it contained must have been rolled upon him and knocked him insensible. The car itself rolled down over him and when picked up he was terribly mutilated. He has suffered internal injuries which are expected to prove fatal.

It is announced that the Boundary district is to have a smelter of 300 tons daily capacity before the close of the year. The site has not yet been chosen, but several are under consideration and it is expected that a choice will be made shortly.

Eight hundred tons of ore shipped to the smelter is an encouraging showing for one week, when it is considered that smelters are not yet ready to receive ore and that shipments from some of the big properties are being delayed until advantage can be taken of cheaper transportation rates for a short haul. The Knob Hill and Old Ironsides will probably ship to the Granby smelter this week, and this ought to double the total. It is only a question of a few months until Boundary takes a leading place among the big shipping centers of British Columbia.

Ymir Camp.

The following are the official returns from the Ymir mine for the month of April: "During last month 3000 tons have been milled, producing 1657 ounces of bullion and 175 tons of concentrates. Have shipped 94 tons of concentrates. The total receipts for the month are $22,031; expenses, $7763; estimate of outstanding concentrates, $2400." This brings the production of the Ymir for the first four months of 1900 up to over $70,000, being the product of 10,105 tons of ore milled in the 40-stamp mill. This month the capacity of the mill will be doubled by the completion of the other 40 stamps, and the product from the whole 80 stamps will probably be in the neighborhood of $45,000 per month. Besides this it is probable that the shipment of the rich crude ore which has been discontinued recently will now be recommenced, as a contract has been entered into with the Trail smelter for the treatment of both crude ore and concentrates. Last year above 375 tons of this rich ore was shipped, and averaged over $120 per ton.

M'KINLEY AND ROOSEVELT

UNANIMOUSLY NOMINATED.

They Were the Choice of the Convention for President and Vice President—Hanna Elected Chairman Again.

Convention Hall, Philadelphia, June 22. —Yesterday was a great day and long before 10 o'clock, the hour set for the reassembling of the convention, the hall was surrounded by an immense army of people, who besieged all the doors and entrances, clamoring for admission. When the doors were opened they surged in like a flood, submerging the vast hall. The stage had been freshened with green things, and at each corner, like a touch of flaming color, red peonies shot into the air. The band in the north gallery was at work early with inspiring music. It was much warmer today. The sun blazed down through the spaces in the roof, and the heat gave promise of being oppressive. But the ladies were attired in their thinnest muslins, everybody was provided with a fan, and there was no complaint. One old fellow in the gallery, with charming disregard of the proprieties, divested himself of coat and vest, hung them over the rail and took his seat.

Three minutes before 10 the Kansas delegation, headed by Colonel Barton, with bright silk sunflowers pinned to their lapels, aroused the first enthusiasm as they marched down the main aisle bearing a white banner inscribed in big black letters, "Kansas is for Roosevelt."

As the delegates debouched into the pit, the utmost good nature was manifest. The contest was over. It was to be a love feast, a jubilee, and not a contest, which the day was to witness.

Governor Roosevelt entered at exactly 10 o'clock. He made a rush of it, but did not escape the keen eye of the thousands, and they set up a cheer at sight of him. He was surrounded by delegates when he reached the pit and showered with congratulations. He made no protestations or dissent, but smilingly repeated his thanks. One gray-haired delegate put his arms around the governor and whispered in his ear. All states were represented in the welcome, with Kansas, the indomitable Roosevelt pioneer, leading the demonstration.

A few minutes later another outburst greeted the entrance of Senator Hanna. His progress was impeded all the way down the aisle by delegates, who insisted upon shaking his hand. He stopped a moment to chat with Senator Davis, and when he reached the standard of the New York delegation, where Roosevelt was holding a reception, he pushed through the throng and greeted the rough rider warmly, even affectionately. With his hand upon Roosevelt's shoulder, he whispered in his ear. For two minutes they remained thus in close communication.

Depew created a stir a little later, but it was Mr. Quay who aroused the shouts of the local crowd. Henry Cabot Lodge, the permanent chairman, reached the stage at 10:15, and there was an interesting conference of the leaders in full view of the vast audience. Colonel Dick, looking more like a poet than a soldier; Mark Hanna, Senator Chandler, Julius Caesar Burrows, Mayor Ashbridge, Charles Emory Smith, John Lynch, the colored ex-congressman from Mississippi, and a score of others, were busy perfecting the final plans for the day.

At 10:20 the big band from Canton, O., the president's home, made its way into the hall from the west side, and broke out with the pealing strains of the national anthem. The whole audience rose to its feet and stood until it was concluded.

The Canton band is one of the most popular organizations of the kind in the United States. It is here on the day of the nomination of McKinley at the president's own request. Heretofore in his congressional and gubernatorial contests and in 1896 in his presidential contest the band played him to victory. When it was suggested that the band could not be present the president insisted that it should be, and at his request the noted organization was engaged.

After calling the convention to order, and minor business disposed of, Mr. Lodge advanced to the front of the platform and a thrill went through the vast audience as he announced:

"Under the rules, nominations for the office of president of the United States are now in order."

There was a momentary shout, which the chairman punctuated:

"The state of Alabama is recognized."

A tall and swarthy Alabamian stood on his chair and by prearrangement answered:

"Alabama yields to Ohio."

This was the signal for the recognition of Senator Foraker, who was to make the speech nominating Mr. McKinley as the republican candidate for president. Then the cheers began and a wild scene ensued.

Foraker Makes the Nomination.

Amidst a tumult of applause Senator Foraker went to the platform, and when quiet was restored began to speak, first thanking Alabama for their courtesy in yielding, but attributing that fact to the overwhelming popularity of the candidate.

As Mr. Foraker continued he was repeatedly interrupted with cheers. His announcement that the nomination of McKinley was equal to election in November brought vociferous cheers.

Briefly Senator Foraker adverted to the record of the president in peace and in war as one of the most remarkable in American history.

"In war and in peace," said he, while the delegates and spectators echoed the refrain of sentiment expressed, "he has been found equal to all extraordinary requirements. In all American history there has been no chapter more brilliant than that written by the United States with him as chief."

During the reference to the great leader of the party, the successes already achieved by him, and the grave responsibilities now being carried forward by him, the applause was frequent and long continued.

Some of the states were not content with casting their votes for McKinley, but the chairman announced the vote which the candidate would receive in November. When Hawaii was called the delegates stood up and cheered the announcement of its vote of two for McKinley.

The secretary hurriedly made the summary and handed it to the chairman. Senator Lodge took the paper, and, advancing to the front of the stage, said:

"The total vote cast is 930. William McKinley has received 930 votes. It is a unanimous vote and the chairman announces William McKinley as our candidate for president for the term beginning March 4, 1901."

Again pandemonium broke loose in one swelling cheer of enthusiasm for the candidate. Up went the plumes and standards. Up stood the great audience again and women mingled their shouts and their frantic demonstrations. The band played "Rally Round the Flag," and the Hamilton club of Chicago marched down the aisle, preceded by New York and followed by Pennsylvania.

For the Second Place.

Mr. Lodge warned the noisy and demonstrative throngs that there was still vital business to be done, and announced that the call of states would proceed for the vice presidency. As the name of Alabama was called on the roll of states for nominations for vice president, the announcement was made by the chairman that Alabama would yield to Iowa to present a candidate.

Chairman Lodge then recognized Colonel Lafe Young, one of the Iowa delegates at large and editor of the Des Moines (Iowa) Capital.

Colonel Young swung down the main aisle to the platform to do that which a single orator never before did in a republican national convention—withdraw one strong and magnetic man as a candidate and present the name of another for the second office in the gift of the American people. He withdrew the name of Dolliver and offered that of Roosevelt.

Colonel Young was in Cuba at the time Roosevelt led his gallant Rough Riders up San Juan hill, and his reference to the governor's campaign was eloquent and touching.

At the conclusion of the call Chairman Lodge announced that Roosevelt had received 925 votes, one delegate in the convention not voting. This delegate was Roosevelt himself, who refrained from voting with the New York delegation.

Trade Report.

Bradstreet's report for the past week says:

Midsummer dullness in distributive trade and industry and further reduction of prices of manufactured goods, particularly iron and steel and raw textiles, but a marked upward movement in nearly all agricultural products, are the leading features of the business situation last week. Wheat has advanced 14 cents per bushel since June 1 and 20 cents from the low point reached in November, a gain over the latter period of 27 cents in price.

Corn crop advices are still in a high degree encouraging, but that cereal has sympathized with wheat, as has also oats and hog products in turn felt the quickening influence of higher prices for corn. Improved demand for dairy products is reflected in slight advances this week. Crop damage has been a moving cause for the advance in the price of cotton. Some weakness has been noted in cotton goods, without, however, favorably affecting distribution. Trade in dry goods has been helped by warmer weather. Wool is lower and the woollen goods market is rather quiet, awaiting the next London wool sale and the opening of the spring weight season.

Weakness of prices is still the leading feature of the iron trade and lower quotations are noted for pig iron. Structural material also has verified predictions in a decline from $7 to $9 per ton. Domestic orders for iron are perhaps slightly more numerous, but are for small quantities. Talk of a systematic shut-down of iron furnaces producing for the open market comes chiefly from the south, but while this subject is under consideration the disease is finding a partial cure in the going out of blast of a number of less economical furnaces, and the summer shut-down of many mills. Export demand is good, but, as for some time past, wait upon the question of freight room.

The other metals are steady and practically unchanged in price, with the exception of tin, which is slightly slower.

A heavy business is doing in refined sugar and the manufacturers are oversold. A good margin of profit exists in this trade. Reports from the boot and shoe industry are of rather unsatisfactory trade prospects, and leather and hides are rather weak at the east, but strong at Chicago, where heavy purchases for Philippine army purposes have strengthened the situation. Building demand for lumber is not active, but white pine is relatively firm. Southern pine is in over supply in a number of markets. Anthracite coal is in seasonable distribution, while the demand for bituminous continues active.

Wheat (including flour) shipments for the week, aggregate 4,645,180 bushels, against 4,678,029 bushels last week; 3,746,712 bushels in the corresponding week of 1899; 3,799,470 bushels in 1898; 2,156,246 bushels in 1897 and 2,847,831 bushels in 1896. Since July 1, this season, the exports of wheat aggregate 196,470,162 bushels against 221,769,610 bushels last year and 229,072,288 bushels in 1897-98.

Failures in the United States for the week number 167, compared with 180 last week, 199 in this week a year ago, 220 in 1898, 215 in 1897 and 218 in 1896.

THE BRITISH IN A BATTLE

THE BOERS WERE ROUTED.

An Unsuccessful Attempt to Check Methuen Advance—Hunter Moves On—Kitchener Had a Close Call—Attacked by the Burghers.

London, June 21.—Lord Roberts reported that General Hunter had occupied Krugersdorp, west of Johannesburg, without opposition, and that General Methuen on June 19 routed a Boer force which was opposing his entry into Heilbron and the Orange River colony.

The silence of Lord Roberts since June 16 had disposed some quarters to believe that his line of communications had again been cut, especially according to advices from the Orange River colony, where the Boers were known to be still hovering.

According to a Cape Town dispatch of this date, General Kitchener had a narrow escape from capture in the engagement at Leeuw, June 14. He was sleeping in the repair train when it was attacked and many of the engineers were captured. Gen. Kitchener's sleeping car was at Kopjes station, when the Boers under General Dewet suddenly opened fire at 3 a. m. Kitchener managed to reach his horse and galloped to Rhenoster, two miles distant. The Boers numbered 900 men, with three guns. They destroyed the culvert, which had just been rebuilt, and derailed the train.

The Boers who are alleged be be hemmed in by General Rundle began shelling Ficksburg. It is said they apprehend that a force is marching on them, and hence they will endeavor to break through southward.

The war office has received the following dispatch from Lord Roberts:

"Pretoria, June 21.—Hunter's advance column occupied Krugersdorp without opposition June 18. Methuen, who was escorting a large convoy to Heilbron, yesterday routed a force under Christian Dewet, who endeavored to prevent him from entering the little town. Methuen had only three casualties.

"Baden-Powell has left this city on his return to Rustenburg. The country is quieting down in that direction. This satisfactory state of affairs will be materially assisted by the capture between here and Rustenburg, June 19, of two guns by Hutton's mounted infantry from a body of the enemy under Commandant Duplessis.

"Railway and telegraphic communication with Cape Town is now completely restored. All is quiet here and at Johannesburg. The shops are open and the market is becoming daily more crowded and businesslike."

The Montana Ore Purchasing Company has granted the miners in its employ their request for an eight-hour working day.

The journeymen barbers and the grocery clerks of San Francisco, Cal., have organized unions respectively and elected officers.

NOT WHOLLY A COWARD.

Railroader's Good Reason for Not Resisting Train Robbers.

"When I hear people boast what they would or wouldn't do under the persuasion of a six-shooter," said an old passenger conductor, "I am awfully reminded of an experience of mine years ago on the Iron Mountain Railroad.

"I was station agent at the time at a little town near Texarkana, and had been summoned up to Little Rock on some business that has nothing to do with this story. I was in the first day coach, well up to the front, and in the next seat was an express messenger who had attracted a good deal of attention from the fact that he wore his hair long and had a pair of enormous revolvers stuck in his belt. The rest of the car was well filled with a mixed crowd, including perhaps a dozen women. At about 9 o'clock at night, while we were going over a very desolate part of the road, the train slowed down suddenly, and before we could inquire what was wrong the front door flew open and a masked man stepped inside with a sawed-off shotgun at his shoulder. 'Sit still,' he yelled. 'I'll turn loose if airy soul moves a finger!' As he spoke another masked man stepped around him with a cocked revolver in his hand and started down the aisle, looting the passengers as he went. When he came to the express messenger he burst out laughing. 'You — scarecrow!' he said, 'what are you doing with them guns,' and he snatched one of the pistols out of his belt and hit him over the head with the butt. Then he took the other, made him hand over his watch and money, and passed on. The messenger wiped the blood off his face and said nothing.

"After it was all over and the robbers had disappeared the messenger was a target for numerous sneering remarks. 'If I had made a break,' he said to me, quietly, 'that feller at the door would have blazed away with his sawed-off gun and killed half the women folks in the car.' At the next stopping place he got off, and one of the women stuck her head out of the window and screamed 'Coward!'

"Two days later that same messenger walked up to a little cabin in the mountains, kicked in the door, shot two of the robbers dead in their tracks, and captured three others, all single-handed. I often wondered whether the woman who hollered 'Coward' heard of that incident."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

In a Mexican Home.

As all cooking is done with charcoal and ovens are practically unknown in private houses, very few families bake bread. The small, hard-crusted loaves of French bread are delivered all over the city in great baskets four feet across that are carried in the hands of cargadores.

The arrangement of furniture is much more formal than in the United States. It is a very common sight to see a splendidly furnished parlor with a row of straight-backed chairs, all alike, with their backs against the wall, and as close together as they can be placed clear around the room.

A good Mexican cook relieves the mistress of the house of worry and responsibility in a manner that is almost unknown in the United States. The cook is given so much per day, and with this amount she will purchase each morning all the provisions of the day, including even the staples that are usually bought in large quantities in other countries. On a dollar a day a cook will provide a very good table for a family of three or four, and get enough beans and torillas and chile to set the servants' tables besides. They can really do better than their mistress, because they can usually drive sharper bargains with the market men of their own class, and they have more patience to haggle over the last penny. —Philadelphia Inquirer.

An Impossible Charge.

"Gentlemen of the jury," said the attorney for the defense, "we will now introduce our star witness. After hearing her testimony you will never have the heart to convict my unfortunate client of burning his barn. Speak up, madam."

"For forty-three years," said the witness, "I've lived with the defendant, an' commencin' with the day after we was married I've built the fires reg-lar every mornin'. Start a fire! Why, that man couldn't start a fire in a powder magazine!"

Whereupon the jury acquitted him without leaving their seats.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

War Sometimes Profitable.

The adage that "to the victors belong the spoils" works very well with nations who have been successful in war. In her war with China, Japan had only 80,000 men engaged, and the war cost her altogether the comparative trifle of $30,000,000. China had to pay her afterward the nice little sum of $180,000,000, leaving a clear profit of $155,000,000, which, reckoning the time the war lasted, worked out a profit of $50 per Jap a week.—Army and Navy Journal.

Cause of His Imprisonment.

Missionary—Was it liquor that brought you to this?

Imprisoned Burglar—No, sir; it was house-cleanin'—spring house-cleanin', sir.

Missionary—Eh? House-cleaning?

Buglar—Yessir. The woman had been house-cleanin', and th' stair carpet was up, an' th' folks heard me.—New York Weekly.

Some one says that the greatest thing in the world is love, but any woman who has gone through family squabbles with a husband will tell you it is peace.

People who never look forward to the future seldom manage to get ahead.

—Local news on every page. Read every line as it takes hard work to prepare it and besides you might miss something valuable.

—The warehousemen are scratching their heads and wondering how they are going to store all the grain that will come to Genesee this season.

—The hot wave at Grand Forks, Dak., sent the price of hay up flying —from $4.50 to $16. The price of cattle dropped from $5 to $7 per head.

—Charley and Chris Steltz and families left yesterday in a covered wagon for the Ruby creek country to gather berries and climb big trees.

—Hugh Fulton, traveling guard for the state penitentiary, is now a private citizen. He was a delegate to the Lewiston convention and did not vote with the Stennenberg.

—The fighter Oregon is plowing the briny deep for Chinaland to take a hand in the scrap which promises to be of good size before it is over with. While the scrap is on we'll try to feed the boys some of our surplus wheat.

—Several of our farmers unloaded wheat before the price got fairly started up grade. Dick Scharnhorst sold a block of 10,000 bushels which if he had held until Saturday could have realized $600 more. His father-in-law, Louis Oldag, also Mr. Gibb and others let lose a few days too soon.

—Nothing out doors is now more beautiful than nature's handiwork—waving grain fields, loaded fruit trees and fine gardens. Take a drive south of town a few miles and then view the surroundings—its inspiring. The scene across the Clearwater resembles a checker-board. Messrs. Wood and Thompson, grain magnates, visited that locality Tuesday and declare they never saw such prospects for a big crop, and they have roamed the hills and valleys of the Palouse for many years. Another week of fine weather will put much of the wheat out of all danger. Fair clear weather is all that is needed now to give us the crop of all crops.

