Be Certain You Understand Rules Of Social Security

If you want to work after retirement age and forfeit some or all of your social security checks, that is your personal concern. If you lose some or all of your checks because you do not understand the requirements, that is a matter of concern to the Social Security Administration.

W. V. Nusbaum, Manager of the Lewiston social security office, stated that such a situation is possible. He urged all beneficiaries who are working or intend to work to inquire about the new provision in the social security law pertaining to earnings after retirement.

Under the present law, you can still earn up to $1,200.00 in a year and receive all of your social security checks. The major change in 1959 is that if you are working for wages and earn over $1,200.00 in a year, you will not lose a check for any month in which you do not earn over $100.00. As before, if you are self-employed and do not render service in your business some months of the year, you are entitled to payment for these months.

Mr. Nusbaum emphasized the point that any beneficiary who has net earnings from his business or total wages of less than $2,080.00 in a year should contact his nearest social security office, as some benefits may be due. Bear in mind, benefits are payable, regardless of the total earnings, for any month in which wages are $100.00 or less, and in which no services are rendered in a trade or business.

Stop Sign Violators Face Fines Says City

Violation of stop signs and other traffic signals within the city limits of Genesee have become so frequent during the last part of this year that the city has decided to start a crackdown campaign on such violators beginning the first of 1960, according to word from Marshall Henry Kinzer.

"The young people aren't the only ones guilty of stop sign violators," Kinzer stated. "Many of the most guilty ones are adults and older persons, and we plan to crack down without regard to age."

1960 Will End Almost Quarter Century Of City Service For George Anderson

Nearly a quarter century of service to the city of Genesee will come to an end December 31st, as Marshall George Anderson lays down his law badge and other municipal responsibilities and turns over his position as city supervisor to Henry Kinzer. George's retirement from city service becomes official on the last day of 1959.

In turning over the reins of many city duties, Marshall Anderson can look back on a career in city service that began in 1931. In that year, George assumed the duties of marshal and supervisor of the streets and water system of Genesee. He served in that capacity until 1945 when he resigned to accept other work. Even then Anderson maintained a connection with city government, serving on the city council and also served for a time as mayor. Late in 1954, George once again went back into harness as marshal, fire chief, and street and water supervisor and has remained as such until his announced retirement.

Reviewing the years of labor for the city, Marshall Anderson can find many changes that have been wrought in Genesee, but he added, "The jobs are still mostly the same."

Asked if he thought his task was easier now than when he started, George said he believed his work was harder in the earlier days than it is now. "Of course, we've got more things to do, but we've got more things to do with," was the way he summed up the comparisons.

The retiring marshal remembers the old fire station and fire equipment of the early 1930's. The fire station then was situated near where the present school bus garage stands and the equipment consisted of an old model "A" Ford with two soda and acid tanks plus some hose. There

St. Mary's School Loses Hoop Game

The parochial school at Moscow proved too tall and strong for the basketball players from St. Mary's school in Genesee as the Moscow cagers defeated Genesee 48-40 in the first game of the current season for the catholic youngsters.

The game, played on the Moscow court, was close right up until the final minutes of play, but the height of the Moscow team was too much for the younger St. Mary's team to overcome. Bill Morscheck paced the losing Genesee effort with 16 points.

St. Mary's team will face another stiff test Sunday as they play host to the parochial grade school from Pomeroy. The game will start at 2:00 p. m.

Sudden Storm Blankets Area With Snow Fall

The ink was barely dry on last week's Genesee News which was proudly proclaiming the fair and warm weather that this area was enduring when the skies clouded over and the snow began to fall with the mercury slipping down with it.

The inch of white stuff that was covering the ground Thursday night was evidently nature's answer to all the local people who were wondering, "Where's our winter?" It also provided the White Christmas which seems so desirable for children. After the first fall of snow, the weather seemed to warm up some and the sun returned to the skies, although the temperatures were still cool enough to keep the snow from melting much.

With the initial snow on the ground, the remainder of the weekend and the first part of this week saw little change in the weather picture; that is, until Tuesday night.

Tuesday evening the skies opened up and the snow began to fall. Wednesday morning the snow was still coming down and it continued to fall the remainder of the day, not letting up until late in the evening after four inches or more of snow was blanketing the ground. During this period the mercury stayed in the middle or lower twenties.

More Due Says Weatherman

Area weather forecasters were predicting more storms and lower temperatures for the Inland Empire. From the Lewiston weather station comes reports that another cold wave is due in from Alaska bringing colder temperatures.

New Vets Pension Will Affect Many

Veterans and widows in the Genesee area are showing a keen interest in the new pension law which goes into effect next July 1. Louis Givens, Contact Representative, at the Moscow Veterans Administration office, reported this week. Many of these persons will be eligible for higher pension payments starting next July.

Givens emphasized that veterans, widows and orphans presently on pension rolls should not write the VA about the new law as correspondence will result only in delays. He explained that all eligible persons presently on the rolls will receive an option form to complete. On this form, they may choose the existing pension program or the new plan. As the form will be mailed automatically, writing to the VA will not hasten its receipt.

The new pension plan, Givens pointed out, has no bearing on service-connected disability compensation. It concerns non-service connected pensions only.

Basis requirements for pension eligibility will be changed July 1, 1960, for widows of World War II and Korean veterans as well as for their children. Present law requires that the veteran have a service-connected disability. After July 1, 1960, the widow has only to submit proof that the veteran had active war service for 90 days or more with a discharge other than dishonorable.

Under the present law, eligible veterans receive a pension of $66.15 or $78.75 a month if annual income does not exceed $1,400 if single or $2,700 with a dependent. Pensions under the new law range from $100 to $40 a month subject to income limits. These limits are on a scale from $600 to $1,800 if single and from $1,000 to $3,000 with dependents. For a widow alone, death pension will range from $60 to $25 a month depending upon the widow's annual income which cannot exceed $1,800. Higher rates apply to a widow with children the top income limit being $3,000 above which no pension will be paid.

Givens repeated that no veteran or widow receiving a pension will be changed to the new law unless an election is made to do so. The VA will automatically send a form in ample time for the eligible person to make the election.

New Barber For Genesee

After over fifty years as owner and operator of Sampson's Barber Shop, Glen Sampson has decided it was time for him to "step aside", as he phrased it, as he announced this week that he was turning over the business to George Hines, of Lewiston, effective on Monday, January 4th.

Hines, who has been previously employed as a barber in Lewiston, comes to his new business well recommended, according to Glen, who stated he believed he was turning his customers over to a good man.

The new barber is married and is the father of three children. He will continue to make his home in Lewiston until he can find suitable living quarters in Genesee. Mr. Hines said he was familiar with all types of hair-cutting and would sincerely appreciate the patronage of Genesee customers.

Due to local technicalities involved, Glen will continue to operate the state liquor dispensary in the rear of the barber shop.

NEW LIVE-TRAP for deer and elk tagging programs is under construction at "The Junipers" in Freer county in southeastern Idaho. Similar in type to an existing big game live-trap at the Sand creek management area in the same county, this one is made of poles in oval shape with a "squeeze pen" at one end into which animals can be put one at a time for ear-tagging, thence released through a gate. Part of the opening to the entrance of the circular trap is shown behind the workmen to the left of the picture. Live-trapping and tagging of deer and elk provides invaluable data for future programming in big game management.

DO YOU KNOW

Daniel Ryden says a hobby could save your life. Whether it be gardening, hunting or playing the piano, it is no longer an indulgence, but a necessity. When we are completely tired out, we need rest, but we live in a world where physical exhaustion is practically unknown. Because of tensions and boredom, most of us need more physical exercise of some kind. So find a hobby and go after it.

I know a man who has strong leanings toward public power. The other day he said that Washington Water Power pays more taxes than a PUD. For example, because WWP makes a profit and the PUD does not. This is typical tricky reasoning and not true at all. In the first place, if the PUD pays off its loan and has a system left, that system represents profit. Both WWP and the PUD receive money from their customers. WWP pays 23¢ of each revenue dollar in taxes, while the PUD pays about 7¢—three to one. If WWP should receive a rate increase of $3,000,000, the tax collector immediately takes $1,600,000 for taxes. It does not come out of profits, because the company did not have a chance to use it. To support functions of government which benefit all of us, the PUD gets off mighty easy. I'd like to see them pay their share.

If you earn $5,000 a year, every hour is worth $2.56. This adds up to $625 in a year's time. So whether you work for yourself, or work for somebody else, don't waste time. Keep busy at something.

What do you know? In a recent column I said the national rural electrification officers consider the REA the same as any other private business. Well, the manager of a neighboring REA said the same thing. "We consider ourselves private business," he said. "We borrow money and operate on business principles, and we don't want folks to call us public power." So I ask myself, why have public power leaders tried to put the public power label on REAs?

POLICE "WATCHING" IDAHO DRIVERS

"Don't look now, Mr. Driver, but you're being watched! Yes, the Idaho State Police have been looking at you in a different way during December." E. E. Hopper, commissioner of the Department of Law Enforcement, said this week. "Not only are they looking for the violation that might result in an accident, they are also looking for that little extra courtesy, the unusual attention to the details of safe driving or the really outstanding deed you performed that might have resulted in the prevention of an accident on the Gem State's highways," he continued.

Nominees for the first Driver of the Month award, since the announcement of the program by Governor Robert E. Smylie on Dec. 10th, are now coming into the Boise office of the Idaho State Police. According to Hopper, a screening committee composed of officials of the Department of Law Enforcement and the Idaho First National Bank will sit down to the difficult task of selecting the first Driver of the Month within the next few days. The announcement of the lucky winner to be made soon after the first of the new year and a $100 savings account will be presented to the winner by the Idaho First National Bank, Hopper said.

Hopper explained that this new approach to traffic safety is designed as a means of recognizing the good drivers of the state in addition to the enforcement program of apprehending the not-so-good motorists. "Without losing sight of the rules of the road and are always mindful of the consequences of haphazard driving," he said. "It's high time we did something to recognize these good citizens."

State Police enforcement is basically directed toward the job of apprehending traffic violators. Back of the nature of the job it may sometimes appear that police officials take a jaundiced view of the average motorist. "However, this is not the case," the commissioner said. "We have always been aware that the greatest percentage of our motorists accept the responsibilities of driving along with the privileges." "We know that these good citizens of the road will continue to drive as they always have without any added inducement whatever. It is the duty of any good citizen. We do not enter into the safe driver award program with the thought of inducing anyone to make greater efforts in the field of traffic safety," Hopper continued. "through the selection of a Driver of the Month we hope in a small way to be able to pay tribute to all of the good drivers of the State of Idaho and to encourage the 'Not So Good' driver to perform in a manner more socially acceptable," he said.

"After all," he concluded, "the greatest saving to be realized from this program may be reckoned in terms of human life."

SCHOOLROOM PROGRESS U.S.A. WILL BE IN SPOKANE JAN. 6TH Schoolroom Progress U. S. A., the famous traveling exhibition sponsored by the Henry Ford Museum and the Encyclopedia Americana, will arrive in Spokane on Wednesday, January 6. The exhibit, often referred to as the Freedom Train of education, is being brought to Spokane as a public service by the Washington Water Power Company.

The two-car train will be on exhibition on a special siding in the rear of the WWP Service Center on Mission Avenue. It will be open to visitors from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. Wednesday through Saturday, and from 11 p.m. to 6 p.m. on Sunday. Several thousand Spokane and Spokane Valley school children are scheduled to make tours of the train during the first three days of its stay here.

Schoolroom Progress U. S. A. depicts the dramatic progress which has taken place in American schoolroom facilities for the past 100 years. One car consists of authentic reconstructions of life-size models of typical 19th century classrooms. All of the items in the car are taken from the Henry Ford Museum and Greenfield Village. The other car gives visitors a close-up of what modern schoolrooms of today are like. Each of the railroad cars, donated by the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad, is 86 feet long and contains heating and air conditioning units for the comfort of visitors. Dimly lit with authentic whale oil lamps and flickering gas jets, the "old" car is a dramatically nostalgic reminder of what it was like when grandfathers went to school. There are spilt log benches, birch switches, open fireplaces, potbellied stove and other artifacts of early Americana. Included are some of Noah Webster's original dictionaries and McGuffey Readers. According to George M. Brunzell, executive vice president of WWP the exhibition has three purposes: "To encourage an ever increasing interest of young America in teaching as a profession; to pay tribute to the contribution of the American teacher, and to increase interest in our schools and school facilities."

Robert B. Johnson, former public relations director of the Indianapolis, Indiana public schools, is traveling with the exhibition as curator. According to his records almost two million people have already toured the school train. After its stop in Spokane the train will visit Yakima, Seattle and Tacoma.

Whirlybirds Help Department Studies of Idaho's Rocky Mountain Goat Population

By Jim Humbird Idaho Fish and Game Department Empty space crowded David P. Outermost above to the sheer rock wall of Apochee as he led his horse across the icy one-way trail about 50 feet above the middle fork of the Salmon river some two and a half miles below the Canada border. Blasted from living rock, the trail never had been designed for heavy traffic, never more than horse and rider or sure-footed game animals— one at a time.

Storm-cooled trail was hazardous as Outermost inched along with horse in tow when he met oncoming traffic at the narrowest point. This coldest of the Rocky Mountain goats, a stocky billy and kid, flanked a jaunty nanny. Billy was only about 15 feet from Outermost as he rounded the bend. The kid, in turn, was only about 10 feet from the billy. Sure big game winter trend counting was the reason for the Fish and Game department conservation officers' being on the point that bitter January day. Outermost made a better job regarding the goats, remembering all the while the case of an over-zealous naturalist who had followed a billy out on a rocky ledge and had been butted over the edge. A sharp nudge from the horse caused Outermost to step toward the billy goat, which stood its ground. At only about three yards, he uncoiled and shot just ahead of the animal's forehead. Shaking his sharp black horns and stamping his ebony hoofs, Billy didn't yield.

But nanny broke the tension, turning and going the way she had come. Billy continued his head-shaking, feet-stamping antics. The kid followed its dam and, after another eternity, billy turned with all the majesty of a battle ship, moving slowly with stiff-gaited dignity. A symbol of high prairie wilderness regions of Idaho, Montana, Washington, the Canadian Rockies and Alaska, the popularly named wild goat carries the scientific name "Oreamnos americanus missoulae", a member of the "Bovidae" family. More simply, it is one of a small group of mountain antelope, including the European chamois—which means that it has none of the characteristic goat odour or flavor and is a very palatable table fare, especially when young.

Recent studies in Idaho indicate that there are about 2800 Rocky Mountain goats, about 40 per cent of which are in the Salmon river watershed and another 30 per cent in the Clearwater drainage. Other herds are found in the Pioneer range, the south fork of the Payette and upper Boise rivers, along with the Selkirk Idaho Cabinet ranges of northern Idaho. Game biologists believe that present population figures may be revised upwards now that ground trend counting is being supplanted by aerial surveys, particularly those using helicopters. Accurate population information regarding their numbers and distribution is lacking from the early exploration of the northwest down to the present day. Old records as late as 1903, there was a bag limit of one mountain goat for each dollar hunting license, with seasons extending from mid-September through November 30. Nevertheless, kill estimates over some 30 years show no removals of more than 100 animals per year in Idaho except during 1933 and 1946, when a shade over that figure was reached. This year, the hunter report cards declare a mountain goat kill of 57, including totals from both general and controlled hunts, with almost exactly a 50-50 sex ratio of bagged animals. Wide scattering of small herds in the rough mountains presents difficult management problems, especially in obtaining hunter distribution which will harvest annual goat increases properly without depletion of the accessible herds and underhunting the more isolated animals. Most hunters naturally go after those animals which are most accessible and widely known, while neglecting the others. The department admittedly has much to learn about the Rocky Mountain goat, especially what it does in the winter, but with the coming of the airplane and now, the helicopter, man does not have to endure ground conditions which to the goat may seem no more than nippy. Planes, although their passes over a goat range are too fast for accurate census-taking, have improved trend counting immeasurably. Now the whirlybird has refined the techniques greatly—and the department is hovering and taking a second look at one of the state's most interesting big game animals.

A Dog's Life

EXTRA CARE FOR DOGS IN WINTER By Bob Bartos Manager, Friskies Research Kennels When the winter weather bustles both city and country dogs, extra care to prevent sickness which is more prevalent during the cold months of the year. For the city dog, it means moving his bed from a cool spot to one that's warm and away from sources of drafts. While many owners look askance at bundling their pets in coats, nonetheless a coat does help minimize the contrast between freezing outdoors and steam heated apartments, especially if your dog is one of the less hardy breeds. Give your dog a good rubdown after a walk in the rain or snow. If snow-melting chemicals have been used on the streets, it's advisable to wash your pet's paws. The chemicals may irritate his pads. If he licks them to relieve the irritation, he may swallow some of the chemicals and this can make him sick. Cut down on the number of baths you give your dog in winter. Substitute the dry type for the tub whenever possible and when a real bath is imperative, give it after the last walk of the day and make sure that he's thoroughly dry before retiring. If the country dog's home is in a breezy spot, the better to keep him cool during the warm months, move it to a sheltered location. See that there's a couple of inches off the ground to prevent dampness. Provide some warm and easily replaced bedding, such as a blanket, straw or cedar chips. Make sure there's some form of windbreak on the front of the house. Check on his water dish several times a day to be sure that the water hasn't frozen.

Feeding Tip— Dogs needn't have extra fat added to their meals in winter if they're fed a top grade of commercially prepared dog food, such as Friskies which is a complete and balanced food.

New Kendrick School Now 47% Complete

KENDRICK GAZETTE—Trustees of Kendrick Joint School District No. 283, heard a school building progress report Tuesday evening, and found that the new building is now more than 47 per cent complete.

Everett Hollibush, prime contractor for the school, reported that construction is well ahead of schedule and he said that he plans to have the job completed by June 1, 1960. Dick Kelley, architect, of the Dropping, Kelley and Finch Firm, Boise, was also present at the meeting, and reported that the contractor is doing a superior job, and has, in some cases, surpassed specifications in his work, making the job and excellent one.

Mid-Winter Waterfowl Inventory Almost as soon as the guns stop booming at sunset, January 8, to end the current Idaho migratory waterfowl season, the mid-winter inventory on the birds will begin. Management work on waterfowl consists of the aerial and ground counts immediately after the hunting season, banding operations to determine the movement and mortality, nesting surveys on Canada geese, duck brood counts to learn production trends, and bag checks during the hunting season.

The January mid-winter waterfowl inventory from 1954 to 1959 has ranged from 392,000 to 706,000 birds, with last winter's being the highest recorded during the past six years. Incidentally, new 1960 hunting licenses are required for all shooting beginning January 1, although the present federal duck stamp will remain valid until the close of the season.

Public Use of Wildlife Management Areas Great

Newfoundland, including Labrador, became a province of Canada in 1949. After more than 100 years of experimentation, scientists have found that the manufacture of diamonds is possible.

Jane Addams, founder of Hull House in Chicago, received the Nobel Peace Prize in 1930, along with Nicolas Murray Butler, President of Columbia University.

Public Use of Wildlife Management Areas Great Some 18,920 persons visited the Farragut wildlife management area on north Idaho's Pend Oreille lake last year. These figures reflect intensified public use of all 13 wildlife management areas around the state. For example, an average of 704 persons per month visited the G. J. and 609 per month came to the Hagerman refuge in the southeastern part of the state. This compares with the monthly 334 at Striker and 420 at Hagerman during 1958.

The department improves and maintains the areas for two reasons. These are (1) to provide suitable habitat for various wildlife species and (2) to permit the public to enjoy the wildlife produced on the areas.

Fall House Inspection Pays Off In Winter Comfort, Fuel Savings

A tight house is a money-saving house in winter. This is an important reason why every home owner should make the fall to inspect his home carefully from roof to basement.

Fuel reward can be lower heating fuel bills, greater comfort, and the security of knowing the house will shrug off winter's harsh weather with ease.

A good place to start is at the top—the roof. This is the armor which protects the house against winter's roughest blows.

Look closely at the roofing material. If it appears worn and shabby, call in a reliable roofing contractor for a professional check-up.

If he recommends a new roof instead of repair, it doesn't mean he's trying to make an easy sale. It's a fact that a roof wears out all over at the same time, and that walking on it to make spot repairs can open up new leaks.

A complete new roof of asphalt shingles in a color that complements your house is a long-term investment that adds value, beauty, and security to any home.

The next winterizing step is to look for cracks around foundation, windows, and doors. Even tiny cracks let heat escape and cause drafts. These can be filled with caulking compound. Large cracks should be filled with oakum, then caulked.

Storm sash and doors should be checked carefully. A snug fit is important to keep wind out and heat in.

If new storm sash and doors are needed, wood is preferred because of its high insulating qualities. Combination storm and screen doors and windows are available in models with storm and screen panels that can be interchanged from inside the house.

Garage ceilings and floors should be checked. A snug fit is important to keep wind out and heat in.

With winter on the way, it's a wise home owner who swarms all over his house in fall to make sure the roof is in good condition, check for sufficient insulation in walls and ceilings, caulk all cracks, and put weatherstripping in shape.

Accessible areas generally can be insulated by the home owner with bats or blankets of mineral wool available from building material dealers.

A professional inspection is required for wall, floor, and ceiling spaces that are inaccessible. These can be filled with mineral wool blown in under air pressure.

Other important winterizing steps include replacement of old weatherstripping around doors and windows and should be reported to the Director of Internal Revenue, Manager Nusbbaum said.

Mr. Nusbbaum explained reporting is easier than many homeowners think. Upon request, Internal Revenue Service mails a report form each calendar quarter as a reminder. The report has the form of an envelope. The housewife enters the worker's name, social security number and total cash earnings. She puts a check or money order in the pocket to cover the social security tax and mails the sealed envelope to the address already printed on it.

The tax rate for 1959 is 2 1/2 per cent for employee and 2 1/2 per cent for employer. This rate will increase to 3 per cent each on January 1, 1960.

No detailed bookkeeping is required. The fact that a household worker is also reported by another employer makes no difference in reporting responsibility.

Proper reporting establishes social security credit for retirement, survivors, and disability insurance benefits that the household worker and her dependent.

The Magnot Line was composed of the fortifications which were supposed to protect France from Germany in 1939. It was named for F. A. Magnot, a French minister who was responsible for its construction.

Persons receiving benefits based on service-connected disability or death are not required to fill out income questionnaires.

Anyone needing assistance with their income questionnaire should call at the nearest Veterans Administration office.

For instance, if a driver is involved in an accident, his license and the registration of all vehicles he owns must be suspended by the Commissioner of Law Enforcement unless he can prove his ability to meet possible damage claims up to $11,000 within 60 days, which has been in existence for 13 years, affects every driver involved in an accident, regardless of whether he considers himself at fault for the accident, it was explained.

Idaho's Safety Responsibility Law is not a compulsory insurance statute because there are five remaining alternatives if a car owner does not have public liability insurance. If there is no public liability insurance policy in the amount of $10,000, the driver or owner must fall into one or more of the following categories: (1) Have cash, real estate or other collateral in the amount of $11,000; (2) Be exonerated of any liability by a court before 60 days have elapsed since the accident; (3) Have been released in writing from all liability by all parties involved in the accident; (4) Within 60 days from the time of the accident, have completed a legal agreement that arrangements will be made to pay up to $11,000 in the event of a damage action; (5) Furnish proof that his car was legally parked or was operated by another person without the owner's consent at the time of the accident in question.

McCoy warned that individuals are inadvertently led to believe "they are covered" with public liability insurance when a vehicle is purchased on a time-payment plan. "When the person purchasing a vehicle is told that his monthly time-payment includes insurance, that usually means insurance only for collision, fire, and theft for the lending agency or the dealer's protection during the time present cold weather," he explained.

Report from the GOVERNOR

Tomorrow morning starts a new decade as well as a New Year. A decade as such times, there is room for reflection on things past and for speculation on what the future holds.

Try to and forecast a year, let alone a decade, is fooling one's self. There are some indicators which give us a little evidence of whether our State is trending and of what may be expected when ten more years have passed and 1970 dawns.

The decade now ending has been one of sound and steady growth in Idaho. Population, personal income, construction, and savings have all climbed to all time highs. We haven't moved quite as fast as some of the rest of the country, but we have done a reasonably good job of accommodation growth as it occurred.

The new phosphate works in southeast Idaho were just getting under way in 1950. Now there exists in Caribou, Bear Lake and Bannock Counties an industrial complex employing hundreds of people and representing an investment of millions of new dollars on the Idaho scene.

In the last two years we have moved into number one position in the nation in the production of potatoes. A whole new industry in processing the potato for table ready marketing has emerged from the laboratory in the last decade and become a substantial factor in our growing agricultural production.

Our University and Colleges have grown with the State and are just now on the threshold of a decade of advancement that will be unparalleled in their history. We have accelerated nearly our entire road system in the last ten years and the decade beginning tomorrow will see completion of a road system that meets our needs and equips us for meeting the problems our ever-growing growth over the highways. We have made almost sensational advances in the field of public and mental health.

Our population with respect to 700,000 in the 1950 census, and it can be expected to climb at about the same rate through the next ten years.

We can anticipate that we will continue to have a healthy and growing public school plant abreast of this growth.

As the amount of time which our increasingly urban population will have for leisure increases, we can be sure we will have to expand our purely recreational government services such as parks and fish and wildlife restoration and conservation.

As of now, there is a fair chance that the world will be at peace in the decade just beginning. We have made giant strides in the last months in the direction of protecting a new and I hope more accurately image of the aspiration and desires of the American people for peaceful progress for all people. The President's return from his historic cruise toward peace through Africa and Europe may well have marked the rising of some bold new horizons for America's historic mission in the world.

For our Republic to have peaceful years to dignity and well being without regard

'Dimes' Opens First Birth Defects Center

A birth defects study center, the first of its kind designed to combine clinical treatment with research and teaching, has just been officially opened at Columbus, Ohio. It is supported by funds from the New March of Dimes, which is now engaged in its 15th annual campaign for contributions to fight three major crippling diseases including, besides birth defects, arthritis and polio.

Medical experts say that birth defects are the biggest unmet childhood medical problem in the United States today. There are more than 600 different types of birth defects, or "congenital malformations," as they are called by doctors, and more than half of these are preventable through careful prenatal care and detection of mental retardation.

Some 250,000 American babies are born each year with one or more significant birth defects, and about half of these are doomed to a lifetime of serious illness or crippling. About 94,000 infants each year are stillborn because of these afflictions, or die within a year of their birth.

There are more than 600 different types of birth defects, or "congenital malformations," as they are called by doctors, and more than half of these are preventable through careful prenatal care and detection of mental retardation.

Shrouded in Superstition. The study center in Columbus' famed Children's Hospital thus represents the beginning of an attempt to solve a medical problem which has heretofore been largely neglected by research. It is a problem that has plagued humanity for centuries.

By tackling this issue with a three-pronged program of research, treatment and training of skilled medical professionals, the March of Dimes organization has set a precedent for the hundreds of thousands of parents whose lives have been blighted by the birth of a child with a major defect.

This hope is bolstered by the fact that the March of Dimes organization in fighting such diseases has been successful in many instances. It has encouraged Dr. Jonas E. Salk to become a virologist and that

Through the combination of treatment, teaching and study at the Columbus Birth Defects Study Center and others the March of Dimes hopes to establish and support, it is believed that new knowledge will be obtained and the devastating effects of these disorders may eventually, for the most part, be prevented or controlled.

Some Can Be Helped. Certain major birth defects, such as water on the brain (hydrocephalus) and "open spine" (spina bifida),

STATE POLICE TAKE INVENTORY OF YEARLY TRAFFIC RECORDS OF IDAHO

In every Idaho city and village merchants are taking inventory. They're figuring profits and losses; noting their slow-sale items and checking off of the want list merchandise that went into the debit side of the ledger; they're making mental notes of ways and means of improving their administrative methods for better profits in 1960.

Idaho's Department of Law Enforcement is completing its 1959 inventory, too.

On the debit side of the ledger are 220 traffic fatalities with space for a few additions before the calendar year closes. This record is slightly better than 1958 when the column contained the number 274.

A lot of red ink was used to itemize the total number of traffic accidents. The figure 16,500 appears in this column with space for a few more to complete the year. Next to that figure is the accumulative total of 5,100, also in red for the number of persons injured in traffic accidents during the same period of time.

A new column added in 1959 to help determine why the "profits" have been slipping and the "losses" gaining is for the number of vehicles involved in accidents. That figure is up to 28,500 and more red numbers to be added to balance out the year.

On the credit side of the ledger, the taking inventory will be able to see somewhat better figure when they enter their percentages in the "change" column. The year's fatalities on the 100 million miles of travel rate were down.

More and bigger figures are being added to the ledger columns headed "public groups interested" and "individuals interested".

Public acceptance, understanding and cooperation are important new columns that have had to be added. During the past few years, the people of the Gem State have evidenced increased interest in supporting official activities in the field of traffic safety.

All in all, the Department of Law Enforcement's inventory sheet is in fair shape.

It's like the merchants' inventory—it shows problems.

None of which are insurmountable. Yet all of the problems cannot be eliminated.

The New Year presents a challenge for merchants and for Traffic Safety officials. They can profit by the tasks of the past and set new goals for more "profits" during 1960.

SEN. CHURCH URGES REESTABLISHMENT OF GOLD PRODUCTION

WASHINGTON—Senator Frank Church (D-Idaho) this week announced he had urged the Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee to schedule early action on legislation designed to reestablish gold production.

The Idaho Senator said that a fixed price of $35 per ounce and increased mining costs have forced 90 percent of the gold mines in the United States to close down.

Church wrote Senator James E. Murray (D-Mont.), chairman of the committee, asking consideration of a Senate Concurrent Resolution "early in 1960" which would create a commission to study the gold-mining industry and recommend legislation to reestablish production.

A member of the committee, Church told Murray that he had conferred with Idaho mining leaders and found the resolution "has a great deal of active support among gold miners, and the mining industry generally."

"The commission which this Concurrent Resolution would create will be empowered to hold hearings," Sen. Church continued, "and would be under the duty to make a full and complete study and investigation of the gold-mining industry in the United States. Then it would report to the two Houses of Congress the results of its study, with recommendations as to legislation necessary to reestablish the production of gold as an integral part of the economy of this country."

"Such a study needs to be made, and the commission which you have proposed would be an ideal vehicle for undertaking it. It is a bipartisan representation from each House, and from industry, would provide a broadly-based membership for a definitive study and report."

"I hope that this resolution can be considered by our committee and reported early in 1960," Church concluded.

Clearwater Power Co. Purchases New Truck

Clearwater Power Company recently purchased a line truck that is considered one of the most versatile of its kind in the industry.

The hydraulically-operated boom assembly does most of the hard work normally done by hand. It digs, hoists and sets poles, and is equipped with a man-sized fiberglass insulated basket attachment at the end of the telescoping boom. This allows one or two linemen to work on pole tops and trim trees nearly 50 feet off the ground. The linemen can operate the unit from the ground or from the man-basket with remote controlled equipment.

The boom assembly is mounted on a special extended and reinforced truck bed. This heavy duty truck has such equipment as power steering, four wheel drive, covered brakes, two way radio, 168 gallon gas capacity, and a specially designed line body for carrying and storing equipment. The entire assembly weighs over 10 tons and cost the electric co-op $20,000. The Chief Engineer, Bob Dole, estimates the unit will pay for itself in three years through the savings in labor costs.

This truck was placed on its first job this week bringing three-phase service to a garnet mine near Fernwood, Idaho.

MUSIC CLINIC SET

A prolific arranger and composer who wrote music for such television shows as Disneyland, Voices of Walt Disney and Dragnet, will be the clinician at the University of Idaho conference on music education January 15 and 16.

He is Frank Erickson, an assistant professor of music at San Jose State College, who will take part in the event held for music teachers and superior performing music students. Erickson will also conduct the honor band in the closing concert at 8 p. m. Saturday, January 16, at Moscow High School.

A native of Spokane, Wash., Erickson received bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of Southern California.

Published compositions bearing his by-line number more than 40. He recently completed an original band number called "Time and the Winds" for the Eastern Wind Ensemble and a concerto for alto saxophone and band which will be premiered by Sigurd Rascher and the Navy Band of the Eastern Band conference next month.

He has served as guest conductor and clinician at the Universities of Michigan, Purdue, Ohio and Washington and at numerous music festivals.

Safeguard Your Heart and Health In '60

"Safeguard your heart and your health in 1960, by using the knowledge placed before you," urges Dr. Richard A. Forney, President of the Idaho Heart Association.

Rating high on Idahoan's list of resolutions should be these simple suggestions which might well save your life, points out Dr. Forney.

1. Avoid over-exertion.
2. Get plenty of rest.
3. Don't worry over real or imagined ailments.
4. Avoid self-diagnosis. See your doctor and follow his advice.
5. Use the knowledge about the heart and heart disease that is readily available in Idaho.

"Resolve, now, to do your small share by calling attention to the wealth of information offered by all groups by the Idaho Heart Association through speakers, 'heart' films, publications, and research."

"Be mindful," advises Dr. Forney, "that you, too, can share in the great inroads of research which are gradually conquering the nation's No. 1 killer—heart disease—by supporting the 1960 'Heart Fund' through your volunteer work and your generous contributions."

Statewide Survey Shows Angling Increases

Averaging slightly over 11 fishing trips per person, 233,168 increased anglers caught an average of 50 trout apiece, bringing the total trout catch to more than 11 million during 1959, the highest fishing intensity and catch in the past five years, Idaho Fish and Game Director Ross Leonard announced this week.

Leonard said that the figures are based on a five-year trend study. Future surveys will be made periodically to learn whether the trends have stabilized or are changing.

Statistics show angling participation for trout, salmon and steelhead, as well as the aggregate and average seasonal catches of each kind of fish, according to James C. Simpson, chief of fisheries management.

It was noted that the number of anglers increased last year over 1958, but fell slightly short of the 1954 total.

Steelhead angling and average catch continued to increase, with salmon fishing and catch declining. Simpson added that availability of fish (size of runs) determines the annual catch for these sea-going species.

EDITORIALS

A DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE

A college student who sees the steady regimentation of individual activity in the United States writes: "Man is a political animal according to the Greeks. Anyone who could live alone must be a barbarian or an animal. But the Greeks also believed in moderation. Therefore it is possible for man to be too much of a political animal. There is too much 'togetherness' atmosphere in our society. As a result, anyone who doesn't enjoy being surrounded every second by his fellow man is considered unadjusted. Togetherness is all around us. It is oppressive and suffocating, insidious and inescapable. It is the ally of conformity and the endless ranks of the little grey men with the expressionless faces who march across our land. Long live the man who dares to step out of line! For upon his shoulders shall rest the future of the world."

STILL ON THE TIGHT ROPE

Late estimates still say that the Federal budget will be approximately balanced. But this, let it be emphasized, is not the result of even the most modest kind of economy in government. As a publication of the Tax Foundation points out, "... expenditures are trending sharply above earlier estimates, and the budget 'balance' is made possible only by the fact that receipts are expected to increase sharply also."

The Tax Foundation adds: "... it is apparent that the increase in revenues due to the improvement in and growth of the economy are required to finance higher and higher expenditures. The hopes and predictions of some that such economic growth would make possible debt and tax reduction thus may be thwarted, unless Federal spending is brought under control more effectively."

WARMTH, COMPASSION, UNDERSTANDING

"A man named William Rentschler is seeking nomination for a US Senate seat in Illinois. Speaking before the Chicago Press Club, he explained his political philosophy in these words: "I believe that conservatism is an energetic and mighty concept which enables people to live better and to realize their highest potentials and aspirations. I believe that a nation which follows unflinchingly the path of freedom and free enterprise can be warm, compassionate and understanding, and without resorting to socialistic quackery, extend a hand to those who are unable to help themselves. Certainly do not believe that compassion is a quality of socialism, nor do I believe that kindness calls for the welfare state."

Only time will tell what Mr. Rentschler's political fortunes are to be. But, that aside, this country—and, indeed, the whole non-communist world—could do with a great deal more of his kind of thinking. It is easy enough to criticize and magnify the faults of the capitalist system. But that cannot obscure the fact that this system has given more people more material benefits than any other in history—and, at the same time, has given everyone more freedom to speak, think, and do as they like. These are goals which people have sought since society began.

R. G. Hoffeller of the Immigration and Naturalization Service has again reminded all aliens to report their address during January. Cards with which to make the reports will be available at Post Offices and offices of the Immigration and Naturalization Service throughout the country after January 1. The reports must be submitted to one of those offices. Parents or guardians submit reports for alien children under 14 year of age. Mr. Hoffeller urges all aliens to report before the end of January as willful failure to do so may lead to serious penalties. Information furnished by aliens in making their annual address report to the Government is confidential. Persons who are unable to pick up a form because of illness, or other reasons, may have a relative or friend obtain a card for them and return the card to one of the designated offices.

Here we'll wade the trout streams of Kenya, fish for tarpon in Gabon, and fish for tiger fish throughout this entire continent. Like the African tiger fish is considered one of the really great game fish of the world. If I'm lucky enough to land one, I'll report the blow-by-blow encounter in a future column. From America is the next stop, but time will only permit a visit to the mountain lakes of Virginia. Here we'll try for a 16-pound rainbow trout, savor the sights of cosmopolitan Washington, and catch the first available airplane back home. Stop Gear Away For Winter. Unless you're a native of the north, it's time to slow your fishing gear for the winter. I took care of this job a few years ago, but I must confess I really wasn't a chore at all. When I took my little Mercury outboard out of the trunk of the car I became a little sentimental as I thought back over the experiences of the summer. This package of mechanized aluminum had served me faithfully all the while, and, as I drained the fuel from her carburetor, squirted some lube, and cleaned for me, I knew she would purr like a kitten when I pulled her starting cord next spring. Of course, I cleaned out my tackle box, sorted through my lures, and dreamed for a moment about the big ones which had gotten away. It's important to give your outdoors equipment some attention now. If you'll stow it away for the winter properly, you'll be ready to hit the water for your first fishing trip next season. If you have any questions concerning fishing techniques, equipment, or where-to-go, write Buck Rogers in care of this paper.

WELCOME TO WINTER I welcome winter over snowy hills. With all its bitterness and time and cold. Because it lets me dream of daffodils. And soft winds after winter days are told. I grieve not that the ghost of summer, dead Returns to overwhelm my peace of mind; For Shiloh, long ago so truly said "If Winter Comes—Can Spring Be Far Behind?" —Bert Gombart

A publication of the Department of State, called "Treaties in Force," lists all of the treaties and international agreements involving the United States. Superior station wagon ride characteristics are ensured on the new Falcon with heavier leaf springs in the rear and modified shock absorber pressure than manual or fowl, not species, which man, but also from predatory animals and raptorial birds alike, the foxes, owls, dogs, skunks, badgers, weasels, coyotes, snakes, house cats, ad cats, hawks, swallows, and even eagles. No one knows how many cottontails are shot each year, but the total runs high into eight figures. Idaho hunters questionnaires report an average of 85,000 cottontails harvested in excess of 65,000 while Missouri wildlife biologists believe that state alone during the winter season, leaving perhaps ten million rabbits to begin the new breeding year. That's the big reason for the cottontail's popularity—he lives in nearly all cultivated and wild areas, and he's available in numbers to everyone. He's here, he's fun to hunt, and he has no peer in a hot skillet. Yet this species of rabbit is found nowhere in the world except the North American continent. In Idaho the cottontail is most numerous in southern regions along the Snake river plains, in bushy draws, stream courses, woodland borders, farmland hedgerows and even agricultural areas. One of the oldest tools in game management is stocking, but this always costly, often useless method failed to establish good populations of cottontails by transplanting a mid-western species in north Idaho a number of years ago. Other states have tried without success. Pennsylvania's rabbit stocking program was scrapped when it was found that only about four per cent of released bunnies were even shot, and then even when cottontails were put out before the gun" only 25 per cent were bagged. In New York state every transplanted rabbit that was bagged or survived to breed cost $6.98, according to the N. Y. Fish and Game Bureau. That isn't surprising because stocking of most species of

Cottontail Rabbit Hailed As North America's Greatest Game Animal

By Jim Humbird Idaho Fish and Game Department. Sometimes it's fun to be a boy again, leastwise in spirit, and once more venture down the trail of North America's greatest game animal—the cottontail rabbit. America's greatest stand-by of millions of hunters and all-age favorite for generations, that veritable trademark of the outdoors—the mighty cottontail rabbit. Idaho game management personnel have found that the best way to increase the population of any animal species is to boost the wildlife carrying capacity of the land, which generally means improving both food and cover. And the cottontail is the most easily-managed game species because it requires such a small range. Depending on quality of food and cover, this delectable little animal may use less than an acre for all its life needs. Given odd scraps of marginal land planted in strips, blocks and patches, the rabbits will do the rest! In addition to the cottontail, Idaho has a buff-colored tail and the little rock rabbit or pika, which lives high in the mountains, cuts and stores "hay" for the long winter months, and looks like a chinchilla or extra-furry guinea pig. And of course there are the hares—the white—and the black-tailed jackrabbits—and the snowshoes. Young-in-heart oldsters along with the in-betweeners of both sexes who follow bunny trails have the longest hunting season of any of Idaho's numerous game species, both manual and fowl, extending from last September 1 through February 29. All counties in the state are open to the taking of five cottontail for both bag and possession limits. Sunset on January 8 marks the end of another migratory waterfowl season, and bulky duck-blind clothing can be laid away until next year. Such regalia is unnecessary for rabbit hunting. It's always an active sport at best, cottontail shooting requires many miles of brush-busting, which means clothing should be light-weight but wind-proof. Rubber footwear is almost a must for a day in the snow, tightly about the calves with ten inch tops preferable. If the hunter knows a lazy farmer, the latter's place would be a good bet to look for cottontails, in the overgrown fence rows, old orchards, and cover and food. Although the chances of a hunter's catching "rabbit fever" or tularemia are exceeding remote at any time during the season, wildlife biologists say that in northern states there is little danger when hunting during cold weather. Winter drives disease-bearing ticks into hibernation, and the main source of infection is dormant but in the bloodsucking mite-like organisms reappear in the spring. Even so, there are several safeguards against rabbit fever, none being an ironclad guarantee against the disease but, in the aggregate, offering a sound measure of protection. These are: 1. Hunt rabbits after the coming of frosty weather when there's a good chance that any sick ones have died. 2. If a rabbit shows no natural wariness or alertness, and no strong inclination to run, don't bag him. Sick rabbits often are sluggish and "tame." 3. Always wear rubber gloves when dressing rabbits, even in winter. Avoid getting blood on the hands in the field. 4. After removing rubber gloves, wash hands well with strong soap and hot water, if available, and sterilize all cuts, scratches and abrasions. This can be done in the field as well as at home. 5. Cook rabbits thoroughly. Never eat rare or underdone rabbit. These simple precautions should eliminate the horrendous misinformation and even fear embroidered around America's greatest outdoor sport, rabbit hunting—a favorite winter pastime for youngsters with their wide-eyed enthusiasm—and oldsters with their rekindled memories. FARMING AROUND

By Mark Welsh. If you find a new or unusual insect, the USDA and state entomologists would like to know about it. Dead insects sent for identification to county agents, agricultural experiment stations or entomological field stations of the U. S. USDA's Plant Pest Control Division. Mark Welsh, a Genesee Game warden, is stepping up its detective work to keep new bugs from sneaking into the country and to prevent the ones that are already here from breeding to new areas. This is important work because many of our most destructive bugs have come from other countries—the Japanese beetle and the European corn borer to name just two. On the other hand, if officials know about new pest invasions in time they can keep them from getting a toehold in this country. Malathion, for example, wiped out the Mediterranean fruit fly in Florida before the pesky destroyer could cause serious crop losses. Next time your truck or tractor won't start due to cold weather and a weak battery drive another vehicle up close and, using welding cable, connect the battery posts positive to positive and negative to negative. Rev up the engine until the generator shows "charge" and the weak battery will soon be strong enough to start the walled vehicle. Be Kind to People. Farmers have long known that animals do better when they are not crowded, pushed and shoved or otherwise made uncomfortable. This works with people too, but city folks don't seem to recognize it. They still shove into subways, crowd into elevators and generally push each other around in buses, trains and even restaurants. (Editors Note: Dr. Mark Welsh is a former university instructor and state livestock sanitary service director who has spent a lifetime in agriculture. He now is an agricultural consultant to American Cyanamid Company.)

PUBLISHERS BOOK

A new dyed-in-the-wool Idaho product—and a right lively one, it is, too—has just come off the press. It is "Fragments of Viliiny," a collection of essays by Dick d'Easum. The author is Boisean, who is a University of Idaho graduate former editor of The Argonaut, student newspaper, and now assistant extension director for the university. The artist who illustrated the book is Paul Evans, a native of Wilder and now a resident of Caldwell. The book was printed by Caxton Printers of Caldwell and published for non-sale distribution by the Statesman Printing Co. of Boise. Most of the material for the essays was spawned during the early days of Idaho. Originally published in The Idaho Daily Statesman, the essays tell of salty characters in d'Easum's peppery style. Typical excerpt: "C. H. Moore, proprietor of a hotel at Hailey, punctured Colonel D. C. Russell, editor of the Wood River Times, with five shots at close range. The ventilation took place because of something Russell published about the hotel man. Something like "Why doesn't the old dead beat pay his bills." Russell lived to write the story of Moore's arrest and one-hundred-dollar fine. Shooting an editor ranked as a misdemeanor. The fine was paid by public subscription. VA BENEFIT CHECKS Beneficiary checks from the Veterans Administration may be sent directly to the beneficiary's bank for deposit to his account, the VA said this week, provided the bank has been given the required power of attorney. A special U. S. Treasury form is available for the purpose of assigning the power of attorney to the beneficiary's bank. This arrangement is convenient for veterans who travel and those who have frequent changes of address which make it difficult for them to receive their checks with regularity, the VA pointed out. A complete explanation of the arrangement and the necessary forms may be obtained by contacting any VA office. Contrary to former legal requirements that a check could not be forwarded to a beneficiary who has moved, checks in payment of monetary benefits may now be forwarded, provided the addressee has left a forwarding address with the post office, the VA said. HOME OWNERS' QUESTION BOX

Q—Water seeps up through the concrete slab floor on basement after a rainstorm and remains damp for days. Is there anything we can do aside from excavating and regrading?
A—A Midwest home builder with the same problem solved it by coating the floor with a thin layer of asphalt roofing cement. While this was still tacky, he covered the entire floor with sheets of heavy-duty plastic film then put down a 2-inch layer of concrete.
Q—What types of repairs and improvements are eligible for an FHA home improvement loan? Also, what is the limit of an FHA home improvement loan?
A—In general, anything that adds to the "livability" of a house. A new roof of asphalt shingles, for example, is approved under an FHA home improvement loan because it protects a house, beautifies it and adds value to it. A home owner now can borrow as much as $5,000 on a Title I loan, repayable over as long a period as 5 years.

Q—When driving finishing nails, how can I keep from denting the wood with my hammer?
A—A rubber fitting is available that slips over the nose of the hammer. A hole in the center of the fitting exposes metal for driving the nail. A collar of rubber around the outside edges of the nose prevents denting.

MOTORISTS HAVE STOCK ANSWERS FOR ACCIDENT REPORTS TO THE STATE

"I didn't see the other car," "The other car was coming too fast," "The other driver didn't stop at the intersection," are among popular, stock answers of motorists involved in street and highway collisions when they make out their accident reports. Almost invariably the same reports will list traveling speed from five to ten miles an hour below the posted speed for the area in which the accidents occur.

Frequently, though, drivers go to extremes in defining the cause of accidents and placing the blame on no one but themselves. One teen-ager, whose car left the road and caused injuries to himself and his girl friend, wrote: "The way it looks to me, the cause of the accident was excessive speed." An elderly man admitted, "I was distracted by my dog riding in the car with me." Another driver admitted that he had dozed at the wheel and couldn't remember anything that happened during two miles of driving preceding the accident.

Regardless of "reasons" stated for accidents all of them are the result of at least one of the following mistakes, inattention or neglect.

Just consider, "My car skidded on the ice." An icy spot on the pavement may be unexpected, but weather conditions should be overruling to all motorists that ice is possible in the road ahead. Being mentally prepared for such eventualities is part of being a good driver.

"My steering mechanism failed and caused my car to leave the road," doesn't exonerate a driver from the blame for an accident. Imagine, if you can, the hullabaloo that would be aroused if an airline pilot admitted he had taken off in a plane that had not been thoroughly checked for any and all possible mechanical defects.

"It was foggy and I didn't see the train," is a poor excuse when you consider the fog must have prevailed several hundred feet before the driver came to a railroad crossing. Even if he could not see the well known warning, "Stop, Look and Listen," the fog should have rung a mental bell.

Instead of memorizing standard "reasons" for accidents, concentrate on a few of the 1959 Idaho Traffic statistics such as: 17,000 wrecks, 5,100 injuries and 221 deaths. "None of them 'just happened.'"

Discipline -- For Gal or Guard

The amusing and very human story of a Buckingham Palace guard who gave in to his very human emotions, stepped out of his disciplined routine, and kicked the shins of a nearby heckler, recently made news in more pleasure and so much more satisfaction. This discipline is hers to enjoy in fabrics that she wears off for the life of the garment.

As happens so often in scientific progress, when one feature is worked out, several other developments often result from the same experiments. And so it is with these Bates fabrics. The treatment they call "Disciplined" not only disciplines, as the word implies, but actually improves the entire character of the cotton. It releases creases — just hang it up and wrinkles smooth out.

Another remarkable thing is that it makes the garments resist soil which means they need washing just half as often. And when washed, dry fast and smooth with little or no ironing necessary. But the Bates people like to point out that often just a touch-up on collars, cuffs and major seams gives the garment that "just new" appearance again. Takes only a fraction of a minute for this.

No wonder it is that we are known as the best dressed nation in the world. A nod of thanks to modern science and a nod of appreciation to the modern woman for making the most of these everyday wonders. She gets her discipline far easier than the handsome guard.

Interested by the 109 year old firm of Bates Fabrics has resulted in the development of the fabric now named for just what it is—"Disciplined." Not just a fancy word, but a treatment that is fibre-deep and permanent—it can't wear off for the life of the garment.

IDAHO FUR HARVEST TOTALS $321,602
Idaho's fur harvest for the 1957-58 trapping season totalled $321,602, with two-thirds of the value, or $222,486, being beaver pelts, the state Fish and Game department disclosed this week.

"Trapping interest centered on beaver during the past two years as this fur-bearing became available to private trappers on an open season basis for the first time in half a century." Director Ross Leonard pointed out.

During the first open beaver season of 1957-58, a record breaking harvest of over 24,000 pelts was taken providing relief from the over population which developed during the latter years of the state-trapper program," Leonard said.

He added that more restrictive regulations were adopted during the second general season of 1958-59 and a decline of trapper interest reduced the harvest to about 8,500 pelts. This total is just a shade over the average annual catch produced under the former state-trapper program, which Leonard said was inadequate.

Total beaver damage complaints during 1958 were 213, as compared to 256 this year.

Muskrat and mink harvest values far exceeded the remaining 11 principal fur-bearing animal catches, totalling $48,742 and $35,779, respectively, for the year.

Most Trapping Seasons End
All licensed trappers are urged to check the official printed leaflet containing 1959-60 seasons and regulations on furbearing animals because of the many variable dates on beaver and muskrat. Trapping seasons on mink, muskrat, otter and fox ended in all counties December 31, and on muskrats in many counties. All trappers must be licensed, and must carry all pelts immediately to a licensed trapper and $5 for non-resident trappers and $75 for non-residents.

Dangerous—And Illegal
Miscellaneous complaints have been received lately concerning the use of rifles for duck and goose hunting, which of course is against the law. Only scatterguns with shot no bigger than bb's are allowed under the Idaho code, since that reduces crippling losses, and retrieving downed birds from water is easier since they're not so far out. Moreover, rifle shooting across open water is hazardous because even .22 caliber slugs often ricochet and carry up to a mile. And when there are roads on both sides of a river, as there are at some points along the Snake, the danger is compounded. Incidentally, new hunting licenses are needed to finish the waterfowl season, which ends on January 8, but the 1959-60 federal duck stamps are still valid.

50 Salmon River Fish Screens
Fifty fish screens were built and installed last year along ditches leading from the main Salmon river to prevent young chinook and steelhead fingerlings from being directed from the main stream and going to the headwaters. The perforated-plate screens were built at the new warehouse at Salmon, which also was constructed and added to ten miles of the main stream in 1958. About 250 of them were installed scheduled for installation over the next few years.

Mr. and Mrs. Laverne Anderson entertained at a New Year's Dinner for Mr. and Mrs. D. Stout; Miss Barbara Garfield, Wash; and P.C. Dwyer, who is home on furlough from Fairbanks, Alaska.

BLACKFOOT MAN WINNER OF FIRST DIRT ROAD AWARD
A flawless 30-year driving record, consistent driving habits and an act of service beyond the ordinary earned Mr. and Mrs. B. D. Stout, Miss Barbara Garfield, Wash; and P.C. Dwyer, who is home on furlough from Fairbanks, Alaska, the honor of Blackfoot, received a cash award of $100 from the Shelby Branch of the Idaho First National Bank.

Colson was selected from among several motorists "cited" by the Idaho State Police during the month of December. The award was made this week by a committee composed of officials of the Department of Law Enforcement and the Idaho First National Bank. Officers of the Bank and the Department of Law Enforcement conceived the "Safe Driver Award" program as a means of recognizing the good drivers of the state in addition to apprehending the poor ones.

In nominating Colson for the award, Ray Rohrbacher, Idaho State Police officer stationed at Blackfoot stated, "I was called the scene of an accident on Highway 91 north of Blackfoot in the midst of a heavy snow storm. Traffic was unusually heavy at that time and road and weather conditions combined to create a critical condition which could have resulted in further property damage and personal injury. On arriving at the scene I found that Mr. Colson had parked his pickup truck in a position to warn on-coming traffic. The blinker lights on his vehicle were flashing a warning to other motorists of the danger ahead and Mr. Colson was directing traffic around the damaged vehicle which almost completely blocked the road."

Rohrbacher explained that Colson's actions aided materially in speeding up the investigation of the accident and in clearing the highway so that traffic could proceed normally. In addition, Colson's selection as Idaho's first "Driver of the Month" commended "it's the thousands of Byrd F. Colson's throughout the state of Idaho and the nation who are contributing more than they realize to safety on our highways."

"These are the people whose good citizenship translated into terms of action makes it possible for better and more effective law enforcement and better traffic safety programs."

"I am more than pleased that Mr. Colson is being recognized and my congratulations go to this Idaho man whose courteous and considerate actions are for the first time being made known to the public. I am sure that good citizenship is 'second nature' to Colson and the vast majority of Idahoans whom he represents."

The December "Driver of the Month" has been a resident of Idaho since 1927 and lived in Bingham county since 1938. For the past five years he has served as county weed supervisor, a position that requires extensive driving over all kinds of roads and in all types of weather. The 54-year-old man is married and has two sons living in the Blackfoot area.

In closing his nomination of Colson officer Rohrbacher said, "I have had occasion to observe his driving habits almost every day for the past two and a half years and have never seen him do anything that was hazardous in the least."

State Police are issuing "citations" for safe drivers who will be considered for the January "Driver of the Month" award. Each driver is given a pocket card and windshield decal by the officer making the citation.

The "round table" was first used, according to tradition, by King Arthur and his knights, so that participants would not be forced to be seated by rank.

"La Marseillaise" is the national anthem of France.

The blinker lights on his vehicle were flashing a warning to other motorists of the danger ahead and Mr. Colson was directing traffic around the damaged vehicle which almost completely blocked the road."

Rohrbacher explained that Colson's actions aided materially in speeding up the investigation of the accident and in clearing the highway so that traffic could proceed normally. In addition, Colson's selection as Idaho's first "Driver of the Month" commended "it's the thousands of Byrd F. Colson's throughout the state of Idaho and the nation who are contributing more than they realize to safety on our highways."

"These are the people whose good citizenship translated into terms of action makes it possible for better and more effective law enforcement and better traffic safety programs."

"I am more than pleased that Mr. Colson is being recognized and my congratulations go to this Idaho man whose courteous and considerate actions are for the first time being made known to the public. I am sure that good citizenship is 'second nature' to Colson and the vast majority of Idahoans whom he represents."

The December "Driver of the Month" has been a resident of Idaho since 1927 and lived in Bingham county since 1938. For the past five years he has served as county weed supervisor, a position that requires extensive driving over all kinds of roads and in all types of weather. The 54-year-old man is married and has two sons living in the Blackfoot area.

In closing his nomination of Colson officer Rohrbacher said, "I have had occasion to observe his driving habits almost every day for the past two and a half years and have never seen him do anything that was hazardous in the least."

State Police are issuing "citations" for safe drivers who will be considered for the January "Driver of the Month" award. Each driver is given a pocket card and windshield decal by the officer making the citation.

The "round table" was first used, according to tradition, by King Arthur and his knights, so that participants would not be forced to be seated by rank.

"La Marseillaise" is the national anthem of France.

Report from the GOVERNOR

The prospect of being able to secure good care for an aged parent or grandparent in a licensed nursing home in Idaho is improving steadily. We all know that people live longer and that sometimes there are years of invalidism and disability. Because adequate care cannot be provided at home and the cost of prolonged hospitalization is prohibitive, the nursing home has come into being as kind of "half-way" house. The development of nursing homes in Idaho has been slow because of the inability of most patients to pay rates high enough to enable the homes to employ trained personnel and to secure adequate facilities.

This situation is rapidly changing for the better. The Department of Public Assistance began last spring to reimburse nursing homes for the care of recipients of public assistance. In October direct payments were made to eleven nursing homes for the care of 225 public assistance patients. This care is purchased only for those recipients who are under the care of doctors and who are cared for in nursing homes whose personnel and facilities meet certain requirements.

In January of last year there were 101 nursing homes in Idaho with a total bed capacity of 1,669 patients. These homes employed only fifteen registered nurses and thirty-nine licensed practical nurses.

This month the Public Assistance Agency will make payments to thirteen homes for the care of public assistance recipients. These thirteen homes now employ nineteen registered nurses and thirty-two licensed practical nurses. This is only three homes last January. This professional nursing staff is supplemented by aides, cooks and housekeeping personnel to enable the homes to maintain good standards of care.

Many other homes are engaged in making improvements in order that the care of doctors and who are cared for in nursing homes whose personnel and facilities meet certain requirements. This is one step forward in better care for our older citizens.

Living costs are up it's true, but don't despair, a dime still makes a fairly good screwdriver.

In an attempt to reform the village drunk the local preacher invited him to take a ride one evening. After the two drove around for awhile the preacher thought he'd hit on a way to illustrate his point. Stopping his car on a hill overlooking two distilleries which were ablaze with light, the minister pointed down and said, "Now look, Lushwell, don't you see that you haven't a chance of drinking all the bourbon they can make?" "No, I guess not," replied Lushwell. Then he brightened. "But brother, you got to admit, that I got 'em working nights."

Committee Sets May 21 Date For 3rd Annual Community Day

At a meeting of the Community Day chairman, held Sunday evening, January 10, it was decided by the committee to have May 21 as the date for the annual Genesee Community Day celebration. The date was set after reviewing all activities for the month of May and deciding that this date would not interfere with high school activities or other community events during this period.

Due to the weather, the attendance at the chairman's meeting was rather sparse, but after some telephone calls by Civic Club president, Bill Emerson, enough people were at the meeting to make a good representation.

After setting the May 21 date for the celebration, the group also arrived at a tentative schedule for the day's activities which are to begin again this year with a breakfast at 6:00 a. m. The parade will begin at 10:00 a. m. and the supper meal will be served from 5:00 to 8:00 p. m. The annual community day dance will start at 9:00 p. m. and the crowning of the Community Day Queen will be at 10:30 p. m.

It was also decided by the group to try and increase the amount of outside concessions for this community day, weather permitting. More information on this year's event will become known as the various committees meet and make plans.

Snow, Cold Hangs Over Genesee Area

Genesee and the rest of the Inland Empire was held in the cold, icy fingers of winter's grasp this week as snow continued to fall intermittently throughout the past seven days as the mercury seldom rose above the freezing point and would drop close to the zero mark during the hours of darkness.

Late last week, it appeared as if a warming trend might develop when some of the early snow falls started to melt, but Sunday night the temperature dropped again and remained in the twenties Monday.

Monday evening the wind increased and snow began to fall again and by morning several inches of fresh snow was blanketing the area.

The roads are now snow covered, and since they haven't had a chance to melt clear, the snow is packing on the highways over the northern part of the state and are very slippery in spots.

Things You Should Know About THE WESTINGHOUSE Laundromat Now, with the preliminaries over, we can tell you that when the old furnace goes ka-flooye, call the Washington Water Power Company and ask about clean, economical, low-cost gas heat. Don't replace the old stove until you ask about gas. The other day an acquaintance said as follows: "You seldom see one car dealer advertising the defects of his competitor's car. So why does the Washington Water Power Company spend its time telling us that the PUD escapes its fair taxes, and that it leads to socialism? Why run down competitors?" Well, I answered this way. I said that a private utility is forced to fight fire with fire. PUDs have tried to pass a law which would prevent a private company from mentioning public power rates, and tax differences, and in the same breath the PUDs shout that private utilities and the profit system should be wiped off the face of the earth. Is it right to sit still while socialist-minded people want to change our nation's business system? I imagine the company's 21,000 stockholders would want us to at least try to stay in business. We believe the truth should be told.

Why did the grimy drifted snow So reluctant to go away, At long last—seemingly want to go When the wild geese passed to the north today? Why does the spring come back again To waken the dancing daffodils? Who brings the wind-sweet April rain? Who was it climbed Golgatha's hill? —Bert Gamble There are about 120 drops of water in a teaspoon.

Report from the GOVERNOR Continued attention to safe-driving practices is beginning to pay dividends to Idaho motorists. Auto insurance rates were revised—generally downward—for the third time in a little more than two years. Information received from the National Bureau of Casualty Underwriters and the National Automobile Underwriters' association said the premium rate changes are based on "a review of claims costs arising from automobile accidents involving Idaho motorists." Leo O'Connell, State Insurance Commissioner, said the reductions are a tribute to law enforcement officers and the public's interest in safe driving. "It would appear," O'Connell said, "that we're getting a break on automobile insurance. I believe that strict law enforcement and increased police patrols have played a material part in bringing this reduction." He emphasized that the rates charged in Idaho are based entirely on the experience within the state. The announcement by the two insurance bureaus listed these changes: Liability insurance rates go down by from $1 to $4, depending on car classification, with the average reduction being 2.9 per cent for private passenger cars. Private passenger car collision premiums are reduced approximately 8 per cent for the $50 deductible type policy but go up five per cent for the $100 deductible. The bureau said the 30 per cent reduction for farmers continues, "because farmers as a class incur fewer and less costly claims." We did much better in the field of highway safety in 1959 than we did in 1958. But this should not lull any of us to sleep. In fact, it should accelerate our efforts. History indicates that after a relatively low fatality year, we get careless and the next year is really bad. Most of the credit for good safety records has to go to the people who drive our highways. Only the individual motorist can be sure that the car he is driving is operating safely. I am confident that Idahoans are not going to let their guard down just because we have made some progress in highway safety. I am hopeful that each of us will redouble our resolution to drive with ever-increasing care. TUESDAY CARD CLUB Mrs. Thelma Hoorman entertained members of the Tuesday Bridge Club in her home this week. Guests were Mrs. D. G. Kutch and Mrs. Dick Scharnhorst. Card prizes were won by Mrs. E. D. Pederson and Mrs. Glen Sampson. Mrs. Pederson will entertain the club Tues., Jan. 26th.

1959 HUNTER QUESTIONNAIRES MAILED TO BIG GAME AND BIRD SHOOTERS IN STATE The hunter questionnaire covering the 1959 upland bird, migratory waterfowl and big game hunting seasons again is being mailed to a statistically selected number of last year's license holders, the Idaho Fish and Game Department said this week. Director Ross Leonard said the questionnaire is the best source available at the present time for detailed information on the bird harvest, and provides much essential material on the big game take. He pointed out that the questionnaire should not be confused with big game report cards—some 75,000 of which have already been returned to the department—because the new questionnaire is comprehensive, covering all birds and animal species, and is mailed only to a representative sampling of license holders. "If you receive a questionnaire, please fill out the form and mail it as soon as possible," Leonard requested. "Even though you already have returned the hunter report card for 1959. The questionnaire form is similar to those used in previous years, and the department pays the postage." Leonard stressed that answers are requested from all who receive the forms, including those who did not succeed in getting any game, and those who didn't even go after it. "For statistical purposes, it is necessary to have all types of reports," he pointed out, "so the computations will be accurate." Information from the survey is gathered in the field and from the big game report cards to guide future management programs, including the seasons and bag and possession limits. SOCIAL SECURITY PENSIONERS SHOULD LET SS OFFICE KNOW OF ADDRESS CHANGES People getting monthly social security checks should let the Social Security Administration know when they move, W. V. Nushbaum, Manager of the Lewiston District Office stated this week. The notice should be sent either to the local office at Lewiston or to the payment center which issues the check. Post cards for this purpose were given to each beneficiary at the time he filed his claim for benefits, but additional cards can be obtained from the Lewiston District Office stated. It is very important that a prompt notice be sent in to insure that the check will arrive at the new address on time, Mr. Nushbaum stated. PERSONAL INCOME IN IDAHO INCREASED IN 1959 ACCORDING TO FIRST SECURITY REPORT Personal income in Idaho totaled approximately $1.18 billion in 1959, an increase of 4.1 percent over 1958's and the state's personal income during 1959 should reach $1.24 billion. That report is contained in First Security Bank's Newsletter which will be distributed this week. It was announced Tuesday by Merlin Parkinson, manager, First Security Bank of Genesee. "Increases are expected in employment and most economic segments along with increased wages and retail sales," the Newsletter notes. The publication is edited by Elroy Nelson, First Security vice president and economist, assisted by Harvey Frazier.

First Security reports that Idaho's cash farm income in 1959 almost reached $400 million, slightly below 1958's total. "Cash farm income in the state decreased less than nationally because of the difference in agriculture patterns," the Newsletter says. "The higher prices received for potatoes, the larger marketings of livestock, and fairly stable grain prices offset decreases in income from other agricultural segments." Electricity utilized in the state in 1959 set a record of approximately 5.2 million kw-hr. Total value of construction in the leading cities of Idaho in 1959 was $43.3 million, up $1 million over the previous record year, 1958. Non-agricultural employment in Idaho continued throughout 1959 at levels from 1,500 to 2,000 higher than in 1958, First Security reports. On the other hand agricultural employment declined almost as much as machinery replaced labor. Idaho's retail trade reached $550 million in 1959, up 5 per cent over 1958's Department store sales, despite a dip late in the year, finished 3 per cent ahead of last year's. New car sales gained 30 percent in 1959 over 1958's. Bank loans in 1959 were almost $20 million above the previous year's total.

Department Adds New Films Five new wildlife films in sound and color for 16mm projection were added to the department library last year. This brings the total number of different titles available for public showing to 77. During 1959 about 1400 wildlife films were issued or shown by department personnel. Use of the films was found to be heavy in the public schools. Titles of the new films are "Trumpeter Swan," "Great Country," "Marsh Harvest," "Mourning Dove," and "George Washington's River." A leaflet detailing the content of the films, showing times and how to obtain them, for group screenings is available from the Boise office of the Fish and Game department.

QUARTERLY MARKET REPORT SHOWS ENCOURAGING FACTS SAYS FARM FORESTER

The January 1960 Quarterly Market Report on Woodland Products for Kootenai, Shoshone, Bénéwah and Latah Counties by Russell Slade, Extension Farm Forester shows some encouraging facts. The lumber market is showing firmness according to Harold Johnson, St. Maries Lumber Company, St. Maries, Idaho. This is a very encouraging development for woodland owners and operators since sawlogs are still the most important wood product. Perhaps the most outstanding fact is the firmness developing for white pine lumber. This is a reversal of two to three years of weakening demands for this high quality product. It is expected that demand for this product will continue strong at present price levels. Stumpage prices are still high, but should adjust themselves. Other species are also showing strength, said Johnson.

Douglas fir and larch sawlogs are listed at all the following points: Bénéwah Creek, Santa, Emida, Plummer, Tensed, Potlatch, Princeton, Troy, Viola, Kendrick, Moscow, Coeur d'Alene, Springton, Cataldo, Kellogg and Osburn. Prices varied from 27 to 35 dollars per thousand with majority listing it with a good demand. White fir and hemlock had nearly the same schedule except they were not wanted at Kellogg. Pine sawlogs were wanted with poor to good demands at Bénéwah Creek, Potlatch, Princeton, Troy, Kendrick, Moscow, Coeur d'Alene, Springton, Cataldo and Osburn. Prices varied from 50 to 65 dollars per thousand. Ponderosa pine is wanted at Bénéwah Creek, Emida, Tensed, Potlatch, Princeton, Troy, Viola, Kendrick, Moscow, Coeur d'Alene, Springton and Osburn. Prices varied from 45 to 48 dollars per thousand. Majority listed this species with a fair demand.

Cedar sawlogs were wanted at Bénéwah Creek, Princeton, Troy, Kendrick, Coeur d'Alene, Cataldo and Springton with a price spread of 28 to 35 dollars per thousand. Lodgepole pine sawlogs were wanted at Bénéwah Creek and Emida, prices ranged from 28 to 30 dollars per thousand. There is still a good demand for cedar poles at Plummer and Bovill. Peeler are wanted at Coeur d'Alene, Post Falls and Potlatch. Prices vary from 40 to 70 dollars per thousand for yellow pine, white pine, douglas fir, larch, white fir and cedar. Stud logs are in far to good demand at Tensed, Santa and Coeur d'Alene. Prices vary from 12 to 14.50 dollars per cord and 31 to 33 dollars per thousand.

A lath bolt market is listed at Osburn. All species are acceptable. Here is an opportunity to do some thinning in young pole stands. Through better markets woodland owners can either liquidate their timber stands or carry out improvement practices, Slade says. Decisions should be based on long range effects. Markets provide the key to good management but must be used very wisely. There are an estimated 30,000,000 amateur musicians in the U. S. We don't say there is any connection, but last year 35,000,000 Americans changed their place of residence. — Changing Times

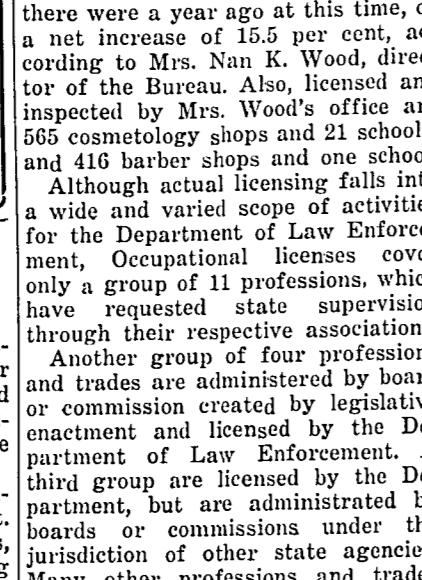

100,000 ACRES OF CERTIFIED SEED GROWN IN IDAHO IN '59 Idaho grew nearly 100,000 acres of certified seed in 1959, T. Carl Blackburn, manager of the Idaho Crop Improvement association, reported this week. He said 2480 farmers took part. They planted 103,805 acres. Inspectors rejected 6496 acres, leaving 97,199 acres eligible for production of certified seed. The crop improvement association is the certifying agency for the University of Idaho college of agriculture. Where Idaho ranks in the national picture has not been determined. The figures for 1958, however, show that Idaho was in first place for number of growers, and third in acreage. There were 219 fewer Idaho growers in 1959 than the previous year. Acreage declined about 6000. Blackburn said the 1958 production, the last on which complete figures are available, amounted to more than 98 million pounds of certified seed. The crops include alfalfa, clover, beans, grains, and potatoes.

Forest Highway Need Stressed By Bulletin The great need for development of forest highways in Idaho to aid state progress is stressed in a new University of Idaho research bulletin issued this week following a study in cooperation with the Idaho Department of Highways and the U. S. Department of Commerce, Bureau of Public Roads. The 134-page report titled "Value of Forest Highways in Idaho," was prepared by Dr. Norman Nybrotten, associate director of the university's Bureau of Business and Economic Research, and Wade H. Andrews, associate rural sociologist. It points out: "Idaho has over 20 million acres of national forest land—the greatest amount in any state other than Alaska. Compared with other states the national forests and the forest communities are poorly served with roads. Only Alaska and Wyoming have as few miles of forest highway per acre of national forest as Idaho. The State has only 60 miles of forest highway per million acres of national forest." The report states that the underlying "research developed a formula which is designed to advance money for forest highways to those states which are relatively undeveloped and in which the national forest lands are a relatively great portion of the state's area." It is shown that the adoption of this formula would be significant to the state-building program in Idaho. The bulletin lists among major assets of forest highways such factors as providing access in emergencies to forest-related communities serving recreational travel, and providing for recreational travel. "The airborne 'smoke jumper' has played a great part in spotting and fighting fires, but the larger fires still demand mass movements of men and equipment," the bulletin states. "The stand-by use of the forest highway is essential to this type of operation. "Pestilences of other types may strike the public lands without much warning. The spruce bark beetle epidemic in the 1950's struck in many areas. Roads were a real asset in combating the spread of the beetle and in salvaging damaged timber. "Experiences from World War II give testimony to the effect that hinterland roads are scarce in Idaho. At that time several agencies, usually secretly, built roads essential for military purposes. Many of the areas of great scenic beauty lie far from roads attempted by the ordinary tourist." U. S. Savings Bonds — Indispensable

NEW CHRYSLER 300F MOST POWERFUL CAR IN AMERICA

The 1960 Chrysler 300F, the most powerful car in America, bows this month with four bucket-type seats in genuine leather separated by a control console which includes a tachometer. A standard 375-horsepower ram induction engine is matched with three-speed automatic transmission, while a 400-horsepower engine and four-speed straight transmission are offered as an option in limited production.

Although the southern limit of the whitetail range in Idaho is about the latitude of Warm Lake, in Valley County, some of these animals have been transplanted by the Fish and Game department from Kootenai county along the Payette river and the Teton drainage. It is possible that the whitetail will reestablish itself in these areas. Since some of the transplants are shot each year, some sportsmen believe they are 'outsiders' even though they were found to be native in southern Idaho long before the first white settlers appeared. The whitetail prefers the heavy cover of a humid habitat, and generally ranges lower than do the mule deer. It is typically a deer of broad leaved woodlands and dense evergreen growth rather than the more open, semi-arid country, however, apparently thriving well in close proximity to man if sufficient cover provides concealment.

Since much of the lower valley country has been taken over by man, the chief limiting factor to Idaho deer numbers, both whitetail and muley, is failure of the remaining winter range where herds have over-used the main plants on which the animals depend season after season. Proper hunting each year helps this condition by removing surplus animals and giving forage the opportunity to grow. Artificial feeding has not proved to be the remedy when range deficiencies develop. On Idaho the policy of permitting the kill of both sexes and fawns does much to aid the proper harvest of suitable deer numbers. Results of the 1959 deer harvest on the two species are not all in and tabulated, but it is believed that the kill of surplus animals has been adequate in most management units. During the 1958 season, 58,816 mule deer and 12,087 whitetails were bagged throughout the state. Indications are that the 1959 harvest will approach that figure.

The word "blee" was first used in the United States Senate in 1921 to describe a group concerned with farm relief. Asbestos is a rock that can be separated into threads and woven into cloth.

It's curiosity which gives the mule deer a reputation for being slow-witted, especially when he stands roadside to danger. Not so, the whitetail. This species sneaks—even crawls—away to become engulfed in the shadows of any cover available. In Idaho most mule deer fawns are born in June. Many twins are observed and sometimes triplets. Under poor range conditions the doe may have only one fawn. The young have spotted coats, seemingly for camouflage, since they crouch to the ground and blend with the surroundings when danger threatens. Several weeks later they are nibbling tender, green forage. The doe generally weans them by the end of September. Much the same is true about whitetail fawns, which are born in May or June, are spotted with white on reddish coats, and are able to travel with their mothers within a month.

While some hunters consider the mule deer somewhat stupid and say he is easy to bag, a large buck is a worthy adversary to the most skilled hunter, especially in the rimrock country of many of the state's deer ranges. A stout-bodied animal, the muley has a gray coat in winter, changing to reddish-brown in summer. It has a short tail which has white hair and a well-defined black tip. The forehead has a dark brown patch and the rump on both sides of the tail is white. Mule deer antlers are double forked in the form of two sets of Y's on either side, while those of the whitetail curve forward in two main beams. Symmetrical points rise vertically from the top surfaces. A few record muley heads from Idaho had spreads exceeding 35 inches with 20 to 30 points. Another big difference between the two species is that the whitetail's ant appendage is a long plume of white fur covering on the top surface with a thatch of brownish body hair. This the whitetail waves like appearing cloth for his nose while in whitetail country during the shooting season. As the name implies, the mule deer has enormous ears, even when compared with the generous ones of the whitetail. He often can be spotted standing on the crest of a hill with the large V-shaped ears silhouetted against the skyline. Even when stampeded he often bounds stiff-leggedly away, as if mounted on pogo sticks, frequently stopping after only a hundred yards or so to gaze curiously back at a hunter.

Ground Hog Day New hibernophiles on the snow betrayed the welcome thine; That ground hog of the long ago, That harbinger of spring. Along the zig zag rimrock fence We tracked home to his lair, The little trail to where from where We knew would lead us there. No doubt he knew the rain-sweet spring Was not too far away, And that our hearts for joy would sing. With every ground hog day. —Dort Gamble

Whitetail, Mule Deer Provide Most Idaho Big Game Hunting By Jim Humbird Idaho Fish and Game Department Deer hunting is almost incidental in the scheme of things for many Idaho big game hunters. Their main view each fall is to stalk elk, moose or even mountain goat. Getting victory for camp meat or locker virtuosity is an afterthought. Nevertheless the state's 350,000 or so backskins are the real "meat" animals because they provide more sport to more people—and put more meat in the pot—than all other big game species combined. About 15 to 18 per cent of all Idaho deer are whitetails, with most of their range north of the main Salmon river. The only other species is mule deer. These are found in every county, although in larger numbers in the rough open mountain and foothill regions of the southern half of the state. While not considered as valuable a prize as the elk, moose, antelope, wighorn sheep or Rocky mountain goat, the deer still is ranked No. 1 in the minds of most hunters. There are constant reports of other types of deer being seen over most of the lower ranges of north Idaho. Among the species claimed to have been identified are willow deer, fawns, Columbia blacktails and a hybrid cross of the mule and whitetail breeds. The normal range of these types is west of the Cascade mountains in a narrow belt extending from southern Alaska to central California with a small spur east to the Sierras. Biologists have examined several deer which hunters believed were Columbia blacktails. In every case they turned out to be whitetails. Until definite evidence to the contrary has been produced, the official view will be that there are only two species of deer native to Idaho—the whitetail and the muley. A rare black color phase called "melanism" of the whitetail deer has been found in the Coeur d'Alene area in recent years. This is of interest to biologists since it never has been reported in the literature for this species. A five-point buck shot at Wolf Lodge in November, 1946, and a freak spike buck shot at Harrison Flats during the same month of 1950, both exhibited the black color phase

SEED GROWN IN IDAHO IN '59 Idaho grew nearly 100,000 acres of certified seed in 1959, T. Carl Blackburn, manager of the Idaho Crop Improvement association, reported this week. He said 2480 farmers took part. They planted 103,805 acres. Inspectors rejected 6496 acres, leaving 97,199 acres eligible for production of certified seed. The crop improvement association is the certifying agency for the University of Idaho college of agriculture. Where Idaho ranks in the national picture has not been determined. The figures for 1958, however, show that Idaho was in first place for number of growers, and third in acreage. There were 219 fewer Idaho growers in 1959 than the previous year. Acreage declined about 6000. Blackburn said the 1958 production, the last on which complete figures are available, amounted to more than 98 million pounds of certified seed. The crops include alfalfa, clover, beans, grains, and potatoes.

Forest Highway Need Stressed By Bulletin

which are relatively undeveloped and in which the national forest lands are a relatively great portion of the state's area." It is shown that the adoption of this formula would be significant to the state-building program in Idaho. The bulletin lists among major assets of forest highways such factors as providing access in emergencies to forest-related communities serving recreational travel, and providing for recreational travel. "The airborne 'smoke jumper' has played a great part in spotting and fighting fires, but the larger fires still demand mass movements of men and equipment," the bulletin states. "The stand-by use of the forest highway is essential to this type of operation. "Pestilences of other types may strike the public lands without much warning. The spruce bark beetle epidemic in the 1950's struck in many areas. Roads were a real asset in combating the spread of the beetle and in salvaging damaged timber. "Experiences from World War II give testimony to the effect that hinterland roads are scarce in Idaho. At that time several agencies, usually secretly, built roads essential for military purposes. Many of the areas of great scenic beauty lie far from roads attempted by the ordinary tourist." U. S. Savings Bonds — Indispensable

Whitetail, Mule Deer Provide Most Idaho Big Game Hunting By Jim Humbird Idaho Fish and Game Department Deer hunting is almost incidental in the scheme of things for many Idaho big game hunters. Their main view each fall is to stalk elk, moose or even mountain goat. Getting victory for camp meat or locker virtuosity is an afterthought. Nevertheless the state's 350,000 or so backskins are the real "meat" animals because they provide more sport to more people—and put more meat in the pot—than all other big game species combined. About 15 to 18 per cent of all Idaho deer are whitetails, with most of their range north of the main Salmon river. The only other species is mule deer. These are found in every county, although in larger numbers in the rough open mountain and foothill regions of the southern half of the state. While not considered as valuable a prize as the elk, moose, antelope, wighorn sheep or Rocky mountain goat, the deer still is ranked No. 1 in the minds of most hunters. There are constant reports of other types of deer being seen over most of the lower ranges of north Idaho. Among the species claimed to have been identified are willow deer, fawns, Columbia blacktails and a hybrid cross of the mule and whitetail breeds. The normal range of these types is west of the Cascade mountains in a narrow belt extending from southern Alaska to central California with a small spur east to the Sierras. Biologists have examined several deer which hunters believed were Columbia blacktails. In every case they turned out to be whitetails. Until definite evidence to the contrary has been produced, the official view will be that there are only two species of deer native to Idaho—the whitetail and the muley. YOUR Social Security?

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Question—
I have a cleaning woman who comes to me just one day a week. I pay her $5.00 plus for her services and also provide her lunch. Should I be reporting her wages for social security?

Answer—
Yes. If she comes to you every week, her cash wages over a three-month period will amount to more than $60.00. Any household worker who is paid $50 or more in cash wages by any one employer during a calendar quarter of the year is covered by social security. The employer is required by law to pay the social security taxes due on those wages. If you give her cash for her carfare, it can count as part of her wages. Car tokens do not count, nor does the lunch you serve her.

EASTERN IDAHO SAND DUNES GET STUDY
Fremont county's sand dunes have attracted tourists to eastern Idaho for many years, but during winter months the visitors are moose, elk, and deer.

For this reason, the State Fish and Game department has been studying the region to learn how to improve big game forage plants, according to Director Ross Leonard.

Aerial photographs and actual measurement of sand dune movements have indicated that the oldest sand is about 5000 years old and moving an average of ten feet a year.

This knowledge is important because bitterbrush, a prime plant food for big game animals, requires from 150 to 180 years to become established on stable sand.

Chokeberry is another important browse species requiring about the same growing conditions.

Detailed soil analysis and vegetative studies have been undertaken by the University of Idaho Cooperative Wildlife Research Unit to determine the conditions under which these and related browse species will thrive.

Leonard disclosed that two fence enclosures have been built in the sand dunes region, one to exclude both big game and livestock, while the second excludes only livestock. During the winter the barbed wire on the second enclosure is dropped and the permit fence access by big game at a time when domestic livestock have been removed to winter quarters.

"Idaho's Finest" Serve As Fish and Game Conservation Enforcement Officers

By Jim Humbird

Idaho Fish and Game Department

About one week the Idaho Fish and Game department has had an inquiry from someone who has had the "call" to help protect the state's wildlife resources, someone who wants to be a "game warden" or conservation officer.

It's more than coincidental that companion desires are to break their chains to office desks or store counters, to become healthy, happy outdoorsmen enjoying the thrills, chills, and adventure of the work while receiving monetary benefits as well as the intense satisfaction of protecting fish and game resources from poachers.

Experienced conservation officers often feel the same way, especially when making monthly reports and attending other office routine which is a characteristic part of any responsible job.

Ross Leonard, director of the Fish and Game Department, does not discourage the volume of inquiries and applications for jobs. Indeed he is pleased that there is a lively interest in the minimum qualifications, duties and responsibilities of the conservation officers gains a better understanding of the work and increased respect for the men.

Sportsmen do much talking about not wanting to meet a game warden while they are in the field. But it is a fact that a terrific clamor goes up if a warden is in the ranks of the conservation officers is not filled promptly. What better proof exists that sportsmen want good law enforcement along with the many other services provided on a day-to-day basis by these dedicated men?

Few jobs at this level are more difficult to land. Of 45 applications of the department's Council last July, 30 men were admitted to take the written examination. Only 17 of these earned a passing grade or better, and two of them were washed out during the oral examination.

Of course, only the top few men are selected for appointment from the merit system register of people who have qualified. Even some of the successful ones who actually go to work as CO's sometimes fail to pass the rigorous 6 months of training and probation.

If all these precautions seem excessive, it is because the public does not have a complete understanding of the qualifications necessary to handle the responsibilities of good wildlife conservation officers.

These men are not just a kind of policeman of the woods, fields and fishing waters of the state. Although they are the only members of the department charged directly with enforcement of laws and regulations governing fish and game resources, an analysis of work schedules has shown that only slightly more than half their working time is spent on law enforcement work.

Remaining time is divided among the categories of game management, public relations, improvement, cooperation with other organizations and office work.

Robert L. Salter, chief of conservation enforcement, breaks down some of the other functions this way: "Game management includes the taking of bird counts; pheasant sex ratio counts; waterfowl counts; the stream surveys; big game trend counts; beaver population trend counts; participation in bird and game trapping programs; doing something about big game and beaver depredation complaints; and recording harvest information on species of game and fish."

Salter avers that the "glamour and fresh air" advantage of the work begin to wear thin at about this point but public relations commitments often take the conservation officer on into the night to meet a speaking engagement with a sportsman's group, or perhaps a service or social club. Public relations also include participation in local schools with conservation and hunter training programs, as well as maintaining contacts with newspapers and other outlets for distribution of facts and local hunting and fishing seasons and programs.

"In addition to being an enforcement specialist—without which all management programs would fail—the conservation officer must be the eyes, ears and mouth of the department," Salter stresses. "He not only must possess physical stamina, drive and perseverance, but also intelligence, a well-balanced temperament, a fund of conservation knowledge and a good understanding of people and how to work with them."

The portion of an officer's time devoted to improvements generally is charged with maintaining equipment such as boats, motors, trailers and snow equipment. He also must make repairs or improvements on permanent installations such as patrol cabins.

Under "cooperation," Salter includes CO time spent with other agencies with city, county, state or federal responsibility. Office work such as reports, correspondence, filing, as well as reading and other writing keeping abreast of rapidly changing concepts of law enforcement and wildlife management, all are taken in stride.

On Salter's conservation enforcement staff are six regional officers and 64 regularly appointed CO's. In addition there are six semi-retired officers who work part-time on such details as checking license applica-

Public Access Holdings
More than 1000 acres were acquired by the department during the 1959 fiscal year for the purpose of providing public access to state rivers, lakes and reservoirs. Some of these already have been improved with gravel roads, fences, cattle guards, stiles and signs to provide public thoroughfares with the least possible inconvenience to adjacent landowners. The signs are intended to identify the areas and encourage users to respect private property.

Following is a list of the new land acquisitions:
Brunau sand dunes, in Owyhee county; Rose lake, Kootenai; Danielson lake, Bingham; Ashion fish hatchery, Fremont; Gaiters lake, Bonneville; Boise river-Moore creek, Ada; Gold Island, Canyon; and the Hagerman refuge, Gooding.

Big Fish Harvest on Pend Oreille
More than one and one-fourth million trout and steelhead salmon were harvested last season from the highly productive waters of Lake Pend Oreille in north Idaho. But that's only part of the story. Another 3800 cutthroat trout, 4200 rainbow, 1450 Dolly Varden and 1450 whitefish were taken by anglers. The rainbow trout catch averaged one fish per inch fish, although fishermen boated many 25-pound-or-better kampoos.

Altogether about 3200 non-game fish were taken, including squawfish and peanose spoonhead salmon.

Return of Hunter Questionnaires
Nearly 5000 hunter questionnaires have been returned to the department by sportsmen; and all persons who received them, but have not filled out the forms and dropped them in mail, are urged to do so promptly. The return to date is about four and one-half percent greater than last year's response on this date—a really gratifying show of cooperation with the department. It is essential that a high percentage of returns is made because the hunter questionnaire was sent to a statistician selected under the provisions of the state constitution to determine holders in order to have a good representative factor. The hunter questionnaire is not the same as the big game report cards. It covers all birds and mammals and is mailed only to a representative sampling of license holders.

Middle Fork Fishery Study
Fishery studies to determine trout population trends, angling harvest and migration data on the middle fork of the Salmon river will be resumed this summer and fall. The work was begun last July and involves catching and tagging as many cutthroat, rainbow and Dolly Varden as possible during the season. Department workers embark in 10-man boats and fish down-river because this is the best method to obtain systematic results.

During the 1959 season, six boat trips were made, resulting in the tagging and banding of 609 cutthroat trout, 205 rainbow and 29 Dolly Varden. These marked fish are expected to give a good base for next summer's work. Increased use of the river by fishermen has led down the entire length of the middle fork in commercial boats has multiplied angling intensity and catch, which means that solid management programs must be based on up-to-date, operating checking stations and conducting investigative work.

Not long ago the department received a letter praising the rescue work of conservation officers Keith Rudd and Frank Watkins who had been on the scene minutes after a six teenager had overturned in a boat and broken through the ice of Lake Lowell.

"One of the boys was thrown clear," says Chief A. Thompson, probation officer of the Canyon county probate court, "but one other boy and four girls were trapped under the car. The lives that these men helped to save can only be guessed but probably all five under the car would have perished."

Many letters are received by Ross Leonard on many subjects. Here's another one involving a CO of many years experience.

"You will no doubt think this letter very unusual especially when you know that this has been written on the same day that I take my first game violation. In this case a fine for the conservation officer treated me promptly."

"He proved to be a perfect gentleman and a fine credit to his work. After being in personal contact with his officers, I take it that the officers—to extend congratulations to you and your entire organization for a fine performance in this important work of conservation of our fish and game."

One of the ironies of conservation enforcement work is that some of the officer's best friendships—and the dearest of his staunch supporters—are made under the trying circumstances of a violation and not by the Director Leonard says, "the duties and responsibilities and authority of Idaho conservation officers are increasing each year and filling the shoes of veteran old timers with 20 to 30 years of valuable experience can be done only with the most capable young men we can hire."

FARM FORESTRY CLINICS PLANNED IN LATAH COUNTY

A series of three Farm Forestry Clinics are being organized by Ross Sluod, Extension Farm Forester at St. Maries, for woodland owners and operators in Kootenai, Benewah and Latah Counties.

The clinics are scheduled for Wednesday, February 3 at Coeur d'Alene, Thursday, February 4 at Moscow, and Friday, February 5 at Moscow. The programs at all three places will include the following subjects: woodlands; woodlands as a security for loans; tree diseases and insects; log markets and tree planting; Christmas trees and timber. In addition the clinic at Moscow will include the following: The Tree Farm Program; Soils and Sites of Small Woodlands; thinning of Woodlands; Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Act; and the 1960 Income Tax Allowance on Income Tax for Small Woodlands.

Discussion leaders will be local buyers and representatives from the College of Forestry, University of Idaho; local banks; U. S. Forest Service; Farm woodland owners; Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Act; and the 1960 Income Tax Allowance on Income Tax for Small Woodlands.

Disabled veterans, and widows and children of deceased veterans who receive monthly non-service-connected pension payments from the Veterans Administration are urged by the VA to return promptly the properly filled-in tabulating card which has been sent them for use in reporting their annual income.

Cards have been sent to 878,000 veterans and 525,000 widows and dependents who are receiving pension from the VA.

Pension recipients are allowed 30 days, or until the close of January, 1960, to return the card with the information. Those without dependents whose income is greater than $1400 a year or those with dependents whose income is greater than $2700 a year may not receive a pension under present law.

Failure to return the reporting card within 30 days will result in the stopping of the monthly pension payment.

The VA also pointed out two important facts: Veterans and dependents receiving service connected compensation payments will NOT receive cards and do NOT have to report income.

This income questionnaire has nothing to do with the new pension law which goes into effect July 1, 1960.

ADOPTION RULES CHANGES AS VA REQUIREMENT
Congress has liberalized the definition of an "adopted child" of a veteran eligible to receive benefits administered by the Veterans Administration.

If at the time of the veteran's death, the child was living in the veteran's household, and if the child is legally adopted by the veteran's surviving spouse within two years after the veteran's death or who is considered to be the veteran's adopted child, the VA explained.

Formerly the adoption proceedings had to be completed before the veteran's death for the child to be eligible for any of the benefits, including compensation, pension, war orphans educational assistance, dependency and indemnity compensation, and accrued benefits.

If at the time of the veteran's death, however, the child was receiving regular contributions toward its support from an individual other than the veteran or his spouse, or from any public or private welfare organization, then the child may not be recognized as the veteran's legally adopted child, the VA explained.

AUTOMOBILE EXPENSES MAY ON INCOME TAX RETURNS
If properly tabulated, automobile expenses may save the average motorist an appreciable amount when listing deductions on income tax returns, an official of the Inland (American) Automobile association said this week.

David C. Gilbert, manager of the AAA motor club, reminded motorists that the expense of running an automobile may be a business expense of a personal expense, or it may be a combination of both, depending on how the automobile is used.

The AAA club listed these as the important items to remember in figuring automobile expenses in deductions: If you use your car in a trade, business or profession you are allowed to deduct the costs of gasoline, oil, repairs, garage rent insurance, and other items necessary for its operation and upkeep Deductions are also allowable for damages paid as a result of accidents which result from business use, to the extent that the expense is not reimbursed by insurance, or otherwise, for the damages.

Depreciation and the loss sustained on the sale of a business vehicle are also allowable deductions. The cost of driving to and from work, however, is not considered a business expense.

Deductions for the ordinary passenger car fall into the non-business category, the AAA reminded. State gasoline taxes (6 1/2 cents in Washington, 6 cents in Idaho) are deductible, as are state automobile license and motor vehicle taxes, but deductive, if a car has been financed during the tax period, the interest on the loan may be deducted if it is stated separately in the sales contract. State estate taxes are not deductible.

Other non-business expenses which may be deducted include losses from fire, accident, storm or theft not compensated for by insurance or other payers; damages to an automobile which do not result from the taxpayer's willful act of negligence; and interest on money borrowed on the security of an automobile.

The AA official suggested that motorists get into the habit of keeping careful records of gasoline purchases, interest payments, taxes and other automotive purchases and the other areas where deductions are allowed. He said that many motorists will be greatly surprised at the year's end when these allowable deductions are tabulated.

FIVE NEW CROPS APPROVED FOR CERTIFICATION
Five new varieties of crops approved for certification in 1960 were announced this week by the University of Idaho college of agriculture and the Idaho Crop Improvement association.

They are Lakeland red clover, Alpine barley, Coral barley, Cheyenne wheat, and U1-74—a small round white bean.

Varieties to be dropped from the list in 1961 are Belford barley, Banock, Cody, and Swedish select oats, and Lemhi wheat. The committee also said that beans grown under sprinkler irrigation are not eligible for certification. The bean regulation applies in 1960.

Howard Roylance, agronomist of the University of Idaho extension service, gave these brief descriptions of the new varieties:

Lakeland red clover was developed in Wisconsin and is adapted to the North-central states. It is resistant to powdery mildew and northern anthracnose. In Wisconsin tests it has yielded more than other varieties and continues through two harvest years where common red clover usually lasts only one. It will be grown in Idaho for seed production or out-of-state use.

Alpine is a fairly winter-hardy barley that yields equal to our other varieties under irrigation. It is not as hardy as winter wheat. When it survives on dryland it outyields the spring barley varieties.

Coral barley is a white-kernelled two row breaded variety. It produces yields equal to Soda Springs Smyrna and is several inches taller, a desirable feature for harvesting on dry land.

The first pilot's license in the United States went to Glenn H. Curtiss. He started his career as an operator of a bicycle shop.

Chelonne 57 is a hard red winter wheat of superior quality in making bread. It is resistant to smut. The variety was developed by Warren Pope of the University of Idaho and has been grown in western nurseries three years. It is a cross of Rex-Rio and Cheyenne.

The new white bean, U1-74, is a cross of Nevada and common flat white. It is resistant to common bean mosaic virus and is adapted to bean areas of north Idaho.

After dinner Mr. and Mrs. Adrian Nelson furnished the evening's entertainment, showing slides from their recent trip to Japan and Honolulu; also explaining and answering questions as they went along. Our sincere thanks to the Nelsons for a most pleasant evening.

a Dog's Life

GETTING YOUNGSTERS TO CARE FOR PETS By Bob Bartos Manager, Friskies Research Keniaia Youngsters wanting a dog badly enough tend to make all kinds of wild and rash promises. They solemnly vow to do all the dog's feeding and grooming. And at the time, they really mean what they say. It's only when the novelty wears off and dog care interferes with other activities that the chores begin to shift from youngsters over to mother.

How can this shift be averted? Some wise mothers have adopted a plan whereby they set up a blackboard in the youngster's room. Each chore is written in a different colored chalk, each day of the week is listed and there is space for the required check marks. Chores listed are: walks; and number; grooming; feeding; washing the dog's eating and drinking utensils; giving fresh water; training; with space left for the amount of time devoted to this aspect of dog care; and if play. These are all the basic ingredients needed to keep a dog happy and healthy. Make it a game rather than a chore and offer some form of reward for a perfect score; an extra movie during the week, perhaps, or a time tacked on to the weekly allowance.

If there are two youngsters of responsible age, divide the chores up and let the youngsters compete for the highest score. Have them rotate chores each week and offer an extra bonus to the over-all winner at the end of the month.

THE OLD PASTURE WELL. Somehow the well in the pasture comes back in memory to me. Over the hill-trails of childhood back from the dear used-to-be. There's where we helped with the haying. Down where the wild daisies came. There's where we watered the horses. Petted and called them by name. Happiness comes with my memories. More than I ever can tell; Life is sweet yet—but "I'll never forget, Down by the old pasture well. —Dert Gamble

The cotton picker was first used in the United States in 1837.

It should be remembered, however, that these are "people areas", too. No longer maintained as "wilderness refuges", these places are serving the full purpose for wildlife—plus additional values for human recreation.

Many people question Leonard on how the development and maintenance of these areas are financed. Under the exception only of Farragut, all areas qualify for federal aid funds provided under the Pittman-Robertson act. This results from the collection of taxes on firearms and ammunition which is allocated to the land areas of the United States.

In other words, federal aid money pays for 75 per cent of the cost of developing and maintaining wildlife management areas in Idaho.

Management areas are divided into two classes—those which provide a wide range for big game, and those which provide nesting and feeding grounds for waterfowl. Additional dividends come in the form of many species of upland game birds and good fishing waters on some of the areas.

An example is the North Lake management area in Jefferson county. Harper listed at least six species of ducks and Canada geese which nest there. These, along with antelope and deer, sage grouse and pheasants, are bagged each fall by hunters. These are bagged each fall by hunters. These are bagged each fall by hunters.

He listed these as (1) areas to produce and provide for as much wildlife as is possible, and (2) areas where people can enjoy this wildlife as much as possible.

Application for social security during January 1960 showed a decrease of 28 claims over the same period last year, according to W. V. Nusbaum, Manager of the Lewiston Social Security office. During 1959, 107 claims were processed during the month of January, and 79 claims were processed during the like period this year.

Mr. Nusbaum wishes to remind all persons reaching retirement age during the first six months of 1960 that it takes 4 1/2 years of work under social security to qualify for benefits. Many persons still believe that it only takes a year and a half prior to retirement age to qualify. For each year that elapses the quarters of coverage required to draw social security is increased by two, according to Mr. Nusbaum.

If you have any doubts about the quarters of coverage which you require, you should get in touch with the social security office, 1113 Main Street, Lewiston, Idaho.

Schulthesis Named Aphid League Head

Gene Schulthesis of Colton, was elected president of the Idaho-Washington Psa Aphid Control League at an annual meeting at the Clearwater Power Co auditorium. Gene succeeds Jess Johnson of Genesee.

Other officers chosen were Oscar Theissen of Tammany, vice president as well as director to represent Nez Perce County. Roger Allison of Lewiston was re-elected secretary.

The league gave approval to plans for a new aphid survey scheduled to begin April 1. If unchecked, the aphids move into the pea fields in early summer and destroy the plants.

GHS Bulldogs Stop Orofino 46-40; Beaten By Troy

Genesee had a second half scare Friday night when the Orofino Maniacs threw a full court press at them, but the Bulldogs clung to their lead and finally fought the visiting quintet 46-40. Saturday night the GHS squad traveled to Troy where the Trojans clinched the White Pine hoop title by crushing the Bulldogs 60-44.

Hosting the Orofino Maniacs Friday night, the Bulldogs pulled out to a comfortable lead early in the game and were enjoying a nine-point, 25-19 advantage at intermission. When the Maniacs came out for the second half they threw a tight full court press against the Kanikkee boys and baffled the locals so much that the visitors closed the scoring gap to only one point, 39-38, before the Bulldogs could adapt themselves to the pressing defense and pull back into a substantial lead.

David Baumgartner paced the winning Genesee effort with 13 points. Genesee also took the B game 51-31.

Troy Wins 60-44
Troy clinched the first place position in the White Pine Conference Saturday night when the blasted GHS Bulldogs 60-44 on the Trojan court. This was the seventh league win for the Troy team against the Bulldogs, but only one more league game and that against the Kendrick Tigers whom they have previously beaten.

The loss gave the Bulldogs a 5-win, 2-loss record in conference play this season. The local hoopers have league games with Deary and Elk River left on the schedule.

At Saturday night the Bulldogs were not match for the sharp-shooting Trojans who ran up a 41-24 advantage during the first two quarters. Loren Parr of Troy dumped in 22 points for Genesee. Troy won the B game 41-36.

Valentine Cookies For A Sentimental Surprise

"Be My Valentine" is sweetly stated with this pretty heart-shaped arrangement of crisp, golden Valentine cookies, colorfully decorated with icing or cinnamon candies. Made with floury 40% Bran Flakes, the cookie dough is easy to prepare but requires chilling before it's rolled and cut into heart shapes. After baking, decorate them to your heart's content, and see what a sentimental surprise they make for the family and for guests.

ORANGE FANCIES (VALENTINE COOKIES) 2 cups sifted flour 1/2 cup soft butter or margarine 1 cup sugar 1 1/2 tablespoons grated orange rind 1/2 cup milk 3 teaspoons baking powder 1/2 teaspoon salt 3 cups Kellogg's 40% Bran Flakes Sift together flour, baking powder and salt. Crush Bran Flakes into fine crumbs; mix with sifted dry ingredients. Blend butter, sugar and orange rind. Add sifted dry ingredients alternately with milk, mixing after each addition. Chill. Roll chilled dough out very thin on lightly floured board; cut with floured cookie cutters. Place on lightly greased baking sheets. Bake in moderately hot oven (400° F.) about 10 minutes. Remove from baking sheets. Decorate in one of the following ways: (a) Fill a pastry tube with white or colored confectioners' sugar and pipe designs. Decorate edges of hearts. (b) Using white corn syrup, brush heart outline on cookies. (c) Apply small cinnamon candies to corn syrup, as pictured. Yield: about 5 dozen cookies, 2 1/2 inches in diameter.

The Lipstick Vanishes!

Lipstick on his shirt? You can give him all he wants with a cute Valentine surprise introduced by the makers of Arrow shirts.

Back in the days of the Roman Empire, Valentine's Day began in a gentle old custom which dictated that if a boy or girl kissed the first person he or she met on that day, that person would become the sweetheart for the whole year. In memory of this custom the Arrow Valentine shirt collection is patterned in red dots, red hearts and, of course, red lips. However, the designs utilize a water soluble dye and disappear after the first trip to the laundry—leaving an all-white business shirt!

Clifford Hillman who is employed in Pasco spent the weekend with his family. Carol Hillman visited last week with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Heimgartner in Clarkston Heights.

Mrs. Miriam Vandenberg and Lenie were supper guests of Mrs. Hillman and family last Wednesday eve. Miss Ethel Johnson spent Tuesday at the Vernon Peterson home. Bill Postivo was a supper guest. John England spent Tuesday night with David Peterson.

A. W. Brunt, former party chairman and prominent Idaho Falls reactor, said that as the decade of the 60's begins, the people of Idaho are vitally concerned with the perplexing issues confronting them. Among these are uncontrolled inflation, artificially-produced light money policies, declining farm profits, depression in the mining and lumbering industries, conservation of water resources, modernizing and expanding the educational system to meet the challenges of tomorrow, and a healthy prosperity on the main streets of Idaho towns.

"Idaho has been sidetracked because of the inept efforts of its Republican senator," he said. "Just as an example, the minutemen missile went to Utah when the Naval Ordnance Plant at Pocatello was a better location. Yet this senator sits on the AEC committee where one would think he might have had some influence in bringing such projects to Idaho. "In this complex society," he continued, "the decisions of government are an extremely important role in the progress of our state. We find ourselves in stiff competition with other states for projects that bring to our state payrolls and industrial stimulation."

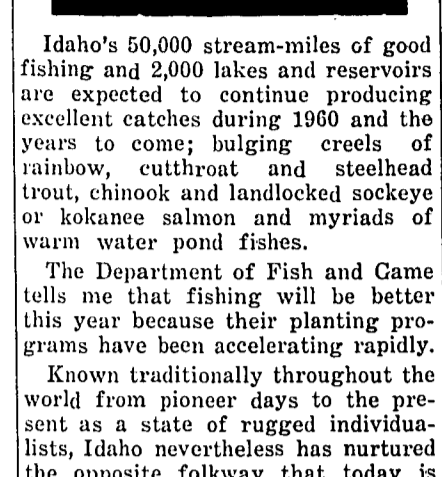

Brunt, 50, is a native of Idaho. He was born in 1909 in Idaho Falls. His father, George Brunt, was one of the pioneer business men and builders of Idaho Falls and East Idaho. He operates his own real estate agency which has been one of the leading home builders in Idaho Falls and Idaho. He has served as secretary and vice president and president of the Idaho Falls Real Estate Board and the Idaho State Real Estate Assn. He has been a national director of the National Association of Real Estate Boards; and regional vice president for Idaho, Montana and Utah of the National Home Builders Assn. and just completed serving as an executor of that association.

He is an active LDS church leader, presently serving as ward bishop. Democratic nomination for U. S. Senator, declaring need for more effective representation than Idaho is getting from Republican incumbent Henry Dworshak.

Report from the GOVERNOR

Idaho's 50,000 stream-miles of good fishing and 2,000 lakes and reservoirs are expected to continue producing excellent catches during 1960 and the years to come; bulging creels of rainbow, cutthroat and steelhead trout, chinook and landlocked sockeye or kokanee salmon and myriads of warm water pond fishes. The Department of Fish and Game tells me that fishing will be better this year because their planting programs have been expanded to meet the needs of the state.

Known traditionally throughout the world from pioneer days to the present as a state of rugged individualists, Idaho nevertheless has nurtured the most fishery that today is called "togetherness" where fishing is concerned. Most angling always has been done when the kids are out of school during the slow-paced vacation months of June, July and August when entire families and out-of-state friends and relatives take to the hills.

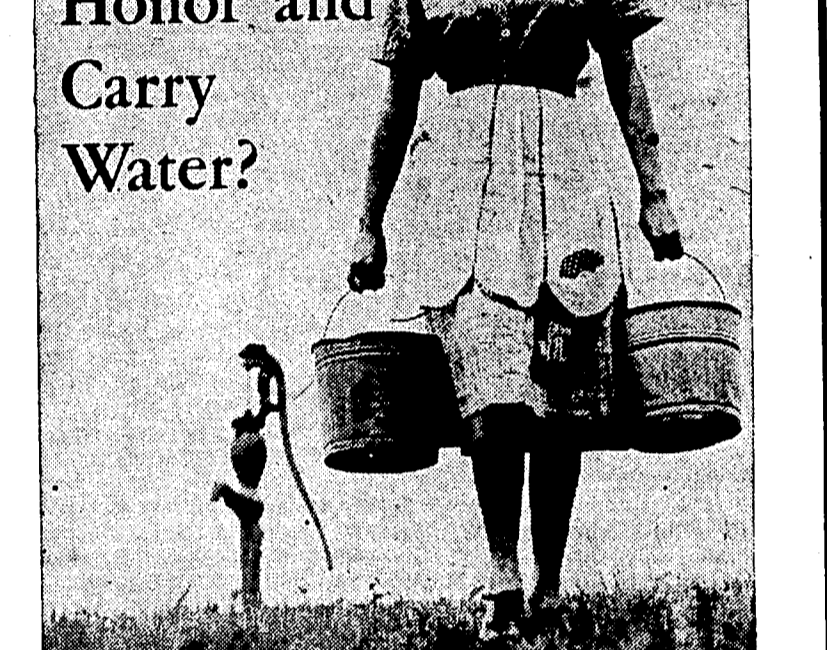

No crystal ball is needed to foresee vastly increased surges of people, native and non-resident, enjoying themselves along the state's fishing waters. Of course, there always will be "loners" such as the man who landed the giant sturgeon, reputed to weigh in the neighborhood of 1500 pounds, from the Snake River near Weiser in 1898, and the Spokane barber who last fall boated the second largest rainbow trout on record. The biggest Kamloops ever caught with rod and reel also was an Idaho trout taken from Pend Oreille lake in 1947. It weighed the whopping 37 pounds. A 51 pound Mackinac was caught at Priest Lake several years ago.

Such catches naturally engender nationwide and even international publicity which will attract more tourists. Even without them the pressure on fishery resources will grow. Records show that well over 235,000 licensed anglers made almost two and one-half million fishing trips to Idaho's lakes and streams in just one year. And they caught fish. On an average they made just over 11 trips per man, woman and licensed youngster, each taking almost 53 trout during the season. Many anglers also caught chinook salmon, steelhead, kokanee and a multitude of other species. There was an exception. The Governor did not catch 63 fish. He tried, but apparently the fish are smarter than he is. No matter how good it is, how can the state's fishery resources hold up to this kind of pressure and that expected to come during this decade? Sound management programs by the Fish and Game Department, and acceptance of these policies by the public, are the answer. Last year 15 state hatcheries produced a total of 633,308 pounds of fish, a record somewhat greater than the amount for 1958 and less than the goal for this year. Almost as important is the fact that new fish transportation units haul a greater number of pounds of trout per load, and deliver the fish to Idaho streams in much better condition. Lake and stream rehabilitation by removal of non-game fish from competition with trout is another growing practice which increased the number of piscatorial beauties available per stream mile. Last year more than 253,000 pounds of carp were eradicated from just one relatively small lake under this program. Similar projects were undertaken in other parts of the state. These are just two examples of what is being done under a continuing program of modern fisheries management that is gauged to meet present and future pressures on the wildlife resource. And the program is self-supporting because it is financed primarily through the sale of fishing and hunting licenses to residents and tourists alike.

DO YOU KNOW

Now we are told that if you are touchy, it is not an intellectual problem, but emotional. Gifted individuals with a lot of common sense can become as sensitive to supposed slights as downright ignorant people. They are always starts with a conviction of not being wanted or appreciated, and leads to no peace of mind, if not downright illness. The cure? Remember many people are more touchy than you are. Stop feeling so important. Laugh at yourself once in a while, and always try to be friendly and understanding.

The Washington Water Power Company has one of the lowest residential rates in the nation. While the price of bread and automobiles has doubled and tripled, electric rates have been held down by operating economies and short-cuts. Now your electric company has reached a point where rates must be changed to meet labor costs and material costs which are still rising.

I see by the papers that Memphis, Tennessee, a public power town that pays no one penny of federal taxes, and very little other taxes to help with national security, farm subsidies and other government needs, has been forced to raise electric rates 18.5% immediately. "Costs of doing business are more than we can absorb," was the explanation. Wonder what public power would do if 23c out of each revenue dollar was taken for taxes?

If you own an insurance policy, and look forward to old-age security, chances are that some of those insurance funds are in the hands of your private electric company. In addition to insurance, the Washington Water Power Company has some 22,000 stockholders who depend upon company security and growth for money help in old age. (Adv.)

Merchants Met Wednesday Noon
Sixteen members of the Genesee Association met Wednesday noon, February 17, at Genesee Cafe for their regular monthly meeting, presided over by Bill Emerson, president.

At this meeting was a representative from radio station KRPL in Moscow who discussed the problem of the merchants sponsoring the high school basketball games during the forthcoming Second District tournament.

The majority of the merchants present felt that unless the radio station could guarantee that all the games sponsored by the organization would be direct, live broadcasts, it would not be worthwhile to undertake such an undertaking. Inasmuch as the proposal could not guarantee that the merchants would be able to discuss this matter until further studies could be made by the officers.

Will Spenser Queen Candidate
The Merchants also approved a motion that they sponsor a girl for the Community Day Queen contest. The young lady has not yet been chosen from a list of eligible girls.

SNOW SURVEY NEWS
Morlan W. Nelson, state snow survey supervisor for the Soil Conservation Service, gives the following report on the snow survey for the Spokane, Palouse, Clearwater, and Salmon Watersheds.

The general outlook is for below normal spring and summer runoff on all the watersheds in the area. The snow line is at a low elevation this year giving the impression of an above average snow pack. In reality, the water producing areas in a well below normal snow pack and can be expected to produce low runoff. The situation is improved somewhat by the presence of moist silt beneath the snow, thus allowing the snow-water to run off rather than being held in the soil mantle.

On the Moscow Watershed the bi-monthly snow survey shows an average increase of only 3 inches of snow with 8.2 inches of snow water over the month of January. The watershed is still well below the average for the last 3 years.

On Feb. 19, the Moscow Mountain snow course measured 31 inches of snow and 8.5 inches of water. This is a decrease of 11 inches of snow, and 6.1 inches of water from the same date last year.

East Twin snow course has 24 inches of snow, and 7.4 inches of water as compared to 23 inches of snow, and 8.3 inches of water of Feb. 14, 1959.

Fire Destroys Farm Home Friday Night
A fire, apparently starting in a faulty fuse and whipped by a strong wind, destroyed a seven-room, two-story home located on the G. D. Roseman farm two miles northeast of Genesee late Friday night. The house was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Box and their five children, who escaped without harm.

According to Mr. Box, he returned to his home about 10:30 p. m. and his wife was in the kitchen preparing a snack for him when she smelled smoke. Mr. Box went outside to investigate and found sparks shooting from the flue. He said he tried to climb on the roof to check the chimney and fell back due to the combination of rain and snow that was rapidly coating the roof. He then returned inside the house and went upstairs where he found that the fire had broken through the wall and ceiling and had too much of a start for him to try and put it out.

Mr. Box then had his wife take their children from the house and sent his two oldest girls to the Lee Davis home a short distance away to phone the Genesee Fire Department and he started moving furniture and appliances out of the house.

Although the Fire Department responded immediately and were at the scene of the blaze within ten minutes, the fire-whipped winds was already under control by the time the first truck arrived. All the firemen could do was to concentrate their efforts on preventing the fire from spreading to a nearby garage, which they successfully did.

The house was completely leveled by the blaze, but fortunately Mr. Box and volunteers recovered a great number of the family belongings, including refrigerator, stove, washer, couch and some other items. There was no immediate estimate of the cost of the fire-ruined property.

The Box family spent the night with friends.

EDITORIALS

SPENDERS OR SAVERS?

Writing in U. S. News & World Report, David Lawrence points to "the most important question before the Congress." It is whether the expected federal budget surplus for the coming fiscal year (estimated by the President at $4.2 billion) shall be spent, or applied to the reduction of our national debt. As he puts it, "Shall we become 'spenders' or 'savers'?"

There is small doubt what will happen if the spenders rather than the savers have their way. The surplus will be dissipated, there is every possibility that a deficit will take its place, the already weakened dollar will become weaker in world money markets, and there will be new rounds of inflation. In this connection, the President made a remark of the utmost significance: "Personally, I do not feel that any amount can be properly called a surplus as long as the nation is in debt. I prefer to think of such an item as reduction on our children's inherited mortgage, and once we have established such payments as normal practice, we can profitably make improvements in our tax structure and thereby truly reduce the heavy burdens of taxation."

Finally, Mr. Lawrence posed another big question in these words: "What presidential candidate will espouse the doctrine of paying off the public debt by annual contributions from surplus." The country deserves—in this election year—an unequivocal answer.

CENSORSHIP BY TAXATION

The following editorial is reprinted from the American Press: "The cost of advertising to promote or defeat legislation or to influence the public with respect to the desirability or undesirability of proposed legislation is not deductible as ordinary and necessary business expense even though the legislation may directly affect the taxpayers business."

"That is quoted from the newest proposal of the Internal Revenue Service for clarifying its regulations on propaganda advertising. "Perhaps a clearer way to say it might be, 'Freedom of the press and freedom of speech are hereby repealed by order of the Internal Revenue Service.'"

"For under the proposal, even though a businessman was faced with the prospect of legislation which might ruin his business, he would be prohibited from appealing to his fellow-citizens unless he agreed to pay Uncle Sam a high tax-premium for the privilege. "Although leaders in advertising and business have been doing their best to fight this vicious scheme for censorship by taxation, they are sorely in need of public backing and grassroots rebellion against such regulation."

"The House Ways and Means Committee is now considering the proposal in connection with rewriting of the Revenue Act. We urge editors to join the fight against this new threat to freedom through their editorials, through letters to their Congressmen, and through appeal to their readers."

BUNK CONCERNING FOOD

"At present more bunk is being peddled to the public concerning food than on any other subject." That forthright charge came some time ago from a man we should know—Wallace F. Janssen of the U. S. Food and Drug Administration. He made it in a talk before members of the American Dietetic Association.

He said: "Modern nutrition education needs to acquire a new dimension—emphasizing the ability to question and to recognize and reject what is false and unscientific. Teachers need to keep up-to-date on the latest dietary nonsense; teach regarding what is not true, or is merely speculation, as well as what is true." He then dealt specifically with certain dangerous representations of foods as medical cures, such as carrot juice for leukemia, apple cider vinegar as a general cure for all ills, and high blood pressure, lecithin for coronary disease, powdered grapefruit for diabetes, Vitamin E for muscular dystrophy, and royal bee jelly for sexual rejuvenation and as a cosmetic.

The vast majority of people of all ages, need a balanced diet—the kind of diet that is obtained from the standard foods offered in every grocery. Above all, a substantial proportion of protein in the diet is essential to both physical and mental health—the kind of protein that is found in the meat and fish products.

There is, of course, a small minority of people who require special diets because of disease and deficiencies. But no such diet should ever be adopted except on the advice of a physician.

U. S. Will Increase Lead Over Russia In Electrical Power Says WWP President

The United States' lead over the Soviet Union in electric power supply will increase from 124 million kilowatts to about 134 million kilowatts by 1965, a gain of ten million, according to Kinsey M. Robinson, President of the Washington Water Power Company. U. S. versus Russian power production can be found in a report just released by the Edison Electric Institute, Robinson said. "This report presents the findings of two delegations of American electrical industry representatives who toured the Soviet Union in 1958 and again in 1959 at the request of the U. S. Department of State." At the end of 1959 the Russians had 59 million kilowatts and the United States had 183 million kilowatts, the report states. The difference between the two was then 124 million kilowatts. The Russian goal for 1965 in the Soviet seven-year plan is 110-112 million kilowatts. Total capacity for the United States is expected to be 245 million kilowatts in 1965. By that year the gap will have widened to about 134 million kilowatts, an increase of 10 million kilowatts over the lead in 1959. In discussing the Soviet goals for 1965, Robinson pointed out that the present Soviet seven-year plan contains a revision of the Russian goal that proved over-optimistic. While the original plan called for electric production of 230.2 billion kilowatt-hours in 1967, actual output was 200.7 billion kilowatt-hours, about 9 percent under the goal. "The present seven-year plan seems to set more reasonable targets for the Soviet economy," Robinson noted that a key indicator of a nation's total productive capacity and its people's well-being is kilowatt-hour per capita. For the United States in 1959, compared with an estimated 1161 kilowatt-hours per capita for the Soviet Union. The Russian goal for 1965 is about 1481 kilowatt-hours, compared with an estimated 1161 kilowatt-hours per capita for the United States. Robinson commented that although the United States now has about three times the hydroelectric capacity of the Soviet Union, both nations have approximately 80 percent of their facilities in steam and 20 percent in hydro. By 1965 the Russians expect the proportion of hydroelectric production to be reduced to about 15 percent. Construction of steam plants is to be emphasized in order to produce more electricity in less time and with less capital required. Turning to transmission facilities, Robinson pointed out that in 1957 Russia had about 46,500 miles of transmission lines of 35,000 volts and above. That year, the United States, with about one-third the Russian's, had 240,000 miles of comparable transmission lines, more than five times as much as the Soviet Union.

Top American Farmers Invited By Ford Motors To Visit Latin America

Twelve top American farmers were invited this week by the Ford Motor Company to visit Latin America and the Far East on "missions" to promote world peace through agricultural cooperation. Henry Ford II, company president, invited the first winners of the Ford Farm Efficiency Awards to attend. The trips are a means of advancing peace by "discussing farming on a person-to-person basis" in these areas.

Before presenting plaques to the farmers at an awards banquet in the company's Central Office Building, Mr. Ford said that U. S. governmental agencies "have agreed enthusiastically to their stamp of approval on these visits."

The award-winning farmers, assembled from 11 states, were cited as typifying the best in American farming. They were selected for demonstrated knowledge, skill and efficiency in various types of agricultural work.

"I believe that you, as individuals," Mr. Ford told the award winners, "can do a great deal to help advance our country's efforts to achieve world peace and cooperation—As representatives of American agriculture and of the American way of life, you will be able to discuss farming on a person-to-person basis with people who have problems and goals similar to your own."

National and state agricultural leaders, including True D. Morse, the Under-Secretary of Agriculture, were among the nearly 200 persons who attended the banquet. The all-expense paid, month-long overseas trips, for the farmers who accept the invitation, will begin in late March. One group will tour Mexico, Costa Rica, Panama, Colombia, Peru, Argentina, Brazil and Venezuela. A second contingent will visit Turkey, Pakistan, India, Thailand, Hong Kong and Japan.

Activities for each country to be visited are being developed by the U. S. Foreign Agricultural Service and the International Cooperation Administration of the U. S. State Department.

The American farmers will meet with key agricultural leaders in each country, study significant developments and trends, and discuss their

General trout season begins June 4 except on lowland lakes in the five northern Panhandle counties, which open May 1. Except for local changes, the 1960 fishing laws in general are the same as those now prevailing. Format of the new regulations will be the same as last year—16 pages when folded to pocket size. ACCIDENTAL FARM DEATHS DECREASE IN IDAHO

The number of accidental deaths in Idaho agriculture declined nearly 50 per cent in 1959 compared with the previous year, according to a report this week by W. W. Benson, registrar of vital statistics for the state board of health.

There were 13 fatalities last year. In 1958 there were 25. The figures were compiled for the Idaho Farm Safety committee. Benson is chairman of the accident reports and encouraging. He said it gives evidence that the statewide safety program can be effective. "Although we do not know what factors are responsible for the substantial improvement," he said, "the record speaks for itself, and we believe it may be credited, at least in part, to public cooperation with efforts of the safety committee."

The report showed a marked decrease in fatal tractor accidents. 12 people were killed in tractor mishaps in 1959. Last year tractors were involved in only four fatalities. Tractor safety is one of the major educational programs of the safety committee.

W. E. Adams, Eagle, committee chairman, said the report is gratifying and encouraging. He said it gives evidence that the statewide safety program can be effective. "Although we do not know what factors are responsible for the substantial improvement," he said, "the record speaks for itself, and we believe it may be credited, at least in part, to public cooperation with efforts of the safety committee."

4,505 Lose License to Drive Vehicle After Convictions

Drivers licenses of 4,505 motorists were revoked or suspended by the Department of Law Enforcement during 1959, according to an annual report released this week.

Heading the list were 1,077 drunken drivers whose licenses were mandatorily revoked following their convictions. Of that number 40 per cent made formal application for restricted permits to drive their cars under certain conditions or at specified times. Restricted licenses were issued in accordance with the Idaho statute to 48 per cent of those making application.

The report showed that 209 of the applicants were unable to receive restricted permits because of their failure to meet the statutory requirements for the issuance of a temporary restricted license. Some thirty-seven of the applications were denied when convicting magistrates failed to recommend the restricted annual dividends, the VA explained, and 25 air-hours were used in Idaho to count the 578,350 resident waterfowl this winter. Last year there were 706,000, the highest number during the past six years.

The second largest group to lose their licenses was 1,523 motorists whose licenses were suspended under the safety responsibility law. A suspension of a license in this category is for an indefinite period until the driver complies with the safety responsibility law instead of for definite periods such as 30 days, 60 days or one year. A driver whose license has been suspended cannot apply for a restricted drivers license. Suspended for 30 days, 90 days or one year following their convictions for reckless driving were the licenses of 1,885 persons, who also were suspended for a restricted period.

Listed as habitual offenders and denied licenses in addition to mandatory revocation or suspension were 220 drivers. This group's revocations were based on multiple convictions for moving traffic violations or more than one drunken driving conviction or three or more reckless driving convictions.

A total of seven drivers lost their licenses by revocation after they were convicted of negligent homicide. Of the total number whose licenses were revoked or suspended, 33 had the action revised or nullified by court action and one other driver was placed on probation for a year.

Veterans Given Insurance Advice

More than a million veterans who have GI life insurance policies are using their regular annual dividends to guard against the loss of their insurance, the Veterans Administration said this week.

The VA recently announced that $25,500,000 in dividends would be paid during 1960 to more than five million veterans and servicemen who hold participating GI insurance.

The proportionate share of this national 1960 dividend total to be paid to Pacific Northwest veterans is $4,011,150 to an estimated 79,026 in Washington State; $2,893,800 to 57,582 in Oregon; $39,600 to 18,743 in Montana; $834,600 to 16,714 in Idaho and $148,200 to 2,989 in Alaska.

GI policyholders may have these annual dividends held—with interest—by the agency as a credit to pay premiums monthly if the policyholders fail to pay them before the end of the 31-day grace period.

This procedure is followed automatically if the policyholder does not request other disposition of his annual dividends, the VA explained, and the policyholder has two other options.

He may use his annual dividends to pay policy premiums in advance, or he may request the VA to pay his dividends in cash, the VA said.

Holders of permanent plan policies have a third option. They may authorize the VA to hold annual dividends on deposit with interest and subject to withdrawal on request. The money and accrued interest will increase the value of the policy, the VA added.

A policyholder who wishes to change his dividend option, should write to the VA district office which services his policy, the VA said, making sure to include his insurance number and to state his new option.

THIS GOOD LIFE

This good life may be identified by a camping trip, a new hit play, or a quiet evening at home. But here in America it is really much more than these or other material things.

More than anything else, the good life is brought about by the freedom to choose your own way. This freedom, which is yours for every decision from a brand of fishing tackle to your choice of a career, makes life rich and exciting.

And what provides the information for your choices in material things? Probably advertising. It tells you what is available... makes even the everyday choices interesting and fun.

Advertising is information. So long as our mental appetites are stimulated by the freedom of choice offered through advertising, we will continue to be an alert, progressive nation.

FISH AND GAME NEWS

Besides establishing 1960 fishing regulations, the Idaho Fish and Game Department approved 20 federal aid projects for wildlife management and authorized two land purchases by the State department.

It also cancelled one beaver trapping season in the Big Wood river drainage and extended another from May 15 to May 30 in Bear Lake county. The first was because the population trend shows that beaver protection is needed above Magic Valley dam, while the other was due to numerous damage complaints from farmers.

Lava lake in Blaine county was opened to fishing on a year-round basis because of the prospect of rough fish removal in the near future to rehabilitate the waters. Another provision provides for the dipping of cisco fish in Bear Lake.

One of the land acquisitions will be ten acres at Lewiston Orchards to provide a new site for the north Idaho fish and game laboratory. This is to be moved because of costly flood control work necessary at the old location.

The second property is vital spawning waters for kokoi and trout located at Sullivan Springs on Granite creek, a tributary of Lake Pend Oreille.

Federal aid projects include development of maintenance projects at Hagerman, North Lake, Boundary refuge, Star Lake, Sand Creek, Market Lake, Albani Falls, Gold Island, Boise and Payette rivers access routes and C. J. Strike.

Other federal aid projects authorized include game habitat improvement, sage grouse studies, testing and increasing returns of hatchery trout and trout fishery investigations on the Middle Fork of the Salmon and Blackfoot rivers.

Hunting Season Casualties Lowered
White Idaho cut 1959 hunting season fatalities by five under the 1958 figure, six deaths remain that many tragedies to their families and friends. Altogether, there were 40 casualties during the season as compared to 11 fatalities and 34 injuries caused by hunting accidents during 1958.

Wildlife Pulling—March 20-26
Pierre Pulling, biology professor at Idaho State college, has been named as chairman to direct statewide activities this year in connection with the 22nd annual observance of the U. S. A.

Idaho has over 40,000 miles of public roads, yet only one-fifth of the entire system is either Forest-developed roads or on the Forest Highway system.

Idaho's population is less than 2 1/2 persons per square mile in Forest Highway area.

This Idaho has only 60 miles of Forest Highway per million acres of National Forests.

This scientific report indicates that the Congress has not yet begun to fill this unmet need. It is time that the Congressmen and Senators from the heavily populated area realize the magnitude of our problem and begin to shoulder their responsibilities.

Here are important facts concerning Idaho, taken from the 124 page report, which indicates the State's potential need for increased development of Forest highways:

Idaho's population is estimated at 640,000—ranks 43rd in U. S. A. Idaho covers more area than 34 of all the other States—ranks 13th in the U. S. A.

Sixty-five per cent of the area of Idaho is Federal-owned lands. The largest per cent of the area of Idaho is in National Forest—ranks 13th in the U. S. A.

DO YOU KNOW

The fastest ground ride on earth is on a rocket sled, which travels on rails over a seven-mile course at speeds over 1000 miles per hour. In Russia the state assigns a dozen scientists to the seven-mile problem of friction heat alone. In America, business and industry hire good minds, put them in a laboratory, and use profits from business to pay for similar research. So when people want to eliminate the profit system, and substitute government control and "business without profits," they are talking to you slowly into the Russian socialist system. Don't let them do it.

We see by the papers that a special committee just returned from Russia where they went to study electric power development. Take a moment and look at the committee members—one, the general manager of the public power association; two are former members of the Reclamation Bureau (public power advocates) under Truman; one, a public power promoter named Clyde Ellis, who manages an off-shoot of the rural electrification program. You can expect them to come back and report in favor of public power; that power development will lag unless the government takes things over. Don't be fooled by their report. America is ahead in power development.

The WWPCC is cooperating with the many reputable electric and gas dealers in the Inland Empire to protect customers against unsatisfactory installations. The company believes that a satisfied customer is the best advertising that any business can have. Everything possible is being done to raise the standards of installation and to insure our customers many years of satisfactory service.

Twenty-three cents (23c) out of each dollar you pay for electric service goes for taxes. Taxes go to pay for roads, schools, national defense and other services of government. Don't you think the PUDs should pay 23c also, instead of about 7c?

THE STORY BEHIND THE WATER CONSERVATION STAMP

The fact that water is a vital and limiting natural resource is dramatized by the latest in a series of conservation commemorative postage stamps—the 4-cent water conservation stamp to be issued in Washington, D. C., on April 18, 1960.

Work with potatoes was carried on at the Aberdeen branch station. Bean defoliation studies were conducted at the Twin Falls branch station and the Lewiston field station.

RESEARCH PROVIDES GUIDES TO HAILSTORM DAMAGE

Next time a hailstorm hits an Idaho potato or bean field—and there are certain to do just that this coming summer—an accurate estimate of probable crop loss can be made almost immediately. University of Idaho agricultural research has provided the guides.

HOW TO GET AND SEND 'FIRST DAY COVERS' CONTAINING THE WATER CONSERVATION STAMP

A "first-day cover" is a souvenir envelope, mailed to yourself or to anyone else you choose, from the one Post Office chosen for the first-day issuance of a new stamp. The stamp is available only in that Post Office on the day of issuance, and does not go on sale elsewhere until the following day.

The first day Post Office (Washington, D. C. in the case of the water conservation stamp) upon request and receipt of properly addressed envelopes and a remittance to cover the cost of the stamps, will place the water conservation stamp on your envelopes, cancel them with a special cancellation mark used only on that day and at that place, and mail the envelopes on the first day of issue. This makes the envelope a valuable souvenir and collector's item, for those interested in stamps or in the occasion or movement the stamp commemorates.

Various companies print envelopes for this particular use. They usually contain photographs, slogans or other material relating to the subject of the stamp. You can get special first-day envelopes for the water conservation stamp from the Washington Post, 43 William St., Newark 2, New Jersey. We're informed that the price for these will be 20 for $1.35; 50 for $3.25; 100 for $4.50.

YOUR Social Security QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Question— I've been reading one of the pamphlets on disability benefits under social security, and I've been wondering whether a temporary disability can qualify a worker for disability benefits under social security?

Answer— No. A remedial condition that will improve with time or that can be treated without significant risk to the patient's life or health, is not considered disabling.

Dogs Life

DOG NAPPING

By Bob Bartos
Manager, Wildlife Research Kennels

Dognapping is an insidious crime. Owners whose dogs are taken are helpless, for no amount of advertising or searching will bring back their pet. All they are left with is sad uncertainty. Has their dog been hit by a car? Is he wandering around lost? Has he been taken in by some family and if so, is he being fed and cared for in the manner to which he's accustomed?

The reason a stolen dog is seldom seen or heard of again is that dognappers work rapidly.

They rush your dog across the state line and sell him fast to the first buyer, generally for less than the dog is worth.

Hunting dogs are prime targets, for owners are apt to let them run loose. This makes it easy for them to be picked up. Then, too, there's an ever-ready market for the good hound or bird dog and when the price is right, a bargain is hard to resist.

If you value your dog, it's well to take precautions that will foil the dognapper. Your dog should be obedience trained to stay around the house; if not, he should be confined to a pen. Never let your dog run loose unless you're with him. Train him never to accept food from strangers, for most dognappers use food for bait.

If you'll include the word REWARD on your dog's identification tag, the thief may figure that the reward may bring a greater profit than a quick sale, so it's a safeguard worth trying.

Feeding Tip: Fish is desirable in a dog's diet because of its high nutrient quality. The feeding of a top quality prepared dog food such as Friskies, which contains fish meal in adequate amounts, provides this good nutrition without the hazards of fresh fish. Fresh fish may transmit tapeworm, or protozoa. And there's also the ever present danger of fish bones.

Special Landholder-Sportsman Meet

Senator Don Fredericksen, chairman of the Idaho Landholder-Sportsman Council, held a special meeting in Boise to develop "all possible opposition" to a plan by California interests to lease large acreages of private lands for the exclusive hunting privilege of its membership.

The meeting will be held Friday, February 26, in the House of Representatives chamber in the State Capitol building. According to Sen. Fredericksen, "all sportsmen object to anyone attempting to come into Idaho and use state-owned wildlife resources in a promotional scheme to make a fast buck."

Earlier, the department released a statement which said in part: "The Fish and Game commission already has the authority to close any area in the state to hunting at any time. If this legal action is not broad enough to stop the attempt to subvert the principle of hunting and fishing for the good of all the people of the state, legislation will be introduced to provide additional authority."

In other words, any legal action possible to stop this promotional venture will be used to incorporate under the name, "Associated Sportsmen of America."

Game Report Cards Show Trends
Over 85,000 hunter report cards have been analyzed to disclose the following trends:

Most big game animals last fall were killed opening day or week ends. Back country hunts were the exception because ninerds stay several days or more.

Half of Idaho's unique bighorn sheep harvest was taken the first five days.

Likewise for Rocky Mountain goats.

Sixty-eight per cent of last year's elk kill was in October, and 23 per cent in November. Elk were over bagged in September, the rest in December.

Bull elk predominated in the Sept. harvest, while the kill the sexes were about equal in October. Cows outnumbered bulls in the kill ratio for November and December.

Write More Clearly, Please
Over 6,000 written requests for wildlife information were analyzed by the department last year—and more would have been except that some of the letters were illegible or had improper addresses. Non-resident requests formed the bulk of the mail, which increased about five per cent over 1958. Most of these were for fishing and hunting information, but many asked questions about businesses of management and operations.

RECORD IDAHO FISHING HITS SOUGHT
The most unlikely campaign in the world is underway in Idaho. It's an effort by the Fish and Game department to get anglers to tell about the biggest fish they ever landed in the state.

Marshall Edson, editor of the Wildlife Review, started the campaign a couple of issues back, contending that the world knows Idaho produces the best fish. But how big? That is the question.

Readers have come forward with authenticated reports—weights, dates and other data.

Here are some of the results. Can you beat 'em in any class?

Mistakes Cause Most Traffic Mishaps

Most Traffic Mishaps

In almost every motor vehicle accident, whether it results in deaths, injuries, extensive property damage or just a scratched fender, one or more traffic violations probably have been committed. Traffic safety director, Robt. McCall asserted this week.

Even though no citations have been issued, there is almost always some violation which leads to a violation and on to the accident and its disastrous results.

Speeding violations, for instance, almost invariably are accompanied by one or more of the numerous moving traffic violations catalogued as the chief causes of accidents. Speeding itself might not be the cause of an accident if there is no other vehicle, object or person nearby. Speed enters the picture when some other violation is committed and death or severe injury results.

The impact of a moving vehicle, a person or a fixed or moving object, if a car hits a fixed object or rolls over, is increased with excessive speed and the "bumps and bruises" become deadly and severe injuries.

While speed might not have been the direct cause of a particular accident, excessive speed makes it more difficult for a driver to control his vehicle if he has swerved to the right side of the road. The force of the impact, if a car hits a fixed object or rolls over, is increased with excessive speed and the "bumps and bruises" become deadly and severe injuries.

It is expected that a new record will be set, however, because of poor weather conditions for hunting during a good part of the season.

New Hampshire, with an Atlantic coast line of only 18 miles, has the shortest shore line of any state.

U. OF I. MOVES TO STOP PRANKS ON CAMPUS
A "get tough" policy on outlawed pranks such as trophy snatching among fraternities and sororities was adopted this week by the Interfraternity and Panhellenic councils at the University of Idaho.

A student tribunal was established to deal with pranks, with punishments ranging from fines to recommendation that a group's charter be revoked.

The student leaders agreed to permit in season water and snowball fights between groups, but the duels will be strictly "formal" affairs, no more imprudent clashes. No water or snowball fights can take place between groups without first the exchange of a challenge and acceptance.

Water fights are not to be in the area of Paradise creek, and snowball fights must be in open areas away from houses.

FOOD COSTS IN WORK TIME

The industrial worker in Italy labors almost 12 times as long as the American workman to earn a pound of coffee. The French worker is on the job more than five times as long to provide a pound of beef stein for the dinner table.

Bread, the most universal of foods, costs American and Canadian workers approximately five and one-half minutes of working time for one pound of enriched white bread. A pound of white bread in Austria costs 20 minutes in working time; in Belgium, seven minutes; in Denmark, nine minutes; in France, 12 minutes; in West Germany, 15 minutes; in Italy, 16 minutes; in the United Kingdom, six minutes.

A nine country food-cost-in-industry study conducted by the National Industrial Conference Board, a non-governmental research bureau, shows that industrial workers in the United States spend only a few cents more than that of other countries for their food. The survey pointed out that the price of the meal was highest in the United States—was 40 per cent higher than in other countries, for example, could purchase the meal at approximately half the price paid by an American, and the West German worker spent only a few cents more than that States spent one hour's pay in 1958 to provide a meal for a family of four. The meal consisted of white bread, 7.2 oz.; potatoes, 1 lb., 5.2 oz.; cabbage, 1 lb., 12.3 oz.; butter, 1.4 oz.; milk, 1 quart, and apples, 1 lb., 5.2 oz. The individual servings cost:

Idaho's Army National Guard Army construction program is moving ahead in high gear again after the lull experienced in 1959. It is now progressing at a healthy pace. But, if future army construction in Idaho is to continue, guard units in every community will have to be maintained at authorized strength levels.

The Army National Guard currently undergoing an intensified recruiting drive to boost its strength to 4,000 men by the end of June. Accomplishment of this campaign requires the fullest cooperation of every one of us.

Since the beginning of the army construction program in Idaho in 1955, 14 structures have been completed at a cost of $1,221,651. This month bids were opened for two additional armories at Jerome and Rigby. A third army at Twin Falls is slated for construction start later this year. Bids are expected to be opened about June 1.

This leaves armories at Preston and Orofino to be completed by the 1957 legislative appropriation. I am hopeful bids for these projects can be called for prior to the end of 1960.

In 1959 this program experienced a slow down because of the difficulty in obtaining the release of Federal funds. As a result, only the Idaho Falls armory was constructed. It will be ready for occupancy this month.

The lag stemmed largely from reorganization of national guard units throughout the country. Federal money was not authorized because of the uncertainty of how many units would be maintained in each state and their location. We were fortunate. Reorganization was completed in our State last July without the loss of any national guard communities.

Evidence that the program has recovered can be found in the fact that we will spend approximately $400,000 for additional facilities this year. If the Preston and Orofino armories are authorized before the end of the year, this will mean construction of nearly $200,000 more worth of buildings. Cost of these buildings is borne by the Federal Government, State and counties or cities on a matching basis.

The last session of the State Legislature appropriated $206,000 to Idaho Army National Guard for additional armories. But the key to expansion of our guard facilities will require continued support of each community. Failure to maintain the strength of local guard units can mean the loss of those units to the communities where they are presently located.

I am sincerely hopeful we can continue to maintain each and every unit and provide adequate facilities for our guardsmen. They do an important job in an outstanding manner.

One of my goals when I took office as Governor of Idaho in 1955 was to see that the State's guard units were adequately housed.

Never before in the history of our State's militia have we provided the men of this organization with the type of facilities necessary to prepare them to be ready for any defense emergency.

We have moved far out in getting this job done. We must make sure that the task is completed.

Wednesday was Ash Wednesday, the beginning of the Lenten season. Soberness now until Easter Sunday.

The Erickson people who came here from Dakota a couple of months ago, moved to the Moscow country this week where they purchased a farm.

The entertainment given last Monday evening by the people of St. Joseph's school was enjoyed and appreciated by a large audience.

Little Mary Kries recited her welcome very sweetly. Young Amadeo Bibeau was sober and earnest as any judge, whilst young Peter Johann, notwithstanding his German blood, took off the Irish valet with much credit.

This closed the program of the Dr. dePuy as an intermezzo Gussie Rosenstain entertained with a brilliant piano solo, and a poem "Don't Fret" was the pleasant advice of little Dorothy Driscoll.

The larger boys gave a little play, March 14, 1896.

MARCH
I love you March—because you come to waken
The star-eyed buttercups and daffodils;
For take my lonely heart—
so long forsaken
Down sweet remembered trails and kindly hills.
You sing to me of days to come—and clover
When vernal equinoctial storms have gone;
You sing of days when I—a rambling rover
Will find that happiness
lives on and on.
I love you March—and there is no forgetting
The rapture that your rampant wild winds bring;
My heart is filled with joy and no regretting
I know you'll tide me on to spring. —Bert Gamble

FISH AND GAME NEWS

No Limit On Perch
It's worth repeating that the Fish and Game Commission removed the bag limit on perch, effective April 1 (as are all the 1960 Fishing Regulations). Heretofore a limit of 60 fish has been in force on the tasty perch, and this somewhat hampered the activities of anglers who like to freeze, pickle or otherwise preserve them.

Big Game Wintering Well
Now is the time of year when it's possible to take stock and determine how the state's whitetail and mule deer are wintering. Sportsmen and game management workers are interested particularly in how the deer fawns are faring because the brunt of winter falls on them, along with the injured, sick and overaged.

Reports from all over the state almost unanimously say that the deer picture again is bright this year. A relatively mild winter has followed on average or better deer harvest. Fawns are nibbling the forage that their harvested seniors probably would have eaten. Warm spells have greened patches of grass on south-facing, sun-bared slopes. The deer, young and old alike, have remained scattered and healthy.

Water Taken As Theme
The third full week of this month has been set aside as the 22nd Annual observance of national Wildlife week, with the theme, "Water—Key to Your Survival." Pierre Pulling, Idaho State College biology professor, has been appointed state chairman of the event. This is a time to focus attention on the ever-increasing demands for water, for hydro-electric power, for irrigation and for wasteland storage for flood control, preservation of wildlife, scenic values and others.

The 1960 Wildlife week now in the offing will serve an important cause if it dispels some of the public indifference, lack of understanding confusion and conflict that surrounds this vital issue.

STEPS TO AID HEART ATTACK VICTIMS GIVEN
Six steps to be taken in case of a heart attack have been prepared on attractive gummed stickers for free distribution by the Idaho Heart Association, Dr. Richard Forney, President of the Association announces.

"Designed to be placed in a medicine cabinet or first-aid kit, this information sheet tells the public what to do for a person stricken with a heart attack while waiting for the doctor to arrive," points out Dr. Forney.

It advises:
Keep calm, keep patient calm.
Help patient take position that is most comfortable for easier breathing, usually propped up.

Do not attempt to carry or lift patient without a doctor's supervision.
Loosen tight clothing such as belts, collars.

See that the patient does not become chilled, but do not induce sweating with too many blankets.
Do not give patient anything to drink.
To secure a copy of these suggestions," Dr. Forney urges the citizens of Idaho to postcard to the Idaho Heart Association, 320 Eastman Building, Boise, Idaho.

FINAL DATE FOR ORDERING TREES FOR WINDBREAKS, ETC.
Final date for ordering trees for windbreaks, Christmas trees and forest plantings fast approaching, announces Honore Futtler, Latah County Agent.

Many farmers have used these trees which are made available at a minimum cost by the Clarke McNary Nursery at the University of Idaho. Deadline for ordering these trees is March 10 and order forms may be obtained at the County Agent's office.

What amount of wages must a farm worker be paid to receive a quarter of coverage?

Answer—
Farm workers can earn a quarter of coverage for every $100 in cash wages they are paid in a calendar year. With agricultural wages of $400, four quarters of coverage may be credited for a calendar year.

Report from the GOVERNOR
"Working Out the State Budget is a Rugged Task."
In about six months now we will be presenting to the public the financial document which will blueprint suggested operations of your State government for the two years beginning July 1, 1961.

Putting the fiscal house of State government in order for that long a period in advance is a rugged task. It involves some guess-work based on anticipated costs, but what is mainly involved is long and detailed study of how public policies approved by the Legislature can be made effective in terms of dollars and cents and people and materials.

A budget is nothing more than a financial road map. It is a statement of policy in dollars and cents. It is not a means of extracting tax money from an unwilling citizenry. It is not a mechanism to confuse or to direct Legislative action, but rather it is an honest appraisal of the amounts of money necessary to finance a given program.

The purpose of government is to serve the people. The citizens are the final and sole judge of the quality and quantity of the service.
Once the budget is enacted, we know our destination and during the time the budget is in operation we can determine our performance in terms of our objective. After the budgetary period has been completed, we can determine whether or not we have reached our destination.

It is not enough that a budget is in balance—that revenue is equal to or exceeds expenditures, though that is a prime consideration. Rather we must be certain that we accomplished the objectives that were planned in the budget. Many times these can be measured in quantitative terms—as in the case of highway construction.

But more and more expenditures are flowing into the fields of social service and education where the amount of quality enters the picture in subjective terms. Each citizen has his own assessment of how good the service has been in these fields and a quantitative measure is not much help.

I have begun by talking about the public's evaluation of the budget since we must never lose ourselves in the details of our own financial house. Rather we must follow the public's estimate based on their general view of how the job is being done.

The mechanized, tabular accounting system now in use by the State Auditor is providing more information and providing it earlier than ever before. The accounting system which the state uses was adopted in the early 1940's pursuant to a survey made by Lincoln G. Kelly and Associates. At that time provision was made for eventual introduction of machine tabular accounting devices.

Percentages must be used sparingly in budget analysis. Budget projections have got to be made much as a brick wall is constructed—brick by brick. You tell the custodian how many mops he used this year and ask to use next year. You ask him for his own best judgement. Having built a budget by beginning with specific items and then moving to general items you can start applying percentages. Even so, these are only guide posts.

A budget is not the place where new ideas in governmental service should be first announced. It should be a road map for the execution of already approved legislative decisions. This is the only way in which the public will be accomplished.
In putting together a budget we are devising a budget we try to be mindful that every dollar that is projected for expenditure has come out of some taxpayer's pocket. Building the state budget is not much different than running a farm or a house or a business. You try to get the best possible values out of what you have to spend.
After working over six statewide budgets, I am sure of one thing. You seldom make very many people really happy. Fiscal responsibility to often requires saying NO. But without fiscal responsibility it would not be long until there was no money at all and then the people's services would gring to a halt as they have in some states which have not been so careful over the years as we have here in Idaho.

Isn't it the truth? After a person makes his mark in the world, a lot of people start coming up with ersatzers.

A little boy was busily practicing the piano when a salesman came to the door.

"Is your mother at home?" asked the salesman.

"What do you think?" replied the boy.

White Will Seek Senate Nomination

Compton I. White, of Clarkfork, Idaho stated this week that he will be an active candidate for the Democratic Nomination for the United States Senate. The Senate seat is now held by Henry Dworshak, of Burley, Idaho.

At present, Compton White is the mayor of Clarkfork, Idaho and a local livestock breeder who has also been actively engaged in mining and logging. When asked concerning his decision to change from his first stated desire to run for Congress from the First Congressional District, White stated, "Many of my friends have requested that I seek the Senatorial Nomination and augment the effective representation at the National level now being provided by Congresswoman, Grace Post and Senator Frank Church."

White further stated, "Although the field of candidates for the Democratic Nomination for the United States Senate is an impressive one, I believe the representation that I am able to offer to the people of the State of Idaho will be well received."

Compton White has been a resident of the State of Idaho for his entire 39 years. He is married and has 6 children. The young Senatorial aspirant said his platform would be based on sound and efficient government procedures with particular emphasis on the problems of the people of the state of Idaho and their relationship with the Federal government.

He is the son of the late Compton I. White Sr., who for 16 years represented the people of Idaho's First Congressional District in Washington, D. C. Young White is no stranger to the Nation's Capitol, having lived there for 8 years and having attended George Washington University before returning to Moscow, Idaho, to attend the University of Idaho.

10 YEARS AGO Honor roll for last six weeks at St. Josephs includes: Nancy Rabdau, David Hasfurthur, Nancy Jo Johann, Ann Becker, Jan Johnson, Marie Hasfurthur, Crystal Esser. Linda Springer celebrated her 5th birthday Thursday, March 2 with a party at the home of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Art Springer. Celebrating her 6th birthday on Tuesday, Dawn Hoduffer had guests at a party in her home.

Adrian Nelson, Oscar Danielson and Don Johnson who attended the purchased Hereford sale in Walla Walla Monday, Nelson purchased a yearling bull; Danielson became the owner of two bred heifers and Johnson purchased three heifers.

20 YEARS AGO Miss Bonnie Hayden who is to be married to Tommy Ikard was given a bridal shower Saturday afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. Tom Wahl are the parents of a son born Wednesday, March 13th at Colfax.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Nebelsieck are the parents of a son born March 10 at their home here. The baby has been named Gary Ray.

Dorothy Kleweno, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Art Kleweno was taken to St. Josephs hospital last Saturday to receive medical treatment.

30 YEARS AGO No. 5 in the Old Fiddlers Contest at Pullman Thursday won first place. He was accompanied by Dick Green on the mandolin.

Cuvier M. Ehlen who has spent the past 5 months in Europe has again returned to the United States. Mr. Al Mayer entertained 10 boys last Wednesday evening in honor of her son, Glen whose 11th birthday anniversary was that day.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Cameron were given a surprise last Sunday night when several friends and neighbors went to their home to spend the eve. Miss Elsie Wieber who is remembered by Mrs. Elliott of Genesee as Juvenile delinquents were asked in New York what they would take to keep them straight. They said: 1. Firm discipline as to hours and friends. 2. A happy home where they could bring their friends. 3. Instruction on how to earn a living. It looks as though Number 1 is a matter of parent delinquency. Number 2 also traces back to papa and mamma. That's where to start with naughty kids.

What do you know! Down in the TVA area, where they pay to federal taxes for power, and where easy money is dished out from the federal treasury by the barrel-jill, the average customer uses 7,865 kWh. per year, and pays an average of 1.07 cents per kWh. Can believe the TVA 1959 report. Up here in WWP area, where 23c of each dollar revenue goes for taxes and money is borrowed at standard interest rates, the average customer uses over 8,000 kWh. annually, and the average price is 1.22 cents per kWh. Rates WWP could offer would indeed be low if it didn't pay taxes!

More than 33 million people cook with gas today, and more than 2,000,000 have converted to gas heat in the past 10 years. There must be something about gas heat that makes a man sleep good, and appeal to his pocket book.

Over the past few weeks, quite a few staunch REA members have told me that they, too, agree that an REA is not public power. "We are just as much part of private business as the grocery store," they say. So again ask, why are some REA spokesmen trying to pull local REAs into the camp of public power? Is it a personal ambition, or plain socialistic thinking?

Oh, oh! There's a mistake in my recent statement that 30 million people take tranquilizers. The figure should be 30 million and one. I bought a package to try them last night.

being born in Uniontown and a pupil in the schools there and at Colton, but now in Spokane, is singing opera in Europe.

60 YEARS AGO Good weather, flowers in bloom, no fire in the parlor; chicks are rolling out, and sleek cattle. Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Jain are the happy parents of a bright baby girl born March 8th. Grandparents, Mrs. Elizabeth Jacobs of west of Genesee came into possession of the Nels J. Visky quarter section east of Genesee. Consideration $3475. The attendance is so good at the Genesee public school that the board deemed it advisable to hire a 6 grade teacher. Monday Cecelia Spurbeck was hired and will start Monday.

A yearling steer was sold last week which weighed 930 pounds. The price 4 1/2c and brought the owner $41.85. Sure does pay to raise stock. Frank Geselchen is packing up, preparatory to leaving for some new location. The Star saloon will be opened up later.

Our young men and boys should have better training. They are out night carousing till 1 or 2 o'clock, and parents have no business to raise children until they can bring them up right. Boys 14 to 20 are so darned smart now they know more than their parents. These boys are watched by the community. We want an industrious boy; faithful, and honest, not one who thinks he is smarter than his father, not the top, the nasty cigarette smoker.

Old Genesee 1890 Matt Oldberg is this morning a very happy father. Dr. J. L. Hayes we believe would make an efficient marshal. Doc is all grit and nerve backed with some darned good judgment.

If you have no money to pay your subscription, bring us a load of wood. If you have no wood, bring us cabbage, potatoes, turnips, or anything we can utilize. We keep house and have to eat. Remember the poor printer.

Leviston and Camas Prairie are determined to have railroad facilities and with Spokane's help we doubt not that they will succeed. Time of Leviston and Moscow stages have changed. They now stay overnight in Genesee, and leave each way next morning at 5:00 a. m. This gives Leviston's mail 8 to 9 hours sooner as the stage will arrive there about 10.

Spring is here; hear the song of the robin and the chirp of the ground squirrel. A good bank is wanted in Genesee. Herman Bros. have purchased the Steltz and Co. stock of furniture and have moved the same to their store. Oliver Bros. weatherboarded their blacksmith shop this week.

price. The test of value is not what the article used to cost, or what a retailer claims is its worth, but how much it costs today as compared with the same or similar articles at other stores. Stick to name-brand goods. An unfamiliar brand might be a good buy, but if the price looks suspicious take another look. Be extra careful at a discount house. These innovations in the retail merchandising world have done much to bring about price competition, it is true, but to be on the safe side shop at the well-established ones, and make sure the price quoted is for an appliance that can't be carried home includes all charges, including delivery and installation. Idaho is joining the ranks of other states in evaluating the problems of our senior citizens during the forthcoming year. Preparations will be made for the first White House Conference on Aging in January, 1961 giving impetus to the development of programs to improve the environment of our older generation.

The first step in our regional preparations for the initial meeting of the newly formed Governor's Commission on Aging, Mr. A. E. Montgomery, Vice-President of the Boise-Cascade Corporation, is Chairman of the group and Bill Child, Commissioner of the Idaho Department of Public Assistance, has been appointed Executive Secretary.

Need for wide public understanding of problems of the aging stems from the simple fact that we all are living longer. In 1900 only 4.1 per cent of our people were 65 and over. In 1950 the percentage had almost doubled having reached 8.0 and was continuing to rise rapidly. In 1900 the average male had a life expectancy of 46; the average female, 48. In 1952 the life expectancy for males was 66, an increase of 20 years, while the average female expectancy rose to live to the age of 72, an increase of 24 years.

The Commission on Aging will consider the many facets of the problems of our senior citizens such as physical and mental health, income, security, employment and vocational rehabilitation, leisure time activities, housing, local community organization and voluntary services. I hope there will be a subsequent mobilization of resources to make these later years fruitful and dynamic rather than years of dull existence.

The thirty-nine members of the Commission represent a cross-section of Idaho life. There are members from industry, labor, the medical and nursing professions, state and local government, religious, civic and fraternal groups. Working with them will be a coordinating Inter-Departmental Committee comprised of executives and staff members of the Department of Education, Health, Employment Security, Labor, Commerce and Development and Public Assistance.

The Governor's Statewide Conference on Aging is scheduled for May 9 and 10. It will be the next important step in Idaho's quest for information on these problems. Strong community leadership, motivated by humanitarian ideals, will be needed.

THE DANGER OF SPEED IS SHOWN IN WINTER TRAFFIC ACCIDENTS IN STATE "Nature has provided an undisputed, perfect example of the truth in the summer traffic safety slogan, 'Slow Down and Live' by furnishing some of the most unfavorable winter conditions Idaho has experienced in several years." Traffic Safety Director, Robert B. McCall asserted this week. Although the number of accidents during the first half of January increased about 50 per cent over other months and over other similar periods in January of past years, the number of persons injured declined about 50 per cent and the death toll is below the number in January for the past four years.

Instead of futile attempts to slow drivers down with massive arrests and warnings or appeals for safe driving, they were slowed down by nature which dumped snow on the highways and streets almost every day during the period. When the snow showed any signs of melting, temperatures dropped to form ice on the lower part of the state's thoroughfares.

When bad weather conditions prevail, fewer people are using the highways and those who do are driving from necessity. They are aware of the "unusual weather" and the hazardous conditions that prevail. Within the towns and cities, the near-normal number of cars are taking people to their jobs and businesses, but the drivers of those vehicles, too, are traveling slower. Snow and ice caused an increase in the so-called "minor accidents" but because of slower speeds there were fewer injuries and even fewer deaths.

Under normal conditions, averages throughout the year show that urban and rural accidents are just about on a par. Idaho any accident within an incorporated municipality is classed as urban, while the National Safety Council considers urban areas only those cities with 2500 or more population.

The first two weeks of January, 1960, saw the 985 reported accidents divided 626 for urban areas and 359 for rural areas and highways. It would be well for every driver next summer to remember the condition Idaho streets and highways were in during January—snow, ice and the worst or gray conditions. If they will slow down, there won't be so many dead and injured for us to report to the press," McCall said.

After we obtain the true overall picture of senior life in Idaho, we can determine the needs in each locale. Each area of responsibility to the aged will be brought in sharper focus; personal, community, state and nation.

Some states are leading the field with well-defined programs for their elder citizens. Special housing is being developed, medical care is being extended, adult education centers and even special parks are part of the picture in some of these states.

Following the State Conference on Aging, the Commission will evaluate the findings at a follow-up meeting in bank and make recommendations for the future as well as outline suggestions for the state report to be completed for the White House Conference. Recommendations also may be made on the possible creation of a permanent Idaho Commission on Aging.

An Act of Congress is making the oldest citizens of the state more active. A grant of state funds is authorized to help defray the costs of a State Conference to prepare for the White House Conference. What will we learn about these problems in the next few months? Present statistics and facts are incomplete and inconclusive. Some of our communities undoubtedly will report well developed programs of activities and services to the aged while other sections will reveal glaring gaps in needed activity.

Never before has such a survey and study on the aging been attempted on a national level. It is with a great deal of anticipation that Idahans are joining in this study. It is important to all of us. These are problems that can't be swept under the rug.

U. S. VERSUS BRITISH SCHOOLS

If we accept the views of some critics at face value, American schools are in bad shape. Standards are woefully low. Other countries, such as Britain, are so far ahead of us as to be practically out of sight.

This kind of criticism, and the very serious questions that arise from it, caused the U. S. World and News Report to look into the British educational system and to compare it with ours. The results of the study, under a London dateline, appear in the magazine's March 7 issue. And the picture, from the American point of view, is a good deal brighter—despite some cloudy patches—that the extreme detractors of U. S. education would have us believe.

The article starts out with the big question—do British children get a better education than their American counterparts? And that, it finds, can't be answered with a simple, unqualified "Yes" or "No." The answer, instead, is divided: "It is true for a minority—the very brightest children in Britain. It's not true, on the whole, for the majority of youngsters."

It is important to understand that there are fundamental differences between the British school system and ours. As the magazine puts it, "In Britain, the bright pupil gets practically all the breaks." If it is decided, when he is 11, that he is among the top 25 per cent of pupils in his district he is eligible for a special school, and is destined to get much more education than the mill-run of children.

Britain's famous "public schools"—which are in reality private schools, with tuitions running to $1,500 a year—are widely and deservedly praised, as are her great universities. But only about 7 per cent of British children go to those schools. Moreover, Britain, is near the bottom of the list of nations—25th—in the proportion of population attending universities. The U. S. is first, in this regard, and Russia is second.

U. S. News observes: "Many educators say the big difference between British and American schooling is this: Americans believe that all children should have the opportunity of equal education. The British believe in educating an intellectual elite by limiting the opportunity of higher education to a tiny minority."

Britain does seem to be ahead of us in certain areas. Educators are high in their praise of what is known as "streaming." This is a system by which children are assigned to classes on the basis of intelligence, so the bright child will not be held back by the dull. And British schools seem to be much more advanced in maintaining discipline than is generally true on our side of the ocean.

But American education has its virtues, too. As a matter of fact, Britain is borrowing ideas from U. S. Education, and is particularly interested in providing greater educational opportunity for more children. Here's the conclusion U. S. News reaches after its close study: "The conclusion reached after a close look at the educational system in this country is this: The theory that British schools are better than American schools doesn't hold water as a general proposition. The brightest pupils go to school that, on the whole, are appreciably better than most American schools. But the vast majority attends schools that are inferior to those in America. And, for most, school days end at a very early age, by U. S. standards."

SOCIAL SECURITY CLAIMS

SHOW DECREASE IN FEBRUARY. Social Security claims clearing thru the Lewiston District Office in February, 1960 were 14 less in number than the same month last year (1959), according to W. V. Nusbaum, Manager.

During February last year, 134 claims were cleared. This year 120 claims were processed.

Time required in clearing claims differs in each individual case. The average time from filing to receipt of the first check is seven weeks.

According to Nusbaum, persons should file a claim 30 days before they reach retirement age. This allows the office time to process the claim and assure prompt delivery of the first check. Social Security checks are payable after the month has passed. For example, persons reaching retirement age in February are entitled to a check until the end of February. This check is delivered the first four or five days in March.

Mr. Nusbaum stated that if persons interested in filing a claim would telephone or write the Social Security office prior to their visit it may save them an additional trip to the office. Persons sometimes have to return home to secure statements of household pets such as dogs and cats. These lovely animals can become delinquent when given a lot of time to roam fields and forests. Dogs often run in packs, becoming predators of game animals from young-of-the-month to grown deer. Many owners seem unaware of the dog's natural instincts to get away from home.

Had they inquired before filing it would often have saved the claimant and the local office several days of time, according to the district manager.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Question— I have worked for a farm employer during the months of May, June and July. My cash wages for the farm work are $535.00. Do I only get credit for the quarter in which I work?

Answer— You not only get credit for the quarter in which you actually performed the services but since your agricultural cash wages were in excess of $400.00 it is possible to receive as many as 4 quarters of coverage even though you did not actual work in the other periods of the year.

Management Area Improvement. Approximately $15,500 will go for improvement of the C. J. Strike wildlife management area on the Snake river this year in a continuing program of development. Projects scheduled are an 800-foot earth-filled dike to form a pond on recently-obtained land, and a 250-foot channel to connect a pond with an old channel.

FISH AND GAME NEWS. Boise Hosts Study Group. Alaska, Hawaii and all other western states are represented in Boise this week by migratory waterfowl technicians of the Pacific flyway. The two-day meeting of the study group, March 16-17, is preparatory to passing along their recommendations to the Pacific Flyway Council, which is composed of Fish and Game department directors from all western states, including Alaska and Hawaii.

Commercial Licenses Expire. Commercial fishermen and operators of private fish ponds must renew their licenses by April 1. Licenses are necessary to make commercial catches of blueback kokanee salmon and whitefish in north Idaho, and to operate private fish ponds for public use. Commercial licenses are limited to state residents of not less than six continuous months. The fee is $10 each, and applications may be obtained from conservation officers.

GARDEN CLUB TO MEET MARCH 28th. The Garden Club will meet Monday, March 28th at the Genesee Union High School. Hostesses will be Mrs. Wilson Esser and Mrs. Gene Woodruff.

Slides will be shown on scenic Idaho, and there will also be a plant and bulb exchange.

Delinquent Household Pets. This is the time of year when reminders are in order for owners of household pets such as dogs and cats. These lovely animals can become delinquent when given a lot of time to roam fields and forests. Dogs often run in packs, becoming predators of game animals from young-of-the-month to grown deer. Many owners seem unaware of the dog's natural instincts to get away from home.