—Steve Reuben, little chief of the Nez Perces, called on the NEWS Wednesday and requested it to announce their 4th of July jubilee to last a week at picturesque Lapwai, will be a hummer. The dusky maidens and sturdy warriors have been gathering for several days and will take part in the various war dances and horse races so dear to the Indian heart. Little chief will be big chief during the week and will strive to make everybody happy. The entire program will be carried out by the Indians in their native way. Chief Joseph no doubt will be the central figure, for it was he who led the rebellious braves in the '77 massacre in our land.

If you want to buy a new header and pay for it by cutting grain see Mr. Driscoll or Mr. Thompson.

—Mountainhome will ship 2,000,000 pounds of wool this season.

—The St. Joseph's school closed yesterday. Fifty scholars have been in attendance and the Sisters gave entire satisfaction as instructors.

—Harvesting has begun in the valley of the Walla Walla. Binders are at work and threshing machines are starting up. Some new wheat has been sold on cars for fifty cents.

—Two carloads of Remington rifles and field ammunition for them left New York Friday, and being a rush order, is expected to arrive at 'Frisco tomorrow to ride a steamer bound for Peking and Tientsin.

—James W. Reid is on his way to Kansas City where he will nominate Col. Hamilton Lewis for the vice presidency. Idaho's choicest eloquence will electrify the delegates assembled. But Lewis cannot worry Teddy.

—Three big damage suits are being brought against the N. P. R'y growing out of wrecks on that road at Kendrick last December. Attorneys have asked to have guardians appointed for the children of the three men killed in these accidents—John Budge, John A. Ogden and Fred O. Lemman, the latter being killed at Vollmer.

—The Christian Endeavorers have returned from Spokane feeling well repaid for going. Monday they visited Lake Cœur d'Alene and enjoyed a few hours' ride on Idaho's placid waters, sang songs, picniced, etc. The weather man created ideal weather and to say they enjoyed their outing is putting it mildly.

—Attorney Patrick Reddy, defender of the Cœur d'Alene miners, died at his home in San Francisco Tuesday. When the mining unions of the Cœur d'Alene country became involved with state and federal authorities during their great strike Reddy was the man chosen to defend their interests in the courts, and he distinguished himself against the best legal talent of the northwest in the numerous cases which grew out of those labor troubles.

—Four young chaps at Leland were given each six months in the Lewiston jail for chicken stealing besides a fine of $25. Nearly every town is afflicted with such boys. Let them be compelled to do a few days work under guard on the public streets and they will soon quit thieving, swearing, uttering vulgar language on the streets—causing the cheeks of our sisters, wives and mothers to tinge with mortification when passing within ear shot of these hopefuls.

—The Orofino Patriot has made its appearance. F. M. Roberts will direct his energies almost exclusively toward securing a new county, to be carved out of the corners of Shoshone, Idaho and Nez Perce counties, and of course, Orofino to be the county seat. Success to his efforts.

—Lewiston people say they are going to have a big fair from October 15 to 20. It is to be one of the greatest race meetings and agricultural fairs ever given in the northwest. Grading of the Vineland track with fifteen teams was begun Saturday. Genesee punkin-raisers should secure space and make exhibits.

—Master Erwin Payne, a bright lad of about 8 years living near Troy, came to Genesee on a load of lumber Wednesday, and stepped in and informed the NEWS that the Edwardson Bros. sawmill, recently built not far from Bailey's, was burned to the ground last Monday night. Fire originated under the planer and consumed much lumber, belting, tools, etc.

FRIDAY, JUNE 29, 1900.

—Fourth is nearly here. Get out your flags.

—Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Geiger, Alonzo Hanson and C. E. Hibbs visited Moscow Tuesday.

—The L. F. Darr lumber yard has supplied the city with a large amount of lumber for sidewalks and crossings.

—The Vollmer delivery horse delivered goods in a hurry the other day. Most too swift to suit old gentleman Richards.

—Geo. Watts was at Lewiston last Sunday and saw the home team wallop the Kendrick ball tossers in a hotly contested game—12 to 5.

—Frank Gesellchen spent Saturday and Sunday in Genesee. He has closed up in business on Riverside, Spokane, and thinks he will like his change.

—Artie Keane can give you pointers on farming. He cut the hay crop at the house and, not having a horse-rake, hooked the horses to the drag and gathered his crop.

—Nick Jacobs and John Shutte and families will spend the next few days up in the foothills in sight of their mines, picking blueberries and coaxing the fish out of the water.

—Kendrick's flour mill was burned to the ground last week while the proprietor was away. A contract has been let for the erection of a 100-barrel capacity mill by another firm.

—Messrs. James and Alonzo Hanson and C. E. Hibbs have returned from their outing. They secured a chunk of white pine, caught a few fish and had a general good time.

—Mr. Brewer wishes to return his thanks to the people who helped themselves to the cherries on the McKenna place during his absence. He is sorry he was not there to pick the fruit for the visitors.

—Cornwall and Potlatch will positively play a matched game of ball on the Genesee grounds the afternoon of July 4th. These clubs are evenly matched and the contest will be so warm that it will make you perspire to watch it. The purse will be $25.

—If the enumerator has not got you yet you will confer a favor by making this fact known. Every Idahoan should be counted. Mr. Nebelsieck's time has been extended a few days to allow him to get all persons listed living in his territory. Mr. Hasbrouck has finished his work.

—The county commissioners held a short session the other day to accept the three Potlatch bridges they had constructed at a cost of $2935, the expense being borne equally by Latah and Nez Perce counties. The bridge at Juliaetta cost $1132, the Tramway bridge at that point $697 and the bridge at Kendrick $1107.

—This week J. H. Gaffney, assignee of the old Genesee Bank, hopes to get the affairs wound up in the district court and be relieved. He appeared in the district court yesterday. The depositors will receive in a day or two the third and last dividend of 12 per cent. The two former payments amounted to 20 per cent, making a total of 32. Had the lawyers kept hands off the amount realized by the depositor would have been doubled. As it is he gets more than the depositor of any other bank failing in this country.

—John Putnam, a freighter living in old town, met with quite a serious accident Tuesday morning. While hauling lumber to the Nagel residence that morning, he stopped at the Murphy blacksmith shop for something, and he had no more than reached the building when the horses started with the lumber. Mr. Putnam took after the flyers and after a chase around to the old Hasfurther gallery one of the wheels caught him, breaking the main bone in his leg in two places. He was taken to Dr. Conant's office for treatment and is doing well at this writing.

—Those who have bandaged fruit trees for codlin larvae should examine the bands and destroy the pupa found therein at once. Failure to attend to this important work only facilitates their spread. In 42 days from the dropping of fruit blooms and deposit of eggs by the first brood of codlin moth, or about June 20 to 25, would be the proper time to spray for second brood, using Bordeaux Mixture with Arsenic compound. About July 20 to 30 you should expect, by carefully bandaging your trees, to collect all the codlin larvae of the brood which has heretofore done the greater injury to our apple crop. Outing flannel torn lengthwise of the bolt in strips four inches wide and rolled in a ball, is a convenient way to bandage trees.

H. A. RUSSELL, Insp.

—Henry Asbury has moved his family back to the cottage next to the Waverly.

—A. W. Conway and Major McRoberts came up from Cul de Sac the forepart of the week.

—Geo. Steltz will side up the new addition to the hall with steel resembling pressed brick which he is securing from Cincinnati, Ohio.

—Norm and Genevive Vollmer were up from Lewiston Sunday for a visit with their brother Ralston and with Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Hobson.

—Miss Emma Nebelsieck has accepted a position in County Auditor Larson's office as copyist and typewriter and will start in July 1st.

—Mrs. Near is here from Nezperce on a visit. Robert is getting to be an extensive farmer, his force now preparing 500 acres for next year's crop.

—Charley Burr called us down on the swiftness of the Hayes horse. Says he's sure he can out-run the animal and he cannot make a mile under an hour.

—A couple of weeks ago the farmers were wishing Genesee had a creamery, but since the price of wheat popped up we have heard nothing in that direction.

—Peter Lisne was down from the city of Grangeville a day or two end of last week. Reported the town looking up some and the Genesee people pushing along nicely.

—Fire blight is threatening the fruit trees around Pullman. Representative LaFollette has cut down 500 pear trees thus affected and will burn them, being the surest remedy.

—The city park is considerably improved with the new walk and the removal of the old fence. Clover is coming up and in a year or two more Genesee will have a park to be envied by other towns.

—The wheat grower of this section is feeling better. His face is cheerful and his walk livelier. At every jump in the price is it more noticeable. Our hard working people will be rewarded, it may come slow, but the reward will surely come.

—Harry Thatcher came near having an arm taken off from him the other day down at Wood's. Pully and belt caught him, and Fred Wilkinson says Harry was whirled around forty-seven times before he could stop the machine. All right now.

—Fourth annual Sunday school convention of Latah county convenes at Moscow today and lasts over Sunday. A good program has been prepared in which Rev. C. R. Howard will take part. Rev. Merritt, field worker for the state of Washington, will be present.

—The University muddle will be straightened out satisfactorily and made better and stronger than ever before. That magnificent temple of learning, surrounded as it is by the most productive country on earth and inhabited by the best people, cannot go down. All are proud of this gift and will assist in keeping it up that it may be a lasting benefit to future generations.

—Each day the situation in China grows darker and it is believed a good sized war will be had unless the trouble can be patched up. Troops, Americans leading, are invading the land. Russia is landing thousands of troops and determined to get some of the territory, but in this Japan must be considered, and there's the rub. American troops are sent from Manila and some may be shipped from here. Germany, Great Britian and France are hurrying troops to the threatened region.

—The adoption of the sidewalks by the city is believed to be a dead issue. The state law prohibits the city from owning the walks according to an opinion received from the county attorney. The law passed by the Idaho legislature on this subject in 1897, reads: "Each city and village may enact ordinances or by-laws for the following purposes: To construct sidewalks, to curb, pave, gravel, macadamize and gutter any highway or alley therein, and to levy a special tax on the lots and parcels of land fronting on such highway or alley to pay the expense of such improvement." It is held that a lot owner cannot be taxed for the improvements made on his neighbor's. If this holds the city cannot adopt the plan. The question is expected to come up before the council next Monday night for consideration. While the plan has many good features, it also has its defects. The last legislature amended the above to read: The board of trustees of each town "may provide for the construction and maintainance of sewers, sidewalks and street crossings."

Genesee Will Celebrate.

Genesee will celebrate the fourth—Independence day—in a grand style. The whole world is invited. The park will be put in proper condition and there will be seats and shade for all who may come. Various amusements will be had.

The grand parade takes place at 10 o'clock a. m. in which the horribles and the bicyclists will be the main features. Business houses are invited to participate.

Then will follow the speaking and literary program in the shady park. Orations by Senator J. W. Brigham and W. M. Welch. Singing by chorus of 20 voices. Flag drill will follow.

A big dinner will be served in the shade by the Congregational Ladies' Aid Society and there will be an abundance to eat and drink for everybody. Barrels of lemonade and ice cream! Dinner 25 cents.

The entire afternoon will be devoted to sports. Bowery dance during the day and a grand ball in the evening.

The game of base ball will be between the Cornwall Warriors and the Potlatch Champions for a purse of $25.

Tug-of-war, between the Bryan Shouters and the McKinley Fire Eaters, for a purse of $2.50. Peter Johann and G. W. Daggett will captain the respective teams.

There will be two bicycle races, one open for all with two purses, $2.50 and $1, and a ladies' contest.

Free for all foot race, 100 yards, $2.50 and $1. Then there will be the fat man's race for men weighing over 200 pounds. Tall man's race for men over six feet. Boys' foot race for boys under 14 years, and a girl's race each 50 yards. Suitable purses for all.

Wheelbarrow race, sack race, potato race, relay race, with suitable purses.

Greased pig race, swine goes to the one that catches him.

Ten salutes at sunrise by captured canon.

Marshals of the day, Peter Johann and J. I. Keane. Committee on bicycle parade, Mrs. Gaffney, Emma Nebelsieck, Ed. Walters, Ira Hanson, Thos. H. Brewer. Committee on horribles, Frank Standish, captain. Committee on sports, Dr. J. L. Hayes, M. D. Glover, Al. Whitted, Ralston Vollmer, Chas. Kennedy.

—Soren Halvorsen has accepted the agency for the Milwaukee Binder, mower and rake, manufactured by Fuller & Johnson. See ad.

—Miss Minnie Stamps closed her term of school in the Tweedt district last week and this week accepted a position in the Vollmer store.

—E. R. Smith and wife are new arrivals from the Canadian side. They are at the Grand Central and will look around with a view to locating.

—Nome gold stories are afloat now. The latest is that a plot of ground, about the size of a grave, yielded $15,000 worth of the precious metal. Another spot, 600 by 90 feet, yielded $475,000. Men take out a thousand dollars a day with rockers.

—A representative of the McNear grain company, one of the largest exporters on the coast, was in Genesee yesterday. His company has 600 feet of the new warehouse going up at Tacoma which in length is 1,700 feet—a distance reaching from Vollmer's store to the Catholic church and in width 140 feet. Think of it.

Printing Without Ink.

A company has been formed to control the process of printing without ink, by using electricity and chemically prepared paper. In a short time, it is expected, this invention will be completely introduced, and old methods revolutionized. There is one thing however that has resisted all innovations; that is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which has many imitators, but no equals as a cure for stomach, liver and bowel troubles. This peerless remedy has been the standard medicine of the American people for the past fifty years. It is a wonderful medicine for dyspepsia, indigestion, biliousness, insomnia, constipation and nervousness. It also prevents, malaria, fever and ague. It keeps the stomach in good condition, and the bowels regular. Try it, and you will not be disappointed.

—Attorney Samsel struck out the other day with his brother Henry for the Nezperce country, but when he reached Cul de Sac he was taken ill and could go no farther. After being sacked awhile at Sac J. L. took the back track for home and is now about as good as new.

—The two greatest powers in social affairs, according to Oliver Wendell Holmes, are wind and water. Men use the former when they swear and women the latter when they cry. Tears are a confession of weakness and yet women are never so strong as when they cry. Woman is generally in the wrong in argument and as a last resort takes to tears. Man may as well yield gracefully first for the tears are irresistable. Napoleon said he ruled France, his wife ruled him and that the baby ruled both. Great is woman.

—Rear Admiral Louis Kempff, who landed the United States marines at Peking, China, graduated from the naval academy in 1861 and went immediately to the steam frigate Wabash, assisting in the blockade of the South Atlantic coast. It was decided in December, 1898, to make him the commander of the naval station at Gaum, but before he left more urgent work was found for him in the Orient, and now he is commanding officer at Peking. Now if he should turn loose at the foreign ships and clean them out, he would be a bigger hero than Dewey.

—On Tuesday evening, June 26, 1900, at the home of the bride's parents Mr. Geo. Boliou and Miss Lizzie Mochel were united in marriage by Rev. W. C. Fowler. Both of the contracting parties are well known in this community, being assistants in the Geo. Hobson store for the past year or two. The bride, always smiling and happy, looked charming on this occasion. The many friends of the happy couple welcome their advent into matrimonial life and trust that they may both live long to enjoy that happiness which is only to be found and enjoyed in the matrimonial state. The next morning Mr. and Mrs. Boliou left for Troy for a week's visit with his people. NEWS extends congratulations.

All England Is Worried.

LONDON, June 25.—Never at any time in her history has Great Britain been involved in so many diverse issues that vitally affect the future of her empire. And though there are still at stake in South Africa military, territorial and financial considerations that in their magnitude have scarcely been exceeded during the century, Great Britain is no exception to the rest of Europe in being wrought up to a pitch of intense anxiety, to the exclusion of every topic, by the drama being enacted in the far east. In the excitement of the moment the relief of Mafeking seems a little thing compared with the relief of Vice Admiral Seymour and the international forces. Spion Kop, Paardeburg and Colenso sink into insignificance compared with the spectacle presented by the land and sea forces of the six greatest powers in the world fighting side by side against a common enemy. With a keen sense of the relative proportion of things Great Britain quickly turned her eyes to China, not so much perhaps on immediate developments as upon the possibility of the epoch-making war or wars which may arise out of the present crisis.

The death of Count Muravieff, the Russian minister of foreign affairs, evoked no canting obituaries or expressions of regret here, for the British press, in spite of the equanimity of the foreign office, was unanimous in realizing the gravity of the present turn of affairs. To quote a staid and humane weekly, "The death of Russia's minister removes an obstacle to the cordiality between Russia and England," and though this summarizes the comment of the leading papers, there is little hope expressed that Russia's aggressive policy toward China will be much modified. Apart from the material view of the result of Count Muravieff's death it is generally referred to as one of the most pathetic happenings in political careers, for according to the dead man's critics he seemed, owing to the crisis in China, on the verge of accomplishing the object to which he had devoted his life.

Germany Aroused.

Berlin, June 25.—The Chinese troubles have almost completely swept the South African war from public attention. Even the latest Pretoria news went uncommented upon except by the military. About Chinese events the foreign office uses great reticence, and above all studiously avoids admitting that the present events mean an actual and probably bitter and protracted war with China. This may be partly owing to the attacks of the radical and socialist press, which maintains that the present rising of Chinese against the "foreign devils" is directly or indirectly due to the German seizure of Kiau Chau. In this the papers are strengthened by the public utterances of the German missionary bishop of Shan Tung, Von Anzeer, who recently described the disastrous effect upon missionary work of the Kiau Chau seizure.

It is estimated that 300 people are holding down claims in the white pine belt east of Kendrick. This spring the timber has been carefully looked over by a number of lumbermen and several locations made. Some of the settlers have been holding their places for several years with the hope that the state would take some action toward disposing of it, and open up the country.

Joseph MacDonald, manager of the 'Frisco mine, was shot at four times by two men from ambush near Wallace, one morning last week. He was crossing from the company's mill to the office at 10 o'clock when the firing began, four shots coming in rapid succession. Each struck at his feet, being fired from the mountain side, so much above him that they were buried in the ground instead of glancing, he digging out all four bullets later. He looked up on the mountain and saw two men running up through the brush, but too far away to be recognized.

The line is completed as far as Park City, but Mr. Moffett contemplates extending it to Columbus. Alfalfa is the king of all crops in Lake county. Even on land which is never irrigated alfalfa is said to be a success. The yield is not quite as good as on irrigated land, but it is more profitable than any other crop.

W. A. Wilcox, agent of the United States fish commission, who is in Oregon for a few weeks, is a firm believer in the effectiveness of the artificial propagation of fish. He says the art of hatching fish is no longer an experiment, as its utility has been thoroughly demonstrated.