RUPERT MAN IS FEBRUARY DRIVER OF THE MONTH

Nearly a million miles of driving with a citation or accident, together with a multitude of acts beyond the call of duty, won a 48-year-old Rupert man the February Driver of the Month Award. Harry C. Borchardt has fused his vocation and avocation into a combined force for better driving habits and accident prevention during a 21 year period in which he has dealt with all kinds of motor vehicle accidents. "This man is one of the finest examples of a self-taught traffic expert in the country," commented Roy G. Thomas, Idaho State Police officer who nominated Borchardt for the monthly award.

The Rupert man is the third Idaho person to be named Driver of the Month and receive a $100 savings account in a program being sponsored by Gem State newspapers, the Idaho First National Bank and the Department of law enforcement. The savings account was presented to Borchardt by Bob Reed, manager of the Rupert office of the Idaho First National Bank.

The new driver of the month does a lot of driving every month in his official capacity as operator of a wrecker for a Rupert garage. Since he took over the duties in September, 1958, he has "worn out" three wreckers, driven approximately 900,000 miles, "covered thousands of accidents involving more than thousands of damaged vehicles and witnessed every type of traffic injury and every degree of personal injury."

"Mr. Borchardt always strives for perfection in doing his job, but most important he always finds time to direct traffic and assist law enforcement officers with their work," said Thomas. "If that weren't enough, he quietly performs many acts of kindness for the victims involved in these accidents," the police officer went on to say.

"As an example, a recent one-car accident was particularly gruesome because of the two deaths that resulted and the fact that the car had landed in a drainage ditch containing water," Thomas reported. "When he relative of one of the victims asked about a missing purse, Borchardt quickly waded into an ice-encrusted ditch to find the purse belonging without any concern for his wet clothes which he happened to be wearing when the emergency call came through."

Residents of this area take a lot of stock in Borchardt's observation about driving habits, the officer said, for no other reason than that he is not actually a law enforcement officer, but an ordinary citizen who can combine common sense with rule of the road and come up with better-than average views about safe driving.

RAISIN CASSEROLE BREAD

This raisin casserole bread recipe comes from the files of Mrs. H. H. Schuler and is a favorite of her family. She serves it with hamburger soup and 24-hour loaf. Mix together and cool to lukewarm: 2/3 cups hot water, 1/2 cup sugar, 1 1/2 tsp. salt, 1/4 cup shortening. Measure into bowl— 1/2 cup warm water, Sprinkle in and stir until dissolved. 2 pkg. active dry yeast. Add lukewarm mixture:

Add— 1 beaten egg, 3/4 c. sifted flour, 1 cup raisins. Stir until blended, about 2 minutes. Let rise 50 minutes. Beat vigorously about 1/2 minute. Turn into greased 1 1/2 qt. casserole. Bake uncovered 375 d. oven about 45 minutes.

The process is ridiculously simple and inexpensive, one known to mankind for centuries, yet becoming a lost art in these days of the deep-freeze.

It's what the state's fish and game laws describe as "fried, smoked, evaporated or jerked" meat fowl or fish. Construction of a smoke "house" varies almost with the personality of the builder. An angler without ice can preserve his catch by quickly smoking even though he has little away from civilization and has miles more than his hands with which to improvise.

At home, all he needs is an old refrigerator, dry-goods box or even a barrel. In other words, all that is needed whether in town or in the woods is some type of box which doesn't even have to be air-tight. The refrigerator's shelves are reduced to the extent of all to convert into smokers because metal racks already are installed, and hooks for hanging meat and fish can be added. A venison neck, but any lacking handcraft skills can remove rubber insulation from around the door to achieve the same result.

All that is required in the way of meat can be supplied with one-burner electric plate. Hardwood of any kind is best for smoking, with hickory, maple, apple or even willow recommended. Soft woods give off heavy amounts of soot in burning; any that is deposited on the meat or fish, making it dark in color and rank in flavor.

In the field, it's best that the smoker unit be removed from the meat to avoid to much warm air and prevent overheating the fish. This can be done by placing the box on a slope a foot or two from the fire, then digging a connecting tunnel that will carry the smoke up to the smoke box. The main thing to remember is that the smoke must flow continuously, although slowly thru the unit.

The fish should be cleaned and washed thoroughly, then soaked in brine containing about one and one-half cups of salt to one gallon of cold water. Small fish will need more than 12 to 18 hours of soaking; bigger ones will take double that amount. The exact time depends on individual taste.

For meats and fowl, brown sugar and saltpetre are added to the brine. The action of saltpetre is similar to that of salt except that it also gives the meat a reddish or pink color. Sugar softens the harshness of the salt, improving the flavor. A good solution is three pounds of salt, one pound of brown sugar and six ounces of saltpetre to three gallons of water. Meat may either be dipped into this boiling solution for a short time before smoking, or soaked about 24 hours in the cold mixture.

The found commonly is used for smoked meat, the inside of the thigh being considered the choicest piece. This should be cut lengthwise of the grain so that the muscle fibers may be cut crosswise when sliced for table or snack use. After smoking, it can be hung in a cool dry place (away from flies) where water will evaporate from it. Smoked meat can be used any time, although the longer it hangs, the dryer it will become.

Smoking aids in the preservation of meat and gives it flavor and palatability. Cressets formed by the burning wood closes the meat pores to some extent, excluding the air and making it somewhat objectionable to insects.

Here are a few points to remember about smoking meat, fowl or fish. Ample ventilation should be provided to carry off warm air in order to prevent overheating. Small openings or a vent in the roof are sufficient, or a vent in the side, if controlled. The box should be constructed so that the smoke will pass freely over the contents and not be subjected to coniferous types. Resinous woods should never be used because they are liable to impart bad flavors to the product. Corn cobs make a good substitute for hard woods and may be used if desired.

New Federal Boating Stamp Is Explained

Effective April 1, 1960 boats of more than ten horsepower operated on the navigable waters of the United States MUST be numbered under the Federal Boating Act of 1958, the Coast Guard announced today. Vessels documented by the Bureau of Customs are exempted from this Act.

On that date the Coast Guard will start receiving applications for numbers in those states which have not yet adopted their own numbering systems. These states include Idaho and Washington.

Applicants for Federal Certificates of Number may obtain application forms at local Post Offices. The completed application form and a $3.00 fee must be filed with the Post Office. At that time a blue, $3.00 Federal Boating Stamp will be affixed to the application and a temporary certificate will be returned to the applicant. This certificate will serve as proof of compliance with the law until such time as the application has been processed by the Coast Guard.

The permanent Certificate of Number will be issued the boat owner will be an embossed plastic card that is similar to a gasoline credit card. The temporary identification until the Guard number to be affixed to each side of the bow of the boat by the owner and must be on board whenever the vessel is in use. A number awarded by the Coast Guard will be valid from the date of issuance and for 3 years from the date of the owner's birthday next occurring after the certificate is issued. Documentary proof of title and ownership is not required by the Coast Guard with application for number. Application blanks may also be obtained from any Coast Guard Marine Inspection Office, but the fees must be paid at the Post Office.

Even though Boats have been previously numbered by the Coast Guard prior to March 31, 1960, applications MUST be made for a new number on April 1st under the Federal Boating Act; however, the previous number and certificate may be retained for temporary identification until the new number is issued. Boat owners may continue to operate their craft legally if they have applied for renumbering paid the required fee and retained proof of payment.

CENSUS CREW LEADERS RECEIVING TRAINING. Crew Leaders from the district comprising the First Congressional District of the state are meeting in technical training sessions this week at Lewiston. From Latah county, Mrs. Julia Bush is learning the very technical and extensive procedure involved in enumerating the some 180,000 citizens of the United States during the 18th Decennial Census Sessions are being held daily from 8:00 a. m. to 5:00 p. m. Monday through Friday under the direction of Mrs. Pauline Jacobs, Technical Officer. Crew Leaders will return to their homes to in turn train the enumerators who will be under each Crew Leader's direction in their home districts.

It will be the combined resources of public states and efforts of law enforcement that will reduce traffic accidents and their gruesome results in Idaho and throughout the nation.

"All of us must improve our thinking about traffic accidents and never relax our efforts to eliminate the greatest single killer in the nation. There will always be a growing need for a continuous concentration of forces to improve attitudes, enforce traffic laws, modernize law enforcement, highway engineering and vehicles that travel on the public thoroughfares," it was pointed out.

THREE GAME MANAGEMENT TOOLS USED TO GET HUNTING DATA IN IDAHO

With Idaho's deer harvest last fall reported to be almost exactly the same as it was during 1958, and the elk kill slightly less because of bad weather early in the season, the state Fish and Game department explained this week how such conclusions are reached.

After all, 70,000 deer and 13,500 elk represent a lot of meat even when figured in round numbers. How are these statewide totals tallied?

Levi Mohler, chief of game management, reports that three different "tools" are geared to provide several aspects of the same picture—some what like the falcon blind men examining an elephant—except that each method corroborates the others and adds up to one final conclusion.

The game management chief says that the trio of fact-finding systems are checking station data, hunter report cards and the more comprehensive post season harvest questionnaires.

Mohler stresses that checking station workers usually set up where hunter traffic is heavy, or where a large number of game animals can be examined in a short time. In 1958, for example, check stations handled 14,150 deer, 4,865 elk and smaller numbers of antelope, bear, moose, bighorn sheep and mountain goats. Data collected in this way provides accurate ratios of animals examined, indicating herd composition trends, as well as the weights and the like.

Since the cost of individually checking every hunter is prohibitive, hunter report cards have been used in Idaho since 1957—and over 85,000 of them have been returned to the Fish and Game department for the 1959 season.

"The important thing about hunter report cards is that they provide statewide information on a day-to-day basis as to how the hunts are going in all areas," Mohler averred. "During seasonal peaks, we receive two or three thousand cards daily—and analyzed them as they came in."

Harvest questionnaires are more comprehensive, covering upland game birds and waterfowl as well as all big game taken in the state. These are mailed to a reliable statistical sampling of all persons who purchase hunting licenses—and the response is excellent.

News Ads Bring Results. Suds Shine TV Screen! There's nothing magic about a television screen. It's just glass and can be treated like other glass surfaces. Wash your TV screen with a soft, lint-free cloth wrung from thick soap or detergent suds. The cloth holds enough suds to clean the surface, but there's no excess water to leak into the crevice between the screen and the case. Rub lightly in one direction to avoid streaks. Wipe with a clean damp cloth, then dry with a soft towel.

In a household with children and pets, laminated wood or plastic cabinets are best because such cases can also be washed clean with suds and water. Use your vacuum cleaner's upholstery brush to suck up the lint and dust that collect around the screen and open grillwork.

If you see blurred TV images in the future, don't always blame the producers of the station. When children and pets creep up close to the set to peer at the show, they are sure to leave finger smudges and paw prints. No harm! A swish with a sudsy cloth will chase away those "ghosts."

Henry Dworshak will seek re-election to U. S. Senate

Senate Committees to work most effectively for Idaho projects, and for national economy and sound government," Dworshak said.

He pointed out that he holds down high-ranking positions on the Appropriations Committee and the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy and is ranking minority member on the Interior Committee.

"I have engineered my committee assignments specifically so that I could be where legislation affecting Idaho is formulated. With my service on the Joint Committee and Interior Committee, I have been instrumental in securing projects and legislation vital to Idaho's economy. As a member of the Appropriations Committee, I have seen to it that funds for these projects are provided," Dworshak declared.

The Senator said he is "feeling vigorous" and has plans to support several Idaho land and water resource development projects now in initial stages.

"I will continue to insist on wise use of our national financial resources, with less emphasis on developing the world's most solid investment in the natural resources of Idaho and the west, where the returns will benefit the treasury and the livelihood of our own American people who pay the cost of the government which has the privilege of serving," Dworshak stated.

He begins the task of adding knotty pine to all the walls inside the tavern and eating establishment.

Bob estimated that the remodeling job will be completed within the next ten days.

Local Weather Turns Warm, Springlike After a period of unpredictable and blustery weather, Spring appeared on the Genesee scene bringing clear, blue skies and warm balmy temperatures. The weather picture is so wonderful, in fact, that local residents are holding their breath wondering just how long it could last.

The fine weather arrived Friday, and Saturday was as good a day as any one can remember. The sun shone brilliantly and the temperature was much too warm even for a light jacket.

This weekend weather set the pattern for the coming week as every day has been warm and sunny. The good weather has turned the grass to green, and sweetened the buds on the trees and the breaking point. Another sure sign of Spring can be seen in the number of persons working

During the next ten years people 18 to 24 years old will form a growing segment of the American population—increasing in number by more than 50 per cent. As they marry and form separate family units, they will become new customers for electric service. In the aggregate, their demand will be huge and the way it is met, whether by private tax-paying electric companies or socialized power programs, is of vital concern to them.

How this question is decided will pretty well determine what kind of country they will live in. It could be one in which every facet of their lives is dominated by the bureaucracy of a welfare state. Or it can continue to be a free country where they have the right to own their own homes and businesses, and of progressing according to their ambitions and abilities.

The cost of building ahead to meet the power demands of the future is immense. Socialization of the electric industry would mean that this cost would have to be met by government through higher taxation, bigger deficits and more inflation and it would be a big step toward the big government and little people of the state.

The glaring stupidity of government in business is sharply outlined by contrasting it with the way future power demands are presently being met by private electric companies. As an example, a leading utility company in Kentucky, typical of investor-owned electric companies spending hundreds of millions of dollars in the 50 states, will spend nearly $10 million in 1960 to improve its facilities serving some 500,000 people in 77 counties. None of this is tax money, but the result of private voluntary investment by citizens. This construction budget represents an investment by the company of about $1,970 for each of the 5,600 additional customers to be served in 1960. But those customers won't have to worry. They just pay their monthly electric bill. In addition, they will not be asked to turn more of their income over to the Federal tax collector, mortgage their future, destroy the value of the dollars they have left, and kick another prop out from under representative government—some of the hidden charges of so-called "cheap" Federal power.

FRILLS AND FOLLIES

The Geneva, Ohio, Free Press, gives some reasons why government budgets are so incredibly huge: "We spend great sums of interest charges on our public debt, but we do not reduce the principle."

"We carry on massive federal programs which state and local governments could do better."

"We devote large amounts of money to benefit special groups at rates below those the government must pay to its own creditors."

"We perpetuate federal programs which have long since met the objectives for which they were created."

None of these programs, it is important to note, affect the national defense or any other fundamental duty of government. They add up to frills and follies, of the most expensive possible kind.

PILOT E. W. Nelson goes over flight plans with Game Biologist Les Trout before making helicopter survey of Cassia deer herd south of Twin Falls. This is part of winter game management work and not to be confused with counting censuses of game animals. The Cassia deer herd has been under intensive management by the Idaho Fish and Game department since 1941 because it is among the important ones of the state. The first big game census in the area, antelope, was taken in 1917 when 19 antelope, 745 mule deer and 18 elk were counted. More recently, the unit has been producing at least ten per cent of the state's total annual deer harvest.

CENSUS TAKERS TO ATTEND TRAINING SESSIONS

Census takers who will visit every dwelling unit in the area during the 1960 census of population and housing which starts April 1 will participate in four training sessions next week, District Supervisor Ray E. Mosman, announced this week.

The training sessions, to be conducted by the crew leaders, will be held on March 28, 29, 30, and 31. Each census taker will receive a total of approximately nine hours of instruction. Emphasis will be placed on the importance of a systematic, thorough canvass of every dwelling unit during the census to insure a complete count. Class room training will cover proper manner of asking questions, use of the Census questionnaire, Census definitions, and map reading.

Map reading is an important census-taking technique since, without maps, defining the limits of each district to which a census taker is assigned, the job would be a welter of confusion. About 250,000 maps have been prepared for the 1960 Census. This provides an individual map for each of the 250,000 districts into which the country has been divided for the census. Every census taker will be furnished with a map of his district. As they make their rounds, census takers will be required to canvass every street and road and visit every housing unit within the boundaries of their assignments shown on these maps.

Idaho Students Hit Water Pollution In Essay Contest

By Jim Humbird Idaho Fish and Game Department Among sure signs of spring every year is the phenomenon of adults stepping aside for one week and praising their year-round pacers of praise for Idaho's bountiful wildlife resources.

Instead, the chorus is taken up by the younger generation, but hundreds of junior and senior high school students in all parts of the state. What these youngsters have to say about the perpetuation of wildlife in infinite forms for present and future generations is worthy of note because it reflects the fresh, considered judgments of girls and boys who have rehearsed their ideas to writing.

The tens of thousands of words are submitted to teachers who grade them and pass along the best to the county judging committees for the Idaho Wildlife Federation's annual statewide conservation essay contest.

Three state winners are selected in each of the junior and senior high school divisions, together with a number of runners-up. Appropriate cash prizes are awarded the students, and attendant publicity arranged to coincide with the annual observance of National Wildlife Week, which this year is March 30 to April 5.

Top Idaho winners in both divisions already have been publicly cited, and last week Gov. Robert E. Smylie received the two best Idaho essays in his office for pictures and official congratulations. They are the Misses Alice Sidwell of Caldwell and Sharyn Walker, Parma.

Miss Sidwell, a 12th grade student at the Caldwell high school, saw the universal application of this year's theme, "Clean Waters and Idaho's Future," as well as the somewhat more narrow perspective of fishermen and hunters.

"Without clean waters we could not participate in many of the recreations we now enjoy," she writes. "Swimming, boating and camping would not be very safe or enjoyable if contaminated water had to be utilized. Sickness would be an ever-present threat."

She lists four prime causes of water pollution by man. These are: (1) domestic wastes and sewage, (2) industrial toxic wastes and chemicals, (3) soil erosion and (4) applied toxics.

Of these four types of pollution, Miss Sidwell writes that "the kind which concerns everyone is domestic wastes and sewage. Waste water from

FARMING AROUND By Mark Welsh

What time is it? It's the time when the long graceful fingers of the willow turn golden as they reach down to touch the new green grass.

When the red-wing blackbird perches on a swaying bow and sings a few notes of love and then gives a deep chuckle as if something wonderful and beautiful is soon to happen—and he knows about it.

When, at sundown, comes a far-off timid call of love boldly answered by an unseen quail in a nearby thicket. When, at dawn, a doe and her fawn leave talon-like footprints on the sands of the beach where they have played and drunk and played again before going to rest in the deep woods beyond the sight of man; when the big honkers form their ancient V and head north.

It is the time when the rich earth is made into a seed bed; when hope and love are again made new; when the new year's promise of renewed life is fulfilled and all of nature is full of great expectations. It is Spring, again.

Pride economists believe that if a farmer's time is worth $1.50 per hour and he can find a machine that makes him 20 minutes a day, he can afford to invest $1,100 in it. This covers the first cost, interest, insurance, taxes, repairs, and similar items over 10-year life of the machine. On this same basis, he can spend $2,400 if the machine saves him 30 minutes a day and he values his time at $2.00 an hour. It is this type of figuring, thinking and planning that makes farming a tremendous area for development and expansion for machinery, banking, and the chemical industry, just to name a few.

NEW INSURANCE PROGRAM FOR UNIVERSITY EMPLOYEES

All employees of the University of Idaho and Lewis-Clark Normal school are now automatically covered by life insurance, President D. R. Theophilus announced this week.

Theophilus said that the Regents of the university had approved participation in an insurance program with the cost to be paid by the university and the normal school. This program, recommended for state agencies by Governor Robert E. Smylie and approved by the last session of the State Legislature, will now provide for university and normal school employees the following:

An amount equal to the annual salary the time of death, if death occurs to age 65; otherwise, an amount equal to one-half the annual salary at the time of death.

clean, where glittering 12-inch trout sought over the surging waters to spawn, and an abundance of willow roomed, and all Idaho was kept clean by nature," she eulogizes. "But in many Idaho streams the II and the O are rapidly becoming hazy and the P for pollution is taking the picture."

Roger Hull, of Wallace, second-place winner in the senior high school division, masterfully sums up the problem, and possibly what lies ahead.

"Water pollution is a problem brought on by man himself," he writes. "For this reason, man should also be able to successfully solve the same problem. But it will require a tremendous amount of careful planning and consideration. Only after many scientific tests and years of complete statewide cooperation will all the streams, lakes and rivers of Idaho again be totally pure and beautiful."

He concludes with a quote from Lord Byron: "I'll taugth by pain Men really know not what Water's worth."

More than 27,000 people were killed and more than 4,000,000 injured in home accidents in 1958, according to the annual report of the National Safety Council.

GAME BIOLOGIST DESCRIBES DEER LIVE-TRAPPING, TAGGING EXPERIENCES

Around the clock deer trapping operations in southeastern Idaho have led to the tagging and releasing of 133 animals during the recent cold weather, the Idaho Fish and Game Department said this week.

Game Biologist Dale Jensen reports from Soda Springs, that was trapping and tagging in that area "has progressed very well considering the lack of snow until February," adding that only 83 were caught and marked last year.

"Unless the weather suddenly turns to spring, another 20 days of operation should be possible," Jensen declares.

State Chief of Game Management Levi Mohler pointed out in Boise that live-trapping, tagging and releasing deer in one phase of the management program, and that similar operations this winter have been underway in several other areas.

Jensen comments, "During the cold weather trapping operations were run around the clock as deer were caught in large numbers. The technique was worth the effort since the traps that were emptied during the night usually contained deer again the following morning. This was especially effective in removing the nuisance re-traps that commonly entered the traps during the evening before other deer had the opportunity to be caught. Actually, re-traps were the principal deterrent to tagging a larger number of deer."

Other details in Jensen's report include the following facts: As an experiment, two clover type traps were placed side-by-side and deer were caught in both for ten consecutive days.

Deer have little or no powers of rationalization. Two panel traps did not produce as well as expected, with clover types catching more deer. Approximately 20 deer were observed in a panel trap but they detected Jensen's approach and escaped before he was close enough for a radio signal to close the gate.

Social Security Disability Clause Explained

Some confusion still exists with respect to the severity of a disabling condition which must exist to enable an employee or self-employed person to qualify for benefits under the social security program, according to W. V. Nusbaum, District manager of the Lewiston office of the Social Security Administration.

"There can be no hard and fast rule as to who will qualify under these stipulations," Nusbaum explained. After the basic six months requirement has been met, each case must be judged on its merits, based on the best medical evidence available.

Nusbaum urged anyone having questions regarding the disability insurance program to contact the nearest social security office. Application may be filed and medical evidence submitted as much as two months before the end of the six-month waiting period, he added.

IDAHO NEEDS DRIVER TRAINING IN SCHOOLS

Idaho is one of 34 states that has no driver training program through out their public school systems and one of 17 of those states with the national average. Robt. B. McCall, state traffic safety director, announced this week.

According to latest nationwide reports 14 states have driver training programs which have resulted in reduction of the traffic death rate and 12 of them have fewer fatalities per 100 million miles traveled than the national average.

The other two national average programs had records only slightly higher than the national average and are making noticeable progress in fatality reductions. The reports are based on 1958 records which did not include the new states of Alaska and Hawaii.

McCall explained that driver education in the schools is primarily for development of basic skills, labile attitudes as well as the principles and practices of personal and social responsibility.

While there is some instruction in such physical driver training as starting, stopping, turning and backing, more time and effort is extended to responsibility factors.

In addition to the development of skills and a sense of responsibility in operation of motor vehicles, those factors are also extended to many other phases of human endeavor, the director said.

The responsibilities and privileges of individuals, for instance, are impressed upon these young ones who will soon take their place in private and public affairs of the nation.

Almost all of the innumerable branches of science, mathematics and economics, which are taught in school, are provided a new outlet for practical application by the students with driver education.

Traffic accidents are the leading cause of death and permanent disabilities in that age group up to 25 years, it was pointed out.

Here the preventive approach can be applied much like it is in physical education to build better bodies and in hot lunch programs for better nutrition to prevent illness and disease.

The leading killer and crippler of young people can be impeded through the right approach at the right time.

Fruits which require warm climates but not tropical climates are considered to be subtropical. Citrus fruits, dates, figs and olives come in this classification.

Report from the GOVERNOR

Pump Irrigation is Now Big Business in Idaho

For eighty years, spanning the period from 1865 to 1945, when irrigation was first used in Idaho, we were thinking about diverting water from the surface stream or storing it behind dams for later use.

Beginning at the end of World War II there came a new era in irrigation in Idaho. We started giving a new source of water a second look.

It had been known for years that a large reservoir of water was stored beneath the surface of the Snake River Plains.

The Geology and Ground Water Resources of the Snake River Plains East of King Hill, published by the Geological Survey in 1938, attracted much attention to this underground reservoir.

The report covered 12,500 square miles in the Snake River Valley and some 9,500 square miles in tributary valleys. It was a fine job of drawing together all the fragmentary information about ground water. The report came up with real information on this elusive subject.

The report told where and how far beneath the surface ground water was. But still prospective irrigators gave it the "fishy eye."

It was too deep, wells in rock cost too much; pumps and motors cost too much; and power to pump the water cost too much.

Then in the mid 1940's the demand for more land, new farms, places for veterans to settle, good crop prices and a few experimental wells triggered the beginning of a new era in irrigation in Idaho.

It took 60 years to put 2 1/2 million acres of land under irrigation in Idaho. Then came a 20-year period of no substantial increase.

But when the change came, it came with a bang. Between 1945 and 1960, applications for permits to appropriate ground water covered more than a million acres of desert lands.

Not all of these enthusiasts follow thru from 1/3 to 1/2 of them do—so the ground water irrigation picture today adds up to about 750,000 acres of new land in a high state of production.

Ground water irrigation obviously concentrates in areas of proven supply at moderate depths. The Mud Lake Basin in Jefferson County, Little Lost River in Butte County, Bingham County west of Sublette, and Minidoka County, Raft River Valley in Cassia County, the eastern portion of Twin Falls County; these are the principal ground water irrigation areas.

What about the lasting characteristics of this ground water supply? The history of surface appropriations of water for irrigation is a well-known story.

Rivers were over-appropriated and storage reservoirs were built to make up deficiencies.

In cases of over-appropriation of ground water it is not that simple. An over-appropriation of ground water is bound to happen eventually.

The only reason it has not happened already is the abundance of ground water. Just to illustrate the rapid rate of appropriation from October 1 to December 31, 1959, applications for permits to appropriate well water covered 33,000 acres of land. In January of 1960 we received applications for 15,000 acres. Not all of these applications will mature into licensed water rights—possibly about half of them will—which would indicate the current rate of new irrigation is about 70,000 acres annually.

What will we do when some of these so-called inexhaustible supplies begin to fail? Two courses are open. We can invoke the River and Water Code which has not yet stood the test of court review, or we can use the time tried method of adjudication of the rights and priorities which we have applied to almost all of the irrigation streams of Idaho, large or small.

National Wildlife Week Water, like fire, is one of man's greatest blessings. Like fire, it also can be a curse if misused.

Water, like fire, is one of man's greatest blessings. Like fire, it also can be a curse if misused. The observance of National Wildlife Week in Idaho, March 20 to 26, which coincides with the official beginning of Spring, has as its theme, "Water—Key to Our Survival."

Again this year, two things happened to highlight the week. One was the selection of statewide winners of the annual conservation essay contest sponsored by the Idaho Wildlife Federation, and the other was Gov. Smylie's signing of the proclamation setting aside the week for all citizens to acquaint themselves with their wildlife heritage and the fact that clean, abundant sources of water are an important key to our survival as a state and a nation.

1960 Fishing Licenses Available New fishing regulations now are available from all authorized license vendors throughout the state. Few changes have been made. As reported earlier, the Fish and Game commission has banned double treble or multiple hooks, larger than five-sixteenths of an inch from point to shank of hooks in any waters of the southfork of the Salmon river or its tributaries.

1960 Census Survey Begins In Genesee Friday, April 1

The 1960 Census of Population and Housing, the Nation's 18th decennial census, gets underway on Friday, April 1, with 100,000 census takers starting their rounds which will take them to every dwelling in the United States. In covering 3,600 square miles of land in the 50 States, the census takers will travel an estimated combined distance of more than 1,000 times around the world, or approximately 28 million miles.

District Supervisor Roy E. Mosman points out that residents of this area can speed up the big count by having their advance Report Forms filled out and ready for the census takers. This action will save time for both the householder and the census taker, the census official said.

The advance Report Form was distributed to local households prior to the start of the house-to-house canvass. It contains the seven population and six housing questions which are asked of all persons. The Advance Report Form gives the census taker a chance to assemble information about each member in advance of the census taker's visit. Its use is expected to speed up the field canvass and provide more accurate statistics. At every fourth household, the census taker will seek the answers to additional questions covering population and housing characteristics which are being asked of a 25 per cent sampling of the population.

The district supervisor emphasized that all information about individuals and their homes furnished to the Census Bureau is held in absolute confidence under Federal law. It is used only to provide summary figures such as totals, averages and percentages. The information about individuals cannot be furnished to any one other than sworn Census employees and this cannot be used for investigation, taxation, or regulation.

CLAY PRODUCTION, UTILIZATION POTENTIALLY A GREAT IDAHO INDUSTRY
Clay production and utilization is potentially one of the fastest-growing phases of the mineral industry in Idaho. Dr. E. F. Cook, dean of the college of mines and director of the Idaho Bureau of Mines and Geology said this week.

To help Idahoans learn more about clays, Prof. Joseph Newton, head of the department of mining and metallurgy at the University of Idaho, has prepared an information circular called, "Clay, Its Composition, Properties and Uses."

Idaho has abundant reserves of the natural raw material which has been used by man since prehistoric times, Dean Cook said.

Clay occurs in many different forms and has an amazing variety of uses. Many familiar objects and materials contain clay or require clay in their manufacture, he said.

In the booklet, Prof. Newton describes the structure and composition of clay materials in relation to their physical properties and uses. He outlines methods of identifying various kinds of clay, tells of different types of deposits and discusses the commercial value of the different types of clay.

Brush Fire Call Firemen

Members of the Genesee Volunteer Fire Department were called on to extinguish a brush and grass fire out on Fix Ridge Friday afternoon of last week.

The alarm was turned in about 1:00 p. m. Friday and one truck was dispatched out to the place of the fire, located near the Nye Farm. Apparently someone had started burning grass along the road and the fire had gotten out of hand, and started burning on the brush and trees.

Two fire trucks and the jeep were at the scene and the blaze was finally brought under control at about 6:00 p. m.

Banquet Honors St. Mary's Team
Father Francis McGlinchey was host to St. Mary's Basketball team, Coach M. C. D. Manfred, cheerleaders and their parents at a banquet Thursday evening, March 24th at 7:00 p. m. in the Firemen's Hall.

Approximately eighty were in attendance. The St. Patrick's theme was carried out in table decorations and favors.

Entertainment, under the direction of Superior Sister M. Alice was presented by the fifth and sixth grade pupils, and thoroughly enjoyed by all.

A sportsmanship trophy was presented to the team by Don Linehan and Wilson Esser on behalf of the Knights of Columbus.

Members of the team presented their coach with a gift in behalf of their appreciation.

Father Patrick Phelan from Our Lady of Lourdes in Lewiston, representing Father McGlinchey gave a very inspiring talk.

Julie Ann Farnell, 4 Months Old, Stricken With Glaucoma

Julie Ann Farnell, four-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Farnell, returned from San Francisco, California, with her mother Wednesday, March 23, innocently unaware of the desperate battle being waged to save her pretty, blue eyes from blindness.

Julie Ann has fallen victim to glaucoma, a condition that will soon bring total, permanent darkness to her little world unless she receives immediate and expert treatment.

The condition was discovered by Julie Ann's mother Saturday morning. She was taken to their family physician Dr. Guy Owens, in Moscow who recognized the symptoms of the disorder and recommended immediate treatment by a specialist.

On first examination little hope was extended for the young child, but Dr. Owens contacted the University of California Medical Center, in San Francisco, California, and after talks with the staff of the hospital, decided to send Julie Ann there where she would undergo an operation by an eye specialist.

Mrs. Farnell, accompanied by her mother, left by plane Sunday for San Francisco with Julie Ann where the baby underwent the first of a long series of treatments as that is hoped will save her from a world of darkness.

Mrs. Farnell brought her child home Wednesday evening, but the battle is far from over; she must return to California next month for further treatment.

Fate has not been kind to the Farnell family. Vernon Farnell, Julie's father, who for the past few years has been a teacher at Genesee High School, was forced to submit to an appendectomy just last week. He is now home but not yet able to return to his teaching position.

A Fund for Julie Ann Friends of the Farnell family have joined together to help Julie Ann in her fight against blindness. The fight will be a long, painful, and costly struggle that will tax the budget of a young school teacher to the limit.

Anyone who wishes to help Julie Ann in her battle are urged to send their contributions, in any amount, to the Julie Ann Farnell Fund, Box 54, Genesee, Idaho.

Local residents may either mail their contributions or leave them with Kenneth R. Primus, C. D. Manfred, Rev. Chester Earls, or Wm. A. Roth.

April Showers Make Appearance

Genesee's week of wonderful spring weather was broken last Sunday by the arrival of the usual spring rains. After about eight days of fair, balmy weather, the skies clouded over late Saturday night and by Sunday the moisture was coming down.

Rain continued to fall during most of the week especially Tuesday morning when a downpour began about 10:00 a. m. and kept up a steady drizzling until after 2:00 p. m.

Strong March winds were also present to combine with the rain. The winds were strong Sunday and also Wednesday evening. Lewiston and the valley areas endured the worst of the Wednesday storm with hail, rain, thunder and lightning.

The weather report for the next five days indicates that the Palouse area will be in for more rain and wind.

New Weed Killer For Wild Oats
The Selective Weed Chemical, I. P. C. is being used extensively to control wild oats in spring seeded peas and lentils.

Wild oats are a costly weed in peas and lentils and are difficult to control due to their seeds not all germinating at one time. Wild oats shatter badly which insures a heavy seed supply for future crops.

I. P. C. is a chemical that farmers apply for seedling peas or lentils that kills wild oats seeds when they germinate.

Farmers generally favor applying I. P. C. mixed with gypsum although the material may be sprayed on. Using the spray makes it easier as fertilizer spreaders are hard to adjust to spread the 100 to 135 lbs. material per acre evenly.

Manufacturers have helped this problem by making the gypsum-I. P. C. in a more granular form which feeds more evenly through spreaders. Costs for this material runs from $5.00 to $7.50 per acre for the four pounds of actual I. P. C. needed to control wild oats.

Snow Survey News

A snow survey taken on Moscow Mt., Wednesday, March 23rd, indicates that the spring run-off is well under way. Due to the warm weather and spring rains the snow pack has decreased approximately 35 per cent in a two-week period.

Moscow Mt. snow cover has 34 inches of snow, with 11.5 inches of water.

East twin snow cover measured 15 inches of snow and 5.7 inches of water, this is a decrease of 18 inches of snow and 3.4 inches of water in 10 days.

Moderate stream flow indicates that much of the run-off is being held in the soil. Soil moisture conditions are very good at the present time.

County Weed Meetings Now Completed
County Weed Meetings completed with over 350 farmers attending.

Both attendance and interest were good reports, Homer Fetter, Latah County Agent. With the restriction on the use of aminotriazole as a weed killer, more farmers are planning spot cultivation of weed patches this summer.

STATE HATCHERIES PRODUCE 15 MILLION FISH FOR STOCKING IDAHO STREAMS AND LAKES

By Jim Humbird
Idaho Fish and Game Department.
The train resumed springtime operations earlier than usual that April of 1924 because of a light snow pack and it was possible to get to Tule station once a week. Another 25 miles was made with dog teams to Henrys lake near Island Park in extreme eastern Idaho. Here one of the first trout spawning stations of the Fish and Game department was set up with the help of canines, toboggans and skis.

That was 36 years ago and the station has continued to be a major source of cutthroat eggs down through the years. Last spring, for example, more than four million green eggs were taken there to produce almost 3 1/2 million "eye" eggs for the state's 15 fish hatcheries. The station opens about mid-March each year and closes around the first of July.

On that long-ago day trout already had congregated in great numbers at the head of Henrys lake, attracted by warm springs at that point. One haul of the seine brought forth over two tons of cutthroat and hybrid rainbow trout for the holding ponds.

These fish, according to the department's biennial report for 1954, were in splendid condition, averaging five or six fingerlings.

Today there are 15 hatcheries operated by the state Fish and Game department. They produced well over 15 million fish last year, or 633,720 pounds in the aggregate. These are located at American Falls, Ashton, Clark Fork, Eagle, Grace, Grosvenor, Hagerman, Hayspur, Henrysville, Mackay, McCall, Mullan, Sandjake, Twin Falls and Warm River.

They always are open for public inspection and receive many thousands of visitors each year, particularly student members of high school biology classes who come to observe modern artificial propagation methods of trout.

CENSUS TAKERS WILL BE EASY TO IDENTIFY
Householders will not have any difficulty identifying the takers of the 1960 Census of Population and Housing when they start their rounds on April 1, District Supervisor Roy E. Mosman pointed out this week.

Each census taker will be provided with a red, white, and blue identification card to be worn on the lapel. This card bears the seal of the Department of Commerce and the words "Census Enumerator, Official Credential" are printed across its face.

Persons purporting to be Census takers who do not have this identification card should be reported immediately to the local district Census office which is located at 312 Main Street, Lewiston, Idaho.

Census takers will be further identified by the portfolio containing their names and addresses.

No action is necessary now. A person has the right to decide how his name will appear on his social security card. When you claim benefits, you can explain the name change.

Hatcheries are here to stay because artificial stocking is well-justified for restoring depleted waters, planting after eradication of undesirable species of fish, replenishing spawning grounds, and providing "put and take" angling in heavily-fished waters where a good return of hatchery fish is taken.

Fish planting in lakes in northern Idaho starts in April, but stream stocking does not get underway until June. The bulk of the state's trout and lakes are stocked in June, July and early August. In other words, the 15 hatcheries work at capacity for ten months of the year to produce two months of intensive stocking.

Some of the lakes and reservoirs, the big ones, receive a single large planting during the season, while smaller bodies and streams generally get several stockings, with fewer fish released on each trip.

First of the state-owned fish hatcheries built following legislative approval in 1907 was Hayspur, about 15 miles below Hooton on Silver creek.

During its first year of operation, 2,738,080 eggs and fry were handled with a loss of 22 per cent. Over two million of the eggs hatched were distributed in streams and lakes throughout the state, either in "sac" stages or as fingerlings.

Today there are 15 hatcheries operated by the state Fish and Game department. They produced well over 15 million fish last year, or 633,720 pounds in the aggregate. These are located at American Falls, Ashton, Clark Fork, Eagle, Grace, Grosvenor, Hagerman, Hayspur, Henrysville, Mackay, McCall, Mullan, Sandjake, Twin Falls and Warm River.

They always are open for public inspection and receive many thousands of visitors each year, particularly student members of high school biology classes who come to observe modern artificial propagation methods of trout.

EVERYONE IS WORKING TO PREVENT TRAFFIC ACCIDENTS IN IDAHO
"Everybody talks about the traffic problem and they're all trying to do something about it," Law Enforcement and safety officials agreed recently at the fourth annual Governor's Safety Conference in Boise recently.

Although the two-day conference dealt with logging and sawmills, agricultural, and traffic accidents, there was a keen interest in the latter subject demonstrated by those persons representing other phases of safety study. With no pre-planning and no comparison of notes, speakers stressed the need to concentrate on accident prevention and law enforcement as an accident deterrent, rather than for the sake of accumulating traffic citation records.

Howard Pyle of Washington, D. C., president of the National Safety Council, continued the thought of safety workers from all parts of Idaho in his talk, "Law Enforcement and the need for action on the part of the action program for traffic safety demands community effort and it's necessary that this effort be led by paid experts," Pyle told Idaho safety officials and conference delegates.

The NSC president said the current interest of Idaho residents demonstrates that the time has arrived for organization of local safety councils. Officials were guided by a state safety council member by state staff. Pyle reiterated his views on financing such activities with contributions from private sources rather than with public funds.

This fact is exemplified by industry which is maintaining full-time, paid safety directors whose results are documentary evidence of the value by the acknowledged reduction of industrial accidents, the saving of lives and the recovery of millions of lost man hours of work.

Department of Law Enforcement officials stated that opinions expressed at the conference indicated widespread desire for private and public safety groups to approach the answer to traffic problems from every angle rather than by concentrating upon one or two definite subjects which might be a part of all the contributing factors.

This "new look" at Idaho's traffic accident dilemma, which has become more severe instead of less acute in spite of a reduced death rate for some years, is important in arriving at a goal set to eliminate accidents, deaths and injuries. However, the trained leadership and guidance is essential in generating such participation to accomplish any of the objectives, it was agreed.

With $30 million property loss in Idaho in 1959 due entirely to motor vehicles, the accident and average $116 annual insurance premium on each car coupled with expectations that insurance costs will exceed that of gasoline if the present trend continues, there is sufficient incentive for business and industry to support the inception of a paid staff for a State Safety Council.

World War II GI Loans
About four months remain in which World War II veterans may apply for GI home, farm or business loans, the Veterans Administration reminded all veterans this week.

Under present law, July 25, 1960, is the cut-off date set for World War II veteran participation in the post-war program that has seen more than 5 million World War II GI Bill loan take advantage of since June 22, 1944.

But the important thing about Idaho's Flag is that it gives our youngsters something to which they can learn in their school rooms. This is the history of the State of Idaho. Its heritage is as shining and romantic and proud as any in the West.

We can begin to tell the world about this heritage by proudly flying Idaho's blue flag. In my way of thinking, no school building should be without one. And they need not be any more because now the United States Flag more than the United States Flag costs. If anyone wants to buy one, the Governor's Office can tell you where they are available.

Since 1955 we have flown the Idaho flag on one flag staff at the State Capitol at all times. This has occasioned much favorable comment.

As a matter of fact, if I were a state commissioner who loved Idaho, county commissioner who loved Idaho, I'd fly the Idaho flag from the court house.

As a matter of fact, it would be fine if more business houses did the Statesman Newspaper in Boise does. They fly the Idaho flag over the entrance to the building.

The Germans had a gun in World War I that required 24 railroad cars for transportation.

WVP RELEASE ANNUAL REPORT TO STOCKHOLDERS
More than $196 million has been invested by the Washington Water Power Company in new plants, equipment and customer service since 1950, the company's 70th annual report to shareholders revealed this week.

WVP president Kingsley M. Robinson said the figure is equivalent to an expenditure of more than $33,700 a day for the ten year period.

In his annual letter to the utility's 22,500 shareholders, Robinson reported that the years 1950 to 1959 "may well be termed the decade of decision for WVP."

"In those ten years," he said, "the company attained independent status and has more than doubled the number of its shareholders. Two huge hydroelectric plants, Cabinet Gorge and Nixon Rapids, were constructed, adding 600,000 kilowatts to our company-owned generating capability."

"Other highlights in our big decade," he said "are the construction of a beautiful and highly efficient building in Spokane and the nationally spotlighted Steven County election that was dramatic proof that the people of the Northwest do not prefer a policy of control of the electric power industry."

Total operating revenues in 1959 with the addition of gas service amounted to $66,243,000. The gross revenues are up approximately six million dollars over 1958," Robinson

JUVENILES INTERESTED IN DRIVER IMPROVEMENT PROGRAM SAY STATE OFFICER

A surprisingly large number of juveniles are making inquiries in person about their status in the Driver Improvement program, according to Traffic Safety officials. Many of these young drivers—all of them boys so far—have been asking a lot of questions after they have received a few demerit points and before they receive a warning letter or to receive a warning letter on the demerit system enacted by the last legislature.

The Driver Improvement program, or demerit system, maintains a cumulative record of 100 points within a 12-month period, the drivers license is suspended until accumulated points drop below the 100 maximum.

"It's highly encouraging to see these young fellows ask a lot of questions, argue about the laws and the pros and cons of qualified drivers. They invariably accept our explanations after they learn the facts" a department of Law Enforcement official commented. "More often than not, these youngsters we sometimes misname 'juvenile delinquents' will acknowledge their own faults, mistakes and acts of complete foolishness in driving more readily than will some of the older, experienced drivers," he continued.

Although the Driver Improvement program has not been in effect long enough to take any licenses from Idaho drivers, the new law is proving itself beneficial in making the young, errant drivers more conscious of their responsibilities, it was explained. The newly aroused interest in the law is such that youngsters are eager and willing to be taught and will accept logical facts when there is proof behind them.

Julie Baumgartner Chosen F. F. A. Sweetheart At Annual Banquet

Miss Julie Baumgartner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Baumgartner, a freshman at Genesee High School was crowned Sweetheart of the Genesee F. F. A. Chapter at the annual Parent-Son banquet held Tuesday evening, April 5th, at the Community center.

Julie was crowned by last year's sweetheart, Linda Hynes. Each of the four classes of vocational agriculture selected a girl to represent their class. The Sweetheart was chosen on the basis of votes received from the sale of tickets on the drawing sponsored by the FFA Chapter.

Well Attended
There were 102 parents, sons and guests present at the church basement to enjoy a smoked sausage supper prepared and served by the local F. F. A. Chapter assisted by their adviser, Mrs. Mary Melquist. Fred Bruemeling assisted the boys in butchering two hogs and smoking the meat for the sausage supper.

Mr. Magee, president of the local F. F. A. Chapter, served as master of ceremonies for the evening. Merle Wilson gave the welcome and each of the chapter members introduced their parents. Robert Heimgartner, chapter advisor, introduced the guests present at the banquet, who included Mr. Reuben Bauer, of the First State Bank of Moscow and Prof. R. E. Christian, of the University of Idaho. Prof. Christian spoke on the pursuit of learning.

Mr. Bauer was present to present Merle Wilson with the First Security Foundation Wrist Watch Award. This award, presented by the banking system, is for outstanding achievement in the field of community activities, supervised farm program, chapter activities, and scholastic standing.

Mr. Heimgartner presented John Bielenberg with the Herdmanship Trophy for the chapter showing at the fair, which he accepted in behalf of the local chapter. Stewart Sprenger also received a chapter award; he placed second in the regional showing in Pocatello.

John Bielenberg reported on the Chapter activities during the year, and Donald Kasper gave a summary of the projects of the chapter. Superintendent Primus also gave a few remarks on the activities of the FFA. "The Four Notes" a boys chorus from the school presented several numbers.

County Agent Gives Some Tips For The Home Gardeners

Home gardeners reap many benefits. The extra flavors of fruits and vegetables grown in your garden make up for the work involved. Families in the garden are happy in the working together and benefit from the fresh air, sunshine and exercise. Here are some hints from your County Agent's office on how to reap more with less effort from your home garden.

1. Take frequent rests and ease in to the work.
2. Space projects over a number of weekends, not just one.
3. Keep tools sharp and in good repair.
4. If more than one person is working in a small area, be extra careful of how to swing your tools.
5. When putting tools down, place them where they can't be tripped over and turn the points and edges down.
6. At the end of the day, clean tools and store in shed, garage, or basement. Have racks or hooks on which to hang them.
7. When lifting heavy objects, get help if the load is too heavy for one person.
8. When pruning branches, never get your head below your work. Falling twigs and flying bark may injure eyes.
9. Wear loose (not floppy) clothes, thick-soled, low-heeled shoes, and work gloves. If the sun is bright, wear a hat.
10. Avoid the bad habit of chewing on a leaf or stalk. There are more than 100 common plants which are poisonous, some of them lethal.
11. Exercise special care when handling, mixing or applying poisons. Insecticides or plant foods. Wash hands and exposed part of body after working with them.
12. Some planning tips to make better use of space and time.

Weather's Excellent

After a period of rainy weather, spring came back to the Palouse country this week bringing sunshine, blue skies and warm temperatures. It was nearly perfect weather for April and the grass, flowers and trees responded to the warm temperatures.

Almost all of the grass is green and lush, and the trees have budded and broken open. If the weather continues to be warm, it won't be long until the trees are in full foliage. Farmers also began some of their spring work this week. Several were in the fields Wednesday and reported that the ground was in good shape.

City Warns On Reckless Driving

Reckless driving within the city limits was one of the topics for discussion at the regular monthly meeting of the Genesee City Council, Monday evening, April 4. The subject was brought to the attention of the council after numerous complaints were lodged with the council concerning speeding and reckless driving.

The council pointed out that the city is very much concerned with the problem of reckless driving, but it added that with just a one-man police force it is difficult to apprehend all offenders. With this thought in mind, the city fathers reminded local residents that it is their obligation to report all cases of speeding and reckless driving when they see it. Once the complaint has been filed, the city marshal can act.

Speeding and reckless driving is always dangerous, the council added, but it is especially undesirable in residential and business districts where children play during the day and where the speed limit is 25 miles per hour.

A plea was made to all drivers to operate their vehicles in strict accordance with the law.

Pacific NW Grain Dealers Convention In Spokane June 8-9

Pacific Northwest Grain Dealers Association will hold its 39th Annual Convention at the Davenport Hotel in Spokane on June 8 and 9. H. L. Powell, Lewiston, Idaho has announced.

Powell, who is president of the Association, said the convention would be one of the most important in the association's history in view of recent developments in the grain trade. The association, which has more than 200 dealer members in Washington, Idaho, Oregon and Montana, and many more associate members in other states, has as its object the advancement, protection and development of the common interests of grain and merchandising of grain and other related activities.

Recently the trade has been under fire on the political front because of the high cost of storing grain surpluses accumulated as a result of farm support legislation. Some of the business of the convention is expected to be devoted to overcoming erroneous impressions created with the general public as a result of attempts to make it appear that grain dealers are reaping excessive profits from storing surplus grain.

Convention General Chairman is H. W. Ester Puort, Jr. of Spokane.

Wheat Industry Plans National Advertising Campaigns

Boise—The wheat industry is looking into ways to conduct a national promotion and advertising campaign which would put more wheat product into the American housewife's shopping basket.

Harold West, administrator of the Idaho Wheat Commission, has been appointed by Carl Bruns of Nebraska president of the National Wheat Growers Association, to head a committee which will organize a nationwide domestic market promotion campaign. Others on the committee are R. L. Patterson, chairman of the Kansas Wheat Commission and Brant West, who is a determination of how existing regional promotions can best be coordinated into a nationwide program. He said the committee also will explore the possibilities of a cooperative promotion with the National Millers Federation and Bakers Institute.

Idaho wheat representatives at the conferences in Washington were August Pratt, Chairman of the National Wheat Growers vice president for Idaho; Charles Gabby, Lewiston, ch. of the Idaho Wheat commission and West. Pratt and West also attended the marketing seminar in Illinois March 23-25.

West noted that per capita consumption of wheat has fallen steadily since 1910.

WITH A GRAIN OF SALT

It has been forecast that farm equipment sales are due to decline this year, due to reduced overall farm income.

For instance, one of the leading companies in the field announces that it is planning an increase in farm machinery sales in 1960 "even in view of the reported reduction in farm income."

The point is that the size of farm income, important as it is, does not necessarily decide the farmer's attitude toward buying new equipment.

DO WE WANT RESPONSIBLE GOVERNMENT?

A national committeeman of one of the great political parties is quoted as saying, "The voter doesn't care whether government is responsible. The voter wants to know what it is doing for him."

What remains to be seen is whether the majority of voters have just drifted with a time-worn slogan or if they are honestly "don't care whether government is responsible."

SLOWING GROWTH

The excise tax rate on gasoline is almost five times that for milk cans or diamonds, the desirable as they are, but hardly can be under the heading of absolute necessities.

The federal gasoline tax was increased from three to four cents a gallon on October 1, 1959. At that time it was said that this was just a "temporary" increase.

This is urged because of the multi-billion dollar interstate highway program. But as all manner of authorities have pointed out, that program could be financed completely otherwise.

Christian Science Church Service

How God's goodness and allness establishes the basis for universal harmony will be brought out Sunday at Christian Science services.

The Lesson-Sermon will be on the subject, "Are Sin, Disease, and Death Real?" This will include this verse from the Bible: "Know therefore this day, and consider it in thine heart that the Lord He is God in heaven above, and upon the earth beneath: there is none else." (Deut. 4:39)

From Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy.

The Golden Text is from Psalms (103:2-4) "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not His benefits: who forgive all thine iniquities; who healeth all thy diseases; who redeemeth thy life from destruction."

GRASS

I love the grass when April days are fragrant,

When bees return to pollinate the rose;

When tempered, homing winds—no longer vagrant,

Sigh with content and nestle to repose.

I ask the grass—committed to my keeping,

To weep for me when apple blooms cascade;

To pray for me—to hide me when I'm sleeping

In lasting peace,

In fields where grasses fade.

Cancer Fund Drive Began April 1; Needs Great

The statewide drive for funds in the 1960 cancer crusade began Friday, April 1. Philip A. Dufford, president of the Idaho Division, American Cancer Society, has announced.

But these are isolated examples and all but meaningless to the men whose careers are devoted to game management problems, to ways and means of learning where the average tagged animal goes.

Far more significant is the knowledge that 23 per cent of all mule deer tagged the previous year in the Boise river drainage were checked through the Mores creek station during a recent hunting season.

Although hunter cooperation usually is excellent in returning identification tags from bagged animals to the Fish and Game department, the statewide total percentage of recovered tags over a seven-year period on four species was not nearly so good as the 23 per cent—nor did it need to be.

That was from 1948 through 1955 and involved 3,645 big game animals. The greatest ratio of tags recovered came from 27 elk. Other percentages show that 116 tags were returned from 1,740 mule deer, or 8.4 per cent; 58 tags from 1,369 antelope, or 4.2 per cent; and five tags from 63 white-tailed deer, or 1.8 per cent.

Anyone who has hunted the veritable white-tail can understand the low percentage of tags on that species. Big game trapping, tagging and sometimes transplanting in Idaho has been underwritten with federal aid since 1948.

Better Pheasant Sex Ratio

A recent random sampling indicates a wider sex ratio between cocks and hens than has been reported in the past several years.

The sex ratio of 20 cocks to 100 hens would be entirely adequate for breeding purposes, since the pheasant is an extremely polygamous species.

During the recent sampling which covered major pheasant ranges in southern Idaho, 63 departments were served counted over 31,000 pheasants recording each according to sex.

The sex ratio result will be combined with the pheasant crowing count census to estimate spring population levels. The crowing count census will be done during April and early May.

The same sampling survey found Hungarian partridges and chukars showing up in most of the usual places in numbers comparable to the winter of 1959, although they were more concentrated because of the more severe winter conditions encountered in 1960.

Biologist Hatchery Supervisor Paul Cuplin, former department biologist who has been working toward his Master's thesis, has been appointed supervisor of fish hatcheries for the state.

In stressing the vital need for more funds to further the work of the Society in its three-fold program of research, public and professional education, and service to Idaho's cancer patients, Dufford said that this year's crusade goal in the state has been set at $148,000.

Through their generous support of the Society's program, the people of our state can share in the credit for this heightened progress in life-saving through cancer education, and the hard-hitting national research program," Dufford said.

Highlighting the division's current educational activities is the Idaho Cancer Conference, April 1 and 2 in Boise, under the direction of Dr. Claude W. Barriek, chairman of the professional education committee for the Idaho Cancer Society.

Theme of the 1960 Crusade is "Guard Your Family, Fight Cancer With a Checkup and a Check."

Women born in the first half of 1903 must have at least 28 quarters of credit to be eligible to old age insurance benefits at 62. If born in the half of 1903, 29 quarters of credit are necessary. Six years of work would give you only 24 quarters.

Many Thousand Big Game Live-Trapped and Tagged

Idaho Fish and Game Department Many thousand of Idaho big game animals have been live-trapped, tagged and released during the last dozen years.

Next undertaking by the department in the trapping-tagging program is a similar study on Idaho moose, North America's biggest game animal.

Records maintained by the department since 1948 disclose that 2,146 deer, including both mule and white-tailed, have been trapped, tagged and released in Idaho, along with over 300 elk.

Game biologist Dale Jensen, who recently reported trapping 165 muleys including retraps, in the Soda Springs region of southeast Idaho, had this to say:

As an experiment, two traps were placed side by side with 25 feet of fence between them.

CAPITAL GLEANINGS

Will Budget Have Surplus or Deficit? Congress must hold a tight check on federal spending in the next fiscal year, or there may actually be a deficit instead of a large surplus as was predicted by the President in his recent budget message.

Castro's anti-Americanism is creating resentment in the national capital. It is generally conceded that the dictator may be doing a disservice to his people and may soon be eliminated.

Some self-employed disabled farmers have filed for social security disability benefits, Nusbbaum stated. The self-employed farmer could not qualify for disability benefits under the social security laws until they had completed the 1959 farm year according to Nusbbaum.

Unlike trapping methods used for deer and elk, the Pronghorns are now rounded up with helicopters and are herded into broad wings of circular panel-type traps, then crowded into tagging chutes at one end. No bait is necessary.

There is much speculation here whether any farm legislation will be enacted at this session. Now they have a camera that operates at the speed of one-hundredth of a microsecond, which is in relation to a second as a second is in relation to three years. This and other fantastic things science is doing such as radar astronomy and atomic power to recover food in the sea, should convince any youngster that opportunities for a boy today have never been equalled in the history of man.

A friend of mine said he thought W.P.A. electric rates were O. K., but his electric bill is too high. So all I could answer was — if your family will do away with the refrigerator, vacuum cleaner, electric range and water heater, the toaster, the TV and radio, space heaters, electric sewing machine and mixers, etc., the bill will go down where it used to be when people used only electric lights. Just count your ways electricity saves work in your home.

Only yesterday, I learned that California is the nation's top agricultural state. I also learned that the average farm in size is 278 acres, and that 93 per cent of all farms have electricity.

If you owned a gas station, and another gas station across the street did not have to pay taxes to the Federal Government on his gasoline sales, don't you think it would be tough competition? That's the way it is with public power. For some curious reason way back, public power got things fixed up so they don't have to pay one nickel in federal taxes. Lots of us think they should.

Soon nobody needs to be lonesome. The country's population increases about 4,000,000 babies a year. Forty babies are born every five minutes — 11,000 every 24 hours. In India about 8,000,000 babies are born every year. It looks like we better start to learn to live together. If we quarrel now, what will it be like when everybody is crowded to gether.

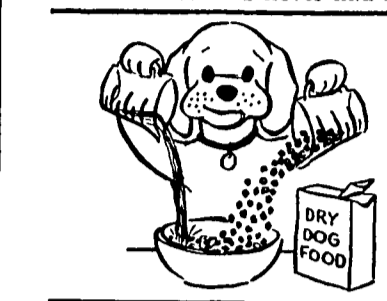

a Dog's Life

By Dr. E. M. Gliddow
Director, Friskies Research Kennels

The dog's life is the answer to the housewife's prayers. Today, with the price of human food sky high, it's no longer economically sound to save the scraps for Fido when they can be turned into a casserole for tomorrow's dinner.

What's more, dog food is easy to store and easy to serve. And as for Fido...he's never had it so good, nutritionally speaking...

...he gets well-served and satisfied with all the required vitamins and minerals day in, day out and as a result, he's living a longer and healthier life.

While the majority of dogs relish their food, there's a small minority who would complain, if they only knew. The reason? Their owners prepare it. A chicken or lobster improperly prepared for the table may be very unpalatable if not equally unpalatable if not properly prepared. Some owners don't follow package directions and thus don't bother to measure either the food or water. Therefore the mixture may be too dry or too wet. Some don't mix the food and water together at all, which results in an inconsistent texture. Others get carried away with the amount of water. This may be a ratio of two or three cups of dry meal to one cup of water. Fluff it up slightly, or lightly mix the meal and water together. Let it stand for two or three minutes and then fluff it up again. If you follow package directions, your pet will get true enjoyment out of his dinner.

See You in the Easter Parade

The fashionable tails of dogdom will wag when these two chic canines dazzle the strollers in the Easter parade with their "tricks-of-the-trade" chapeaux. Miss Beulah Beagle and Mrs. Sherwood Spaniel trimmed their spring bonnets with the symbols of their respective trades. Miss Beagle sports a white rabbit atop her violet trimmed straw, while the interests of Mrs. Spaniel are whimsically expressed by the birdy decor atop her pink straw roller.

FISH AND GAME NEWS

In-Service Training School

One again all field personnel have been brought together with division chiefs and specialists from this and other states for the fifth annual four-day in-service training school of the Idaho Fish and Game department. It's been an inspiring experience to hear so many outstanding speakers range back and forth across the broad realm of fish and game management problems, new approaches to old enigmas, success stories, frank admission of some failures and group discussion of possible solutions.

But the in-service training school for 1960 has been more than a series of "pep" talks to boost the already-high morale of conservation officers and their supervisors, fish, game and bird biologists, hatchery managers and their helpers. This was accomplished, too, indirectly.

About 165 employees of the Fish and Game department registered for the sessions, held this year at Boise's Gowen field through the courtesy and complete cooperation of the National Air Guard. Not only were assembly hall and classroom facilities provided, but also barracks for sleeping accommodations for the men, restaurant facilities and social rooms for evening fraternizing.

Guest speakers included R. M. D. Childs, state budget director who presented Game, Robert Smylie, Supreme Court Justice Joe McFadden; Burton Lauchart, Washington State department of game; Dr. Ted Perry, U. S. Fish and Wildlife service; Ken Hammond, Boise fire department; Dr. William S. Bronson, Boise junior college; Dr. William Jellison, parasitologist of Hamilton, Montana; and Probate Judge William E. Smith of Boise.

In other words, all phases of fish and game management and law enforcement were covered, and all of those present were better equipped, individually and collectively, because of the rich experiences just concluded.

Non-Resident Hunting Licenses

Non-resident big game licenses for 1959 season totalled 6,306, with purchasers hailing from 42 states, District of Columbia and three foreign countries. Californians bought the most, 3832, while the other leading five states were Washington, 1,129; Texas, 158; Oregon, 156; Nevada, 151; and Wisconsin, 72. Big game hunters also came from Venezuela, Spain and British Columbia.

Commission to Meet

The Fish and Game Commission has scheduled its next meeting at the Boise office April 27-29, inclusive, for the purpose of setting seasons and determining regulations for the hunting of big game animals during 1960. A public hearing will be held between the hours of 1:30 and 5:00 p. m. on April 27 and individuals or organization spokesmen are invited to give testimony or evidence with respect to setting big game hunting seasons and regulations. Persons desiring to be heard should request appointments in advance as a means of scheduling appearances before the Commission.

FARMING AROUND
By Mark Welsh

"The cowards never started and the wealkings never made it" boast the sons of the pioneers that left the East for the grass-lands and fern-lands that lay to the West.

Maybe they moved too fast and too far. In fact, grass is no longer a crop of most farms. An acre of improved pasture in much of the East and Southeast is yielding the feed equivalent of 125 bushels of corn and at a 1/4 lower cost of maintenance and harvesting.

New grasses, well-fertilized, will produce 400 to 800 pounds of beef to the acre, or four to six tons of milk. Many old, established pastures get little, if any, fertilizer and the owner gets little, if any, returns. But, when pasture is properly prepared and fertilized, it gives the care the corn crop would get it pays off better most years.

Many of those who moved further West years ago would not do so today. They were strong, smart, aggressive men — and very brave, and given today they would build their soil with fertilizers, with cover crops and with animal wastes. They would know that the world's best markets surround them and they would soon fit that rich pasture makes the cheapest milk and meat.

We need pioneers that stay home; modern pioneers that dare to try new crops, that are brave enough to risk their time and money on their own judgment, and strong enough to let the cowards and wealkings sneer at anything less than perfection.

Do you know this man? He is 29 years old, earns $5,183 a year and pays a fourth of this in taxes. He is the average United States taxpayer. Before he retires he will have paid out in taxes the total $48,000—but look at all the government he gets for his money!

(Editors Note: Dr. Mark Welsh is a former university instructor and state livestock sanitary service director who has spent a lifetime in agriculture. He now is agricultural consultant to American Cyanamid Company.)

Liabilities For Social Security Exceed National Debt By 51 Billion Dollars

Liabilities of the federal social security system exceed the national debt by $50 billion, the National Association of Manufacturers said this week in warning of the hazards of this vast public welfare burden.

"Every election year for the past decade Congress has liberalized the social security system," the NAM said. "The result is that the liabilities against the old age survivors and disability insurance fund now stand at some $200 billion. Of this enormous sum, only about $21 billion is funded. The unfunded part—some $340 billion—exceeds the national debt by about $50 billion."

In announcing publication of a report which analyzes current proposals for further liberalization of the system, the NAM acknowledged that providing economic security in old age is a "laudable objective," but it warned it could be seriously jeopardized by unwise federal policies.

"Few people realize the enormous cost of the social security system of the full implications and hazards of the vast debt being imposed upon us and posterity," the NAM said.

"From Jan. 1, 1937, to Jan. 1, 1959, about $82.8 billion was collected from employees, employers and the self-employed of the country. The OASDI fund earned $5.9 billion in interest, and $4.4 billion was paid out in benefits to support the social security system. During the year 1959, contributions and expenditures each are expected to exceed $11 billion. Under the present schedule of operations, the total cost of the system is expected to reach $11 billion in 1960, and to rise to $12 billion in 1961. The rate of increase in the tax rate are enacted, by 1969 the government will be taking 9 per cent of taxable payrolls for social security.

"Some idea of the weight of this additional load on the economy may be had from the fact that every increase of one-half of 1 per cent in social security taxes means that an additional $1 billion must be paid."

REPORT FROM THE GOVERNOR

The Safety Conference was a success.

Idaho has proved again that our state government meets Mr. Lincoln's test. It is government of—but more important, it is by and for the people.

This fact came into full focus at the fourth annual Governor's Safety Conference in Boise recently where individuals from all parts of the Gem State got together to study all aspects of the safety problem. Urge homes, at work and on our highways.

Women came from their homes, industry sent its safety directors, union officials contributed their time and energy, farmers took time from their spring work, and representatives of all law enforcement agencies worked together in a search for the means to make safety a more important part of modern society.

The Conference was not provincial in its views. Each group recognized the ultimate objectives of all others. There were no dogmatic demands made and no ultimatums issued. Realistic theories and magic formulas were absent from the discussions.

There was a common ground of approach to the tragedies that each year in this country take more than 91,000 lives, disable 9 million people and cost the American public 12 billion dollars.

It was obvious these mobilizers for safety had observed and discussed these national figures. They immediately brought them close to home with an intent analysis of Idaho's participation in a national poetry contest sponsored by the Catholic Daughters of America.

Winners on the local level were: Division 1: Kathy Zenger, Ray Esser, Cheryl Roach Division 2: Bill Morschek, Carol Kraut, Diane Hasfurther.

Winners were announced by the local Court on March 24. Mrs. Andrew Zenger and Mrs. Stanton Becker presented the awards.

ROVERETTES MEET WITH MRS. DALE BECKER

Mrs. Dale Becker was hostess to the Roverette Club Friday evening at her home. Guests were Mmes. Duart Moser, Melvin Moser and Robert Heimgranger.

High prize at cards was won by Mrs. Fred Morschek and 2nd high and the traveling prize went to Mrs. Jim Odberg.

Next meeting will be with Mrs. Del Kambsch.

ALMOST ALL DRIVERS VIOLATE TRAFFIC LAWS

Too often one or two factors are singled out as the "evil" behind motor vehicle accidents and their resulting long lists of fatalities, injuries and financial losses. The same trend is thought more often than not, attempts to segregate violators into one small group and place halos above the heads of one large group.

It is true that the so-called accident-prone drivers represent a small minority of the motoring public, but no one can conscientiously state that he never commits a violation.

Everyone frequently violates traffic regulations, but 80 per cent of them never get caught.

There is a difference. Every violation does not cause an accident, but before almost every accident there is at least one violation. Almost all traffic laws were enacted because of disregard for courtesies of the road and the frequency of accidents caused by motorists' failure to observe those courtesies. For instance, restricted speed zones established by the State Highway Department are entirely the result of accidents within certain areas and the indicated speed of the vehicles involved in the accidents.

By stressing speed and the percentage of speeding vehicles involved in accidents along with fatalities and personal injuries, neither the highway department nor the Department of Law Enforcement is inferring that speed is the sole CAUSE of the accident. Speed is the element which causes deaths, more severe bodily injury and property damage. In almost every traffic accident case in which speed is a factor, one or more violations were listed.

Actually, the accident-death-injury

GHS Students Attended 25th Y. M. C. A. Youth Legislature

Delegates from Genesee who attended the 25th annual Idaho Y. M. C. A. Youth and Government program in Boise, April 1-2, 1960 were: Shirley Ahern, Phyllis Danielson, Larry Sorenson, Clair Erickson and Ozzy Kankkuber. It was announced by Mr. Fennell, advisor.

Prior to the group going to Boise the junior and senior classes chose the delegates and made the list. The delegates are as follows: Senator: Clair Erickson, Representative, Shirley Erickson.

The Idaho Y. M. C. A. Youth and Government program has as its total objective an understanding of Idaho young people in the process of legislation. It is a citizenship training program, designed to bring to Idaho high school young people, through actual participation, an understanding of the processes by which we make laws to govern ourselves; it attempts to help young people think through some of the complex problems we face as a state, and to accept for themselves some of the responsibility for helping to solve them.

How important this training program was to our students was so aptly stated by Phyllis Danielson when she said, "It was truly a wonderful and memorable experience to be able to view the legislature process in action and to be able to understand more fully the government of our State."

The Idaho Y. M. C. A. Youth and Government program is sponsored by the Pacific Northwest Council of Y. M. C. A.'s with Judge Henry T. McQuade, Justice of the Idaho Supreme Court, as Chairman of the program.

Wind and Rain In Weather Picture

Rain and wind were both a part of the weather picture in the Palouse area this week as the two combined to slow up the spring work of the farmers.

The strongest winds of the week blew down on the Genesee area late Wednesday night, sweeping rain down with it. The winds, with gusts approaching 45 miles per hour continued on through the night, and were expected to diminish Thursday morning. The rain ceased sometime early Thursday and the sun dawned bright and clear.

Brief showers have been endured by the farmers who now trying to get their spring work underway most of this week. The temperatures have also taken a drop this week and after several days of shivering weather the local population have been forced back into coats and jackets.

New Veterans Law May Affect Minors' Checks

Guardians and custodians of more than 650 Idaho minors receiving the Veterans Administration pensions should examine carefully their wards' settlement under the new pension law, Louis Givens, Officer in Charge of the VA Contact Office in Moscow said this week.

Both guardians and custodians by this time should have received the pamphlet containing information on the new law and an election card which were mailed with the pension checks sent March 1. If they desire their wards to be paid under the new pension law, they should fill in the card and return it to the VA, Givens said.

Additional information about the new pension law can be obtained at any VA office.

World War I Veterans Met

Tomer Butte Barracks of World War I and Auxiliary members met at the Latah County Grain Growers Hall with the new officers in the club.

Mrs. Yowells extended an invitation to come to Nampa for the 9th, 10th, and 11th. She stressed the need of more members. She told of the need for phonograph records to be used for the veterans in the Veterans Hospital, Boise. If any one has records that are in good condition but no longer wanted for their own use, they can be left with the Auxiliary President, Mrs. Corrin. Nellie Handlin presented the Aux. with a fifty star flag in memory of her Grandfather and Father for whom Tomer Butte was named.

There were about 1,000 used stamps intended to be sent to The Childrens Orospeith Hospital in Seattle, and for the Council of Churches' foreign relief.

Five Community Day Queen Candidates to Appear on TV

Arrangements have been completed for a television appearance of the five candidates for the honor of Queen of the Genesee Community Day. The five young ladies, Sharon Ahern, Verdelle Kinzer, Dime Springer, Diane Krier, and Sharon Whitted will be on the "Our Town" program broadcast over KLEW-TV in Lewiston on April 20, the day before the local celebration.

Others from Genesee who will appear on the program to help publicize the event are: Phyllis Danielson, and Larry Sorenson, lobbyist.

The local delegation, with help from the youth legislature committee, prepared a "bill" that was designed to provide for the appointment of certain elected officers. This bill was referred to the State Affairs committee, and after careful consideration, was passed to the Senate. The Senate passed the bill 45 to 3, and the House passed it 40 to 4. It was then sent to the Youth Governor, Phil Reberger, of Caldwell, who signed it, making it a law.

The Idaho Y. M. C. A. Youth and Government program has as its total objective an understanding of Idaho young people in the process of legislation. It is a citizenship training program, designed to bring to Idaho high school young people, through actual participation, an understanding of the processes by which we make laws to govern ourselves; it attempts to help young people think through some of the complex problems we face as a state, and to accept for themselves some of the responsibility for helping to solve them.

Easter Seal Campaign Goes Into Final Week

MOSCOW — A final plea for Idaho residents to send in Easter Seal contributions to finance services for crippled children and adults has been issued by Neil (Skip) Stahley, state Easter Seal chairman.

The month-long Easter Seal campaign ends Easter Sunday, April 17. "The donation envelopes mailed to 138,000 Idaho homes cannot help but be returned with a contribution," said Stahley, who is athletic director of the University of Idaho. "Our Easter Seal campaign is the major source of funds for the worth-while program of patient aid and rehabilitation care which the Idaho Society for Crippled Children and Adults provides for our handicapped children throughout the state."

Surveys have shown that about 18,000 Idaho school children have speech and hearing difficulties and nearly 4,000 youngsters need orthopedic aid, he said.

The Easter Seal Society will establish a new speech therapy center in Twin Falls August 1, and future centers are planned at Pocatello and Lewiston to provide help to children throughout Idaho.

Many handicapped children already receive services and special education provided at the Boise Easter Seal Center, Stahley said. This center was opened four years ago with funds raised by Easter Seal drives and contributions.

Donations also make it possible for crippled youngsters to attend Camp Easter Seal on Lake Coeur d'Alene where they take part in specialized programs of crafts, swimming, hiking and outdoor education.

Stahley said ninety percent of the funds raised during the current drive will remain in Idaho, with counties retaining one-fourth of the amount they raise for direct aid to local crippled persons.

Easter Seal donation envelopes have been mailed directly to the Idaho Society for Crippled Children and Adults, 128 South 5th Street, Boise, he added.

Open Bowling Stops for Summer

There will be no more open bowling at the Genesee Legion Allers for the remainder of the summer; it was announced this week by Chuck Manfred, manager of the local lanes. The amount of open bowling now going on does not justify keeping the alleys in operation.

Summer Leagues In Progress

While the alleys will be closed to open bowling, two summer leagues are now in progress. There is a mixed summer league playing on Tuesday and Wednesday of each week which will continue on for some time. In addition the Junior Bowling League will continue with play on regular Saturday morning play.

Community Day Queen Candidates to Appear on TV

Community Day will be C. D. Manfred and Bill Emerson, and the members of the queen committee.

Radio station KOPF of Pullman, which will cover all the day's activities on May 21, will also be in Genesee for a remote broadcast on Friday afternoon, May 20.

Ticket Salesman Attention

Chuck Manfred, general chairman of the Community Day asked all ticket salesmen who are selling the prize tickets to certain to turn the stubs bearing the votes for queen candidates in to him as soon as a book of stubs become available. This will allow the committees to keep a more accurate record of ticket sales and will help prevent any losses or misplacements.

Ambulance Will Be Ordered Soon

Members of the board of directors of the Genesee Community Firemen met this week and have decided, basically, on the type of ambulance which they wish to purchase to replace the present emergency unit.

It was decided to purchase a regular ambulance body for the new vehicle, rather than a re-modelled station wagon type body which was also under consideration by the firemen. This style ambulance will prove slightly more costly, but it was felt that it would give better service both for the men handling the vehicle and also for the ones who will receive its services.

The ambulance will probably be mounted on either a Plymouth or Ford chassis. The board of directors have asked for bids from each of the two agencies in town. The chassis, when purchased, will then be sent to the company that installs the ambulance bodies and the body will be fitted to the vehicle.

It is expected that the completed ambulance for the new ambulance will be in the neighborhood of $4,000. This is more than was collected in the recent fund raising drive, but the directors hope to be able to finance the remaining amount through the Fire Department.

Population Increase Expected for Idaho

A steady but unspectacular population rise is forecast for Idaho during the 1960's in a report released Wednesday by the state Department of Commerce and Development.

The report estimates that Idaho's population, currently about 630,000, will increase to 727,000 by 1970. The state's 1950 population was 588,637.

James Anderson, in charge of research for the Department, says the state will have to be content with a steady but unspectacular population growth as long as young people leave the state to find jobs somewhere else. "If Idaho's population increase is to include the sons and daughters of her citizens, we must provide a variety of jobs for their employment through an active industrial development program," he says.

The report makes these points: Mechanization on the farm has resulted in less agricultural jobs. If young men cannot find jobs in manufacturing and industry in Idaho, they will leave the state to get good jobs. As Anderson points out, however, the state will have to be content with a steady but unspectacular population growth as long as young people leave the state to find jobs somewhere else. COCCIDIOSIS

By Dr. E. M. Gilbow Director, Friskies Research Kennels

A dog disease that's more often detected now, especially in warm, moist areas of the country, is coccidiosis. It seems to pick mostly on pups and young dogs, since most old dogs are immune, and is an acute or chronic intestinal infection.

The chief symptom is a dark sticky diarrhea, which, in many cases is accompanied by depression, general weakness, loss of weight and anemia from loss of blood. The disease is easily mistaken for distemper since the two have such similar symptoms. A veterinarian may make a positive diagnosis and determine which of the three types of coccidiosis the puppy is suffering from by finding the coccidia in the feces.

In the past, there was no satisfactory treatment for this disease, but today sulfa drugs are being used with marked success.

How to avoid coccidiosis? The surest way is by strict attention to sanitation. Puppies should be provided with water that is clean and dry. Their feeding and drinking dishes should be washed thoroughly after each meal. Where the disease is especially prevalent, the rearing of puppies in wire floored pens will help reduce infection. If such strict rules of cleanliness are adhered to and puppies are fed a well balanced diet they tend to gradually build up a natural immunity to the disease. The chance of its being an acute infection is reduced, if not eliminated, where proper sanitary practices are followed.

Feeding Tip: If your puppy is a picky eater he may be deficient in vitamin B-1. Giving him an all-purpose dog food such as Friskies, which contains liver, and other good sources of vitamin B-1, should perk up his appetite.

FISHERY WORKERS FLOAT DOWN MIDDLE FORK TO STUDY CUTTHROAT POPULATIONS

By Jim Humbird Idaho Fish and Game Department Ninety-two boats carrying 570 fishermen floated through the turbulent heart of Idaho's million-acre Primitive Area last July. That was the big month for white water adults, but all summer long from April through September the traffic over the 100-mile expanse of the Middle Fork of the Salmon river was reminiscent of numerous boating resorts around the state on Sunday afternoons.

Six of the trips down the Middle Fork to its confluence with the "River of No Return" were made by workers of the Fish and Game department. These men were not sensitive to thrills incidental to shooting the many rapids in their rubber rafts—or to the terrific fishing.

In fact, fishing for cutthroat was the purpose of the trips from Indian creek downstream to the mouth of the Middle Fork. They flew in with their deflated rafts and other gear. Six days later, Fish and Game department trucks picked them up on the main Salmon river and they started all over again.

During the season they caught 669 cutthroat trout, 205 rainbow and 231 Dolly Varden. These fish were tagged and released as the start of a continuing study to get information on population trends, harvest and migration. Eight similar trips are scheduled by the department this year from the first week in April through about September 25, according to James C. Simpson, chief of fisheries management.

In recent years there have been many complaints from guides, outfitters and some sportsmen that the trout fishery on the Middle Fork of the Salmon river was rapidly declining, Simpson says. Increased use of the river by parties who float down in boats has increased the catch of fish throughout the full length of the river.

The fish are tagged for the same reason migratory waterfowl and other wildlife species, including deer and antelope, are tagged. The date and place of the tagging are recorded. Then the success or failure of the system is up to the sportsmen. If—and that's a big one—the anglers return tags from the fish they catch, records soon can be compiled that will show what is happening to Middle Fork cutthroat populations as the result of increased fishing pressure.

When enough data is gathered to determine what is happening to the Middle Fork cutthroat, the department was fittingly observed by the different churches.

May 2, 1890—Mrs. Peter Steltz presented her husband with a mighty fine new girl Tuesday evening.

ment will take whatever steps appear necessary to perpetuate the resource. According to Simpson, "We do not have enough information yet to properly manage this fishery. However, we intend to build up enough facts to show how the fish populations are standing up under the increased angling pressure."

Should the facts show too much fishing intensity, several things may be done. These could be shorter seasons, smaller bag and possession limits, restrictions on types of fishing gear, and others.

Simpson says the cutthroat is unsurpassed as a food fish and is much sought after by anglers. Although it is more difficult to rear cutthroat in hatcheries, it is native to Idaho and has done well in a majority of waters.

Cutthroat can be distinguished from other trout by the red slash on their underjaw, which led a small boy last summer to tell a conservation officer that he and his Daddy were catching "them fish that got the sore necks."

Homes On The Half Shell

NEW HOMES SHIPPED IN TWO PIECES is prefabricating a twist that a Leesburg, Fla., construction firm has recently developed. Idea allows buyers to occupy their new two-bedroom dwellings a mere 12 manhours after its halves arrive by Interstate truck at building site. Even cabinets and wiring already arrive in place. All that remains to be done is bolt halves to each other and to foundation.

JACKED-UP HALF is lowered onto foundation footings laid earlier. Homes have 880 square feet of living space, sell for $6,990 each within a 600-mile radius of Leesburg plant. Price includes hauling of six-ton halves and cost of foundation.

CARPENTRY AND COVERED PATIO extend exterior lines, placing 1,502 square feet under roof. To paraphrase an old saying, "Home is where trucks park it."

National School Assemblies Program

Tuesday, April 19, 2:45 p. m. With the aid of pastel and fluorescent chalks and a huge easel, Mr. Williams' creative imagination transforms the art of sketching into an instructive and entertaining program. His talented artist makes use not only of his sense of humor but perception of character, as well, to provide one sketch after another of scenic beauty, comic cartoons and portrait sketches.

To further dramatize his skills, Mr. Williams makes clever use of background music, appropriate poetry

ment will take whatever steps appear necessary to perpetuate the resource. According to Simpson, "We do not have enough information yet to properly manage this fishery. However, we intend to build up enough facts to show how the fish populations are standing up under the increased angling pressure."

Should the facts show too much fishing intensity, several things may be done. These could be shorter seasons, smaller bag and possession limits, restrictions on types of fishing gear, and others.

Simpson says the cutthroat is unsurpassed as a food fish and is much sought after by anglers. Although it is more difficult to rear cutthroat in hatcheries, it is native to Idaho and has done well in a majority of waters.

Cutthroat can be distinguished from other trout by the red slash on their underjaw, which led a small boy last summer to tell a conservation officer that he and his Daddy were catching "them fish that got the sore necks."

JEHOVAH'S WITNESSES CONVENTION IN WALLACE SET FOR APRIL 22-24

Marvin Miller, Overseer of the Julieta Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, announced that he has received notice of his service appointment for the forthcoming Convention of Jehovah's Witnesses at the Wallace, Idaho Civic Auditorium April 22-24.

Mr. Miller is an assistant to the Assembly Servant, in charge of various departments and their functions and activities.

In commenting on the assignment, Miller said, "Delegation of responsibilities to many individuals has become whereby Jehovah's Witnesses have become known for their efficient and orderly conventions and assemblies. At the 1958 International Assembly, the volunteer directors and their many assistants organized cafeterias that provided and served healthful, bountiful meals at the rate of 70,000 meals per hour!"