BRITISH REPULSED THE BOERS

SMALL FIGHT NEAR WINBURG.

Clements Engaged a Force of Boers and Drove Them North—No Report of Losses—Hamilton's Reception by the English Residents of Heidelberg.

London, June 26.—The following dispatch has been received at the war office from Lord Roberts:

"Pretoria Presidency, June 26.—Clements successfully engaged a force of Boers yesterday near Winburg, where he had gone to pick up supplies and some heavy guns preparatory to acting in combination with columns from Lindley, Heilbron and Heidelberg. He drove the enemy north of Sandspruitt, with loss. No casualties are reported.

"Ian Hamilton reports that Heidelberg is the most English town he has yet seen. The inhabitants gave him a great reception. The streets were crowded and decorated with bunting. Captain Valentine hoisted the Union Jack in the market square amidst the cheers of the populace and the British, Australian and other colonial troops. 'God Save the Queen' was sung, the crowds heartily joining in.

"The poor Royalists have had a rough time lately. Hutton's mounted infantry skirmished with the Boers yesterday a few miles southeast of Pretoria. Captain Anley is reported to have managed the little business very well. Lieutenant Cryspin and one of the Northumberland Fusileers were wounded."

In North Cape Colony.

London, June 26.—The information from South Africa continues so unimportant that newspapers here are trying to make a sensation out of General Ian Hamilton breaking his collar bone by a fall from his horse. General Warren wires that the rebellion has been extinguished in the north of Cape Colony, but he does not mention the capture or dispersal of the Boer force which has been overrunning that part of the country.

Interest mostly centers in the Orange River Colony, where General Dewett is causing the British much annoyance.

Boers Have Many Prisoners.

New York, June 26.—The Tribune's London correspondent cables:

The Boers have 1350 prisoners on the Delagoa Bay line and probably about 800 in the Orange River Colony which were taken at the Rhenoster river. Lord Leitrim and Ennis Moore have been taken north with other members of the millionaire's battalion.

Their Fate Unknown.

London, June 26.—The admiralty has received the following dispatch from Rear Admiral Bruce, dated Taku, via Chefoo:

"The total force which left Tientsin with the commander-in-chief for Peking was about 2000, composed of detachments from the allied ships. No action could possibly be taken to releve the commander-in-chief, because it was only known that he was cut off by Tientsin being invested.

"Tientsin has been fighting for its life ever since. It was on receipt of this information that the Chinese ministry has ordered trains for attacking Tientsin; that they are ravaging Tong Ku and reinforcing Taku, as well as mining the mouth of the Pei Ho, that it was promptly determined to seize Taku. Since then every effort has been made to relieve Tientsin. I have commandeered a small coasting steamer for taking troops and sick and wounded across the bay to Wei Hai Wei, where I intend making a temporary base hospital and asylum for refugees."

Chinese Army Too Strong.

Washington, June 24.—The following bulletin has been issued by the navy department:

"Acting Secretary Hackett has this morning received a dispatch from Admiral Kempff, dated Chefoo, June 23, to the effect that our marines under Major Waller, together with 400 Russians, have had an engagement with the Chinese army near Tientsin. They could not break through the line. A force numbering 2000, the admiral reports, is now ready to make another attempt."

The main importance of this dispatch is Admiral Kempff's disclosure that it is the Chinese army and not the Boxers who are fighting the foreign troops.

The state department has received a letter from the Chinese minister, saying the viceroy of Nanking cables him that the legations at Peking are safe.

The news of the safety of Baron von Ketteler, German minister to Peking, has been corroborated by a message received here from Henry Ledyard of Detroit, whose daughter is the wife of Baron von Ketteler. The message stated that a cablegram had been received via Berlin stating that his daughter and her husband were safe.

Brute Was Lynched.

New Orleans, La., June 25.—Mrs. Josephine Comtes of this city was criminally assaulted and brutally murdered in her residence in an isolated neighborhood near Springfield, in Livingston parish. She was 60 years of age and reputed to have considerable money about her place. Frank Gilmore, a white man, who lived about two miles from her house, was caught in the house and taken out and lynched.

Fire at Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, June 26.—The carpet mill of Ashland & Sons has been destroyed by fire. The loss is between $75,000 and $100,000.

Will Keep His Position.

Chattanooga, Tenn., June 26.—A letter has been received by the Chattanooga News from Commissioner of Pensions Evans in which he denies the story published several days ago to the effect that he would resign as pension commissioner and run for congress.

Hanna at the Helm.

The national committee met in the rooms back of the convention hall immediately after the adjournment of the convention. As soon as the committee was assembled, Chairman Hanna was nominated and re-elected for the next four years. In accepting the nomination he made a very short speech, in which he thanked the old members of the committee who had stood by him in the campaign of 1896, and said that in taking the position for another four years, and especially for the coming campaign, he did so with the distinct understanding that every member of the national committee would stand by him and work loyally for the success of the ticket which had been nominated today.

Colonel Dick of Ohio was elected temporary secretary. Chairman Hanna was authorized to select from the members of the national committee an executive committee, and the committee then adjourned subject to the call of the chairman.

Chairman Hanna left very soon after for Mr. Griscom's Haverford home, saying he would not be in Philadelphia this afternoon. He will leave in a few days for Cleveland. He said he would take his time in making selections for the executive committee.

The headquarters of the national committee will be established at Chicago and New York as in the campaign of 1896. Mr. Hanna said that his personal headquarters would be wherever he deems it most expedient for the success of the party.

Hard Blow to France.

Paris.—The sudden death of Count Muravieff, the strong bulwark of the Franco-Russian alliance, has caused deep concern among the members of the French official and political world. Count Muravieff was a bitter antagonist of England, and in him France felt she had an influential friend. The cordial relations of the foreign offices of Russia and France, moreover, have not rested upon a purely political basis. A great element of strength was found in the personal friendship existing between M. Delcasse, French minister of foreign affairs, and Count Muravieff, and to the former the loss of his friend came as a severe blow. The removal of Count Muravieff from the councils of the czar is gravely commented upon by the French press, and in hopes expressed that the policy of Russia will not be affected thereby one discerns apprehensions lest the foundation of the Franco-Russian alliance should be rudely shaken by the lopping off of one of its strongest roots.

The veil drawn over events in Peking by the interruption of communication serves to increase the anxiety felt here. M. Delcasse, minister of foreign affairs, speaking today on the situation, gave it as his opinion that the powers' first duty was to overcome the rebellion and to insure the safety of the properties and lives of all foreigners.

Failure of Crops Reported.

The crop report prepared by Snow, the crop expert, who has just completed a two week's tour through Minnesota, North and South Dakota, shows the situation is a national calamity and claims the wheat failure the worst ever known. He estimates the Dakotas are promising only 20,000,000 bushels each and Minnesota about 35,000,000, a total of 75,000,000 against 200,000,000 last year and 225,000,000 in 1898.

Oliver Dalrymple, the big wheat grower of North Dakota writes his son as follows: "Ten days ago I wrote you one-third of the spring wheat crop had been destroyed by drouth. I now am of the opinion that two-thirds of the crop is killed beyond redemption. The Grandin farm is running 6 plows in the wheat fields. I shall start plows tomorrow and nearly all spring wheat farmers will be plowing under wheat next week unless heavy rains come."

Farmers Were Too Fast.

When the sheriff of Dakota county, Nebraska, was apprised of the work of the 32 South Dakota farmers in digging a channel across Rininger's neck to make a short cut for the tortuous Missouri river recently he immediately dispatched a posse of deputies to stop the unlawful work. Among the posse members were bankers and prominent business men. They went fully armed, as it was expected a determined resistance would be made, but they arrived too late. The last farmer had already crossed into South Dakota before the posse came in sight.

When the posse arrived they found the swift current of the river fast eating a wide and deeper channel across the neck through which the trench was dug. It is only a question of a few hours when the channel of the big river will be unalterably changed and the farms on the fertile peninsula will be a part of the domain of South Dakota.

Chicago, June 25.—Terry McGovern Saturday upheld his reputation as king of featherweights by defeating George Dixon in six rounds. Dixon, although not knocked out, was in distress and holding on for dear life as the bout ended. The fight was fast and furious from beginning to end, with Terry on top of his man all the way.

Drowned in a Rossland Pond.

Rossland, B. C., June 25.—John James, a lad of 14 years, was drowned in a pond in the west end of town Sunday at 12:30. The lad was subject to fits, and was seized with one after he had been bathing and fell from a log into the water. The other boys bathing with him were younger and were frightened. They made no attempt to save him. After being in the water half an hour the body was recovered. He was the son of Thomas James, a miner.

Graham reported the fact to the sheriff, who arrested the hoboes, and upon being searched one of the men had upon him, sewed in the lining of his coat and concealed about his person, $1682 in currency and certificates of deposit on various banks in the state of Washington, besides five gold watches and eight or 10 rings. FATAL RAILROAD ACCIDENT

TRAIN RAN INTO A WASHOUT.

Heavy Loss of Life on a Passenger Train in Georgia—The Wreckage Took Fire—Several Cars Were Burned.

Atlanta, Ga., June 25.—A passenger train on the Southern railway which left Macon at 7 p. m. for Atlanta ran into a washout near McDonough, Ga., Saturday. It is reported here that there was a heavy loss of life. The train crew is said to be lost and only seven passengers are known to be uninjured.

The wreck occurred at a culvert near the Ocmulgee river, not far from McDonough. A cloudburst occurred tonight and flooded the country near McDonough. The train went into the washout without a note of warning and despite the pouring rain the wreckage took fire. The train was composed on one sleeper, two day coaches and two baggage cars. The Pullman caught fire, but before it was totally destroyed the body of Captain Wood was rescued.

Superintendent A. G. Jones fears that the entire train crew is lost. He is totally unadvised, but from the nature of the wreck thinks it must have been a bad one, and that the passengers too have met with heavy disaster. Seven or eight passengers were saved, but the flagman is the only trainman who was saved.

The Constitution has received the following list from the wreck.

Engineer Sullivan, missing.

Fireman Byrd, missing.

Thirty-Five People Killed.

Atlanta, Ga., June 25.—A passenger train on the Macon branch of the Southern railway ran into a washout one and a half miles north of McDonough and was completely wrecked. The wreck caught fire and the entire train, with the exception of the sleeper, was destroyed. Every person on the train except the occupants of the Pullman car perished. Not a member of the train crew escaped. Thirty-five people in all were killed. Following is a list of the dead: William A. Barclay, conductor, Atlanta; J. E. Wood, conductor, Atlanta; J. Sullivan, engineer; W. W. Bennett, baggageman; T. E. Maddox, cotton buyer; W. J. Pate, Atlanta; 12-year-old son of W. J. Pate, Atlanta; H. R. Cressin, Pullman conductor; George W. Flourney, Atlanta; H. C. Highwater, Stockbridge; A. W. Park; Elder Henson, traveling man, supposed to have been from Florida; J. R. Florida, Nashville; W. E. Ellis, bridgeman, Stockbridge, Ga.; D. Y. Griffith, supervisor; J. H. Rhodes flagman; J. Brantley (white), fireman; Will Green, extra fireman; W. D. Morisett, pump repairer; W. R. Lawrence, foreman extra gang; Ed. Byrne (colored), fireman, Atlanta; Robert Spencer, train porter; four bodies unidentified; eight negro section hands.

Hanna Predicts.

Pittsburg, Pa., June 25.—Senator Hanna, chairman of the republican national committee, was in the city for a short time en route from Philadelphia to Cleveland, and talked at length on the plans of the campaign.

"I have been assailed on every hand by the question as to what states we will win over from the democrats," said the Ohio senator, "and we would like to tell the newspapers and would like to have them tell everybody in the country who is interested in the campaign that the grand old party this year will go after its opponents wherever they are found. No stronger ticket was ever placed in the field. I would not like to predict the majority that will go to McKinley and Roosevelt. However, we will carry Kentucky, Goebel law or no Goebel law. California will vindicate itself. Up in the northwest the republicans will have no difficulty in holding sway. There is no doubt as to the turn things will take in the east."

Asked as to his opinion on the result of the fight in Nebraska, the senator said: "We will try hard to keep Bryan's state in the righteous column, too."

"September 1 will see the red fire burning and all the drums will be beating before a fortnight later," was the senator's comment when questioned regarding the time of the opening of the campaign.

Sidney Lucas Won.

Chicago, June 25.—Sidney Lucas, almost neglected in the betting at odds of 15 to 1, won the thirteenth American Derby at Washington park. Six lengths behind him was the eastern colt James, and still further back, struggling to no avail, was the vaunted public choice—the even money favorite, Lieutenant Gibson. Barrack, Advance Guard and Sam Phillips in order brought up the procession, which carried little joy to the 30,000 spectators who saw the great classic event decided. The rush of Sidney Lucas through the stretch and the falling back of Lieutenant Gibson was so sudden, so startling, that it fairly stupefied the crowd.

Perhaps not one in a hundred had picked Sidney Lucas to turn the trick. Lieutenant Gibson, the favorite, had no excuses. Sam Phillips, the second choice, was in the same unfortunate category. Thus the great event passed into turf annals and registered the ninth defeat of a favorite in a race which has been contested 13 times.

Bryan to Stay at Home.

Chicago, June 24.—William J. Bryan, bronzed like an Indian from his two weeks' outing in the woods and among the lakes of central Wisconsin, passed through Chicago on his way home to Lincoln, Neb., Saturday. Colonel Bryan said that he would remain in Lincoln for an indefinite period, and unless he changed his plans, would not attend the Kansas City convention.

Colonel Bryan held conferences with former Governor Altgeld, ex-Congressman Hinrichsen and other leaders of the party in Illinois, during which the political outlook was discussed in a general way.

EXCURSION TRAIN WRECKED

Eight Are Dead, While Thirty of the Injured Are in a Serious Condition.

Green Bay, Wis., June 25.—A northbound passenger train on the Chicago & Northwestern road loaded with excursionists bound for the Saengerfest in this city, collided at 10:15 o'clock Sunday morning with a freight at Depere, five miles south of here. Eight persons were killed, one is missing and 34 were injured. The dead: Ed. Kuskie, Fond du Lac, Wis., aged 27; Lawrence Plank, Fond du Lac; George Lloyd, Eden; Charles Miers, Oshkosh; Burt Ives, Oshkosh; Matt Korcher, Oshkosh; Adam Weber; man from Ashland, name unknown. Missing: Ed. Lawson, Neenan. The injured: John Bart, Green Bay, leg hurt; Fred Wagner, Fond du Lac, leg broken; Charles Link, leg hurt; Charles Rehwing, Fond du Lac, hip hurt; J. J. Raddatie, Vandyke, hand hurt; Miss Lena Lalacke, head hurt; Otto Lauckritz, Fond du Lac, head hurt; John Ryan, Fond du Lac, face injured; Ernest Gardiner, Neenan, hand hurt; Louis Manseon, Fond du Lac, head cut; Henry Schauft, Vandyke, knee hurt; Burt Doest, Oshkosh, badly bruised; James Gaffney, Vandyke, back and leg hurt; E. L. Keyes, Fond du Lac, head hurt; F. Reinz, Fond du Lac, hand hurt; —— Scaeffer, Fond du Lac, hand injured; Mrs. Eicke, Fond du Lac, hand injured; Miss Heider, back hurt; Fred Harper, Fond du Lac, head cut; John H. Thompson, Fond du Lac, arm and back hurt; Ed. Carr, Fond du Lac, both legs broken.

How the Accident Happened.

The accident happened just as the passenger train was pulling into the station. A double-header freight was backing into a sidetrack, but had not cleared the main track. Those injured were nearly all in the second coach. When the two trains came together the first car, which was a combination, was driven through the second coach, where the loss of life occurred. None of the trainmen were injured, the engine crew jumping in time to save themselves. Both engines were badly damaged and two coaches were broken into kindling wood.

Killed by the Train.

Spokane, June 25.—Christopher W. Meyer was killed by a train at the crossing of the O. R. & N. and Sprague avenue, about six miles east of this city, at an early hour Saturday morning. Mr. Meyer is a contractor and had a contract for the erection of a school house at Saltese. While his home is in Spokane, he has been staying at Saltese most of the time of late. Yesterday morning, however, he had occasion to come to the city and mounting a horse had proceeded as far as the point above referred to when the horse was struck by the engine and both horse and rider were hurled to immediate death. The body of Mr. Meyer was found 60 feet distant from the track, with his head badly mutilated. The horse was thrown 20 feet further.

Big Shingle Mill Burned.

Seattle, June 25.—Donoghue & Robinson's shingle mill at Smith's Cove was burned to the ground Sunday afternoon, entailing a loss of $16,000. All the stock, consisting of 1,000,000 shingles in dry kiln, was consumed. The mill is a new one, and had been running only a month and a half. The origin of the fire is a mystery.

Easy Route for Canal.

In a letter to a friend at Bellefont, Pa., Dr. F. G. Wicks, formerly physician at Bellevue hospital, New York, and at present surgeon of the Nicaraguan canal commission, conveys an idea of the results of the work of the commission. He gives the startling and interesting information that the commission has discovered a tide level water route for the canal across the isthmus. The letter also shows some of the hardships and dangers which the commission encountered. It was written from Lasardi, Caledonia bay, and in part says:

"Here we have found what we all have vainly sought for weeks and weeks, a practical route for a tide level canal. We have found low enough gaps in the dividing ridge from time to time with a steep approach on the Atlantic slope, making a 'cut' a practical possibility, but disappointment has always awaited us on the other side. But in the last week we have found a gap 800 feet high, a little too high perhaps, but not beyond the science of modern engineering, and when I tell you this every fact against the route has been enumerated. From the summit of this gap in the divide both the Atlantic and Pacific slopes down precipitately, especially the latter, which has heretofore been our stumbling block. A great wide valley stretches out straight toward the Pacific ocean, which can be seen in the distance. The Atlantic is near and in plain sight.

"Here a tide water canal, the dream of all canalists, can be built with a perfect harbor on each side. At Lasardi the many islands would protect its mouth, and on the other side San Miguel bay is a perfect site. The officers of the Scorpion say that the Lasardi harbor alone makes this route worth $10,000,000 more than any other. The damming of rivers, which would otherwise flood the canal, is a problem of every route. The only thing to be said against this route is the high cut of 800 feet. Of course congress may not accept the report of the commission, but it remains an indisputable fact that this is par excellence the future route for a transcontinental route. It seems we have discovered Selfridge's route discovered here in the early 70's.