"While the Witnesses find value in learning to work together efficiently this way, the principal value lies in the fact that it leaves more time for the main purpose of their Assemblies—instruction in God's Word, plus training, to best share this knowledge with others."

At the forthcoming Assembly, 1 Peter 3:11,12 is drawn on for the Assembly theme, "Seek Peace and Pursue It." A traveling representative of the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society, Mr. M. Kolay, of Brooklyn New York, will be featured speaker. His talk on Sunday afternoon, "Finding Peace in a Troubled World," will be the highlight of the Assembly.

Organic fertilizers, such as barnyard manure or sawdust should be used to make the soil work better and to help hold moisture.

An application of three or four inches of barnyard manure usually supplies plant food for one season. Sawdust used two inches deep must be supplemented with five cups of ammonium phosphate per 100 square feet to make up for the nitrogen loss from the sawdust breaking down.

PULLETS MORE PROFITABLE A flock of pullets is more profitable than a flock of hens that have gone through the first molt. In the extension agent, pullets from county 20 to 40 per cent more than hens in their second year. Pullets will normally lay for 14 to 16 months, they begin to molt. It takes about 12 weeks for a layer to go through molt. During this time the bird uses high protein feed to grow new feathers rather than to lay eggs.

Pullets take less feed to produce a dozen eggs. Jol Black, poultryman of the University of Idaho extension service, says this is because they lay at a higher rate and because they are younger. They need less feed. Pullets also lay eggs of higher interior quality. Their eggs contain a high percent of thick white. This is important in determining egg I. Q.

As the production period increases the shell strength and interior quality go down. Black says a pullet can be fed up to laying age with about the same amount of feed it takes to carry a hen through a molt. The amount is about 20 pounds in either case.

New Squash Variety Orange Buttercup, a recent squash variety, gives a new type of growing well in Idaho, the county agent says this week. Trail by Richard Foley, a horticulturist at the Parma branch station of the University of Idaho, shows it may be adaptable to other Idaho locations of similar soil and weather. Orange Buttercup is small squash with dry flesh. It is a semi-tolerant to curly-top.

Tony Horn, extension horticulturist, says Buttercup is another good Idaho squash. It is tolerant to curly-top and fusarium diseases. Others are Emerald Marbled, which is resistant to curly-top; Buttercup, Delicious Banana, and Hubbard, all not resistant to curly-top.

Summer squash, he said, are some tolerant to curly-top. Recommended varieties are Scallop, Zucchini, Caserta, Yankee, Hybrid and Italian Marrow.

SUGGESTIONS FOR CHEMICALS Use farm chemicals only on crops for which they are specifically recommended. That's the first rule for keeping out of trouble with the spray and dusts, according to Homer Futter county extension agent.

He suggests five other points: Use only the exact amounts recommended on the label. Apply chemicals at the times specified, being particularly sure to keep the right interval of application. Guard against drift. Carefully observe label precautions to protect the persons using the chemicals and to prevent harmful residue on food crops.

FAIR BOOTH REMODELING Food booth remodeling plans are completed. The Latah County Fair Board will meet Friday, April 8th to accept bids on the work that will convert the present food booths at the Fairgrounds to new modern facilities. The present food booth has been inadequate to serve the crowds attending the Latah County Fair.

Plans are to double the capacity which will allow serving fifty people at tables, twenty people at stools besides the stand-up counter space.

Bikes and Easter Vacation Call for Extra Driving Caution

"Be a good egg this Easter—and watch out for those youngsters on bicycles," J. M. Smith, president of Farmers Insurance Group Safety Foundation and the nation's motorists this week.

Easter vacation will be the signal for youngsters to be out in force on their bicycles and motorists will have to keep a sharp look-out for them, he said. In addition, weather in some sections of the country may still be rainy with corresponding low visibility. Parents also should insure their youngster's safety while riding his bicycle if they will insist on the following rules:

1. Obey all traffic rules—signal intention to turn—keep to the right side of the road—ride single file.
2. Do not travel on crowded streets and highways—dismount at extreme right of roadway and walk bicycle across heavily traveled streets.
3. Two hands are needed to balance the bicycle. Parcels and books should be placed in a basket or luggage carrier.
4. Never ride two on a bicycle. Passengers interfere with vision and balance.
5. At night have a light on the front of the bicycle and red light or reflector on the rear. Wear white or light colored clothing.
6. Have bicycle in good mechanical condition at all times.

"Discuss these rules with your children. Their observance may mean the difference between a happy Easter and painful injury for your child," Smith concluded.

ANNUAL SAGE GROUSE BOOMING GROUND COUNTS UNDERWAY

Mating seasons for sage grouse are well past the peak each year before bird biologists and other managment workers move in close to observe the "goings-on" at the many booming grounds across southern Idaho.

Elwood Bizeau, state game bird supervisor says this belated circumstance does not mean that the Fish and Game department misses the boat every spring where sage grouse are concerned.

"During the peak of the mating season, young males are not usually permitted to participate in the strutting ground activity," Bizeau observes. "The old males chase the young ones away until the mating season is past its peak."

"That's when department workers move in—when young birds usually with the older males are invited to show up," he continued. "That way we get a count of the young males on the strutting grounds as well as the older ones."

Bizeau explains that the females show up on the grounds about dawn or a little earlier and are erratic in their pattern of visiting the grounds. Males go only to one booming ground and lay claim to a small area on that ground, compelling no doubt by the instincts for ceremonial strutting, booming and mating.

Observers note the outspread wings and tails, silvery-white capes over shoulders and emit high-toned "popping" or booming sounds. Males are nearly twice as big as the hens and have air sacs which are inflated to serve as sounding board for the peculiar booming noises, which cause the hens to drift down and the mating parade to proceed.

Bizeau says that making sage grouse censuses is no snap because observers frequently must pitch camp

FARMING AROUND

By Mark Welsh

Machines are cheaper than muscles for most farm work. At the University of Illinois was found that automatic feeding equipment does more than double the hard work of cattle feeding.

It makes faster and cheaper gains. Cattle fed six times a day at four hour intervals fed the customer any twice a day. Lights were kept over the feed bunk at night and the automatic equipment regulated the amount of feed as well as the intervals of feeding. In the broiler business, no one would try to compete with a fully mechanized establishment. Hog production is rapidly following the same path and the Illinois department the direction best feeding will take.

It now looks as if "farming as a way of life" is rapidly changing to "Agrubusiness."

At Iowa State College they have shown that crossbred meat-type hogs are more profitable. They grow 14 per cent faster, farrow 12 per cent more pigs, and have 7 per cent better livability. A good meat-type hog will have about 51 per cent lean cuts while the fat-type hogs in the range of 47 per cent lean cuts. Each 1 per cent increase in lean cuts reduced the feed needed by about 4 pounds. Packers want meat-type hogs, the grower can make better profits with them, and women shoppers walk off and leave the fat cuts of pork.

Looks as if women don't want fat on their hogs or husbands either—so there will be some changes made.

Inflation Seen as Danger To Idaho's Household's

PORTLAND — Will America's house be in order for Idaho's family formation thrust of the new decade. To safely shelter both Idaho's new and existing household units, the nation's economic house must be fire-proofed against inflation's flames, according to National Association of Manufacturers' Western Division researchers.

By 1970, more than 16,000 new family units will have boosted Idaho's household total to 203,500, the NAM estimates.

The anticipated increase could add fuel to inflation's fires, unless proper steps are taken now to provide adequate goods and services for that expanding population, NAM research findings indicate.

"A household, as defined in NAM's report, 'Dynamic Decade, 1960-1970,' is a dwelling unit in which related family members live, or where a single person might reside, and includes family units living in both private homes or in apartments.

The NAM examines two facets of this expanding demand and its potential impact on the purchasing power of these Idaho families. First, the question of how much of Idaho's income in the coming years should be absorbed and spent by the various levels of government.

And, the need for investment capital by Idaho businesses which must be started or expanded with in the coming decade to provide needed goods and services. Idaho industry which includes not only manufacturing but also wholesale and retail trade groups the service trades and contract construction, will be faced with the problem as well as the opportunity to provide goods and services for this rising number of Idaho households.

An accelerated rate of inflation could be the consequence of not enough goods and services and of pyramiding government costs. The NAM reports. Excessive spending by government contributes to inflation by the creation of budget deficits and by competition with consumers and business for goods and services in the market place. This high rate of spending is encouraged by the extreme rates of the progressive income tax which attach abnormal proportions of family income.

Excessively high tax rates also lower the desire of many individuals to create or produce more in their work, as the increased monetary reward is progressively higher tax brackets. High taxes also prevent savings. Such savings would ordinarily go into investment in business enterprises, either through direct purchase of shares in American industry, or through investments of life insurance companies, trust funds and other savings plans.

The NAM report points out that business is prevented from producing kets for additional funds, which in itself adds to inflation. The inflationary impact of high government spending has already been felt severely by Idaho residents, according to a prior NAM study completed in 1959. In Idaho alone, well over $875,000,000 of personal income purchasing power was lost to inflation by residents in the eight years between 1947 and 1955. This was over one and one-half times the total for Idaho public school capital outlay, all private hospital assets in the state and the cost of interstate and defense highways within its borders.

Unnecessary federal government spending, particularly where the functions of state and local government are duplicated or usurped, must be curtailed. The NAM contends that government economy would result in triple benefits for Idahoans:

First, a moderate tax system would permit Idaho families to build up personal savings and investment funds. Second, sufficient funds could be provided for the adequate expansion of Idaho business to meet the increased demands of the decade ahead. Third, incentive would be provided for increased production on the part of our national rate of growth would be correspondingly strengthened.

Spelling contests between school children and their parents are usually won by the school children.

Shade Trees are Important. Too. Anyone would have difficulty trying to top the matchless language which the poets have sung of trees. None of us would argue with that most famous assertion that only God can make a tree. Even so, he will do it better with our help.

Next Friday is Arbor Day in Idaho. It is my personal hope that at some time next Friday all of use will stop for a moment to consider what trees mean to us as a livelihood, as a sheer beauty and as an added joy in living.

There is little need to re-emphasize the economic importance of trees to this magnificent state of ours. Nearly 65 per cent of the state's surface is timbered. Forest industry is our second largest employer and producer of income. The lumber industry is important in better than half of our counties.

We used to produce saw timber exclusively. Now we are wisely involved in multiple use of our forest products. We make saw timber still. But we are also producing a wide variety of products to utilize all of the wood in the forests. We make paper, fiber-board, containers, plywoods, veneers, soil conditioners and a multitude of by products.

Most of us have a tendency to forget the fact that the trees that grace our streets and parks in most Idaho towns are there because someone planted them. Very few of us would have stopped to think that a good many of these trees are now approaching the age where they are increasingly bad risks for survival. But this is true.

For that reason it is extremely important that the replacements be selected and planted now. Fifteen or twenty years from now will be too late.

Nationally I shall take a firm stand against anything resembling a soft look toward communism and shall support the maintaining of maximum effort in the field of preparedness.

Regarding Federal taxes, I feel it should be made a subject of complete study in overhauling in order to more equitably distribute the tax load. In the government should take place in order to reduce the tax requirements, but feel a tax study should be accomplished and planned now. This one should be put into force.

Leslie T. McCarthy, Born October 6, 1918, at Anaerotes, Washington, moved with his parents to Bonanza Ferry, Idaho, in 1927, receiving his education there, and graduating from Bonners Ferry High School in 1936. He attended the University of Idaho from 1936 to 1942, receiving his B.A. degree.

It would be that every family in Idaho would plant a good shade tree somewhere in our State.

Can you think of a finer monument to a growing boy or girl than a lovingly spreading shade tree that he knows he helped to plant?

I can't. That is why the Smylie boys will help plant a tree next Friday.

A peasant with a troubled conscience went to a monk for advice, saying he had circled a vile story about another, only to find it was not true.

"If you wish to make peace with your conscience," said the monk, "you must fill a bag with chicken down, go through every doorway in the village and drop into each of them a fluffy feather."

The peasant did as he was told. Then he came back to the monk and said he had returned for his folly.

"Not yet," replied the monk. "You must now return and gather up every feather you have dropped."

"But the wind must have blown them all away," protested the peasant.

"Yes, my son," said the monk, "and so it is with evil words. They are easily dropped, but no matter how hard you try, you can never get them back."

WEEDS NOT QUITE AS BAD THIS YEAR, SAYS AGENT

Farmers start on first stage of year's weed fighter program by spraying weeds in the fall wheat. The Fanweed, mustard and other annual weeds aren't as bad as the past two years, reports Homer Fetter, Latah County Agent. Selective spraying using 2,4-D is a money making operation. Research shows that as few as one weed per square foot in fall wheat can cut yields 3 to 5 bushels.

There are three methods commonly used to kill weeds in grain crops, spraying with tractor mounted sprayer, spraying by plane and spraying with a large tank wide boom applicator that applies nitrogen fertilizer mixed with the weed killer 2,4-D.

Good results can be had by either method if timed properly and the correct amounts of 2, 4-D is used, explains Fetter.

Weeds should be sprayed after it has stood and before it goes into the boot stage.

This is when the wheat is 6 to 10 inches tall. If only fanweed, mustard and other easily killed weeds are present, an application using 1 lb. of actual acid 2,4-D in 20 gallons of water will do the job. If groundwell or other tough weeds infest the fields 2 lbs. of actual acid 2,4-D in 20 gallons of water is needed.

Ester type 2,4-D does the best job with groundwell, but on other weeds the amine type is equal in weed killing power although slower in action. Ester type 2,4-D is more volatile and drift on neighboring crops so its use is outlawed after May 15th to protect peas and lentil seedlings.

Getting a good weed kill starts with a calibrated sprayer so the farmer knows exactly how much solution he is applying. Spraying when the weather is warm helps to insure a good weed kill.

any other single traffic citation. according to State Police. The arrests will continue, however. Law enforcement officers list right of way violations and driving on the wrong side of the road as being present in 25 per cent of ALL reported accidents in Idaho. They were present in all three of these death crashes. Arrests are numerous and fines are high for such violations, but the highway slaughter continues.

THREE COLLISIONS CAUSE 12 DEATHS, FIVE INJURIES

Excessive speed was apparent in three different four-death motor vehicle accidents in Idaho during 1959. They were the three worst multiple death accidents in the state that year.

These three crashes have been singled out for study because they occurred in different parts of the state and were the only collisions in which there were four fatalities in each.

Here are some of the facts gleaned from the study. They won't bring back the 12 dead people nor restore the health of three others—two of them have not regained consciousness in nearly a year. The study may provide some information which can be used in an effort to help prevent death accidents resulting in multiple deaths and injuries.

Whether or not "scare tactics" or sensationalism is of value in accident prevention is a debatable subject. However, the record and the facts they reveal are worthy of some serious thought.

In one of these crashes an entire family was wiped out—a 31-year-old man, his 29-year-old wife and their son and daughter, ages five and three. Another four-fatality collision took the lives of a man and wife while their 17-year-old daughter is reported to be in a coma from severe injuries suffered in the wreck. Two other victims of the same crash—one dead and the other still in a "deep sleep" after eight months—left no clues for officers to determine who was driving their death car. A fourth death victim riding with the family that was destroyed, was a guest in Idaho from a foreign country.

Four boys, 10, 14 and two of them 18, were killed instantly in a two-car crash that severely injured a 48-year-old man. Two little girls, ages 6 and 8, suffered injuries in the same crash. Ten of these people were Idahoans and the other two were temporary residents of the state, so the impact of their deaths reached deeply into the communities in which they lived.

In each of the three death crashes at least one driver disregarded rules of caution and broke one or more traffic laws, the record shows. There were other moving traffic violations in addition to excessive speed in every case.

Had these drivers been traveling at recommended rates of speed, some or all of those 12 people might be alive but it is doubtful if the accidents would have been prevented. Remember, there were other violations—two of the drivers were on the wrong side of the road and another failed to yield the right of way. The wrecks would have probably occurred, but lesser speed just might have softened the impacts to prevent instant death and permanent injuries.

What law could have prevented these three particular accidents? Absolutely none. Two of the drivers were killed instantly and the third has not been determined between a dead man and another who has not experienced one moment of consciousness since his injury 3 months ago.

Just what in the way of stricter enforcement might have prevented the accidents and their resulting tragedies? Citations for speeding and ultimate stiff fines lead all other traffic arrests in Idaho. Speed still kills, but there is more public protest about arrests for speeding than for

NEW SCHOLARSHIP PROGRAM FOR UNIVERSITY OF IDAHO

What is considered to be one of the most challenging scholarship programs for the nation's top students has been adopted by the University of Idaho, President D. R. Theophilus announced this week.

Dr. Theophilus said that the Board of Regents at its Pocatello meeting had approved a program in which the out-of-state students will automatically be refunded their non-resident tuition for any semester in which they attain a 3.23 grade average out of a possible 4.0 while carrying 14 credits or more. Residents of Idaho pay no tuition, but out-of-state students currently are charged $250 a year. Thus, a non-resident student who maintains a 3.23 average for four years would receive a scholarship totaling $1,000. The new policy is effective with the start of the fall semester.

"Our first responsibility is to residents of the state, and for that reason we have had to limit our out-of-state enrollment," said Theophilus. "Non-resident students generally must be the upper half of their high school graduating class to be admitted to the university. Under this rule, hundreds of students are turned away annually.

"As a broadening influence, it is important to a university to have students from different parts of the nation and world. But we want to give particular encouragement to the top scholars. A 3.23 grade average is difficult to make. It is, for instance, the average that must be attained throughout college to be considered for Phi Beta Kappa, national scholarly honor.

"It was felt that non-resident students should be awarded a scholarship returning their tuition for attaining the high average. By its charter in 1889, the university granted a free-tuition scholarship to every resident of Idaho.

WOMEN WILL BE LARGE PART OF LABOR FORCE IN 1970

By 1970, one out of three workers will be a woman. This is one of the many facts concerning "Manpower—Training Challenge of the 1960's" brought out by R. L. Switzer, Boise, Bureau of Apprenticeship and Training of the U. S. Department of Labor, in a recent discussion at the University of Idaho.

"One of the most significant developments during the decade of the 1960-1970's will be the percentage of women in each age group who will be in the labor force in 1970," said Switzer.

Nearly half of all women aged 35 to 64 will be in the labor force. The largest increase is expected to take place in the 45-51 age group, whose participation rate will rise to about 55 per cent.

"The problem of training new young workers to productive people, and the re-training of the older workers is the challenge we are facing," he said.

Job opportunities will increase in occupations that require the most education and training. Professional and technical workers will increase about 41 per cent; proprietors and managers about 24 per cent; skilled workers 24 per cent; semi-skilled workers 25 per cent and unskilled workers, and in the farmers and farm workers there will be an actual decrease of 17 per cent.

"This is ample cause for alarm and action," said Switzer. "In a period during history when we are struggling to maintain the leadership of the free world, we are faced with the utilization of a large group of people education."

Dropouts tend to get lower paying service and laboring jobs. High school and college graduates usually get the better jobs.

three preceding years. If this statement shows that your wages have not been reported your social security office will be glad to assist you in establishing these wages.

MOTORISTS USUALLY GETTING TRAFFIC TICKET

Ever wonder how police officers are able to control their tempers as well as they do?

Ever hear the whimpering and wailing of a "mistreated" motorist who has lost his "right to drive" for "just taking one little slip?"

Ever hear "How stupid they are to set the speed limits too low," or "that dumb cop should be fired for giving me a ticket for only doing 70 in a 50 mile an hour zone?"

Ever hear "How stupid they are to be injured from a wreck?"

Here's something to think about. Records of 23 of the traffic deaths so far in 1960 are enlightening. In some of them there might be some question about who should have the tag "stupid"—the law or one or more of the drivers.

"These facts most definitely point to the great need for persuading youth to stay in school, and for schools to provide vocational counseling even before the eighth grade," Switzer added.

ESCALLOPED BEEF

Here is a Monday recipe after the Sunday roast, a one-dish meal that amount of left-over beef roast, and amount of left-over beef roast, and brown gravy.

Into a baking dish slice a layer of raw potatoes, then beef, potatoes, etc., seasoning each layer. On top pour your cold gravy, a can of cream ed mushroom soup, a cup of cold milk and a layer of grated cheese, and real thin slices of mild cheddar. Bake in over at 400 degrees for 40 minutes or until potatoes are tender.

Most of them were dead when officers arrived. That is, seven of the speeding drivers were, so were the five of them who ran stop signs. The same is true of three of the day dreamers.

How about the rest of them? "They have constitutional rights, you know, and they really didn't mean to kill anybody. Besides, they got heavy payment on their cars, TVs and outdoor motors and they just gotta have their cars to get to work."

"Who says they need their cars?" "It's for sure the "dumb cops" don't make that decision any more than what punishment will be meted out

There is no surplus in trained agricultural graduates. Each year 15,000 new jobs open up, but we graduate only 7,000 a year.

These are well-paid jobs with lots of opportunity to advance into the upper-bracket administrative positions in the industries connected with farming and food handling. It takes a top man, well-trained, to run a big modern farm today; but the big opportunities are in the food processing, marketing and distribution fields.

LAW DAY ATTENTION FOCUSED ON TRAFFIC

Law Day U. S. A. is being observed again this year with programs sponsored by the legal profession whose members will appear before student groups and civic organizations to call for the reeducation of the American people to life, liberty and pursuit of happiness under law.

A prime purpose of Law Day, which was first observed May 1, 1958, is to focus public attention upon laws and the indispensable elements of a free society. As one speaker stated, "Much of the body of statutory law under which we live had its genesis in moral law."

Traffic laws, like all others, had their genesis in moral law and were nurtured by safety rules which had to be applied as the automobile shrank space and everyone found they were living closer together. As traffic laws based on moral law and safety rules came into being, the legislative, executive and judicial branches of government found themselves in a massive unhealed ulcer that during any comparable period in history, in defining use of the word "law", Glenn R. Winters, executive director of the American Judicature Society, said, "We are forbidden to speed on the highway so that others may enjoy their right to travel the same road in safety."

While traffic laws, enacted by the legislative branch of the state government, and enforced by the executive branch through its law enforcement officers, require limitations on some better performance and higher morale. The University of Idaho was among the schools receiving bookshelf sets.

COLLEGES GET BOOKSHELS ON EMPLOYER AIDS

Bookshelves aimed at improving businessmen's personnel management techniques have been distributed to two dozen Pacific Northwest colleges and universities by the National Association of Manufacturers.

Seven booklets offering specialized help to smaller companies and packaged in a hardboard case entitled, "The Businessman's Employee Relations Bookshelf" were mailed from NAM regional offices in Portland.

The bookshelves were published by NAM's industrial relations division to point the way to "more productive relationships in the plant, individual liberties, they are nothing compared to the protections they offer. The individual still has his third branch of government—the judicial where he has his hearing on alleged traffic offenses.

David Saroff, chairman of the American Heritage Foundation, said in an address on Law Day, "No one claims that law, in any society, is always and automatically synonymous with justice. Being a human institution, it is subject to the errors and confusions inherent in all mortal affairs. But we can say with assurance and pride that in our country equal justice under law is the universally accepted ideal, and that this ideal has come closer to realization in our America than in all but a few other countries."

The biggest field to capture the eye of the public today is that involving the accident, injury and death toll on the highways. Much of this results from the lack of affection for safety laws, which are no more than safety rules and moral law as prescribed 5000 years ago.

The moral issue and its connection with traffic laws is best described by the Cleveland Plain Dealer, which said, "Lawlessness is responsible for a staggering percentage of American traffic slaughter, so costly in life and equipment. Drive a car within the legal limit on a 60 M. P. H. highway and nearly every other car on the road will pass you. Too numerous to total are those fatal accidents caused by impatient drivers ignoring no-passing zones. You have heard of parents cautioning children in the rear seat of a car to watch for traffic police while the parents break all the rules of the road. Then they wonder why the children break other laws, not nearly as important as those of the highway."

About 6 per cent of the income of Americans after taxes go into various forms of savings, according to an estimate of the American Bankers Association.

This service is currently being extended to our 1960 high school senior group.

To insure that its counselors are adequately trained for this important work, the Employment Security Agency has recently adopted minimum standards for counseling preparation, requiring college graduation and training in guidance, in addition to a comprehensive continuing inservice training program.

I am extremely interested in seeing that our young people receive all possible information and guidance to enable them to make the best possible vocational choice. I am equally interested in the development of a more strengthened economy to provide for more employment opportunities for these new citizens as they enter the labor market within our own State.

new ALL-IN-ONE PLANT FOOD SOLVES FERTILIZER FUDDLE

SCIENCE AND NATURE COMBINE TO BRING YOU THE FIRST ALL PURPOSE ORGANIC GARDEN-LAWN FOOD

Until now it took three kinds of plant food to (1) fertilize, (2) mulch and (3) build soil. NOW revolutionary Potlatch Garden-Lawn Food does all three.

A newly patented process gives you a rich organic humus with just the right amount of chemical nutrients heat-bonded to every particle. Tests by a leading Northwest university prove Potlatch lasts longer. Nutrients are slowly released, because the shredded bark humus is activated by a scientific formula of Nitrogen, Phosphorus and Potash.

It's non-burning, easy to apply and economical, because it eliminates the need for peat moss or special soil builders.

POTLATCH organic GARDEN-LAWN FOOD

Leslie McCarthy Calls For More Adequate Roads

Calling for more adequate roads in Idaho's First Congressional District, Leslie T. McCarthy, Lewiston, attorney Tuesday (April 26) at Priest River, opened his campaign for the Democratic nomination for U. S. Representative from the First District. McCarthy gave his opening speech to the Bonner County Democratic Women's Club at Priest River. He emphasized that the First District embraces a geographical area which has been one of the largest untapped reservoirs of natural resources of any similar area in the United States. Idaho's roads are one of the basic reasons for lack of development of the First District, McCarthy said. "We can probably claim the unique distinction of having more chuck holes per mile of road than any other state in which you can travel. I prefer to work on the principle that we should push for construction of many good roads to pave the way for development of our great wealth of natural resources."

Wednesday (April 27) McCarthy visited with party officials at McCall and Thursday (April 28) was to meet at Boise for a brief conference. McCarthy will speak on the importance of health education and prevention of disease at the Idaho Public Health Association meeting at Pocatello Friday (April 29).

AN APRIL SONG

There's a song in my heart in April When the willflowers nod and blow; A song of peace and happiness Tender and sweet and low.

It sings of the bunch grass waking When the birds come north again; Of the nostalgic joy I find When I walk a county lane.

Of the apple blossom glory The May-time sun will know; That the bond of beauty is never broken As the Aprils come and go.

Report from the GOVERNOR

LAW DAY WAS AN IMPORTANT OBSERVANCE

The American Bar Association's program last week for the observance of May 1st as Law Day has a significance all of its own. It is a well advised citizen who truly appreciates how much of his individual liberty and dignity depends on the maintenance of our concept that this is a government of laws and not of men.

Not is it strictly accident that May 1st has been chosen for these nationwide observances. Lost in the mists of ancient time we find the origins of the May Day celebration. It was a Druid festival in old England. As recently as my childhood, May Day was a time for May Poles and May Baskets. I remember one occasion when I was about seven when the little blonde girl with curls in the next block was so charming that I spent a whole day and a hard-earned nickel contriving a May basket for her.

But history has taken some turns since those nostalgic memories were real. The Russian Communists sort of misappropriated May Day and made it the occasion for a world wide celebration of the Communist conspiracy. In Red Square in Moscow Russians parade their military might. Annually the occasion has been used as one where the free western world is threatened with what the Communists call the inevitability of world wide Communist rule.

True, the bluster has come down a bit of recent years, but the threat implicit in their celebration is still a real thing.

For that reason, it is important that we undertake this countering force of a celebration designed to focus our attention on the benefits of a government where liberty and equality exist as a matter of law. The legal profession furnishes programs to our schools. Radio, television and the newspapers all have contributed to a re-awakening of interest in this deepest root of freedom.

And the effort has been successful. It started about five or six years ago. Now the observance is carried forward in every American state. It has had a measurable and beneficial impact on the appreciation of our citizens of the worth of their heritage of liberty. More importantly it has focused attention on the fact that it is a government of law that makes our kind of society possible.

It seems to me that we don't openly venerate these great principles of our constitutional system as much as we should. The famous old Fourth of July celebrations don't seem to come off any more. The oratory in the Park is a thing of the past. I am sure we'd all be better off if we spent a little more time out of each busy year just thinking about the greatness of our system of government and how peculiarly it has been suited to the busy up-moving development of America.

If we all thought about our constitution and our liberties a little more, we wouldn't have to worry about indoctrinating our young folks with a love of our country. They would have that and they would cherish it with a fierce and unyielding pride. For that reason, I hope, deeply and fervently, that the message of Law Day was heard all through our land, loud and clear.

Answer— If you are an employee with earnings exceeding $1,200 a year, your excess earnings are determined in multiples of $80. For every $80 or fractional part of $80 over $1,200, you will lose one month's benefits. However, no deduction can be made for any month in which you did not earn $100, regardless of your total earnings for the year.

In the five northern counties of Spawton, Bonner, Kootenai, Benewah and Shoshone, lowland lakes are traditionally open for a special trout season extending from May 1 to October 31, although the general game angling season will not begin until June 4.

Parhandle boat waters will be more crowded this year because of the Bureau of Reclamation's plan to open the Snake lakes will attract most attention, particularly in view of the annual biggest-fish derby. These big lakes are known as rainbow trout, steelhead and mackinaw. But the Snake lakes are based on last year's fishing and hunting license sales, including combination and non-resident, who find outdoor recreation without using either rod or gun.

The number of people who hunt and fish in Idaho roughly corresponds to half the state's total population—and the statistics are growing each year. This emphasizes that the problem of public access to hunting and fishing areas is multiplying with the passage of time.

At the request of Gov. Robert E. Spivey several years ago, Assistant

Attorney General Edward J. Aschenbrenner clarified Idaho statutes relating to the rights of fishermen, the rights of private property owners in an abstracted type-written, single spaced, eight-page review of the Idaho law on these points are as follows:

1. Hunters, fishermen and trappers in Idaho may travel the navigable streams of the state from the high-watermark on one side to the high-watermark on the other side—this without civil or criminal liability. In other words, so much of the bank as is below the high-watermark is a public highway.

A stream is navigable within the meaning of this rule upon which floating logs can be floated to market or other place of use during high-water season.

2. Any person who trespasses upon real property in Idaho is civilly liable to the owners or occupant for nominal damages despite the absence of actual damages.

3. Any person who trespasses upon real property in Idaho is civilly liable to the owner or occupant for the actual damage resulting from the trespass.

4. Any person who trespasses upon their lands to hunt or trap game birds by acts of the trespasser attended by willful malice, fraud or gross negligence, is civilly liable to the owner or occupant for punitive damages.

5. Any person who trespasses upon real property in Idaho which has been fenced and who goes through cultivated crops thereon which have not been harvested or who does actual damage to any property within inclosure is guilty of a misdemeanor and criminally punishable therefore.

6. Any hunter or trapper who trespasses upon enclosed real property in Idaho which has been posted at least every 80 rods is guilty of a misdemeanor and criminally punishable therefore, although the premises were not fenced.

Cultivated lands within the meaning of this rule are lands of which at least 50 per cent of the area within the inclosure is used for cultivated crop purposes and/or artificially irrigated pastures.

That first point declaring the banks of a meandering stream below the high-watermark to be public highway certainly was not intended to prevent private ownership of property on either side and right up to the "meander marks". So it is that many of the finest beach and access sites along many rivers, streams and lakes have been purchased or leased for private use. And many fine waterfowl hunting spots along major waterways have been acquired by private interests.

Naturally the Fish and Game department does not obtain land merely to keep it out of private ownership. Director Ross Leonard says, in fact, that the department is not interested in land ownership or control except when it contributes directly to the welfare of fish and wildlife—or provides public access to such resources.

"Some land acquisition affords not much more than a trail or narrow path through private property so that the public can reach important fish and game resources and share in the harvest," he explains. "Whether big pieces or merely strips to provide access is rough, marginal tracts, although many have patches which can be cultivated. Grain crops, perennial grasses, shrubs and trees, and other forage are planted in a continuing program of development."

Leonard lists four types of land acquisition as basic in the department's policy. These are (1) purchase of public lands; (2) purchase of lease of migratory waterfowl and upland game bird areas; (3) big game range especially wintering areas or along migration routes; and (4) administrative sites for fish rearing units, patrol stations and the like.

Access to hunting and fishing areas is becoming acute, says Leonard particularly along access to the her- Snake rivers. Access to the Big Wood river valley rests on a delicate balance of relations between landholders and sportsmen. Similar problems are to be found all over the state.

Idaho Trespass Laws Are Explained For Sportsmen

Pheasant Crowding Counts Efforts to get annual trend counts on pheasants by listening to the number of rooster calls at stations spaced at one mile intervals is underway and will be completed next month. This data will be used in conjunction with pheasant count routes which are to be run late in the summer after

During the past several months, a ground swell of controversy has shaken the state because it graphically etches basic problems underlying landholder-sportsmen relations—and could destroy a highly-valued American tradition.

The inalienable right of equal hunting and fishing privileges available to everyone is defended by a vast army of sportsmen, the "good guys" who respect private property, the game laws and observe the niceties of outdoor etiquette. All this is undone, however, by a small minority of cheap petty larcenists, the "bad guys" who do not recognize that individual responsibility is the handmaiden of privilege.

Some landholders are interested in a proposition which purportedly would protect their property from hoodlums, insure them against damages and provide monetary reward for closing their lands to public hunting. Many observers throughout the state believe that the real test to determine whether such ideas gain a foothold in Idaho is yet to come, that the record established between now and the autumnal equinox between landholders and sportsmen will tell the tale.

One point is clear. Landholders need the hunters, whether they raise pheasants or deer. If enough of the "good guys" in every community make life miserable for fishermen and hunters who will not respect property and obey game laws the American tradition of equal hunting and fishing privileges available to everyone may prevail.

The stakes are high, but these privileges cannot be lost.

Huge Water Storage Reservoirs Breathe Deeply Twice a Year

By Jim Humbird

Idaho Fish and Game Department Miles and miles of deep, clear water impounded in reservoirs behind huge dams frequently give the idea that here would be good fishing. It does not always work out that way. Even when a newly created reservoir produces phenomenal angling for a few years, this may be just an interlude while a population explosion of carp, squawfish and some other undesirable rough fish is occurring.

It takes more than many acres of water to provide good sport fishing, whether for trout or warm water species such as bass, crappies or perch.

At least three basic physical changes take place when a river is blocked by steel and concrete or other type barrier. These are in water temperature, velocities and turbidities. There are also changes in the amount of the wide fluctuation of water levels found in some reservoirs where seasonal draw-downs are practiced, causing the water to rise and fall.

Where it took fingerlings six days to migrate 60 miles down-stream with a current, the damming of the river and destruction of most of the velocity now compels the little fish to swim continuously about 20 days to cover the same distance—assuming they can tell which way the ocean lies! Last spring, it required 100 much time for baby salmon to swim down the Brownlee pool to fish traps in the mid-Snake River, and their lost migratory instinct. They have remained in the reservoir over the past year. Now as yearlings, they have recovered their compulsive drives to get to the Pacific. What effect this will have on the life cycles of these fish is unknown, but fisheries workers throughout the north-west and the nation are studying the situation carefully.

Turbidity, that opaque muddiness so characteristic of some types of reservoirs also is believed to influence fingerling migration. It is a function of water temperature and velocity. This condition varies. Lately, turbid water went all the way through the huge Brownlee reservoir. Unlike the other years, the marksmen stayed in the water until all of the water reaches 39 degrees.

Reservoirs and lakes take their second deep breath with the coming of autumn. Winds lower the water surface temperature throughout the north-west and the nation are studying the situation carefully.

Being a poor conductor of heat, water is warmed or cooled by wind and wave action more than by the sun. That is the reason reservoirs are warmer in the spring and cooler just as slowly in the autumn.

For example, the less dense waters near the surface of a reservoir are near freezing in the springtime, while the water at the bottom is at a constant 39 degrees. As surface waters are warmed, they get denser and sink, thus gradually mixing all layers of water until the reservoir sinks as it becomes heavier. The circulation continues until all of the water reaches 39 degrees.

Then winter. The surface temperature of the water is much lower than the water at the bottom. This means that if seasonal water draw-downs remove the top 20 feet of a reservoir even just once a year, fish food production has been destroyed. Anyone driving along the shoreline of a reservoir that has been emptied by 20 feet or more can observe a wasteland of biological desert where the water has been dropped and nothing grows.

Long deep reservoirs that have flooded out relatively narrow canyons do not have much shoal waters that are shallow enough for food production. Moreover, they are too warm to be good trout water. Trout like cooler temperatures and, even if present, move down into deep water and are not available to anglers under such conditions. Water fluctuation likewise seems to affect the temperature feeding habits of bass and other pan fishes. Many anglers have noted that terrific biting over a period of days has been abruptly ended, for example, by a drastic drop-down at the C. J. Strike reservoir in southwestern Idaho.

Research biologists and management specialists have studied and debated for many years the mystery of how the Pacific salmon grows so fast in the ocean, find their way for thousands of miles through the sea, into major rivers, and the identical gravel beds of tiny Idaho tributaries in which they were spawned three, four and five years previously.

On the other side of the coin, however, are equally big questions about the migratory instincts of sea-going fingerlings of both chinook salmon and steelhead trout. While nobody knows for sure, there is a strong belief that water velocity helps awaken their instincts to migrate down stream. And if the nature of a river has been changed and a huge reservoir many miles long has replaced the meandering flow of perhaps eight miles an hour, the fingerlings are believed to become confused.

Where it took fingerlings six days to migrate 60 miles down-stream with a current, the damming of the river and destruction of most of the velocity now compels the little fish to swim continuously about 20 days to cover the same distance—assuming they can tell which way the ocean lies! Last spring, it required 100 much time for baby salmon to swim down the Brownlee pool to fish traps in the mid-Snake River, and their lost migratory instinct. They have remained in the reservoir over the past year. Now as yearlings, they have recovered their compulsive drives to get to the Pacific. What effect this will have on the life cycles of these fish is unknown, but fisheries workers throughout the north-west and the nation are studying the situation carefully.

Turbidity, that opaque muddiness so characteristic of some types of reservoirs also is believed to influence fingerling migration. It is a function of water temperature and velocity. This condition varies. Lately, turbid water went all the way through the huge Brownlee reservoir. Unlike the other years, the marksmen stayed in the water until all of the water reaches 39 degrees.

Reservoirs and lakes take their second deep breath with the coming of autumn. Winds lower the water surface temperature throughout the north-west and the nation are studying the situation carefully.

Being a poor conductor of heat, water is warmed or cooled by wind and wave action more than by the sun. That is the reason reservoirs are warmer in the spring and cooler just as slowly in the autumn.

For example, the less dense waters near the surface of a reservoir are near freezing in the springtime, while the water at the bottom is at a constant 39 degrees. As surface waters are warmed, they get denser and sink, thus gradually mixing all layers of water until the reservoir sinks as it becomes heavier. The circulation continues until all of the water reaches 39 degrees.

Then winter. The surface temperature of the water is much lower than the water at the bottom. This means that if seasonal water draw-downs remove the top 20 feet of a reservoir even just once a year, fish food production has been destroyed. Anyone driving along the shoreline of a reservoir that has been emptied by 20 feet or more can observe a wasteland of biological desert where the water has been dropped and nothing grows.

Long deep reservoirs that have flooded out relatively narrow canyons do not have much shoal waters that are shallow enough for food production. Moreover, they are too warm to be good trout water. Trout like cooler temperatures and, even if present, move down into deep water and are not available to anglers under such conditions. Water fluctuation likewise seems to affect the temperature feeding habits of bass and other pan fishes. Many anglers have noted that terrific biting over a period of days has been abruptly ended, for example, by a drastic drop-down at the C. J. Strike reservoir in southwestern Idaho.

Research biologists and management specialists have studied and debated for many years the mystery of how the Pacific salmon grows so fast in the ocean, find their way for thousands of miles through the sea, into major rivers, and the identical gravel beds of tiny Idaho tributaries in which they were spawned three, four and five years previously.

On the other side of the coin, however, are equally big questions about the migratory instincts of sea-going fingerlings of both chinook salmon and steelhead trout. While nobody knows for sure, there is a strong belief that water velocity helps awaken their instincts to migrate down stream. And if the nature of a river has been changed and a huge reservoir many miles long has replaced the meandering flow of perhaps eight miles an hour, the fingerlings are believed to become confused.

Where it took fingerlings six days to migrate 60 miles down-stream with a current, the damming of the river and destruction of most of the velocity now compels the little fish to swim continuously about 20 days to cover the same distance—assuming they can tell which way the ocean lies! Panhandle Lake Fishing Fled by Boaters

Thousands of eager anglers will flock to boat waters in five northern Idaho counties a week from Sunday through Saturday more than a special 100 lowland lakes where a special trout season rings up the 1960 crop.

Principal quarry will be the week-end trout on May 1, the Fish and Game department said this week-end. Biggest of the special trout kamloops rainbow trout of lake Penduck in 1947.

According to Ross Leonard, department director, four of the top five prizes and all five honorable mentions in the 1959 fishing contest were boated at Pend Oreille. This was the 14th consecutive year that Idaho kamloops trout were listed among national winners.

Panhandle anglers annually make quite an event of the May Day lake trout fishing opener, holding a Kam-trout fishing open, holding a Kam-trout celebration which generally is keynoted by Gov. Robert E. Smylie and other state and local dignitaries—fishermen all.

Kamloops trout and tackle-busting kamloops anglers are making much more attention during opening week-end, according to Leonard, but not to be overlooked are the landlocked kokanee or blueback salmon. The annual catch of this evolutionary descendant of Pacific Ocean sockeye salmon for the past seven years has exceeded a million fish per season.

General trout season on the state's rivers is in full swing. The Snake and most mountain lakes, begins June 4.

The United States Supreme Court upheld the eight hour day for railroad workers in 1917. The vote was 5 to 4.

Uncle Tom's Cabin was the first book in America to sell in excess of a million copies.

It takes about 32 degrees. The water cools itself from air with an ice coat. The water is in stagnation period. Winter fishermen move in, find that middle warm layer of water, the thermocline, and begin hauling out perch and even trout.

STANDARD OIL COMPANY TO INTRODUCE NEW ANTIKNOCK COMPOUND

The first new commercial antiknock compound developed by the petroleum industry in 33 years, was announced by Howard G. Vesper, President, Standard Oil Company of California, Western Operations, Inc.

The new compound will be known by the trade-mark "Methyl" and will be used exclusively in the company's three Chevron gasolines.

"For many years our subsidiary, California Research Corporation, has sought a more efficient antiknock agent for gasoline," Vesper pointed out. "This has been important because our engines demand an antiknock compound that can withstand temperatures and pressures several times greater than were used in automobile engines in 1922 when the first antiknock fluid was introduced."

"Methyl" steps up octane performance so effectively that it stops power wasting knock better than any other antiknock compound for both new and older cars. In addition to extensive tests in California Research Corporation laboratories, Methyl has been proved in more than 2 1/2 million miles of road service," Vesper explained.

Starting April 25, Standard will announce this research breakthrough in an extensive advertising campaign utilizing newspapers, outdoor radio, television and magazines. On this television, it will start marketing gasolines containing Methyl at Standard Stations and Chevron Dealers at no increase in price.

FUND DRIVE STARTS TO ENLARGE HOSPITAL By Marguerite Laughlin Member of the Board of Directors Moscow Hospital Association The decision by the Board of Directors of the Gritman Hospital to modernize and enlarge the hospital is the result of long and careful planning, much work and many meetings of the Board. A review of minutes of Board meetings of the past years demonstrates the length of time that this idea has been evolving.

The first mention of needs at the hospital which could not be solved by remodeling or stop-gap means was in May 1954. At a board meeting on that date a delegation of doctors said that enlargement of the present building there was no place to go but up. Because this did not seem feasible the Board tried the technique of ignoring a problem in hopes that it would go away. Throughout the ensuing years this need, in addition to a growing list of others, was brought to each board meeting. Among these other predicaments were more bed space, a more efficient kitchen, storage space, laundry facilities, separation of surgery and maternity patients, isolation ward, a pediatric ward, additional labor rooms, recovery rooms and air conditioning.

In May 1958 the first mention was made of using Hill-Burton funds to enlarge the surgery and a firm of architects were authorized by the Board to make preliminary surveys of needs and costs. After this plunger the Board proceeded carefully on a cautious step at a time, through meetings with representatives of Hill Burton, with Public Health Department, with members of the State Board of Health, our own fine doctors and nursing personnel, and with architects. When plans for the remodeling had been drawn, re-drawn and revised, they were submitted, in May 1959, to the Idaho State Board of Health, who approved them, and then to the United States Public Health Department at Denver.

On February 22, 1959 came the approval of the State Health Department, is now being cleared by Hill Burton funds to Gritman Hospital in Moscow. These Federal funds will amount to $338,244 and the Board is now ready for the next step in this Personal Income In Idaho Shows Increase Personal income in Idaho for 1960's first quarter was approximately 4.5 per cent above last year's, and also continues at 4.000 above 1959's. That report is contained in First Security Bank's Newsletter, which is being distributed this week. It is announced by Martin C. Parkins, the manager of the First Security Bank here in Genesee. First Security reports that major increases in personal are reflected in the highest of potatoes and from higher employment and payrolls in the phosphate and lumber industries. "Cash farm income in Idaho in 1960 is anticipated rather close to $400 million or possibly equal to that of either of the two previous years," the Newsletter reports. Poultry, egg, milk, wheat, wool and lamb prices are somewhat higher than 1959's. Cattle prices are $2 to $3 low per hundred weight than a year ago. Potato prices for the 1959 crop have been about double those of a year earlier and are expected to continue above last year's at least into May. Prices for the 1960 crops will probably be lower.

Hampton, Gilje, Win School Posts

Wayne Hampton and Thor Gilje were elected as trustees for three-year terms at the annual school election of Joint School District No. 282, Monday afternoon, May 16.

For a Genesee school election the voting was surprisingly strong. A total of 73 ballots were cast in the two districts. 63 voted in District 1 and ten voted from District 5. This was a welcome figure considering the publicity received several years ago when no one bothered to vote in the election.

In District 1, Wayne Hampton received 37 votes to his opponents, Wayne Roach's, 25. There was one write-in vote cast. Hampton will succeed Henry Koster.

Thor Gilje was unopposed in the election for District 5. Thor polled 10 votes. Thor will remain on the school board. He has been serving out the unexpired term of Howard Blume.

The Genesee Civic Association officers feel that it is their duty to get as much information on the Gritman hospital's fund raising campaign to the Genesee people as possible. With this thought in mind, they have extended an invitation to all people of the community who are interested in, and have questions concerning the hospital to attend.

A sack luncheon will be served by the hospital board.

Top Speakers For Grain Convention

Two speakers of international reputation will be on the program of the 39th Annual Convention of the Pacific Northwest Grain Dealers Association at Spokane June 8 and 9.

Convention Chairman H. W. (Pete) Poort, Jr. said the men are R. C. Woodworth, Vice President or Carlgill, Incorporated, and Richard K. Baum, Executive Vice President of Western Wheat Associates, U. S. A., Inc. They will speak at the convention's second business session at the Davenport Hotel on the morning of June 9. They are the first of five to accept invitations to speak at the convention.

Baum is well known in the Pacific Northwest for his work with the Oregon Wheat Commission. He started his career with that organization in 1947 as a wheat market analyst after graduating from Oregon State College. He was then successively, executive secretary and executive vice president of the Oregon Wheat Commission, a post which he left last July 1 to become executive vice president of the newly organized Western Wheat Associates, a regional organization to promote Pacific Northwest wheat in Asia. Baum will speak on "Developing Markets for Wheat in Asia."

Woodworth, whose topic will be "Marketing the Grain Industry," has been in the industry since 1919. He is a past president of the Minneapolis Grain Exchange and a past president of the National Grade Trade Council. At the present time, he is first vice president of the Terminal Elevator Grain Merchants Association and in that capacity was one of the industry's 18 negotiators in the recent abortive attempt to prevent the Department of Agriculture from lowering rates for the storage of government-owned grain under the Uniform Grain Storage Agreement.

Plans for the convention are reaching their final stages, Poort said. Because of an added business session to be held the morning of June 8, the convention registration desk in the lobby of the Davenport Hotel will be opened at 4 o'clock the afternoon of June 7.

C. D. Manfred Named Idaho's 'Father of Year'

Charles D. Manfred, Northern Pacific Railway agent for Genesee, and an active member in community affairs, was named Father of the Year for the State of Idaho by the Idaho Cow Belles, ladies' auxiliary of the Idaho Cattlemen's Association, who sponsor this yearly contest.

Entry blanks for the Father of the Year contest are passed out at the annual State Cattleman's Convention, and Mrs. Amy Craven, Latah County Historian, distributed several of the entry blanks to different youth organizations in the county. Manfred was chosen as the candidate of the 4-H organizations in the county and his qualifications and recommendations were forwarded to the state level where final selection was made and the winner announced.

The entries are submitted by numbers and the state judges do not know the name of the entrant or the town they are from.

The winner is chosen on the basis of well-balanced family, religious and community life; family spirit of co-operation and sportsmanship; the way the father teaches his children to be self-reliant, capable citizens; and the organizations to which he belongs and the leadership demonstrated.

In addition to his regular position with the Northern Pacific, Manfred is also serving as City Clerk, manager of the Legion Bowling Alleys, a member of Knights of Columbus, coaches the St. Mary's Catholic grade school basketball team; and is active in the Genesee Civic Association, Genesee Merchants Association and Genesee Firemen, Inc.

Breakfast Begins Activity Filled Day

Over four months of work and planning will culminate Saturday, May 21, as the citizens of Genesee present their 3rd annual Community Day Celebration. The Committees for the various activities were formed last January and have been working ever since toward the Saturday Day. Now all plans are complete with the exception of a few minor details which will be worked out Friday.

This year's celebration promises to be bigger and better in every respect. Weather permitting, the parade this year will be almost twice as big as it was last year with more floats, and more riding units to add to the color of the day.

Streets Blocked

The Community Day Committee has asked all residents to avoid parking their cars on Main Street the night before the celebration in order that the concessions committee can start construction of their stands and to avoid the trouble of removing the cars before the parade begins. The parade committee also advised that all persons who are planning to view the parade should be in town between 9:00 and 9:30 since roads will be blocked as a safety measure for the youngsters in the parade. Main street will be sealed off from near the Catholic church down to Lawrence Brown's residence at 9:00 a. m. to prepare for the parade.

Members of the Genesee Unit of the Auxiliary State Police will assist local law officers in control of the traffic and will assist visitors in finding parking space.

Breakfast From 6 to 9

The big day will begin with breakfast being served from 6 to 9 a. m. in the Firemen's Hall. The breakfast will consist of pancakes, eggs, pork sausage and coffee. The price will be $1.

The pet parade and the parade of decorated bicycles has been advanced in time and will start near the home of Mrs. Thelma Hoorman at 9:30. The main parade will move out at 10:00 a. m. and will consist of over 60 units.

Following the parade a gymkhana will be featured in the space between the KP Hall and the Hotel. Riding Clubs and individuals from over the area will compete for prizes and money.

Concessions Open at 1:00 P. M.

Lunch will be available in the Firemen's Hall at noon. Shortly after, the concessions will be open for business. There will be games of all kinds for all ages and they will run until late in the afternoon.

The races for the youngsters will begin at the ball park at 2:00 p. m. There will be races and contests for youngsters of all ages. In addition to the races for kids, it is planned to have an adult tug-of-war with a group from Troy. Also of interest to many will be the free movies that will be presented at the old theatre under the auspices of the American Legion. These movies will be on highway safety.

Dance and Queen Crowning

The climax of the day will be the dance in the Firemen's Hall beginning at 9:00 p. m. Music will be furnished by the Genesee Wranglers, and the highlight of the dance will be the crowning of the Community Day Queen. The crowning of one of five candidates will take place at 9:30 p. m. and the Master of Ceremonies will be Leon Sodorff, Moscow Fire Chief. He will be assisted by Genesee's Mayor Dick Scharnhorst, and Miss Marie Hasfurther, last year's Queen.

Chairman Thanks All

C. D. Manfred, who has been serving as General Chairman of the Community Day celebration, this week expressed his thanks to all those who have worked so hard to make the day a success. He said the fine cooperation he and his committees have received will go a long way in assuring the community of a fine day.

Preliminary Census Report Puts Town Population at 520

Genesee's population was set at 520 in a preliminary announcement this week by Roy E. Mosman, Census District Supervisor at Lewiston.

If this count is correct it would mean that our population is down from the official 1950 figure of 552. This comes as a surprise to most local residents who might have thought that Genesee's population has grown considering the new homes and families that have arrived in the past ten years.

In a letter to the News, Mosman said, "This figure is believed to be substantially correct but is subject to revision after the returns for non residents are credit to their proper locality and other routine checks have been made. Although a significant revision is unlikely, minor revisions may possibly occur after careful examination of the returns. The official announcement of population will be made at a later date by the Director of the Bureau of the Census."

The population of Latah County is up from 20,971 in 1950 to 21,077 in the unofficial count. Other population figures in the county were: Kendrick, 436; Moscow, 11,129; Troy, 555; Onaway, 200.

STATE-COUNTY SAVINGS BONDS SALES REPORT

"Idaho business and civic leaders are taking an active role in promoting U. S. Savings Bonds sales, which for the first four months of the year total $3,364,576," County chairman Acle Anderson said this week.
 "Through personal efforts these volunteers hope to increase individual purchases of bonds at banks and to build up the number of employed men and women who buy bonds through automatic payroll deductions at the place where they work.
 "They expect the new, increased interest rates in bonds will attract $8,600,000 in individual bond purchases in the state and more than $4 billion 650 million nationally by the year's end," the chairman continued.
 "A series of 26 meetings throughout the nation have just been held by businessmen who joined with top Treasury officials to discuss the bond program and chart activities to increase sales during 1960.
 He concluded with the report state sales for April amount to $714,665. Of this amount, county residents purchased $19,541 worth of E and H savings bonds as part of their basic individual or family plans for saving for the future."

FROZEN FOOD CONSUMPTION INCREASING IN AMERICA

We ate half a billion dollars worth of frozen prepared foods last year. That's what the American public put away, according to a report received this week by Ruth J. Shane, county home extension agent.
 Instant mixes and drinks made large gains, the report showed. One cup of coffee in every three is now made from instant coffee.

CLUBWOMEN'S KIT HAS VAULE AS TAX TALK SPUR

America's voting majority—women—will be heard more clearly on the tax rate reform issue in the weeks ahead.
 A new kit urging women to speak up in their club programs and in public has been produced for club distribution by the National Association of Manufacturers.
 Mary B. Brown, director of women's communication for NAM, anticipates a brisk demand for the discussion kit entitled, "Why Bother About Taxes?"
 More than 2,600 women's clubs requested another recent NAM club program guide, she explains.
 "The step from market basket economics to greater understanding of our tax problems is being taken by more and more clubwomen," Miss Brown says. "Intelligent action on public issues then becomes more possible."
 The new NAM kit explains the Herlong-Baker bills (HR 3000, HR 3001), which would stimulate greater economic growth through tax rate reform.
 Women's organizations may obtain program kits by writing the Women's Communication Dept., National Association of Manufacturers, 2 East 48th St., New York, 17, N. Y.

WHEAT GROWERS DISLIKE PROPOSED RAIL RATE CUT FOR MIDWEST GRAIN

BOISE — The Idaho State Wheat Growers Association Friday branded a proposed rail rate reduction for Midwest wheat shipped to West Coast ports as "grossly unrealistic and . . . discriminatory."

ISWGA president Rex Ard, Rexusburg, said the association was asking denial of the rate cut which the Great Plains Wheat Market Development Association had asked of the Transcontinental Freight Bureau.

He pointed out that the proposed rate for wheat shipments from Kansas City of Los Angeles would be less than the rate from Southern Idaho.

"The discriminatory effects of the proposal are obvious when considering the distances and applicable rates," he said. "The per mile rate would be more than twice as great for Idaho as the Great Plains area."

Ard noted that the requested lower rail rates for Midwest wheat ostensibly were for the purpose of getting the Great Plains wheat to ports at lower cost for export to the Far East. But he added that "wheat arriving on the West Coast would immediately lose its identity and find its way into the mills . . . in direct competition with western wheat at unfair, artificial and uneconomic rates."

"Adequate supplies of equal quality hard winter wheat are available in the states of Idaho and Montana to meet the present and foreseeable requirements of the Orient," he said. "The proposed rate would unfairly preclude this wheat from the market for which it was geographically intended."

Ard said the ISWGA felt that "the proposal, in fact, would secure for one wheat growing section an advantage at the expense of other sections."

The wheat growers president said the Ogden Grain Exchange also was opposing the requested cut in rail rates for wheat from the Midwest.

"The intent of this (proposed) rate is to reduce quantities of surplus grains in the Great Plains territory," said the Grain Exchange in a letter to the Milwaukee Railroad. "If such quantities of grain are moved to the West Coast, the only result that can be expected is a pile-up or increase of surplus in the Western States."

The letter from the Grain Exchange also reviewed the work of Western wheat growers in developing Far East markets for their crops.

"This market for the Western States should not be jeopardized by 'pressure' from the Great Plains group requesting privileges and costs allowing them to take advantage of the people who worked diligently with the Department of Agriculture in a program to reduce surplus grain in the Western States," it added.

Harold West, administrator of the Idaho Wheat Commission, said the Pacific Northwest Grain and Grain Products Association, the traffic organization representing growers, millers, handlers and exporters of wheat in the region, had met in Portland Thursday for a "thorough airing" of the Great Plains proposal. He said the association voted to join the opposition to the rate reductions.

fairly recent. One third of the prepared foods were not on the market 10 years ago.

The typical supermarket devotes 80 feet of space to frozen foods and offers wide variety, including about 50 kinds of baby food. Since World War II, sales of prepared baby food have gone up 230 percent. They are a billion-dollar annual business.

The new foods include about 100 mixes for cakes, cookies, and biscuits.

Although the value of frozen foods has soared more than 2700 percent to $2.7 billion, canned foods are still the most widely known items.

CONTROLLING CEREAL YELLOW DRAWF VIRUS

Early planting is the only known method of controlling cereal yellow drawf virus, Homer Futter, county agent, commented this week. The virus that caused extensive damage in eastern Idaho barley last year is spread by aphids. Harry Fenwick, plant pathologist of the University of Idaho extension service, said spraying for aphids when they are first noticed is not likely to help.

The time the farmer sees the aphids on the outer leaves, he said, there are actually 50 or more per plant. All it takes is one aphid carrying the virus to spread the disease. Therefore spraying is too late.

"If the problem arose each year and we could predict it," he said, "We might suggest protection. Since the outbreaks are not predictable, the grower might spray several years in a row and not get any returns for his money. He would need to spray at weekly intervals from the time the crop came up until the grain began to head to protect the plants from infection. Early planting is the only means of control known to date."

Cereals are most susceptible to yellow dwarf virus from the time of emergence to the boot stage. If cereals are heading out, little reduction in yields will result, but test weights will be reduced. If cereals are infected in the seedling stage, plants die. If infected soon after tillering, a few heads will emerge, but the crop will be almost a total loss.

Fenwick said no prediction is possible as to extent of the disease this year. "If your spring grains are seeded three or more weeks after the average date, chances are the virus will again hit the grain."

Week End Openings

All but one of the major regions will open on Saturdays for big game hunting. Such week end openings were resisted until about two years ago because of the heavy hunting pressure they attracted although they long have been advocated by school authorities and office workers. Simultaneous openings last year and this over relatively large areas, tend to spread the pressure, avoiding the excessive convergence of large groups of hunters rushing from one season area opening to another. The exception to the week end opening this year will be the Thursday, September 15 date of deer and elk seasons in much of the back country, including parts of the Chamberlain, Selway, Middle Fork and main Salmon river breaks of the central interior regions. Week end openings in that rugged country are not important because hunters fly or pack in with the idea of staying a week or ten days unless they fill-out earlier with game bag limits.

April Game Violations

A total of $1,426 was assessed in 21 counties for 55 game code violations during the month of April. Half of this sum remains in counties where the offenses occurred. Biggest fine during the month was for hunting elk during closed season in Idaho county. The penalty was $150. Three others of $100 each were levied for illegal possession of deer and elk meat. Most of the offenses were for fishing violations. Eighteen anglers were arrested for fishing in the closed waters, and 13 others were cited for being without valid licenses.

Multiple Deer Regulations

Again this year the Fish and Game commission is opening two-deer areas to draw hunters into rugged, hard-to-get-to regions or into areas where high game populations have been harvested only moderately in the past. This is a kind of extra incentive to get nimrods to do their hunting in such areas because it is known that a properly managed or harvested herd produces at a faster clip than undercropped populations. In other words, a total of three deer may be taken by one hunter if (1) he uses a "regular" deer tag to take one deer in any open area; (2) he uses an "extra" deer tag to take one deer in certain specified areas; and (3) he uses a "Middle Fork" deer tag to take one deer in either unit 26 or 27 (see state big game map).

Special Archery Hunts

Special archery hunts this year were set up by the Commission for five big game species, elk, deer, antelope, mountain goat, and black bear. Bowmen wanting to stalk deer will have a full "baker's dozen" of hunts, including one "split" season. Five special archery seasons will be open for antelope, six for elk, three for bear and one for mountain goats.

Legislative Report

By James A. Goller

BOISE — Idaho voters will go to the polls, June 7, for their first try at the new primary law. For the first time in years voters will have to indicate their party preference and ask for either a democrat or republican ballot. Some "experts" feel that people will be reluctant to name their party and stay away from the polls causing a light primary vote.

Under the new law if a candidate for national or state office (legislative and county posts excluded) does not receive at least 40 per cent of the vote cast for that office there will be a run-off election of the top two candidates three weeks following the primary.

Speculation is running high that there will be a run-off to name the democrat nominee for the U. S. Senate post. Five democrats are seeking the nomination and many think it is doubtful if one candidate can collect 40 per cent of the total democrat vote. Only those persons that participated in the democratic primary would be eligible to vote in the run-off if this becomes true. Hence the Several REAs in the Inland Empire are working with Washington Water Power to increase the uses of electricity in town and on the farm. That's the way it should be. What helps the farmer by way of production, efficiency and convenience reflects back to the business man. Now and then an REA employe is heard to say: "Nope, I'm going to stick with public power. . . . No holding hands with the Water Power." And we can't help but wonder why such loyalty to the socialist movement? Can you explain it?

Men are more injury-prone than women. During a 12-month period, the injury rates were 331 per 1,000 men, compared with 229 per 1,000 women.

On an average day there are 451,000 persons confined to hospitals. But when we take our population as a whole, nearly 111 million people who have had surgical expense insurance, 69 million are protected by policies issued by insurance companies. Now, here's the point I want to make. These same insurance companies probably invest part of their funds in business-managed electric companies. Public power does not believe in profits, hence no stockholders.

Here's one I can hardly believe. Though intelligent Americans don't go for black cats, and witches any longer, still there are some 5,000 working astrologers, people who tell your fortune by the stars. The 10,000,000 Americans who patronize them spend about $12,000,000 annually. Can you beat it?

reason for the party declaration. However, election officials are forbidden to release any information regarding political faith of the voters.

A total of 229 candidates seek nomination for seats to the Idaho Legislature. However, there are many uncontested seats throughout the state.

Barring write-in candidates, nearly one-fifth of Idaho's 1959 legislators—13 Democrats and 8 Republicans—are automatically assured of re-election.

Twenty-one incumbent lawmakers are running unopposed in either the June 7 Primary or the November general elections.

They include seven Democrats in the Senate and six in the House, three Republicans in the Senate and five Republicans in the House.

In 20 of the 44 counties, there are no legislative races in the primary election. In six—Elmore, Lewis, Nez Perce, Teton, Valley and Washington—there are no Republican legislative candidates filed. In three—Clark, Payette and Power—there are no Democrats running for the Legislature.

Five of the top 10 officers of the 1959 legislature—three Democrats and two Republicans—have no visible opposition either for re-nomination in the primary or re-election in the general.

They include Sens. O. J. Burton (D-Teton), president pro tempore; Art Murphy (D-Shoshone) majority floor leader, and Jack Murphy (R-Lincoln). In the House, those without foreseeable opposition in either election include Reps. Robert Doolittle (D-Bonner) Speaker, and Roy Laird (R-Clark), assistant minority floor leader.

Two others, Sen. A. W. Naegle (R-Bonneville), Senate minority floor leader, and Rep. Don Pieper (R-Bonneville), House majority floor leader, won't have opposition until the general election. Rep. W. D. Eberle (R-Ada), House minority floor leader, has opposition in the primary election.

Rep. Gregg Potvin (D-Power), assistant House majority leader, is running for the Democratic nomination for U. S. Senate this year and Sen. Lester Palmer (D-Adams), assistant majority leader in the Senate is moving out-of-state.

Some of the other legislative leaders of 1959 who appear to be shoo-ins for re-election include Sen. Howard Hechtner, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, and Rep. J. W. Monroe, chairman of the House Re-

35 Percent Of Gritman Patients Do Not Live In Moscow

Extent to which Gritman Memorial Hospital, Moscow, serves all of Latah County is brought out in records for the past several years.

Slightly less than half of the patients at this hospital come from Moscow—47 per cent to be exact. Thus, 53 per cent, or slightly over half, come from communities and farms throughout the county.

"For the past 3 years the Board of Directors of the hospital have been aware of the fact that something had to be done to expand and improve hospital facilities," explains R. K. Bonnett, Board chairman.

"Many different possibilities were discussed with federal and state hospital authorities. One was to discard the present plant and move to a new site. That plan would have cost at least $1,500,000."

"After considering all angles, the Board felt that the most economical plan would be to build around the present building modernizing it and making it part of the new larger plant."

In their investigations into various possibilities, the hospital Board found that to modernize the present hospital would have cost $200,000—or just $70,000 less than is being sought in the current campaign for a plant that will be adequate for the county for the next 20 years.

venue and Finance Committee. The two Nez Perce County Democrats are without foreseeable opposition in either the primary or the general.

Twelve of the 17 Republican Senators and 18 of the 22 Republican representatives who served in the last session are running. Two others are trying to change places: Ada County Rep. Sam Kaufman is running for the Senate, and Sen. Carl Burt, for the House.

Twenty-one of the 28 Democratic senators and 28 of the 36 Democratic House members who saw service last year, also are seeking re-election.

FOR EFFECTIVE USE OF 2,4-D WEED KILLER

To control weeds in grain, spray with 2,4-D when the crop is through tillering and before it begins to boot. That's a suggestion of Homer Futter, county agent, based in recommendations of Robert Higgins, agronomist of the University of Idaho extension service.

One pound of 2,4-D per acre will take care of annual broadleaf weeds. The extension service recommends two pounds for perennial noxious weeds.

Here are some other suggestions on use of 2,4-D:

Spray alfalfa two weeks before it is plowed when commercial potatoes or beans are to be the next crop. This eliminates the alfalfa root problem in these crops. Do not spray dairy pastures when they are being grazed. Keep stock out of pastures for at least two weeks after spraying.

Do not spray grain fields immediately before harvest.

Dalpon is one of the few weed killers for which residue tolerances have been established. If used at pre-emergence, it can control quackgrass in commercial potatoes. Use it according to recommendations on the label.

There is no clearance for trichlorobenzoic acids on any crop land.

VARMINT SHOOTERS REMINDED THAT SONGBIRDS ARE PROTECTED BY LAW

The Fish and Game department this week reminded varmint shooters that killing "innocent" birds is a misdemeanor under Idaho law and subject to a fine of not less than $25 or more than $100.

Only eight birds are not included among the legally protected species, according to Director Ross Leonard. These are the English sparrow, crow, raven, starling, kingfisher, cormorant, magpie and pelican.

"With respect to hawks and owls," Leonard added, "the law provides that owners and occupants of land may kill raporial birds when in the act of destroying domestic birds or animals, the property of said owner or occupant, on the land owned or occupied by said owner or occupant."

He said the law specified further that it is the duty of school authorities to provide student instruction concerning the usefulness of "insectivorous, song and innocent birds in the destruction of insects and pests that destroy plant life, and the values of hawks and owls that destroy rodent pests."

A snow survey taken Saturday by the Soil Conservation Service reveals that the snow melt has ended. Moscow Mountain snow course, the highest in the watershed, is bare of snow, as it was last year on the May 15th survey. All lower courses have been bare since the April midmonth survey.

New Electric Rates Now In Effect

New electric rates for customers of the Washington Water Power Company went into effect with consumption on and after May 6, according to V. N. Thompson, Palouse division manager for WWP. "The effect of the new rate is dependent upon the individual customer's use of power," Thompson said. "Under the new rate most town residents will pay from 75 cents to $1.39 more for their electric service, while suburban customers will pay from 50 to $1.05 more. The maximum increase to any residential customers will be less than five cents a day."

Thompson pointed out that under the revised schedule, the separate rate for suburban and farm customers has been eliminated. "These customers will now be billed at the same rate as are our in-town customers," he said. Thompson said that the ever-increasing number of customers on suburban and rural lines of WWP made it possible for the company to eliminate the rate difference between city and suburban customers.

Thompson gave these examples of electric power costs under the old and new rate schedules:

For customers living in incorporated towns for monthly uses of 250 kwh, old rate, $4.96, new rate, $5.70; 500 kwh, old rate, $6.71, new rate, $7.90; 1,000 kwh, old rate, $11.51, new rate, $12.90; 2,000 kwh, old rate, $23.51, new rate, $24.90.

For residential customers in rural areas for monthly uses of 250 kwh, old rate, $5.28, new rate, $5.70; 500 kwh, old rate, $7.03, new rate, $7.90; 1,000 kwh, old rate, $11.83; new rate, $12.90, and 2,000 kwh, old rate, $23.83, new rate, $24.90.

The WWP spokesman pointed out that about one-half of the total increase granted to the company will be paid out in increased taxes.

IDAHO SAFETY COUNCIL WILL PROVIDE SCHOLARSHIPS

The Idaho Safety Council is giving a lift to the state 4-H safety program. Glenn Hall, Boise, chairman, announced this week the council help boys and girls expand their activity. He said the council approved suggestions presented by W. E. Adams, chairman of the farm safety committee and Doyle Symms, chairman of the farm safety committee's annual program. Dan E. Warren, state leader of 4-H clubs for the University of Idaho extension service, proposed the activities approved by the state council.

The safety council will provide a $15 scholarship in each county to help pay expenses of a delegate to the 4-H club congress at Moscow beginning in 1961. Selection will be based on safety accomplishments of candidates in their home communities this year. The outstanding 4-H safety member in each of four districts will be awarded a trip to the governor's safety conference in Boise. "We are sure our safety program will profit by the enthusiasm of our youth," said Adams. "We are glad to cooperate with the 4-H organization which has been concerned with safety for many years." Warren said water safety will be emphasized at the 4-H congress this year. Safe, courteous boating is one of the goals.

CHICKEN LICE MULTIPLY AT TREMENDOUS RATE

Talk about multiplication. Chicken lice can keep up with the mechanical brain.

Homer Futter, county agent, has the evidence from Bob Black, poultry specialist of the University of Idaho extension service. In a recent test a few lice were placed in a hen. Fourteen weeks later there were nearly 25,000.

"That poor hen," Black said, "must have spent a good deal of her time at other things than producing eggs." The problem gets worse as the weather gets warmer, he said. Lice multiply more rapidly when days are warm.

The answer, however, is relatively easy. Spray a one percent solution of lindane on the roosts and dropping pit area. Spray the nests, too. A one percent solution of nicotine sulfate can also be used effectively as a roosts paint. For best results, put the chemical on the roosts just before the birds hop on them for the night.

A parabola is a kind of a curve and a parable is a story with a moral.

TEEN-AGER WINS DRIVER OF MONTH AWARD FOR APRIL

A Moscow miss this week proved erroneous most of the cliches, jibes and adverse comments about "women drivers" and teen age drivers" and their alleged disregard for rules of the road when she was named Idaho's Driver of the Month for April.

Eighteen-year-old Miss Virginia A. Slade, Moscow high school senior and comely daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard S. Slade, was nominated to compete with drivers throughout the state on the basis of her actual driving practices observed by her hometown traffic officers. Her designation of Driver of the Month includes a $100 savings account given by the Idaho First National Bank's Moscow office managed by Elmer Nelson.

Roger P. Marsh, Idaho State Police officer, who nominated Miss Slade, said she had a courtesy driving certificate issued several weeks ago by the Moscow police department which had selected the busy young woman by watching her car over a period of several days. Without her knowledge, this teen-age woman driver was credited with eight points of safe driving practices by city traffic officers who were participating in Moscow's observance of April as Safe Driving Month.

The University city's search for courteous drivers revealed that Miss Slade among other things, indicated all signals in traffic and at stops, approached all intersections with caution and at all times yielded the right of way. Above all, she was decisive, but not overbearing in maneuvering her automobile," the city citation read.

by the city of Moscow for its own program, but they qualified this young lady whose driving record for the past two years could be a good example for most adult drivers to follow," March stated.

At her own expense, Miss Slade took a driver training course at the University of Idaho in 1958 when a driver clinic was held for student teachers. She was chosen to serve as Miss Moscow during the current school term, is a member of the high school band, is active in sports and is a member of several lodge and church organizations. In 1959 Miss Slade extended her citizenship activities by representing Moscow as a Senator at Girls State.

Marie Helen Kraut, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence C. Kraut, and Francis Michael Mahan, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Mahan, Sr., of Worcester, Mass., were united in marriage at St. Mary's Catholic Church in Genesee, Idaho, Saturday, May 14, with the Rev. Fr. Raymond Echevarria officiating.

Kraut-Mahan Rites Read May 14

St. Mary's Catholic Church was the scene of the May 14th wedding of Marie Helen Kraut, daughter of Genesee and Francis Michael Mahan, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Mahan, Sr., of Worcester, Mass., before an altar beautifully decorated with spring flowers and banked with baskets of white gladioli and blue daisies. Pews were tied with white satin bows with blue daisies. The single ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Fr. Raymond Echevarria, which preceded the Nuptial Mass at 10 o'clock.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father chose a gown of clipped Chantilly lace and nylon tulle, styled with tight-fitting bodice and basque waist-line, embroidered in sequins and pearls. She carried a gold-throated orchid, white streamers and stephanotis on a white prayer book.

Mrs. Henry T. Nesbitt, Ft. Lewis, Wash., matron of honor; Joan and Margaret Kraut, bridesmaids, all sisters of the bride, wore identical dresses of blue Crystal Peau and white tulle and carried nosegay bouquets of white carnations and blue daisies.

Claude Hill was best man and Vernon Kraut, brother of the bride, ushered. Mrs. Wilson Esser was at the organ.

The mother of the bride chose a two-piece beige dress with bone and pink accessories. Her corsage was a bronze cymbidium orchid.

The reception was held at the American Legion building following the ceremony. The bridal table was centered with a beautifully decorated white wedding cake, encircled with blue flowers and smilax, topped with a bride and groom, and blue candle.

Mrs. J. R. Anderson, of Spokane, poured and Mrs. Merlin E. Warnecke, of Uniontown presided at the punch bowl. Both are aunts of the bride.

Community Church Women Reorganize

Officers elected for the "Fellowship" are: Pres., Mrs. Elvon Hampton; vice-pres., Mrs. Raymond Qualey; Secy., Mrs. Don Jones, treas., Mrs. Walter Erickson.

Under the new plan, all women who are associated with the church in any way will be considered a part of the "Fellowship," and will be welcome to all meetings and activities. No formal membership will be necessary, but it is hoped that all women of the church will accept some measure of involvement in the work and service of the church.

The Fellowship will meet once each month, on the second Wednesday in the afternoon. In addition to this monthly meeting for all women, formal membership may be taken in "preference groups" which will hold a second meeting each month. Members of the Guild and the Circle will "by preference" (of meeting time, purpose, program, etc) work in their respective groups. A third group, which has been requested for Bible study only, is being considered. Each group will announce its own meeting time. The president of each group will serve with the Fellowship officers on the Executive Board of the Fellowship.

The meetings of the Fellowship will consist of programs and business, the Christmas and Easter luncheons, Fellowship Tea, etc. The meetings of the groups will develop from the varied interests of each group—local work projects, outreach service projects, social meetings, study, discussion, or whatever the individual group may decide to do.

The proposed remodeling and enlargement of Gritman Memorial hospital was the main topic of discussion at the Wednesday meeting of the Genesee Civic Association. The small crowd heard Dr. David Valder, surgeon from Moscow, and Dr. Philip Speckho, both speaking from a medical man's view point about the inadequate facilities at the Gritman medical building.

Mrs. Lola Clyde, Floyd Trail, Bill Bowles, and Russell Short were also present from Moscow to help discuss the project. In addition to his talk, Dr. Valder showed slides which he had taken of the various rooms in the hospital.

Russell Short told the members that the hospital board will be trying to meet a goal of $270,000 through individual contributions. This is the amount needed to go with the Hill-Burton funds from the government to construct a new wing of the hospital.

Pledge cards will soon be distributed in Genesee, and Russell Short added that these cards should be returned as soon as possible.

Community Day Rated Success

Genesee's 3rd annual Community Day celebration was a successful affair despite the chilly wind, rain, and scattered hail that fell in the afternoon. Although a final financial accounting is not available, it is known that this year's event was much bigger than the previous community days and more was realized for the ball park lights.

Genesee did get some cooperation from the weather man as the sun shone during the breakfast session and for the parade during the morning. Over 300 persons were served at breakfast and the parade was easily the best one yet.

The crowds, estimated at over 2000, remained in town most of the day watching the various events and patronizing the games and concessions. The barbecue beef supper was very well attended and was certainly enjoyed by all who ate the meal.

Growth Program For WWP Told

"A new long-range growth program for Washington Water Power Company was announced this week by Kinsey M. Robinson, chief executive officer and chairman of the board. Robinson stated that the company expects to promote active expansion of its services to include in addition to electricity and gas, domestic water systems where growing areas require complete services from the utility.

"Many new residential developments are reluctant to go into a specialized field of housing projects to provide water service," Robinson said. "Consequently, while WWP Co. sold its Coeur d'Alene water system in 1950 to the Idaho Water Company, other growing areas have shown a marked interest in the company's providing water service as well as electricity and gas. To keep abreast of growth and industrial needs, it seems only reasonable that the company makes plans accordingly."

Robinson pointed out that with the newly elected president, George M. Brunzell handling operating details adequately, he will give closer attention to some of industry's broader problems. "I hope to devote considerable of my time over the next several years to problems of expansion, marketing and to legislative matters," he said.

Robinson said that WWP Co. will step up its active interest in the development of electric power from the atom. As trustee of the High Temperature Reactor Development Association, and a financial contributor to the Rocky Mountain Pacific Research Group which comprises eight private utilities, Robinson plans to devote more of his personal attention to costs, safety and utility coordination in the atomic power field.

"There is no question that atomic power will provide the area with part of its electricity in years to come. We must be ready for a breakthrough in research when the time is ripe. In the meanwhile, however, it is unthinkable that a moratorium be permitted in hydro-development on the Snake River and other rivers. The nation's vital need for abundant power in years to come due to population growth and to the international situation, makes it urgent that we build such power projects on the Snake River as High Mountain Sheep as soon as possible."

He came to the United States in 1947 as assistant agronomist at the North Dakota Agricultural College where he initiated a barley breeding program and was working on this program when the college experiment station with a grant from the Maltin Barley Improvement Association developed the variety Thrall, a highly acceptable malting barley now grown extensively in the Dakotas and Minnesota.

In 1950, Mr. Lejeune joined and succeeded the late John H. Parker as director of the association in 1956.

Increasing production of barley in the Pacific Northwest since the late 1940s has created a keen interest among both farmers and grain dealers in malting barleys. These varieties require added care in both production and handling in order to command premium prices for the grower.

He served as Chelan County commissioner and Director of the State Department of conservation and development under Governor Arthur B. WVP STOCKHOLDERS MEETING WELL ATTENDED An overflow crowd of more than 350 persons filled the Washington Water Power company auditorium in Spokane when the company held its annual meeting of stockholders on May 18.

According to company records, a typical WVP stockholder owns a little less than 50 shares. Some 5000 shareholders own 1 to 10 shares, another 5000 own 11 to 40 shares, 3200 own 41 to 99 shares and some 51000 shareholders own 100 to 200 shares. Only 2600 shareholders own more than 200 shares.

Some four million Americans have their savings invested in the private electric industry, Brunzell said, "and I think this proves that investor-owned utilities are closer to being owned by the people than any P.U.D. could ever hope to be. Any individual can own just as much of WVP as he or she would like."

For the second consecutive year WVP was presented with an award from United Shareholders of America for meritorious achievement in the field of management-shareholder relations. The award, presented at the annual meeting, read in part, "for encouraging participation in American corporate ownership so essential to strengthening the pillars of our national form of government."

YOUR Social Security? QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS Question— I'm 70 years old, and still running my farm in a small way, I never make more than about $1000 a year, so I don't owe any income tax. A neighbor has been trying to tell me I should send in reports anyway; said it had something to do with social security. Sounds silly to me. Answer— Your neighbor is right. If your farm profit is $400 or more a year, you should file an income tax return and pay the self-employment tax for social security even if you don't owe any income tax. SW Idaho Holds Many Relics Of Early State History

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the ninth in a series of travel stories prepared by the Idaho Department of Commerce and Development to cover the state's vast recreational, scenic and historic sites. Readers are urged to clip the maps and stories and mail them to friends and relatives in other states with invitations to vacation in Idaho.

Indians footing it across the Snake River plains 150 years ago had no road maps, but a lot of people think they made map-like sketches on lava rocks to keep their geography straight. Across the Snake River and just upstream from Givens Springs in Idaho's Owyhee Mountains, the ground is strewn with rocks bearing Indian markings, but nobody knows for sure howadays just what the markings mean. One large rock, almost directly across from Givens Springs, may represent a map of the Snake River drainage system. Whatever the old sketches mean, they are silent reminders that Indians roamed across southern Idaho before the white man ever set foot on North America. Motorists can reach the markings by driving south from Nampa on state highway 45. Turn to the right on an improved gravel road a few feet before the highway crosses the Grouse Drain. The markings are about nine miles from the highway. To locate the markings, look for long, thin island in the river and Givens Springs on the south bank. It wasn't until the 1860's that permanent white settlements sprang up in the Owyhee-Boise area. In that decade gold was discovered northeast of Boise and rick silver strikes were made in the Owyhee Mountains. Before that, beginning in 1811, fur trappers operated in the area. From the early 1840's, Oregon-bound immigrants passed through the country on both sides of the Snake. The two mining centers can be reached today by car. Idaho City in the Boise basin mining area, linked with Boise by a paved road, is easier to get to all during the year, but Silver City in the Owyhee Mountains is well worth seeing even though the road is unimproved.

From Boise state highway 21 runs northeast for 39 miles to Idaho City. To reach Silver City drive to Murphy and then head south into the mountains. It's a good idea to ask for specific information in Murphy. Mountain Home, east of Boise on U. S. highway 20, is a good starting point for three other former gold mining settlements, Atlanta, Rocky Bar and Featherville, located along the upper reaches of the south and 99% of all industries that use electricity are served by Washington Water Power. You may wonder why, if government power is cheaper, more industries don't turn to government. Well, the truth is, electricity plays such a small part in the cost of manufacturing most things, it is no problem at all. Scarcity, not business men want to keep far away from socialism as possible.

Edwin Land, brilliant founder and head of Polaroid Corp. has demonstrated in a series of astounding experiments that full range color can be produced by projecting a picture in only two colors. In other words, the eye does not need wave lengths of blue or yellow in order to see blue or yellow. Now, text books will have to be rewritten. Once again theory of long standing is disproved.

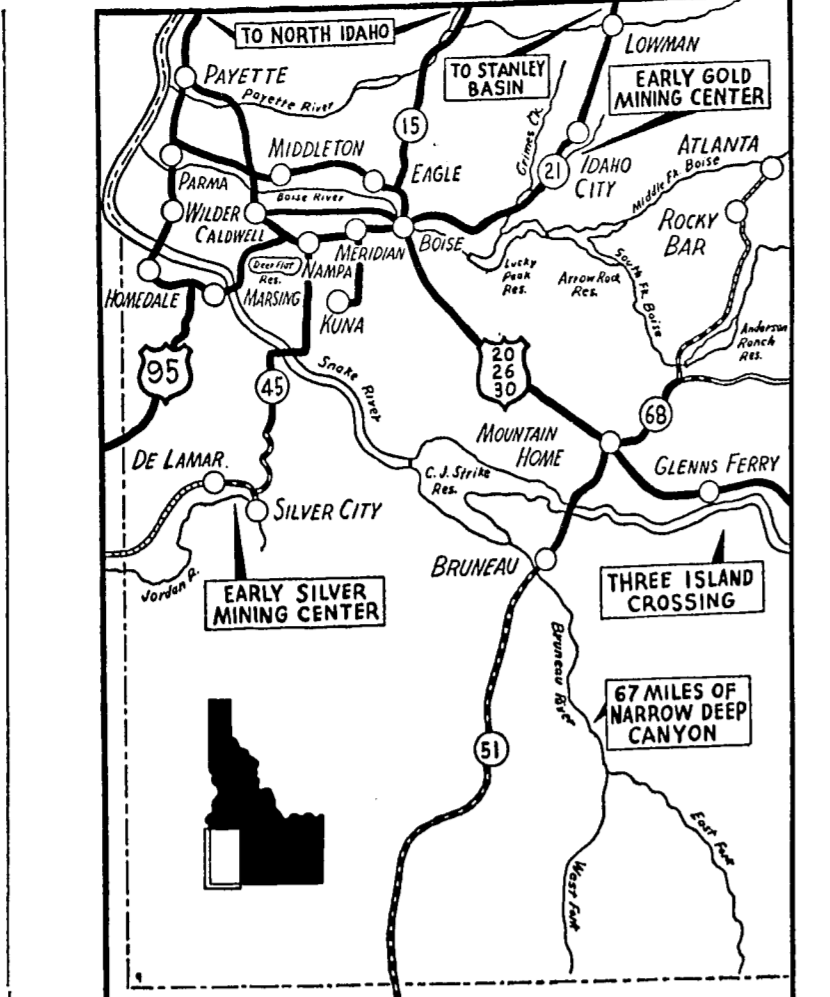

If you are retired, or soon ready for retirement, then you need natural gas for heating. You can go away for a week or two months, and natural gas maintains even temperature without aches, worry, or care. Natural gas is cheap, too. Just call Washington Water Power for free information.

Over 21,000 people have invested part of their savings in WWPCo. stock. What's more, many large insurance companies also invest money in private electric companies. This makes countless thousands of people who have insurance part-owners in local electric companies. Since this is true, a strong, successful electric company is important to the well-being of the public. Public power would destroy that security.

The Boise-Owyhee area in southwestern Idaho contains in one small corner all the physical characteristics found throughout the rest of the state: tumbling mountain ranges, cool forests, deep lakes and reservoirs, vast stretches of colorful desert and wide river valleys. The map accompanies a story on the area prepared by the Idaho Department of Commerce and Development. Four other stories on different parts of the state will be distributed by the department this summer.

1960 HUNTING SEASON REGULATIONS SIMILAR TO THOSE LAST YEAR Fish and Game Director Ross Leonard this week gave a skeleton wrap-up of recently-set big game seasons, bag limits and regulations which will prevail this fall across all of Idaho. He added the starting dates for hunting ringnecked pheasants, sage grouse, forest grouse and cottontail rabbits.

Except for the usual September 15 opening date for elk and deer hunting in much of the state's rugged back country, Saturday season openings on October 1 and October 15 will be the general rule. Leonard said there will be three areas that will have these opening dates. They are all of Latah county, and parts of Benewah, Shoshone, Clearwater, Nez Perce, Lewis and Idaho counties.

Opening September 15 for deer and elk hunting will be the central interior regions for the Chamberlain, Selway, Middle Fork and main Salmon river breaks. October 1—The lower, more accessible periphery of central Idaho mountains surrounding the rugged interior. October 15—Most of the Panhandle as well as the broad sweep of southern and eastern Idaho—the Snake River drainage.

Printed copies of the deer-elk hunting map and all big game seasons, bag limits and regulations are expected to be in the hands of authorized hunting and fishing license vendors by July 1. Leonard stressed that in general, opening dates parallel those of last year, with most seasons except some of those in the back country starting on Saturday. Leonard said that pheasant hunting in the Boise River. The Owyhee desert and sand dunes can also be reached from Mountain Home through Bruneau on state highway 51. Few Idaho residents have ever seen the unusual Owyhee country that stretches south from the Snake River to the Nevada border. The canyon of the Bruneau River, for example, is a spectacular sight.

Boise itself is filled with things to see. The state capitol building is there, open to the public all during the year. The State Historical Museum is open every day except Monday. A million-dollar park, complete with amusement facilities, attracts thousands of visitors. Recreation possibilities are many and varied throughout the Owyhee. Boise corner of Idaho. Take water recreation, for example. There are half a dozen major reservoirs for boating, swimming, water skiing and duck and goose shooting.

On the Snake River there's C. J. Strike reservoir seven miles southeast of Grandview. Other reservoirs are Deer Flat (Lake Lowell) near Caldwell and Nampa; Lucky Peak and Arrowrock on the Boise; Anderson Ranch on the Boise's south fork, and Black Canyon near Emmett on the Payette.

Spring and fall are the best fishing seasons in this corner of the state. Sturgeon, the big monsters that can weigh hundreds of pounds, are caught in the Snake below Swan Falls with heavy-duty surf casting equipment. Best months for catching sturgeon are May, June, September and October. Only one other Idaho river, the Kootenai in the Panhandle, yields sturgeon.

Area skiers—snow skiers, that is—head for Bopas Basin 18 miles north of Boise at 6200 feet. In existence for nearly 20 years, the winter sports area attracts thousands of skiers every year from first snow to April. West and north from Boise to the Oregon border is a 600,000-acre region of fertile farmland and tidy communities. Caldwell, 25 miles west of Boise, is the home of the College of Idaho. Northwest Nazarene College is in Nampa.

Construction Costs Cut By Electric Heating An important advantage of electric heating in a new home is that overall construction costs often are reduced considerably. This is because an electric resistance-heating system needs no furnace room, furnace or boiler, pipes, ducts, or chimney. From an operating cost standpoint, the chief reason modern electric heating is economically practical today is thick insulation. When mineral wool is installed in thick quantities, electric heating compares with other types of heating in areas where electric rates are low.

SALES OF OLDER HOMES UP 15 PER CENT IN '59 Good news for families who plan to sell their homes was reported recently by the Wall Street Journal. Sales of used houses in 1959 the Journal says, were 15 to 20 per cent ahead of 1958.

NO MATTER HOW old a house is, it sells faster and brings a better price when it is in good condition. A new roof of asphalt shingles in an attractive color, for example, and new paint in side and out often more than pay for themselves in a higher retail price.

various groups. It has always seemed to me that there was a vast reservoir of people who wanted to discover the means of making an effective force out of their own ideas of how this jointly owned business of ours that it the government should be run. The fact that so many young citizens are willing to learn how to do this citizenship chore is proof of the vitality of our free institutions of government.

Many of you think politics involves name calling and mud slinging. Sometimes it does. But this is the exception and not the rule. I am hopeful that some of the passions that will be aroused in the 1960 campaign can be restrained. The issues are hot and exciting and it will be easy for our Idaho campaign to degenerate into a name calling.

I, for one, hope that the tremendously important issues that confront Idaho can be debated with intelligence and vigor this fall and without venom and dirt. If we can keep this campaign clean, we can do Idaho a great service. This Saturday is the last day to register for the important primary election. If you don't register, the election judges cannot let you vote. Be sure you get registered and then make certain that you vote for all the offices on the ballot, including the important and final election for Supreme Court Judges.

There is no other way that Idaho can be true to our self-reliant heritage. New Primary Law Is Misunderstood By Many Visits with voters around the State indicate that many people are concerned about the new primary election law. They do not understand it and some of them think it deprives them of their right.

There is no basis for concern if everyone understands the new law. The only thing that is changed is this. When you go to the polling place to vote on June 6 you will have to ask for a Democratic ballot or a Republican ballot. The ballot you receive will have only the candidates in the primary election of the party whose ballot you ask for.

A list is made by the election officials identifying you as a voter in the party primary of your choice which will only be used in the event a run-off election is necessary. It is a felony to disclose the contents of that list and the lists are destroyed if there is no need for them in a run-off election. Many people seem to fear that information will be made by post watchers who are not prevented from making such lists.

In order for a candidate to be nominated for Senator, Governor or Congressman he has to run first in the caucus and receive a total of forty per cent of the total vote cast for that office in that party primary. If no candidate receives that many votes then a run-off election is held between the two candidates receiving the highest number of votes.

REPORT FROM THE GOVERNOR Major Attention As is usually the case just before a primary election, there is evidence that not many people are going to vote. This year I hope that Idaho follows its usual pattern and surprises the experts. I have heard these predictions before. I have even made them myself. Most often the voters turn out in gratifying numbers. I hope that history repeats this year because we will pick two Supreme Court Justices in this primary election. The non-partisan judiciary provides that if a candidate receives a majority of the vote in the primary election he is deemed elected. This year there are only two candidates for each of the two judgeships and the winner will be elected next week. The importance of a good choice is thus abundantly apparent. Justice Henry McQuade is running for re-election against a gentleman from Pocatello named Mr. John Long. Justice Joseph McFadden is opposed by Mr. J. X. Leggett, a Boise lawyer. Both judgeships will be filled in the primary next Tuesday.

I hope that everyone who votes in the primary will exercise a choice in this important non-partisan judicial election. These two offices are among the most important in the State. We all owe it to ourselves to make an intelligent choice. The most heartening grass roots development of the year is the tremendous growth of interest in practical political affairs. Not less than fifty schools of practical politics have been held in cities over the State by

IN NOMINATE KAY PELL Katherine D. (Kay) Pell Democratic Candidate STATE REPRESENTATIVE Pd. adv. pd by Ed. Larry & John Pell VOTE TUESDAY Dear Friend, Next Tuesday is primary election day in our great State. Voting in this Nominating Election is one of the responsibilities of citizenship of which I am certain you are all aware. Voting is not enough, however; we should all be aware of the qualifications of the persons for whom we cast our ballots. . . . Our elected officials can be no better than the persons each party selects in the primary.

I am hopeful that you will carefully consider the candidates and then vote for the persons in your Party who are best qualified to fill the positions they seek. I regret that I could not be in Idaho prior to the election; but the legislative calendar in Congress is keeping me quite busy, and my assignments on Appropriations, Interior and Atomic Energy Committees require extensive meetings every day. most city in the State. Boise had a few more people with a total figure of 34,703. Elmore County with the Mountain Home Air Force Base has grown more than any county. It is up nearly 10,000 from 70,700, a 15 per cent increase of more than 100 per cent. Interestingly, the city of Idaho Falls now has 3,000 more people than there were in all of Bonneville County in 1950, indicating a very substantial change in the urban-rural balance in the county population.

Ada County, with Boise, is the heaviest populated county in the State. The final figure shows a little more than 93,000. The heaviest gains have come in the counties where industrial diversification has been moving most rapidly: Idaho Falls, Burley, Rupert, Boise, Nampa, Caldwell and the Pocatello complex all show good gains. You can see the effect of the North Side Mindoka Project and the pumping activity in Rift River in the Cassia-Mindoka County figures. Of course, the burgeoning potato processing industry has also made a real contribution to these growth figures.

The North Idaho figures are not in yet, but it seems clear now that Coeur d'Alene has had the biggest growth in that area replacing Lewiston as the largest town. Nez Perce, however, will still be the biggest county. In retrospect, the new census seems to indicate that we have been on the right track in our industrial development work. We have emphasized the existing natural resources as the basis for industrial growth and we have tried to make the base as wide as possible so that temporary economic set-backs will not affect any one area disastrously.

This last decade has told us how to be able to get on a little more rapidly still in diversifying our economy, increasing job opportunities and widening our industrial base. We can also hope that these new census figures will give some of the faint-hearted among us a little more courage with which to face the future. There has been far too much tendency to try to use the growth problems of our adolescent economy for personal political advantage. I think some of these folks would attract more support if they would concentrate on being proud of Idaho and her potential achievements and really put their shoulder to the wheel.

We have been growing solidly and substantially and we keep on growing. The prophets of gloom will have a tough time arguing with the new census figures.

HENRY LAKE CUTTHROAT TROUT SPAWN EARLY Cutthroat trout are spawning earlier this spring in Fremont County's Henry Lake, and enough fertilized eggs already have been taken to meet the state's 1960 minimum hatchery needs for this species, the Fish and Game Department said this week.

Cutthroat spawning in Henrys Lake usually begins early in April, according to James C. Simpson, chief fisheries. The time of spawning usually depends on water temperatures. Henrys Lake station is considered the "last frontier" for the production of Alpha Lambda Delta, a freshman women's scholastic honorary, and was active in freshman class activities.

During her sophomore year, Miss Becker was a member of the Spurs, sophomore women's service honor, and served as activities chairman for the Kappa Alpha Theta sorority.

Surviving three brothers, Bruce of Lewiston, and Dewey and Melvin of Genesee; and four sisters, Mrs. Mary Cunningham, Genesee; Mrs. Jessie Blackburn, Bremerton, Wash.; Mrs. Agnes Bogart, Coeur d'Alene, Wash.; and Mrs. Roland Spurbeck, also of Washington State.

Funeral services will be conducted Saturday afternoon at 2 p. m. from the Genesee Community church, with the Rev. Chester V. Earls officiating.

During the week at Boise the two from Genesee will join with other young men from all parts of the state in learning about government and legislative procedures.

Sorensen and Magee are planning to propose a bill for the youth legislation that would encourage the use of driver education among the schools of the state.

What a Pledge Really Means Pledging to a community good means only one thing—our faith in our people and our future. When you pledge to a hospital, you pledge the best of your feeling to the sick, to the confused, and to the weeping. From your own personal life you reach out a hand to those in dire need and tell them that they are not alone but that they have the support of 100,000 people. You tell the people of our community who are sick and ill that they are not alone in this world, but have the commiseration of all their neighbors.

Of course, your pledge means that tomorrow's crop of children will be born under the most sanitary and competent hands that money can buy. It is assurance that in our final days of living, care, comfort and competence will be our lot. That the hospital will be able to provide the care that we need.

There are those in our community who feel that our hospital is owned and controlled by a group of people who are, and will, make a profit from its operation. This is not true. Regardless of what you hear in the way of gossip, the Internal Revenue Division knows and accepts all contributions as tax deductions. There is no one making a profit out of the hospital. The hospital is barely able to keep going in the fees that are charged. Every year their is a deficit that must be made up by those who are on the board, the doctors and other civic minded citizens.

SCHOOL TEACHERS MAY GET SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFITS Many Idaho school teachers may receive social security benefits this summer, said W. V. Nusbaum, manager of the Lewiston social security office. This is true, Nusbaum stated, because a social security beneficiary who works for wages may receive a benefit check for any month during which he does not earn over $100. Thus, he said, school teachers who have reached social security retirement age (62 for women; 65 for men) may be entitled to receive a social security check for the months that school is not in session. This benefit will not be paid automatically, Nusbaum continued, but must be applied for by each eligible teacher. Any teachers who have reached retirement age and who will not earn more than $100 in all months of the year are encouraged to contact the social security office for information on the information on their rights and privileges under the law.

FISH AND GAME NEWS

Litterbug Season Again Thousands of Idaho tax dollars—and millions more across the nation—are spent each year cleaning up the mess left by "litterbugs" along the highways and byways, in the streams, lakes and reservoirs, in public camp and even in remote hunting-lands. All too often a car or two is seen on a highway or in a remote hunting-land in order to avoid running over high way refuse, and what angler's sport has not been marred by submerged cans and the like? Frequently fish, animal, and vegetable life are killed because oil and gasoline are spilled in the water. No one leaves a patio after a barbecue without cleaning up afterwards. Individual responsibility for public places as well must somehow, become engrained in everyone. Then the problem will be licked. Adults can do this by setting good examples for their children, by carrying litter bags in their cars and boats—and using them—and by leaving clean camps, with all fires drowned. Trapping Licence Renewals Here is a case where trappers can help themselves by giving the department a hand. The time has come for renewal of licenses to help harvest fur-bearing animals, but new licenses cannot be obtained without first submitting a complete record of the catch for the 1959-60 season. This the law requires, but in a larger sense, the department must have the information for evaluation purposes. In addition to catch data, the trapper applying for a new license must give his physical description, including age, height, weight and complete address. The interest in beaver trapping dropped off sharply after the first open season in many years, held in 1957-58. During the next year, the 1958-59 harvest was only a little higher than the average catch under the former state-controlled trapper system. The outlook for 1959-60 season is for an even smaller catch, since the number of beaver tags is down again from last year. Goslings Wear Necklaces Some 225 Snake river goslings have been adorned with yellow neck bands and more are being caught for that purpose this week by workers of the Fish and Wildlife service in cooperation with Fish and Game personnel. The outlook for 1959-60 season and six boats operating between Homedale and Weiser. Part of the project is the trapping and tagging of adult Canada geese, with some 200 geese being banded. WPP PLANS BIG PROGRAM FOR NOXON DA MOPENING, JULY 9

The Washington Water Power Company is planning a tremendous program to officially dedicate its huge Noxon Rapids hydroelectric project on the Clark Fork river, approximately 45 miles east of Sandpoint, Idaho. The dedication has been set for July 9 from 11 a. m. to 3 p. m. Working closely with the Thompson Falls-Noxon, Montana, Chamber of Commerce, the company is planning a program that includes tours of the 857-million, mile-long project, Indian dances, a salmon barbecue, area product displays, pack trains, a display by the Montana Fish and Game Department, band music, aerial fireworks, and numerous other crowd-pleasing events. Governor J. Hugo Aaronson of Montana has been invited to speak at the dedication. The governors of Idaho, Washington and Oregon are also being invited to attend the ceremony. "We want as many people as possible to visit Noxon on its dedication day," George M. Brunzell, WWP president, said. "We are trying to plan a program that will have something in it for everyone—young and old." Noxon Rapids is WWP's newest power dam. Its four giant generators are now turning out some 400,000 kilowatts of power to serve the company's 150,000 customers. "If you have never had the opportunity to drive up into this highly packed part of the northwest you will do so on July 9," Brunzell said. "It's beautiful country and just far enough away to make a pleasant one-day outing." Brunzell said that the powerhouse will be open to the public during the festivities and that guides will be stationed at strategic points to explain about the dam and the equipment in it. "We're proud of this big power producer," he said, "and we sincerely hope that many folks will take this opportunity to see the dam. We can promise them a real good time and a pleasant trip they will long remember." The company will publish complete outline of the program a week or so in advance of the big day. SEEING "PURPLE" Exposure to bright sun bleaches "visual purple" in the eye—a pigment in the retina needed for vision in dim light. Persons with this condition in marked form should avoid driving except in daylight hours. Visual reaction is slow by this condition and can make the driver accident prone. This effect is often more noticeable immediately after exposure, but trouble has a "slow fuse" and cause trouble days later.

Crop Rotation Can Help Keep Crown Rot Down

Crop rotation helps whip crown rot in legumes, according to Harry Fenwick, plant pathologist of the Idaho extension service. Several instances of sclerotinia disease, particularly in northern Idaho, have been reported this spring.

Symptoms are a soft, slimy rot of the crown and base of the stem and wilting of the plant. Examination often reveals a white, cottony growth. During spells of wet weather the fungus spreads to healthy plants. In- fected plants have small black growths. These compact masses of fungus threads are called "sclerotia."

They keep the fungus alive, but dormant in the soil through the summer. Control is difficult, Fenwick said. However, he recommended measures to reduce an infestation. Practice crop rotation, he suggested that will keep legumes from following in succession. This is, do not follow peas or lentils with clovers because the fungus survives as well on dead plants as living legumes.

Deep plow badly infested fields. Reduce applications of nitrogen, particularly early in the spring. In grass-clover pasture mixtures, a late fall or winter application of PCNB at the rate of 12 to 15 pounds of active chemical gives satisfactory control. The crown rot has been reported in Idaho on most varieties of clover and some alfalfa. White Dutch clover seems to be most susceptible.

Some people look for risks to take. They like the thrills of mountain climbing, deep-sea diving or auto racing. Most of them are careful not to endanger others who may be just passing by. The driver who takes chances just for fun, does risk the lives of others—many others—besides his own.

There are three things the average motorist believes himself capable of doing superbly well: Singing tenor, managing a baseball team and making driver license rules.

There's a big difference between a suspended and a revoked driver's license. When a license has been suspended it is returned after the suspension period. When a license has been revoked a new examination taken before a new license can be issued.

Early Harvest Is Best Remedy for Leaf Spot

If alfalfa is damaged by leaf spot, the best remedy may be early harvest, according to researchers for the University of Idaho.

That's the advice of Harry Fenwick, plant disease specialist of the University of Idaho extension service.

Leaf spot is the most common foliar disease of alfalfa in Idaho. Fenwick said in offering tips on how to avoid the disease, he said that the alfalfa should be cut early in the morning and kept in the shade.

Highly trained, professional traffic experts are making some progress in clarifying public thinking about the causes of accidents. They are emphasizing in stressing the importance of proper driving.

Three things which must be overcome to reduce traffic fatalities are: 1. The misperception that more cars, more people and more travel mean more safety.

2. Public indifference to traffic control. 3. Failure of public officials and the community to accept responsibility for traffic control and law enforcement.

THAT OLD DEVIL SUN

The sun, one of nature's most awesome and vital gifts to Man and his civilization, is being neglected and abused.

It is but one of many, many suns and little more than a candle's glow in a boundless universe say our scientists. And so it may be, but it is our only source of light and heat.

The trouble is that we don't know it as well as we should; what it can do for us—and to us.

They are delights, as well as the source of sunshine are, for most Americans, assuming a greater significance than ever before. Family income is mounting, and the hours for leisure are rising with it. The average wage earner has 3,700 free hours a year besides time for sleep—the equivalent of two hundred and thirty 16-hour days. This means millions of millions more people who, though adjusting to the situation with typical American aplomb, may not realize that their bodies are being worn out.

Lela M. Jain, 84, Genesee Pioneer, Succumbs June 9

Mrs. Lela M. Jain, 84, Lewiston, passed away Thursday evening, June 9, at the Lewiston Orchard Nursing Home. She was born December 11, 1875, at Salt River, Mich., and moved with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Lanphier, to Genesee when she was 16.

Mrs. Lela M. Jain (Lela M. Lanphier) came to Genesee in the fall of 1892 from Gladwin, Michigan. Their homes were in the place known for many years in "Old Town" as the Cobin Swensson farm. She lived in the house presently occupied by the William Emerson family. For a time they lived on the Will Nixon farm and from there she married Walter Jain at Genesee on November 8, 1893. His farm was a homestead just east of town on land presently farmed by Adrian Nelson. While living there three children were born to them: Lewis, Benjamin, and Gladys. They sold the farm to Edwin Peterson and moved to Genesee where another son, Don, was born in 1907. After a short while, they moved to a home which they bought five miles southeast of town which is still owned in part by Mrs. Jain and is farmed by her son, Lew.

Mrs. Jain was always interested in civic affairs and was conscious of the history of this area. During her younger days, she worked with the Genesee Improvement Society and identified graves in the city cemetery, locate living relatives, and correct records. Her wide acquaintance through the years enabled her to be of help to many who were in need of people were and where their lives had led them. During both World Wars she was active in the Red Cross. For several years she was treasurer of the Women of Wood and kept insurance records for them.

Mrs. Jain was a member of Congregational Presbyterian (Federated) church, Pythian Sisters, Lewiston Civic club and the women's branch of the Dookies.

But her main interest in fraternal orders was with the Pythian Sisters, Knights of Pythias, and their organizations. She was a member of the D. O. K. K's and Neands of Avardale. The local temple of Pythian Sisters gave her leadership and honored her with support for state office which she held all through the years and was supreme representative, going twice to national lodge meetings. Her long attendance at Grand Lodge was something of a record and she counted as one of the following persons attending: Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Hattrup, Uniontown; Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Busch, Colton; Mr. and Mrs. Martin Griener, Shirley; Mrs. A. J. H. Hattrup, Uniontown; and Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Krier and Diane.

Mr. Griener will leave Friday for Spokane where he will visit with Mr. and Mrs. Alexander and Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Smylie before continuing on to Los Angeles.

children to read widely to obtain a great variety of information and ideas.

The increasing attention to the development of our human resources depends to a large extent upon more and better education if we are to maintain an increasing standard of living for our people and at the same time give strength to the free world alliance.

Our young people need to read widely to draw meaning from history and to understand the shaping of thought and action for the present.

Some wise man of the past has said, "Let your child read the great stories of all time. These will influence in the finest way all the days of his life."

Thoughtful people have always realized the importance of surrounding children with good books.

Recently the American Library Association in its standards for the school libraries has stated that an expenditure of from four to six dollars per year per child in attendance is desirable for efficient library service.

How are we meeting such standards in Idaho?

A short time ago an Idaho superintendent appealed for public donations of books for the high school libraries in order to maintain an accredited library!

We wonder if our leadership in education is seeing libraries in their proper perspective as one of the very strong adjuncts of the educational effort.

The library today should be the heart of the school effort.

Can we as parents help in this important aspect of educational development?

One way we can help is to show an interest in the library in the school your child attends.

Another way is to make sure we have a book or two around the house that is fit for children to read.

This is double the number of pronghorn fawns taken last year. They are tagged at a known age, of course, and if hunters cooperate by returning the teeth of all tagged animals bagged during season, guide factors can be established over a period of time for determining age by examining an animal's teeth.

The over-all 16-phase program for game census and range study now in its 11th year, also contributes information regarding annual deer and elk productivity, sex ratios and migration habits, among other things.

FATHER'S DAY
Again it's Father's Day and in my dreaming
The sweet nostalgic days I can't forget;
Come back across the years in glory beaming
To fill my heart with tender sweet regret.

Down pasture lanes again we go together
Where meadow larks came back to sing and nest;
Where wind and rain—and shine and summer weather
Attended all the days we loved the best.

I would not break the spell of childhood-madness
And have my golden memories swept away;
With love that made my whole world ring with gladness
A love that lives again on FATHER'S DAY.

Boys State Session Valuable Experience for Local Youths

By Larry Dan Sorensen

I would like to report to the American Legion, Heleberg-Schooler Legion, No. 58 and to the public of Genesee the experiences of Jim Magee and myself at Boys State in Boise, Idaho, June 11-19, 1960.

On arriving at Boise we were escorted to Boise Junior College where we were to spend the eight busiest days of our lives. Sunday was registration and at 7:30 p. m. we were called to General Assembly where we were introduced to the dignitaries who were to give us an outline of our duties at Boys State. Among these were Governor Robert E. Smylie, Department Commander Doug Kramer, Mayor Robert L. Day of Boise, and Dave Bush, Presiding Director of Boys State.

Monday, June 13, reveille was at 6:45. The day began with the flag raising ceremony and cleaning the quarters of city. The next item was a General Assembly where we received instruction on forming the city government into which Boys State was divided. After a short recess the various candidates filed for city office and boys state officers were elected those who were to rule and govern the eight cities of Boys State for the remainder of the week. On this same day the county officers were elected and were sworn in on the following day. There were four schools—Legislative, Law, Peace Officers, and Candidate. Of these we had to choose the two we wanted to attend. To avoid the confusion there were two hours of sports and at 10:00 p. m. lights out.

June 14 the General Assembly had instruction pertaining to the duties and function of our state government. After this a Candidate School on a state level was held. This was followed by a Law and Peace Officers school. The Law School was on property rights, an the Peace Officers School was on the necessary training for a peace officer to enable him to perform his duties. These classes were held daily for the first four days. Party organization commenced on the fifth day. Party organization was for two parties, the Silver Party and the Gold Party. Jim Magee was assigned to the Gold Party and I to the Silver Party. We also had a film and lecture on civil service employment.

On June 15 we had a lecture by American Legion Department Chaplain Reverend Kale F. King entitled "A Citizen's Responsibility to God." This was followed by nomination speeches for the state offices. We took a civil service examination to see if we had learned anything from the preceding instruction. After the primary election of state officials we were given lectures by representatives of the armed forces academies illustrating what each had to offer. Campaign speeches were given later on that evening by the winners of the primary election.

The next day was taken up by various lectures presented by Henry McQuade, Associate Justice of the Idaho Supreme Court, entitled "Government by the People," James Byers, President of the Bank of Idaho, "Dollars and Sense in Government;" and Hawley Atkinson, National Executive Committee Chairman, American Legion and the U. S. A.

During the lunch hour we had the general election of the state officers. As a result Jim Magee was elected representative for the Gold Party, and I was elected state representative for the Silver Party.

The afternoon was taken up with various talks and lectures including Joseph McFadden, Associate Justice of the Idaho Supreme Court, on "The Responsibilities of Citizenship," and Larry Mills, Director of Company Relations, Boise Cascade Corporation, on "Americanism vs. Subversive Activities." Just before lights out we had the swearing in of the newly elected state officers.

June 17 dealt with legislation. Before leaving Genesee Jim and I had prepared a bill to take to Boys State concerning drivers education. This bill was prepared with the help of Roger Marsh, a Cascade Corporation official who assisted in securing information which was very beneficial in getting our bill passed. Laverne Anderson was also instrumental in assisting us in writing the bill which went through the House by a 47 to 17 margin. This bill passed the Senate and was signed by the Governor. Many other bills were introduced, but the important thing was that our bill did get through.

We hope that the Idaho State Legislature will take this bill up the next session and work as hard to get drivers education into the schools of the two states of Idaho as Jim and I did to get through Boys State because we sincerely feel that drivers education would be very beneficial to the coming generation.

We would like to extend our heartfelt congratulations to the American Legion for the great work being done at Boys State and to all the citizens of the State of Idaho who gave their time. Especially I want to thank the U. S. Marines who served as counselors at Boys State. These fellows were outstanding as counselors, as men, and as leaders.

Mrs. Raymond Stout, Worthy Matron, Merle Roberts, Worthy Patron, and Mrs. Miriam Vandenberg, secretary of the local Chapter were present Tuesday morning for introduction.

Several from Lilly Chapter attended this meeting.

Annual Agriculture Tour Success Despite Cold Wind and Rain

By Larry Sorensen

The eleventh annual Latah County Agriculture Tour left Genesee on June 16, 1960 in a shower of rain and wind. The tour was paced and lead by the American Legion Auxiliary Police of the Idaho State Police, who handled and directed all traffic and did a very commendable job throughout the day.

The tour left Genesee fairly well on schedule, going South into Nez Perce Soil Conservation District. The first stop was at the Genesee sewerage lagoon where the tour was welcomed by Mayor Dick Scharnhorst, who gave a short talk on the lagoon, as to cost, size, value and manner of construction.

Teen-Age Dance Saturday Night

Sandra Berger, vice president of the Genesee Youth Activities Center, announced this week that there will be a record dance Saturday evening, June 25, at the American Legion Building.

Home Demonstration Club Meets, Elects Officers

Genesee's new Home Demonstration club met Tuesday afternoon June 21, at the home of Mrs. Harry Egland, Jr. This was an organizing meeting and the following officers were elected for the coming year:

President: Mrs. Beverly Heimgartner; Vice President: Mrs. Erma Egland; Secretary-Treasurer: Mrs. Don Becker. The club will meet the first Friday of each month, starting in September according to club officers.

OPEN HOUSE

On Saturday, June 11, 1960, the Latah County Free Library held an Open House for the people of Latah County. Henry Drennan, State Librarian, and his wife attended. Other visitors were drawn from as far away as New Zealand. Carol Ruppel, bookmobile helper from Potlatch, was an honored guest.

Refreshments were served.

The trapezium and trapezoid are the names of bones in the wrist.

The next thing of importance was the stop at Richard Neynance, where Dick talked about his hog raising enterprise and also the Drummond Thrifty talking on the Estil Carburn farm. This particular grass I have watched in the Plant Material Center at Pullman, and was introduced in the Genesee unit in 1959. It differs from the older and other types of timothy in that the leaves of the plant are on the stem, from root to the seed head. It is known as the "cattle grass" because it is so palatable to the cattle. It is a very good hay or pasture.

In conclusion, I would especially like to thank the following people for assisting in making the eleventh annual tour very successful one. To Homer Futter, Latah Co. extension agent, the Moscow Chamber of Commerce, the Genesee Rural Fire Department for the use of the Jeep as a pilot car. To the American Legion Auxiliary Police of the Idaho State Police for an outstanding job of pacing and controlling the traffic. To the 4-H girls and their leaders for a very good luncheon and service. To the farmers who participated in the various stops. To Dr. Pope, of the University of Idaho, who gave some pointers on striped rust, and last but not least and the one thing that makes a tour of this type successful are all of those who turned out to see what we have to offer.

Idaho's Panhandle Country Offers Many Points Of Interest

Idaho's panhandle country near Lake Coeur d'Alene offers the sight-seer and sportsman everything in the book—even the St. Joe River as it runs through the middle of a lake. The entire Coeur d'Alene region boasts unexcelled water recreation of every sort and description. The map accompanies a story on the area prepared by the Idaho Department of Commerce and Development. Three other stories on different parts of the state will be distributed by the Department this summer.

Editor's Note: This is tenth in a series of travel stories prepared by the Idaho Department of Commerce and Development to cover the state's vast recreational, scenic and historic sites. Readers are urged to clip the maps and stories and mail them to friends and relatives in other states with invitations to vacation in Idaho. Those who serve the traveling public are encouraged to use the series as a source of information to answer tourist enquiries.

Idaho's panhandle country between Lewiston and Coeur d'Alene gives the sight-seer and sportsman everything in the book—even a full-fledged river that runs through the middle of a lake.

Highways criss-cross the area, bringing within easy reach a series of rivers and lakes and points of historical interest. Every type of river runs through this country: the North Fork of the Clearwater, which comes plunging down from the two-million-acre Selway-Bitterroot wilderness area; the tumbling Coeur d'Alene; the fast Spokane; the swift Potlatch; and the shadowy St. Joe.

It's the St. Joe that keeps its banks intact as it flows between Round Lake and Chatcolet before entering Lake Coeur d'Alene. Called the world's highest navigable stream, the St. Joe provides a path of excursion paddlers, wheelers during the summer and early fall. Regular runs leave the docks at Coeur d'Alene, some for all day to St. Maries and up the St. Joe. Trout fishermen regard the St. Joe as a good dry fly stream. Visitors with cameras regard it as a beautiful river to photograph. During the fall, when the water is particularly calm, the cottonwoods and willows along the banks seem to burst into bright colors overnight.

Spirit, Twin, Hanser and Hayden lakes provide both trout and bass fishing. The Coeur d'Alene river is a good stream for rainbow and cutthroat, especially in the spring and fall. Lake Coeur d'Alene offers cutthroat fishing. Water recreation is one of the area's biggest attractions. Visitors can water ski, swim, boat or merely lie on one of the many sandy beaches and soak up the sun at public beaches and amusement park are maintained at Coeur d'Alene. Heyburn State Park also offers swimming beaches, picnic areas and boating facilities.

Coeur d'Alene is also the site of the annual Diamond Cup hydroplane races, scheduled this year from July 17 to 24. First held in 1958, the Diamond Cup races seem destined to become one of the top boating attractions in the northwest. Hydroplanes are sleek, fast boats that can get up to speeds well over 100 miles an hour. The 1959 winner, for example, was clocked at a little over 106 miles an hour. Week-long festivities are scheduled to coincide with the races. From Coeur d'Alene, U. S. highway 10 climbs to the 5,070-foot-high Fourth of July summit. Close by is the Mullan Tree, named after the federal army officer who directed the laying out of the first road across northern Idaho between 1850 and 1852. On July 4, 1861, Mullan carried the date on a tree near his camping spot.

After the highway drops down from the summit it reaches Camanche. The Old Mission Church of the Sacred Heart Mission was built at Cataldo between 1847 and 1868. This structure was put together with wooden pins and mud from the nearby Coeur d'Alene river and is still standing. In fact, services are still held there frequently. East of Cataldo lies the center of Idaho's mining industry. Since the condition gives a fair estimate of its dressing percentage but little of the true quality of the meat it will put in the butcher's showcase. "What we would like to know is the size of the rib-eye muscle—the lean of the porkchop, lambchop, or loin of a beef," Christian says. "This is closely related to the total cut-out value of the entire carcass. If we knew that, we could pretty well tell what animals we wanted to keep for breeding, for handing down their characteristics to their offspring." Christian does not admit defeat in the livestockman's search for better animals. "We have come a long way with hogs, even further with poultry," he says. "We know the improvement. It may take longer, but it will come in time." The flow of traffic—and the possibility of having a wreck—increases as the weather grows warmer.

Idaho's 14 State Fish Hatcheries Help Nature Provide Angling Thrills For All

Idaho Fish and Game Department. Tens of thousands of anglers are beginning the annual season of about 60 trout species between now and season's end October 31. Which means that more than 90 per cent of some 230,000 license holders will go for trout. Just the same, there are other finny denizens in Idaho's sparkling waters. The yearly catches of these produce other startling figures such as the following: Kokanee or landlocked blueback salmon, 2,000,000; warm-water species, 3,900,000; chinook salmon, 49,000; steelhead, 69,000; sturgeon, 3,000; and whitefish, 434,000. Natural production needs a helping hand now and in the years to come in meeting this demand, especially on the streams and lakes where fishing pressure is heaviest. Of those 11 million trout brought to the creel last year, only about 2 1/2 million "catchables" were hatchery-produced and released—and only part of these were recovered. The rest were "wild" fish. But creel-sized rainbows were stocked in most cases where water was fished or trailed. The hardest, thus giving some relief to resident fish. Today the Fish and Game Department operates 14 hatcheries. Production records last year showed 315 tons of fish raised for release where needed around the state, and another 11 tons of trout salvaged for release elsewhere from drought-plagued areas. Historically, artificial striping and fertilization of trout eggs began in Germany in 1758, from whence it spread to England and France. The process was brought to the United States in 1851. Idaho's first state-owned fish hatchery was built on Silver creek about 15 miles below Hatley during the fall and winter of 1907 under enabling legislation passed the same year. New hatcheries have been built at Lewiston, Twin Falls and Warm River. Last year's production at these hatcheries exceeded 15 million fish of all species and sizes or a total of 633,720 pounds. With increasing trout production, a new type of balanced diet, fortified with vitamins, has been developed in pellets and meal forms to replace traditional red meats, offal and other animal products formerly used in hatcheries. This not only increases the quality of fish, but also reduces labor costs. Moreover, it cuts down disease resulting from dietary deficiencies. In southwestern Idaho, a new blower type machine has been built at Hagerman to feed the pellets to trout. It not only saves time and labor, but also distributes fish food more evenly by measuring the required amount necessary for each raceway or rearing pond. Thus food waste along the water's edge is eliminated. This type feeder is mounted on a pick-up truck and has a 1500 pound capacity bin which permits feeding all trout without returning to the storage bin for reloading. Hagerman has 17 main raceways, each 550 feet long. They vary from six to 15 feet in width. In addition, there are four larger ponds 500 feet long and 30 feet wide. All of the raceways are located so that the truck may pass along one side, and the larger ponds are accessible from either side. A portable automatic loader has been developed which can transfer nearly three tons of live fish from the rearing ponds to refrigerated, oxygenated truck and trailer hauling units in less than an hour. The tanker rigs themselves are capable of hauling three and one-third more live fish than older equipment retired last year.

Ross Leonard, Fish and Game Department director, says that "hundreds of thousands of dollars are being spent each year to propagate and perpetuate good fishing in Idaho. To do this, it is necessary that the habits of fish be studied; that the proper environment be provided in order to maintain as great a survival as possible. In many instances it may be simple to provide good fishing in some of the back country's streams and lakes because the fishing pressure provides adequate food and suitable conditions. "In areas adjacent to civilization it is necessary that artificial means be used to perpetuate good fishing," he concludes. "This is rather an expensive process. It can not be maintained with the present license revenues unless many of the people who participate in this activity go into areas where the pressure is much less. The cost of the production of fish, for those who fish in artificially stocked waters, is much greater than the amount paid for their license."

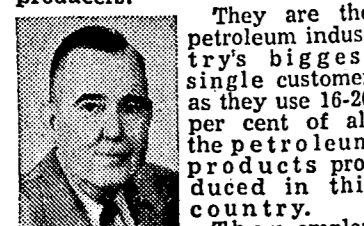

Thirty-seven of the 72 people who have died in Idaho's traffic crashes were drivers of the cars in which they were killed. This is a timely question. FARMING AROUND

By Mark Welsh

Don't say I didn't tell you that the American farmers are very important consumers as well as producers.

They are the petroleum industry's biggest customer as they use 16 to 20 per cent of all the petroleum products produced in this country.

They employ more horsepower than all of industry combined including the railroads.

They have an investment of about $20 billion in tools and machinery. In fact, 90 per cent of the farmers have $50 to $75 tied up in these items for every acre of land they cultivate.

They are good credit risks. Each farmer has $100 of assets for each $11 of debt, and one out of three farms has no mortgage.

They buy about $15 billion of goods in this country and $30 billion but when this is processed and prepared for sale at retail, it brings $100 to $150 billion.

They own 25 per cent of all the steel in this country and buy more gasoline than any other industry.

Each year they use more steel each year than the whole automobile industry.

FISH AND GAME NEWS

Salmon Spawning Closure
To protect the early portion of the chinook salmon spawning run from the sea to Idaho headwaters of the Salmon river system, various streams are closed temporarily to anglers. These are not emergency closures, but part of the general fishing regulations to protect the annual salmon spawning activities in Idaho.

First of these closures, effective June 22, through July 14, is the South Fork of the Salmon river upstream to Knox bridge, the East Fork of the South Fork of the Salmon river, and Johnson creek upstream to Johnson bridge. These waters will reopen for salmon fishing again from July 15 through August 20.

It's worth noting also that the South Fork of the Salmon river from Knox bridge upstream is closed the entire year for all species of fish. Johnson creek from Deadhorse canyon is closed at all times to fishing for salmon.

Controlled Hunt Materials
Persons hunting to try their luck this year in public drawings for permits in controlled hunts for moose antelope and mountain goat now can get maps, information leaflets, application cards and envelopes from the license vendors throughout the state. Vendors will be mailed additional new supplies of application cards and envelopes as needed if they request them. Controlled hunt pamphlets provide full details regarding all species of big game so managed. Idaho deer elk hunting maps and complete regulations will be available through vendors soon.

Clean Keep Cool
Persons new to the sport of fishing frequently ask how to keep their catches from spoiling without ice. Every angler has different knacks, but the essentials are immediate cleaning and washing, keeping them cool and dry. Bass and other pond fishes can be kept alive on stringers immersed in water. Lemon juice is sometimes used on trout, since it tends to discourage the growth of bacteria by immobilizing iron and copper, which promote rancidity of fish oils.

Gun Accident Report
This year from January through May, 26 gun accidents occurred throughout the state. Half of these were in eastern Idaho counties. There were two non-hunting fatalities, and 11 other gun accidents in the counties of Fremont, Jefferson, Madison, Bonanza, Bingham (Bannock and Bear Lake). The 13 others happened in other parts of the state, mostly in Ada and Canyon counties.

Idaho counties having no firearms accidents last year are Latah, Nez Perce, Idaho, Valley, Payette, Camas, Blaine, Butte, Lincoln, Oneida, Clark, Caribou and Franklin. Three of these—Latah, Washington and Payette already have listed gun accidents this year. The same trend of eastern Idaho counties having about half of the state's total number of accidents was observed last year both during hunting season and before September 1.

Dietrich Motorist Is 'Driver of Month'

A former errand driver was named this week as Idaho's Driver of the Month for May.

David O. McClure, 21-year-old Dietrich engineer, was awarded a safe driving certificate early in May which led to his selection as the outstanding driver in the state and the recipient of a $100 bank account from among several such designated safe drivers.

William Van Dyke, member of the Idaho State Police, who dominated McClure, said the young driver was first considered for the nomination when a traffic officer observed him using unusual caution at a pedestrian cross-walk.

"After Mr. McClure complied with all laws of the state by stopping for pedestrians at the cross-walk, he complied with all the rules of the road and eased into the traffic lane of the intersecting street after stopping for other vehicles and observing the flow of traffic from all directions," Van Dyke said.

McClure lost his right to drive early this year after he pleaded guilty to a reckless driving charge. "After a 30-day suspension period his license was returned to him so we naturally kept an eye on him" for several weeks to observe his driving habits," the State Police officer said.

"We noticed that a big change had come about in the young man's attitude. He suddenly started driving with extreme care, observing all the traffic rules we had discussed during the time he was 'grounded,'" he commented. "It took only a short time for me to refresh my memory about driver because of a sincere personal desire rather than fear of another citation or loss of his right to drive.

The Dietrich driver told a newsman that he had driven seven years with only one traffic accident and about being a good driver and possibly I had an attitude of disdain for traffic rules and enforcement."

McClure continued, "It was explained to me that my fine was punishment for not being a good driver and possibly I had an attitude of disdain for traffic rules and enforcement."

George H. Walter, manager of the Wendell office of the Idaho First National Bank, presented a $100 savings account to McClure. The banking firm, with Idaho newspapers and the Department of Law Enforcement, are sponsoring the Statewide recognition of careful drivers.

Explaining the purpose of the four-day series of meetings, Miller pointed out, "If one is not at peace with God, one cannot really be at peace with man, the creature of God. This assembly is designed to equip attendees, ministers to carry out this responsibility."

He stated that almost all of the local congregation will be present at the Portland assembly all four days. "It will be Portland's largest Christian gathering this year," he stated.

Speakers Named for Jehovah's Witnesses Meeting in Portland Robert McWilliams, supervising minister of Idaho Circuit No. 2 of Jehovah's Witnesses, and well-known local congregational, will be among the featured speakers for the Peace-producing District Assembly of the faith, scheduled for July 29-31 at Multnomah Stadium, Portland, Oregon, the Bible meeting will instruct some 14,000 to 18,000 persons in advanced teaching methods to be employed in their house-to-house ministry, according to Marvin Miller, local presiding minister.

Mr. McWilliams will give a talk Friday afternoon at 2:30, "Can You Serve Where The Need Is Great?" He will also be supervisor in the attendant department at the convention. The traveling representative, a semi-annual visitor to the Juliaetta Congregation, said: "Peace lovers who become filled with accurate knowledge and spiritual discernment will know God's Will and conform to it. In fact," the minister added, "the 'God's terms' for peace are stated in the Bible. In seeking peace with God we take the right course and show our faith and sincerity by studying the entire Bible."

A former resident of Olney, Illinois Mr. McWilliams became an ordained minister in 1940. The following year he was called to the Watchtower Society's farm in South Lansing, N. Y., where the Bible School of 1953 he is located. In December of 1953 he was assigned to circuit work in Colorado. He and his wife are graduates of the 26th class of the Bible School of Gilead.

Purpose of the convention, according to Miller, the local minister, is "to further educate persons desiring accurate knowledge, spiritual discernment and God's terms for peace because," he added, "it is not at peace with God he can certainly not be at peace with man, the creature of God."

Climax of the event comes July 31 with the public talk, "Serving the Living War of the Great Day of God the Almighty," by J. O. Groh, of Brooklyn, New York.

Those interested enough in politics to examine the results of Idaho's first primary run-off election which was held last Tuesday might well ponder the effectiveness of the new law which created this method of choosing candidates. Theoretically, of course, the run-off did accomplish its purpose . . . the Democratic party named a man to oppose Senator Dierwisch in the fall. The fact that the man finally named finished in second place during the regular June 7th Primary is also food for thought. What this writer cannot help but think is, "could this added expense, under the guise of democratic process of law, have been avoided by more careful and cooperative action within the party?"

To send five fairly well-known candidates into the primary race and expect one of them to gather forty per cent of the total party vote is a little naive, to my way of thinking. Granted that each of the candidates is a perfect right to enter the race; it would appear that concern for party unity, added expense to the taxpayers, and conservation of the image of solidarity might have been an incentive to the candidates to reconsider their entry into the contest. When it is seen that less than half of the eligible voters cast ballots in the run-off election it also seems wonder if the "voice of the people" did not speak in muffled tones.

Members of the Fire Department had little trouble finding a fire to fight when the whistle blew Tuesday morning. Racing out of the station the boys were told that the blaze was at the Roy Phipps home. When they got there . . . no fire. It didn't take long to find out why. The fire was Roy's previous residence and then it wasn't much of a fire . . . just some weeds.

Many Genesee families will be pulling out like gypsies this weekend bound for the many lakes, streams, and rivers in this area to spend the Fourth of July holidays fishing and camping. Reports drifting back in this season indicate that fishing is good to excellent in many places. The latest census figures show that Idaho has gained in population . . . we don't know where they came from, but we know where they are, or at least appear to be . . . they're around our favorite fishing and camping spots.

This column joins with the other friends of Bob Morken and George Anderson to wish them a speedy recovery. Bob took some nasty cuts on the head in an auto accident Sunday evening, and George is going to be shy one kidney following his operation in Spokane's Veterans Hospital.

Her guests were Mike and Jim Myers, Rich Green, Laura Lee Quiley, Mike and Robin Oberg, Marcia Grieser, and John, Curtis and Peggy Hermann.

The little folks spent a pleasant afternoon playing party games. Refreshments were enjoyed, birthday refreshments were served by Connie's mother.

Several days were spent at Radium and Miette Hot Springs where camping and swimming were enjoyed. Lake Louise and the City of Banff were also vacation stops, and from there the party drove through Jasper National Park where they saw the Columbia Ice Fields.

Several days were spent at Jasper, Alta., fishing at Leach Lake, then driving on to Calgary Alta. where Dinosaur Gardens and other places of interest were visited.

Following their basic training they will be sent to special schools for training of their choice. However, most of the men will attend artillery school at Ft. Sill, according to Capt. Richard Rogers, commander of B. Battery.

Genesee and Northern Idaho baked in warm summer weather during the past week and with the exception of a few days, the local boys traveled brilliantly. All this was greatly appreciated by the farmers who are rapidly finishing up their annual hay crop.

The temperatures have been hovering in the high seventies and eighties, and Lewiston reported a 94 down the middle of this week. The weather forecast at Lewiston predicted some cloudiness and isolated thunderstorms later this week but the forecast failed to dampen the enthusiasm and plans of many who are looking forward to camping and fishing trips over the coming three-day holiday.

On Sunday, members of the Esser family and friends enjoyed a picnic dinner and an afternoon of visiting at the Genesee City Park. Present were: Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Astell of Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Esser of Chicago; Mrs. and Mr. Pat O'Keller and children of Clarkston; Mrs. Kenneth Dick and children of Helena, Montana; Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Esser of Lewiston; Mr. and Mrs. Roy and Mrs. Gene Woodruff and family; Mr. and Mrs. Grieser and children; Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Esser and Jerry; Mr. and Mrs. Carvie Grieser, Father John Morgan, and Debbie Hasfurther. Afternoon callers were the Delmon Grieser family of Lewiston and Mr. and Mrs. Martin Grieser, Joan and Shirley Grieser.

The Latah County contest will be held in August or September and the winner will participate in the district state contest. The award for winning on the state level is an expense paid trip to Chicago and a chance to compete in the national contest. The prizes for national winners include nine scholarships ranging from $100 to $500 and new electric ranges.

Anyone interested in the contest may contact Ruth Shane, Extension Home Agent in the Courthouse, Moscow or may call TU 2-1829.

Southern Idaho Residents Live In High Splendor

Roads lead into the Caribou National Forest in Idaho's high southern corner. None of the water

Editor's Note: This is the eleventh in a series of travel stories prepared by the Idaho Department of Commerce and Development to cover the state's vast recreational scenic and historic sites. Readers are urged to clip the maps and stories and mail them to friends and relatives in other states with invitations to vacation in Idaho. Those who desire the travelling public are encouraged to use the series as a source of information to answer tourist inquiries.

People in Idaho's southeastern corner live pretty high—in terms of altitude that is. Most of the land in Bear Lake, Caribou and Franklin counties lies above 4,000 feet from the sea.

Most of the land is also drained by the Bear river, a winding stream that rises in Utah, flows into Wyoming and then Idaho, twists north toward the Snake river, turns suddenly south just west of Soda Springs and empties into the Great Salt Lake.

This is the permanent white settlement of any size made. Mormons from the Salt Lake area established Franklin a hundred years ago in the Spring of 1860. In 1863 other Mormon settlements were made at Paris and Soda Springs.

Although the time that farms and Communities were set up in this corner of Idaho, the area was well known to fur trappers and traders. It was probably as early as 1811 that white trappers first laid eyes on Bear Lake.

From 1841 until the early 1870's pioneers on the Oregon Trail followed the Bear river downstream to present-day Soda Point and then headed northwest across country to reach Fort Hall. Soda Point, first named Sheep Rock by John C. Fremont when he saw it in 1842, also marked the place where California-bound wagon trains could either head straight west or south down the Bear.

In these days Soda Springs was one of the best known points along the trail. Steamboat Springs, now covered by a reservoir, was seen by thousands of travelers. In diaries and letters, Steamboat Springs was mentioned as frequently as any other well-known landmark from Independence to Salem. From a boat the famous spring can still be seen bubbling beneath the reservoir surface.

U. S. Highway 30 north today follows closely the route of the old immigrant road. It enters Idaho near Border, Wyo., and roughly parallels the Bear river to Montpelier. From Montpelier U. S. Highway 89 runs west and south to Paris, Bloomington, St. Charles and, eventually, the Utah border.

West from St. Charles ten miles is the Minnetonka cave, the most awesome and spectacular cave in Idaho. A full tour of the known chambers and corridors can take five or six hours. Visitors should wear rough clothes, take along drinking water and carry dependable flashlights or, better still, lanterns of some type. Most Idaho residents have probably never heard of Minnetonka cave, although the unfite stalagmite formations can rank with any in the nation.

People in this part of the state say their area offers nearly every kind of outdoor recreation. Outstanding trout fishing, for example, draws anglers to Blackfoot reservoir. A 23-pound native trout was taken at the reservoir not long ago. Montpelier geese fly into the Grays lake country.

Boating and water skiing are available at Alexander reservoir near that falls in the area drains to the Pacific. It flows into the Bear River and then into the Great Salt Lake.

Soda Springs and Blackfoot reservoir. Docking facilities have been constructed at both places. Boats can also be launched at Bear Lake from a number of beaches. Picnic areas are close to most of the beaches. The water temperature is ideal for swimming and water skiing. From early December to late March snow skiers drive six miles into the Caribou national forest from Soda Springs to a winter sports area.

Throughout this corner of Idaho are the greatest phosphate reserves in the nation. Four firms operate mines in the region. Visitors can make arrangements to visit the processing plants and take a look at the strip mining.

STRIPE RUST AREAS Examinations of wheat fields affected by stripe rust in early areas along the Clearwater River raises optimism for our Latah County wheat crop.

Numerous wheat fields in NezPerce and Latah counties were surveyed by Dr. Arthur Finley, Head of the Plant Pathology Department; Dr. Harry Fenwick, Extension Plant Pathologist and Homer Putter, Latah County Agent.

Although the fields hit early by stripe rust have nearly all the leaves gone, the heads are filling with grain. The grain will, undoubtedly, be light weight due to lack of leaf surface to feed the plant.

Losses of 10 per cent to 20 per cent in yield with some undetermined loss in quality is estimated at this time. Due to lack of experience with stripe rust infestation and loss, any prediction must be considered only an estimate with many factors effecting the final outcome.

Corn for silage is the highest-producing forage crop in much of south Idaho. Agronomists of the University of Idaho recommend early planting on ground of high fertility and good tilth. Planting rate is 27,000 to the acre is advisable.

The Bear river twists across Idaho's high southeastern corner, turns abruptly into Utah and eventually empties into the Great Salt Lake. This part of the state is the only area in Idaho where rivers do not feed in the Columbia River drainage system. It is also where Idaho's first permanent white settlement of any size was made. The map accompanies a story on the area prepared by the Idaho Department of Commerce and Development. Two other stories on different parts of the state will be distributed by the department this summer.

NEW DEMANDS ON OUR EYES

There are 40 million boating enthusiasts, 30 million fishermen, 20 million hunters, six million water skiers, five million golfers, uncounted and probably uncountable devotees of our beaches and back yard barbecues; fin-fans who plunge daily into 300,000 public and private swimming pools or as skin divers look for adventure on new frontiers beneath the sea. As diverse as these groups appear to be, they have one thing in common, say researchers for the Marine Company: Increased exposure of their eyes to the bright sun in an age that is already making greater demands on these organs than ever before.

Television, motion pictures, the daily newspaper, magazines and the booming small-print paper-back books all contribute to our cultural needs but are not easy on the eyes except in more sensible doses than most of us swallow regularly. Added to this burden to the one posed by extra hours in the sunshine and you will understand why our eyes, tough and resilient as they are, have their work cut out for them.

ATLANTIC CITY STUDY Studies made with a group of Atlantic City life guards over two summers are an even stronger argument for care of the eyes when exposed to the sun. It was found that, on the average, sensitivity to light at night is reduced by more than one-third after a day at the beach without sunglasses, and in some cases it is reduced by as much as nine-tenths.

Eye specialists recommend that a good rule for a selection of sunglasses is "the darker the better." Inexpensive glasses will serve the purpose, although they may not fit as well as their flat lenses are not so easy on the eyes as more expensive, curved lenses.

LEAF SPOT AND CROWN ROT AFFECTS MANY IDAHO LAWNS Although "brown spot" in lawns is not usually brown spot at all, it is one of the most serious diseases affecting Idaho's blue grass planting, declares Harry S. Fenwick, plant pathologist at the University.

The so-called brown-spot disease we usually turns out to be a leaf spot or crown rot in most Idaho lawns," Fenwick explains. "Close inspection of the grass blades shows purplish spots with an oval shape and a white center; the characteristics of grass leaf spot. Call it what you will, it's rough on grass and may go down to the crown of the plant and kill it entirely. We have lots of Fenwick emphasizes that the way the lawn is handled or managed has a great deal to do with its appearance and vigor. Shallow and frequent watering late in the day or evening leaves the grass cool and wet through the night, a perfect environment for many of the diseases that damage lawns. Low mowing and the following reduction of plant vigor further sets the stage for serious diseases.

"Water in the morning if you are watering by sprinkler," the pathologist advises. "Soak the soil to a depth of four to six inches and then water no more until the grass shows signs of needing moisture. Morning watering gives the foliage a chance to dry out before the night comes. Give your grass a good application of commercial fertilizer now and then to keep its growth good and its color dark and alive. Mow it not lower than one-and-one-half inches."

Fenwick recommends heavy applications of Captan—up to four ounces per thousand square feet of lawn every ten days throughout the summer if chemical control for the disease must be resorted to.

Don't store clothing in a damp basement. Occasionally sun and air articles kept in closets. A small electric light will dry the air in a closet. Chemicals that dry the air also combat mildew. Silica gel, activated alumina, or calcium chloride may be used to absorb moisture. Calcium chloride should not touch clothing as it can make holes. Silica gel and activated alumina are not harmful.

Dry soiled clothes before throwing them in a hamper. Keep wet shower curtains stretched. Sprinkle for ironing only as many articles as you will iron that day. Shake out and dry those not ironed.

ESTHER Nystrom, clothing specialist at the University of Idaho extension service, has some more suggestions. Don't store clothing in a damp basement. Occasionally sun and air articles kept in closets. A small electric light will dry the air in a closet. Chemicals that dry the air also combat mildew. Silica gel, activated alumina, or calcium chloride may be used to absorb moisture. Calcium chloride should not touch clothing as it can make holes. Silica gel and activated alumina are not harmful.

YOUR Social Security

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Question—My doctor won't let me work. I intend to apply for social security disability benefits. What evidence of my disability will I be asked to provide?

Answer—You will be given a medical report form to give to your doctor or to any hospital, clinic, or other agencies where you have been treated for your disability. On the medical report form which the doctor, hospital or other agency fills out, they are asked to give your medical history, what they have found to be wrong, how severe the condition is, what medical tests have shown, what treatment you have received, and the results. Your doctor is not asked to decide whether or not you are disabled under the social security law. In deciding whether your disability is severe enough to keep you from engaging in a substantial gainful activity, a team of trained people—doctors and others who have had experience in judging disability—will consider all of the facts in your case including your background, education, and training in addition to the medical reports.

WPP's Noxon Rapids Dam Dedication Set for July 9th

The Washington Water Power Company is planning a "really big show" when it dedicates its Noxon Rapids Hydroelectric project on the Clark Fork River some 38 miles west of Thompson Falls, Montana.

The $87,000,000 dam is now completed and generating 400,000 kilowatts of power for WPP's 150,000 electric customers and for use by members of the Northwest Power Pool. The huge concrete and earth-fill structure is some 6850 feet long and took almost four years to build.

The dedication program is scheduled to get underway at 11:00 a. m. Mountain Standard Time with tours of the cavernous powerhouse. "This will be a complete tour," a WPP spokesman said, "with visitors getting a chance to really see all there is to be seen in or on a big hydroelectric project. The powerhouse and dam will be open to visitors from 11 to 4 (MST)."

Indians from the Flathead Reservation will set up a "village" at the damsite and will perform ceremonial dances throughout the day. An antique car caravan from Spokane will be on hand for visitors to inspect. The 25 cars expected will include some of the most famous of "vintners." They will drive to Noxon from Spokane, stopping to pick up the Mayors of various Inland Empire communities enroute.

The Washington Air National Guard band, commanded by Warrant Officer Everett T. Dallas, will provide the music for the event. One of only 12 such bands in the U. S., this organization is recognized as "the best in the west."

Through the cooperation of the Thompson Falls Chamber of Commerce and numerous federal and state agencies a huge exhibit of local and state recreation and industry will be set up on the grounds. The Montana Air National Guard will fly an aerial "salute" over the project in the early afternoon. During the actual dedication ceremonies the spillway gates on the big dam will be opened by Governor J. Hugo Anderson of Montana via remote control from the speakers' stand.

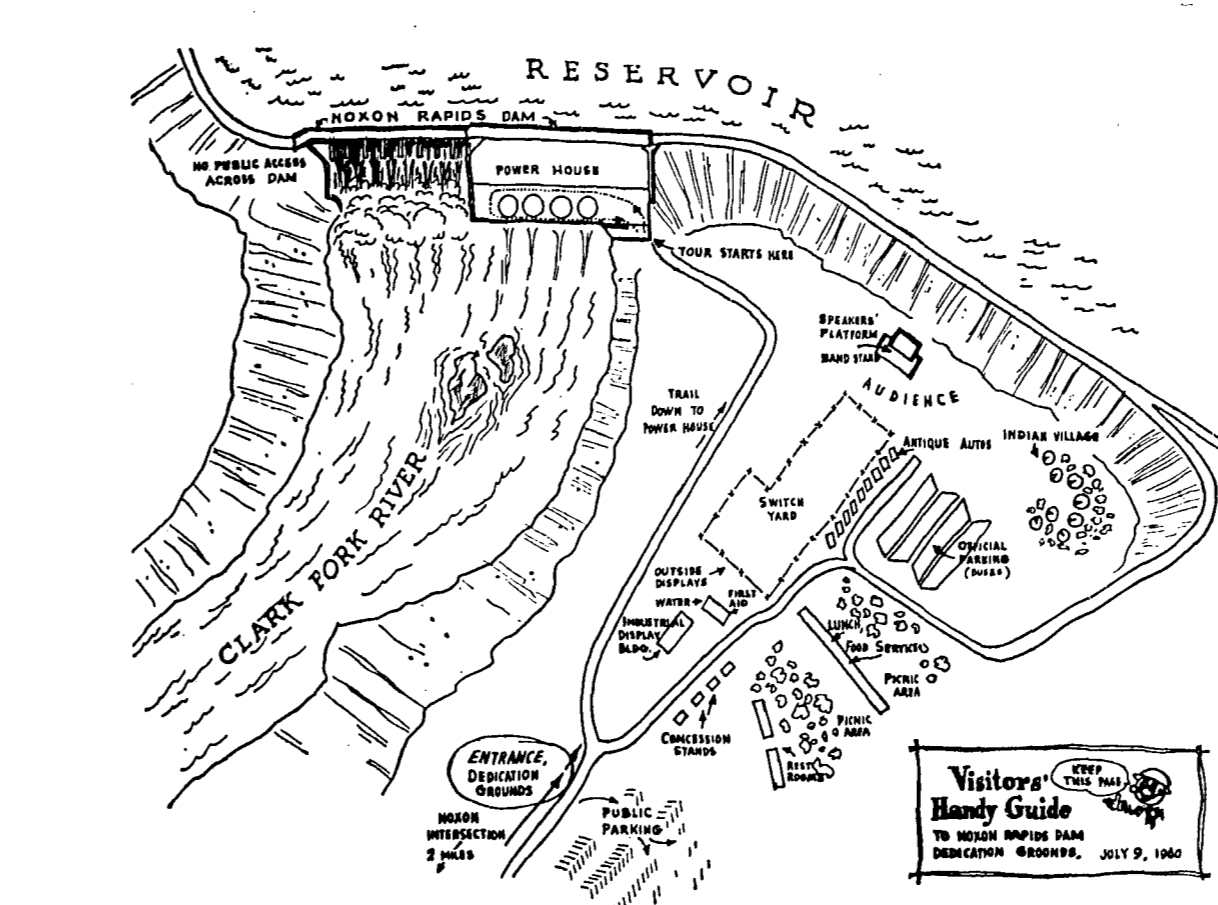

"You won't have to worry about food if you visit Noxon Rapids for the dedication," the WPP spokesman said. "Fixed chairs of Montana that will positively make your mouth water will be available for only a dollar each and in addition there will be hamburgers, cold drinks and ice cream sold by the Sanders County Service Clubs."

The company also pointed out that camera fans will never have a better opportunity to get pictures of a big power dam than on July 9 when all most every nook and cranny of the dam will be open to the public.

Working with the Montana Highway Patrol and the Sanders County Sheriff, the company has made careful plans to handle the vehicle traffic expected with the 5,000 or more visitors they are planning for. With an open house of Montana's biggest hydroelectric project and all the added attractions to entertain visitors, the company estimates that at least that many people will be on hand for the dedication program.

The Governors of four Northwest states have been invited as well, and Congressmen and Senators from all four states. The dam is easily accessible from either Missoula or Spokane on US 10-A and about two and one-half hours driving time from either city.

If you are planning to attend the gala celebration at Noxon, Montana, on July 9 when the Washington Water Power Company will dedicate its big Noxon Rapids Hydroelectric project on the Clark Fork River, you will want to keep this handy guide to the many activities planned for the big day. To get to Noxon Rapids you take U. S. 10-A east out of Sandpoint. The dam is about 45 miles from that city. Both Noxon Rapids and Washington Water Power's Cabinet Gorge dams are "spilling" water now and creating a spectacular show for visitors.

President Eisenhower has proclaimed July 24 to 30 as National Farm Safety week. The Idaho farm safety committee, headed by W. E. Adams, Eagle, is concentrating on water safety and safety with chemicals.

Idaho's first conservation camp for boys will be conducted at the Alpine 4-H site, June 5 to 10. The camp is sponsored by the University of Idaho extension service in cooperation with other state and federal agencies.

A separate test for phosphorus is now available at the University of Idaho soil testing laboratory at Moscow, according to Charles Painter, extension soils specialist.

Two study projects involving Idaho mountain goats and big horn sheep will get underway about July 1, the Fish and Game department announced this week.

One plan is to contact all goat hunters this fall to check physical condition of each animal harvested during the Pahsimeroi and possibly Carmen creek vicinity hunts in south-central Idaho. Data will be obtained regarding condition, weight and sex of each goat taken in the watershed. Other information to be gathered will concern distribution, numbers and site locations. The data will be used in preparing the late hunt.

The second project will follow the seasonal movements of big horn sheep in the East Fork of the Salmon river, Garden creek and Challis creek drainages, and major wintering areas will be mapped. It is expected that information about sheep numbers, herd composition, productivity and other management data will be collected.

Headquarters will be based at Salmon city and both projects have been assigned to Fred Kindel, big game biologist.

Idaho's Black Bass Population Provides Many Angling Thrills

By Jim Humbert

Idaho Fish and Game Department When the word goes out each spring that the bass are in the bottoms with the well-developed spawn, there are anglers who contend that hooked bass are plucky, game, brave and unyielding to the last.

Early closings are slated for July 10 on several tributaries of the Snake river country, including Bennett, Cold Spring, and King Hill creeks, and Little Lost Lake.

South-central Idaho's Carey Lake should have more water this year as the result of the installation of a new concrete headgate in the inlet canal.

KOKANEKE STUDY CONTINUES ON LAKE PEND OREILLE
The Idaho Fish and Game department said its work this is continuing extensive age and growth studies of kokanee, a landlocked blueback or sockeye salmon species, on Lake Pend Oreille.

JUNE IS DAIRY MONTH

June is dairy month, and that's good for the entire family, says Miss Barbara Branthover, extension nutritionist for the University of Idaho.

The nutritionist leaves preparation of the drink up to the homemaker who knows her men folk's tastes. Some like it cold and straight; some like it mixed with ice cream and chocolate for a flavor.

Hard to believe—yes—but more fishermen are needed to take the annual crop of black bass from Genesee waters.

ARMOUR BEING URGED
Individuals and civic groups are expressing more interest than ever before in voluntary vehicle safety-check programs being arranged in 16 different Idaho communities in May and June, according to automotive and state officials who are making preliminary arrangements.

FARM PONDS AND SAFETY
A problem which is becoming increasingly important to rural residents is recreation around farm ponds. The National Safety Council reports the voluntary safety-check program serves to remind many car owners, who might otherwise neglect vehicle maintenance, of the need to check their car's fitness to operate, it was reported by Leon Weeks, Boise, secretary-manager of the Idaho Automobile Dealers Association.

I LOVE MONEY and I find that paying myself first each payday helps me keep some
For years I had trouble keeping one of the things I LOVE — money — near me. Never seemed to have enough at the end of the month to buy the things I wanted and needed.
Then I learned to pay myself first — by putting part of each paycheck in my First Security Bank savings account. It has been an easy way for me to save and keep one of the things I LOVE — money — near to me. And now I have the money to get the things I want.
Why don't you pay yourself first each payday in a First Security Bank savings account, and see if saving that LOVELY money won't be easy for you, too.

HUMANE SLAUGHTERING OF CATTLE NOW A LAW

All meat packing plants selling to federal agencies must have humane slaughtering methods in effect by June 30. It's the national law. According to word the county agent received, the federal government has designated four humane methods of stunning animals—chemical, electrical, mechanical and gunshot. Carbon dioxide, an approved chemical induces deep anesthesia. Equipment for its use is costly for small packers, but is being used by large outfits, mistily on hogs.

Electrical stunning equipment requires skill and accuracy, but is relatively inexpensive to install and operate. Two types of mechanical stunning instruments are driven with compressed air or a powder charge. The concussion type generally has a mushroom-shaped head. A well placed blow knocks out the animal. The bolt type enters the skull like a bullet and retracts, leaving the animal unconscious.

The choice of methods and instruments depends upon a combination of many factors. What's best in one plant may not be in another. As other methods are shown to be humane, they may also be approved by federal authorities. Researchers said better methods must be developed to deliver calm animals to the immobilizing area. Ways are sought to completely and safely restrain animals. More installation of equipment to meet requirements doesn't guarantee humane slaughter.

TRANQUILIZERS DO NOT STOP WEIGHT LOSS IN SHIPMENT OF CATTLE SAYS U. OF I. MAN Experiments with tranquilizers on steers shipped to market indicate they do not reduce the loss of weight. Wade Wells and Morris Hemstrom, livestock specialists of the University of Idaho extension service, said the conclusion is based on tests in several states.

In one trial designed to check on shipping shrinkage, they said, 108 yearlings were used. Tranquilizers were injected at different rates about 20 hours before loading. Weight gains 14 days after shipment were not much different than they were for the untranquilized steers. One lot of untranquilized steers averaged 6 pounds heavier than the tranquilized animals.

Other conditions could have influenced the results, the specialists said. Previous treatment of the cattle, environment, and even breed Angus compared with Hereford—could have shown different results. "Tranquilizers have their greatest potential value," the livestock man said, "as a therapeutic agent to relieve stress. Some diseases, like shipping fever, are aggravated by undue stress. At weaning time, calves are under shock and often subjected to other extreme stresses such as dehorning. The possibilities of using column left... By Bill Roth That the Fourth of July affair in Genesee would be a dull weekend is a foregone conclusion and, it certainly was dull. The only noise around town was furnished by those who chose to ignore the law and set off fireworks. The kids weren't the only ones who were setting off firecrackers and other noise-makers. Several dogs around town were on the verge of shock, including the cocker spaniel who helps publish the Genesee News... he was a total wreck.

The weather held up beautifully for the holiday vacationers. The sun has been shining in clear, cloudless skies and the temperature hovering up in the 80's. Most of the fishermen who took to the lakes and streams over the Fourth reported fair fishing... nothing too big, but at least all came back with full creels.

It was good to see Bob Morken back in town after his car accident... except for a bad gash on the side of his head, he reports feeling fine. Gen. Anderson is still in Spokane's Vets hospital doing his work as can be expected following his operation.

Genesee folks are pleased to know that the state highway department is re-surfacing highway 95 from about the Thorsberg turnoff into Moscow. That six-mile stretch of road was pretty rough driving. From the looks of the road that has already been finished, the new surface will be first rate.

Incidental Intelligence: Do you know the coolest spot in Genesee is the Fire Station? With the temperatures creeping up near the 90's, it is a real pleasure to step into that cool, damp city room in the Fire Station. Try it some hot afternoon. Don't stay too long... the jail's right back.

Spring Barley Shows More Rust Damage Than Winter Wheat

Spring barley seems to be showing more damage from the current infestation of stripe rust than the winter wheat, said soil conservationist Larry Sorensen. Although there is certainly going to be damage in many of wheat fields, the spring barley shows the worst effects of the disease.

"The winter wheat's in the head and there should be enough sap in the stem to go ahead and fill them out," said Sorensen. Concerning the damage to the barley, the soil man remarked that some of the spring barley fields are worthless now and might as well be plowed under for summer fallow.

Because of the very limited knowledge that anyone possesses on the effects of the stripe rust, nobody is able to give an accurate estimate of the damage it will cause until the harvest is in and the grain is checked. Experts from the University of Idaho have been checking and investigating the rust, but as yet, no one has come up with any real answers.

Sorensen said that the soil type, stage of seeding, or any of the other variables seem to have little effect on the growth of the plant disease. Due to the weather, the grain is ripening slightly quicker than last year and it should be an early harvest in this area. Sorensen predicted, and added, "it'll be a dirty one, too."

While there does not, at the present time, appear to be any shortage of water, Kinzer has asked people to be a little conservative with the water.

Benefit Dance Saturday, July 16 A benefit dance will be held in the Promenades Hall Saturday evening, July 16, at 9:00 p. m. The dance is open to the public and all are cordially invited to attend.

All of the proceeds realized from this dance will go into a special fund which is being used to aid a needy family in Genesee. Those who do not wish to attend the dance but wish to contribute to the fund may purchase tickets for the dance from several of the local business houses. The details of the benefit dance can also be obtained with the purchase of the tickets.

There are several good reasons why person and family who will be benefited by this dance is not named in the newspaper. A number of Genesee organizations are behind this dance and any support given will be greatly appreciated.

FISH AND GAME NEWS

Commission to Meet July 7 is the date for the next regular meeting of the Idaho Fish and Game Commission in Boise. Stated for action is the biennial budget for 1961-62, along with trapping seasons and preliminary discussion about bag possession limits for upland game birds. No decision, however, will be made regarding the bird harvest at that time.

State patrolmen often assist in other ways," Leonard added. "We have records on many fish and game cases in which state patrolmen made arrests and obtained convictions. In other instances the patrolmen have information and evidence and turned it over to the local conservation officer for prosecution."

Highly coordinated enforcement, coupled with progressive wildlife practices, must be maintained at all levels because increasing sales of licenses indicate that public interest in outdoor recreation is 'exploding' even faster than population numbers. And for top efficiency, the conservation enforcement program must have the highest degree of cooperation with local, county, state, and federal law enforcement agencies.

Federal enforcement agencies with which conservation officers work most closely include the Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife, Forest Service, Federal Bureau of Investigation, and the Internal Revenue (Alcohol and Tobacco Tax division). Yes, the "revenuers" never stop looking for distillers of "mountain dew," and not infrequently do a CO run across a still in the back country.

Orchards that froze need just as much water this summer as trees that escaped the frost, Tony Horn, horticulturist of the University of Idaho extension service, advised growers this week. Many orchards were hit by cold weather last spring.

DO YOU KNOW

Total consumer expenditures for drugs in 1958 amounted to $3,261,000,000, or about $19 per capita, as compared with $10 per capita in 1948. Last year, 1958, the PUDs serve 239,787 customers, or 12.5% of the total. Yet because the PUDs shout so loudly, both congress and the nation generally have paid little attention to the entire Northwest is public power. Because the Northwest is private enterprise at heart, the question of "federated power," or "public power" and "cooperative power," has practically no influence on candidates running for public office.

There shouldn't be much going to the tax collector in this family. Mrs. Marie Cyr of Fort Kent, Maine, married at 17 has produced a child every year for her first 27 married years, of whom 19 are living. Nothing phony about these exemptions.

Brush all the prejudices aside, and there are only two principal issues in the world today. One is internal and the other is external at the same time. It is whether big government will grow bigger and lead its citizens around by the nose, or whether individuals are strong enough and cooperative enough to do things for themselves. The second issue, of course is America's relationship to other nations. All else is trivial.

Everything from one of the first television tubes ever invented to the site of an old fort on the Oregon Trail can be found in a corner of eastern Idaho bounded by Fort Hall on the south and the continental divide on the north. The map accompanies

The station welcomes visitors between 8 a. m. and 5 p. m., Monday through Friday. The community West from Dubois on State Highway 22 is Lily Hot Springs near Winsper. First established nearly 80 years ago, it is a natural hot spring that is fed by naturally hot mineral springs. Individual baths adjoin the main pool.

From the Dubois area, highway 91 heads south to Roberts and Idaho Falls. Roberts, or Market Lake as it was known until the 1930's is one of the oldest towns in Idaho. An 1860 government map plainly marks it.

Today Idaho Falls is not only still a shipping point, but the center of a rich agricultural area and the business hub for atomic energy activity in Idaho. The city's connection with atomic energy began in 1949 when the atomic energy commission established the National Reactor Testing Station on the desert to the northwest.

High Mountain Lakes Beckon Idaho Anglers During Late Summer, Early Fall

Sometime "after the Fourth" is phrase that creeps into conversation as the weather warms in the lowlands bringing an abundance of natural foods and independence to fat, lazy trout—and a yearning to anglers for the offerings of high mountain lakes.

For Idaho is a land of alpine lakes which reluctantly doff icy sheathes as late as mid-July. Some 2,000 of them have been mapped, and hundreds of these have been stocked by the Fish and Game department, lakes relatively unknown to many of the zooming population of sportsmen because they lie off the beaten track.

Others are not. There is a remote ridge in the Bighorn mountains where a horseman or hiker can count 20 lakes below, most of them unmapped and unknown to all but a few people. This rugged stretch of country fills a void between the fabled Middle Fork of the Salmon and the nearby parallel main river to the east.

As matters stand today, the only gold worth finding in these hills is that which colors the sides of golden trout sizzling in the icy blue waters. The bulk is nevertheless accessible by short hikes forest roads along well-marked trails.

Vegetables for late fall gardens will still have ample time to mature if planted in early July. Broccoli, brussels sprouts, cauliflower, and cabbage add color, nutrition, and variety to fall meals, according to George Woodbury, horticulturist at the University of Idaho.

Lakes in the Bighorn Crags certainly are not alone in their scenic grandeur and good fishing. Altogether, there are 18 main mountain lakes regions in the state, mostly topped by peaks and walls of splintered, shattered rock, towering hundreds of feet above timbered slopes.

A quick review of the many other high lake regions of Idaho must encompass the entire Selkirk mountain range from Canada southward; the headwaters of the St. Joe and Lochsa rivers to the Montana border on the northeast; the Seven Devils deep Hells Canyon of the Snake river; and the McCall area, including a portion of the Little Salmon river drainage, among others.

While many of the high lakes require the use of horses, if not packers and guides, most are reached over not-too-rough terrain in one- to three hours. Often a hiker-angler can make one-day trip to lakes not more than five miles from roadways, meanwhile having several hours to catch and enjoy the fish.

Persons planning a trip to lakes in unfamiliar areas are given the following tips by the department. 1. Obtain accurate and complete information about how to get there from someone familiar with the land (forest rangers, conservation officers, or other who have been in the area).

2. Plan carefully, making sure that all essential tackle, equipment and food will be available when needed (flashlight, matches, compass, etc.). 3. Wear appropriate clothing, especially well-fitting shoes for hiking.

4. Set aside plenty of time to get to the lake and back before dark and still have several hours for fishing. 5. Don't be too disappointed if the fish aren't biting. (Mountain lakes result in nothing one day and limits the next.)

In these mountains, Idaho has the remnants of primeval conditions presently recalled as "the good old days." Sometimes these conditions are not so good for fish. The water that feeds high lakes often runs off granite rocks and is relatively low in minerals needed to produce fish and other aquatic life. The growing season is short and winter conditions often are extreme.

NEW VETERANS PENSION LAW EFFECTIVE AFTER JULY 1

The new veterans pension law approved by Congress and the President during 1959 goes into effect after July 1. The Veterans Administration said veterans and their dependents coming out of the pension rolls from now on will do so under provisions of this new law known as Public Law 86-211.

The new law increases both the maximum pension payments and the amount of taxable income from other sources and provides a sliding scale of payments based on need. At the same time, it provides for counting part of the wife's income as the veteran's and for considering the net worth of the applicant.

The new law also puts pension eligibility requirements for widows and orphans of the World War II and Korean Conflict veterans on the same eligibility basis as those of World War I. It eliminates the previous requirements that veterans of World War II or Korea have a service-connected disability at time of death.

Under the law becoming operative July 1, single veterans with annual income not exceeding $1800 who are permanently and totally disabled may be paid pension at a monthly rate ranging from $40 to $85, depending on the amount of other income they have. Similarly, disabled veterans who have dependents can draw from $45 to $100 per month and have a maximum income limitation of $3000.