"The route from Caledonia bay to the Gulf of San Miguel lies about 130 miles east of the old Panama Colon route. The proposed route would connect the Gulf of Darien and the Bay of Panama. The isthmus is about 35 miles wide at that point."

KEEP YOUR BLOOD CLEAN

Situation in South Africa.

London, June 25.—Great Britain's army in South Africa is slowly accomplishing the work of pacification. The smouldering embers of what once was fierce resistance occasionally flare up, but the hard fighting seems to be practically over. The British military progress in the Transvaal is scarcely more interesting now than the events in the Orange River Colony during the last two months. The Transvaal annexation is soon expected.

The Boers are rapidly realizing the futility of a further struggle when opposed to such an overwhelming force.

One of the most noticeable features of the week in South Africa was Lord Roberts' abandonment of humane measures toward the Boers, which he had so long persisted in, despite the criticism of the British colonists and many officers. The stern vengeance that now will be visited not only on those who give the Boers passive assistance, but on those who after surrendering fail to assist the British arms, savors more of General Kitchener than of "Bobs."

Kumassi still awaits relief. Governor Hodgson is expected to hold out, but even after the siege ends little can be done to subdue the natives until the rains are over. In December a punitive expedition with a corps of white troops will probably be sent. The mortality among the officers of Colonel Willcock's staff shows how useless it would be to send many white troops until then.

CHINESE BLOCKED THE WAY

COMBINED FORCES REPULSED.

Chinese Artillery Too Strong—A Large Force Tried to Get Through Their Line—Draws the Attention of the World.

London, June 25.—The only dispatches from China received recently are those which give further details of the repulse of Thursday's attempt to relieve Tientsin. According to a dispatch from Chefoo hordes of Chinese with well posted artillery block the way of the American and Russian forces. The guns of the allies could make no impression and it was found impossible to shift the enemy's position. Nothing could be done except to fall back, and this was accomplished in good order. It was ascertained that the foreigners in Tientsin were making a gallant defense. The French concession buildings had been vigorously attacked and in all probability have been reduced to ashes. After the force retired an armored train attempted to reconnoiter, but was derailed. More troops are arriving at Taku and another attempt at relief with a force of much greater strength was to have been made last night. The Chinese legation at Berlin received another telegram last Saturday night stating that all the legations in Peking were safe and the foreign ministers at that place were all safe.

Price of Wheat Up.

Chicago, June 25.—July wheat was quoted at 66 1-2c on the board of trade during the session of June 4. At the close Saturday the same option was selling at 88c. This was 4 7-8c above the closing price of Friday. No such advance has been scored since the attempted corner engineered by Joseph Leiter. In the advance of 21 1-2c during the past 19 days there have been no evidences of manipulation, contrary to speculative proverbs that "the market only advances on manipulation; its natural course is downward."

It has been the most remarkable rise in the history of the exchange.

"Pyramiders" have had everything their own way, because there has been scarcely a setback since the market crossed 70c. No failures have resulted. There was an extraordinary small short interest at the beginning of the advance and this was hastily covered. Foreigners had hedged against considerable cash stuff in this market, but of course this kind of shortage entailed no financial loss. Stories of big winnings are thick about the exchange, and no such wave of prosperity has visited the commission men in a decade. Causes for this advance in the price of the "staff of life" are found in the parched spring wheat fields of the great northwest, where authorities declare not one-third of the crop of former years can be harvested. A bumper winter wheat crop has already been assured outside of Ohio, Indiana and Michigan. For the satisfaction of those who may be in fear of starvation it may also be stated that the visible supply of wheat in the public granaries of the United States exceeds 45,000,000 bushels. These are the grains of comfort left to the bears, who also have the assurance that every month in the year records a wheat harvest in some country of the globe. But at present a sort of "bull fever" is running high and the Chicago wheat pit is flooded by telegraphic orders from every part of the world to "buy, buy, buy."

One-third of all the beer consumed in the world is brewed in Germany.

—Sportsmen have already been out locating sagehens and report coveys as small and few.

—The resources of this section must appeal to every intelligent man. Now is the time to establish yourself.

—Geo. W. Morrison of Lewiston broke his leg while jumping from a railroad train near Stuart. Both bones were broken.

—If we could only have that steam swing with the bowery dance on the fourth the cup of happiness of the young would be complete.

—Cattle, hogs, mutton, ham, lard, hides, hay, cotton have advanced and we see no reason why we should not continue prosperity four years more.

—An overland train of immigrants, twelve families, passed through Blackfoot Wednesday, en route to Kendrick, north Idaho. They were from Nebraska.—News. Let them come, room here for many more.

—We are informed that the Linnton cannery is again grinding away making sausage of our western cayuses. Big shipments of these worthless animals are now being made to their ill fated end. Scrubby looking beasts are many, but the most unpromising looking hide may cover juicy steaks.

—Machines will soon be at work extracting gold from the harvest fields Homeseekers should view our country. While other sections meet with failures every two or three years, this country returns a big crop each year. Our schools are the best—and we have two fine agricultural colleges and a normal school within a radius of thirty miles.

—A new cyclone story is vouched for by a Nebraska eye-witness. A cow which was picketed on a rope was picked up by the cyclone and carried up the length of her rope—about 300 feet—where she remained until the storm had passed, when she quietly climbed down the rope and resumed her grazing.

—Kansas is still sending out appeals for harvest hands. Not one-half of the 20,000 men wanted two weeks ago have responded. Scarcity of hands also prevails in the Pendleton country according to a local paper. This is a condition calling for serious consideration. Harvest will soon be in full blast in the Palouse and it looks as if our farmers are going to be embarassed. The prospect is not good for the men to be secured to rush the harvest work.

—"One-quarter of a crop is all we are going to get this year," said a prominent Dakota man. Many of the farmers, he said, realizing that their wheat crop would not be worth harvesting, were plowing it under, sowing other grains, such as millet, turnips and rutabagas. This is the driest season experienced there for five years, and on account of heavy immigration this year there will be many sufferers. The old-timers are able to stand this drought very well, but the new people have debts to pay.

—Idaho yields to no state, Alabama and Ohio not excepted. Our crops, mines and stock ranges cannot be excelled anywhere. To determine the real productiveness of the soil one must judge of the crops produced. We invite homeseekers to come to the Genesee valley and see the waving grain fields, wheat fields that promise from 35 to 45 bushels per acre, and on soil that has been tilled for fifteen years without receiving an ounce of fertilizing substance. The productiveness is so great that men are now engaged in thinning the fruit in the various orchards. Every foot of our land is capable of producing hay, grain, fruits and vegetables. Seeing is believing. We invite inspection. We care not where you go you cannot find a more prolific country, and we know of no spot as productive. It certainly is not west of the Mississippi river. Back of this country are to be found the largest mining enterprises in the west, which furnish excellent market. Then we have boundless forests, unequaled for quality and extent to be found anywhere. Much of this timber lies within the borders of Latah county. If you want a home where all these exist, here is your spot. Ponder—immense tracts of fertile soil—unlimited water supply—semi-tropical climate—endless forests—untold wealth of mining deposits—boundless grazing lands all within or tributary to this favored Inland Empire. All kinds of fruit are raised here—grapes, peaches, prunes, pears, apples, berries, etc., etc. This young state contains the elements of happy, prosperous homes. And that is what the people are scouring the world for and that is what they can find here.

Grandpa

Everybody's proud of this sort of Grandpa, and he's proud of himself; proud of his clear brain and active body. There are other kinds of grandparents that we can't be proud of. Weak of body and feeble of mind, we can only pity them. They no more live; they only exist. What makes the difference between these two classes of old men? A sound stomach and a plentiful supply of pure, rich blood. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery strengthens the stomach, purifies the blood, and increases the activity of the blood-making glands. It won't make old men young, but it will enable old men to assimilate the food they eat, and so strengthen them for a life of reasonable exertion.

"I suffered for six years with constipation and indigestion, during which time I employed several physicians, but they could not reach my case," writes Mr. G. Popplewell, of Eureka Springs, Carroll Co., Ark. "I felt that there was no help for me; could not retain food on my stomach; had vertigo and would fall helpless to the floor. Two years ago I commenced taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and little 'Pellets,' and improved from the start. After taking twelve bottles of the 'Discovery' I was able to do light work, and have been improving ever since. I am now in good health for one of my age—60 years. I owe it all to Dr. Pierce's medicines."

Old people often need a laxative medicine. The best for them is Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

—A large barn is going up on the old Barringer ranch west of Genesee, Al. Whitted hauling the lumber from the mountains.

WHAT NEWSPAPERS SAY ABOUT McKINLEY AND ROOSEVELT.

McKinley and Roosevelt! This is the ticket which 8,000,000 republican voters of the United States have wanted, but which they at one time feared they would not get, because they doubted that Roosevelt could be induced to accept the candidacy. Opposition was overcome at a critical moment.—Globe-Democrat.

Mr. McKinley is not an ideal leader, but he is an ideal follower. He is intelligent, honest and patriotic. He tries to do his duty. He wants to do what is best for his party and for the country, believing that is also best for McKinley. Theodore Roosevelt brings to the ticket just the things that McKinley cannot give it. He is in every way McKinley's complement—in age, in temperment, in record, in influence. He will supply the magnetism and inspire the ardor necessary to a hurrah campaign. He will light the torches and wave the flags. But he will do much more than that. He will attract a large element of the independent vote, which thinks for itself, which rebels against boss rule, which recognizes and admires brains, courage and integrity. There is no man in the country who has a larger following among this class than Roosevelt, and it is a class which is daily growing stronger and more assertive in the affairs of government. But Roosevelt's strength will be even greater among the young men, among the full-blooded Americans of action and progress, who believe in fighting when fighting is necessary, and who, however proudly they may look back on their country's past, look forward to its future even more proudly.—Louisville Courier-Journal (Dem.).

The ticket nominated by the republicans will surely be elected by a sweeping majority in November. McKinley is a tower of strength, and Roosevelt honest, courageous and popular everywhere and will add strength to the ticket in all parts of the country.—Cleveland Leader (Rep.).

The republican convention presents a ticket that suits the times and the party. It is a wedding of war heroes—McKinley of the war room of the White House, and Roosevelt of the rough horse in Cuba. Here you have action, and acquisition personified—fit combination for a period of expansion and prosperity. When it was settled that it was to be Roosevelt, after all, what did the band do but play "There'll Be a Hot Time in The Old Town Tonight!" What a prophecy of the frolicsome days before us! Dear old Teddy of the khaki and the top boots and the wide-brimmed hat, and all that! What a carnival of nicknames and noise his candidacy implies, and what high old times are in store for the boys at the coming of the dashing rough rider.—Detroit Free Press (Dem.).

Mr. McKinley as the nominee for president is the product of three years of unremitting labor and vigilance of the strongest and most affluent political organization known to the history of the United States The candidate for vice president stands on a fable of the war with Spain.—Cincinnati Enquirer (Dem.).

In personnel the ticket is beyond criticism. Geographically considered it is ideally strong. As representative of the established principles of republicanism, all that is highest and best, typical alike of the conservatism of American statesmanship and the aggressiveness of American manhood, able, progressive, patriotic, and clean, the combination is without the pale of possible improvement. Nor can one readily in mental inventory compose its equal.—Cincinnati Commercial (Rep.).

The republican candidates are well mated. With all respects to two estimable gentlemen, Mr. McKinley and Mr. Roosevelt are both posers. They are as stagy in the parts they assume as if they were vertibly of the sock and buskin.—St. Louis Republic (Dem.).

This year the candidate for vice president will make a great many votes for the republican party. Americans do not have to be partisans in order to admire pluck, dash, persistency, and foresight. McKinley and Roosevelt form a ticket good enough to fight for, to get enthusiastic over, and to win with.—Milwaukee Sentinel (Rep.)

Roosevelt is the kind of a man to suit the Western people. They like the dash and courage and the spirit of the "rough rider." With them his tendency to be spectacular is rather in his favor, so long as he has so abundantly proven his ability to make good. He is genuine.—Kansas City Star (Ind.).

The people themselves nominated Roosevelt, and against his wishes. The delegates merely did what they knew their constituents desired. For once the office sought the man, and he yielded to the overwhelming demand. It will be done.—Toledo Blade (Rep.).

—Adverse fate is defined as that which causes you to put on a light summer suit, and experience weather colder than Greenland's icy mountains, or to put on a heavy suit and run across a day or so hot that the cement sidewalks curl up with the heat, or when you arrive home late at night and feel in a matchsafe for a match, to find you have your hand full of your wife's hairpins.

—Harve Bundy will engage in running a fruit and vegetable wagon from Grangeville to the Hump reports the Free Press.

—Several harvesters have pulled out for the Walla Walla country and, as the grain ripens and falls before the sicle, will work their way back to the Palouse.

—Mark A. Means, our enterprising and rustling merchant, was looking over business matters here for several days the latter part of the week but returned to Genesee for his Sunday dinner.—Orofino Patriot.

—Already it is evident that many thousands of farmers in Minnesota and Dakotas will be in need of state aid to procure seed necessary to put in next year's crop. The legislatures will be called upon to provide for the needy.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

—The three-cent a mile rate was inaugurated on the Northern Pacific railway the first of July, as per previous announcement. People have no kick to make now regarding transportation. Let the freight rates on grain to the coast be reduced and all will be serene.

—The wheat market for the past weeks has been weaker than the week previous. Farmers must not screw their expectations too high and make themselves believe they will get a fancy price for their wheat. It pays best to sell when a fair figure is offered for what you have.

—Information gathered from reliable sources, from railroad men who have been in the grain fields, from grain dealers, millers and from farmers, besides from telegraphic reports from all sections of Minnesota and the Dakotas have been compiled by the St. Paul Press to show the exact situation of the crops. In reality there is not much difference between a yield of four or five bushels per acre and a total failure. Country correspondents do not concede a total failure as long as there is any grain in sight, but four or five bushels would not pay to harvest, and such fields should be classed as a total loss. With favorable conditions until the wheat is harvested, experts estimate 20,000,000 bushels for South Dakota, 15,000,000 for Minnesota and 10,000,000 for favored localities in North Dakota, an aggregate of 50,000,000, as against about 150,000000 a year ago. Ex-Senator Washburn, who has just been through these states, says the above figures are about correct. Manitoba reports a little more than a half crop. Heretofore the three states have produced about 88,000,000 bushels of oats. The prospects are that 25,000,000 bushels will have to be shipped in. Corn in the southern part of Minnesota and South Dakota, and in Iowa, though in great need of rain, is standing the drought fairly well. Still the critical point is approaching.

—Both the Pendleton scouring and woolen mills are running full blast, the scouring mill running both day and night, and about 75 men on both shifts. Scour from 20,000 to 25,000 pounds daily.

—The census taker near Kamiah has had considerable trouble with a few of the Indians, especially with Kip-kip Pelican and Peter Parson. These two may be arrested under the census law for refusal to answer the questions asked by Uncle Sam.

—One of our neighboring editors rightfully says a wisely conducted newspaper is like a banquet—everything is served up with a view to variety. Help yourself to whatever you wish, and do not condemn the entire spread because pickles and onions may be included. If you do not relish them somebody else will find them palatable. Be generous and broad enough to select gracefully such reading matter from the newspaper as will be agreeable to your taste. You, as an individual, are not compelled to swallow everything. We do not all think alike on every subject; and it is a good thing as it makes more of a variety, and "variety is the spice of life."

—Life is insecure in African villages according to a writer. Suddenly at midnight the stillness is broken by a distinct call, and alert you raise yourself to listen. The call comes nearer, and is taken up and passed by other voices, and soon you are convinced that it is the cry of alarm—war! war! A few minutes more and the village is astir, the people rushing hither and thither seeking to find safety in the thickest bush—a mother calling for her child, or child for mother. You spend a wakeful and watchful night, not knowing where the enemy may be nor where his attack may take place. After long, anxious, weary hours you are thankful to notice the first glimmer of dawn showing itself in the east. Later all is quit and the enemy gone. You see men, women and children with terror-stricken faces, torn limbs and bleeding feet hurrying past, or, it may be, coming to you to get their wounds dressed. As you seek to relieve their pain you hear of how one child is missing, another has been carried away captive and a third murdered, and the homes of all, with their stores of grain, have been burned to ashes.

Your health depends largely on your teeth, but poor dental work makes matters worse. Get the best. Call on Dr. Lemmian. Prices lower than the lowest.

Reports show that over fifteen hundred lives have been saved through the use of One Minute Cough Cure. Most of these were cases of grippe, croup, asthma, whooping cough, bronchitis and pneumonia. Its early use prevents consumption.

Prince Alexis Dolgoroukoff has been in this country investigating the standing of American capitalists for the Russian government. If he limited his researches to a consideration of the tax lists he found that American capitalists are generally a very poor lot.

All the momentary indications to the contrary notwithstanding, we venture the assertion with great confidence that never were character and a good name of as much value as business assets as they are to-day. Time was when by a change of environment and the formation of new connections a business man who had kept within the Revised Statutes to the extent of keeping out of jail could balance the record of his past and open a new account with fortune. This is becoming increasingly difficult. The very perfect machinery of investigation maintained by the commercial agencies, supplemented by the even more searching analysis of the associations of manufacturers, merchants and financial institutions formed for mutual information and protection, give the man with a shady past or a record clouded by wrongdoing very little chance to escape recognition, however disguised.

There is bound to be a reaction against the present popular form of fiction, with its dueling duchesses, gambling princesses and abnormally ardent lovers. The realists will have their day and we shall know just how Evelina felt when she went to market in the morning, and just how the carrots and cabbages were arranged in the grocer's window. There is much to be said for these still water comedies, and even the relation between the housekeeper and her grocer is full of psychological subtleties. For the grocer knows exactly what his customer's standard of crispness, both in life and in lettuce, is, and just what degree of staledness it will be possible for her to endure. It is time that the world realized that the eternal love theme is not the only legitimate subject for novels. All of the lanes of life are not lovers' lanes, with the altar and orange blossoms at the end of them. There are some pretty sequestered paths where platonic friends love to wander and where all sorts of lofty relationships are formed. It would be gratifying to many readers should the novelists take to these paths when in pursuit of subject matter.