Widows alone may be paid from $25 to $60 a month, and the rate increases from $40 to $75 per month for widows with one child. An extra monthly payment of $15 is allowed for each additional child. The maximum income limitation for a widow alone is $1800 and for a widow with children is $3000.

If there are surviving children but no widow or where the widow herself is not eligible, each child has separate entitlement to pension in his own right if his income is not over $1800 annually, excluding his own earnings. A monthly payment of $35 may be made for one child and $15 extra for each additional child.

Under the old pension system, the Veterans whether single or with dependents were paid a flat rate of $66.16. This payment was increased to $78.75 per month after 10 years on the rolls or attainment of age 65. Income limitations were $1400 a year for single veterans, and $2700 for veterans with dependents. A payment of $180.45 was allowed, a veteran needing constant aid and attendance.

The old law provided flat payments of $50.40 for widow alone; $63 for a widow with one child, and $7.56 for each additional child. Detailed information regarding the new pension law may be obtained from any VA office.

EXPERIMENTAL SQUAWFISH CONTROL WORK CONTINUES ON PAYETTE RIVER

Experimental work on partial control of squawfish populations in southwestern Idaho's Cascade reservoir through removal of spawning runs by chemical treatment is continuing for the third successive year, the Fish and Game department said this week.

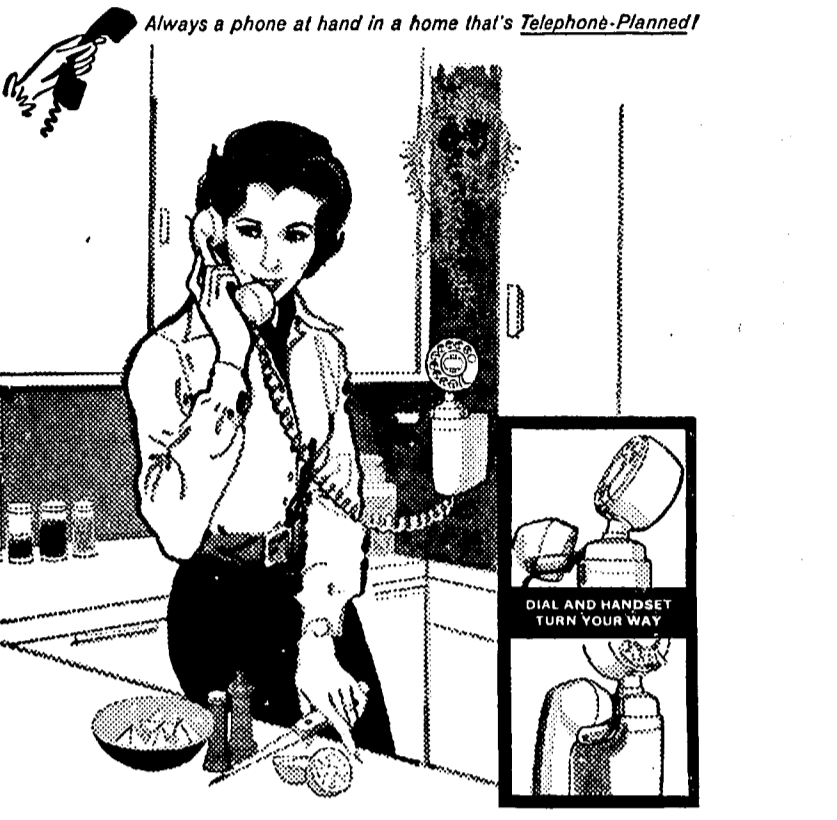

The work involves chemical treatment of about 15 miles of the North Fork of the Payette river between Cascade and McCall, according to Director Ross Leonard. Similar experiments at Hayden lake in north Idaho were made several years ago, leading to the conclusion that partial control of rough fish populations in trout waters is possible and feasible through this means.

A crew of five department workers placed emulsified rotenone directly into the Payette waters at McCall and at Lake Fork, a point about midway downstream to Cascade reservoir.

Proper 'Picture' Window Frames Lot's Best View

This window unit of ponderosa pine is ideal as a "picture" window. Fixed sash in center offers unobstructed view, casement sash on each side open for ventilation.

A picture window should be a joy, not a joke. If you are building a new home or remodeling your present one, look carefully around your lot, choose the best view, possibly from the side or back of the house, and have a picture window installed to frame it.

A view need not be a grand sweep of scenery. It can be a small back or side yard, fenced high and landscaped. A terrace, patio or garden of no more than twenty feet will do.

With a pleasant view, a picture window will add a calm sense of space and cheerful brightness. Ready-to-install picture windows of ponderosa pine are available in many sizes and designs to suit your house if you have, or can make, a view.

Vegetables of this kind will mature easily in Idaho's irrigated sections where they can get lots of water and the soil is good," Woodbury says. "We may find the cost of city watering too high other parts of the state, and winter sometimes starts too early in other areas. But for the gardener who has the right conditions the fall garden is not only profitable but fun to raise. It furnishes plentiful, good foods up through the late Thanksgiving season, longer if the season is mild."

Woodbury cautions that seeds planted at this time of year can dry out during hot summer days. Plentiful water to keep them wet through the first growth is essential if they are to survive. Once started, they do well under normal, good gardening care.

choice habitat and food is available to fish that remain. They make good, vigorous growth, and their numbers are plentiful enough to meet the existing demands from anglers.

And each year the Fish and Game department enlarges the fisherman's horizon by stocking additional lakes. Some receive fish to replenish trout populations already present and the others are stocked for the first time. The angler has a place in the program, for it is through his information regarding fishing pressures, size and number of fish taken, the hours fished and condition of trout taken, that the department may properly manage these waters in the future.

BREAKFAST AROUND THE WORLD

No matter how you spell it, pronounce it or eat it, breakfast is a world-wide nutritional necessity and perhaps the most important meal of the day.

Breakfast is called by many names in many countries and the foods served are as varied as the names. In quite a few countries the breakfast is similar to that served in the United States. Bread, plain or toasted, a beverage, meat or eggs or both, cereal, and fruit juice are standard in many countries.

In Mexico, Spain, Argentina and other Latin and South American countries, breakfast is termed desayuno, the first meal of the day. Urban Mexican breakfasts are much like our own. In rural Mexico, frijoles con chriso (beans with Mexican green chiles), tamales, in Spain and Argentina the continental breakfast is the first meal. It usually includes coffee or chocolate and rolls. A more substantial breakfast is eaten later.

The Chinese start the day with a cup of tea. The following morning breakfast, also tea may include cakes, soup, rice, vegetable bowls with chopped chicken, fish or poultry and are served or fresh eggs. Japan's breakfast, choshiyoku, is fundamentally the same.

Trend's breakfast is a substantial meal which includes cereal, eggs, bacon and large amount of butter and jam. The British are good trenchermen at the breakfast table. Menus may include cooked cere-

FISH AND GAME NEWS
Spring Pheasant Population
While pheasant breeding populations form only the base on which ringneck production is built during the year, it is well recognized that the spring numbers of Idaho's most popular upland game bird are down slightly as compared to the springtime of 1959. This drop in breeding birds was anticipated in view of the poor pheasant production last summer. Only southeast Idaho ranges showed an increase in pheasant breeding stocks, according to population counts in ringneck areas. This amounted to a ten per cent increase over last year.

Areas showing declines in pheasant breeding population trend as compared to 1959 levels were as follows: North Idaho, down 11 per cent; southwest, minus two per cent; southeastern, down 16 per cent.

Breeding population is only the base on which pheasant production is built during the year. Hunting outlook in October is largely dependent on good nesting and rearing success, since about 80 per cent of the fall pheasant population consists of the young birds in a normal year.

A total of 45 department observers conduct early morning counts in May on permanently catalogued pheasant crowing areas to establish the trend of breeding numbers from year to year. Production data is collected during July and August to determine the annual fall hunting outlook.

Sage Grouse Counts
Essentially the same picture exists for sage grouse. Trend counts this spring were up 26 per cent over 1959 in southeastern areas, and down 13 per cent in southeastern areas, and six per cent in the south.

Here again, spring breeding population is only the base on which annual sage grouse production is built. Favorable hatches and good rearing conditions also are essential to high fall populations of huntable birds.

Detailed analysis of this information, together with 1960 production data, will be considered at department personnel meetings to be held next month prior to a Fish and Game Commission meeting to finalize game bird regulations on August 24.

Goose Banding Ends
About 900 geese were trapped and banded at five Idaho waterfowl production areas during June. Some 260 of them received yellow plastic neckties to obtain special information on breeding age and movement of the lower Snake River. Eastern Idaho's Island Park area was the most productive banding spot in the state, with 400 geese banded, plus an additional 70 birds recaptured which has been banded in previous years. The purpose is to keep tabs on movement and area of harvest, as well as to determine population turnover rates for the various Idaho breeding flocks of geese.

CONSTRUCTION TO START ON EARTHQUAKE HIGHWAY

Forest Service engineers in Missoula this week confirmed that schedules have been revised to permit construction of a road through Madison River Canyon Earthquake Area beginning this fall.

The announcement came following a recent meeting of Bureau of Public Roads, the Forest Service and the Montana State Highway Department personnel in Portland, Oregon.

A three and one-half mile link from the top of Madison Slide eastward to the old highway at the head of Earthquake Lake will be put under construction this fall for completion next summer, Forest Service engineers said. The Forest Highway project is under the direction of the BPR in cooperation with the other two agencies.

The new construction will join a road recently completed by the Forest Service to the top of the huge slide which destroyed part of former Montana Highway 287 during the severe earthquake on August 17 last year. Construction of this link will open up Madison Canyon and the special earthquake area to through traffic.

Other work to complete the repair or replacement of serviceable sections of the old highway from West Yellowstone out through the mouth of Madison Canyon will follow original plans, except that the link between the slide and the head of Earthquake Lake will have priority.

SOME ANIMALS MAY BE SUBJECT TO SUNBURN
"The goat who reeks on yonder hill stiffs all day on chlorophyll."
That little jingle may not have come from an immortal pen, but it has something of interest for Idaho livestock men. This same chlorophyll—used freely by the goat on the hill as well as to keep down household odors in a good many homes may do strange things in the bodies of white or white-spotted cattle and hogs. (Warning: Watch out for this next sentence!) Distributed throughout the body of a white animal, the chlorophyll decomposes to porphyrins and appears in the white areas subcutaneously as a bad case of sunburn but really as a photosensitization. (We told you but don't become discouraged.)

Dr. Lloyd H. Scrivner, station veterinarian at the University of Idaho, says the animals eat certain green plants that carry chlorophyll in combinations and amounts that sensitize the white areas of their skins. Common among these plants are ladino and alsike clover, rape, St. John's wort, Bermuda grass and young buckwheat. After the animals eat such plants skin of the white areas blisters when exposed to strong sunlight. White or white-spotted cattle and white hogs are most commonly affected.

The blistered skin is more than mere sunburn and must be watched carefully if the animal is to recover. Severe cases merit the attention of a veterinarian without delay. Treatment of the immediate disease must be coupled with a search for the plant causing the trouble. A change of diet is necessary if the malady is to be halted.

DOUGH PAY ME

For a long time I had trouble saving money. My plans to buy the things I wanted and needed would hit a sour note at the end of each month. Then I learned a new song — DOUGH PAY ME — paying myself first each month by putting part of each paycheck in my First Security Bank savings account.

Now my songs are sweet songs, because I pay dough to me each payday and have the money to get the things I want.

You'll sing happy songs, too. Sing DOUGH PAY ME and pay yourself first each payday in your First Security Bank savings account.

SKIP STALEY BEGINS DUTIES AS ATHLETIC DIRECTOR AT UNIVERSITY OF IDAHO

The start of this month marks the beginning of new careers for two leading figures in Idaho's sports world.

J. Neil (Skip) Staley becomes the athletic director as well as head football coach at the University of Idaho, and Robert S. Gibb terminates six years as athletic director at the university to go to Boise to become executive secretary of Inspiration, Inc., an organization devoted "to the serving of people." Gibb will also be staff coordinator of the Boise Methodist church.

"I am looking forward to the dual challenge of the new athletic organization," said Staley, "But I am well aware that I am following an outstanding man as athletic director. Bob Gibb was a real credit to the University of Idaho, and I am pleased that he will still be serving in this state. He has my best wishes in his new field of endeavor."

Gibb commented: "The past six years have been a rich experience for me. It has been rewarding just to be a part of the University of Idaho and to work with so many fine and dedicated people. My daughter, Julie, will be starting at the university this fall and I know of no better school in the nation which she could attend. I share with the many others confidence in Skip Staley, and am looking forward to a bright athletic future for Idaho."

Staley has devoted virtually all of his adult life to athletics, and much of it has been spent as head football coach, but he will be serving for the first time as an athletic director. Before taking over the football leadership at Idaho, Staley was head coach at both Brown and Toledo universities.

Earlier, Staley was an assistant to the famed football strategist, Dick Harlow, at the University of Maryland and Harvard university. Staley was graduated from Pennsylvania

State in 1930, and that year was selected on the Eastern team for the annual East-West game.

Coming to the University of Idaho in 1954, Staley probably had the most successful first-year of any Vandal coach. His initial team defeated the Washington State Cougars—for the first time in 28 years. Since then, Staley has each year turned out a highly creditable team. He has had more players enter the professional ranks than any other Idaho coach.

Overheard on the Rimrock: "My husband would never chase another woman, 'he's too fine, too decent, and too old!"

The man had barely paid off his mortgage on the house when he mortgaged it again to buy a car, and not too long after, borrowed money to build a garage. His banker hesitated and said, "if I do make this new loan, how will you buy gas for the car?" "It seems to me," the man replied curtly, "that a fellow who owns a large house, a car, and garage should be able to get credit for gas."

Weather Hurries Genesee Harvest; First Wheat In July 12

Genesee's 1960 harvest was hurried during the past two weeks due to the unusual weather conditions that quickly dried out most of the area and the intense heat that hastened the ripening of the grain.

Zenner Bros. Barley
The Zenner Bros., farming out on the rim, brought in the first grain of the season when they delivered barley to the Genesee Union Warehouse Co. Ellis Odberg, the Zenners, and Phil Hermann delivered peas on July 12 and on that same day Stanton Becker brought in the first wheat of the season.

Forrest Durbin, manager of Genesee Union, reported that deliveries are now coming in every day, but it will be at least the first week in August before the harvest gets into full swing.

Durbin said that this early in the harvest, it would be hard to make a prediction on the general condition of the grain, but that most of the wheat that had been brought in looked good. Some small kernels were seen in the delivered grain but, in general, it looked good. The barley crop was described by Durbin as "thin".

What peas have been cut were yielding about 1200 to 1400 pounds to the acre, which is just about average. Lentils were yielding close to a 1000 pounds to the acre which is a good yield for this crop.

The actual extent of the damage done to the grain by stripe rust and the sudden scorching weather could not be accurately discovered until the harvest was completed and the grain is in the bins, Durbin said.

Benefit Dance Nets Near $300

A benefit dance held in the Genesee Firemen's Hall Saturday evening, July 16, netted close to $300, it was reported this week. All of the proceeds of the dance will be turned over to a local family to help defray the cost of a delicate heart operation.

Despite the sizzling weather engulfing the area a good number of local and some out-of-town people were present to enjoy the dancing and to watch the talent show.

The talent show, staged by younger people from Genesee and Lewiston and including some young ladies from Genesee was enjoyed by the crowd. The music for the dancers was furnished free by the Genesee Ramblers who volunteered to donate their services to help raise money for this worthy cause.

Thanks To All

To all of those who contributed their time, money and effort to make the dance a success a heart-felt thank you and a "well-done" is in order.

Ozzie and Jordan Kanikkeberg spent over the weekend at Kelly Creek.

Dry, Hot Weather Causes Serious Fire Threat Over Area

The immediate Genesee area, that which is served by the Genesee Rural Fire Protection District, held its breath and waited anxiously for further developments in the critical fire threat that is holding this region in its grasp. Since the condition developed, Genesee firemen have answered only one call for assistance and that blaze was brought under control before any damage to grain fields was done.

Down in the Lewis-Clark area hundreds of men were still fighting to hold the lines as scores of fires, set by severe lightning Tuesday night, continued to slug away at the forests, wheat fields, and grass lands.

More than 200 fires of assorted size and intensity were fought in that area Wednesday and Wednesday evening and about two-thirds of those still remained to be put out late Wednesday evening.

Grain Losses High

An estimated 6,100 acres of pasture, wheat, peas and barley had been burned by 11 o'clock Wednesday night, it was reported. Nez Perce County losses have been estimated at 2,700 acres of pasture, peas, wheat, and barley.

Fire was also reported on Moscow mountain early this week but latest news from that area said the fire was brought under control before any great damage could be done.

Rimrock Fire

Genesee firemen answered their only call this week when J. P. Hermann turned in a call for help Wednesday afternoon at approximately 3:00. A lightning-set fire Tuesday night, east of the Little Potlatch, had jumped the creek, railroad and highway between the Rawleigh Albright place and Arrow Junction and had quickly raced to the top of the ridge in the Zenner Bros. range land.

Immediately threatened were grain fields of Belle Isaksen, J. P. Hermann, Clifford Hermann, Earl Clyde, Bill Stevens, Robert Kuhn, and Zenner Bros.

Two trucks and a jeep were dispatched to the scene and with the help of many willing volunteers the firemen had brought the blaze under control shortly after seven.

Thanks Given

The residents and farmers in that east rimrock district extended their sincere thanks to the firemen and fire-fighting volunteers for their generous and prompt response in helping defeat the blaze.

Father McCarthy St. Mary's Pastor

Father Bartholomew McCarthy, former pastor at Blackfoot, will arrive in Genesee the latter part of this week to assume the duties as new pastor of St. Mary's Catholic parish. Father John W. Morgan, who has been administrator of St. Mary's parish for the past month will return to Walla Walla where he is assistant pastor at St. Alphonsus' parish. Father Morgan replaced Father Francis McGlinchey, whose serious heart condition forced him to give up his pastoral duties at St. Mary's.

In a recent report on the condition of Father McGlinchey, he is said to be improving and his doctor states he may be able to return to active duty in a short time. His many friends will be glad to hear he is getting along so well.

Temps Soar Upward

A sizzling sun blazed down on an already tinder dry Inland Empire this week, sending the mercury skyrocketing into the 100 degree level in many places. The combination of little or no moisture, high temperatures and hot wind created a disastrous situation with fires developing and some raging out of control in many sections of north Idaho and Washington.

The weekend weather continued its previous pattern with the sun shining brightly and the temperatures clinging around in the 90's. Monday was probably the hottest day of the year in Genesee. While there was no official thermometer available, several local thermometers went over the 100 degree mark. Most of the local people had reported that the mercury had reached about 102 degrees. This would appear to be pretty close to accurate since Moscow reported an official 103 late Monday afternoon and Lewiston turned in a melting 109. The 103 temperature in Moscow was just 2 degrees short of the record set in 1928.

Lightning Strikes

The heat wave continued without let-up Tuesday during the day and at approximately 9:00 p. m. the regional firefighters and farmers watched as the worst of all possible conditions began to develop. The heat had apparently been responsible for creating an electrical storm and erupted into dazzling fingers of lightning. To make matters worse, the storm was accompanied by strong winds that whipped nearly exhausted fire back into life. The lightning touched off fires all over the region, especially down around Lapwai and on the prairie. One Genesee person, who had driven down the hill to check on conditions reported that at one time there were twenty-eight separate fires going near Spaulding and Lapwai. For some fortunate reason, none of the fires spread into Genesee area fields Tuesday night.

Prizes Await Winner In Wool Contest

Approximately $45,000 in prizes will be awarded to this year's winners of the Make It Yourself With Wool contest.

In order to be eligible for the contest, entrants must be between the ages of 13 and 22 and must not be a professional seamstress or sewing teacher. The garment must be made of 100 per cent wool fabric. It may be made from a commercial pattern or from an original design.

The district contest will be held in Moscow in October. The state winner will receive an expense paid trip to Denver and will be eligible for national prizes. Idaho has previously had several National winners who won all expense paid trips to Europe. Anyone interested in the contest may obtain entry blanks from Ruth Shane, Extension Home Agent in Latah County.

County Agent Discusses Care And Harvesting of Peas, Lentils

Heat and dry weather has cut lentil prospects so farmers should make every effort to save the crop.

Wrong harvesting methods can lose several hundred pounds of lentils per acre due to shattering. Care in mowing can mean big wages.

Leaving lentils to ripen standing has a big element of risk as one wind can shatter many lentils and the first to be affected are the large, plump, valuable seeds.

Ordinary mowers will cut lentils if the sickle sections and ledger plates are sharp. Lentils should be cut clean as they tend to build up on the cutter bar which can cause plugging.

Lifters are not needed to cut lentils, but several fingers to clear tractor tracks are necessary. These fingers or rollers should be spaced closer together for lentils than when used for peas and should be longer to roll the lentils gently.

Mowing at a good speed helps to make the short lentils clear the cutter bar.

Wash the cutter bar with water to prevent gumming, and be sure to clean before leaving equipment for any length of time as the gum is difficult to remove after it dries.

Mowing during the cool part of the day or night will save lentils.

Lentils usually should be mowed a little on the green side as it is better to sacrifice a few of the small, green lentils and be sure of saving the large ripe lentils.

Check lentils daily as they can surprise you by ripening quickly on hot days. Lentils should be mowed when the lentils that are the greenest are firm. Test the greenest lentil seed you can find by squeezing and if it is mealy, start cutting. If the seed is juicy, then wait till the seed matures to the mealy stage. The lentil seed will finish hardening after mowing.

Cutting too green will result in shriveled seed. Lentil vines will still show some green color at mowing time, however.

About a week after mowing check to see that lentils are all hard, and straw is dry and brittle; then, start combining. Combine speed will be set the same as for peas and be careful not to crack the seeds.

The front woodwork on the outside of the News office now gleams brightly, covered with a new coat of fresh, white paint. In fact, all of the front work from the bank on down to the News office is being painted and repaired by Henry Halverson, who has been working during the morning hours all week long. Mr. Halverson has just been able to work in the morning since the sun soon drives anyone away from the front of the buildings during the afternoon.

Genesee was treated to a brilliant, but disastrous spectacle Tuesday night. A good portion of the southern sky was turned a glowing reddish-orange by the numerous fires down in the Lewis-Clark valley. Local residents were also witnesses to one of the most severe thunder and lightning storms that has hit the area in many years.

It is still hard to believe that Genesee would have come out of all that fight untouched, but as of this writing, there have been no reports of fire losses by any local farmers. It took some hard work Wednesday afternoon to keep the fire contained down in the canyons but the volunteer workers and firemen who went down the hill managed to bring the blaze under control.

This might be a good time to thank the several ladies who were thoughtful enough to bring ice water out to the fire fighters Wednesday. All of the trucks carry their own water bags but they're not very cool. I'm sure all the workers appreciated this gesture.

Fishermen in North Idaho found many of their favorite spots closed this week as the Fire Wardens clamped down heavy restrictions on many of the streams. Closed to fishing, picnicking and all but necessary work are the Bovill, Clarkia, Elk River, Boehl's Cabin and other areas. It might be well to check with the forest service before planning a trip in any wooded area.

Dick Scharnhorst Named To County Centennial Commission

In recent action taken by the Idaho Territorial Centennial Commission Executive Committee the following Latah County persons were appointed to the Latah County Centennial Committee:

Willis Bohman, Troy, Chairman; Spencer Lewis, Moscow, Secretary; Ted Saad, Potlatch; Ira Havens, Juliaetta; Frank Abrams, Kendrick; D. F. Scharnhorst, Genesee; and Frank Mallory, Bovill.

These appointees were recommended to the Centennial Commission by the Latah County Board of Commissioners. They are charged with the organization, planning and execution of Latah County's Centennial Celebration in 1963.

Commission Executive Secretary, Robert M. Cole, reports that the county committees are being asked to originate and coordinate local planning which should incorporate existing county and community organizations, association, civic groups, fraternal orders, religious groups and school and youth groups into a general program plan which would introduce the Centennial Theme into the county fairs, annual community celebrations, school events, banquets, and other festivities honoring pioneers. Writing a history of the organization of county and community government, pageantry, exposition of county resources, building of historical museums, and all other suitable forms of endeavor.

Cole added that the organization of a Latah County Centennial Committee does not preclude community or regional organization. He stated that the Commission is very aware in order to achieve a successful Centennial Celebration, the greatest possible number of Idahoans must participate. Anyone desiring to work on this interesting and very worthwhile project is urged to contact anyone of their county committee members.

Little Leaguers End Ball Season

Coach Jordan Kanikkeberg and his Little League baseball team ended their season this week with victories over Kendrick and Deary.

Tuesday evening the home team traveled to Kendrick and defeated that squad 22-5 in a runaway contest. Genesee scored in every inning including a seven run third frame to post the victory. Butch Green went all the way on the mound for Genesee as he struck out 12 and walked 14. Genesee's batters had a field day at the plate with David Fallwell hitting two home runs and Leo Bielenberg hitting one. Butch Green connected for three triples and Doug Mayer and Ray Esser also banged out three-base hits.

Defeat Deary 21-6

In the final game of the season, Genesee battered Deary 21-6 on the home diamond Wednesday night.

New Chemical Offers Cheap Way To Farm Idaho Waters

By Jim Humbird Idaho Fish and Game Department Every time the Fish and Game department announces that studies are underway to learn the feasibility of chemically treating a stream or other body of water to rid it of rough fish, public interest immediately flares and not all of it is favorable.

This has been so since the chemical treatment method was started in Idaho back in 1948. Public hearings always have been a basic part of these projects before final action was taken. Such democratic town hall forums set on the record important considerations, both pro and con.

More than 60 eradication projects have been completed by the Department with better than 90 per cent success in eliminating competition for food and habitat between a number of different species, including trout. Other states have had similar records. Sport fishing has benefited tremendously even in extremely large reservoirs such as eastern Idaho's Island Park. Here several million trout were stocked following chemical treatment about two years ago.

Beginning with the re-opening of Island Park to anglers on June 4, this reservoir has been producing record catches of 10 to 12 inch rainbows because of excellent water quality, abundance of fish foods, no competition from trash species, and other factors.

These waters by autumn are expected to be giving up larger trout to regain a long-standing reputation as one of the continent's top ten sport fisheries. Last week, the Idaho Fish and Game commission authorized the expenditure of $13,975 for 10 fish eradication projects around the state. Among these was $2,500 for Magic reservoir north of Twin Falls and another $400 for treatment of its tributaries.

Director Ross Leonard, says that authorization simply means a clearing of the way for the various eradication programs, and that public hearings will be scheduled in the areas concerned as soon as possible. Any decision for action, Magic is complicated by the fact that the reservoir is providing some pretty good fishing this summer. Between opening day and June 16, over 100 fishermen with 2,232 trout and 1,983 perch for an average of 1.6 trout per angler, and 1.5 perch. The rate of catch per man per hour was 0.4 trout. This is believed to have increased somewhat since that time for both boat and bank fishermen. The estimated total harvest opening week at Magic was 6,000 trout and 5,400 perch.

Fisheries biologist Stacy V. Gebhards reports that trout have been falling into two size groups. Most of them average about 12 inches, while a minority measure in the neighborhood of 14 1/2 inches. He knows of only six trout weighing between four and five pounds. The average length from five to 10 1/2 inches with the average being about eight inches. Age and growth studies show that trout require two full years in the reservoir before they reach 11 1/2 inches in length. About 75 per cent of the catch consists of two-year-olds; 22 per cent, three-year-olds and the remainder, four years or older.

It is known that drouth conditions, now far into the second year, at least, have concentrated the trout and perch because of the low water level in the reservoir, resulting in even more acute competition for food and making them easier to find. This shortens the time between the bites and helps fill creels. It also speeds up the "stunting" process.

While conceding that the sports fishery at Magic reservoir seems to be holding its own pretty well so far this summer, Gebhards contends that it can only go one way—down. He describes the results of 22 gill

VETERANS SHOULD REVIEW GI INSURANCE HOLDINGS

More than 128 thousand veterans in the Pacific Northwest should give careful study to their GI insurance holdings, the Veterans Administration suggested today.

These veterans still hold GI term insurance, VA said, a type of insurance that plays a definite role for a young growing family but may become prohibitively expensive for the veteran near retirement age.

This is one of the biggest problems now facing the VA, the agency pointed out, using as an example a recent letter from a World War I veteran to emphasize the importance of the situation.

"Feel free to use my present plight to warn other term insurance holders," the veteran wrote. "I find myself nearing 70, unable to continue my term insurance payments at their greatly increased rate and unable to obtain new insurance coverage. If I die, my wife has nothing; yet over the years we have invested more than $8,000 in this form of insurance."

Mounting costs can become prohibitive as the years go by, VA said. For instance, a term G. I. insurance policy that carries an annual premium of $9-a-annum at age 35, jumps to an annual premium of $47-a-annum at age 65, and to $73.16-a-annum at age 70.

VA emphasized that it is not trying to tell individual veterans how to handle their insurance programs. The individual program depends on the circumstances of each veteran's financial situation, and his total insurance plans and program. Each policyholder should review his G. I. insurance holdings periodically to be sure they meet his current and long range needs.

The number of GI term insurance policies in force in Washington state are 58,071; in Oregon, 41,658; Montana, 13,947; Idaho, 13,123; and in Alaska, 2,310.

Full information on GI insurance programs may be obtained from any VA office.

Last Call Made for Controlled Hunt Applications In Idaho

Midnight of July 22 is the last hour for postmarking eligible applications for controlled hunts this year on mountain goats, moose and antelope, the Idaho Fish and Game department announced this week.

Drawing date for the three big game species has been set for August 3 in Boise at 9 a. m. Additional details will be published later, according to Director Ross Leonard.

General hunting seasons for big-horn sheep have been set, with no drawing required to take rams with three-quarter horn curl or better in prescribed areas.

Persons who draw antelope permits this year will not be permitted to participate in the public drawings for pronghorn hunts during 1961.

Applicants for moose, goat and antelope permits must enclose certified check, cashier's check or money order to cover the required fees for such hunts. This will be returned promptly to persons who do not draw permits. Such fees are $35 for moose, $15 for goat, and $4 for antelope.

Special electronic machines will quickly process winning applications, sorting them from those which did not draw and returning hunt permits to lucky sportsmen and refunds to the remainder.

The United States Coast Guard has its 170th anniversary as an organized seagoing service on August 4th. It is August 4th, 1790, that Congress passed and George Washington signed a bill authorizing "ten boats" which Secretary of the Treasury, Alexander Hamilton had asked for to guard the coast against smugglers.

YOUR Social Security

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Question— I'm over 72 and am self-employed. I'm now receiving social security of $116.00 a month, which I understand has been the top payment. But last year I made over $4800. Will this in any way increase the amount I'm getting?

Answer— Yes it will. 1959 was the first year you could pay on earnings up to $4800—and including these additional earnings would raise your benefit to $119 a month. How soon you can file for this increase depends on several things, such as when you first filed, or if you've had your payments refigured recently. We'd like to suggest that you contact the social security office nearest you. They'll have your record and will be able to give you more specific information.

Asiatic Carp Among the 30 Fish Introduced to Idaho

By Jim Humbird Idaho Fish and Game Department

Early summer every year brings pleas to the Idaho Fish and Game department to introduce exotic fish species into Idaho waters. Requests are made for pike, pickerel and members of the spiny-rayed fish such as walleye and white bass.

Although the department always has assumed a "take it easy" attitude when it comes to introducing fish that are foreign to state waters, it is a fact that about 30 different kinds have been released here since pioneer days, some without success because little or no thought was given to biological needs. Other plantings were vexingly fruitful. By and large, sport-angling would be impaired by the elimination of many of the foreigners.

It all started with the settlers who came to the region in the great mid-century immigration of the covered wagons. Although greeted by prodigious abundance of salmon and trout, plentiful beyond the dreams of the bearded men and unbombed women this merely quickened their appetites for the lesser fishes they had loved and left back home, the pond species of New England, of the Mississippi and other sections of the United States that clear about the Great Lakes.

They could not understand why there was such a plethora of ponds without sunfish, perch and crappie. Many of the pioneers, if not most, willingly would have swapped the greatest sea-run chinook salmon for a fat bass, or a two-foot steelhead for a mud-grubbing catfish from the bayous.

And carp, the fish now regarded as the most ignoble and worthless of all conceivable species, once was a "good boy" to the pioneers. The angler who put the barb into this swerving gleam of amber and gold was hailed for its artfulness and patience and envied for his luck in having C. carpio piping hot on a platter.

The western saga of the fish with a genius for reproduction and the ability to survive in water so deoxygenated that the other species must surely perish, its suitability above all others for transport under the most primitive conditions.

Idaho claims no laurels for continental or early colonial introduction of carp. Both the pioneers and the "German," a habit which persists to day even though this species indubitably is Asiatic in its earliest origins.

In his book, "The Americanization of Man's Recreation," Izak Walton gives the following recipe for a piscatorial treat designed to bring ecstasy to treacherman and gourmet alike.

"Take a Carp, alive if possible, scour him, and rub him clean with water and salt, but scale him not; then open him, and put him with his blood and his liver, which you must save when you open him, into a small pot or kettle; then take Sweet-marjoram, Thyme, and Parsley, of each a handful, a sprig of Rosemary, and another of Savory, bind them into two or three small bundles, and put them to your carp with four or five small onions, twenty pickled Oysters, and three Anchovies. Then pour upon your Carp as much Claret wine as will cover him; and season your Claret well with salt, cloves, and vine, and the rinds of oranges and lemons; that done, cover your pot and set it on a quick fire, till it be sufficiently boiled, then take out the Carp, and give it with the broth into the dish, and pour upon it a quarter of a pound of the best fresh butter, melted and beaten with half a dozen eggs, and give it with the broth of two or three eggs, and some of the herbs shred; garnish your dish with lemons,

New Chemical Offers Cheap Way To 'Farm' Idaho Waters

Idaho Fish and Game Department... Every time the Fish and Game department announces that studies are underway to learn the feasibility of chemically treating a stream or other body of water to rid it of rough fish, public interest immediately flares and not all of it is favorable.

This has been so since the chemical treatment method was started in Idaho back in 1948. Public hearings always have been a basic part of the procedure before final action was taken.

More than 60 eradication projects have been completed by the Department with better than 90 per cent success in eliminating competition for food and habitat between a number of different species, including trout.

Sport fishing has benefited tremendously even in extremely large reservoirs such as eastern Idaho's Island Park. Here several million trout were stocked following chemical treatment about two years ago.

Beginning with the re-opening of Island Park to anglers on June 4, this reservoir has been producing good catches of 10 to 12 inch rainbows because of excellent water quality, abundance of fish foods, no competition from trash species, and other factors.

These waters by autumn are expected to be giving up larger trout to regain a long-standing reputation as one of the continent's top sport fisheries.

Last week the Idaho Fish and Game commission authorized the expenditure of $13,975 for 19 fish eradication projects around the state. Among these was $2,500 for Magic reservoir north of Twin Falls, and another $400 for treatment of its tributaries.

Director Ross Leonard, says that authorization simply means a clearance of funds for the various eradication programs and that public hearings will be scheduled in the areas concerned as soon as possible.

Any decision for action at Magic is complicated by the fact that the reservoir is providing some pretty good fishing this summer. Between opening day and June 16, creel censuses found 1,316 fishermen with 2,232 trout and 1,982 perch for an average of 1.6 trout per angler, and 1.5 perch. The rate of catch per man per hour was 0.44 trout. This is believed to have increased somewhat since that time for both boat and bank fishermen.

The estimated total harvest opening week end at Magic was 6,600 trout and 5,400 perch. Fisheries biologist Stacy V. Gebhardt reports that trout have been falling into two size groups. Most of them average about 12 inches, while a minority measure in the neighborhood of 14 1/2 inches. He knows of only six trout weighing between four and seven pounds. Perch range from five to 10 1/2 inches with the average being about eight inches. Age and growth studies show that trout require two full years in the reservoir before they reach 11 1/2 inches in length. About 75 per cent of the catch consists of two-year-olds, 22 per cent, three-year-olds; and the remainder, four years or older.

It is known that drought conditions, now far into the second year, at least, have concentrated the trout and perch because of the low water level in the reservoir, resulting in even more acute competition for food and making them easier to find. This shortens the time between bites and helps fill creels. It also speeds up the "stunting" process.

While conceding that the sports fishery at Magic reservoir seems to be holding its own pretty well so far this summer, Gebhardt contends that it can only go one way—down.

He describes the results of 22 gill net sets made throughout the reservoir last May at varying depths to determine the numbers of different rough fish populations now present. A total of 598 fish were collected. Of these 409 were perch; 163 suckers; 22 chubs; three shiners and one trout.

Converting these numbers into percentages, the various fish population ratios based on this study are about as follows: perch 68.4%; suckers, 27.2%; chubs 3.7%; shiners, 0.5 per cent; and trout 0.2 per cent.

Gebhardt stresses that trout fishing is destined to go downhill because of the tremendous numbers of perch, shiners, suckers and chubs. He adds that the reservoir has not been below 10,000 acre feet since 1934, and has been less than 50,000 acre feet only three times in the past 25 years.

In other words, a review of water-level data for the past 31 years indicates that the chemical treatment this fall could be the most effective and economical since 1934. Last year's low-ebb reading was about 19,000 acre feet and continuing dry conditions are causing it to run approximately 8,000 acre feet behind last year.

With the low draw-down foreseen at Magic this fall, the reservoir can be treated with the chemical, "rotenone," rather than rotenone—at a cost of only about seven cents per acre foot of water as compared to approximately $1 per acre foot for rotenone. Gebhardt explains that it is difficult to recommend using toxaphene on volumes of water over 50,000 acre feet "until we know how fast it will neutralize." On smaller volumes of water in big reservoirs, however, dilution the following spring when the pool fills should eliminate any danger of prolonged toxicity, and plans for restocking with trout can proceed.

During the past few years toxaphene, which basically is an insecticide has been gaining widespread use in fish eradication in the United States and Canada. Washington, among other states, has had outstanding success with toxaphene. It attacks the central nervous system in fish, causing paralysis and eventual respiratory failure. In light concentrations necessary for such work it is not dangerous to humans or livestock.

Only one gallon of commercial toxaphene is necessary to treat 14,377,000 gallons of water. Gebhardt concludes that periodic treatment of large bodies of water with rotenone poses a tremendous investment in time and money whereas toxaphene affords an economical method of "farming" Idaho waters.

Veterans' News

VETERANS SHOULD REVIEW GI INSURANCE HOLDINGS

More than 128 thousand veterans in the Pacific Northwest should give careful study to their GI insurance holdings, the Veterans Administration suggested this week.

These veterans still hold GI term insurance, VA said, a type of insurance that plays a definite role for a young growing family but may become prohibitively expensive for the veteran near retirement age.

This is one of the biggest problems now facing the VA, the agency pointed out, using as an example a recent letter from a World War I veteran to emphasize the importance of the situation.

"Feel free to use my present plight to warn other term insurance holders," the veteran wrote. "I find myself nearing 70, unable to continue my term insurance payments at greatly increased rate and unable to obtain new insurance coverage. If I die, my wife has nothing; yet over the years we have invested more than $8,000 in this form of insurance."

Mounting costs can become prohibitive as the years go by, VA said. For instance, a term G. I. insurance policy that carries an annual premium of $900 at age 35, jumps to an annual premium of $470 a thousand by age 65, and to $73.10 a thousand at age 70.

VA emphasized that it is not trying to tell individual veterans how to handle their insurance programs. The individual program depends on the circumstances of each veteran's financial situation, and his total insurance plans and program. Each policyholder should review his G. I. insurance holdings periodically to be sure they meet his current and long range needs.

The number of GI term insurance policies in force in Washington state are 68,071; in Oregon, 41,053; Montana, 13,947; Idaho, 13,123; and in Alaska, 2,310.

Full information on GI insurance programs may be obtained from any VA office.

Last Call Made for Controlled Hunt Applications in Idaho

Midnight of July 22 is the last hour for postmarking eligible applications for controlled hunts this year on mountain goats, moose and antelope, the Idaho Fish and Game department announced this week.

Drawing date for the three big game species has been set for August 3 in Boise at 9 a. m. Additional details will be publicized later, according to Director Ross Leonard.

General hunting seasons for big-horn sheep have been set, with no drawing required to take rams with three-quarter horn curl or better in prescribed areas.

Persons who draw antelope permits this year will not be permitted to participate in the public drawings for pronghorn hunts during 1961.

Applicants for moose, goat and antelope permits must enclose certified check, cashier's check or money order to cover the required fees for such hunts. This will be returned promptly to persons who do not draw permits. Such fees are $35 for antelope, $15 for goat, and $4 for antelope.

Special electronic machines will quickly process winning applications, sorting them from those which did not draw, and returning hunt permits to lucky sportsmen and refunds to the remainder.

The United States Coast Guard has its 170th anniversary as an organized seagoing service on August 4th. It is August 4th, 1790, that Congress passed and George Washington signed a bill authorizing "ten boats" which Secretary of the Treasury, Alexander Hamilton had asked for to guard the coast against smugglers.

The champion golfer at the Naval Ordnance Laboratory, Silver Spring, Md., is not human. A hypervelocity gun in use drives a model of golf ball size at 10,000 ft. per second—almost 7,000 miles per hour.

Headquarters for the San Francisco trip will be the St. Francis hotel.

Mostly at night. They find cover during the daytime and this habit protects them.

Some salmon anglers "hunt" fish in the evening. They look for game at other seasons, feeling they must see a chinook before they ever wet a line. This is fine except the salmon see them first, become nervous, and harassed and will strike and take the bait.

On the South Fork of the Salmon river above the confluence of the East Fork, recent sedimentation partially has filled stream holes, thus making chinook salmon and steelhead trout even more vulnerable in the clear water. The single large hook provision and attendant reduction in size limit for multiple hook encourages anglers to fish in deep water, thus reducing the temptation to snag or foul-hook the fish. The department is encouraged that the new regulations are accomplishing the objective because steelhead fishermen earlier this year on the same drainage accepted the restrictions with good grace if not a rousing round of cheers.

It is noteworthy that adjoining salmon states have hook size regulations and, indeed, Oregon has an additional restriction requiring that all sinkers and weights be attached at least 18 inches above the hook, never below—the hook, measuring from the eye.

Again the purpose of such regulations is to help the fisherman help himself—by removing temptation to snag and obliging him to fish in the deeper waters.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Answer— Yes it will. 1959 was the first year you could pay on earnings up to $4800—and including these additional earnings would raise your benefit to $119 a month. How soon you can file for this increase depends on several things, such as when you first filed, or if you've had your payments refigured recently. Kitchens walls can a prison make, and when the walls start closing in. This dilemma is one reason portable electric dishwashers were invented—to free housewives with small kitchens from their "prisons" sooner and give them extra hours for their families and recreation.

Millions of houses built since World War II—and most of them have small "efficiency" kitchens. But there's nothing efficient about doing dishes by hand, especially when there's little or no counter space to stand on.

Today's portable dishwasher is made specifically for small kitchens. It can wash anything a built-in dishwasher can—from 8 to 12 place settings, pots and pans, delicate china, fancy glassware and crystal. When not in use, it can be rolled away and top used for valuable counter space. Some portables have a thick wood breadboard or chopping block for a top.

Important to people who live in an apartment or rented home is the fact that a portable dishwasher requires no installation. When the family moves, the dishwasher can be taken along.

Today's portable dishwasher is made specifically for small kitchens. It can wash anything a built-in dishwasher can—from 8 to 12 place settings, pots and pans, delicate china, fancy glassware and crystal. When not in use, it can be rolled away and top used for valuable counter space. Some portables have a thick wood breadboard or chopping block for a top.

Important to people who live in an apartment or rented home is the fact that a portable dishwasher requires no installation. When the family moves, the dishwasher can be taken along.

Kitchens walls can a prison make, and when the walls start closing in. This dilemma is one reason portable electric dishwashers were invented—to free housewives with small kitchens from their "prisons" sooner and give them extra hours for their families and recreation.

Millions of houses built since World War II—and most of them have small "efficiency" kitchens. But there's nothing efficient about doing dishes by hand, especially when there's little or no counter space to stand on.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCH SERVICE

How scientific prayer leads to a clearer understanding of Truth will be brought out at Christian Science services Sunday.

The Lesson-Sermon on "Truth" will include the following passages from the Bible (Luke 11:1,13): "If a son shall ask bread of any of you that is a father, will he give him a stone? or if he ask for a fish, will he for a fish give him a serpent? . . . If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children: how much more shall your Heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him?"

The importance of prayer is also emphasized in readings from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, including the following (11:27-31): "Prayer cannot change the unalterable Truth, nor can prayer alone give us an understanding of Truth; but prayer, coupled with a fervent habitual desire to know and do the will of God, will bring us into all Truth."

Water Use In Genesee Takes Huge Increase

Genesee residents used the greatest amount of water ever recorded this month, said City Clerk, C. D. Manfred. Approximately 8 million gallons of water were used this month, an increase of 5 million gallons over the previous month and almost 3 million more gallons than had been used to set a prior record. The figures were released by Manfred, who naturally, while figuring the monthly water bills for the city. This whopping increase reflects the heat wave and dry conditions that have settled over the area during the past thirty days. In order to keep the grass on the lawns in Genesee from drying up completely almost all residents have been forced to water lawns and sprinkle extensively and the gardens have also been the recipient of much of the huge increase in water use.

The new city sewage lagoon has had some water pumped into it to keep an adequate level of water for sanitary purposes but city officials doubted that much more than 100,000 gallons had been used for this purpose.

Manfred added that he had been noting a steady increase in general water use for the last several years. No doubt this reflects the added number of local people who are planting gardens and taking better care of their lawns.

Another point that the water usage may show is that modern electric appliances such as automatic dish washers and automatic washing machines are becoming more common and these items use considerable more water.

Pumps Working Hard
The city pumps, which bring the water from the walls up to the reservoir have been in constant use since the first of last month. They have been running night and day in an effort to keep the level of the reservoir adequate.

At the present time, city officials report the reservoirs are nearly full and there does not appear to be a water shortage.

Fire Call Sounded At Herrmann Ranch
A fire alarm turned in Saturday afternoon at approximately 3:00 p. m. sent members of the Genesee Fire Department out to the Herrmann ranch eight miles southeast of Genesee. The fire started in a pea field a couple of miles from the Herrmann home.

The fire apparently developed from a spark from a tractor. The engine of a combine that was working in the field and several acres of peas were lost before firemen and other volunteers could bring the blaze under control.

Luck was on the side of the fire fighters this time. A strong wind was blowing directly against the blaze and it was this fact that prevented the damage from being more severe. The wind whipped the fire down into Catholic Gulch where it was destroyed over a hundred acres of pasture land, but the fire fighters were able to contain the blaze so that it never got near the dry, ripe grain fields.

Wheat Harvest Is Picking Up

Farmers were beginning to deliver crops of wheat to the elevators this week, reported manager Forrest Durbin. With the weather still holding dry and warm, the harvest moved on in the Genesee area as fast as the condition of the grain would allow.

Naturally, all of the wheat brought in this season has been from the Rimrock Section and Durbin reported that the quality of the grain was proving to be better than was first thought it would be.

Peas are also being taken into the warehouses and they show good yield and quality, despite reports from other sections of north Idaho that are reporting poor pea crops.

Durbin said that the deliveries of wheat to the elevators are now starting to slow down.

Financial Statement for 1960 Community Day Is Completed

After almost two months of waiting for final bills to be presented, the Community Day Committees were able this week to arrive at an accurate accounting of the income and expenses for the 1960 Celebration which was held May 21. Merlin Parkins, finance committee chairman compiled the report.

The gross figures showed an income of $3,417.71 from the May 21 event. This was quite an increase over the previous years. While the income was high, so were the expenses. The gross expenses ran $2,451.59. This left a total net income for the 1960 Community Day of $966.32. This figure was about $300 better than 1959.

In order to give an accurate but not overly lengthy statement of the Community Day financial standing, here is a breakdown of the various activities reflecting the Net Income and Net Expenses.

Income — Total Net
Concessions $ 209.73
Breakfast 205.90
Lunch and Dinner 281.06
Ticket committee 484.50
Dance 293.00

TOTAL NET INCOME.....$1,474.31
Expenses — Total Net
Games - Contests..... $ 171.00
Admission Committee..... 33.82
Barbecue Committee..... 148.25
Advertising 53.18
Parade 86.34
Miscellaneous 15.39

TOTAL NET EXPENSES.....$ 607.99
NET INCOME 1960 COMMUNITY DAYS..... $ 966.32

There were two major outstanding bills still held over from 1959 Community Days. These were a $234.34 to General Repair Shop for placing the light poles at the ball park and a $34.00 balance due on the poles with Carney & Co. of Spokane for the poles that were purchased. These two bills were paid out of the 1960 profits.

In addition, the bank account showed that there was $290.12 remaining in the Community Day account at the bank from the two previous celebrations.

Account Now $683.39
When the final tally was taken out, the present bank account now totals $683.39. All of the major bills are in and paid, all that remains outstanding in the way of accounts due, is a couple of small bills of less than $10.

Status of the Lights
With the poles in place and paid for, the committees are now planning to go ahead with the purchase of the lighting fixtures that will complete the project. Rough estimates of the cost now stand at between $1800 and $2000. This is the estimated cost if the poles are to be used. The committee is shooting for a spring of 1961 completion date and would use the money from the next Community Day to finish paying for the poles.

The committee feels that this can be accomplished because the income is gradually increasing with each year. There are no outstanding bills from the previous year hanging over their heads.

Busy Clovers
JoAnn Kasper, Reporter
On Sunday, July 24, all the Busy Clover 4-H members, their leaders, parents, and friends had their annual club tour. The group gathered at the Kal Ball home at 10:30 a. m. to see John and Larry's beef and sheep projects. At Herrmann's we viewed and discussed Chris's garden. Then we proceeded to the Ed Hafurther home to see Larry's sheep and beef. Diane and Dawn Hafurther's beef were seen at the next stop. At the Matt Kasper's we saw Judy and JoAnn's dairy heifers, poultry and gardening.

At Weber's home we looked at Jackie and Linda's beef and sheep. Everyone has been busy on their projects and made a fine display. It was an interesting tour.

Following the tour, a meeting of the club was held at the Harold Weber home. It opened with Diane Hafurther leading the flag pledge. We dispensed with the minutes, Judy and JoAnn Kasper and Dawn and Diane Hafurther reported on their tour to 4-H summer camp at Chatolet. Larry Pell reported that the fair is to be the 15, 16, and 17 of September.

Demonstrations were as follows: Linda Weber: How to Make a Washing well. Jackie Weber: How to Make a Rock Candlerholder. Dawn Hafurther: Diffused Light. Diane Hafurther: Good Light, Good Sight. The meeting closed with Dawn Hafurther leading the 4-H pledge. The next meeting will be on August 8 at the Kal Pell home.

Everyone enjoyed our club picnic at the Weber home. The day ended with swimming at Moscow. We want to say thanks to our leaders and parents for a very happy day.

Right now the human brain with its thousand-billion neural elements serving as a model, scientists are working toward fabrication of 100,000,000,000 components per cubic inch.

How would you answer these public power promoters. Here they tell us Russia is getting ahead of the U.S.A. in power development, and they urge congress to appropriate more money for electric power.

Practically 97% of all farms in America now have electric power. Loans to the farmers from REA provide electricity starting back in 1935 has been eminently successful.

The Census Bureau reports that in 1940 there were 3,850,000 college graduates in the U.S. In 1960, there will be 8,000,000 and by 1970 there will be 15,000,000.

YOUR Social Security QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Question— I worked under social security for over 15 years, but I haven't worked for the past two—and probably won't again.

Answer— The only time that one may "freeze" a social security record is if the person should have to stop working because of a severe disability.

Chemical Treatment Can Provide Better Fishing With the recent announcement that the Idaho Fish and Game department is continuing studies regarding the feasibility of rough fish eradication this year at 19 lakes, streams and reservoirs around the state, numerous questions have been raised.

Director Ross Leonard answers some of them as follows, adding that a question-and-answer leaflet covering in many details about the treatment and rehabilitation of fishing waters is available from the department on request.

1. The chemicals used are not harmful to humans or domestic animals but, in proper solution or density will kill all species of fish.

2. Since the chemical is not harmful to humans or domestic animals but, in proper solution or density will kill all species of fish.

3. The department determines what waters to treat on the basis of over population of rough fish such as suckers, carp, mudminnows and other species which compete for space and food with game fishes.

4. The length of time required for nature to neutralize treated waters varies with the amount of fresh water flowing into the area, the temperature to some degree, and even the action of wind and waves.

5. The type of chemical used makes some difference in the time element to set length of season and bag limits for game birds until August in order to allow field men sufficient time to collect basic data on this year's game bird production.

6. Most small or medium-sized bodies of water that required treatment already have been treated in Idaho. Some of the larger ones have been delayed until funds are available and water conditions are right.

Speed Law Request Is Public Desire

Respect for speed laws is a desire and not an objection of a majority of the motorists who have been driving into court for exceeding a 10-mile-an-hour excess in speed. They want you to get on the open highway posted for 60 miles an hour maximum and many of us take that extra 10 miles an hour excess.

The driver's logic made sense in his suggestion that Idaho follow other states in increasing speed limits in covering stop signs, signal lights then "let the driving public know you mean business."

One of the most common criticisms, expressed without rancor, is that the so-called "tolerance" in speed limits in particular areas has a tendency to instill some distrust of the intent of the law.

"Tolerance" is described as "that 5 or 10 miles an hour over the posted speed limit with which you can drive in safety."

One motorist, who has demerit points on his license for speeding, made the following observation: "I would like to see speed limits posted somewhat as an ultimatum. If an area is posted for 35 miles an hour no one should be allowed to do a good job of meeting the third requirement, that of protecting our existing forests."

The Department has about thirty foresters and they are concentrating on keeping recently cut lands productive, the second requirement.

But in the field of planting trees, Idaho has been lagging behind and the program is under-financed. According to Forestry Department surveys there are 45,000 acres of State owned land demanded or needing planting now. At the present rate of planting the job would take, not a century, but about 1900 years.

The Forest Service has made some dramatic break throughs in the science of tree planting. It can now be done with a hope of real result.

Obviously the present effort is not worthy of our people, our needs, our desire, or our pride. Besides, the loss to the State on these lazy non-producing acres is at least $150,000 every year. We estimate that forest lands produce about $3-5 per acre per year in stumpage values alone.

The Forestry Department is proposing a program for reforesting these idle acres in 20 years and I support the objective wholeheartedly. Anything less will mean that Idaho will not be fully prepared for the 2000 and the needs of the generations yet unborn.

OPINIONS VARY ON TREATMENT OF TRAFFIC VIOLATORS

"Lock 'em up, throw away the key, give 'em stiffer fines, confiscate their cars."

These are samples of the spontaneous outbursts sometimes heard about violating drivers when conversations turn to traffic deaths which have now reached a higher point than they were a year ago.

While the opinions are extreme and unreasonable, they are frequently listed among the traffic fatalities. If they are not victims of their own bad driving habits, all branches of law enforcement attempt to fulfill their obligations which extend only to investigations, gathering of evidence and issuance of citations. From there on out, the matter is in the hands of the courts.

Opinions of law enforcement personnel, traffic safety officials and thousands of interested private groups and individuals are somewhat the same in that better public understanding of the reasons for traffic control laws is needed to reduce accidents. There should be full knowledge that violations lead to accidents and there must be respect for the laws' purpose. Each driver should realize the consequences of failure to obey traffic laws, and that injury and property loss rather than fines that will be fined or confined.

New Law Extends G. I. Loan Program

World War II veterans have two more years in which to obtain Veterans administration-guaranteed home, farm and business loans as the result of a bill signed into law July 14, 1960 by the President.

Under this same law, both World War II and Korean Conflict veterans can continue to apply for direct loans from the Federal government if they live in designated rural areas where GI loans are not obtainable from the local lending institutions.

The new law authorizes Treasury Department advances of $150 million in each of the next two years of this direct loan extension program.

New expiration date for the guaranteed loan program for World War II veterans and for the direct loan program for both World War II and Korean veterans is July 25, 1962. The prior deadline for both programs was July 25, 1960.

Since it was started in June, 1944, the GI loan program has guaranteed more than five million loans to World War II veterans, totaling approximately $41 billion and $2,775,000 Korea veterans, amounting to nearly $9 billion.

Since direct loans were first authorized in July 1950, the VA has made 165,000 direct loans totaling $1.3 billion in rural areas and small towns where veterans could not secure loans from local lending facilities.

While both World War II and Korea veterans may now apply for direct loans through July 25, 1962, Korea veterans may continue to seek VA-guaranteed loans through Jan. 31, 1965, through previous legislation.

The GI loan interest rate of 5 1/2 per cent remains unchanged by the new law.

The new law will require that earnest money deposits veterans make be placed in trust accounts so that they will be safeguarded in case the builder becomes insolvent.

Another provision will allow the VA to guarantee a loan so long as the application is received prior to the new terminal date. Formerly, the law provided VA had one year in which to issue its evidence of guaranty. This amendment will allow the guaranty of loans submitted before

Several times this writer has heard remarks wondering how the Genesee Fire Department finances the fare-well parties, the Firemen's Ball and New Year's parties that they give each year. One person thought they tax money for this. It just isn't so. Members of the department receive a small amount for each fire drill they attend and also for each fire call they answer. The drill money is never taken by the firemen. They keep it in a special fund and this is used to pay the costs of the firemen's special events. It also pays for flowers sent to firemen and their families when they are sick or in the hospital.

Downpour Monday Ends Long Drought; Eases Fire Threat

Very early Monday morning, thick, grey clouds that had gathered over the Inland Empire during the night, opened up and spilled their precious contents of rain on the under-dry earth. In the next eight hours over one inch of rain fell and ended a 45-day drought in the Genesee area. While the moisture halted harvesting operations, the complaint was heard from local farmers who viewed the rain as a blessing that would ease the serious fire threat.

Latah Blood Drive Will Be Aug. 9

The Latah County Red Cross Blood Bank will hold their next blood drive on Monday, August 9, at 12:00 noon to 6:00 p. m. in the Moscow Grange Hall. Everyone who wishes to donate blood for this worthy cause is sincerely requested to do so. The need for blood is always urgent and during this time of year, when many workers are too busy to come into Moscow and give blood, the Red Cross is especially busy.

Grass Fire Burns On Central Grade

Grass, under dry again in spite of Monday's heavy rainstorm, was burned on about 120 acres of rangeland on Central Grade Tuesday afternoon. The blaze began on the west side of Central Grade Department, two miles north of Highway 95 and on land owned by the McCann Land and Cattle Co. When the fire first began, apparently from a passing vehicle, volunteers from Lewiston attempted to control the blaze, but they were unable to make progress and at 3:00 p. m. a call for help was issued to Genesee's Fire Department. Two trucks were dispatched and, with the help of numerous youthful volunteers, had the fire controlled by 4:30 p. m. One of the trucks was sent to the top of the hill to check the fire in case it burned up the grade and into the grain fields on top of the hill. The other truck moved down the hill, spreading water on the grass. The grass was amazingly dry for having absorbed the amount of rain from the previous day, but the pasture was very dry and the fire swept quickly across the ground.

Pressure Canner Is Still Best

University of Idaho, The pressure food canner is still the "iron guard" against food poisoning in canned foods. It is not only the most effective in the home or by the open-kettle method as well as just likely to furnish botulism poisoning to the family of today as they were in the past," says Mrs. Barbara Branthooper, extension nutritionist for the University of Idaho. "The pressure canner in good working order and used according to directions will reduce the chances of such poisoning almost to zero."

Fish Ladder To Help Chinook Salmon Over Dagger Falls

Idaho Fish and Game Department Research biologists and management specialists of the Idaho Fish and Game department, among others, have studied and debated for many years the mystery of how the Pacific salmon, growing to adult size in the ocean, find their way for thousands of miles through the sea, into major rivers, and to the identical gravel beds of tiny tributaries in which they were spawned three, four and five years previously.

It is a miracle of nature more amazing than the migrations of birds. It is the key factor in the commercial harvest of the most valuable food fish and their value to anglers in the Gem state and elsewhere.

There is evidence that salmon can follow faint "trails" made by dilute chemical traces in water currents. By this use of smell and taste, some authorities say, a chinook conditioned in its immature months to the waters of a creek or river may be able to backtrack several years later to the place of its nativity.

Some of Idaho's best spawning streams are Bear Valley, Elk and Marsh creeks in part of the drainage of the Middle Fork of the Salmon river. In these tributaries the chinook begin appearing in June, and the bulk of the run has moved into them by mid-July. Here they seek out the headwaters, distribute themselves in deep holes and under cut banks where they remain until they spawn the following spring.

It seems to be an inescapable law of nature that when salmon are delayed too long on their upstream migration, their time runs out and they die without fulfilling their mission of procreation.

Eons before the coming of the white man, with his pollution, irrigation canals, destruction of spawning grounds and habitat, sport and commercial fishing, and dams, chinook on this segment of drainage of the Middle Fork of the Salmon river faced a hazard other than the usual ones of predation and disease.

Dagger is actually a series of two waterfalls. One is a vertical drop over which no fish can jump. Here a barrier dam was built recently which broke the falls into two sections divided by a deep pool, and some salmon ascend without too much difficulty. The other consists of two relatively short falls over which some fish have been able to negotiate.

The department's fishway now under construction at a contract bid of $84,765 is a vertical slot design on the south bank of the river. Dimensions are eight feet wide, with pools ten feet long and a lift of about 15 feet. There will be two entrances on the downstream side of the ladder, and one exit at the upper end of the falls. No provisions are needed for passage of the small ocean-going fry.

YOUNGSTERS IN DOG WORLD ACTIVITIES

By Bob Bartos. Manager, Friskies Research Kennels. More and more youngsters are engaging in dog world activities. In some 700 dog shows held annually across the country...

Youngsters are attending dog obedience courses in their communities and then entering their dogs in obedience competition, vying with their elders, and winning.

Others are assisting top professional handlers in the grooming and general care of their dogs on to veterinary colleges.

Then there is an ever growing interest among youngsters in field trial activities and this is being encouraged by adult field trial enthusiasts.

A new enterprise, sponsored by 4-H clubs, which is proving highly successful, is a guide dog project. 4-H club members are given potential guide dog puppies to rear.

Further encouragement in dog world activities is given by the Boy and Girl Scout merit badges; by humane agencies; by the major dog food companies.

Feeding tip: Overfeed rather than underfeed with the puppy. To wean him, give him a soupy mixture of a top quality dog meal such as commercial fishing and dog food. Add a little less water and let it soak longer each day until the puppy is weaned and eating the regular ration.

NP RAILROAD TO INTEGRATE WITH GREAT NORTHERN AND CB AND Q RAILROADS. A plan to unify and operate as a single integrated system the Great Northern, Northern Pacific, Chicago, Burlington and Quincy and the Spokane, Portland and Seattle railway companies has been approved by directors of the two northern lines.

Southern and the Fort Worth and Denver railways these lines are not involved in the plan. A joint statement by the president and the directors of the two companies...

Exchange of stock ownership as between the Northern Pacific and Great Northern would be on the basis of share for share, with Great Northern stock owners receiving, in addition, one-half share of 5 1/2 percent, non-voting, preferred stock of $10 par value, for each share held.

The new company's management would be shared equally by Mr. Macfarlane as chairman of the board, and Mr. Budd as president. Mr. Murphy becomes vice chairman of the board.

Income tax aspects of the proposed preferred stock require approval by the Internal Revenue Service, and application for filing will be progressed immediately.

An independent study completed in 1957 by Wyer, Dick and Co., New Jersey railway consultant firm, showed the proposed unification would produce eventual operating savings of about $40 million a year, before taxes.

The Weyer organization's exhaustive study conclusively indicates the unified operation would result in a railway system which would be more efficient, and provide even better services to the vast region to be served.

The railways included in the proposal operate nearly 25,000 miles of line in 17 states and the Canadian provinces of Manitoba and British Columbia. Although the Burlington system includes the Colorado and Take this test... HOW DO YOU RATE ELECTRICALLY? My guess at average monthly cost.

- APPLIANCE Bed Covering Clock Coffee Maker Dishwasher Dryer Disposer Fan (kitchen) Freezer Fryer Heat Lamp Heater Iron Ironer Lamp Mixer Radio Range Refrigerator Roaster Television Toaster Vacuum Washer

With electricity doing so much, yet costing so little, can you think of any better bargain than your Washington Water Power Company's?

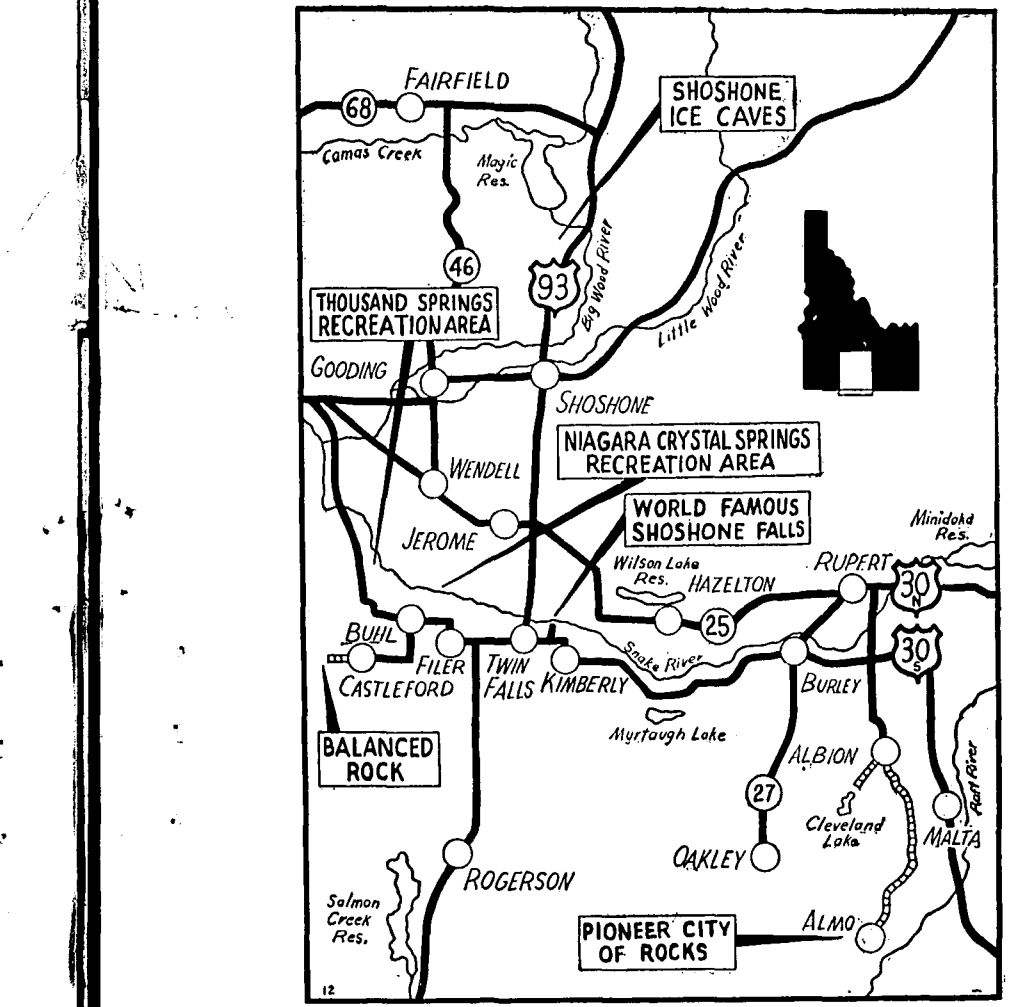

ANSWER: Average operating cost per month: Bed covering 25¢, clock 1¢, coffeemaker 9¢, dishwasher 23¢, dryer 70¢, disposer 2¢, fan (kitchen) 5¢, freezer 72¢, fryer 8¢, heat lamp 4¢, heater 58¢, iron 12¢, ironer 17¢, lamp 12¢, mixer 1¢, radio 12¢, range $1.20, refrigerator 38¢, roaster 19¢, television 40¢, toaster 8¢, vacuum 11¢, washer 5¢.

Further improve the physical plant we have planned. The presidents anticipate that integration of the four lines would be a gradual procedure, requiring at least 5 years. Details of the operating plan will be presented in the application to the ICS.

It is expected that unification would not substantially affect present employees on the railways involved. In that the plan contemplates gradual integration of properties over a period of years, management believes that natural turnover and retirements would make displacement of employees negligible. It was emphasized that Federal statutes and labor agreements protect employees adversely affected by consolidations.

Snake River provides much outdoor recreation in Idaho. People in south central Idaho look to the Snake River for outdoor recreation and the water that irrigates thousands of acres of farmland.

Beyond Albion is the Pioneer City of Rocks, a weirdly eroded area that was traveled through by California-bound pioneers from the early 1840's to the early 1870's.

There's a place along the Snake River's north bank near Buhl in south central Idaho where water gushes out of the Canyon wall. It's more than likely that this is the same place that disappears into the lava plain 150 miles to the northeast where three streams sink into the ground.

Whatever the source of the water, the streams and waterfalls cascading down the canyon to the river provide an ideal spot for a park and water recreation center. Here is the Niagara-Crystal Springs outdoor area, set up by surrounding communities as a permanent place for the public to enjoy itself.

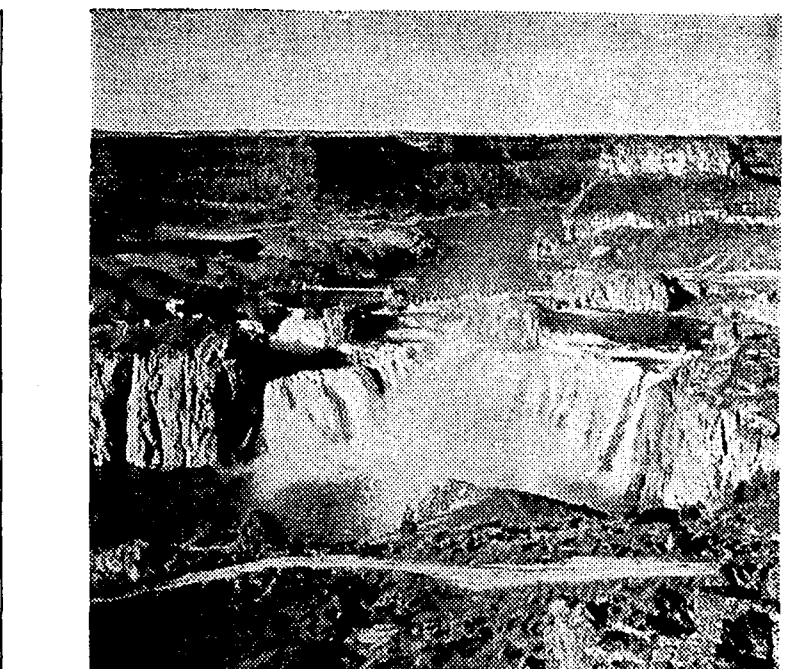

As a matter of fact, the Snake River in this part of the state is dotted with places to go for outdoor and water recreation. The Thousand Springs area, for example, is across the river and downstream for Niagara Springs.

The river also offers some dramatic and striking scenery. At Shoshone Falls, for instance, near the community of Twin Falls, the Snake takes a sheer 212-foot drop over the basaltic horseshoe rim. During the summer, when the water is high, the falls, the falls stand nearly dry. This is quite a sight in itself, the great curve of the falls stands barren and imposing.

Upstream from Shoshone Falls are the Twin Falls. Smaller cascades dot the river for instance, in the area is the balanced rock west of Castleford. To reach the rock drive to Castleford from Buhl, located on U. S. Highway 30, and ask directions.

Near Buhl is the famous Snake River Trout Farm, the world's largest commercial trout hatchery. Assembly line methods are used to prepare trout for shipment to hotels, resorts and restaurants through the United States. Visitors are welcome to view all the work required to get the fish to dinner plates. The trout must be kept well fed and healthy before they are cleaned, quick frozen and sent on their way.

To the east are Burley and Rupert, the chief communities in one of south central Idaho's largest agricultural developments. Turn south from Burley on State Highway 27 for Oakley and the Pioneer City of Rocks. The city of Rocks can also be reached by driving south on State Highway 77 from Declo by way of Albion.

Shoshone Falls, with a sheer drop of 212 feet, higher than Niagara's thunders in the Snake River near the community of Twin Falls in southern Idaho. Even when much of the Snake's flow is diverted upstream for irrigation, the nearly dry face of the basaltic horseshoe rim is a spectacular sight.

WATER SAFETY IS A GROWING CONCERN

The "hot-rudder" is a growing menace of water recreation, Dan Warren, state leader of 4-H clubs, said this week in outlining an accident prevention program for boys and girls.

Safe and courteous use of motor boats is essential if the boom in boating is not to develop even greater hazards, Warren said. He noted that thousands of Idaho people operate boats on scores of lakes and streams without knowing or observing the code of careful driving.

W. E. Adams of Eagle, chairman of the farm safety committee, said his organization will work with 4-H clubs to teach safe operation and relieve a situation that has become alarming.

Quoting an article in the magazine, Traffic Safety, Warren said that last year 37 million Americans used boats for fun. One person in 25 is now a boat owner.

"Ten-age water cowboys, say the dock officials, police officials, and coast guard officers, are the cause of most of the trouble. The wash created by boat squirreling can swamp other boats and spill their occupants into the water.

Ever think how closely our high cost of living is tied to the high cost of employment benefits?

Do you remember the days when upon a time, the cost of employing a person was just the salary he was paid for his services?

From pressuring employers for more benefits? No! Why? Because to offer union bosses stay in power only as long as they put on a show for their workers.

It will not centralize authority. It will not create a "dictatorship" as the Attorney General has so loudly proclaimed.

It could not possibly be of consequence to me personally because by that time I shall be long gone from the Governorship.

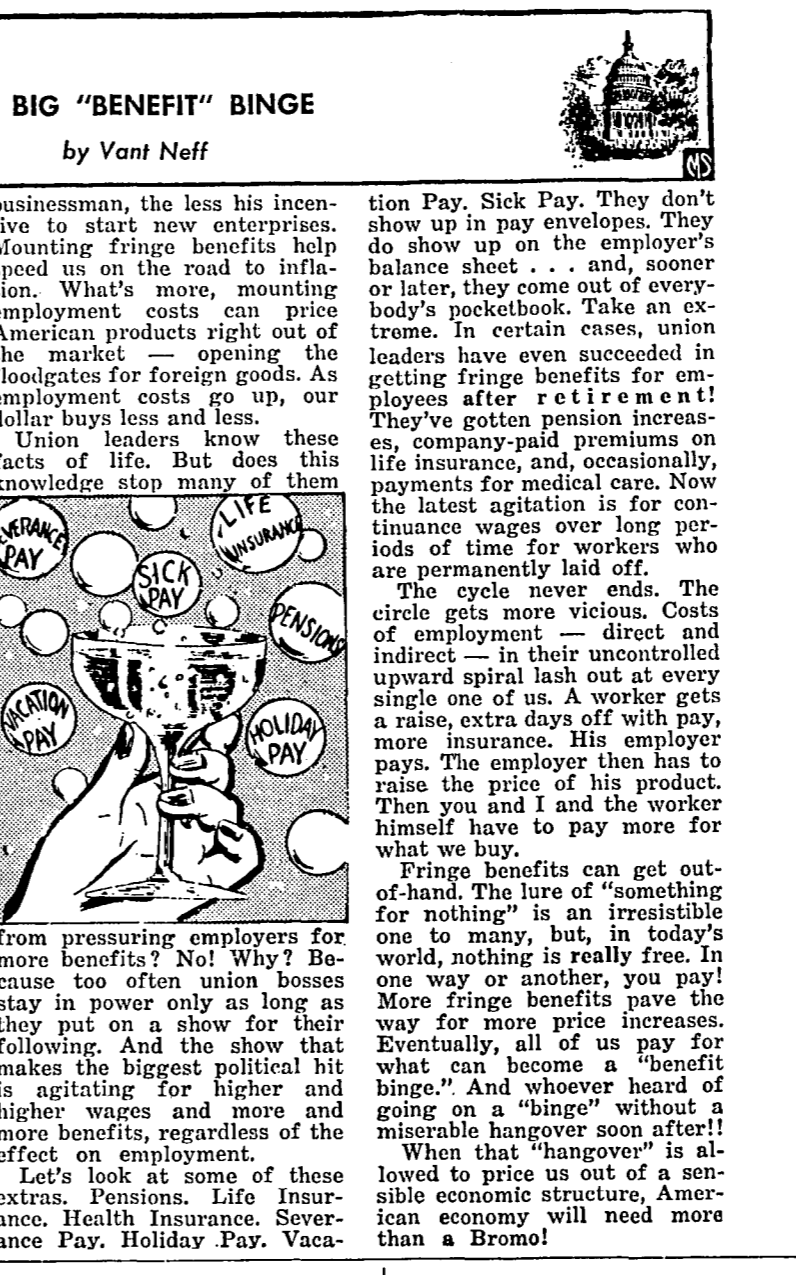

Another problem which must be met and mastered in 1961 is the task of organizing a trained professional management for our natural resources.

There are important issues needing decision in the session that begins January 2, 1961, and they are issues that will not wait.

For that reason, I have expressed the personal hope that our local campaign this year can take the form of a wide-ranging and thoughtful discussion of some of the problems which Idaho should meet and master at home.

This week we are beginning a series of meetings around the State with legislative leaders and candidates designed to provide discussion of these issues and plans for an orderly presentation of these issues in the legislative session.

One issue which I will urge the Legislature to consider is government reorganization. The time has come for streamlining our elected cabinet.

Fatality "Tie" Missed July 25

Idaho's 100th fatal traffic accident July 25 which brought the year's death toll to 122 and prevented a "tie" with July 26, 1959 when the record showed 121 fatalities, was the 50th one-car fatal for the year. On the same date last year there had been 117 fatal wrecks, but only 36 of them were one-car crashes.

The number of one-car fatalities early this year started showing an increase over the number tabulated in 1959 and has continued in the abnormally high ratios through the latter part of July. This type of accident has been responsible for 56 deaths, including 35 drivers of the vehicles. In six of the one-car fatalities two people were killed in each, a driver and a passenger died in four of them and two passengers each were killed in two of them.

Thirty-two of this type of wreck took place on highways, 13 were on county roads, three were on forest service roads and two were within municipalities through which highways are routed.

Speed continued to rate as the greatest single factor among indicated violations which appeared in 88 per cent of the crashes. Investigating officers reported that 30 per cent of the drivers had been drinking while ert Pollock of Endicott. A most pleasant two days was enjoyed by the group. The Wieber family are spending this week with Mrs. Herman and Glenn.

Richard, 6-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Chester "Green," is recovering satisfactorily from leg and neck injuries received Saturday morning at his home 6 miles east of Genesee, when his bicycle and a passing grain truck were involved in an accident. The little fellow received first aid at the local medical office.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Trautman visited with their daughter, Mrs. Vermita Riley and family in Kellogg Sunday. Mary Riley, who has been visiting with her grandparents returned home Saturday morning. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wieber accompanied the Trautmans home for a visit. On Saturday, Mrs. Trautman and Mary called on Mrs. Geo. Gesse in Julietta.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Fluke and children of Glde, Oregon spent the weekend at the Francis Ure home. Mr. Fluke is superintendent of schools in the Glde area.

Art Hansman, of Moscow visited last week at the home of his daughter and family, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Griesser and Elaine.

Mrs. Ella Herman and Glenn spent the weekend at Hebrun State Park. They were joined by Mr. and Mrs. Iven Evettes and family, Colfax; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wieber, Debbie and Robin, Spokane, and Rob-Dobie and Robin, Spokane, and returned home Monday.

Christian Science Church Service August 7, 1960

Mankind's opportunity to awaken to God-given freedom will be emphasized at all Christian Science churches next Sunday.

The account of Acts (Ch. 16) of the imprisonment and deliverance of Paul and Silas will be related in the Scriptural reading.

Selections from Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy will include (227-14), "Discerning the rights of man, we cannot fail to foresee the doom of all oppression. Slavery is not the legitimate state of man. God made man free. Paul said, 'I was free born.' All men should be free, 'Where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty.' Love and Truth make free, but evil and error lead into slavery."

The Lesson-Sermon on Spirit continues the current series which bring out the nature, essence, and wholeness of God.

Improper turning, driving on the wrong side of the road and disregarding warning signs appeared on a lesser number of the reports. In only one of the one-car accidents was there an indication of no improper action on the part of the driver.

H. Lorang Writes From Germany

Wiesbaden, Germany August 3, 1960

Hi Everybody:

It is a month ago that I set foot on European soil and am slowly becoming indoctrinated in the various continental habits and customs of the German people in their quest for a way of life.

But, let me regress to the day of my departure from the States. Dr. John Lorang took me from Tekoa to the airport in Spokane where I boarded a Northwest Airlines plane for New York at 8:05 a. m. on June 22nd.

The entire flight was in a clear sky and the landscape and its myriad patterns and colors was indeed a treat—from the great mountains, the massive plains, the cities and the endless checkerboard patterns of prosperous farmingsteads.

After landing in New York and while awaiting my scheduled take-off for Europe I was a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Connor, the parents of my son, who was with me that night, and visited with Mr. and Mrs. John Provone, the sister and brother-in-law of Jim's wife the next day, and after dinner at the Payne home in Brooklyn, the two families saw me off at Idlewild where I boarded a T. W. A. superjet at 8:00 p. m. for the trans-Atlantic flight.

Even if I had had a time flight nothing below would have been visible from the height at which we were flying, clouds or no clouds.

The voice over the intercom stated that we were at a height of 32000 feet and cruising at 500 M. P. H. and it was so peaceful, and quiet up there in the "wild blue yonder" that it was almost beyond belief.

I was more than pleased with my seat assignment and had a wonderful time all the way over the "big dipper."

There was a family named Nevin from Napa, California who had five seats in this row and it required but a short introduction to make his friends, from the older people to their high school and college bred boy and girls, and, needless to say, sleep never entered our minds for we found so many things to talk about, talk about, especially and of course quite "incidentally," when I drifted to the subjects of stamp and coin collection since Mr. Nevin was an avid numismatist in her own right and she dabbled in stamps, too.

As the day broke we could see between patches of clouds to the ocean which didn't look like the huge waves that churned my inside years ago on this same little old pond, and it was a treat to see the sunrise which came six hours earlier than if we had stayed in New York. The sky was clear and at 32000 feet above sea level we probably witnessed the longest day that anyone could wish for—counting the time we lost—since it was near the longest day in the year, too.

All in all, it was a rewarding experience and a real luxury reclining in these comfy chairs with extra pillows while refreshments were being served by the stewardesses along with a double round of champagne. And cocktails were available to at a reasonable rate.

Now that the ride was beginning to get bumpy, it was evident that we were getting near our destination, and shortly the plane set down in the airport at London where I lost my new friends and I took a bus to the terminal for a check-in to visit the native "Limes" and to post a card to a friend on the Isle of Wight.

In about an hour the plane was airborne again for Frankfurt, my destination, and it wasn't long before I was actually there and was met at the depot by Captain and Mrs. (Joan) Sturgill and Bobbie and Ramon Sturgill and R. N. Mae Lorang, who is employed at the United State Air-force hospital in Wiesbaden and lives at the Amelia Earhart hotel there. The Sturgills live in housing at the Wiesbaden air-force base where the Captain is on duty.

I was overjoyed at seeing them all again and when we got to the apartment on the base which is about twenty miles from Frankfurt, we really settled down for a good old visit and tried to make up for times past while I looked forward to having a wonderful time after getting rested up a bit.

Besides driving south to Garnish the United States Recreation center for American Service Personnel, and to Oberammergau, to witness the Passion-Play we visited the infamous concentration camp and crematory at Dachau where millions were tortured and either shot up against a concrete wall so as to fall into trenches they themselves had dug in the great blood purge of World War II or reduced to ashes in immense ovens at the rate of 3000 in a 24-hour shift over untold months of time.

We have been for a cruise on the Rhine; to Heidelberg to sample their wonderful beer and to visit the famous castle; to Worms, and the historic cathedral which was built in about 1200 A. D. and many other places of interest just a few hours drive from here.

This weekend we are driving in the Sturgill Mercury station wagon

Fire Destroys Hermann Truck

A 1954 Ford Truck was destroyed by fire Tuesday morning at the Clinton Hermann ranch eight miles south east of Genesee. The truck was being used to haul grain and a spark from the vehicle caused the tinder-dry stubble to burst into flame. The truck was being driven by Mike Houston, of Orofino, who is working at the Hermann ranch.

The alarm was turned in between 10 and 10:30 and before members of the Genesee Fire Department and volunteer workers could get the blaze under control, the truck was destroyed and a relatively small amount of wheat was burned.

Fire at Davis Farm Wednesday afternoon, at approximately 4:00 p. m., fire broke out at the Lee Davis farm in Genesee Valley and burned several acres of stubble before it could be put out. The blaze was again caused by sparks from a combine.

Idaho Departments Study State Pollution Problems

By Jim Humbird
Idaho Fish and Game Department
Many Idaho sportsmen know in general what is going on in Washington in regard to the problems and progress of water pollution control—and that the U. S. Surgeon General, Dr. Leroy E. Burney, has called a national conference on the subject in the District of Columbia for next December.

Such things make headlines. Problems that are considered of primary local concern often do not. Thus many community undertakings and even some on a statewide level receive scant public attention. Among these are the cooperative studies now underway on pollution control by the Idaho departments of Health and Fish and Game.

While pollution has been called an "uniquely local blight", the two Idaho departments think it also has statewide affects, at least. They are tackling the problems jointly because the results are matters of public health as well as fish and wildlife conservation.

As the Surgeon General said, "The American way of life in the 20th century is poisoning the water we drink, the air we breathe and the food we eat."

And the House Appropriations subcommittee, now recessed, was told that whereas 2-million people were getting their drinking water from streams in 1940 and 24-million drinking sewage into them, today 100-million Americans get their water from the same streams and 120-million are dumping sewage into them.

This hardly is a matter of purely local concern except in the sense that it occurs at a specific spot where a community's raw sewage, industrial wastes, mine tailings, applied toxicants and the like are dumped into surface waters. However, it quickly spreads, becoming a state, interstate and regional problem.

Pollute the Flathad or any other tributary of the Clark Fork river in Montana, for example, and the problem soon becomes Idaho's Oregon's and Washington's as well as Montana's. This interstate problem was aggravated further until recently when such Idaho towns as Sandpoint and Priest River built sewage disposal plants. Other major Idaho rivers are polluted with sewage, silt from mining and road building, the slaughter-house and dairy wastes, effluents from cheese and fertilizer factories, chemical plants, beet pulp, herbicides and others.

Water pollution is related directly to public health just as it is to wildlife conservation. Neither aspect is just a local matter. From the health standpoint, bacteriological contamination of streams is the most serious. Overloading them with organic wastes increases the health hazard involved, because this supplies bacteria the nutrients they must have to live and reproduce.

Such contaminated water presents a definite health hazard to anyone who comes in contact with it. This may happen for instance, to persons fishing or swimming in the Snake river below the entrance of Rock creek near Twin Falls. Pets or livestock that come in contact with the water could transmit the micro-organisms to human beings.

Wastes discharged into the water interfere with the preference on a statewide basis the locations of natural and man-caused pollution affecting game fish habitat; (2) to plan tests as required to determine causes and effects of impaired water quality and how it can be prevented, and (3) to determine fish tolerances to varying amounts of solids and low oxygen contents in water.

As far as anyone knows, this is the only planet in the solar system whose atmosphere, soil and climate provide everything needed to sustain life. Here in Idaho, unlike all too many Americans elsewhere, most residents are only a few minutes away from good trout streams. Conservation, recreation and health interests—the general public—hope to keep it that way.

MAKING BETTER SALADS REQUIRES GOOD VEGETABLES

Treating salad vegetables with the greatest kindness is the first step to good salads, says Miss Barbara Brantthover, extension nutritionist for the University of Idaho.

Miss Brantthover points out that growers, buyers, handlers, truckers, and grocers do all they can to keep green salad vegetables in choice, fresh condition. When the homemaker takes them out of the grocery store or finds them delivered to her kitchen door, it is up to her to see that they stay in this same top condition until used. The greens lose quality rapidly

DO YOU KNOW

The communists have been gaining territory at the rate of 1,000 square miles a day since World War II, and none of it has been taken back yet. The communists believe that people exist to serve the government, to do as they are told. So when you hear fellow Americans argue against individual initiative, private property, and private enterprise, just remember they are carelessly contributing to an attitude that accepts communist rule.

* * * * *

Public power promoters, who advocate government control of electricity and certain other industries, argue that rates can be cheaper if electricity is sold at cost (without profit). They close their eyes to millions of people over the nation who depend upon profits for dividends and earnings which are put aside for taxes, expansion, etc. In other words, they oppose our American system of private enterprise, and argue for the socialist state.

At the beginning of 1948, there were about 200,000 television sets in use. At the end of 1957, there were 41,600,000 sets. At the same time, viewing hours increased from 1,000,000 per day to 250,000,000 per day. After while, will the nation just sit and stare? Heaven help us!

* * * * *

Since 1935, R.E.A. has used some $3.5 billion in loans to bring electricity to farms. Today, 96% of America has electric service. A good job well done!

The Federal government this year spends 119 million for agriculture research, where there are surpluses. Yet in education, where there is a shortage of teachers, our schools cannot lay hands on more than six millions for research. We wonder if more of us should give more thought and more help to education?

FARMING AROUND

By Mark Welsh

There are tons and tons of nitrogen in the air over every acre of land. Each flash of lightning releases some of this tightly bound nitrogen and it is absorbed by the rain and falls to earth. It is in this way that the world's soil is enriched by all the nitrogen that falls on mountains, forests, deserts, lakes and sea and makes them more productive but rarely does it reach land in crop land to be of much value to a farmer.

Fifty years ago Cyanamid started making nitrogen in this country from the air by controlled electrical flashes, puny compared to nature's lightning, and combined the newly formed nitrogen with chemicals that held it fast until needed months later. This nitrogen was used also as a basis for gun powder and helped keep this country free from the war by the use of nature's methods. We did, at least, in the making of nitrogen.

The future of the farmers of the South looks bright. Beef cattle are rapidly replacing cow

Harvey Harvest

U. of I. Moscow—Harvey Harvest, is climbing up alongside Smoky the Bear. He's a symbol of weed control in Idaho agriculture, just as Smoky is the national emblem of forest fire control.

Harvey Harvest is a cartoon figure with a baled hay body, pumpkin head, corn arms, and potato feet. Doran Peterson, Ada County extension agent for weed work, dreamed him up. Carl Hoobing, a Boise artist, gave him form. The name was the result of a contest at the 1959 Western Idaho district fair. For several months Harvey has been decorating printing tips on weed control in Boise Valley.

The Idaho Noxious Weed association announced this week Harvey Harvest has been adopted as the statewide symbol. Bob Higgins, U. of I. extension agronomist and association secretary said Harvey will be used widely.

Maine is often called the "sunrise portal" of the United States.

WANT TO SAVE $9.15 A MONTH?

If you'd turn off all lights, disconnect the T.V. and the water heater, cook over the fireplace, go back to the washboard, clothesline and dishpan, all you could save would be the few cents a day you pay for electric service.

Of course, your other costs would go up and life would become drudgery.

Did you ever think about how much you really get for the small amount you pay for Washington Water Power Service?

Boston, New York, Chicago and Philadelphia all have subway systems.

Moscow, Miss Sylvia Morken, Seattle, Mrs. Edwin Morken, Spokane, Mrs. E. A. Morken and Betsy were in Spokane. Mrs. Edwin Morken who had spent several days with the Morken families in Genesee, returned home Wednesday.

Dove Regulations Set For 1960 Season

Idaho's migratory dove season for 1960 has been set for September 1 through 15, with daily bag limits of ten and possession limits of 20 birds—all within the federal framework of regulations established by the Fish and Wildlife Service—it was announced this week.

Ross Leonard, director of the Idaho Fish and Game department, said that while some concern has been expressed in some quarters about the indicated annual harvest of mourning doves both on a nation-wide and state basis, such fears do not appear warranted.

"For the past several years," Leonard explained, "a nation-wide study of the dove has been coordinated by the bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife. Emphasis has been placed on the taking of an annual spring census, on a banding program and on the compilation of hunting season harvest information."

He added: 1. The mourning dove is the most widely distributed game bird in the United States. It is found nesting in all of the states except Alaska and Hawaii, and all 44 Idaho counties.

2. In respect to numbers taken, the mourning dove is second only to the pheasant in importance to Idaho hunters. The annual hunter questionnaire estimated 163,000 doves hunted in Idaho during the 1959 hunting season.

3. It is the subject of one of the largest coordinated studies on any game bird in the United States. Idaho participates in all phases of the study.

4. There is no evidence to show that hunting is having a detrimental effect upon mourning dove populations.

5. All agencies concerned with the management of mourning doves are vitally interested in this species and would not hesitate to enact restrictive measures on the hunting of the doves if such were deemed necessary to protect the populations.

FEDERAL CONTROL OF DRIVERS COMING

Idaho, along with the other 49 states, may eventually lose its responsibility of examining and licensing motor vehicle operators.

Several years of speculation among state administrators about the possibility of federal control came nearer to a reality shortly before Congress recessed. A bill has been introduced for a driver's license "clearing house" on what is termed a "voluntary basis" insofar as state licensing agencies are concerned.

An Idaho official commented: "An amendment from time to time could easily transfer all drivers examining and licensing directly to Washington, D. C."

Even though "clear" is expressed by officials handling all phases of driver licensing and traffic law enforcement within their own states, little has been accomplished in changing from 1939 to 1960 methods in testing drivers. Even many of those states which proclaim "high efficiency" in examining and licensing drivers are criticized for unsatisfactory driving records.

In at least two western states where all examining and licensing is handled by trained personnel, economy has overshadowed the public good in their systems of giving examinations for the first license, then re-issuing the driving permits upon payment of a fee as soon as the original is suspended or revoked.

Idaho, which can cast no stones at other states, actually has 44 different systems of issuing licenses," according to one traffic authority. Even though the statutes permit an extensive examining program, lack of funds has prevented any extensive improvements in the methods for at least 25 years. There is no actual record in Idaho of the number of licensed drivers and no breakdown on the age groups.

Once one applies for a drivers license and is given a road test, he is free to drive for the rest of his life simply by taking a simple, written examination every two years and doing out $2.00, providing his permit isn't suspended or revoked. If he comes from another state where he has been licensed, the road test is forgotten and a few simple questions are answered on a prepared sheet of paper.

In every state more and more accidents are being better investigated with the findings of three different types of drivers: Those unfit mentally or physically to operate a motor vehicle, those unfamiliar with traffic regulations and defiant in their attitudes toward learning, and those unfamiliar with regulations but willing to learn with proper guidance.

The public, as always, is about 3 years ahead of legislative and administrative officials in its demand that "something" be done about the high traffic death toll.

Regardless of whether they are democrats or republicans, so-called "others" or "nothers," they are beginning to have doubts about the issue of States Rights insofar as driver's license management is concerned.

Regardless of any individual's philosophy, he would not be human if he didn't cringe and look ahead to eventualities at a statement recently made in Congress.

"The States and local communities could accomplish many of the things that must be done if we are going to reduce the traffic toll . . . if we are going to get the job done, we cannot self-righteously hide behind the cloak of states rights, or reject steps which are going to cost money."

Leave plenty of distance between your car and the one up front. Accidents happen in that relatively small space between cars. No one should object to a back-seat driver if it is your conscience urging you to take it easy and be a good driver.

72-Year-Old Amazed To Learn He Is Eligible For Social Security Benefits Frank Johnson, part-time watchman for the Washington Water Power Co. hydro-electric plant located near Harpster, visited the Social Security representative in Grangeville, Idaho. He was amazed to learn that since he was over age 72, Social Security payments were payable to him and his wife.

Mr. Johnson was born in Kentucky on March 8, 1878. Prior to the Washington Water Power Company his work was not covered by the Social Security Act.

Mr. Johnson and his wife will be able to receive Social Security benefits even though he is employed.

For proof of age Mr. Johnson submitted a census record taken as of June 1, 1880, which showed him to be two years old at the time the census was taken. Mrs. Johnson submitted a delayed birth certificate which was completed in December 1943.

When asked the reason why he did not apply for Social Security benefits at an earlier date, Mr. Johnson indicated that he had seen an heard very little about Social Security since he lives in one of the more remote regions of Idaho.

Misdirected Training Hurts Industry

Shortages of qualified journeymen exist in many of the service and construction trades, not because there is no training being done, but because much of the training is wasted on those who do not intend to stay in that particular trade. As an example of this, many meat market managers use students during after school hours and vacations, rather than starting a meat-cutter apprentice. Consequently, many doctors, engineers, lawyers, engineers, lawyers and salesmen have had considerable experience during their school years in meat-cutting but the meat-cutting industry itself, has not benefited from this training. There is no doubt that the opportunity to work his way through school in a meat market has been of temporary help to the student, but at the same time, young fellows entering apprenticeship or bona fide apprenticeship as a meat-cutter are unable to obtain employment as an apprentice. Consequently at the present time, employers find it necessary to recruit and train, U. S. Department of Labor, recruiting to find qualified journeymen to man new meat markets.

No-Roughage Ration Experiment For Fattening Steers Now In Progress

A no-roughage ration experiment for fattening steers is now in progress at the University of Idaho's Childwell farm station. Operating with the university in this study is the recently organized Idaho Cattle Feeders association. The association has provided both the cattle and the rations. Purpose of the study, explains T. B. Keith, Animal Husbandman with the university, is to determine whether steers can be fattened on all concentrates without roughage and with barley as the principal ingredient. Steers fed on feed late in June and are being fed for approximately 100 days. "Since the ruminant has a rumen system that is believed to require roughage for most efficient use of feeds, it is not known whether a concentrate mixture of feeds or all concentrates can be utilized economically by the steer. Furthermore, if a concentrate mixture can be utilized by the fattening steer, what is the most economical combination of grains and other concentrates for optimum returns. These are among the top questions the cattle feeders hope to get answered in this experiment."

The experiment is designed to use concentrates that are produced in Idaho—chiefly barley, dried molasses beet pulp and corn. Sixty steers weighing between 850 and 700 pounds were divided into six groups of ten steers each for feeding. Six ration combinations are being studied. Steam rolled barley is the main ingredient in the ration. There are many unsolved problems on the use of a no-roughage ration for fattening steers. Some of these, Keith points out, are concerned with age and size of steer, length of feeding period and method of processing the barley. There are some vague indications that the barley must be steam rolled and that the steers should not be fed longer than 100 days. The following rations are being used in this study: The steers of Lot 1 are being fed 2 pounds of the concentrate mixture per 100 pounds live weight with all the corn silage and alfalfa hay they would consume. The steers of Lot 2 are being fed a ration of corn cob meal with dried molasses beet pulp. The steers of Lot 3 are being fed a steamed rolled barley ration. The steers of Lot 4 are receiving a steamed rolled barley ration with 15 per cent dried molasses beet pulp. The steers of Lots 5 and 6 received the same ration as those of Lot 4 with 30 and 60 per cent dried molasses beet pulp, respectively. All lots received diethylstilbestrol, vitamin A concentrate and a protein supplement. All lots of steers were fed a roughage mixture of corn silage and alfalfa during the first two weeks.

The words "social security," are so commonly used in our every day speech that scarcely a day goes by without us hearing them. Actually, 1960 is only the 26th anniversary of the program which was made into law by an Act of Congress on August 14, 1895.

Total life insurance owned in U. S. in 1960, was $34,000,000,000. Americans who have an investment in life insurance number 115,000,000. The point we are making is this: Life insurance companies invest part of their capital in private electric utilities, and depend upon utility earnings for their success. That should make private utility operation important to all of us. You let 30 to 60 gallons of water go down the drain each time you shower. You use 5 to 7 gallons each time you flush the toilet. The per capita consumption in 1960 is estimated at 150 gallons a day. We should be grateful for our good water.

Communism is gaining in the Near East where 70% of known petroleum reserves are located. They gain in the Malay Straits, which have 90% of raw rubber production. They are gaining in Africa, Japan and in another 6 years will have control of 60% of world population. Communism means absolute control by the government. Don't you think we should call a halt to government control of private business in this country?

TWENTY-TWO DEATHS ON IDAHO HIGHWAYS IN JULY There were 22 avoidable deaths on Idaho's highways during July. In analyzing the 19 fatal crashes, it was found that human error and lack of good judgment were the direct cause of the deaths of nine men, four women, five boys and four girls. Speed was a factor in 54 per cent of the fatal wrecks. Eleven of the fatal accidents which accounted for 14 deaths were on non-intersected sections of highways and roads, some of them on slight curves, and speed was a factor in 10 of them. Drivers of three vehicles which left the road without involving another vehicle, were among the fatalities and all of them had a blood alcohol content of more than .15 per cent, on which the charge of driving while under the influence of intoxicating liquor is based. Another driver was listed as "had been drinking" but he escaped death while the driver of the road with which he collided was killed. In addition to the fact that the driver had been drinking, he was exceeding the speed limit and was on the wrong side of the road.

In the other seven crashes of non-intersected sections of highways, which killed 10 people, speed was a factor in every one of them. One of the drivers was also listed as having been driving on the wrong side of the road, not having the right of way and passing on a hill. He, along with his passenger and another driver, died in the crash. Two passengers were killed in a two-car collision while one of the drivers was on the wrong side of the road, making a wide right turn and was listed as having committed reckless driving. Officers filed negligent homicide charges against this survivor.

Five collisions at intersections were responsible for five deaths. No speed was involved in any of them but the so-called "minor" violations became "ultra major" in that they were directly responsible for the fatal wrecks. Four of the drivers did not have the right of way and at the same time two of the four made improper turns to result in the death of four passengers. The fifth driver disregarded a stop sign and was killed in a collision with another car. Two pedestrians, both small children, were among the July fatalities. One of them attempted to cross a road and was hit by a speeding car. The other was on a bicycle and failed to observe an approaching car. The driver's view was obstructed, as the child rode his bike from a private driveway.

FEET OF CLAY Since first I hitched my chariot to a star To set a square example for mankind, I know I must have fallen short—by far. For in my self-analysis I find The fortitude that came to bless and burn, To lift my good intentions to the sky; Has somehow gone the way of no return. And left me here alone to wonder why. Give me - Dear God - the stars without roughage and with barley as the principal ingredient. Steers fed on feed late in June and are being fed for approximately 100 days. "Since the ruminant has a rumen system that is believed to require roughage for most efficient use of feeds, it is not known whether a concentrate mixture of feeds or all concentrates can be utilized economically by the steer. Furthermore, if a concentrate mixture can be utilized by the fattening steer, what is the most economical combination of grains and other concentrates for optimum returns. These are among the top questions the cattle feeders hope to get answered in this experiment."

U.S. Savings Bonds — Indestructible

Do you know? Maurice Stans, director of U. S. Bureau of Budget, who keeps count on $220 million a day Uncle Sam spends to run the government, says the government is living on a credit card. It spends what it does not have then borrows to pay its debts. Today, every citizen owes $1,625 which Uncle Sam spent for us. $5,000,000,000 has gone for public power projects, competing with private utilities. Is it really necessary for the government to play on the team as well as referee?

Report Shows Savings Bonds Sales Climb In Idaho

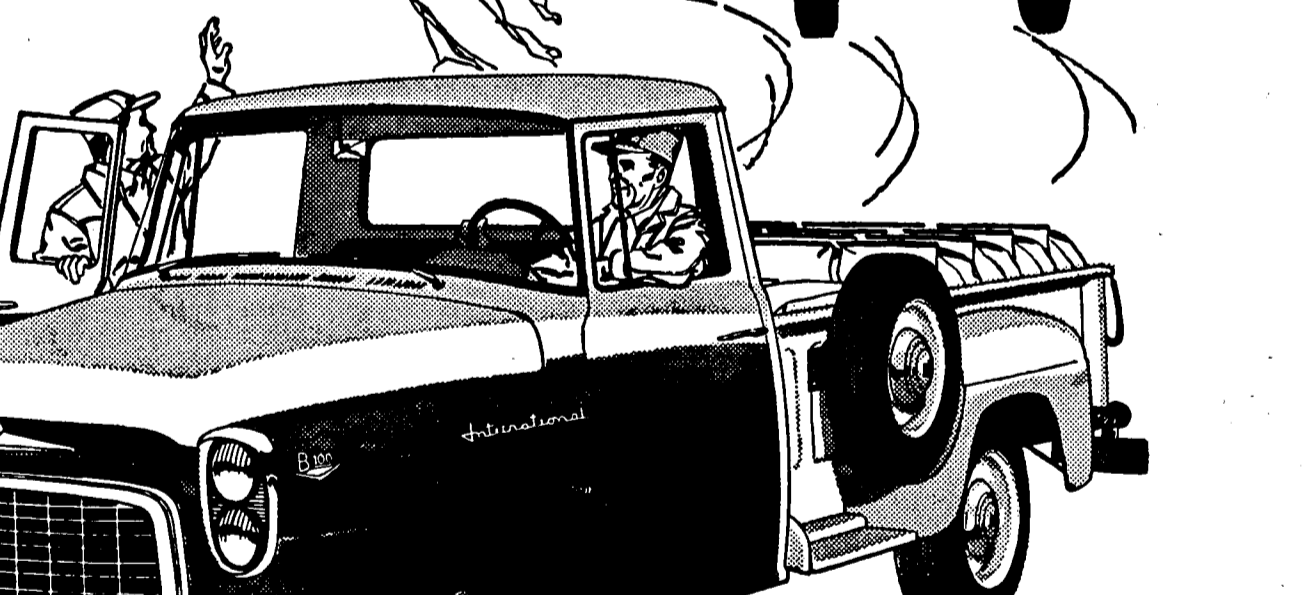

Idaho sales of United States Savings Bonds were $868,157 for July, up 30.4 per cent over July 1959. January through July sales totalled $5,303,313 and 11.8 per cent increase for the seven month period as compared with a year ago. County Chairman Ade Anderson released the figures this week and stated: "Of this amount, Latah county residents' share was $361,115 for the month and $207,308 for the first seven months. "Nothing can be more beneficial to the proper management of the national debt and to the maintenance of a sound economy than a tremendous backlog of liquid savings shared by every American in United States Savings Bonds. "The $42.7 billion outstanding in series B savings bonds is a good foundation for the debt to rest upon. To encourage more citizens to buy and hold Savings Bonds and to increase the proportion of the public debt, so held, is to strengthen our entire structure and our economy."

The Chairman emphasized further that the Savings Bonds program is to keep pace with an expanding population, a growing work force, and an increasing gross national income, millions more Americans should be enrolled in the payroll savings plan at work, or encouraged to purchase bonds regularly where they bank.

Keeping Idaho Fishermen Happy Is a Big Job

Shortly after Labor Day, the big trout-hauling units of the Idaho Fish and Game department will stop rolling for another seven months. But activities at the 14 state hatcheries will not let up. Even with the production and planting of nearly three-quarters of a million pounds of fish in the past year, there is no quiet season as the state's nimrods lay down rods and reels in favor of guns and scopes.

Instead of a slack work period, hatchery personnel must grade hold-over fish, sort them according to size, and feed them. Each trout is given about two and one-half percent of their body weight in food every day. This prevents cannibalism, disease and maintains growth at a fast clip. The golden autumn months also are used at the hatcheries for the construction of new fish screens, racks, and for the painting and repair of equipment. New eggs are received in December and January, the advent of a new cycle in the year-round job of keeping Idaho fishermen happy.

More than half a century ago, the first antelope legislation reached the books authorizing the Idaho Fish and Game department to build the first hatchery and stock public waters. The closing of the century has seen fish become big business, and hatcheries presently are located as follows: American Falls, Ashton, Clark Fork, Eagle, Gale, Hagerman, Haysport, Henry, Lake, Mackay, McCall, Mullan, Sandpoint, Twin Falls, and Warm River.

Hagerman is one of the largest, most modern hatcheries in the West. It has 17 main raceways, each 500 feet long. They vary from six to 15 feet in width. There are four larger ponds 500 feet long and 30 feet wide. All are located so that blow-type trucks can pass along one side to spread dry feed. The larger ponds are accessible from both sides. A modernization program at Hagerman now is nearing completion and is expected to nearly double its fish-raising facilities by increasing total raceway space from 49,000 to about 84,000 square feet. Its annual capacity is estimated to go between 200,000-250,000 pounds of fish, with a reserve production potential of 50,000 pounds to be used as needed. Production schedules at the hatcheries are geared to planting season demands. That includes the restocking of lakes and streams with chemical treatment, as well as supplementing "wild" fish populations with hatchery trout on waters getting the brunt of ever-increasing angler pressure. Magic reservoir and others will need restocking in the wake of the rehabilitation measures slated early this fall, just as Island Park reservoir and tributary streams in eastern Idaho required the planting of over three million trout in 1958-59. Some lakes, reservoirs and streams have been restored to high productivity through this means in recent years.

Fish allocation is based on basic requirements of different waters. Decisions must be made about the species to be stocked, the number, size and timing. Such considerations require constant referral back to a big volume called a catalogue of Idaho reservoir and tributary streams in book that is adjusted continually as new facts are available. The catalogue contains information about changes in fishing pressure around the state, stream alterations caused by fire, earthquake, logging, dredging, road building, or whatnot, and biological studies showing that changes in fish species or numbers is warranted. As a general rule, fry or fingerling are planted in lakes and reservoirs, while "catchables" are allocated to rivers and streams where the pressure is the greatest.

In hatchery parlance, "fry" are fish less than an inch long; "fingerling" range from one inch to six inches; and "catchables" are fish six inches or more. The catalogue compilation of planting records goes by inches, not by the designations of "fry," or "fingerling" or "catchables." Another way fish are measured at the state hatcheries is by weight. For example, three trout per pound average lengths of about 9 1/2 inches, while four to the pound are fish that measure about 8 1/2 inches. Planted catchable trout do not carry over well from one season to the next. A couple of reasons for this are that many are taken by anglers within days or weeks of the fish truck visit, while the remainder find many problems in competing with wild trout for food and space. Another angle well calculated to bring gray hair to fisheries management workers is the "fished out" stream or lake. Such waters sometimes are "shocked" with electrical devices to raise the fish population and determine the extent of truth in the contention. Tubful of unburnt, though temporarily paralyzed, piscatorial beauties are raised "for the fishing" in fish species or "catchables". All of which does not help the feelings of the anglers who were skunked. Keeping Idaho and non-resident anglers happy through proper rehabilitation and restocking, supplementation of existing native populations, control of undesirable species, creel censuses, fish life history and other studies is a big, but rewarding job. And when the work's all done early in the fall, it's time to brace for another year.

Reasons Explained For Controlled Big Game Hunts

Killing a moose legally in Idaho literally is a "once in a lifetime experience". The lucky trophy hunter thereafter is not eligible to apply for a controlled hunt permit on this lordly big game animal, the most prized member of the deer family. This year, applicants lucky enough to get one of the 1,205 antelope permits at the Boise public drawings held recently by the Fish and Game department may not apply to hunt the fleet pronghorn during 1961. The reasons in both cases are that controlled hunts on moose and antelope are essential game management tools. They provide a fair means of coping with "more demand than supply", distribute hunting pressure and insure that only a desired amount of game will be harvested.

Director Ross Leonard stresses that applications to hunt moose are received each year from hundreds of Idahoans as well as big game hunters from many parts of the United States. This year 463 persons applied for 73 moose permits, and fair play demands that they are not allocated on a "first come, first served" basis. Similarly, the antelope permits were awarded by chance to 3,807 applicants at the recent public drawings in Boise. The winners may not apply again next year. Leonard conceded that not enough applications were received to "fill out" two of the controlled moose hunts, and that a second drawing will be held August 15 to award three remaining permits.

In the same manner, 115 permits were available for controlled hunts on mountain goats, including ten archery permits, and there were 44 applications short in certain areas. Some of the areas of the unfilled permits are rugged and only the most skilled and best equipped parties can reach them. Leonard added that in cases where insufficient applications are received for a second public drawing, the remaining permits may be sold on a first come, first served basis. In that event, all correct and complete applications received prior to the original closing date of July 22 are automatically drawn. Incomplete or ineligible applications are not entered in the drawing. Bighorn sheep again are thrown open to general hunting in all areas for the second consecutive year because game management personnel concur that the rough terrain of the ranges automatically provides sufficient protection for the species by discouraging large numbers of nimrods from going after them. This year, 2,675 elk permits and 3,300 deer have been placed under controlled hunt regulations in specified areas. Application deadlines for permits have passed, but the drawing will be held in Boise August 24.

NEW ASSISTANT COACH PICKED FOR VANDALS A coach in the habit of turning out undefeated football teams has been named as an assistant football coach at the University of Idaho under J. Neil (Skip) Stahley, it was announced this week by President D. R. Theophilus. He is Bill Peterson, a former University of Washington star who has been coaching at Anacortes high school in Washington. Peterson played for Idaho mentor and athletic director Stahley when he was an assistant coach at Washington. Peterson played at end and as defensive linebacker for the Huskies from 1947 to 1951. After graduation, Peterson coached freshman football at Richland, Wash., for three years. The third year at Richland saw the freshmen go undefeated. Peterson then went to Anacortes and developed an undefeated team there in 1956. The father of five, three boys and two daughters, the 32-year old Peterson was born in Snohomish, Wash. He attended high school there and participated in football, basketball and track. A veteran, he served with the U. S. Army military corps. The appointment completes Coach Stahley's staff of assistants. Peterson will join Joe Berry, former Montana assistant; William Knuckles, an assistant coach at Whitworth in Spokane, and Gary Kenworthy, a Vandal star who coached last year at Placerville, California.

Idaho Food at Calif. Luncheon

Food from Idaho's farms, ranches and mountain streams will be served at a special luncheon in San Francisco during the state's second industrial trip to California this October, according to the Department of Commerce and Development Secretary Louise Shadduck. The all-Idaho products luncheon will be held in the Colonial ballroom of the St. Francis hotel on October 18, the second day of the three-day trip. Guests will be served Idaho potatoes, vegetables, smoked trout and other homegrown products. Industrial and business leaders throughout the bay area are being invited to attend the luncheon to hear about Idaho's industrial potential. "The only purpose of the expedition is to promote Idaho as a state that wants to develop and invites new industry as one of the means of that growth," Miss Shadduck says.

Sponsored by the Department in cooperation with Gov. Robt. E. Smylie, the trip has already recruited the efforts of businessmen and civic leaders from every part of Idaho. Miss Shadduck points out that representatives of local and regional economic development groups in Idaho are taking an active part in preparing for the expedition and will make the trip to San Francisco. About 60 Idahoans joined Smylie and Miss Shadduck in Los Angeles last October when the state made its first out-of-state, industry-seeking trip. The object of this year's trip is the same as the 1959 expedition: convince California businessmen that Idaho is a good spot to build a new branch plant. Urge California firms with branches in Idaho to step up their operations. Primarily, Miss Shadduck notes, the state is seeking industries to process products derived from agriculture, lumbering and mining, Idaho's three biggest industries. Idahoans making the trip will use the St. Francis as their headquarters, fanning out from there to make face to face contacts with a selected list of bay area industrial and business leaders. Lebanon, in Smith County, Kansas, is the closest to the geographical center of the 48 states.

North Idaho's Lake Cocolalla Will Provide Cutthroat Trout

By Jim Humbird

Idaho Fish and Game Department

There is no spiritual cleavage between north and south Idaho anglers—they all like their native cutthroat trout.

Originally as native as the Sprynga shrub, from whence comes the state flower, the dark golden cutthroats are all too rare these days. They are popular just the same because here is a fish to test the skill of any angler.

It looks so simple. The fisherman makes short casts alongside logs or underwater clumps of grass, slowly moving a fly just below the surface. There is the merest touch with no disturbance, and seconds may pass before it is realized that the first strike has been missed.

Again the barbel fly drifts on a rifle line a small pool. It is cast near a big log. There is another one. It's that velvet touch followed by violence that keeps the anglers coming back for more.

The "native" is a handsome trout, with its dark green back, deep yellow sides and belly thickly covered with dark spots that run into the fins and spatter the tail. Lying on a bed of ferns or displayed on the kitchen will attract school children please the most choosy sportsman.

According to the American Fisheries Society, the early range of the cutthroat trout in the United States is the Rio Grande, Columbia, Missouri, Colorado, and Great Basin drainages and some coastal streams of the Pacific. The upper Snake river drainage, including Henry lake, was formerly part of both the Columbia river and Great Basin drainages.

A small portion, if any, of the existing "native" population in Henry lake is descended from the original stock cutthroat from both Yellowstone lake, Wyoming and Gold Creek, Idaho, have been introduced. Moreover, the rainbow trout has been introduced in Henry, and rainbow-cutthroat hybrids now are present.

Along that reach of the South Fork of the Snake river flowing through parts of Wyoming and southeastern Idaho, there is a stream of trout called Snake river cutthroat. There are two types with distinctive characteristics and can be identified by persons who also are familiar with the Yellowstone "cuts".

Since 1924, Henrys lake near Island Park has been the main cutthroat spawn-taking station in Idaho. The annual take ranges from four to 13 million eggs, and this year's harvest tallied about 6,700,000 eggs. These are processed and shipped to most of the state's 14 fish hatcheries.

In view of the increasing angler pressure on cutthroat waters around the state and the fact that eggs cannot be obtained commercially, the Fish and Game department is preparing to take additional spawn from Lake Cocolalla next spring. Fish trap sites presently are being located on tributary streams of the lake, which is near Sandpoint in northern Idaho.

Lake Cocolalla was rehabilitated through the elimination of all fish in 1957, restocked with the north Idaho strain of cutthroat trout, and reopened with a bag limit of three fish last year. The department has high hopes for this new source of cutthroat spawn.

Most of the state hatcheries handle some Henrys lake eggs and, when the fry are 1 1/2 to 2 inches, the department releases them in high mountain lakes and streams. Palisades reservoir in southeastern Idaho, for example, was stocked for the first time in 1956—a big project.

Cutthroat trout are difficult to culture in hatcheries because all of the strains are from "wild" stock. There are nutritional difficulties and the fish do not adjust well to artificial rearing. That is the reason they are generally released as small fry. But there also are native Idaho trout, but there is a difference. Through the years, the "bovs" have become a domesticated fish, fast-growing, well adjusted to modern fish culture methods. Under the best hatchery conditions, they add an inch a month, as compared to about four to eight inches of growth in a year for the trout that were held at the Grace hatchery in eastern Idaho.

Old-timers say that "natives" once ranged in the Snake river from Shoshone Falls downstream, but today this species rarely is caught in that part of the river. Studies indicate that the cause may be changing ecological conditions, higher water temperatures, more silt, municipal and industrial wastes and competition from other kinds of fish. In any case, "cuts" now are found mainly in the high country which remains relatively unmechanized by agriculture and industry.

Much is to be learned about the cutthroat trout. Life history studies and creel census information to determine fishing pressure and annual harvest of the species was started by the department on the Blackfoot river during the spring of 1959. This project will be completed in October, when it is hoped that enough information will be at hand to make recommendations for wise management practices. About 25,000 marked "natives" were planted in the stream as the base for population estimates.

A similar program which began last year is based deep in the Idaho wilderness area, the Middle Fork of the Salmon river. Regardless of the fact that the Middle Fork can be reached only by trail, boat or air, the amount of fishing pressure has increased in recent years and there are indications that the quality of trout fishing is declining. Here the objectives are as follows:

1. To determine the mortality factors acting upon the cutthroat populations and the relative importance of each.
2. To determine the present distribution, migration pattern, and spawning areas, of the cutthroat population.
3. To determine the age and rate of growth of the trout harvested from the river.
4. To obtain some measure of the harvest and fishing pressure.

Fisheries biologists and other department personnel making float trips down the river to tag fish report that this kind of "sport fishing" becomes exceedingly hard work after the first few days. They catch and tag, weigh and take scale samples from several hundred "natives" per seven-day trip.

It already is known that cutthroat trout spawn during April and May at ages ranging from three to four years. Young fish remain in the gravel usually about 45 days, when they emerge and begin feeding in their natal streams. One known problem is that cutthroat, like salmon and steelhead, have a very high mortality rate in spawners. Most studies have found this to be as great as 90 to 95 per cent.

Another known factor is that the "natives" have an almost unerring urge to return to the stream of their nativity. Consequently the department has a program now underway to rehabilitate tributary spawning spots of cutthroat trout at Priest lake. This is done through total fish eradication of tributary waters, followed by restocking of cutthroat trout. Kalispell creek is undergoing such treatment this summer. Last year the Priest

IDAHO RESIDENTS IN TRAFFIC CRASHES

A vast majority of Idaho's traffic fatalities this year have been residents of this state, according to the Department of Law Enforcement's Traffic Safety Division.

During the first seven months of 1960 traffic crashes took the lives of 102 Idahoans and 25 people from out of state. In spite of the tourist season only four visitors were killed in July when 18 residents of this state met death on the highways. High point month for out-of-staters was April when nine people from other states, and Mrs. R. E. Nordby in Moscow, Thursday afternoon visitors of Mrs. Nordby were Mrs. Dean Morken, of Seattle and Mrs. E. A. Morken and Betsy.

Gasoline taxes provide about 20 per cent of the revenue for state governments.

Lake tributaries of Bear and Reeder creeks were rehabilitated and restocked with "cuts".

Such study programs and wise management practices now and in the future should lead to continuing populations of the cutthroat—Idaho's "state fish".

Report from the GOVERNOR

"Natural Resources Conservation Plan"

With the exception of rearing our children, who are a natural resource of first consequence, our State government's most important task is the conservation for use of our water, land, timber and mineral resources.

The kind of job we do in managing and preserving these God-given resources is an accurate measure of the kind of a state Idaho will be when the third generation after this one comes along.

We have been doing better at this task since 1947, but our performance is still not adequate.

We need to do some rather drastic surgery in order to bring our resource management techniques up to date and to provide the kind of far-sighted professional leadership to conserve these valuable resources that belong to all the people for the use of all the generations yet to come.

What is our present situation? What kind of political and administrative machinery do we have to handle this problem?

There is no departmental structure for natural resource management and conservation that provides trained leadership and policy direction to our resources. The need for reorganizing our present structure is obvious.

We do a good job with forest management where we have a professionally trained staff that has been built up carefully and selectively since 1948.

Our water resources are managed by an independent agency, which has no statutory connection with forest and land management, and which is, fortunately, headed by an outstanding engineer whom I appointed in 1957. Unfortunately, this agency has no responsibility for maintaining the quality of our water resources, and this will be important long before we realize it. In fact, it's important now.

Our fish and wildlife resource is well-managed by another completely autonomous agency which has a trained professional career staff. The results there show the desirability of having professional career people do the job.

But in the field of land management, where important questions are considered and decided, this vital staff is made up of part-time citizens. We do not even have an engineer.

And in the field of conservation and wise use of our mineral resources we have no agency charged with direct responsibility.

We have no trained professional park and recreation administration. The development of this agency is a must. Well-meaning amateurs just cannot do the job that the future requires.

The helter-skelter approach to this important problem is like Topsy—it just grew. Some of it was adopted in 1918. More came into being in 1919. Other parts were added in 1938, 1941 and 1943. It is an administrative maze that would be a nightmare to even the holder of an advanced degree in practical political engineering.

What should we do about it? Can we change this structure so that we can get on with wise planning for the future use and conservation of these resources that will have such a meaningful impact on the future of Idaho?

Competent legal advice indicates that there are no constitutional barriers to sound reorganization of our resource management agencies so all that is required is affirmative action. We should combine the existing agencies under one leadership in a Department of Natural Resources that is headed by a trained, professional engineer who is experienced in land, water and timber management.

The career forest service should be given statutory recognition so that it will never again be in danger of being petitioned for purely political purposes.

The fish and wildlife resource management should be maintained in its present form and its leadership should be free at all times from partisan political controls. A member of the Fish and Game Commission should also be a member of the Advisory Board of the Department of Natural Resources.

The staff of the State Reclamation Engineer should be given career status and the agency should be given additional duties with regard to the maintaining of quality and quantity of our water resources.

The State Mine Inspector should become an appointive office and all of its function, except those having to do with mine safety, should be transferred to the new Department of Natural Resources.

The Parks and Recreation Service should be established on a professional career basis and should be staffed with the development of a comprehensive State park system. In this field our planning for action should be twenty years ahead of the actual execution of the program. This recreational space, will develop that fast.

The Division of Land Resource and Development should be adequately staffed with the development of a personnel. There is no other way in which we can permanently prevent improvident sales of State land, which means the loss of our future recreational space, will develop that fast.

The agency should have an Advisory Board of prescient citizens who can formulate policy based on their training and experience with which to guide our relationship with the United States and the States around us. And, incidentally, but very importantly, to guard our resources against predatory diminution by the other governments.

The constitutional Land Board would retain all of its present constitutional authority over the sale and disposition of State lands, but would be relieved of administrative responsibility not imposed by statute which have nothing to do with the Board's constitutional function.

For instance, the maintenance and opening of public buildings, including the Capitol, should be made the responsibility of the Public Works Commissioner. Whatever else the elected officers are they are not sanitarians. But under the jerry-built structure now in effect, they have the responsibility for keeping the floors in the Capitol building swept and scrubbed and dusted. This is absurd.

And last but not least, there must be a positive prohibition against confiding leadership of the Department of Natural Resources to the organizational leader of a political party. Both Republican and Democrats have been guilty of this in times past and the result is not good. Political hucksterism has no place in planning the wise conservation for use of our natural resources.

Such a plan as this was suggested to the 1959 Legislature in my opening address to that Session.

It reached a cubby-hole in the Printing Committee of the House of Representatives and died there for obvious political reasons. Wise and far-sighted leadership would have at least permitted the people to have their opportunity to have their say. For it is the people's God-given endowment that the State administrators, and I'm confident that our people want the resources conserved for use by their children and their children's children.

That is why I shall return to the fray next January with the same proposal.

For myself, I want to leave Idaho green and do all I can to keep her future golden.

Veterans of World War II and Korea who became totally disabled between the date of their application for National Service Life Insurance and the subsequent effective date may now file application for premium waiver.

The Veterans Administration, in calling attention of veterans and their kin to this new law, explained that the total disability must have been incurred in line of duty between Oct. 8, 1940, and July 31, 1945, or between June 27, 1950, and April 30, 1951. The insured must have remained continuously so disabled until his death or until June 8, 1960, whichever was earlier.

Application for waiver of premiums must be filed by the insured, or if dead, by the beneficiary within two years after June 8, 1960. Applications will also be accepted from persons representing mentally incompetent veterans.

Because of the time limit placed upon applications, the VA urges eligible veterans or their beneficiaries to apply promptly for the waiver of premiums.

QUESTIONS OF THE WEEK:

Q—Is there any deadline for applying for compensation for a service-connected disability?

A—No. A veteran with a service-connected disability may apply for compensation at any time. However, if he applies within one year from date of discharge, compensation may be back-dated to his first day as a civilian.

Christian Science Church Service August 28, 1960

The vital significance of the life and works of the master Christian will be the central topic of the Lesson-Sermon entitled "Christ Jesus," which will be read at all Christian Science churches Sunday.

Scriptural selections will include the following from Luke's gospel (4:40,41): "Now when the sun was setting, all they that had any sick with divers diseases brought them unto him; and he laid his hands on everyone of them, and healed them. And devils also came out of many, crying out, and saying, Thou art Christ, the Son of God. And he rebuking them suffered them that he would not speak: for they knew that he was Christ."

A correlative passage to be read from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy includes the following (332:11-15): "The Christ is incorporeal, spiritual, yes, the divine image and likeness dispelling the illusions of the senses: the Way, the Truth, and the Life, healing the sick and casting out evils, destroying sin, disease, and death."

Mourning Dove Shooting Hours

Legal hours for shooting mourning doves during the open season Sept. 1 through September 15 will conform to the federal regulations set for all migratory game birds by the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service, the Idaho Fish and Game Department, said this week.

Ross Leonard, director, said other federal regulations also will apply in the mourning dove hunt, except that the "duck stamp" is unnecessary for hunting doves. The noon opening set for upland bird seasons also is unnecessary for dove hunters.

Leonard also voiced a warning that bird hazard is reported to be extreme in many areas, and urged hunters to use extreme caution with fire. "Many ranchers have expressed concern in this respect, and all hunters are requested to cooperate with ranchers and farmers in every way during this period of special danger," he said.

Dove hunting hours are from a half hour before sunrise to sunset. Leonard said. Due to differences in the timing across Idaho, the shooting hours will vary in the different regions.

Doves may be hunted in Latah and surrounding counties beginning at 4:37 a. m. September 1.

He responded quite well to the treatment and was able to return to his home Tuesday night.

The Nuxoll family are now living in the Denis Jain home in the east part of town.

Symlye Proclaims Child Safety Week

Gov. Robert E. Symlye this week proclaimed Sept. 7-14 as Child Safety Week in an effort to "Preserve the lives and health of these young travelers during their trips to and from school and play."

More than 30,000 children will be returning to their classrooms on Tuesday after Labor Day and it is important that safety habits be impressed on their minds," the Governor commented. "Safety education must be instilled in our children but must be brought home to the driving public in order to promote an awareness of the need for their special precautions. No engagement in so-called 'stunt' driving motorist should risk killing or maiming a child," he continued.

Gov. Symlye said that Idaho's traffic record is anything but good despite a decline in fatalities based on the increasing population and greater travel. "Nearly one-fourth of the traffic deaths this 18 year old, many youngsters under 18 years old, many of whose lives have been snuffed out in cars, while they were on bicycles or when they were crossing streets and highways," he commented.

"Because the news lacks the sensational touch, few people realize that our average annual roadside injury list includes 100 small children while about 130 youngsters on bicycles are hurt every year," the Governor said.

Dove Populations Are Greater Today Than 100 Years Ago

Idaho wing shooters this week will sharpen eyes for the colonial pigeon. Leg muskies and appetites as they begin the state's average annual harvest of some 140,000 mourning doves one-half hour before sunrise Thursday, the start of the 15-day season.

With the daily bag limit fixed at ten of the illusive targets and a possession limit of 20 birds after the first day—all within the framework of national regulations set by the Federal Fish and Wildlife Service—the annual fall hunting never makes a dent in permanent populations in this or any other state.

This is true even in the southeast part of the country where over a million doves are taken by hunters each year in some states. Here's why. The plaintively cooing dove is the only American game bird that brings off more than one brood a year. Nesting begins about mid-April in south Idaho and as much as two weeks later in the Caucas d'Alone area of the Panhandle. As many as four broods may be successfully reared during a season. Clutches almost always have two eggs, although some contain one or three.

So great is the hurry of doves to perpetuate the species that incubation begins as soon as the egg is laid—which means that birds of the same hatch are at least a day apart in age. Both parent doves set, the male during daylight hours and the female at night. Fed "pigeon milk", a glandular secretion available from both sexes, nestlings grow rapidly and die gradually if neglected by the 12th or 14th day, and the parents birds are ready to raise another 14-day incubation stint.

Young doves are about five to six weeks old when they begin to flock and migrate to central Mexico. These primarily are the ones which return to this state the following spring. Older birds faithfully stay on their 4 egg yolks, although some always have two eggs, although some contain one or three.

the mourning dove. Today there are vastly greater populations of these game birds in every state except Alaska and Hawaii where they are not native than there were during the covered wagon epoch. Opening up of country by the colonial type of settlement has brought about a population explosion for doves.

Like the passenger pigeon of yore, doves sometimes are found congregated in trees which are the type of nesting. One year in southwestern Idaho 600 young doves were banded during a season in a ten-acre orchard near Emmett. But they have great requirements in habitat requirements, nesting also in low shrubs and on the ground. The state's greatest brooding populations are found scattered throughout areas where the predation perils are least. Idaho's dove breeding numbers are believed to equal or exceed those of any other state. And the reason for the wide distribution here and over the country is that doves have the least specific habitat requirements of all game birds.

The life span of the mourning dove is extremely short. During the past two decades, federal and state conservation programs have banded millions of them as part of one of the most extensive wildlife study operations ever undertaken in this country. It is significant that the national average of band returns is about 3.8 per cent, and that it is much lower in Idaho. In other words, hunting contributes very little to population mortality of doves. By way of contrast, the percentage of band returns for migratory waterfowl ranges from about 15 to 30 per cent of the total number banded.

Because the state and national study programs on doves are continuing projects, hunters are urged to return all bands received this fall to the Fish and Wildlife banding office at Laurel, Md., or to the state Fish and Game department at Boise, where they will be forwarded. The Idaho department also requests the hunters to bring or mail dove wings for laboratory studies. Age of birds is determined, for example, by the presence or absence of white tip feathers in secondary wing coverts. This program began back in 1902. Ask the ornithologist artist why he bothers with that tiny, tasty morsel called dove and the response is apt to be in the same vein as that of the mountain climber who makes the assault—"because they're there!" Moreover, the mourning dove is the first Idaho game bird available to gunners each fall, and it is hunted chiefly on public lands.

In Idaho there are about 784 thousand acres of non-stocked commercial forest land in need of reforestation. Fish and Game department officials are asking the ornithologist artist why he bothers with that tiny, tasty morsel called dove and the response is apt to be in the same vein as that of the mountain climber who makes the assault—"because they're there!" Moreover, the mourning dove is the first Idaho game bird available to gunners each fall, and it is hunted chiefly on public lands.

Some sportsmen fear that the mourning dove will go the way of the passenger pigeon and American bison or buffalo—to extinction. Not so, say the biologists, because both species passed for lack of habitat and because they could not adjust to new ways of life. In the overall, hunting had little or nothing to do with the disappearance of the pigeon and the buffalo. The westward expansion of the farmer on this continent led inevitably to the logging of great groves of hardwood trees and the farming of thousands of square miles of open prairie country. Pigeons required the trees for nesting and "mast", the acorns and hickory nuts. The bison also had to eat or die. Westward progress with its many changes to the land actually created better habitat, and more of it, for CHOOSING BIRDS FOR FAIR The first point in choosing birds for a fair is to select those that are well developed, the county agent reminded 4-H members and other exhibitors this week. The best birds for exhibition are early hatched chicks. Choose birds that have bright red eyes, a good clean head, bright red comb and wattles, strong legs, straight toes, and an alert carriage. If they pass those tests they are likely to be in the pink of health and health counts.

Recruitment visits to national forests in the Northern Rocky Mountains increased over 300 per cent between 1948 and 1958. Idaho extension service, says that means birds that look like the ideal instead of specimens that may be too heavy or show some feathers of the wrong color. It is another good idea, Black said, to select more birds than you will show. This gives you a spare or two in case something happens to the other chickens. Put them in small wire coops several days before the fair so they will be used to small quarters.

GRACIE POST URGES WOMEN TO TAKE ACTION IN POLITICAL MATTERS In a meeting of the New Plymouth, last week, Congresswoman Gracie Post urged members of the Payette County Democratic Women's Club to match their predecessors. This is one facet of our nation's activity with increased political participation. She pointed out that women handle more of the nation's money than men do and that they cast more votes than men.

"Not only should the country as a whole recognize the woman's voice, but women themselves must organize the power they hold and take the lead in shaping our political future," Mrs. Post said. Turning to the nation's farm problems, she termed the claims by the Republicans that they will unveil a new farm program prior to the Nov. election "a cruel joke" and an admission that their past programs have been complete failures. "During the past eight years, broken Republican promises have forced the liquidation of 900,000 farming units and cut the nation's farm income $19.9 billion," she said. "Democratic efforts to help the farm farmer have been stymied in Congress by five Presidential vetoes, threats of more vetoes and by Republican opposition," Mrs. Post said. Citing the recent Democratic election victory, Representative Burdick over a heavily favored Republican candidate in North Dakota, Mrs. Post said, "There is unrest in the farm belts of the nation. Farmers at this late date of 'Sometime new' will not mislead the voters into forgetting that the Republicans created this unrest by eight years of bungling and broken promises."

Congresswoman Post said that only a change to a Democratic administration to work with a Democratic Congress can bring about a sound farm program which will return prosperity to the family-sized farmer. The average annual loss to forest fires in national forests of the northern region dropped from nearly 200 thousand acres before 1920 to about 2 thousand acres between 1951 and 1959.

FISH & GAME NEWS Legal Sturgeon Lengths Anglers now may add zest to their efforts with punch lines to the fish. "This meter must have weighed 500 pounds—or 1,000/or 1,500 . . ." They will have the full blessings of the state Fish and Game department when they are talking about sturgeon that appear to be six footers or over. The reason goes back to new sturgeon regulations established by the Idaho Fish and Game commission last spring. These set minimum and maximum lengths on these fish of 36 inches and 72 inches, respectively. Clarification of these regulations now appears necessary. They are designed to perpetuate the species by protecting the big sturgeon spawners, and lifting large fish out of the stream in a manner which will strain to injure the fish to the extent that it later may die. As the express purpose of this regulation is to allow the larger fish which are spawners, to remain in the stream so as to reproduce and maintain sturgeon populations, conscientious fishermen should be willing to handle big sturgeon in the prescribed manner. The department holds the position that anyone who catches a large sturgeon and ties it up on the hope of returning to take pictures, weigh it, catch a larger one, etc. is in possession of the fish and, if it falls outside the legal size limit, that person is in violation. Pictures may be taken to give an indication of size of the fish by bringing it alongside a measuring instrument or other object of known measurements. But weights must be estimated—which gives a lot of latitude. Cooperative Treatment Program As a means of helping Nevada rehabilitate its Salmon Falls creek through chemical treatment with rough fish and later restocking with trout, the Idaho Fish and Game department is removing muskies and shiners from its part of the drainage. This includes a portion of Shoshone creek, which flows into Nevada, and a portion of Salmon Falls creek, which drains out of Nevada into the Salmon Falls reservoir. The reservoir will not be treated this fall because more mapping is needed to determine storage capacity and to decide what chemical to use, toxaphene or liquid rotenone. The Idaho department does not plan extensive restocking of its part of the drainage because of high water temperatures during the summer months and because of poor trout habitat conditions. Fire Danger With the opening of the mourning dove hunting season, September 1-15, fire danger conditions are complicated. All hunters, whether after doves, goat, sheep or cottontail rabbits, should never leave a live fire, and never to travel while they are smoking. Kamloops Up 500 Per Cent According to preliminary creel census of Pineville, Ore., taken last week from Lake Pend Oreille includes some three-quarters of million kokanee, 6,000 kamloops, and 2,500 outboard and 2,000 Dolly Vardens. The kokanee catch is about average for the past ten years. Two age groups are being harvested, averaging 8 1/2 and 9 1/2 inches. The kamloops catch is up more than 500 per cent over the average of over years, continuing the trend of increased abundance in the lake. Kamloops averaged 13 inches; about one in 14 was king-sized or over 20 inches. Kamloops outnumbered Dolly Varden three to one, but the majority of Dolly Vardens were king-sized. This catch has improved considerably this year, which may be due to additional restrictions placed last year on the harvest of immature and spawning fish in nursery streams. Dolly Varden averaged 19 inches in length, and about one in three was king-sized. Cutthroat trout averaged 12 inches in length. Fly fishing for this species was good during latter June, but the estimated catch is well below average. Landholder-Sportsman Council State Sen. Don Frederickson of Gooding, rancher chairman of the Idaho Landholder-Sportsman Council, called a meeting of that group in Boise for the afternoon of August 25 at the Fish and Game Department. He urges representatives of all statewide livestock, agricultural, land operating and wildlife agencies and organizations to attend to discuss the Payette river and its fishing during season. Proposed leasing of private lands for members of organized hunting and fishing clubs will be a main topic of discussion. River Access Provided Added to some 145 public access sites for fishing and hunting around the state are four projects on the low Payette river and two new rights-of-way on the Boise river above Caldwell. All of these will be completed and posted with directional signs prior to the migratory waterfowl hunting season begins this fall and winter.

ONE-CAR FATALS SHOW SLIGHT RESERVE OF THORIUM METAL The State of Idaho may have greater reserves of thorium—a radioactive metal which has great potential as a nuclear fuel—than any other part of the nation, it was announced this week in a new Idaho Bureau of Mines and Geology pamphlet. Dr. E. F. Cook, dean of the college of mines and director of the bureau, said, "Most thorium used up to now has been produced from monazite. The mineral thorite is a more attractive source of thorium than monazite. Idaho has deposits of this thorite—indeed, as far as we know, Idaho has greater reserves of this mineral than any other state." The Idaho bureau in cooperation with the University of Idaho College of Mines has been carrying out studies on Idaho thorite during the past several years. The results of the studies, both geologic and metallurgical, are given in the report on the "Study of Two Idaho Thorite Deposits." In the first chapter, Professor Joseph Newton, head of the department of mining and metallurgy, discusses the properties, production problems, and probable potential of thorium metal. "The outstanding property of thorium is the fact that it can be converted into a fissionable material which can be used as a nuclear fuel," said Prof. Newton. "From what we know of its chemical and physical properties, it is likely to remain a minor metal as far as non-nuclear uses are concerned. As a source of atomic energy, however, it has great potential." In the second chapter, Denis LeMoine, a former graduate student and teaching assistant at the university, outlines the geologic characteristics of a thorite deposit on Hall mountain in Boundary County. Clark N. Adams, former graduate student and teaching assistant in metallurgy, gives the results of his attempts to concentrate the Hall mountain thorite. The fourth chapter, by Dr. A. L. Anderson, largely reprinted from pamphlet 115 of the bureau, describes thorite occurrences in the Lemhi Pass area of Lemhi county and the deposit from which the ore came that was used by J. A. Shively in beneficence tests outlined in the fifth chapter. The pamphlet may be obtained for $25 from the Idaho Bureau of Mines and Geology at the University of Idaho, Moscow.

California To Hear of Idaho Attractions Idaho's tourist attraction as well as its industrial potential, will be publicized during the state's second official industry-seeking campaign in California during October. Louise Shaddock, Secretary of the Department of Commerce and Development, the trip's coordinating agency, says Idaho's scenic and recreational spots will not be neglected during the campaign, although the chief purpose of going to California is to alert businessmen and industrialists that Idaho is a good place for a new or expanded plant. The campaign will be conducted in San Francisco from October 17 to 19. During a week in October, 1959, the department sponsored a similar trip to the Los Angeles area. Nearly 70 Idaho businessmen accompanied Gov. Robert E. Smylie and Miss Shaddock to Los Angeles to help in making personal contacts with southern California industrialists. The state's tourists attraction were not played up during the Los Angeles trip. This year, however, a booth will be set up at the campaign's St. Francisco headquarters to distribute information about Idaho's unmatched scenic beauty and recreational opportunities. "Our main purpose, of course, will be to let San Francisco businessmen know that Idaho wants and can handle industry that fits in with the state's economy," Miss Shaddock says. Idahoans making the trip this year will make face to face contacts with businessmen in the San Francisco-Oakland area. It will be their job to tell about Idaho's abundant water power, untapped natural resources, stable labor market, plant site availability and employee recreational opportunities. YOUR Social Security?

Question—
I'd like to know how social security payments are figured. I worked a few months back in 1940, but then became self-employed and, as a self-employed person, I didn't start paying into social security again until 1951. I'm wondering if all those years before 1951 will be counted against me.

Answer—
The amount of a social security payment is based on a person's average earnings. In figuring average earnings the Social Security Administration takes the total wages that a person has earned, starting either with the year 1937, (when the social security law went into effect) or with the year 1951. The reason that the year 1951 was chosen is because it was that year that many new groups were brought under social security protection, such as domestic workers and the self-employed. So in your case, your average would be figured starting with 1951—and then, five year when you had low or no earnings are excluded.

COMPOSITE BOND AND STOCK FUND DECLARES QUARTERLY DIVIDEND

A dividend of 13 cents a share from last quarter's income payable August 31 to shareholders of record August 12, has been declared by Composite Bond and Stock Fund. This is the 3rd quarterly dividend declared by the Fund in fiscal 1960.

The Fund, sponsored by Murphey Favre, Inc., pioneer Spokane investment banking firm, numbers many Genesee area residents among its shareholders.

Composite Bond and Stock Fund celebrated its coming of age 21st birthday in July, and this is its 85 consecutive quarterly dividend.

Total dividend distribution to share holders this quarter will come to $40,458, compared with a total dividend distribution of $46,771 in the 3rd quarter of 1959. As of August 12, 1960, total net assets of Composite Bond and Stock Fund were $7,424,640, compared with $6,932,084 on November 30, 1959, the end of the last fiscal year. Net asset value per share as of August 12 was $15.52, compared with $13.42 on last November 30.

VETS URGED TO NOTIFY VA OF ANY CHANGE OF ADDRESS

Veterans or their dependents receiving compensation or pension from the Veterans Administration should report immediately any change of address to avoid delay in receipt of their benefit checks.

VA officials said that both the old and the new address should be given in notifying the VA of the fact that they have moved. In addition, it is always well to file a change-of-address card with the local post office.

Among the thousands of letters that the VA receives each month are many which cannot be answered because the writer fails to identify himself with address or claim number. The writer's full name, the address and the "CV" number or insurance number, if there is one, should always be included.

FARMING AROUND

By Mark Welsh

Mark Welsh

Young animals are born with built-in protection against disease. At least they have the same antibodies as the mother built up through her life's fight with various infections. These antibodies protect the baby for the first few weeks of his life. In addition, the colostrum or first milk nursed by the young has a high concentration of vitamins, more antibodies and much energy-giving fat and other substances.

It's vitally important, however, that the young nurse as soon as possible of this colostrum for they seem to lose the ability to absorb its health-giving properties rather rapidly. Within a few weeks the protection from the mother wears out and the young has to build his own immunity and disease resistance from his own body tissues. This is usually a race between the invading infection and the rapid build-up of resistance with death or injury to the loser.

Yaccins and serums are helpful against specific infections. But, antibiotics like Aureomycin and the feed preservatives like penicillin are almost impossible to prevent exposure to disease organisms but the Aureomycin keeps down their growth so that the body cells have time to build up antibodies and prevent tissue damage. It also stimulates growth, improves feed conversion and protects the investment and the profits.

Exhaust fumes are killers. The gas that kills is tasteless, colorless and odorless. When you start a car, tractor or truck motor indoors—get the doors open first. This is just another item in the long list of accident makers that make farming among our most dangerous occupations.

UNLICENSED DRIVERS IN FATAL CAR WRECKS

At least six drivers involved in Idaho's fatal traffic accidents so far this year had no driver's licenses at the time of their accidents, the Traffic Safety Division reported this week. One other operator was driving on a license that had expired two years before the crash which killed another driver, a 13-year-old and 10-year-old were killed in the crashes while the other five survived, the report showed. Ages of the surviving drivers were 15, 18, 20 and 48. The latter was an out-of-state resident.

Three youngsters, 14, 15 and 16, were drivers of cars involved in fatal wrecks and had admitted violations of moving traffic regulations to investigating officers or had violated restrictions placed on their driving permits. Since none of them were convicted of any infractions, their driving privileges are still in effect, officials reported.

This year's 140 fatalities were the result of 117 crashes involving 164 drivers. Officers' fatal accident reports since February are not complete, but among those submitted to the Department of Law Enforcement the Driver's license status of 18 of them were left blank, according to Safety Director Robert McCall. However, a check of the central license files in Boise revealed that 14 of them had bonafide operator's licenses which had not been noted on the fatal accident reports, McCall said. Four others were out of state drivers and no check has been made with their home states.

SOCIAL SECURITY CLAIMS

Persons wishing to expedite processing of their social security claims should bring with them the amount of earnings from January 1st until the time that they file their claims, according to W. V. Nusbaum, Manager of the Lewiston Social Security District Office. This information is needed to determine if using the 1960 wages will increase the benefit rate. During the month of August 1960, the Lewiston Social Security Office processed 102 claims. During the same period last year 129 claims were processed.

YOUR Social Security?

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Question—

I am retired from the U. S. Navy. Also, I've worked in jobs where social security has been deducted and I have 40 quarters of work, so I understand I'm fully covered. Will it be possible for me, when I'm 65 years old, to draw both my Navy retirement and social security checks?

Answer—

Yes. The only thing that affects social security checks is actual earnings or income from self-employment. Any other type of income that a person might have, such as other retirement payments, rental income, investments, since they are not earnings, would not cause you to lose any of your social security payments.

Christian Science Church Service

God's promises to mankind are being substantiated today thru scientific understanding of Spirit. This is a theme of the Lesson-Sermon on "Substance" which will be read this Sun. at all Christian Science churches. Experiences of 3 men who received the fulfillment of divine promises—Abraham, Moses, and Zacharias—will be featured in the Bible readings, which will also include this verse from Isaiah: "For the mountains shall depart, and the hills be removed; but my kindness shall not depart from thee, neither shall the covenant of my peace be removed, saith the Lord that hath mercy on thee." (54:10).

Among passages to be read from Science and Health with Key to Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy is the following: "(49:12) 'It is only by acknowledging the supremacy of spirit, which annuls the claims of matter, that mortals can lay off mortality and find the indissoluble spiritual link which establishes man forever in the divine likeness, inseparable from his creator.'"

Firefighters from Missoula, Mont., made over 1,400 parachute jumps last year to fight fires on national forest lands in the Northern Rocky Mts.

Speeding, driving on the wrong side of the road, passing in unsafe areas, failing to yield and other violations are among infractions which contribute to fatal accidents. The drunken driver, who is involved in as many as 20 per cent of the fatalities, almost always commits one and usually more of the so-called "minor" violations.

Like the age-old argument, "which chicken first, the chicken or the egg?" a similar question might be asked about the speeding driver on the wrong side of the road. Was he in the wrong lane because he was speeding, or was he speeding because he was driving in the left white rounding a curve? Which violation was due to habit?

All such factors indicate a state of mind so important in solving the traffic problem.

COMMEMORATIVE STAMP WILL BE ISSUED AUGUST 27TH

The deadline for advance orders for the "Employ the Handicapped" 4-cent commemorative stamp is Saturday, August 27th.

Issuance of this stamp will coincide with the Eighth World Congress of the International Society for the Welfare of Cripples, to be held in New York at the Waldorf Astoria. It will be issued in cooperation with the President's Committee on Employment of the Physically Handicapped.

This committee was authorized by Act of Congress... to enlist the cooperation of public and private groups in a year-round program to promote employment of physically handicapped workers.

Arranged vertically, the stamp has at the top, in an off-balance arc, the wording "Employ the Handicapped" in dark modified Roman lettering. The denomination "4c" appears in larger dark lettering below the drill to the left, and at the bottom, in an off-balance inverted arc, appears "United States Postage," also in dark Roman lettering.

James Byers, Chairman of the Idaho Governor's Committee on Employment of the Physically Handicapped, urges all interested persons and organizations to arrange for the purchase of large and small orders of this stamp through their local postmaster.

Special ceremonies in observance of this event have been scheduled in Boise in the form of a breakfast meeting of the Governor's Committee. This August 29th gathering will be the setting for presentation to Governor Robert E. Smylie of a special album containing full sheets of this stamp. The leather album, provided by the Post Office Department, will carry the Governor's name in gold on the cover and will be presented by James E. Hughes, Boise Postmaster.

Reason for "Hen In Bag" Regulations Explained By Game Management Men

Idaho Fish and Game Department That "sacred cow" among American game birds, the hallowed hen pheasant will not remove enough hens from the population to make any real difference. Biologists will use checking station results during the two-day period to obtain basic data for evaluating the results of this year's limited hen hunt.

Idaho, which never has had a "bucks only" law in its general deer hunts, now has more venison than was available during pioneer days. It is a fact that a great many more hunters actually are needed in the back country every fall to cut back winter populations to equal available food supply at that time of the year.

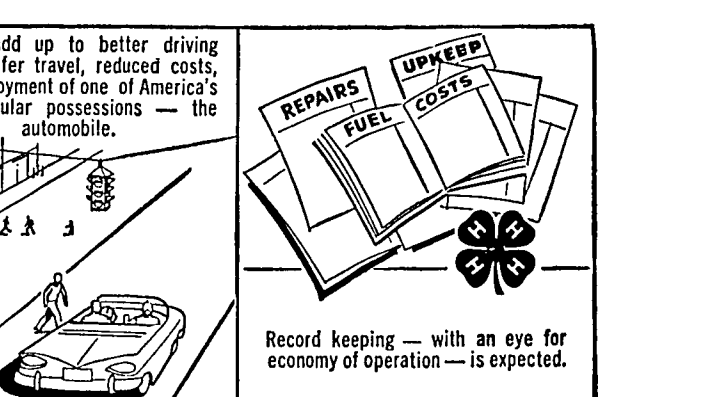

Greater harvest of both sexes not only puts more meat in lockers, but it permits the maintenance of deer herds and their ranges in better condition. Pheasant investigations have shown that a moderate harvest of hen pheasants has the same sound basis as either-sex hunting of deer.

In the case of pheasants, winter cover or shelter combined with a nearby food supply is the key to winter survival. Strip farming practices nowadays, and the leaving of standing vegetation along fence rows, woodlots, and other cover can build greater bird populations. Some farmers now are creating pheasant shelters against blizzards through a tree-shrub planting program under a cooperative program of the Soil Bank and Fish and Game departments.

Studies also show that pheasants must have cover and food in the same area. Birds that travel long distances foraging for food and water are exposed to so many hazards that their survival chances to the next breeding season are poor.

Nature has a way of populating game birds or animals throughout a range to the limit of its carrying capacity. One of the most signal examples of such a phenomena occurred when a release of 28 pheasants in

WILDERNESS AREA TO BE ESTABLISHED

The Selway-Bitterroot Primitive

A proposal to modify the existing Selway-Bitterroot Primitive Area and to reclassify most of it as wilderness area was announced this week by the regional office of the U. S. Forest Service in Missoula.

Under the proposal, 1,163,555 acres of the present primitive area in southwestern Montana and eastern Idaho would be classified under wilderness regulation U-1, the announcement states.

The action is part of the Forest Service's policy of reviewing all the national forest primitive areas and reestablishing as wilderness those portions predominantly valuable for that purpose.

The area to be reclassified as wilderness includes much of the Bitterroot Mountains, a large part of the Selway River drainage and a portion of the Lochsa River drainage. It averages nearly 50 miles long from north to south, and 40 miles wide from east to west. It lies in four national forests in Idaho, the Lolo, Bitterroot, Nezperce, and Clearwater, and in the Lolo and Bitterroot in Montana.

Public hearings on the proposal to establish the Selway-Bitterroot Wilderness Area will be held in Missoula, Montana, on March 7 and in Lewiston, Idaho on March 9, the announcement states.

The Selway-Bitterroot Primitive vesting of surplus lands is timely salvage of birds which would otherwise succumb to non-hunting mortality. Considerable research has been done on this problem and available evidence indicates that ringnecks as well as other forms of wildlife maintain their numbers at the carrying capacity of their range most of the time.

Finally, there is a surplus of hen pheasants available almost every year on which some hunter harvest can be obtained without any effect upon next year's population. They can add materially to the pheasant take—and will add a small amount this year during the last two days of the season in 17 counties across southern Idaho.

Area was established by the Forest Service on July 3, 1936, under regulation L-20 of the Secretary of Agriculture. The announcement lists the supervisors' offices of the four forests and the regional forester's office in Missoula as sources of additional information on the proposed changes.

CARE OF YOUR DOGS NAILS

By Dr. E. M. Gildow
Director, Friskies Research Kennels
Dogs need periodic pedicure just as humans do. Unless they get a generous amount of exercise on hard surfaces, which will often keep their nails in line and cause sore feet. Check your pet's paws.

One important thing to watch when clipping a dog's nail is that you don't accidentally nick the quick, the pink flesh within the nail. This is easy to spot on dogs with white nails, but hard to spot on dark nails. Cutting the quick may cause considerable bleeding and some pain. One bad experience at the hands of the clipper will make your pet wary of all future pedicures.

If you're a novice at dog nail clipping and nervous, it's best to let your veterinarian give you a demonstration.

If you feel confident and want to do it yourself, here's how to proceed. You need special nail clippers, available at pet supply stores, and a good double-cut file from your hardware store. After clipping the nails, smooth the rough edges with the file, drawing it from the base of the nail outwards.

You'll find your dog more cooperative if you have him on a table. Hold firmly the toe and paw you're working on.

Hunting dogs that ply their trade should not have their nails clipped too short. Running wears them down and if the quick is bared, paws will be sore.

Feeding Tips: Dogs fed entirely on table scraps may suffer from poor bones and teeth due to lack of vitamin D. Top quality dog foods such as Friskies contain generous amounts of irradiated yeast and other vitamin D sources.

Idahoans To Make Industry-Seeking Trip To California

Cooperation being given Idaho's Department of Commerce and Development in planning the state's first industry-seeking trip to California is going to make the campaign a certain success, according to Louise Shadduck, Industrial Secretary.

Miss Shadduck says industrialists, businessmen and economic development groups throughout Idaho are heading over backwards to help set up the trip, slated for October 17 to 19 in San Francisco.

"A lot of Idahoans want to go and help publicize the fact that Idaho is a good place for a new or expanded plant that fits in with the state's agricultural, lumbering and mining economy," she says. Last year, when the Department sponsored the state's first industrial trip, which went into Los Angeles in October, nearly 70 Idaho businessmen went along.

Governor Robert E. Smylie, who headed the 1959 delegation, has already invited business and industry leaders from every part of the state to accompany him to San Francisco.

The group will establish its headquarters at the St. Francis hotel, located in San Francisco's Union Square, and fan out from there to make face to face contacts with big businessmen. The California businessmen will be told that Idaho offers abundant water power, untapped natural resources, a stable labor market, plant site availability and employee recreational opportunities. They will be urged to consider establishing plants in Idaho which can utilize products from the state's agricultural, lumbering, agriculture, mining and forestry.

PRIMITIVE AREA CUTOFF TRAIL TAGGED FOR STUDY
The two-year cutoff trail tagging study on the Middle Fork of the Salmon river already is showing definite migration trends for fish and, in one instance, a trout traveled a distance of 131 miles, the state Fish and Game department said this week.

According to Director Ross Leonard three of the most pronounced were as follows:

1. A cutoff trail that had been tagged near Mahoney landing field in August, 1959, was recovered last July two miles below Sulphur creek, a distance of about 40 miles.

2. A Dolly Varden tagged at Stoddard creek last October was recovered July 8 south of Boyles ranch on Loon Creek.

3. A Dolly Varden tagged at Apatere Point a year ago was recovered at Torrey's cabins on the main Salmon river on July 22.

This is the second year that float trips on rubber rafts were made by department personnel down the Middle Fork through the heart of the Primitive Area for the purpose of tagging, measuring, and weighing trout.

Fisherman finding a tagged trout taken from the Middle Fork are urged to return it to the department. Fish are tagged in the same manner as waterfowl and big game—and for the same reasons.

When enough data has been taken through the tagging program to determine what vastly increased fishing pressure is doing to the cutoff trail, whatever steps appear to be necessary will be taken to perpetuate the resource, according to Leonard.

During one month last year, 92 boats carrying 572 sports fishermen floated down the Middle Fork. Two trips a month are made by department fisheries workers. Six trips were completed last year and ten or twelve are scheduled for this year.

RESCUE MISSION EARNS NAMPAN MAN DRIVING AWARD

A Nampa man, whose presence of mind and fast action saved the lives of two Utah residents, was named August Driver of the Month and was awarded a $100 savings account by the Idaho First National Bank's Nampa office.

E. H. Gunnell, Idaho State Police, who made the winning nomination, said William E. Poen, Jr. freed two travelers from a burning compact car that had crashed on a curve five miles north of McCammon.

Poen told the officer that the small car passed him at a speed of between 60 and 65 miles an hour and within a few minutes he saw dotted on a curve where the car had rolled over. The Nampa man stopped his vehicle to give assistance and almost at the same moment the wrecked car burst into flames which were spreading from the rear toward the front.

Both front doors of the small sedan were jammed and efforts to arouse the two stunned occupants were fruitless, Gunnell said. The head of the burning vehicle was pulled through an open window during which time his companion responded to Poen's shouts and was able to free himself on the opposite side of the burning vehicle.

In describing the incident, Poen said that it was learned neither of the occupants was seriously injured when they were taken to a Pocatello hospital for treatment of shock and minor cuts. Their car was totally destroyed by fire, he reported.

"Because of his actions which were verified by the occupants of the small car, I recommend Mr. Poen for the Safe Driving award," Gunnell said. "His fast action and quick thinking in addition to his bravery very possibly prevented Idaho from adding two more victims to the 1960 traffic fatality list," the officer concluded.

DEPARTMENTS ANSWERS

MANY QUERIES ON IDAHO
More than 21,000 pieces of literature were mailed from Boise during August to answer requests for information about Idaho, according to Department of Commerce and Development Secretary Louise Shadduck.

Miss Shadduck says information was mailed to students, libraries, travel clubs, teachers, tourists, newspapers, industrial development clubs, chambers of commerce, magazines, radio and television stations, researchers, colleges and legislators.

The Department answered 790 requests for Idaho information from people who saw magazine ads about the state's scenic and recreational attractions. Department-sponsored ads in national magazines include a coupon that can be mailed to Boise.

Miss Shadduck says that since 1955, the year the Department was set up, a total of 113,540 coupons has been mailed in by magazine readers who wanted brochures and leaflets about Idaho's vacation possibilities.

This year the Department spent $24,000 to advertise in Redbook, Holiday, Sunset, Field and Stream, Outdoor Life, Sports Field, Westways, National Geographic and the southern California edition of TV guide. In addition, a total of $7,540 was spent on ads in 16 metropolitan newspapers.

A grand total of 1,884, 120 pieces of Idaho promotional literature has been mailed from Boise since the Department was created.

A quarter of a century isn't long as time is figured, but in terms of human lives it can make an enormous difference. A case in point is the Social Security program which was enacted into law on August 14, 1935. In only 25 years it has become a basic part of our way of life.

FISH & GAME NEWS

Non-Resident Hunters
Contrary to the opinion of some letters writers and phone callers, the number of non-resident hunters who are hunting geese in Idaho this year amounted to only a fraction over three per cent of the total. Altogether, a total of 118 out-of-staters drew permits for controlled permits on moose, deer, mountain goat and elk. The total number allotted was 3,621. A breakdown of the total non-resident permits shows 14 moose, 10 goat, 20 goat and 45 elk. It is noteworthy that out-of-state applicants for controlled hunt permits must by non-resident big game hunting licenses before they may participate in the public drawings—and that $75 fee for the hunting license is not refunded even though they do not draw a permit. However, the non-resident license is a season's permit for general hunts on elk, deer, bighorn sheep, bear, upland game birds and migratory waterfowl. It also extends drawing privileges in all open waters in the state.

Waterfowl Regulations
Duck and goose regulations will be available to all migratory waterfowl hunters prior to the openings. The significant change this year is that the crucial "half hour before sunrise" beginning of shooting hours has been restored throughout both seasons. The standard rule opening on ducks. The date this year is October 11, and the season extends through January 8, 1961. Goose hunting starts on the from October 8 through January 8.

Hen Pheasants
Scattergunners also will have pheasant regulations before the season starts. For the first time in 15 years the hen pheasant will not be taboo in 17 counties across the southern half of the state during the last two days of the season. It has been known for years that seven out of every ten hen pheasants available during the fall of the year never make it to another hunting season, and that thousands of them legally would be timely salvage and put more birds in the bag. In some California areas where hen pheasant hunting has been permitted for nearly 20 years—and where the wild hen kill sometimes has exceeded the cock harvest—no measurable decrease in the overall pheasant population has occurred. Hunters are reminded that chilly nights for the past week or ten days may have caused many doves to flock and migrate southward. They also are reminded that department biologists want to examine as many dove wings as possible, and these can be brought or mailed to the Boise office—along with any leg bands that are recovered.

EDITORIALS NAME, PLEASE!

You might get the impression these days that to be "liberal" is all the rage, and that to be a "conservative" is to be obsolete. Few politicians would willingly put on the "conservative" tag, even though they may think and vote conservatively, because of the poor "image" it might create in the voters' mind.

It is a surprise, therefore, to run across a Gallup Poll in which voters were asked whether they consider themselves "liberals" or "conservatives" if they were named by these names instead of the familiar Republicans and Democrats.

Well, 66 per cent of the voters simply didn't know what a liberal or conservative was, and were excused from further quizzing. (Where have they been?)

The brighter 44 per cent were tabulated. Of these, 51 per cent said they were "conservatives," and 49 per cent "liberals." The majority simply didn't worry about what kind of image this gave them.

There was more to the Gallup report, because it broke down the results geographically. Only in the Northwest did the liberals outnumber the conservatives, 58 per cent to 42.

It might seem odd that the oldest and economically most mature section of the country should be in this respect.

The booming south was "conservative," 55 per cent to 45 per cent. The growing Midwest was 58 per cent conservative. And the rapidly expanding Far West was evenly divided.

This pretty well disposes of the notion that the liberals are found among the active up-to-date minute citizens and that the conservatives were the mossbacks.

Why haven't these figures been reflected lately in the elections? Perhaps it is because both parties have overestimated the popularity of the liberal label and too often the choice has been between a liberal Republican and a liberal Democrat, in which case the voters had to make up their minds on the basis of other factors.

Perhaps the signs to be discerned in this poll will encourage more conservatives to come out into the open and also give them a better chance of selection when the parties are picking tickets that "can win." (Twin Falls Times)

ANATOMY OF APATHY

An American Medical Association news release deals with the "anatomy of apathy."

It's about polio. It recalls the days of terrible epidemics, when victims were struck down on a mass scale. Then, in 1955, came the Salk vaccine which, when given in properly spaced shots, was 80 per cent effective against paralytic polio. In 1957, cases dropped to a low of 2,489.

Then, as the release puts it, "We all went to sleep." The number of paralytic polio cases has steadily increased. In some communities epidemics have appeared again.

Does this mean that the vaccine has failed? Dr. Alexander Langmuir, chief of epidemiology in the Government's Communicable Disease Center, has the answer to that question. He says: It's not a failure of the vaccine. It's a failure of the people to use it. Eighty per cent of the paralytic cases are in the unvaccinated or incompletely vaccinated group.

The vaccine is still 90 per cent effective. But that doesn't help the 85 million people who have failed to take advantage of it.

BABY-SITTING TRACTOR DRIVERS

"Don't Be a Baby-Sitting Tractor Driver!" That's the startling—and vitally important—title of an article by Dick Pfister, a farm safety specialist, which appeared in the July 15 issue of the Michigan Farmer.