In his monograph prepared for the educational exhibit of the United States at the Paris exposition Prof. Nicholas Murray Butler feels called upon to justify the multiplicity of small colleges which is often the subject of foreign criticism. There are 472, and he admits that the number is enormous and that many are small and weak and ill-endowed, and that the criticisms against the existence of many are justified. Yet he says it should not be forgotten that almost any college exerts a helpful influence upon the life of its locality. The fact is frequently overlooked that all American colleges depend for their student attendance in large measure upon the residents of their own immediate neighborhood. Few draw from the nation at large, and even in these few the greater number of the students are from within the institutions' own State or the limits of their own section of the country. For example, of the 27,956 students attending colleges in the North Atlantic division of the United States 26,393, or 94 per cent., are residents of the States included in that division. Of 8,529 students in the colleges of Massachusetts 5,562 are residents of the State and 88.37 per cent. are residents of the North Atlantic division. The colleges in Oregon draw 99.87 per cent. of their students from the Pacific coast and 96.09 come from the State. It is safe to assume that most of these students would have to do without a collegiate education were it not for the small colleges in Oregon. The report of the University of Michigan excellently illustrates the truth of Dr. Butler's contention. Although the University of Michigan draws from all the world, yet of its 3,447 students 2,008 are reported as residents of the State.

Public events that have come home with peculiar force to the people of this nation seem to call for a repetition of the homely aphorism, "Honesty is the best policy." If there were no Christian religion, if "thou shalt not steal" had never been inscribed in holy writ, the truth would still hold good that the risk of dishonesty is out of all proportion to any possible gain. It is said that most newspaper men are pessimists—that they are, as a class, cruel and unfeeling. There may be something in the charge. Their work brings them in contact with so much that is insincere, with so much of misery, with so much of crime, that, unless they be broad enough to understand that their lives are narrow, they are prone to think the world is made up of these things. But the newspaper man usually learns early that "honesty is the best policy." Almost daily he comes in contact with the hardship, the disgrace and the misery that follow dishonesty almost as surely as night follows the setting sun. A trusted employe suddenly "resigns," and when the reporter comes to look into the facts he finds a sorrowful employer, a crushed and penitent ex-employe and a family, half-crazed with a grief that is worse than death, imploring that nothing be printed of the matter. Nothing appears about it in the paper, of course, but the young man, "short in his accounts," never recovers from the blow. A building association or bank has been looted by its managers, a commercial enterprise has been wrecked by dishonest practices, in almost any of the cases that occur, always comes the same staggering load of sorrow and shame. We are in the world to gain as much of happiness as we can. Let any one look among those he knows best and ask himself who, among them, are the happy ones. Invariably he finds them to be the ones that have lived the best lives according to the Christian code of morals. Whether they be rich or poor seems to make little difference in the sum of happiness they are able to extract from life. If their records be clean, if they have nothing to be ashamed of, if they possess the proud consciousness that they have accomplished good in the world, if they have the confidence and respect of those that know them, riches beyond a comfortable competence can make little difference in their happiness.

HOW SHE WON FATHER.

The Old Man Was Amused at Her Little Deceit.

This Piety hill family is rich, influential and free from the weaknesses of the parvenu. The daughter in question has an admirer who pleases her. But she is the only one in the whole domestic circle who is under the spell of his attractions. He is a fine fellow, perhaps a bit too fine, for he has some very old-fashioned ideas and lives up to them. The other day she had a battle to have him with them for dinner, says the Detroit Free Press.

They had just begun to enjoy the soup when he turned to the father and effusively thanked him for a picture received as a birthday present. It was as dainty and pretty a piece of work as he had seen in a long while, and it was particularly welcome from her father.

All but one of his hearers, father included, looked stunned. He cleared his throat and, while sparring for time, caught the eye of the favorite daughter. It was shining, knowing, and commanding.

"Ah, yes, yes; glad you liked it." And the head of the house deliberately burned himself with the soup.

"What was it?" And the mother lowered the temperature of the room until the more timid shivered.

"I presume it was a water color," said the daughter, hurriedly. "Something pastoral, no doubt. George likes such things. Dark frame, of course."

"Guessed it the first time," smiled the father.

"It was so good of you," murmured the visitor.

"You darling old popsy," she whispered after dinner. "I knew you'd understand. We never show him any kindness, so I just went down and bought that picture and enclosed your ca.d. Isn't he grateful?"

It tickled the old gentleman. He felt important and like a protector. Before the family separated for bed he made an emphatic announcement that the daughter should marry any one she wanted to and he would allow no interference.

Irritation of the Lip Causes Cancer.

"Cancer of the lip," a city physician says, "is caused more frequently than one would think by the toothbrush. Let me illustrate this by a typical case which I am treating now. John Blank smoked a good deal, and, to keep his teeth white he cleaned them hard three times a day with a brush whose bristles were like wire. He brushed a little patch of skin from his lower lip. Afterward he was careful, and the sore spot healed. But then he forgot, and the spot became sore again. This went on a year or so. Two days out of the seven this one place in Blank's lip was sore. Finally, it began to pain him; it hurt him all the time; it smarted even when apparently healed. He would awake in the night with the sharp pinching pain there, and the pain was like the clutch of a crab's claw, for he had cancer now—cancer due to the irritation which he had applied thrice daily for a year to that one spot with his stiff-bristled brush."—Philadelphia Record.

LOAFING ON A SUMMER DAY.

The lazy boy sprawled on his back and squinted at the sky,
Wishing he were the long-winged bird that slantwise sailed on high;
For day was lapsing swiftly, half way from dawn to noon,
And the breeze it sang, "O, lazy boy,
what makes you tired so soon?"

But the lazy boy was silent, and he slowly chewed a straw,
Vaguely mindful of the thrush that whistled
in the haw,
And half aware of the bleating sheep and of the browsing kine
Far scattered over slumbering hills to the horizon line.

Happy, happy was the boy a-dreaming
sweet and long,
Fanned by the breeze that tossed the haw and raffled the thrush's song;
For the whole glad day he had to loaf,
he and himself together,
While all the mouths of nature blew the flutes of fairy weather.

The year's great treadmill round was done, its drudgery ended well,
And now the sunny holiday had caught him in its spell,
So that he longed, a lazy lout, up-squinting
at the sky,
And wished he was the long-winged bird
that slantwise sailed on high.

It's good to work and good to win the wages of the strong;
Sweet is the hum of labor's hive, and sweet the workman's song;
But once a year a lad must loaf, and dream, and chew a straw,
And wish he were a falcon, free, or a catbird in the haw!

Cupid with a Jimmy

WHEN John Trumbull fell in love with vivacious and sprightly Gertrude Moore no one would ever have suspected that he was a scholar, a thinker and a settled man of 40. His general actions were those of a youth of 18 undergoing his first case of love. The upshot of it was that when these two became engaged Miss Moore pulled Mr. Trumbull around by his philosophical nose and made him dance to her fiddling as suited her capricious and changing moods. Matrimony found the same condition of affairs. Every domestic question was settled by Mrs. Trumbull, no matter whether it was the choice of an apartment or the selection of a new coffee grinder. Mr. Trumbull, being still in a state of blinding affection and admiration for the little girl of 20 whom he had wooed and won, let her have her way, with the result that he was being henpecked to the queen's taste.

But as the years went by, as the years have a way of doing, Mr. Trumbull gradually awakened to the one-sided state of affairs. Mrs. Trumbull, being selfish and possessing a thistle-down intellect, fancied that it would not do to let Mr. Trumbull know that she was at all fond of him. Some old lady had told her once that when a man knows a woman loves him his affection becomes chilled like whipped cream in an ice chest. So she stuck up her nose—it stuck up of its own accord by the way—and went her usual pace of bullyragging and worrying him. She would do this, she would do that—what John thought didn't matter.

But, as said before, a change finally came over John's heart. He still considered that dainty wife of his quite the smartest, cleverest woman in the world, but, strange to say, he was becoming aware of her peculiar powers of dictating and laying down the law. John was quiet and inoffensive, and just the kind of a man that offers splendid opportunities for the woman with a will of her own. For a long time Mrs. John did not observe that her husband's substantial admiration was growing thin almost to a shadow. But when she did realize it, the blow was something fearful. It had been her opinion that even though she were to sell her best clothes to the rag man or burn the house up or turn his hair white with her everlasting criticisms John would ever remain the same—faithful, adoring, enduring.

One morning John didn't kiss his wife when he went downtown to business. She moped and wept and scolded the baby and the kitchen maid, and then decided she didn't care. From that time on things went from bad to worse and from worse to even worse than that. Once in a great while when John's old-time vision of love for his wife came up he would take her in his arms and tell her that she was the prettiest thing in the world. Following her old-time tactics, Mrs. John would in turn comment on his bad choice of a necktie or let loose the pleasant information that his collar was soiled on the edge. John's heart would sink and he'd tramp off to work feeling like an orphan asylum in a derby hat and creased trousers.

As it was not John's nature to war against anyone, he simply kept himself out of Mrs. John's way. Sunday afternoons he went out for a walk. Sometimes he went over to the North Side to see an old college chum of his. These trips were his only dissipations.

One Sunday afternoon, when he and his old friend were discussing some particular exciting college scrimmage that had taken place fifteen years back, the telephone bell rang, and a woman's voice begged to speak to Mr. Trumbull. He went to the 'phone.

"Is that you, Gertrude?"

"Yes, John. And won't you come home, please. I let Sadie take baby over to your mother's and everybody in the building is out and I'm having the fidgets. I don't know what I'm scared about, but I'm just nervous."

"All right dear," said John, and home he went, not stopping long enough to finish up the recollections of the college fight.

At home he found his wife sitting curled up on a little settee looking very much as she had looked when five years before he had begged and entreated and kissed her into saying "Yes." She was twisting her handkerchief into little wads and ropes, and he knew by that that she was distracted about something.

"I know you think I'm a silly to feel this way when it's not even twilight yet. But I know positively that somebody tried the kitchen windows while I was lying down, and I just couldn't get over it. I always was afraid of burglars and ghosts." And then she had a nervous chill.

John said nothing. He took out a copy of Spencer and lighted a cigar. After a time the baby was brought home and put to bed. Mrs. Trumbull had recovered from her nervousness and was peeking out from behind a window shade listening to a conversation that was going on in the court.

The servant employed by the family in the apartment just below the Trumbulls' abode was in the flat opposite telling the occupants of that place that she was unable to get into the house.

"I can't turn the key, and if you don't mind, ma'am, I'll go through your window."

The people didn't mind at all. They even held the girl's parasol and pocketbook while she clambered from one window to the other.

Then came a crash. It was a terrific crash. Had the girl fallen into the court? No. The sounds that came from the floor below were unlike those heard when Hendrick Hudson played ninepins in the Adirondacks. At that point came a shriek, such as the stage heroine gives vent to when the villain gets after her with a butcher knife. It was sickening. Mrs. Trumbull waited half a second, then stuck her head out of the window, and with the help of half a dozen other feminine voices called: "Mary! Mary! What's the matter?"

The reply [illegible] took [illegible] ley of sobs and squeals wind[illegible] with: "The flat's been robbed!"

Mr. Trumbull was surprised to see his wife with hair streaming down her back and hands clutching the folds of a bath robe, go scooting through the library out into the hall and down the stairs.

In ten minutes she returned. Her eyes were big and black and scared. Her teeth were chattering, and her hands were busy with each other. She curled up on the divan and looked at her husband.

"John, what do you think? The Smiths' flat has been robbed and there's hardly a scrap of anything left. They came through the kitchen window. They even took some Persian rugs and Mrs. Smith's sealskin. And the silver's all gone, and the house—oh, you just should see it! It's knee deep with the things that they've pulled out of the dressers and wardrobes."

John continued to read his Spencer.

"That's too bad," he said.

Silence of five minutes.

"John," she spoke very softly.

"Yes?" he asked, not looking up from Spencer.

"John, do you know I'd just be scared stiff if you weren't here."

John smiled sadly.

"You won't go off on that hunting trip, will you?"

"Well—ll—ll," he drawled uncertainly.

"I just won't let you, now. They might come in and take my old candlestick, or the baby, or my grandmother's set of china. And—I'm not a bit afraid when you're here. Honest, I'm not!"

John's chest swelled up. This was something new. He threw Spencer on the floor and went and looked at his revolver. Then he tried the dining-room windows. After that he threw his arms out and doubled them up to see if his muscle swelled up as it did when he was a lad at school.

He walked back and forth through their bit of a flat and held his head up high. Then he sat down beside that little tyrant of a wife and looked her in the eyes.

She giggled hysterically and ran her fingers across his mustache, just as she used to do when poor John was so crazy with love for her that she could have pulled out every hair of his head and he'd never have known it.

"Dear," John said softly, "I never knew before that there was any place for me in this house, that I filled any want here. But now I find that I am useful, that I am a burglar-scarer. God bless that man that stole those things downstairs. It'll be hard on the Smiths, but it's a mighty fine thing for me."

And they lived happy ever after. Or had for a week, as the burglary only took place that far back.—Chicago Times-Herald.

Whole Town of Fiddle-Makers.

The only place in the world where violin-making may be said to constitute the staple industry is Markneukirchen, in Saxony, with its numerous surrounding villages. There are altogether about 15,000 people in this district engaged exclusively in the manufacture of violins. The inhabitants, from the small boy and girl to the wrinkled, gray-headed veteran and aged grandmother, are all constantly employed making some part or other of this musical instrument.

The man who is as honest as the day is long never gets up at 4 o'clock in the morning to be led into temptation.

Some women are near-sighted, but they manage to hear all that's going on.

FARMS AND FARMERS

Cheap Hay Barn.

The accompanying cut shows how a light hay barn may be constructed very cheaply, and yet it will serve every purpose of storage for hay or grain, if necessary. It is made of 2 by 4 stuff for a small building, or 2 by 6 for a larger one. The posts are 16 feet high, and the building is 24 feet wide. The drawing shows one of the bents, of which there may be four for a barn 24 feet square; for a longer one the bents may be set six or eight feet apart. All that is necessary is to set up the bents and connect them together by plates spiked to the posts, and then board up the sides with clap boards, or with common boards. The building may be strengthened by diagonal braces, and the roof boards will add to its strength. As there is no weight on the building, the contents of it resting on the ground, the timber will be quite light. With shorter posts such a building as this will make an excellent sheep or cattle barn.

"Insulating" the Roosts.

Ordinary roosts in henhouses are nailed directly to the walls. This connection gives vermin a chance to reach the roosts very readily from the cracks in the walls, where they gather often in large numbers. There is a manufactured contrivance in the form of a bracket, with an oil cup in it, that gives no connection between the roosts and the wall except over the oil that is in the cup. A home-made arrangement for securing much the same result is shown in this cut. A stout wire passes through the ends of the roosts and is drawn taut between two pieces of studding, into which screweyes have been inserted in the way shown in the illustration. A cut is made in the studding so that the screweyes may be inserted in a nearly upright position. The base of the screweye is wound with tow, which is kept saturated with oil. In this way the roosts are perfectly "insulated" from any approach by vermin, except such as are brought to the roosts by the fowls, and these can be kept under control by frequent dusting with insect powder.

Prize Shorthorn Bull.

The most successful exhibitor at the Dublin Society's spring show was the queen, who exhibited three Shorthorns and took a first prize with each. One of these was Royal Duke, which also won the championship. This bull is of exceptional merit, and last year took third prize at Windsor, second at Maidstone and first at the Highland Society's show in Edinburgh.

ROYAL DUKE.

Raising Sweet Potatoes.

Select rich, sandy soil and plow deep. Be sure that the ground is fine, and then throw it up in small ridges about three feet apart. These ridges can quickly be shaped up with a hoe to a uniform size. I think it best to leave the ridges stand several days so that the moisture will get more evenly distributed through them. As soon as the danger of frost is past in the spring, and the ground is warm, select the plants. Take the plant in one hand and with the other hand make a hole pretty well down in the top of the ridge, so that permanent moisture may be secured to the roots. Press the dirt rather firmly around the roots. Set the plants 15 to 18 inches apart. I would not water the plants unless the ground is very dry. Set the plants out in the evening, or, still better, during cloudy weather. When all the plants begin to grow and the weeds appear, with a hoe, shave the surface of the ridge away from the plants, and when the plants begni to vine, hoe the dirt up around them and the "tending" is done. Dig before frost and pack in dry sawdust. Avoid letting the potatoes get chilled, and you can have sweet potatoes until spring.—Mrs. Charles E. Morris.

Plowing.

When the plow is hard to hold it is safe to say that it is hard work for the teams to draw it. This may be because of roots or stones, in which case the cause is obvious, but if not something else is wrong and the cause should be found and the trouble remedied. Is the point of the plow dull or the cutter that is used in front of it in sward land? It would be cheaper to get a new plow than to wear out plowmen and team with a plow in poor condition. But quite often the trouble arises from the line of draught not being right. It would seem that any farmer should know if his plow "run her nose into the ground," so that he found he had to bear his weight on the handles, or pulled out so he had to lift on it to keep it in, or whether it took too wide a furrow or too narrow a one, and should know how to remedy it, yet, says a farm writer, we have known a farm hand to work all day with a plow when he was putting out more strength every hour than he would have used in a day's work with the same plow after he had hitched the team properly. And the team was as tired as he.

Irish Tobacco Growing.

It has been found that tobacco can be successfully grown in Ireland, says an agricultural exchange. This is not strange considering the fact that tobacco is grown in this country in Northern States, where the seasons for growth are shorter than in Ireland. But there is always a good deal of moisture in the Irish summer. It is caused, in fact, by its nearness to the Gulf stream which makes the island warm and gives its reputation of being always vernal. The moisture in the air injures the quality of the tobacco as it makes that moist. So though the plant grows most luxuriantly and is a very paying crop, Irish-grown tobacco is not likely to become so popular as to displace that grown under our own bright, sunny skies. The lack of sunshine in summer makes Irish-grown tobacco rank and poorly flavored. What the Irish people grow of tobacco will quite likely be largely used by themselves. Those who want the best tobacco and can pay for it will use either the American or some other imported product.

A Horse's Broken Heart.

A veterinarian telds of a horse that died of a broken heart. He found all the organs healthy with the exception of the heart, which was ruptured longitudinally. In looking for a cause for the rupture it came out that the horse, which was 6 years old, had suddenly been separated from its mate, a young mare, with which it had been raised, and from which it had never been separated since birth. From the day of the separation the horse never ate anything, and the fourth day, after seeing its companion, for a time and being taken away again, it fell dead.

Harness Blacking.

A good cheap blacking for harness, which is to be applied with a sponge and polished with a brush, is prepared as follows: Melt four ounces of mutton suet with twelve ounces of beeswax, then add twelve ounces of sugar candy, four ounces of soft soap dissolved in a little water, and two ounces of finely powdered indigo. This, when well mixed, is thinned out with one-half pint of turpentine. Frequent applications of this mixture will render the harness waterproof and greatly increase its durability.

Gleanings.

For hard-working horses all grain should be ground and fed upon moistened chafed hay. Food thus prepared is readily masticated.

Farm-yard manure or feeding highly concentrated foods on a pasture supply the most appropriate fertilizing elements for permanent pasture.

Burrowing animals are driven out of their holes or suffocated by a Californian's compound, which is formed of sulphur, tar and petroleum, applied by fibrous, inflammable material, being ignited and inserted in the burrow by a pair of slender tongs.

The agricultural experiment station at Stillwater, Okla., has issued a bulletin reporting the results of field experiments in 1899. Tests of different methods of growing corn, Kaffir corn, cotton and castor beans are reported. The bulletin is sent free to all who apply.

Potatoes are rapidly dug, cleaned and sacked by a new apparatus which has a plow to unearth the tubers, the dirt and potatoes falling into an endless-chain elevator, which delivers them into a hopper with slat sides, which removes the dirt and drops the potatoes into a bag.

Continued effort should be made to increase the acreage of alfalfa. This should be regarded as a crop for hay rather than for pasture. Spring sowing on clean, well prepared soil has in many cases given good results. If sowing at this time fails, it may be repeated in August or early September, which is the most favorable time for fall sowing.

Trees dying from injury by fires or weakened in vitality offer favorable conditions for the manipulation of vast numbers of destructive insects. Moreover, the trees which have been killed by insects furnish in their fallen branches and partially decayed trunks and dry bark a most favorable propagating ground for the starting, spread and perpetuation of forest fires.

No More Pain

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Your Vegetable Compound has been of much benefit to me. When my menses first appeared they were very irregular. They occurred too often and did not leave for a week or more. AMERICA'S PROGRESS

GROWTH OF THE UNITED STATES IN A CENTURY.

Historical Events of National Import Recalled by the Celebration of July Fourth—Great Strides Which Our Country Has Taken.

ONE of the wise men who signed the declaration of independence is said to have expressed the wish that he might arise from his grave a hundred years later in order that he might witness the manner in which posterity observed the Fourth of July. If this wish had been granted, it is safe to say that the worthy gentleman who expressed it would have been exceedingly surprised. During the century's sleep, says the St. Louis Republic, America had advanced from a state of tutelage into a vigorous state of independence, and the joy of her people at finding their forefathers' dream of liberty fully realized was never more characteristically shown than on the day that marked the centennial celebration of the country's greatest holiday. Verily, the visitor from the land of shades would have been amazed at the sights and sounds of that splendid anniversary. In a word, he would have found himself in an entirely new world.

How amazed this worthy eighteenth century patriot would be if he could only shake off his shroud and take a look at his Fatherland during the Fourth of July. He would then see how great are the strides which the country has taken since that ever-memorable day, when he bravely signed his name to the most important document that was ever formulated in America, and it would not take him long to realize the fact that the United States have grown greatly in many directions since their people celebrated the centennial anniversary of the Fourth of July. Indeed, there are many thousands of Americans who would tell him that the country has cause to rejoice on this Fourth of July.

Great Achievements.

Is it necessary to enumerate the many reasons for national rejoicings? Do we not all remember how American seamen gave the death blow to Spain's colonial power on that memorable day before the Fourth of July, 1898—on the day when the gallant but luckless Admiral Cervera steamed out of Santiago Bay right into the arms of a vigilant foe, with the result that he was captured and his entire squadron was practically annihilated? Can we forget the story of El Caney, the charge of the Rough Riders up San Juan Hill, on the memorable days of July 1 and 2, and the many other stirring incidents of the Cuban campaign, or is there a true American living whose pulse does not beat faster at the memory of the doughty deeds done by Dewey and his men in Manila Bay?

A history of the previous celebrations of this day would form an interesting book, since it would show that some remarkable events in American history have taken place on the Fourth of July. Among these three are especially prominent—the battle of Gettysburg, the surrender of Vicksburg and the deaths of John Adams and Thomas Jefferson. Strictly speaking, the battle of Gettysburg began on July 1, 1863, and ended on July 3, but ever since it took place it has in the minds of the people been associated with the Fourth. Adams and Jefferson died within a few hours of each other on the fiftieth anniversary of the declaration of independence. Jefferson died first, and, curiously enough, Adams' last words were: "Thomas Jefferson still survives."

Singularly enough, our method of celebrating the Fourth does not differ in many respects from that which was in vogue half a century ago. Then, as now, patriots everywhere made the day an occasion for delivering speeches, for eating dinners, for attending picnics, dances and other forms of merrymaking, and for ringing bells and firing off cannons. The small boy of to-day has a better toy pistol than his grandfather had when he was a boy, but it is doubtful if it makes more noise than the old-fashioned blunderbuss which was the favorite Fourth of July weapon among youths in the old days. Similarly the fire rockets of our day may ascend to a height and produce a more dazzling effect than the old rockets were ever capable of, but are we quite sure that they add more to the general hilarity and enthusiasm than was added in the old days by the tar barrels of our fathers? Happily the tar barrel has not gone out of fashion. The small boy delights in the blaze that rises from it, and as the small boy is usually lord of the Fourth, the resinous barrel will doubtless continue to feed flames for some years to come.

To hypercritical and ultrasensitive souls our method of celebrating the greatest of American holidays seems awfully barbaric, and it is quite true that noise is the predominant feature of the day's celebration. Noise, however, is also the predominant feature of battles, and though they, too, are in a sense awfully barbaric, the world does not yet seem to have arrived at a state of civilization which will render it safe for the nations to turn their swords into plowshares. And, after all, a thing may be barbaric and yet quite useful. Sickly things, whether nations or children, seldom make much noise, and whatever noise they do make is generally of the whining order. It is the healthy children and the healthy nations which make the most noise in the world, and they, too, usually fare best in life.

This apparent apotheosis of noise may rouse the ire of persons afflicted with insomnia, who invariably look forward with dread to the night preceding the Fourth, knowing well that their ears will be racked with the tintinnabulation of bells, the boom of cannon and the bang-bang of firecrackers. Such persons are deserving of sympathy, but they ought to remember that this of all days in the year is the one on which Young America loves to show its patriotism, and that it has not yet discovered, nor, indeed, is likely in the near future to discover, any more suitable manner of manifesting its patriotism than by making all the noise possible.

FOURTH OF JULY ON THE FARM.

AFTER THE BATTLE.

His Only Regret Was that He Had Missed So Much.

It was the evening after the Fourth, as the glorious sun was sinking to its gorgeous couch of red and white clouds and blue sky, and the small boy, packed in cotton, lint and a splint or two, was lying with his face to the west, while his father sat by his side fanning him. He was doing as well as could be expected and was already able to talk.

"Papa," he said in a dreamy, langorous tone, "did they have a Fourth of July when you was a little boy?"

"Oh, yes, my son," answered the father.

"Just the same kind they have now?"

"Just the same."

"And did you celebrate when you was a little boy?"

"Yes, but I was more careful than you were, and didn't get hurt so."

"I guess you didn't have much fun, did you?" he asked, trying to turn toward his father.

The father looked at the combination of bandages and boy on the bed and smiled.

"I thought I did, but perhaps I was mistaken," he replied.

At this point the doctor came in and made it unpleasant for the boy for some minutes. Then he went away and the boy sniffed awhile and resumed conversation with his father.

"Is the Fourth going to keep on every year?" he asked.

"There's nothing on earth can stop it, I guess," replied the father with patriotic pride.

"That's good, ain't it?"

"We all think so in this country."

"And how long since it started?" persisted the boy, who should have been trying to go to sleep.

"Ever since 1776; about a hundred and twenty-four years."

A shade of disappointment swept over the boy's face.

"Gee, pop," he exclaimed, "how much I've missed," and then the father insisted that he must stop talking and try to get some much-needed rest.

A Fourth of July Joke.

It was a hot, close evening, the third of July, many years ago. A young lawyer and some friends were sitting outside of his office in Springfield, Ill., to get a breath of the evening air. They lounged about comfortably in their chairs, tipped them back against the wall of the building, and amused themselves talking on different subjects.

The conversation turned upon the crowing of cocks, and the young lawyer remarked that he could set all the cocks in the region about to crowing. So he gave a shrill, clear "Cock-a-doo-dle-doo-oo!" In a second came a response from a rooster not far away, then another took up the refrain, then another, and so on until all the roosters residing in that region had had something to say about it.

The small boys of the town, awakened by the lusty crowing, and taking it as a signal of the dawn of the glorious Fourth, jumped into their clothes with the speed that is impossible on any day but that one, and in a few moments bang! bang! bang! went crackers, torpedoes, small cannon and everything else employed on that day to make a noise.

All over the town resounded the boom and bang, and doubtless, many an innocent sleeper was aroused from sweet slumber by the untimely announcement of the Fourth, while the young lawyer and his companions enjoyed a hearty laugh at the joke that had been played on the boys.

This young lawyer afterwards became President.

Forgot the Fireworks.

Farmer Jones—Let's see, Sally, I guess we've got everything for the Fourth now—sticking plaster, lint, sweet oil, splints, crutches, bandages——

Mrs. Jones—But, good gracious, Silas! you've forgot to buy the fireworks!—Puck.

England's Scandal.

London, July 1.—The spectacle of a man of American birth, William I. Ashmead Bartlett Burdett-Coutts, standing in the house of commons amid a storm of jeers and cries and exposing to the world the horrors and abuses that followed in the wake of British victories, proved as dramatic as it was unprecedented. For over an hour Coutts, once known as the "young husband of the millionaire baroness," but now growing gray with his 50 years, his face bronzed by the sun of South Africa and his hands clenched nervously behind him, commanded the attention of the hostile majority of the house and drew a succession of ghastly pictures that in gruesomeness of detail eclipsed the horrors of the Crimean war. This terrible arraignment of Great Britain's care of her wounded, sick and dying, made Friday night, is by far the most notable occasion of the session. The speech of the parliamentary secretary of the foreign office, George Wyndham, which was answered by Mr. Coutts, and that of the government leaders and the lord of the treasury, A. J. Balfour, that followed it, were both efforts that neither man has equaled, this year at any rate.

The government was awake to the seriousness of the crisis, and with surpassing oratory Mr. Wyndham took its critics behind the scenes of the great campaign. In graphic language he described the enormous difficulties of the communications exposed, the daring conception of Lord Roberts' plans and the risks he ran. In short, the under secretary of war gave such a fascinating panorama, interjecting facts to prove that the war office took all precautions, reiterating that war must always be feared, that his hearers well nigh forgot the sick and wounded in their admiration of the success of the great general. But this, the Times points today, all crumbled away before the "damning details" presented by Burdett-Coutts, who spoke with the advantage of having seen whereof he spoke.

Mr. Balfour for once lost his self-control. Flushed, and trembling with passion, he denounced the attacks, which he declared merely amounted to ungenerous criticism of Lord Roberts. This the opposition denied, and, in point of fact, the whole tenor of Mr. Burdett-Coutts' speech was an attack on the methods of Lord Kitchener instead of Lord Roberts, though this was not openly stated. As a result of the dramatic debate public opinion seems fairly evenly divided between two verdicts. First, that the war office is guilty of criminal neglect; second, they reserve all judgments until the parliamentary committee reports. Mr. Coutts has suddenly become one of the most prominent men of the hour, and the government has still to face the agitation which has stirred the country almost to a greater extent than did the declaration of war itself.

Great Britain seems to have pretty well settled down to the belief that the ministers at Peking will not come to much harm. Vice Admiral Seymour's unsuccessful trip inland has brought upon him many censures. It is maintained he should not have left the fleet.

The probability of a big rise in wheat, owing to the shortage of the American crop, is also worrying the British world, for though supplies are still coming in plentifully from Argentina the Indian crop is quite insufficient to meet its normal demands.

—Accounts of suffering experienced by Alaskan miners will recall to the minds of a few pioneers the hardships and privations which beset gold-seekers and others in eastern Washington and northern Idaho in the severe winter of 1861-2. Tempted by fabulous discoveries of gold, many men remained in the wild Salmon river mountains without an adequate supply of food. At Florence, miners suffered the horrors of slow starvation. "By the last of January," says the historian, "nothing to eat could be purchased except flour at $2 per pound Some of the miners earned enough to keep soul and body together by warming water to wash out the gold from earth obtained with much exertion and exposure by digging down through several feet of snow. The consequences of this and insufficient food were rheumatism, scurvy and disease of the chest. During the latter part of the winter the snow was from seven to ten feet deep; yet some men who lived on a scanty supply of bread and weak coffee without sugar, were compelled to remove this amount of snow from their claims in order to work them enough to pay for such food." Noble says that in one case of sickness in the same camp, the patient had lived for five weeks on flour and tea made by stepping the young leaves of the fir. Another had lived on flour and snow-water for two months. What will men not risk and endure when there is held before them the double lure of gold and adventure?—Review.

This entitles her to entrance to the state university. Very good.

—All regret the accident befalling the battleship Oregon, the pride of American navy. The Oregon grounded on the coast of China, but it is believed the good ship may be saved. Some officer must be held responsible for this great loss. The battleship Iowa, now at Tacoma, expects to receive orders any moment to pull for the orient.

—The future of this community is looking brighter. With fair prices for our different crops we will have a solid footing for future operations. Genesee should bear in mind that there is a tide in the affairs of towns as of men that, taken at the flood leads on to fortune We believe that the flood-tide will set sooner toward Genesee than many anticipate and we ought to be prepared to take advantage of it. Improve, beautify.

—The councilmen Monday evening shelved the petition asking them to adopt the sidewalks of the city. The turning down of this proposition does not mean that sidewalk building will cease. Sidewalks can be ordered down or constructed by ordinance and that is just what the council intends doing and assess the expense against the property so improved. Now is a good time to push the work of construction.

—The Belgium have craze has struck Genesee, Messrs. W. J. Herman and Wallie Owen receiving a few the past week. This is a new industry for the Palouse country, and tho' the animals are rapid multipliers, the demand is greater than the supply. As it is claimed the hare meat is the finest in the land, porter-house beef steak (next to the horns) will sell at a discount in a short time. The little animals are great kickers, and one gave the messenger a sample on the nose that he will not soon forget.

Genesee Celebrated.

The day opened with a few scattering clouds, but at 8 the sky was almost cloudless. The old soldier boys commenced their racket before the sun peeped over the eastern horizon, the big gun's roar tumbling the kids out of bed at a lively rate. The firecrackers commenced popping on all sides and continued throughout the entire day, and a large portion of the night.

So far as climatic conditions governed, no more perfect day dawned. Enough clouds passed over to make the air enjoyable, and at ten was as fair as a maiden's smile. The parade of the populist band, bicyclists and children in white took place at this hour and was witnessed by a large crowd of people, many from the surrounding towns. Lenville was especially well represented. The parade halted at the grand stand erected in the center of Genesee's fine young park where the exercises were held.

Hon. J. W. Brigham was introduced and made a fine address, dwelling extensively on the great strides made by this country since its discovery, giving much credit to such men as Washington, Lincoln, Grant, Dewey and others. Said no other country made such progress—and with such intelligent people as the Americans—would continue to progress. His remarks were well received. The Genesee choir followed with a selection. "The sunbeams" by five prettily dressed little girls pleased all. Prof. W. M. Welch was next introduced. Though short his address was eloquent throughout, breathing and inspiring loyalty in every sentence. Mrs. F. K. Bressler favored the people with a solo, Miss Follett playing the piano. Flag drill next on the program and the little ones performed their parts to perfection, showing much hard work by the drill-masters.

Dinner time now. The fatted calf fell at Genesee and the many visitors were bountifully fed and well entertained by the Ladies Aid with an able corps of assistants. Everything was furnished that would gladden the heart of the most fastidious—chicken, ham, salads, biscuits, pies, cakes, coffee filling the festive boards. This ample array of provisions was attacked for two hours with a will that carried everything before the eager crowd. At this time China kicked up a few dark clouds in the west. Weeping was heard overhead and a few tears fell. This did not last long —the sun poked its nose through the clouds and all was smiles once more.

Now for sports. Main street was lined with happy people bent on getting as much fun out of the days' doings as possible. Perhaps big crops had something to do with it.

The sack race was won by Rogers brothers; likewise the three-legged race. In fact the Rogers corraled some cash in nearly all the races.

In the first free-for-all foot race Mr. Kennedy of Lenville captured first money and Rogers second.

In the potato race four persons entered. There was not three seconds difference in the quickness of the spud pickers and the money was divided between Carvey, Davidson and Fernell.

The ladies' foot race was very good, about a dozen contesting. The race was so close that it had to be run the second time.

In the boys' race Pearly Rogers and Teddy Gaffney easily won the cash prizes.

The relay race was run by the swift lads in a very good time.

Purses in the men's bicycle race went to Tice, Lo Pickering and Geo. McMahon. The Stearns "yellow fellow" bikes, which are sold by Walters, were the two wheels in the lead.

Misses Gilbanks and Wolfer easily won in the ladies bicycle race.

Tug-of-war race proved the most exciting. It was a hard pull, a steady pull; finally the McKinley chaps decided to let the Bryanites have the contest now and they take it next fall. The Bryans are hard pullers.

Another free-for-all foot race took place, Rogers and Darr winning.

The ball contest between the Cornwall Scorchers and the Potlatch Jumpers proved interesting as long as it lasted. Owing to the lateness of the time of beginning and the distance the Scorchers had to go to reach their homes, it was decided to jump the diamond at 5 sharp. At this time the game stood 5 to 3 in favor the former team. The Potlatchers needed another inning to make them even innings with their neighbors. The purse was divided.

Evidently one or two persons had been fooling with the flowing bowl, but being of a social disposition helped to entertain the crowd.

The ball in the evening was largely attended, some 150 people participating. Until late in the night the young people were tripping the light fantastic to the strains of our local orchestra. Lunch was served underneath the hall by the society.

All in all it was a pleasant celebration.

—Through the courtesy of W. H. Gage and J. B. Lees a News representative was given an opportunity to view the wonderful grain fields to the southeast of Genesee. Each have 300 or 400 acres of grain that is hard to beat. It stands even and waist high with good heads filled with plump berries—good for 35 to 40 bushels of fine wheat per acre. Mr. Nordby has about the same number of acres of grain adjoining which is equally as good. In fact we saw wheat in these fields that promise to crowd 45 to 50 bushels. Mr. Gage has a fine stand of flax out of bloom that will rub close to 18 bushels for the crop. Barley is showing up extra well in these fields. Messrs. Wood and Geiger each have barley along the road that promise barrels of malt. Mr. Geiger's field is said to be good for eighty bushels. If you are bilious or have that "tired feeling" just take a trip out that way—will do you good.

All the Americans appeared to be in excellent trim and said they were feeling fine. Fire in Tacoma.

Tacoma, Wash., July 1.—Fire destroyed the warehouse of the Puget Sound Lounge and Mattress factory, the buildings of the Union stock yards and damaged Northern Pacific property in the company's freight yards.

Captain Carlson, a fireman, was struck by a falling timber and knocked out of a three-story window in the mattress factory plant, breaking an arm and suffering severe injuries about the head. Frank McLean, another fireman, was overcome with smoke while fighting the stock yards fire and was assisted to a second story window, where he dropped to the ground and escaped serious injury. There were dozens of narrow escapes from the flames, smoke and falling walls. Several young girls were employed by the mattress company in its warehouse, and were working on the third story when the fire was discovered on the fourth floor. They all narrowly escaped.

Foiled by an Accident.

Chicago, July 3.—A bold attempt by Two masked men to loot the safe in the office of the Globe Land Company was frustrated by an accident that may prove fatal to one of the marauders. In exploding dynamite to shatter the lock of the inner door of the safe one of the men had his right hand torn away and his arm shattered, while the other thief was struck in the face by a flying fragment of steel.

The injured men fled, leaving gagged and bound on the floor three men employed by the company whom they had surprised sleeping in the room adjoining the office on the second floor. The mishap saved a large sum to the company, the officials intimating that the safe contained thousands of dollars, but refusing to disclose the actual amount.

The Nora of the Klondike Company and the Bailey of the Canadian Development Company were taken safely through the rapids.

ARE BESIEGED AT PEKING

FOREIGN MINISTERS IN NEED.

Are in Desperate Straits—Provisions Nearly Gone—Tientsin and Taku Waiting for Troops—Von Ketteler Was Killed.

Washington, July 3.—The Navy department has received the following cablegram from Admiral Kempff without date:

"Chefoo.—Secretary of the Navy, Washington, D. C.: A runner from Peking reports that the legations are besieged; provisions nearly exhausted; situation desperate. The German minister, going to the tsung li yamen, was murdered by Chinese soldiers. American and Italian legations burned.

"Twenty thousand Chinese soldiers are inside and 30,000 outside of Peking; 3000 are reported bound for Tientsin; fighting continues at Tientsin. Communication with Tientsin by rail and river is insecure.

Oregon May Be Saved.

"The Oregon has run aground. It is not in a dangerous position; about 38 degrees north latitude, 20 degrees 40 minutes east longitude. Have sent to her assistance of three naval vessels. It is reported that there is water in one compartment. The commander of the Oregon did not request assistance, a Japanese man-of-war having boarded the vessel.

"KEMPFF."

Washington, July 3.—Cable advices from Admiral Kempff fully confirm the previous report of the murder of Von Ketteler, the German minister at Peking. The admiral also represents the situation of the ministers as most desperate. The shortage of their food supplies reported by Admiral Kempff gives rise to the gravest apprehension. Having been taken to Taku by runner the dispatch represented the ministers' condition at least five days ago, and there is reason to fear the worst has happened in the interim.

Admiral Kempff's favorable report of the condition of the Oregon is believed by Secretary Long to be based on the report of the commander of the Japanese vessel which generously offered assistance.

No further reinforcements have been ordered to China, military or naval.

Kempff Restored to Favor.

New York, July 3.—A special from Washington says:

The latest developments describing the disastrous consequences at Peking of the attack on the forts have caused revulsion of official sentiment regarding Admiral Kempff, who abstained from participation in this act of the foreign admirals. Official anxiety had manifested itself for a week in finding fault with him. No concealment was made of the displeasure caused by his too brief dispatches with their exasperating omission of the most important words, and his apparent failure to discriminate between what Washington was anxious to know and what it looked upon as trivial. Today more than one member of the cabinet was effusive in making amends for the strictures of a week ago and the sturdy, straightforward sailor admiral is a hero.

Death of Von Ketteler.

Berlin, July 3.—Privy Councillor Hammin informed the correspondent of the Associated Press today that the official dispatch announcing Baron Von Ketteler's assassination was received. It was based upon a direct written message conveyed from Peking and signed by Von Bergen, a member of the German legation at Peking, and Sir Robert Hart, the inspector general of customs. It was addressed to the commander of the European forces at Tientsin and was forwarded June 25 by Consul Zimmerman to the British consul at Chefoo. The message contained a number of interesting details. Baron Von Ketteler, while riding on horseback to the tsung li yamen (foreign office), was attacked by a large number of Chinese, who pulled him off his horse and beat him to death. An interpreter who was with him was seriously injured, but escaped and subsequently reached the German legation.

Herr Hammin supposes that there was more bloodshed at the legation, the destruction of which he declares was more alarming because the message adds the condition of the whites in Peking was desperate and aid was imperatively needed. It was also announced that the ammunition was almost exhausted. When Hammin was asked whether the course of Germany or that of the other powers toward China will be altered by the assassination of Baron Von Ketteler, he replied that he was unable to answer the question, because Count Von Buelow, the minister of foreign affairs, left here yesterday evening to meet Emperor William at Williamshaven before the alarming news was received here. He supposed Count Von Buelow will forego his vacation and remain in Berlin.

Herr Hammin was also asked if the Chinese minister here would be given his passports, but the privy councillor did not reply.

Sensational Report.

London, July 3.—Among the sensational batch of telegrams from the far east, the most important is a statement that a body of international troops has forced its way into Peking after beating a combination of imperial troops and Boxers. Though this emanates from Shanghai and remains uncorroborated, the optimists find in it some measure of support.

Fire at Miles City.

Miles City, Mont., July 3.—The Custer company's wool warehouse, two dwellings and eight cars were destroyed by fire early Monday morning. There are 900,000 pounds of wool in the warehouse, partially insured. Loss $250,000.

Soap Plant Burned.

Pittsburg, Pa., July 3.—Fire destroyed the large soap and fertilizing plant of the Walker-Startman Company. Loss, $75,000.

Senator Platt has been ordered by his physician to take a rest.

THE RESERVOIR GAVE WAY.

One Hundred Houses Wrecked or Badly Damaged.

Grand Rapids, Mich., July 3.—The big reservoir of the city water works system, located on the hill in the northern part of the city burst at 5 a. m. yesterday. More than 100,000,000 gallons of water was let loose and rushed through the valley adjacent, flooding an area peopled by about 9000 persons.

Many dwellings were washed away, others were badly damaged, and all those within a district for three blocks square were either wholly or partly filled with sand. None of the buildings damaged was of a costly character, as they were for most part homes of working men. Not a house with the sweep of the flood escaped damage.

The tracks of the Detroit, Grand Haven & Milwaukee railroad, a short distance north of the reservoir, were undermined and trains on that road were obliged to make detour via other roads.

The break was first seen by Bert Botsford, a boy delivering morning newspapers. It was then only a tiny stream, but realizing the danger, the boy aroused hundreds from their sleep and urged them to escape. The reservoir gave way at the gate house near Livingston street, pouring down the hill a stream 36 feet wide and 10 feet deep. A number of houses were swept from their foundations and carried away in the flood and crushed. Some streets were torn up to a depth of 40 feet.

Mrs. Cooper of Clancy street was literally swept out of her house by the flood. She was carried to the bottom of the hill and buried to her neck in sand. She was rescued alive but will probably die.

No other fatalities or serious injuries were reported. A rough estimate places the damage at $200,000.

One hundred houses in all were wrecked or badly damaged. The break in the reservoir grew until it was 30 feet wide and more than 10 feet deep.

Delegates Arriving.

Kansas City, July 1.—About the hotels there is already briskness and moving throngs of familiar convention faces. A number of the old line democrats who have been going to conventions for years and the younger men who belong to the "new democracy" have arrived and taken up the work in hand. Several boomers of vice presidential candidates have come in and are making considerable noise. Delegates are dropping from different sections and the meeting of the sub-committee on convention arrangements attracted quite a knot of men about the national committee headquarters. The most interesting topic, that which gives the democrats here the most concern, is the promised contest over the 16 to 1 plank of the platform. The utterances of men like National Chairman Jones, William J. Stone and other western and southern leaders, together with the actions of western and southern conventions in their platforms, would seem to indicate that a simple reaffirmation of the Chicago platform is all that would be necessary. Such action under ordinary circumstances would be apt to be accepted as the probable action of the national convention, but the reports from Lincoln indicate that 16 to 1 must be specially declared if the views of Mr. Bryan are to be followed.

Boxer Row in Texas.

Chicago, July 3.—A Special from San Antonio, Tex., says:

According to meager advices here a fight occurred Sunday between eight cowboys and ranchmen and Chinamen belonging to the Pei Chung Colony, located in Duval county. Four Chinamen are known to have been wounded, one fatally. Fred Howard, a cowboy on the Davidson ranch, was wounded in the chest. The timely arrival of a detachment of state rangers saved further bloodshed.

The trouble, which is said to be due to the Boxer riots in China, started when the cowboys went into the Pei Chung vineyard and began to tantalize the Chinese, who retired to their quarters and opened fire on the cowboys with shotguns and pistols from their doors and windows. The cowboys retreated, keeping up a fire. Two of of the Chinamen who were shot were noncombatants and were wounded while making a rush to get to shelter. The Pei Chung colony operates one of of the largest vineyards in Texas and is being given ample protection by the state and colony officials.

Alaska Indians Make Trouble.

Skagway, July 3.—The report has been received here that British members of the international boundary commission have met opposition from the Indians in making the survey and setting the monuments. In the big Indian village of Kuckwan on the headwaters of the Chilcat river and near the Porcupine mining district the Indians seem to have an antipathy to the British.

All Is Quiet at Hayti.

Washington, July 3.—Official advices received here from Hayti set at rest the rumors that have been current in some quarters recently of disquieting conditions in that island. It appears that the present government of Hayti is busying itself with a settlement of the existing financial crisis and there is no other foundation for the reports of political troubles.

Was Jealous of His Wife.

San Francisco, July 3.—Henry Leblanche, proprietor of the Saddle Rock, wounded his wife this morning. Jealously was the cause.

The Typographical Union of Florence Colorado, succeeded on Monday in putting a scale into effect. The union has only been organized two weeks and is making rapid strides to reach the standard of its older sister unions.

A charter has been granted to the new union of bicycle workers at Dayton, Ohio.

MINES AND MINING NEWS

OUR NORTHWESTERN MINES.

Items Gleaned From Late Reports—All Districts Are Being Developed—A Prosperous Year Is Predicted—Mining Notes and Personals.

The season is at least one month earlier at Buffalo Hump than last year. Besides the pack trains which continue to arrive loaded with merchandise there are numerous outfits coming and going, the proprietors of which sell eggs, butter, vegetables and meats to prospectors and campers at the Hump and along the different routes. The camp is proving a veritable boom to Camas Prairie farmers. The growth of vegetation at this altitude is simply wonderful. Less than two weeks ago the undulating section around Buffalo Hump was covered with snow, while today half a hundred or more horses are reveling in rich bunch grass.

There is more or less activity in each of the four Buffalo Hump towns. Concord is rather quiet, but it is said in a short time the Boston-Buffalo Idaho company will be making the great St. Louis and other valuable properties hum. Mr. Turner is now on the ground making a thorough examination and getting things in shape for the installment of machinery which will be placed as soon as the wagon road is completed. The Jumbo, which lies beyond the Concord, about two miles, already has more ore blocked out than any other mine in the camp, with perhaps the exception of the Big Buffalo, and before fall will be placed in the list of actual producers.

REPUBLIC.

The tunnel on the Golden Harvest in Republic camp is in 680 feet. Values are not high.

The shaft on the Republic is down a little over 100 feet and will be completed by July 1.

The Black Tail mine is looking fine in the raise on the intermediate level. No other work is being done at present. Values are still high.

The non arrival of the machinist who is to set up the machinery on the Morning Glory mine, has been the cause of the delay. It does not now seem probable that the plant will be in running order before the Fourth of July.

The south drift on the 300-foot level of the San Poil is being pushed with vigor. There is no change worth of note. The north drift from the bottom of the 80-foot winze, on the intermediate level, is carrying four feet of high grade ore.

In the Muldoon group, near Belcher camp, 12 miles east of Republic, a strik in copper is reported, made in a 240-ft tunnel. Superintendent Ediams says there is a three-foot ledge which will average $35. The formation is of limestone between granite and slate.

The shaft on the Quilp has reached a depth of 200 feet below the tunnel level. Tracks are being laid in the crosscuts on the 50 foot and the 100-ft levels, and other preparations are nearing completion for beginning stoping on these levels. It will probably take a couple of days to finish the work. A new dump is being prepared, so that the ore can be separated and only the best sent to the mill. There is considerable $10 and $12 ore, but this will not be milled at present.

MINING NOTES.

According to the sworn statement filed with the board of equalization the net profits of the Utah paying mines of the current year were $2,270,026, as compared with $1,782,824 for the same period of last year.

A mill is to be errected on the Poland China in Chesaw, Washington.

Twenty tons of American Flag ore areto be tested at the Red Shirt mill in the Methow valley. Good results are expected.

Another strike is reported in the Silver King in Chesaw, Washington. The ore is free gold bearing and carries a large per cent of copper.

Some good low grade ore is being found in the Nava, in Republic camp. The ore is similar to that found in the Mountain Lion hill.

Samples of coal from the newly discovered deposit on Orinofino creek, 12 miles from the town, show a better quality in the lower level, which is now being prospected.

A copper discovery is reported in the lower part of the Mascot camp in Idaho, Iowa men own the property, and are said to have cut a three-foot body of ore averaging 15 per cent copper. Double shifts are being worked.

A company of North Yakima capitalists has secured the services of Ole Nelson, an expert miner from Eureka, Utah, to explore the copper properties in the vicinity of Bumping lake. Several men are working on the prospects and reports are favorable.

Among the deeds placed on record last week at Wallace, Idaho, was one conveying a number of mining claims to the Sunset Peak Mining Company, limited, the consideration being $100,000. Among the claims is one which has shown some ruby silver, a very rare ore in this region, the Siera Nevada, Omaha and one or two others in the same neighborhood near Wardner, being the only other claims which have shown it.

Several large nuggets have been found on the Mary Ann placers in Chesaw camp, Wash.

A strike is reported on a claim between Delta and Carbon Center, Idaho. The claim is owned by John Dowd and J. J. Purcell, and lies in a direct continuation of the Amazon-Manhattan group. The ore is high grade milling and was found near the surface. No assays have been made.

John Markey, employed in the smelting works of the United States mine at Jerome, Arizona, was burned to death and two Italians were severely burned recently. Markey was a skimmer on a converter. He had poured the contents of the converter into the great ladle and the crane was hoisting it when the pail broke pouring a large quantity of seething copper over Markey and partially over the Italians. Markey's clothing was burned from his body, and he lived but a short time, dying in fearful agony.

The reduction works of the Detroit Copper Company, at Marenci, Arizona, caught fire and was totally consumed. The works consisted of a 150-ton concentrator, smelter furnaces and controverters. The fire will throw a large number of men temporarily out of employment.

Reports from Slate Creek, Wash., say that the mill on the Eureka will be running this week. A large force of men are at work on the 2,000-foot tramway which lies at an angle of about 30 degrees. The Mammoth is in the best ore it has ever mined, although none of it has been put through the mill. The mill is running on poor ore which was put in the bins last winter, but it has pounded out a 59.45-ounce brick, worth about $1,000. On the Tacoma claim, through which the Mammoth claim runs, a fine body of fine ore four feet wide has been opened. The Gold Standard Mining and Milling company operates the claim.

A stir is reported on West Fisher creek, 30 miles from Libby Montana, where $50 ore is reported in an old claim.

The Snowshoe is showing some rich rock, though on the surface poor material was found. The claim is half a mile from the Mammoth.

The main shaft of the Mayflower mine near Whitehall has reached a depth of 925 feet. The lead has not yet been crosscut and the quantity and value of the ore at that depth has, therefore, not been ascertained. On the 800-foot level there was a good body of very rich ore. The Mayflower is one of the phenominal mines of Montana.

The Parrott shaft in Butte has reached the depth of 1500 feet and is still going down, it being the intention of the management to ultimately make connections with the lower workings of the Never Sweat.

BRITISH COLUMBIA.

The Ymir mine is now running a portion of its new complement of stamps. The work of increasing the work of the tramway has been completed and ore was passed down yesterday. Sixty of the 80 stamps were started, and the balance will probably be started in a day or two. This is by far the largest battery in British Columbia, and it is said the capacity is to be doubled in the near future.

The growers give 2 per cent of their entire crop to the association. In return for this the association agrees to grade, inspect, pack and market to the best advantage all the fruit entrusted to its care. The association also agrees to procure proper storage for fruit, and see that the same is insured against loss pending the satisfactory sale of the same.

The supreme court has affirmed the judgment of ouster rendered against James Smith, commissioner of Fremont county, the case being one of great importance to all counties. The action was brought by David W. Miller and part of the litigation growing out of the trouble in the county. Smith had been a member of the former board. The allegations in this suit were that he had put in and collected bills for work on roads at $6 per day; that he had charged the same rate for superintending bridge works; that the bridge board had appropriated a lump sum out of the treasury and entrusted it to him to expend in building a road; that various other breaches of the law had been participated in by him. One plea of the defense was that the county had advised the board that the appropriation of money to be expended by members of the board was legal. The supreme court suggests that a county attorney giving such advice could be removed from office. It is found that the charges were sustained by the evidence, and that the judgment of ouster was warranted.

FOREIGN LEGATIONS IN CHINA

WERE GIVEN TIME TO LEAVE.

Probably Would Have Been Killed by the Boxers—Messages Received Do Not Tell—Aid Will Be Sent to Them.

Washington, July 1.—Although no less than three messages have come to the state and navy departments respecting the condition of the foreign ministers at Peking, not one of the messages gives the slightest intimation of why the ministers failed to leave the Chinese capital when given a day's time to do so. One assumption is that the ministers declined because they would have gone out of Peking to certain massacre by the hordes of Boxers outside. Another is that they declined to leave until the foreigners were safely removed.

Kempff's Dispatches.

Washington, July 1.—The navy department has received the following cablegram from Admiral Kempff:

"Chefoo, July 1.—Secretary of the Navy, Washington, D. C.: The ministers at Peking were given 24 hours to leave on the 19th. They refused and are still there.

"The Peking relief force got half way. They were attacked by imperial troops on the 18th. McCalla and Ensign Taussig were wounded, but not seriously. Now over 14,000 troops are ashore. Commander Wise commands at Tong Ku, in charge of transportation by mail and river. The combined nationalities find it necessary to make use of some civilians to operate the railway. KEMPFF."

From Ragsdale.

The following cablegram is from Consul Ragsdale at Tientsin, dated June 27, being the first communication received from that officer in nearly two months:

"The siege of Tientsin has been raised. The troops sent to the relief of the legations have returned, their efforts being in vain. There was fighting of seven separate battles. The American loss was six killed and 38 wounded. On the 19th the ministers were given 24 hours to leave Peking. They refused and are still there.

"RAGSDALE."

From Choate.

A cablegram received today from Ambassador Choate at London states that the foreign ministers were safe at Peking on the 25th inst. The Chinese minister, Mr. Wu, has private advices to the same effect, which he has brought to the attention of the state department.

In the absence of facts concerning the safety of legations, the government has determined to proceed upon the line already laid down, namely, that the ministers are in Peking in need of help. The navy and the war department will continue the plans set afoot for the dispatch to Peking of an expedition to bring away the ministers. A cabinet council today decided this point, and did so with all the official dispatches before them, as also with the contents of the Associated Press cablegrams from China in their possession. The decision amounts to a practical declaration that as yet there is nothing officially that will warrant the assumption that the Chinese government itself directed the uprising and attack.

Secretary Hay gave his personal attention to the situation, though far from recovered from his attack of illness yesterday. He is still hopeful that there will be found a satisfactory and honorable outcome of the present difficulties. Apparently the Chinese minister, Mr. Wu, holds to this same belief, and this with his personal knowledge of the actual sentiments of the tsung li yamen.

Shipwrecked People Saved.

Portland, Ore., July 1.—Word was brought from Cape Nome by the steamer Elder that the steamers Nome City, from this port, and the Valencia, from Seattle, rescued on June 12 the passengers and crews of the bark Hunter and the schooner Eclipse, both of which were wrecked on Romanzof point. There were 47 people in all, two women and a small child being among them. The steam launch of the bark Hunter, with the captain and four men, put out from the point where the wrecked bark lay, and both the Nome City and the Valencia returned to their assistance. The Hunter's launch in her cruise for help had run across the wreck of the schooner Eclipse and secured quite a lot of provisions. When the Nome City reached the Hunter it was found the crew of the unfortunate Eclipse had got there about an hour before. Before starting out for assistance the captain and his crew had succeeded in saving nearly all the baggage and tents and a great part of the provisions.

Trade Report.

Bradstreet's report for last week is as follows:

Distributive trade is dull, seasonably so in most instances. The upward rush of wheat prices culminated at the close of last week, and the reactions and irregularities since, mainly due to heavy realizing, would mainly point to the movement having been temporarily, at least, overdone. Reports of rain in the northwest, though, it is claimed, to late to help the crop in Minnesota, and the two Dakotas, have had some reasurring effect and second thought apparently inclines bears to the belief that the late advance discounted much of the shortage in yields of the world's crop. Advices from the north are of little more than half a crop of wheat, but estimates as to the outurn in bushels vary accordingly as the government reports of 316,000,000 bushels or the commercial estimate of 200,000,000 bushels in yield last year in the three states are used as a basis. A short-lived scare on the reports of dry weather in the corn belt, sympathy with the early advance in wheat, and what is more important, apparently increased popularity of corn on export account, was responsible for this cereal reaching the highest point paid for a year past. Oats and other farm crops also sympathized, as did most hog products.

Butter is higher on smaller receipts. Sugar is at the highest price reached at this time for years past, owing to active canning demand and the strengthened position of raw material. The prospect of was in China, is chargeable with the advance in teas, not only from the former country, but from Japan, some interruption in transportation being apparently looked for if the Asiatic trouble increases. Heavy rains are complained of in the entire cotton belt east of the Mississippi river and the crop is generally in the "grass." Increased cost of the raw material is not balanced by an advance in finished products. The contrary is the case, because print cloths are 1-4 cent off and prints are 1-2c lower per yard.

Reports from the iron and steel trade are as pessimistic as ever. Nominally quotations at Pittsburg are unchanged, but it is claimed buyers can get supplies lower. At other markets pig iron and bars are unquestionably lower. Pig iron is a little above last year while steel billets, bars and plates are lower. The production in structural material has brought little new business.

The lead market is apparently an example of an readjustment of prices, having been overdone, because it is now steady after the low point reached same weeks ago.

Wheat shipments for the week aggregate 3,111,184 bushels against 1,684,180 bushels last week, 3,199,090 bushels last year, 3,716,401 bushels in 1898, 2,778,848 bushels in the corresponding week of 1897 and 2,601,916 in 1896.

Failures for the week number 185, as compared with 167 last week, 158 in this week a year ago, 183 in 7898, 225 in 1897 and 229 in 1896.

Failures in Canada number 18 as compared with 28 last week, 23 in this week a year ago, 22 in 1898. 33 in 1897 and 25 in 1896.

Gen. Aquino Surrenders.

Washington, July 3.—The following cable, dated Manila, was received at the war department this morning:

"General Aquino, prominent leader of insurgent forces, surrendered unconditionally to First Lieutenant John O'Connell, with the Macabebe scouts, on June 26, with 64 rifles and ammunition.

"MACARTHUR."

General MacArthur also cabled the following:

"General Ricarte, leader of the threatened uprising in Manila during this year, recently very active, was captured July 1 by native police between Paco and Stana. The event is important in relation to the conditions in Manila."

Pennsylvania Won.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., July 1.—One of the most magnificent races in the history of aquatics in years was the 'varsity race rowed on the Hudson course Saturday afternoon. Following it was an equally exciting two mile brush among the freshmen crews and then it was so dark that the four oared race had to be postponed until Monday. Here is the record:

University race, four miles—Contestants: Pennsylvania, Wisconsin, Cornell, Columbia and Georgetown. Pennsylvania won in 19:44 4-5, Wisconsin second, Cornell third, Columbia fourth, Georgetown fifth. In this event there was never at any time open water between the crews that finished first and second.

Freshman race, distance two miles—Contestants: Pennsylvania, Wisconsin, Columbia and Cornell. Wisconsin won in 9:45 1-5; Pennsylvania second, Cornell third and Columbia fourth.

Metal.

New York—Silver certificates 60 & 61c; bar silver, 60⅝c; Mexican dollars, 47⅝c.

San Francisco—Silver bars, 60⅝c; Mexican dollars, 48½ & 49c.

London—Bar silver, 27 11-16d per ounce.

New York—The market for metals is rather quiet with a weak undertone. Cables showed no material change from the previous day's closing. Tin in the local market was held at $30.75 with sellers at this figure at the close.

Copper—Dull and unchanged on the basis of $16.50.

Pig iron warrants—Weak and nominally quoted $14.50. Northern No. 1 foundry was quoted at $19.

IT WAS A $10,000,000 FIRE

STARTED IN HOBOKEN, N. J.

Over Two Hundred Lives Lost—Several Large Steamships Burned—A Wonderful Scene—Hospitals Are Crowded—Fire Fighting Everywhere.

New York, July 1.—Almost $10,000,000 worth of property was destroyed, many lives lost, many persons were injured and at least 1500 lives were imperiled by a fire that started among cotton bales under Pier No. 3 of the North German Lloyd Steamship company in Hoboken, N. J., Saturday. In less than 15 minutes the flames had spread over an area of a quarter of a mile, extending outward from the shore line from the bulkheads from 000 to 1000 feet away and had caught four great ocean liners and a dozen or more smaller harbor craft in its grasp.

Bodies recovered were so badly burned and blackened that identification was impossible. The hospitals in New York, Hoboken and Jersey City are crowded with the wounded and men are being brought in by scores.

Those who gathered along the shores of the Hudson river to witness the great conflagration saw a spectacle they can never forget and one that always will have a conspicuous place in the history of New York. River and bay were enveloped in a pall of black smoke through which angry flames, bursting as if from volcanoes, on the Jersey shore and in the water itself, leaped like red sprites into the sky. The surface of the water was covered with floating and blazing masses of freight thrown in haste from the doomed vessels, all unnoticed in the mad race to rescue the more precious human life threatened or being sacrificed in the great ships. And through the pall of smoke a great crimson sun, enlarged to thrice its size by the haze, glared like an enormous eye as it slowly sunk in the west.

Such was the tremendous spectacle presented on the surface of the Hudson river, as if it had been some holiday pageant. It was made tragic by the realization that in that smoke and beneath the turpid waters scores of lives had been lost or were in their last desperate struggles against death.

The spectacle was witnessed by thousands and thousands from both shores and by other thousands who crowded upon every ferry boat, every excursion boat, upon every river craft that could be secured for the purpose. The crowd upon the banks of the river was almost as great as that which formed to witness the triumphant return of Admiral Dewey.

Looking up the river towards the burning ships and piers the scene was one of wonderful but tragic grandeur. The ship Saale had been towed down the river until just off Fort Liberty, where she had gathered about a ring of fire boats and tugs, all fighting to save at least the hull of the doomed steamer. Flames were still leaping from her port holes and rushing out of her cabins. At varying distances about the burning ship lay coal and cotton barges, all ablaze, each with one or more tugs playing streams of water upon it. Some of these barges and lighters were loaded with inflammable stuff and the flames leaped high in the air, while the heat was so terrific that it was possible to use only the small hose of the tugs. Soon one by one these altars of fire slowly consumed, most of them burning down to the water line. Along the Jersey shore small fires were blazing, started by the wreckage from the great steamships.

On this side of the river the fire caused the greatest excitement as the drifting steamships and barges floated, all aflame, to the New York shore and crashed against the piers from Canal to Murray streets. The fire department was called out at various points along the threatened sections and the spectacle was presented of the firemen on shore trying to fight fires, every minute changing their situation.

The property loss to the North German Lloyd company docks alone is placed at $2,000,000. The value of the great quantities of cotton, oil and various other merchandise on the docks has not been estimated. The loss to the North German Lloyd Steamship company alone will probably come close to $10,000,000, and the Bremen, Maine and Saale were almost totally destroyed. The Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse was little damaged. The value of the Hamburg-American line steamer Phoenicia is not known, but this will swell the amount of the damage. The Thingvalla pier was burned, and the dock of the Hamburg line suffered greatly. A number of small buildings in Hoboken were destroyed along the wharves, with their contents, but no idea of these can be obtained. The Campbell warehouses were totally destroyed, entailing a loss of $1,500,000.

The greatest loss of life appears to be on the Saale. She carried 450 people, and was to have sailed for Bremen this afternoon. When the police boat captain went aboard of her with his rescue party he saw bodies lying all about the deck. The ship Bremen carried a crew of 300, the Maine 250, and if as many lives were lost on the Saale the number of lives lost will be very great. Then, also, many perished on the piers, the canal boats and lighters. The burning or smouldering remains of canal boats, lighters and barges are scattered all the way down the river and bay to Staten island and Governor's island. Each of these craft will add something to the list of dead.

Estimates of the Dead.

The World estimates the number of lives lost at 300. The Journal places the loss at 200. Other papers place the number of dead from 100 to 250.

Alabama Miners Strike.

Birmingham, Ala., July 3.—All the Union miners in Alabama, about 10,000 in number, suspended work Monday pending the settlement of the wage dispute between them and the operators. The old wage contract expired yesterday and the miners demand a raise and other concessions. The operators refuse this demand.

Democratic Convention.

Kansas City, July 3.—Monday was really the first business day of the democratic convention. Soon after 10 o'clock the democratic national committee assembled at the Kansas City Club to consider the claims of contesting delegations, formally select temporary officers and transact some other preliminary business. The United States Monetary League at the same hour began its first session at the Auditorium thrater.

The Vice Presidency.

Everything relating to the vice presidential nomination is in the air today. All seem to be waiting for something to turn up. Mr. Shiveley or Indiana insists that he is not a candidate, and it appears likely now that the convention will accept him at his word. Senator Hill is the foremost figure in the problem. That he would accept the nomination if the party should demand him there is no doubt, but his friends consistently maintain that he is not in the race.

Towne of Minnesota would be a powerful candidate if he had not been nominated already by the populists. Opposition to him has developed on the ground that this convention should nominate a straight out democrat, rather than a silver republican or a populist.

Report on Climate and Crops.

The United States Department of agriculture, climate and crop bulletin of the weather bureau, Washington section, for the last week says: "The week was one of excessive rainfall in the section of the state west of the Cascades, particularly in the coast counties. The rain was continuous until the 22, having lasted a week, and had a ruinous effect upon the strawberry crop, stopping picking and causing the berries to rot. Cherries, except late ones, were also very badly damaged, by bursting and rotting on the trees. In the meadows a great deal of clover and grass were badly tangled and damaged. In some localities considerable hay had been cut, but not yet secured, and such was very badly damaged, and in some cases completely ruined. Oats, which can endure a great deal of moisture, were not reported as injured The thorough wetting of the soil will probably be beneficial to vegetables if warm weather ensues.

"The situation in the section east of th Cascades, has not materially changed, except that grain is a little nearer to maturity. The weather was hot and dry as a rule, although there were some light, scattering showers during the week. The hot weather did no material damage to grain, because not accompanied by dry, blasting winds, but on the contrary, was moist and cloudy, and therefore beneficial to growing crops.

"A good rain in the Big Bend country would greatly improve spring wheat, making longer straw, and plumper heads. Fall wheat is now ripening rapidly, some early patches are being cut and harvesting will be in general progress by the first week in July. Thus far prospects are favorable for a fine yield of wheat, fruit and vegetables.

Clark's Special Train.

Butte, Mont., July 1.—W. A. Clark, who is reputed to be ready to contribute $1,000,000 to the democratic campaign fund provided he is given recognition and a seat for his delegates at the national convention, left by special train for Kansas City Saturday morning with the democratic delegation. Clark also took along with him a brass band and half a hundred political friends. The special train, [illegible] the Northern Pacific and Burlington, consists of three first class Pullman coaches and a well stocked commissary car. Several advance men were sent out a few days ago to get up local demonstrations along the route of the rich man and his friends in the special train and Clark will make many speeches.

It is his intention to go to the convention in a style that will impress the delegates and democratic leaders of his power and great wealth, and to excel in display any other man or delegation.

Before leaving he was questioned [illegible] the report that he would put up a [illegible] dollars, but his only reply was that [illegible] a story had been circulated he [illegible] deny it.

Shot at Saint Teresa.

Phoenix, Ariz., July 1.—Teresa Ur[illegible] commonly called Santa Teresa, the young senorita who it is alleged helped to incite the Yaqui Indian rebellions in Mexico, was shot at Clifton, Ariz., by G. N. Rodriguez to whom she had been married two days before. The young woman is regarded as a saint, and hundreds of Mexicans chased Rodriquez into the mountains, where he was captured after a hard fight. He was unmercifully beaten and narrowly escaped lynching. The girl will live.

Scandal at Dawson City.

Dawson, July 3.—Aside from clean-up results the matter of greatest public interest at present is the scandal involving Gold Commissioner Senkler. Charges have been preferred against him by D. Mc[illegible]ish and the Ottawa government has been asked to appoint a commission to investigate the matter. Senkler is accused of malfeasance in office. Specifically his alleged offense is the illegal grants of [illegible]tional claims to persons of whom he was a silent partner.

A Prisoner of the Boers.

London, July 1.—The war office has received from the British consul general at Lorenzo Marquez an official list of the British prisoners of war at Noodacht. It shows that there are 22 officers and 868 men there.

Owen Miller, of St. Louis, is no longer president of the American Federation of Musicians. He is succeeded by John H. Webber, of Philadelphia. Miller was a progressive unionist.

It is believed that had Pres. Blanton applied for a "permit" he could have held down his job longer at the university.

FROM present appearances, Oom Frank Steunenberg can probably be seen trekking back to Caldwell kopje about the second week of the coming January.—Boise Journal. Don't be too sure, neighbor; the tieless governor has his war paint on and tomahawk raised ready to peel the first man holding opposite views from him.

THE "father of the senate" at the present time is Wm. B Allison of Iowa. His service in congress has covered a period of 36 years—eight years as a representative and 28 as a senator. For 20 years he has been regarded as a presidential possibility, and on several occasions as a strong probability. His admirers believe that if his campaigns for the presidential nomination had been as skillfully planned by his friends as his campaigns for the senate have been by himself he would have won the White House goal long ago. He is 71, in good health, and a widower.

THE Ninth United States Infantry, that started June 27 from Manila for China, was organized by act of Congress, March 3, 1855. It fought the battle of White River, Washington Territory, on March 1, 1856, and that of Spokane, on May 17, 1858. During the Civil War the Ninth Infantry served at the battles of Stone River, Chickamauga, Missionary Ridge, Resaca, Kenesaw Mountain, Peach Tree Creek and Atlanta. It served in the Indian campaigns in Dakota in 1866-1867, and took part in the Sioux War of 1876-1877. In the Santiago campaign of 1898 it took part in the battle of San Juan Hill, and after the surrender of Santiago the Ninth was chosen by General Shafter as the regiment to enter and occupy the city. It was sent to the Philippines in March, 1899, by way of San Francisco and served at Caloocan and at San Pedro Macati, and was in Lawton's expedition to Arayat last Autumn. It is the first American regiment to see service in China.—Oregonian.

PRESIDENT BLANTON, late of the university, makes public his charges against the board of regents. He strongly intimates that political influences lay back of the action of the board, and in support of this testimony states that three of the five members who voted against him are delegates to the Pocatello convention, and a fourth member "is editor of their chief political organ in the state." In Mr. Blanton's charges we find this:

"That the funds of the institution had been extravagantly and dishonestly expended; that two members (Gilbert and Cornwall) had shared in the profits of contracts for building materials and supplies for the institution, which, as officers of the state, the law forbids them to do, and that at a former meeting of the board, Regent Gilbert confessed that he did say, relative to a certain contract, that he was serving without pay, and that he ought to be allowed to make a little something out of the contract."

These are serious charges, and as the president solicited an investigation of them before his removal and they were not considered, the public will naturally stand with the deposed officer. The matter should be probed to the bottom—"let no guilty man escape."