Since 1950, he writes, more than two dozen pre-kindergarten age children in the single state of Michigan have died in tractor accidents—and so the total for the country as a whole must be horrifying. Of extreme significance, 3 times as many Michigan children under 5 years of age have been killed in farm tractor accidents as have men in such age groups as 20 to 24, 30 to 34, and 40 to 44. Many of the accidents involving young children occur when the child is riding in towed equipment.

Ten-year olds also have had a bad tractor record, with a mounting toll of injury and death. The overly-young tractor driver is definitely an accident-prone.

As Mr. Pfister sees it, "This farm accident problem calls for a family approach. Every member of the family should understand and recognize hazards, and help in finding ways to reduce or eliminate them.

The farm equipment people have given every effort to making their products safe. And they are safe, if properly used and maintained. But the makers can't control the users—and it's on the users that the ultimate responsibility falls.

YOUR Social Security?

increase in the cost of social security. The extra benefits would be going to people who were still working and earning, and who were the people who need it least.

Mr. Nussbaum pointed out that "social security is intended to be a foundation on which retirement plans can be built." In making your retirement plans, be sure to visit the social security office at Lewiston.

Do you know if your employer is reporting your wages for social security credit? Check with your local social security office.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Question—My wife and I receive combined social security checks. She expects to visit our daughter for several months and will be away from home. Can our check be divided and my wife's part be sent to her?

Answer—Yes, you can. Ask your wife to contact your social security office and arrangements will be made for her to receive a separate check at our daughter's address. However, she should be sure to notify the social security office when she returns home.

YOU MUST "RETIRE" TO GET RETIREMENT PAY

"Why do I have to quit work to get social security benefits?" This is a question the people at the Lewiston social security office hear every day. Many people wonder why social security doesn't make retirement payments regardless of work or earnings.

"The answer," says Mr. Nussbaum, district manager, "is that social security was designed to replace in part the income lost when you retire. If you do not quit working there is no lost income to replace." In other words, you must "retire" to get retirement benefits. Paying everyone at retirement age, whether they retired or not, would cause a big in-

Checking Stations Provide Fish and Game Information

By Marshall Edson
Each hunting season thousands of bird and big game hunters pass Fish and Game department checking stations as they head for favorite spots or when returning from a hunt. Most know all about such stations as they have been a familiar sight in Idaho for many years and hunters realize that "it's time to stop and check!"

Checking stations help the department obtain a great deal of valuable information which could not be obtained in any other way. One item of primary importance is the "face to face" contact which brings the hunter and department men together for a short time. This is when a large amount of detailed information is picked up at first hand. Sometimes the hunter has a question or problem. It usually includes specific information about game seen by the hunter and locations of birds or big game animals.

The exchange works both ways as hunters may be just entering a region and want up-to-date help on just where their best chances will be to bring home a fine buck deer or some quail or pheasant.

The checking station at Koskila is probably one of the busiest in the state. It processes hundreds of deer and elk hunters daily all through the big game season. As the famous Selway-Lochsa country is high on the list for elk, it is maintained around the clock in the busy parts of the season. Day and night the hunters pour through with always a stop to look at the big bulletin board at one end of the room. This contains messages from one party already on their way into camp, to the rest of the group following—notice of lost equipment—or calls for a hunter to return home at an earlier date than scheduled!

The information board has been of very real aid to many hunters in this area and now become an established part of the furniture and the operation of the station.

Management Aided
Management of wildlife is at best a complex and difficult problem most of the time. Anything we can do to simplify things and come up with reliable and accurate figures benefits the entire situation. Checking stations are a means to this end.

For example, a biologist who has been working on a deer problem in a certain area knows that portions of the range are "overstocked"—in other words, too many deer. The field man knows much of this from observing and measuring the use of the browse plants and counting animals on the ranges at different times of the year. He also tries to get the ratio of fawns to does to indicate condition of the herd.

But he also needs other information to make his forecast more accurate and to show the general public just what is taking place. Here's where the roadside checking station comes into the picture.

Reliable weights may be obtained and we know that deer from a properly stocked range will average as much as 20 pounds heavier than those from a poor range. This kind of comparison is easy to understand.

News of deer, elk, antelope and other animals may be examined at the station or taken for examination at a later date. This gives us excellent data on age structure of the herd. Blood samples may also be taken to check for disease.

The station is the best method of handling large numbers of animals or birds in a relatively short time. This in turn gives the department a chance to operate many stations only during the busy times of a hunting season. This is usually during weeks ends, holidays and opening dates in most areas. Operating expenses are greatly reduced by this system and final results are more adequate for statistical purposes.

One outstanding example of this is during the pheasant hunting season. Stations are established at a large number of locations the first two days. Fish and Game Department has the same places from year to year so that figures may be compared on a long term basis. This gives management accurate figures to present the "trend" in hunting results and provides excellent data for comparison over the years.

When this information is compiled for future reference it proves valuable, not only for reports of hunter success, but hunting areas and condition of animals, but it also establishes a base for future management work in Idaho.

The hunter report card attached to every big game animal tag is used to give the department answers as to total numbers taken, hunter success, sex ratio of the kill, date of kill, and areas where kills are made. Hunters are urged to make sure their cards are mailed to the department regarding whether a kill is made or not.

Idaho hunters have taken an average of 70 thousand deer and 15 thousand elk each year for several years. Checking stations usually handle about 15 thousand deer and close to 5 thousand elk a year. In addition smaller numbers of bear, antelope, goats, sheep and moose are scanned on their way to the hunter's locker.

As a result we learn that about two-thirds of the total deer kill is made on weekends with most of this on the opening days. We have found that lightly hunted areas yield more old deer. Weighing animals has shown us that deer of good range weigh more and raise more young than deer from poor range regions. We have found that antler growth is better on good range. Checking thousands of deer show that in most areas the hunters take deer which are better than last year it ran around 67 per cent bucks.

Slow—Checking Station Aided
This fall hunters will once again see signs warning the driver to slow down and prepare to stop at a checking station. This is required by law when the station is on the hunter's route of travel—and failure to comply with the regulation has resulted in a number of fines and arrests.

We all know that once the mighty hunter has loaded his deer or gotten his limit of birds, he is in a big hurry to get home. But Fish and Game department checking stations are necessary to modern management operations and give the hunter the most help in the long run.

So it pays to stop and help out with game management in Idaho. When the line is long at the end of the day it takes patience and understanding to comply readily with the regulations and answer a few questions by the men at the station. But it's worthwhile when we need the answers to some of the tough management problems of today.

Idaho Riding Group Performs In Calif.

The Canyon County Sheriff's Posse which appeared at the California State Fair and Exposition in Sacramento Saturday, September 10, was named the Idaho Promoter of the Week Wednesday by Governor Robert E. Smylie and the Department of Commerce and Development.

The 13-year-old group performed fast precision drills and parade maneuvers during the special Idaho day activities at Sacramento's sprawling fairgrounds. The Idaho Promoter award, the first of its kind to be made, came in recognition of the publicity the posse had brought to the state. Similar awards will be made in the future to individuals and to groups in Idaho who help publicize and promote the state.

During the posse's performance, special Idaho brochures and maps were distributed throughout the grand stands. Gift boxes of Idaho products were also given away.

Forty banners carrying the message, "The Place to go is Idaho," were attached to both sides of the group's horse trailers, assuring the posse plenty of notice on their way to and from the fair.

In connection with the posse's appearance, Smylie sent a telegram to California Governor Edmund G. (Pat) Brown which noted that groups like the Canyon County Sheriff's Posse keep alive the traditions and heritage of former western days.

Organized in the fall of 1947, the Canyon county group has also appeared in exhibition drills at Las Vegas, Reno and Elko, Nevada, the Pendleton Roundup and at rodeos throughout Idaho and Oregon. A trophy case in the sheriff's office in Caldwell is filled with trophies awarded for the group's drills and maneuvers.

FEW DELINQUENTS AMONG APPRENTICE RANKS

(Reprint of an article by Lloyd A. Williams, Pocatello, Idaho)

According to recent FBI reports, robberies, assaults, mugging and other crimes of violence are increasing. Even larger proportions of these crimes are being committed by youngsters under 21 years of age. Much has been said regarding the cause of this increase in juvenile crime. Broken homes, poor environment, poor housing, etc. have been listed as some of the primary reasons for juvenile delinquency. There is no doubt that they have contributed to the problem, but, in view of the fact that such few apprentices in this group become juvenile delinquents, it appears very likely that lack of faith in the future might be a prime factor.

The young man who is learning a trade through apprenticeship has a definite objective. He is assured that if he complies with the terms and conditions of his apprenticeship agreement, he will be recognized as a craftsman in a specified period of time. He knows that his services will be in demand. He knows that he will be able to accept responsibilities required of a craftsman, a good citizen, and future head of a household.

During his apprenticeship, an apprentice learns self-discipline. To become a qualified craftsman, it takes a perseverance and patience, as well as intelligence and mechanical ability. During his apprenticeship a young fellow has little time, nor the desire, to roam streets or run in lawless gangs. In view of the practically non-existent delinquency rate amongst apprentices, it is obvious that the apprentice system not only provides skilled craftsmen for our fast expanding economy, but also does a great deal toward training our youth to accept responsibility and be better citizens.

Report from the GOVERNOR

Idaho's Boom in Processed Potatoes

A recent market report by Elliot Marple tells the story of Idaho's potato processing industry and illustrates once again the value of this great diversification program.

"A new surge of expansion runs through the Pacific Northwest's fast-growing industry, the processing of potatoes. This industry, centered in south Idaho, turns out prepared potatoes ready to heat and serve. Some products are frozen, such as French fries, patties, and hash-browns; others are cooked and dehydrated flakes or granules, such as make instant mashed potatoes.

"Some idea of growth may be gained from this: the quantity of Idaho potatoes that has gone into frozen or dehydrated products during the 1959 season has set a new record in excess of 12-million hundred-pound sacks. This is up 27 per cent in a year. The total frozen or dehydrated almost doubled in two years and more than quadrupled in four years. Plant expansion now under way or scheduled will increase present capacity by more than half.

"During the past year frozen potatoes displaced peas as the nation's leading frozen vegetable, and two-thirds of all U. S. frozen potatoes come from Idaho. Use of frozen potatoes by housewives is up sharply, but even larger gains have been made in the so-called institutional market—restaurants, hotels and other large food servers. Also, in the past two years dehydrated instant mashed potatoes have found big acceptance. Virtually every major national advertiser brand now buys dehydrated potatoes in Idaho.

"Idaho is far and away the leading state in potato processing, just as two years ago it pushed Maine out of the top spot in potato growing. Idaho considers its potatoes clearly superior in flavor and texture. Research men point out that the Idaho potato runs about 22 1/2 per cent solids, compared with only 16 to 19 per cent in Maine, and that counts in dehydration.

"Major expansion is by present leaders. Simplot is completing a mammoth plant at Heyburn that will pack fresh, frozen and dehydrated potatoes in what is regarded as the largest potato processing plant in the nation. Ore-Ida is building a $2-million plant at Burley for frozen and dehydrated potatoes that will more than match in size its Ontario plant, which employs 1,800. Rogers has broken ground for a $950,000 plant at Rossburg and is now doubling the plant's original capacity. Idaho Potato Growers, Inc., is erecting a French-fry plant at Aberdeen, Ball Bros, has a smaller plant coming at Lewisville.

"The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company is considering a plant at Burley. Lamb-Weston Company, Weston, Oregon, which produces 12 per cent of the nation's frozen peas, has been preparing for two years to go into frozen potatoes and has a

RABBIT HOUNDS

By Bob Bartos

Manager, Frisbee Research Kennels

Those who follow the cotton-tail trail constitute the largest single group of hunters in the country today.

This large group has two breeds of dogs, both rabbit specialists, from which to pick a partner. There's the beagle, America's number one sporting dog, and the basset hound, which each year climbs a little further up the ladder of popularity.

Both breeds have many personality traits in common. They are both merry dogs with happy dispositions; they're good with children and make good house pets.

Typical hound coloring, black, brown and white, and both have the typical hound's unappreciated nose for the scent of game, and that never-say-die spirit when on the trail.

The way they work differs, however, and the difference stems from the build of the dogs.

The beagle is a sturdy, squarish dog that comes in two standard sizes; those that stand 13 inches or less, and a slightly larger edition standing less than 15 inches.

He weighs under 35 pounds, has amazing stamina and can, when in shape, run six to eight hours a day.

The basset, on the other hand, is long and low slung with short handled legs. He can weigh up to 80 pounds.

Because of his general shape, he's a slow worker and may tire long before a beagle. He's ideal for the older hunter or those who like to work slowly and keep their hound in shape.

Many a hunter runs both a beagle and basset because of the beagle's speed and the basset's deep and resonant basso, it's a sound one never forgets.

Feeding Tip: When your dog is hunting and using a lot of energy, be sure he's getting enough fat in his diet. Safest and easiest way to do this is to feed him a top quality prepared dog food such as Friskies which contains the proper amount of fat.

BEAR LIVE-TRAPPING, TAGGING PROGRAM UNDERWAY

The old song, "The Bear Went Over the Mountain" may have to be modified one of these days in Idaho.

The new version might be, "Bear No. 2561 (or whatever) Went Over the Mountain To See What He Could See."

Special numbers on ear-tags have been awarded five big black bears already this summer in north Idaho.

The trapping, tagging and releasing of the "beast that walks like a man" was successful, according to the state Fish and Game department.

Researchers, headed by Ray M. Rogers, Coeur d'Alene game biologist, explain the prying with the admission that too little is known about bears. They want to find out how large a roaming area the bears require and information about their breeding ages, frequency, litter size, infant mortality and other vital statistics.

After being live-trapped, the bears were injected with a muscle relaxant that prevented them from moving while workers attached the tags and otherwise marked them for future identification.

The injections kept the bears in a tranquil state for about 20 minutes.

Ross Leonard, department director, explained that a similar program is underway in Montana to help keep tabs on the more ferocious grizzly bear species, now almost extinct in most states except Alaska and parts of Canada.

The black bear is regaining much of its early-day popularity with Idaho big game hunters. The annual average kill in this state is about 2,500.

The disability provisions of the social security law are to provide protection against loss of earnings caused by permanent and total inability to engage in substantial gainful activity.

IDAHO MINING INDUSTRY 100 YEARS OLD

Attention to the fact that the Idaho mining industry is 100 years old this year is made in a new Idaho Bureau of Mines and Geology information circular entitled "The Role of Mining in the Economic Development of Idaho Territory."

"This year, and in the next few years, many communities in Idaho will celebrate their 100th birthday. With few exceptions, these towns were founded and grew as mining communities or as supply centers for mining areas," said Dr. E. P. Chubb, dean of the University of Idaho College of Mines and director of the Idaho Bureau of Mines and Geology.

"The role of mining in the economic development of the Idaho Territory is so well portrayed by Dr. August C. Bolino in his article published in the Oregon Historical Quarterly, that we have reprinted it along with an excerpt on the history and status of mining in the Territory, from 'Idaho' by James E. O'Connell, printed in 1887," said Dr. Cook.

The turmoil and adventure of early day history and make good reading, he added. But, the importance of the early mining activity to Idaho lies not in its glamour, but in the fact that mining brought to Idaho the essential and requirements for rapid and sustained economic growth.

The circular may be obtained free by writing the Idaho Bureau of Mines and Geology, University of Idaho, Moscow, Idaho.

When a disabled worker's disability insurance benefits are stopped, his dependent's benefits also stop.

Report from the GOVERNOR

"We Need Hot War Dedication To Win The Cold War"

There crossed my desk the other day a speech by one of America's industrial leaders which is worth careful reading. It has much to say about our security and survival as a Nation. It impressed me deeply and I'd like to share it.

"The collapse of the summit talks in Paris was a painful jolt, but it had the unexpected benefit of throwing into focus some stony facts about the cold war. The withdrawal of Khrushchev and his subsequent vilification of the United States reminded us that we are living in a world in which we share a balance of power with Communist societies dedicated to the destruction of our way of life; societies ruthlessly centralized and united by a clear dividing purpose."

"We don't know why the lion chose to roar just as we were about to sit down to dinner with him, but it was a reminder that we might be intended as the main course."

"Some very highly respected opinion feels that the Communist bloc withdrew from the summit meeting at the pressing insistence of the emerging Chinese Communist nation."

Local Man Hurt When Auto Hits Power Line Pole
Vernon Studer, 28, of Genesee received cuts and bruises on his face and a bad cut on his right leg when his automobile struck a power pole in front of the Gus Pickens home between 8:00 and 8:30 Tuesday evening. Studer, who was returning from Pullman, apparently went to sleep at the attention of local residents who veered off the highway and smashed directly into the pole. The crash inflicted cuts and bruises on his face when he was thrown against the windshield of the car, breaking it out. His right leg was also badly gashed. He was alone at the time of the mishap. He was taken to the Grifflin hospital in Moscow for treatment and observation and was able to return home Wednesday evening.

City Marshall Henry Kinzer investigated the accident. Studer, who has employment with the United Paying Co. in Pullman, lives with his wife and children in the former Ed. Putnam home.

Twice a Year Migrations of Some Birds Described as Unsolved Mystery

By Jim Humbird Idaho Fish and Game Department Although it has been a long time since anyone proposed sending a man into outer space by harnessing a flock of birds to the right kind of vehicle, the puzzle wrapped in an enigma still persists as trying to explain the twice a year migrations of some feathered creatures.

Much is to be learned about the whys and hows of these phenomena. Birdbanding and other studies over the past 30 years have produced some solid facts about the spring-fall behavior of migratory species—and some high-frown theories.

It can be proved, for example, that birds do not winter on the moon, as once was believed. Neither are they transformed into fishes until spring.

Perhaps even more remarkable than oldtime ideas are present-day records showing what actually does happen, if not how or why. One case is that of a pintail duck banded in eastern Idaho and recovered in Siberia. Hummingbirds have enough flight power to cross the Gulf of Mexico, a distance of about 500 miles. Arctic terns fly every year an estimated distance of 25,000 miles, almost pole to pole.

While many flights of birds easily may be observed by anyone during daylight hours, others cruise at elevations too high to be seen or heard and thousands more migrate at night. The lowly cost of mud hen is known to migrate almost entirely at night. Two coots banded at Hamer in east Idaho in October, 1953, were shot by hunters exactly two weeks later in San Francisco bay.

Parts of the age-old journeys under cover of darkness now are observed by pointing telescopes at the moon and watching passing objects fleetingly silhouetted against its illuminated face. Some 25,000 people believe this is a sensible question: would you rather trust the judgment of one man, who may be prejudiced, or trust a jury? Well, our free enterprise system depends upon the judgment of millions of active Americans. Still, a few politicians and a few neighbors, want to get rid of our free enterprise system and turn the important work of the nation over to big government, with a small group in control. When somebody talks to you about government control, ask what you gain and then mention what we may lose.

On a typical day, 13 million workers enjoy a morning coffee break, another 4 million had one in the afternoon and 10 million had morning and afternoon coffee breaks. Employees are not greatly abused these days. The big question is how can business persuade employees to work harder to preserve their jobs, for in June, 1960, businesses valued at $126,000,000 went broke.

One small child wanders into the woods and the entire community turns out to save a life, yet in 1959, 37,000 people were killed on our highways, and 1,500,000 were injured in traffic accidents. What do we do about it? Very little.

Voters, it has been found, rarely mention the electric power issue as a reason for preferring one candidate over another, for 2% or 3%, seldom more. The public generally is satisfied with private enterprise, good service, low rates and progressiveness. We can only conclude that the politician who shouts for public power has his own private axe to grind. He does not represent the people. Either he leans to the right, toward socialism, or he has a grudge, or he seeks power.

Our system of free elections doesn't come for nothing, we are reminded. Over 500,000 public offices from President to garbage man take organization and money. In 1955, $185,000,000 was spent on elections. Now comes 1960.

CHURCH WANTS REVIEW OF FARM LOAN SITUATION

Senator Frank Church has urged the Department of Agriculture to conduct an immediate review of the entire lending policies of the Farmers Home Administration.

Church wrote Agriculture Secretary Ezra Taft Benson that he believed there is a "genuine need for changing regulations to grant loans which would be reliable farmers who wish to keep their farms and still take part-time employment elsewhere."

Church said the Department's Agriculture Marketing Report for August of this year listed the average net income per Idaho farm in 1952 as $8906, with a drop to $3142 in 1959.

YOUR Social Security? QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Question—My husband passed away about 10 years ago. Would waiting until I'm 65 make it possible for me to receive a greater amount of social security than at 62? I'm not working at the present, and haven't worked long enough to qualify for any social security on my own account.

Answer—Waiting until 65 to file for widow's social security will gain you nothing. The amount of the widow's payment is three-fourths of what the husband would have been eligible to receive. And, this three-fourths is paid at the age of 62—there is no reduction. If you're over the age of 62, we'd like to suggest that you contact your social security office immediately and file your application. You should bring your husband's social security number with you, a certified copy of your marriage certificate and some document to establish your age or date of birth.

SAVINGS BOND REPORT FROM COUNTY CHAIRMAN Sales of E and H Savings Bonds during August maintained the upward trend in bond sales for Idaho, according to figures received here by County Chairman A.C. Anderson.

County sales for August totaled $16,455 compared to $20,009 for the same month a year ago. "State sales came to $710,535 as compared with $492,000 for August, 1959. This is an increase of more than $44 per cent," he pointed out. Sales for the first eight months of the year throughout the state were $6,013,849 against $5,238,327 for the same period in 1959.

"Since 1941," he continued, "Savings Bonds have played an important part in the savings habits of Americans who today own more than $42 1/2 billion in E and H bonds. Industrial and business firms are performing an invaluable service by making the payroll savings plan available to their employees as an easy, automatic way to save. "Over the years banks in this state and throughout the nation have not only sold bonds as a regular day-to-day service, but have also generated interest in bonds through messages to their depositors. All forms of media have contributed valuable advertising space to the bond program and have provided the public with important information on bonds.

Mrs. America Partial To Pastry

"We like to do everything together." Those words sum up the spirit that prevails in the household of Mrs. (Rosemary) Murphy, the Kentland, Indiana mother of five children whose home-making skills captivated her to national fame last June as the nation's number one homemaker, Mrs. America of 1961.

Mrs. Murphy, 32, won the coveted crown in Ft. Lauderdale, Florida, competing as Mrs. Indiana with finalists from every state and the District of Columbia. "With five children," says the tall, dark-haired queen of homemaking, "we have had to learn to do it ourselves in work, play and family living."

During a recent visit to Whirlpool Corp. in St. Joseph, Mich., Mrs. Murphy had occasion to spend considerable time in the firm's home service kitchen. Here, under the direction of the manager Virginia Van Nostrand, new RCA Whirlpool appliances are put through a series of performance tests designed to supply useful suggestions for eventual users.

It was in this setting that Rosemary revealed her favorite pastry recipe—grapefruit cake—the recipe she used, incidentally, in her successful quest of the Mrs. America crown in Ft. Lauderdale. Her preparation time in the baking Mrs. America said, is about 25 minutes.

Blank-Spaulding Wedding Rites in California Ceremony

On Saturday, September 17th at 2:00 P. M., Inez Black and James Spaulding were united in marriage at Lakeside Presbyterian Church in San Francisco, by the Reverend Doctor Clarke Neal Edwards. Inez was radiant in a traditional gown of re-embroidered alonca lace and taffeta, with a chapel length train. Her illusion veil fell from a lace pill box trimmed with seed-pearls and her bridal bouquet cascaded from a white satin Bible. The bridal bouquet consisted of phalaenopsis orchids, lily of the valley and stephanotis.

Miss Ida Louise Black was her sister's maid of honor and her youngest sister, Irene and Mr. Richard Bragg were bridesmaids. Miss Susan Kalman was a junior bridesmaid. Their dresses were mint green, chiffon over taffeta, and they carried birds of paradise tied with matching ribbon. Miss Janet and Master Sterling Gillman, the children of Mr. and Mrs. Sterling Gillman of Salt Lake City were the flower girl and ring bearer, respectively. Mrs. Gillman will be remembered as the daughter of the Reverend Doctor and the late Mrs. E. M. Hegge. Dr. Hegge was pastor of the Valley Lutheran Church. Janet wore a dress of the same material as the bridesmaids and carried a bouquet of orange carnations, and the little ring bearer wore a grey flannel Eton suit and carried the customary white satin pillow.

Mr. Emery Cooper of San Francisco was Jim's best man and the ushers were Mr. Donald Carlson and Mr. Tim Bell of Palo Alto and Mr. John Badtcher of San Francisco.

The white carpet down which Inez walked on the arm of her father, was marked on either side by tall urns holding white stalk. On either side of the chancel were four large standards of white gladiolus while on the communion table were two baskets of large, white chrysanthemums.

The double-ring ceremony was preceded by two vocal selections. Mr. Harry Krizan sang "I Love You," and "O Perfect Love" and as a part of the ceremony he sang, "The Lords Prayer."

Mrs. Black selected for her daughters wedding, a dark brown peau de soie sheath dress, a matching hat and dark brown accessories. Her corsage was of green and white cypripedium orchids.

Mrs. Spaulding chose a beige lace and taffeta sheath and wore green cymbidium orchids.

Immediately following the ceremony, a sit-down buffet was served at Robert's-at-the-Beach. The bridal table was decorated with silver candelabra and two low center pieces of white gladiolus and white chrysanthemums. The buffet table was decorated in white; with tall silver epergnes of white gladiolus, (silver candelabra), and the individual tables had center pieces of yellow and white. In back of the buffet table and the reception line were huge baskets of magnolia leaves and large magnolia blossoms.

For their first waltz, Jim and Inez selected Cole Porter's "True Love," and the orchestra kept the theme of the dance music Hawaiian for the remainder of the evening was Mrs. Spaulding.

Upon their return they will make their home at the Coronada Apartments in Westlake.

Inez will be remembered as the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Al Mayer.

Genesee high school played their first grid game of the season away from home last Friday, September 23, as they met the Pierce Foresters on the Pierce field and were barely able to edge by the host team 6-0 for their third win of the season.

The Bulldogs, got their lone, unconverted touchdown in the first quarter, but with some fine defensive play, were able to make it good enough for a win. The score came on a 14-yard pass play from quarterback Bill Magee to halfback Boyd Hillman.

Following the scoring play, both teams moved the ball into scoring position several times during the game but neither could break through for any points. Pierce had the ball down on the Genesee seven-yard line with two minutes left in the game, but Genesee held.

Controlled Hunts

Because of great public interest in scheduled deer and elk controlled hunts which have been opened to general hunting this fall because they did not draw sufficient applications to match the number of permits available, the record is as follows: Elk Hunt No. 202 on the South Fork of the Payette river (all of Management Unit No. 35) drew 11 and sufficient applications and will be open to general hunting from October 1 through November 13.

Deer Hunt No. 101, 102 and 103 drew insufficient applications and will be opened to general deer hunting. These are on the South Fork of the Payette river (Unit 35), North Soldier Mountain (Unit 43) and South Soldier Mountain (Unit 44).

Hunt No. 101 will be open to split general deer seasons October 1 thru November 13, and December 1 thru December 18, or until 1,500 deer are checked from units 33 and 35 combined.

Hunts No. 102 and 103 will be open to general deer hunting from Oct. 15 through November 20, and from Oct. 22 through November 13, respectively.

Wild Meat Care The department has sent printed information leaflets to license vendors to help the novice take care of his game meat in the field. Much other information on the subject is available in any library for anyone willing to take the time to look it up and read it.

More Big Game Hunting Twenty-two additional big game management units will be opened for general elk and deer hunting seasons beginning at daylight Saturday, Oct. 1. In general these cluster about the foothills of the Primitive area, which already is open, and the Hell's Canyon region of the mid-Snake river.

IDAHO MOUNTAIN GOAT HERDS PROVIDE UNIQUE GAME HUNTS

Recent successes in an undertaking to live-trap mountain goat in the state's rugged interior and transplant them to the Lake Pend Oreille country of north Idaho points up the popularity of this big game animal.

Although less than 2,000 mountain goat have been taken by hunters in Idaho since 1927, the rugged animal with the ebony horns remains popular with trophy seekers in many parts of the world.

Idaho shares native populations of this unique game animal with only two other states, Montana and Washington, although others have imported a few specimens as "show pieces", according to Ross Leonard, Idaho Fish and Game director.

In fact, a Denver newspaper recently headlined: "Colorado Gets Idaho's Goat By Giving It 'The Bird'". The story dealt with a swap of Idaho goat for wild turkeys.

Recent studies show Idaho's goat population to be about 2,800, with approximately 40 per cent of them in the Salmon river watershed and another 30 per cent in the Clearwater. The balance live mainly in the Pioneer range, the South Fork of the Payette and Upper Boise rivers, and the Selkirk and Cabinet mountains of north Idaho.

The goat was one of the last big game species in Idaho to have hunting restrictions established for its protection. In 1893, the State Legislature prohibited the killing of mountain goat until September, 1897. Thereafter, seasons ranged from September, 1897, however, no bag limit was established until 1899, when only four could be taken. This was reduced to one per hunter in 1905. The license fee as late as 1903 was $1.

Since that time there have been a variety of hunting seasons, with

HUNTERS ADVISED HOW TO HUNT BY G GAME TAGS

Fish and Game Director Ross Leonard called on all hunters to be sure they tag their big game animals at the time the kill is made.

He listed the following things a hunter must remember in validating his game tag and legally claiming his kill.

The hunter must carry at all times in the field the proper hunting license permit (if necessary) and tag for the hunt in which he is participating.

Tough fabric tags are issued for all big game animals except bear. At the time of kill, the hunter must punch the game tag in three places to show the month and day the animal was bagged and its sex (buck, doe or fawn, for example, in the case of deer).

At the time of kill, the hunter must fasten the punched or validated tag to the carcass, preferably inside the rib cage or hock. This can be done with the wire provided for that purpose or by any other means.

The hunter cannot legally transport any big game animal except bear at any time if the carcass is not properly tagged. This includes transportation by foot, horseback, vehicle, as well as possession in camp, on the road or at home.

The law further provides that the tag accompany the carcass to the locker, or wherever it is processed.

A conviction for a traffic violation in another state will probably appear on your Idaho driving record. Conviction reports are being exchanged with other states using the demerit or point system for drivers.

The first controlled hunt held in 1952. Both controlled and general goat hunting seasons have been held since 1956, mainly in September.

AFTERWHILE

Afterwhile I'll take the dreams I have been haunting And link them in a lovely golden chain: And everything I do will be rewarding When skies of baby-blue return again.

Yes—"That'll Be The Day"—I will remember When I have won success and made my pile; I'll bring this old world— ROSES IN DECEMBER.

Ratios and percentages are used in analyzing Idaho's traffic crashes and highway fatalities.

Did you know that one driver can boost the death toll 5 or 6 per cent in a fraction of a second? Don't be that one driver who does it.

Never argue about the "right of way". The two it takes to make the argument can suddenly make ten wind up in the hospital or the cemetery.

Not tomorrow — Not today — but — AFTERWHILE. —Bert Gamble

IDAHO POTATOES DONATED TO MEDICAL VESSEL, SS HOPE

A shipment of 230 bags of Idaho potatoes contributed to 'Project Hope' by the Idaho Potato and Onion Commission, in its way to San Francisco, according to Stanley J. Tenhaile, State Commissioner of Agriculture and Commission chairman.

The potato will be used on the S. S. Hope, a completely equipped hospital ship which is scheduled to visit South Pacific and Asian ports as part of the President's "people to people" program of international good will.

'Project Hope' is aimed specifically at teaching and promoting medical techniques and health practices in areas where trained medical men are scarce and widespread illiteracy impedes the spread of information.

The hospital ship will be staffed by American doctors, nurses and medical technicians on a rotating basis. They will work in the port cities and in the interior areas using the ship as a base of operations.

The request for the potatoes was forwarded to the Idaho Commission from the National Potato Council. Tenhaile explained that Idaho potatoes in other forms will be on the S. S. Hope as well. Primarily dehydrated products, they are being contributed by processors thru their industry organization.

'Project Hope' has received invitations from the medical professions in Indonesia, Korea, Vietnam, Okinawa, Pakistan and other countries, it is reported.

Report from the GOVERNOR

"Centennial Commission Submits Plans"

Idaho's Centennial Commission has virtually completed its plan for the 100th anniversary of Idaho's admission to the Union. The formal presentation will be made to the Legislature when it convenes in January.

The Centennial Commission was organized by the board of business and economic research, a division of the University of Idaho College of Business Administration.

The handbook has been compiled for the purpose of making comparisons in highway economics sponsored by the Idaho department of highways and the U. S. bureau of public roads."

Norman Nybrotten, associate director of the bureau of business and economic research, a division of the University of Idaho College of Business Administration.

The handbook has been compiled for the purpose of making comparisons in highway economics sponsored by the Idaho department of highways and the U. S. bureau of public roads."

Existing attractions such as fairs, rodeos, stampedes, etc. will be augmented and nationally advertised. Maximum personal participation by Idaho's people is encouraged.

Our leading economic interests such as agricultural, lumbering and mining will receive extra attention and so will our cultural, religious and social institutions.

A thirty minute historic film, suitable for exhibition in Idaho and on national television, will be prepared which tells the Idaho story from the days of David Thompson and the Messrs. Lewis and Clark right down to the present. The script for this film has already been written by Ted E. Jennings, an old Idaho hand who is now a famed script writer in the motion picture industry.

We hope that a nationally famous composer will be selected to prepare the accompanying music.

"Caravan of History" will tour the State during 1963 in order to bring the heritage and history of Idaho to our school children and the general public.

It is hoped that the Legislature can convene for its opening session at Lewiston in 1963 to commemorate the fact that our first Capitol and first Legislature were located there.

An historical pageant will be produced at several places in the State and have its big showing in Boise. This will be an outdoor show and looks most entertaining.

Sports events such as the Diamond Cup Hydroplane races, the University-State College football game and perhaps the All American Rodeo finals will be specially spotlighted.

Mr. and Mrs. Arwin Norby of Moscow spent Sunday evening with Mrs. Lilly Larson and Elmo.

PROPER CARE OF GAME MEAT IS ESSENTIAL TO GOOD EATING

"I've never skinned an elk or deer, I hope I never skin one; But this I'll tell you now and here, I'd rather have skinned than been one."

So says Miss Barbara Brantthover, 105 pounds with a suitcase in her hand and nutrition specialist for the Agricultural Extension Service of the University of Idaho.

"But if I did skin a deer in one of Idaho's forests," continues the diminutive Miss Brantthover, "I would know how to keep the meat in the best condition, and I'd take care to do so if I expected to feed it to friends when I got it home."

And the nutritionist knows whereof she speaks. She says the first thing to do after the animal is bled and dressed out (carefully, mind you) is to hang the carcass where it can cool off as quickly as possible. It will cool on the ground if the body cavity is propped open and the flies are kept away. Branches or small logs under the carcass where it can ground which may be too warm and allow the air to circulate all around it.

The honored custom of dragging a deer carcass a few miles through alternate patches of dusty brush and swampy mudholes, is a thing to be deplored by the better class of sportsmen. Miss Brantthover insists, "He who has the proper respect for good venison carries meat sacks in his pack or at least has them handy in camp. And a pack-board. Rather than dragging the carcass to the good hunting quarters it as soon as it is cooled out well, drops each quarter in a sack tied firmly to his pack-board, and heads back to camp with the swinging step of the conqueror. No flies, no dirt, a reasonable load even if two trips are necessary. And the meat is such that wives can be safely asked to cook it and friends invited to eat."

DO YOU KNOW

The company I work for is again under the gun. Twice already PUDs have failed to establish themselves in Asotin County, the 1950 election being defeated nearly 6 to 1. But now, another PUD election is scheduled for November. They never give up. Three commissioners, if elected, have power under the law to condemn private property, go into debt, raise rates, and levy a two-mill tax to pay for their mistakes, and neither state or federal regulatory agencies have any say in the matter. That is more power than has the President of the United States. This PUD law, enacted in the depression year of 1929, is a dangerous thing and should be repealed.

Don't worry about traffic noise. Americans have record players in 64 per cent of their homes, TV sets in 90 per cent, and radios in 96 per cent. With some of them going all the time, silence is a lost art.

It is reported that about 90 per cent of all new homes with natural gas available will enjoy gas heat this winter. If your old furnace must be replaced, by all means ask about gas heat — clean, economical, carefree. A conversion unit can usually be installed in one day's time.

Suppose you owned a grocery store, and next door stood another grocery store. You paid 23 cents of each revenue dollar for taxes; the other fellow paid less than seven cents. You'll admit the other fellow could undersell you, and that's the way it stands with PUDs — they pay not one penny federal income tax and only two per cent tax on gross revenue in lieu of property taxes. What a break!

90 IDAHOANS GETTING READY FOR CALIFORNIA TRIP

A total of 90 Idahoans has already signed up to go to California next month to help publicize the Gem State's industrial potential, according to a report from the Department of Commerce and Development.

Louise Shaddock, Department Secretary, says the list of those who want to take part in the October 17 to 19 trip to San Francisco includes bankers, businessmen, college officials, salesmen, executives, chamber of commerce officials, farmers and economists. Comparing this year's San Francisco trip with a similar trip to Los Angeles in October, 1959, Miss Shaddock says, "We have about twice as many signed up to go now as we had at this time last year, indicating that more Idahoans are becoming personally interested in working to publicize and promote the state's very real industrial future."

Sponsored by the Department in cooperation with Gov. Robert E. Smylie, local chambers of commerce, area industrial development groups and Idaho business, educational, industrial and civic leaders, the trip is designed to publicize the fact that Idaho welcomes industries, particularly those which can extract, process or ship products from the state's farms, forests and mines or those that can supply and service the extractors, processors and shippers.

Members of the delegation will fan out across the San Francisco bay area to make face calls on a select group of industrialists and businessmen. Each Idahoan will be provided with facts and figures about Idaho's economy so that he can give sound information and answer all questions. Miss Shaddock says every corner of the state will be represented on the trip. "This is certainly not a prospect for just one section of Idaho. The people who are planning to go come from every major area of our state."

YOUR Social Security QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Question—
Do I need to bring in my citizenship papers when I file my application for social security payments?
Answer—
American citizenship is not a requirement for eligibility for social security benefits. The only proofs you ordinarily need when you call to your application is proof of your date of birth and your last year's tax return.

She also says that enthusiasm is running high among those who say they're going. "Not only is everyone enthused, but they all have the feeling that they're going to be working for the good of the state, not just their area," she says.

T. F. (Tommy) Terrell, newly-appointed Director of Pocatello's Economic Development Program, is one of the many Idaho business leaders who backs up Miss Shaddock's statement that the delegation members will be working for the good of the state.

"There's a tremendous amount the 15 people in Pocatello who are going. Certainly we're all concerned about our area, but we want to lend our efforts toward full cooperation with the state and other industrial groups throughout Idaho on this San Francisco trip," he says.

Delegation members will pay their own expenses, including those for transportation, meals and lodging.

FISH AND GAME DEPARTMENT EFFORTS TO LIVE-TRAP MOUNTAIN GOAT

Trapped goats were blindfolded, tied and given tranquilizer shots to prevent self-injury—then transported by helicopter. Mountain goat populations were native to the Pend Oreille Lake region in the vicinity of Echo Bay prior to being wiped out by forest fires early this century, and the department is working toward reestablishment of the herds.

Idaho Joins Other In Opening Goose Season 4 Days Ahead of Ducks

By Ross Leonard, Director Idaho Fish and Game Department

It seems to me that the following reply to a petition from Shoshone county sportsmen objecting to the early opening of goose season ahead of ducks is of statewide interest and I'm pleased, therefore, for the opportunity to present the reasons to newspaper readers.

The petitioners urged that the regulations be changed to open the duck and goose season on the same day because earlier goose shooting "greatly reduces the chance for reasonably good early season duck shooting for the majority of waterfowl hunters concerned."

The Fish and Game Commission has the prerogative for establishing seasons and regulations for waterfowl within the framework outlined by the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service. In fact, even the Commission has little latitude in the establishment of seasons for the taking of migratory waterfowl. It is true that the Commission could have eliminated four days from the goose season and opened it on the same day that the duck season opens. However, you will note that the pheasant season opens in the Panhandle region on October 8 the same day that the goose season is scheduled to open. This should enable hunters to participate in the pheasant hunt and the goose opener on the same hunting expedition in some sectors of the Panhandle.

It is the objective of the Commission to provide as much hunting for the sportsman as the resource will stand and still be perpetuated in abundance. We have always favored as long a season as possible in the State of Idaho because of the difference in topography, geography and climatic conditions in different parts of our state. For instance, the sportsmen in southeastern Idaho have consistently requested a much earlier

Idaho requires an early season if they are going to have any shooting because as soon as the cold weather sets in, the waterfowl move out. Our information from checking stations and hunter questionnaires indicates that the best shooting in the Panhandle region is on the opening and then during the middle of the season or month of November.

In establishing regulations the Commission endeavors to take into consideration all available information from all of the users of the resource in addition to hunters, sportsmen, conservation officers, biologists and all who are interested in the proper management of the resource in order to insure adequate hunting not only for the present but for the future.

We have felt that it was a step forward to allow species hunting. This pressure this year it was felt that we should allow the sportsmen to take advantage of the situation. Since the duck population, however, has

In November when you have some of your best shooting. To accept the split season option and close the season for a period of time during November is also a gamble because it is possible that weather conditions which have the greatest influence upon the movement of waterfowl may be such that the Great Northern Flight could go clear through our state during the closed period between the two parts of the split season.

In requesting ninety more shooting days for waterfowl from the Fish and Wildlife Service, we had not anticipated that any part of the state would have ninety days of good shooting. In fact, if such were the case it may be necessary to take a much shorter season to conserve the waterfowl resource. Our purpose in requesting a long season is to guarantee all parts of the state at least some shooting during this period of time. We realize that in the Canyon, Washington, Adams, Nez Perce, Lewis county area for example, that the shooting does not get good until the latter part of December. Eastern

A Reason Why All Farmers Are Rich
Someone was thoughtful enough to send the following item into the News office. We don't know what paper it came from but it goes like this:
Dr. Wayland of Texas Tech observed:
"The woman just ahead of me unloaded her cart at the supermarket check-out counter. She had cigarettes, two magazines, cleaning fluid, paper napkins, and towels, soap, two cosmetic items, a photograph record, a bouquet of artificial flowers, a growing plant, a strainer, six glasses, and one other dish; a quart of milk, a dozen eggs, a package of cereal, a "TV Dinner", and two packages of frozen chicken.
"As she paid her bill she said: "My food is fresher, no wonder the farmers are so rich."

Forest grouse hunters fared better. Check stations in southwest and southeast Idaho sampled 698 hunters and 700 birds. Southwest hunters averaged 1.1 birds per day while southeastern scattergunners averaged 0.9 birds per man.
Quarterly Commission Meet
The Idaho Fish and Game Commission will split its next quarterly session between Boise and Twin Falls. The public is invited to attend in Boise during the afternoon of October 19, and Twin Falls on October 21 to express views on wildlife matters. Routine business matters before the commission are slated for consideration at both meetings.

FISH & GAME NEWS

"Cans" and Redheads
This year the Federal Fish and Wildlife Service is protecting red-head and canvasback diving ducks on all flyways. Some recovery from drought occurred this year in the main diving duck habitat of Canada. It therefore is important to send back next spring as many "cans" and redheads as possible to give these species maximum opportunity to rebuild their population numbers.

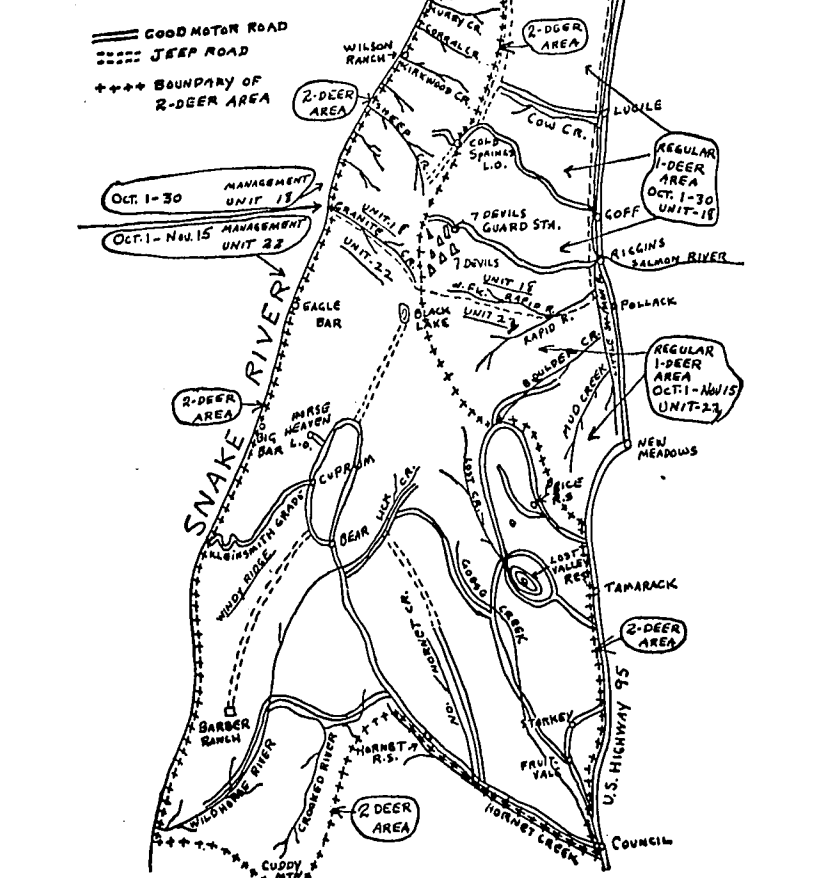

Then favorable position of the canvasback and redhead ducks in particular is due primarily to two things:
1. They are rated by sportsman and epicure alike as two of America's finest game birds. Hence the hunting pressure on them has been heavy.
2. During the past several years, conditions in the nesting areas have been particularly adverse to both species.

Here are some of the ways to identify "cans" and redheads:
Both species raft up on the larger lakes and reservoirs and may be found in smaller groups feeding along rivers. They seldom mix with other kinds of ducks. The puffy head and rapid wingbeat of the redhead and the distinctive "horsehead" profile of the "can" are main distinguishing features in flight.
The canvasback and redhead belong to ten species of so-called "diving ducks" that occur in the intermountain west. This name comes from the fact that many of them dive as much as 30 feet for food. In contrast, the region has nine species of puddle ducks which gabble for food in shallow water. Usually upending themselves, with tail feathers above the water, they obtain food from the shallows. America also has three merganser ducks, which are largely last week with Miss Mary Wardrobe as teacher.

Both species are distinguished by their narrow saw-tooth bills and habits of flying close to the water.
The diving duck has its legs near the rear end of the body, it usually swims with its tail close to the water and runs with flapping wings along the surface before takeoff.
Grouse Success Varies
Grouse hunting success was a little better than last year—or somewhat worse—depending on where the hunter went and what species he sought. A drop in sage grouse success as compared to 1959 was traceable to below average production of the game bird this year in most of southern Idaho. Young-old ratios obtained at check stations pointed to mediocre production.

Hunting on this species was limited to a one day season except in parts of southwestern Idaho. Sage grouse check stations recorded 3,540 hunters and 2,787 birds, with hunters averaging 0.8 birds each during the one-day hunt.
Forest grouse hunters fared better. Check stations in southwest and southeast Idaho sampled 698 hunters and 700 birds. Southwest hunters averaged 1.1 birds per day while southeastern scattergunners averaged 0.9 birds per man.

Commissioner Trenhaile stated that weeds cost the Idaho farmer approximately $21,500,000 during 1959. This figure is based on the National Estimate that weeds are responsible for a 10 per cent reduction of crop yields. Idaho farmers and the Idaho economy could have used this extra amount last year. Farmers and seeds men can help recover at least some of this loss in future years by doing a better job of weed control.

FISH AND GAME department map shows boundaries of two-deer areas in game management units 18 and 22 along Hell's Canyon section of middle-Snake river. As legend at the upper left indicates, solid double lines mark good motor roads, broken double lines show jeep roads and the entire two-deer area is enclosed with "x-es". There are several jeep roads not shown on the map, but main access roads do appear. These are the Pittsburg Landing, Cow Creek, Cold Springs Lookout, and the Seven Devils guard station road. In addition, access is available by boat from Pittsburg Landing or Lewiston.

Warning for Farmers
Idaho Commissioner of Agriculture Stanley I. Trenhaile, has again issued warning to farmers that the Idaho Seed Law prohibits the removal of screenings from cleaning establishments until such time as the screenings have been ground or processed in such a way as to prevent germination of noxious weed seeds. Observance of this law by all concerned will greatly retard the dissemination and distribution of weeds throughout the state. The State Warehouse Inspectors frequently visit seed warehouses to see that this provision is carried out.
Commissioner Trenhaile stated that weeds cost the Idaho farmer approximately $21,500,000 during 1959. This figure is based on the National Estimate that weeds are responsible for a 10 per cent reduction of crop yields. Idaho farmers and the Idaho economy could have used this extra amount last year. Farmers and seeds men can help recover at least some of this loss in future years by doing a better job of weed control.

Actually, there is no such thing as a traffic "accident." What are called accidents are usually the result of human error, ignorance, indifference or carelessness.

2-Deer Areas Offer Incentive For Heavier Hunting Pressure

When fires blackened thousands of rangeland acres recently in the Hell's Canyon section of the middle-Snake river, the Idaho Fish and Game Commission amended the 1960 big game regulations to create another two-deer area.
Director Ross Leonard says the purpose was to offer enough incentive to cause nimrods to go into the middle-Snake (see map) and bag at least one deer apiece.
Not that hunters will find a deer behind every bush—they won't. But unless nimrods do some timely salvaging of this herd, nature is bound to do it this winter through starvation and malnutrition, disease and parasites, and by other means.
The recent fire complicated big game management in the Hell's Canyon region which already was under-harvested because the ruggedness of the country caused many hunters to look elsewhere for deer to take on their "regular" tag.
Now the fire area of units 18 and 22 have been declared open for two-deer hunting and a special Hell's Canyon tag has been issued as an incentive to draw more shooters.

The special Hell's Canyon deer tag makes it at least theoretically possible this year for a hunter to harvest four buckskins around the state. It works like this:
First, a hunter may use his regular tag to bag one deer during any general season in the state. Then he may obtain an Extra deer tag and get a second deer in designated management units in southwestern or southwestern area. The Middle Fork tag entitles the holder to another deer in parts of the rugged central portion of the state.
Leonard stressed however that only about eight per cent of Idaho's total deer harvest last year was taken on the Extra or Middle Fork tags.
With respect to the new Hell's Canyon two-deer area, Leonard pointed out that the region has been the site of landholder-sportsmen misunderstandings in the past, and that hunters must respect the rights of property owners. He also urged the hunters to use caution on all roads in the area when they become wet or slick.

Report from the GOVERNOR

"Water Is the Key to the Future"
The fact that the reservoirs and river flows are at nearly all time lows has given rise to a lot of sober second thoughts about our State's interest in protecting our water supply.
It has been said so often that it is a cliché, but we all know that the only limitation on the ability of the Northwest to grow is the wise conservation for use of our incomparable supplies of water.
Water has reclaimed our deserts. It has produced hydro-power to light our cities and turn the wheels of industry. It waters our forests. It has carried our commerce, and it has been the medium of preservation and growth of our splendid sport and commercial fisheries.
In the great arid reaches of the Northwest the rivers are primary sources of water. Without water these valleys would be arid deserts. With water the valleys have become a paradise.

Mrs. David Hasfurther and son, Pat of Lewiston spent Friday with her parents, and Mrs. Leon Danielson.
The Misses Theo and Dolly Smith and Mrs. Anna Edginger of Moscow were Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Borgen.
Mrs. E. A. Morken and Betsy were in Lewiston Friday and were callers of Mrs. A. J. White. Also Betsy was in Portland, Oregon, at the Normal and was one of the blue ribbon winners.
Mr. and Mrs. Delos Odenborg had as Sunday evening visitors, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Rathbun of Moscow. Wednesday afternoon, Mrs. Engle Anderson and mother, Mrs. Claude Odenborg of Moscow visited Mrs. Odenborg.
Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Sahl and family were Sunday dinner guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Paul and family, Moscow.
Saturday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Sahl and family were callers of Mr. and Mrs. Everette Hagen in Moscow.
Mr. and Mrs. David Nordby of Moscow were Sunday visitors of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Nordby. Mrs. R. E. Berger and Sandra spent the weekend in Spokane and visited Sunday with her sister, Mrs. Mary Kane.
Mr. and Mrs. O. V. Johnson spent Sunday with the Vernon Peterson family. Sunday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Gilge were visitors of the Vernon Petersons.
Mrs. Cecil Aldrich and children of Sandpoint spent the weekend with Mrs. Gene Farmer and children.
Mrs. Oliver Hanson of Moscow and Mrs. E. A. Morken and Betsy were shoppers in Spokane Saturday.

development of the Northwest out of its hearing room and under the shovels of our heavy contractors. Here are some of the basic considerations which it seems to me should guide our efforts to achieve wise and provident use of the water wealth of Idaho and of the Northwest.
(5) We must make provision to sustain and increase the value of our sport and commercial fishery.
(6) We must do everything that is necessary to insure that our water resource remains as pure in quality as it is adequate in quantity.
(7) We should seek comprehensive legislation to provide for the protection of our water rights by the laws which they were acquired.
(8) The right of the upland states to make later and overriding appropriation for beneficial consumptive agricultural use of water that rises on the upland watersheds should never be drawn in question.
(9) We should seek quick development of our total regional hydro-electric resource in a manner that is consistent with my first two premises.
(10) Wherever it is economically feasible we should add water borne transportation to our comprehensive plans.

This is why Idaho has strongly supported the river projects which will make slack water navigation of the Snake River to Lewiston a reality. These projects we will continue to support with unremitting vigor. We need to make our decisions on what to do with our water resource so that all of our interests will be served. We need to do the things that will put customers in all of our stores, that will expand our payroll, that will diversify our economy, that will build more consumptive capacity in order to balance agriculture with industry.
One of the favorite phrases of the doctrinaires is "comprehensive development." I would like to suggest that one of the really necessary elements in any plan for utilization of water resources in the Northwest is the comprehensive conservation of the benefits which accrue regionwide. In the past we have addressed our attention almost exclusively to the massive development downstream which sometimes seem to be of questionable immediate value to the upland states. It is time for all of us, upriver and down, to recognize that each state has its rights, its privileges, its history and its preferences. If we do this I am confident that these disparities in benefits can be adjusted and that they will be to the benefit of all.
We need to break off all the windy and sterile controversy that has impeded development. We need kilowatts of power on the line. We do not need another series of hearings. No useable industrial or domestic power is generated in court rooms or hearing rooms. We need to get the

Bad Weather Slaps Area

Genesee's period of warm fall weather came to an abrupt ending last week as the area forecasters said a heavy flow of moist, cool, unstable air crossed the Northwest with several frontal systems. While most local residents didn't know that, they were aware of the fact that a lot of rain fell, it was foggy, it was windy and that on several nights the temperatures dropped below freezing.

The first of the bad weather began last Friday as rain poured down most of the day including the hour and one half that the Genesee-Weippe Football game was in progress. Only a few braved the elements for this match.

The rain slackened during the evening Friday and cleared most of Saturday and Sunday. During the evening hours of these two days the temperatures dipped down to their lowest mark of the season and the weather was heavy in many parts of the Palouse country.

Monday was partly clear but chilly with a brisk wind to make the temperature seem even colder. Tuesday the clouds broke again and were still part of the weather picture of Wednesday.

CYF Members Attend Retreat

The purpose of this retreat is to plan the coming CYF year. The calendar was planned to include four meetings for the parents. Films and speakers have been scheduled for some of the meetings. It was also decided to hold a food sale this fall and a car wash in the spring.

Transportation to the retreat and through the coming year will be provided by cars taken by at least two advisors and CYF members will take the rest of the needed cars.

COURT CONFERENCES SERIES SCHEDULED IN SIX IDAHO AREAS

Plans have been completed for the annual traffic Court Conferences series scheduled in six Idaho communities during October, Supreme Court Justice Henry F. McQuade announced this week.

"The conferences, started in 1957 at the request of Gov. Robert E. Smylie, have been of tremendous value in bringing about a better understanding of all phases of traffic accident problems through closer cooperation among administrators, law enforcement personnel and the courts," Judge McQuade commented.

The Supreme Court Justice will again serve as moderator and is the general chairman of this year's conference series.

In past years special invitations have gone to traffic court magistrates, prosecutors, sheriffs and to chiefs of police with general invitations being issued to county and city administrators and the general public. "This year we are adding county commissioners, mayors and city council members to our special invitation list," Judge McQuade announced.

"Attendance of these administrators is highly important because of the close relationship involving procurement of materials and personnel and the needs of law enforcement agencies and the courts in helping to do this job of reducing accidents and their resulting fatalities, personal injuries and gigantic financial loss," the Supreme Court Justice said.

The general chairman announced that because of the expanded special invitation list and an invigorated effort to welcome the general public to the sessions, the program has been revised in effort to bring more facts to those attending in a more interesting manner in a shorter period of time.

"Speeches, statistical reports and charts have been reduced to a minimum with more emphasis being placed on visual demonstrations of traffic enforcement and court procedures as they exist in Idaho at the present time," Judge McQuade said.

A highlight of the program will include a "corridor conference" at which the Traffic Safety Division's Driver-Lab and a Breathometer, used by many city police departments, will be demonstrated. The Driver-Lab records an individual's reflexes, coordination, range of vision color perception and depth perception. The Breathometer analyzes the alcoholic content of a drinking person's breath to determine the state of intoxication in lieu of a blood test.

Law Enforcement officials stated that "this demonstration will leave no doubts in the minds of the audience about the effects of drinking and driving because of a surprise feature" which has been arranged for each conference.

Local prosecuting attorneys will appear with other local officials, Gooding County Probate Judge James P. Gossett and Department of Law Enforcement staff members in panel discussions being arranged. "As in the past, a generous allotment of time has been scheduled for the open forum periods when questions can be asked by those attending. We are expecting many queries this year about all phases of traffic—both from the statutes on through law enforcement and the place of final judgment by the defendant, the courts," Justice McQuade said.

There will be a session in Lewiston October 25, said officials.

game birds than is possible to do by any other means. Through their chief mission in life has been the pursuit of ducks, their excellent noses make them eager seekers of all feathered game. And the retriever is as good in the home as he is in the field. He makes a fun pet, a fine companion for children and a fine watch dog.

You can take your pick from three popular retriever breeds, plus two others that are not as well known. There's the Chesapeake Bay retriever, the only retriever bred in the country of American origin. He's a big boned, highly intelligent dog with great powers of endurance, a superb nose and unbounded courage. Because of his tightly knitted oily coat he is practically water-proof.

Labrador Retrievers, currently the most popular of all the breeds, are solid black or liver yellow in color, slightly smaller and lighter than the Chesapeake. They're fast, sure retrievers with such grace in the water they remind one of overgrown otters. Moreover, Labradors have remarkable intelligence and wonderful dispositions.

Golden retrievers, big dogs which are well insulated beneath their silky, golden-haired overcoat by a dense, oily undercoat, are the most loved very successfully on upland game as well as waterfowl.

The flat-coated and curly-coated retrievers, who get their names from their coat textures, both do workmanlike jobs in the marshes.

Feeding Tip: Give your dog an hour to cool off and calm down after hunting before you feed him.

FACTS AND FIGURES ABOUT IDAHO WILL BE GIVEN AT CALIFORNIA CONFERENCES

Facts and figures showing the past and potential growth of manufacturing in Idaho will be put to work in San Francisco next week, according to a story in the October issue of Idaho Image, the Department of Commerce and Development's quarterly economic publication.

The information will be used to impress bay area businessmen with the Gem State's industrial future during the promotional trip being made by San Francisco through Wednesday by Gov. Robert E. Smylie, Department Secretary Louise Shaduck and more than 100 Idaho businessmen and civic leaders.

The publication says the chief purpose of the trip is to publicize the fact that Idaho welcomes industries, particularly those which can either extract a process or ship products from the state's farms, forests or mines or supply and service the extractors, processors and shippers. Members of the Idaho delegation, made up of bankers, businessmen, college officials, salesmen, executives, chamber of commerce officials, farmers and economists will be armed with information which shows that Idaho's manufacturing growth is now well underway and will increase year by year. Copies of Idaho Image will be handed out to the California businessmen.

Californians will be told, for example, that in 1956 there were less than a thousand manufacturers in the state. They added $118,675,000 to the value of raw materials, supplies and fuels used to make their products. In 1958, with 1,002 establishments, the added dollar value of Idaho manufacturing totaled $246,600,000.

The Idaho Image story also points out that the number of men and women employed in manufacturing in Idaho totaled 28,900 in 1959, compared with 25,700 in 1954 and 15,900 in 1950. Wages paid by Idaho manufacturers in 1959 came to $146,000,000, compared with $72,000,000 in 1954 and $46,500,000 in 1950. About one out of nine workers in the state is employed by a manufacturing firm. The number of manufacturing establishments with 20 or more employees increased from 204 in 1954 to 295 in the first quarter of this year.

The story also gives figures for capital expenditures and tells which manufacturing industries have grown the most over the past ten years.

While stressing the growth of manufacturing in the state, the story says delegation members will emphasize these additional facts: (1) Idaho has plenty of room to accommodate firms considering the state for a new plant site. Local chambers of commerce and area industrial development groups, which keep track of plant sites in their areas available for industry, as well as areas, however, that plant locations must meet rigid industrial requirements; (2) Idaho's abundance of stream and ground water, coupled with the ambitious development programs now being carried out by the electric and gas utilities serving the state, insures a reliable industrial power supply; (3) Idaho's location allows manufacturers to serve the intermountain and coast states; (4) Idaho climate is mild, and (5) Idaho offers unequalled opportunities for recreation and relaxation.

Headquarters for the trip will be the St. Francis hotel on Union Square. Prospects will be called on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, with information being filed so that follow-up work can be done. Smylie will speak to a group of top bay area industrialists at a luncheon on Monday.

CENSUS BUREAU TO CONDUCT FARM SURVEY IN COUNTY

The 1960 Sample Survey of Agriculture will be conducted in this county during the next several weeks. It was announced this week by the Bureau of the Census, U. S. Department of Commerce.

The 1960 Sample Survey of Agriculture will collect information on ownership and size of farms, acreage and harvest of crops and livestock production and inventories. Information will be collected also on farm equipment, farm income, construction of new farm buildings, farm contracts, and farm operator debts.

Farms in the county which will be covered in the 1960 Sample Survey of Agriculture were selected at random under the Census Bureau's scientific sampling program to provide a representative cross-section of all farms in the county. Information collected locally will be combined with that collected in other areas of the country to provide national estimates. Local interviews for the 1960 Sample Survey of Agriculture will be conducted by Mrs. Bernice O. Lewis.

Safety Program Reduces Accidents

By Jim Hambrid
Idaho Fish and Game Department
During the first nine months of this year, 56 Idaho residents and visitors were involved in gun accidents, 38 were youngsters under 20, 11 were adults and seven persons were of undetermined ages.

Nobody knows what the remainder of 1960 will bring, but the hunting season from September through December 31 last year resulted in six fatalities and 40 injuries—all attributed to gun accidents.

A hunting accident is defined as one in which a person is killed or injured by a firearm or a bow and arrow. It occurs outside the home and is the result of hunting, including travel to and from the field.

Many psychologists, however, hold that there is no such thing as an accident, whether the end result is produced by a bullet, automobile or bathtub. The assistant surgeon general of the Public Health service goes along with that viewpoint.

"There is no such thing as an accident," says Dr. Albert L. Chapman. "He explains that accidents don't 'just happen.' They are caused by what people do or fail to do."

Editorializing on Dr. Chapman's current campaign credo, the Boise Statesman recently put it this way: "Two hypotheses are advanced to treat the difference. A person may be indicted for murder for deliberately shooting another, but a person who deliberately points an 'empty' weapon at another and shoots him may be freed of any responsibility. The only factor missing in the second case is the intent to harm. Otherwise all physical actions are the same."

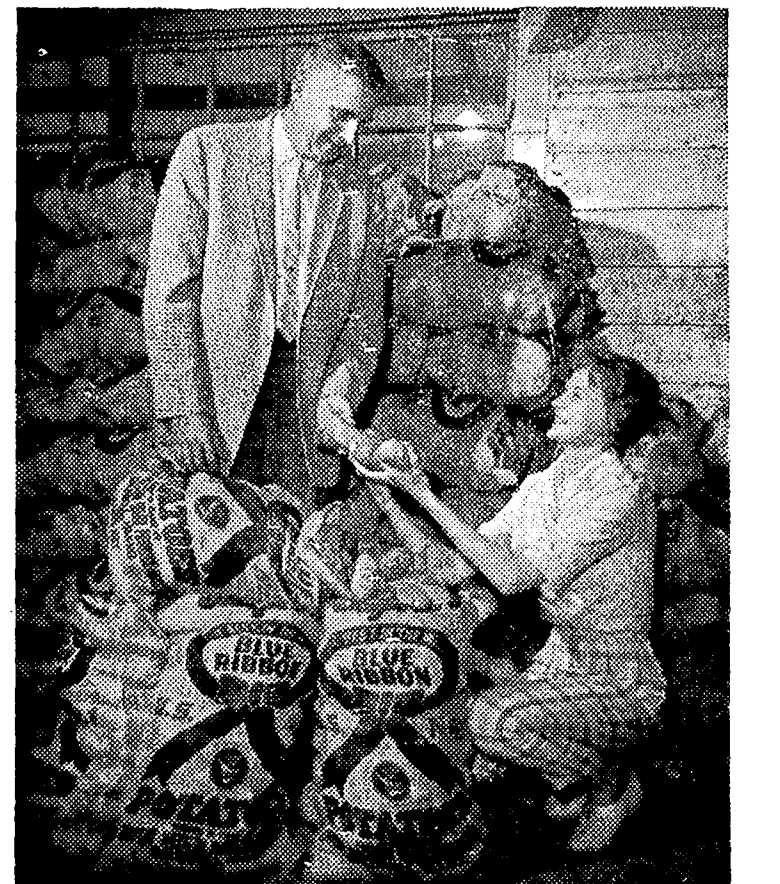

"There is no law that requires human beings to use common sense, even such elementary situations as driving better than to play with a dangerous weapon. Very often he is not held accountable for his actions—either committed suicide or were shot down while committing serious crimes."

"Homicides or deliberate killings by firearms decreased from 6,995 in 1930 to 4,010 in 1957 despite the great population increase. "Nor can the decrease be directly attributed to stricter gun regulations. New York state, with one of the earliest and most rigid firearms laws, still reported proportionately more gun slayings than the New England states, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and a dozen others."

"As for accidental deaths, 2,369 in 1957 were blamed on guns. The fatality rate from all forms of accidents was 56 per 100,000 persons. Motor vehicles caused 22.7 of these deaths, falls accounted for 12.1, fires and explosions for 9.7 and drowning 3.1. The rate for fatal firearms accidents was only 1.4, scarcely above the 1.2 deaths from suffocation or choking on food."

"No one seriously suggests banning automobiles, stairways, water, matches, or eating because they sometimes cause deaths. To attempt to place blanket restrictions on firearms would be equally far-fetched."

Because firearms accidents cannot be legislated out of existence, the problem revolves back to basic gun safety training and sportsmanship. When every hunter is aware of the fact that using a gun can be very dangerous, and that every individual has definite responsibilities when handling it, a long way can be made toward conservation of human life during hunting season.

arms would be equally far-fetched."

Summer, at best, is short. Don't cut it even shorter by getting involved in a traffic accident.

ALASKA...

Pipeline for America's thriving age of action

IN ALASKA As in all 50 states, the vitality of busy Americans has moved our economy into a new age of action. Take Alaska's oil industry, for example: Oil was discovered two years ago, is now flowing in commercial quantities. And starting this week, a new pipeline is speeding it to waiting tankers at Cook Inlet—which is a 22-mile journey through muskeg and swamp forests. For Alaska, Standard's participation in the pipeline project is another step forward in an expanding oil industry, with new jobs and opportunities. For all America, it will add oil to our strategic reserves—new vigor and strength to our ever-accelerating economy.

TRAFFIC CONTROL GETS 'NEW LOOK'

Traffic control by preventive action instead of by punitive means is becoming more and more commonplace throughout Idaho, local AA officials have informed the Traffic Safety Division.

It has been noted by Traffic Safety and confirmed by the Triple A that noticeable changes have taken place in some areas in the manner in which traffic cases are handled by arresting officers and courts. As recently as two years ago there were weekly complaints about discourtesies, a few protests about efforts to "make money to pay overhead costs from fines" and some reports of complete disregard for the rights of the individual.

Although the unsatisfactory conditions were not predominant in the Gem State, there were indications that in some areas a few objectionable practices were being carried out. Almost invariably, the same localities criticized for discourtesies on the part of traffic officers were also criticized for unfair court procedures.

Triple A reports that now it is a rare occasion when rebel motorists have justified complaints about mistreatment on the part of an arresting officer or unjust decisions in traffic courts.

Credit for the "new look" in traffic control might be distributed in several degrees. Annual Traffic Court Conferences each year in six regions of the state have been instrumental in bringing about a better understanding among law enforcement and traffic court personnel as well as in emphasizing the rights of individuals. The Department of Law Enforcement has repeatedly clarified its policy in favor of justice and authority and is concerned and in offering its administrative and police assistance as a means to help rather than a means of usurping authority. The general public through individual action and through organizations as been "bouncing up" on the traffic problem and giving invaluable assistance in clarifying most of the issues which have arisen.

Such an improved atmosphere can easily lead to the time when the pendulum swings to show less accidents, greater declines in the death rate, and fewer injured people.

"Keep our young people at home"

Says Washington Water Power Company Board Chairman

Washington Water Power Co., through its wholly owned subsidiary, the Washington Irrigation and Development Company, gave a check to Uncle Sam last week amounting to $2,228,395 to pay off indebtedness to the Federal Government on a former Naval Supply depot, in the vicinity of Spokane.

The 542 acre warehouse and industrial facility site will be used to house new industries yet to come. For somebody looking to the future, there is constructed and waiting, with gas, electricity and water available, over three million square feet of choice industrial buildings.

Commenting on the transaction, K. M. Robinson, chairman of the board of WWP and president of the Spokane Industrial Park, said: "The company's chief interest in putting money and credit in this project is to help industrialize the area. With other businessmen, I agree that we have talked long enough. At this point we need something practical, and the company and its subsidiary believes this is a good start."

Continues Robinson: "People in this section are spending considerable tax money these days to educate our young people. They are trained in many specialized fields, only to move to other areas to find jobs because opportunities are sometimes lacking at home. The Washington Water Power believes in the Inland Empire of the Pacific Northwest. We want to see it grow, and furthermore we want to see our capable young people employed at home."

DRIVER HANDBOOK IN SPANISH READY FOR FARM WORKERS

At the request of Gov. Robert E. Smylie a Spanish language version of the Idaho Drivers Handbook has been published by the Department of Law Enforcement's Traffic Safety division for distribution in migrant labor camps, Safety Director Robert B. McCall announced this week.

Farm Labor camps in Canyon county were used as the first points of distribution Thursday through the Canyon county Sheriff's office to crew leaders and officials at the various camps.

McCall said the handbook was first condensed to expedite translation and bring all main points of Idaho's traffic laws and pointers on operation of motor vehicles to the attention of the Spanish-American workers.

"Most of these people are American Citizens who come here from Texas each spring to help with farm work," the safety director explained. "Many of them have difficulty in speaking or reading English, but are well educated in their own language."

Original plans when the project was begun two months ago were to distribute the booklets next spring when laborers come to Idaho. "The demand has been so great since our first copies were received, it was necessary to step up the publication date and make the handbooks available to these people remain in Idaho during the winter months and some have established permanent residences here and are educating themselves in the English language. Our hope is that this handbook will not only reduce their traffic problems, it may be an aid in their efforts to better understand our language," McCall explained.

The Employment Security Agency, the State Labor Department and several other agencies and private groups working with the migrants have inquired about the new publication and offered their assistance in making it available throughout Idaho, Traffic Safety officials said.

Report from the GOVERNOR

"The President's U. N. Performance Was His Greatest"

The President's last appearance before the United Nations General Assembly will rank in history as his greatest.

What President Eisenhower, as the leader of the free world, proclaimed—even as President Woodrow Wilson four decades ago—is the ideal of a peaceful union of nations, a "world of justice under law." This is the surest way to an enduring peace for humanity—a goal that can be achieved only as reason supercedes all else in the triumph of moral force.

The Eisenhower address will be recorded as his greatest performance. Seldom have a nation's aspirations been so plainly spelled out with such vigor and clarity.

I have been drawing social security retirement benefits for a number of years. Recently a friend of mine has told me that my benefits would soon be exhausted. Is this true? I am dependent upon my benefits for my livelihood.

Answer—No. Your benefits do not have a time limit on them nor do they ever exhaust. Your friend just slipped you some misinformation. You need have no worry that your social security payments will run out.

LEUPP WILDERNESS BILL

Tom Leupp, mayor of Nampa and Republican candidate for Congress from the First District, Wednesday night told a County Republican workers audience at Mackay that the Wilderness Bill "represents a departure from the basis of past development in the state of Idaho."

Leupp, opposing Rep. Grace Pfoz, said that "the incumbent is in direct opposition to the best interests of the majority in her support of the Wilderness Bill." He said that "if the state is to continue to progress, then we must not let any multi-purpose uses of our natural resources be thwarted for political advantage of the few."

He pointed out that the multi-purpose use of Idaho's natural resources would include the "new flourishing industries of agriculture, grazing, timber, recreation, and mining. Leupp declared that "The burial of well-preserved natural resources amounts to an unwise refusal to let the beautiful blessings of our great state as God has given them to us."

NezPerce Hands GHS Bulldogs First Defeat In 16-6 Contest

Like all good things must, Genesee High School's winning way in the football campaigns came to an end last Friday afternoon when the Bulldogs dropped a 16-6 decision to the Nez Perce Indians on the NezPerce ground. This was the first defeat of the season for the Bulldogs who now have a record of five wins and one loss.

NezPerce drew the first blood on the Friday game and went into a 7-0 first quarter lead as Billy Giles broke loose for 35 yards on an option play. Giles passed to Sam Cash for the extra point.

Bulldog quarterback Bill Magee teamed up with end Merle Wilson early in the second period to score the first Genesee touchdown of the game on a pass and run play covering forty yards, but the Bulldogs couldn't cash in on the gratis point and stayed behind 7-6.

The Indians scored again from five yards out later in the second quarter as Bob Harris bulled his way through to make the score 14-6 with the extra point run up by Larry Riggers. The Indians picked up their final two points of the game in the third quarter when Bill Magee was trapped behind the goal line for a safety.

Injuries hindered the Bulldog offensive as Boyd Hillman, a fine scrapper for the home team saw his action due to a painful hip injury. Kendrick Final Game Friday the Bulldogs travel to Kendrick to invade the gridiron camp of the KHS Tigers for the last football game of the season.

Better Lock Cars, Is Marshall's Advice

Local car owners were advised this week that they had better lock their automobiles at night or make certain they keep a key of value in the open cars. This advice came from City Marshall, Henry Kinzer, after three cases of pilfering in cars in the neighborhood had been reported in the last ten days.

Fortunately, Marshall Kinzer reported, there has been nothing valuable taken from the cars, but with this type of thing going on it is better to take precautions to prevent losses.

St. Mary's Bazaar Sunday

One of the highlights of the year in the Genesee Community will again take place on Sunday, October 23, as the members of the St. Mary's Catholic church presents their annual bazaar.

The bazaar will be preceded by a dance, held Friday night, Oct. 21, in the American Legion Building, and Sunday will be a day packed with activities and fun that will draw hundreds of people from all parts of the Inland Empire.

The Genesee Rammers will furnish the music for the dance Friday evening in the Legion Hall. Admission will be $1.00 per couple and the dance begins at 9:00 a. m.

Activities will get underway Sunday morning, the day of the bazaar, with the country store, fancywork booths, fishpond and other events being featured.

Change In Meals The major change in the bazaar this year will be the manner which the meals are served. This year there will be individual dinner and supper meals and instead there will be continuous serving of the chicken and sausage meals from 12:00 noon to 7:00 p. m. in the upstairs of the Firemen's Hall.

Another change noted this year is that the meals will be served cafeteria style instead of the usual home-style.

Bird Season Opening Good

In sharp contrast to last year's opening date of bird season, nirotds who took to the field on Saturday afternoon this year found there was a fairly plentiful supply of pheasants in the surrounding area.

Those local hunters who went out on last Saturday and then again on Sunday reported seeing quite a few birds and there were many reports of limits being taken on Chinks.

This apparent plentiful supply of birds is a welcome change from last year when Idaho experienced one of the worst pheasant and upland game bird seasons on record. Whether the increase in birds came about due to Fish and Game re-stocking programs or a more favorable growing season is not known.

While the pheasants are in greater number this year, hunters will find that the Hungarian Partridges are not so plentiful as they were last year. Just how the Chukars survived the winter and spring has not yet been reported.

Poor Year For Grasshoppers

It was a poor year for Idaho grasshoppers. In the entire state, no area developed enough of these pests to warrant treatment this season, said Roland Portman, extension entomologist at the University of Idaho.
Portman, with Federal Government representatives, county agents and farmers made plans last fall to treat 238,470 acres in Ada, Adams, Blaine, Boise, Clark, Custer, Elmore, Fremont, Latah, Nez Perce and Washington counties. But nature reduced hopper populations through such natural enemies as a fungus disease, a round worm, a parasitic wasp, flesh fly, skunks, and birds, he said. Because of them, farmers were spared the costs of chemical controls. In most crop areas, the hoppers were nothing more than a slight nuisance, the entomologist reported.
For next spring, Portman predicts that Boise and Oneida counties may need limited control sprays. He bases his forecast in a fall survey made by counting the number of adult grasshoppers in infested areas. Another survey will be taken in the spring, and sprays will be applied if needed.

and at the most effective time. No treatment is given during the fall months because of the high winter-spring mortality rate that may make spraying or early summer treatment unnecessary.
Sprays used for control must leave no pesticide residue on the crops, the entomologist emphasized. As an example, he cited wheat which may be sprayed with low-priced aldrin used at the rate of 2 ounces in 20 to 30 gallons of water per acre. The grain is then free of residue.
On the other hand, alfalfa has a residue to show up in milk and meat of animals fed on the hay. Because of this, Portman recommends spraying stubble immediately after the hay crop has been removed from the field. Range sprayed for grasshopper control must be kept from animals for at least six weeks.
The 1960 yearbook of agriculture is "Power to Produce." It deals with development of machinery.

YOUR Social Security?
QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Question—
If I go on social security when I reach age 65 and take a job at $100 a month, could my wife work and earn as much as she can? She is 15 years younger than I and would like to build up her own social security credit.
Answer—
Yes, your wife's earnings would in no way affect your social security. The only limitation on your social security payments is your own earnings or self-employment. That is, you are only permitted to earn $1200 during a year and still receive all of your social security checks. Any other type of income that you or your family may have would have no effect on your payments.

FARM LOAN POLICIES BEING LIBERALIZED

Senator Frank Church (D-Idaho) said in Boise this week that the Farmers Home Administration has begun liberalizing some of its farm loan policies.
Church said he recently requested a review of the FHA's loan policy particularly where it would deny loans to smaller farmers who need to take off-farm jobs to supplement their incomes.
"I have just been informed by the Farmers Home Administration that effective October 1 these regulations are being revised to authorize farm ownership and operating loans to farmers who have regular off-farm employment, if they are otherwise eligible," Church added.
Church said loans for dwellings and other essential farm buildings will be available to a farm that is in production and will produce annually for sale at least $400 worth of commodities based on 1944 prices. Previously, an applicant had to own a farm producing a substantial amount of his income, Church explained.
"The expanded policies," Church said, "will assist owner-operators with credit for land development, buildings, and refinancing of debts, and both owner-operators and tenants with credit for farm machinery and equipment, livestock, farm supplies and other operating needs.

LOIN EYES OF BEEF CAN BE MEASURED BEFORE KILL
By means of a new ultrasonic machine called the soma-scope, it is now possible to measure the loin eye of a beef without slaughtering the animal, says Morris Hemstrom, extension animal husbandman at the University of Idaho.
By high frequency sound waves, the machine checks the thickness of the T-Bone steak muscle. Its chief use, says Hemstrom, is in detecting thickly muscled bulls in breeding herds. Loin eye size is a highly heritable character.
Until the development of this machine, there was no way of accurately predicting the muscle size, Hemstrom explains. At present the machine is still in the experimental stage, and more time is needed to develop its practical application.
Colorado State University and Cornell University are experimenting with the soma-scope. Demonstration have made up its only appearance in the west.

Vote Sensibly, Jaycees Advise Own Age Group

Election eve advice for their own age group was offered this week by citizenship-conscious officials of the Idaho Junior Chamber of Commerce.
"First-time voters may be fuzzy-checked but need not be fuzzy-minded," Andy Callahan, Genesee, Idaho Jaycee governmental affairs chairman, cautions.
Callahan explains that intelligent appraisal of candidates and issues is important to make first franchise votes count for good government.
"A young voter's first ballot can be a real milestone only if he or she has assumed the responsibility or he coming informed before acting," Callahan says.

Number of eligible first-time voters age-wise, among Idaho's 372,000 citizens of voting age is not known by state election officials.
The percentage of eligibles exercising their vote in previous elections is very high, historically, however," Callahan says. "Almost everyone votes upon coming of age."
Callahan asserts that such a vote will be a mature one if the new ballot-caster has looked beyond slick campaign promises to determine what good or bad effects the candidates and issues will have upon sound, responsible government.

Concern for voting habits of still another segment of their age group is expressed by E. W. (Woody) Wayland, Longview, Washington, national governmental affairs chairman for the U. S. Junior Chamber of Commerce.
"Let it be the non-voting habits of the 25-to-30 age group, actually, that is my concern," Wayland says. "They are more likely to miss voting than any other age group, past performance indicates."

Wayland explains that the inactivity, point-wise, usually occasioned by marriage and efforts of beginning a home and family.
"Isn't it ironic that in establishing a stake in America's future this group forfeits its voice in that future?" Wayland asks. "Not only do we get the kind of government we deserve—we pay for it!"

He agrees with Callahan that uninformed voting is worse than not voting at all.
Broadened participation by citizens in all levels of government is a worthy goal only when achieved on a thoughtful, responsible basis, Wayland asserts.

"Thoughtlessness at the polls can foster the forfeiting of freedom just as surely as revolution and mob rule," he says. "Don't use your right to vote to vote away your rights."

Unwarranted growth of government reduces individual freedoms, and the Jaycees stand for government economy with the conviction that they are entitled to those freedoms—and to full measure of value for their tax dollars, Wayland says.

AMERICA'S THRIVING AGE OF ACTION
BECAUSE OF AMERICA'S VITALITY... because the facts of growth and progress are before everyone's eyes... because the restless, creative energies of Americans have moved our economy into an age of action... life in 1960 takes on a new, exciting dimension. Here are some of the ways Standard is expanding the thriving economic fronts of today into your future.

ACTION 1960-1961 This year we're investing about $400,000,000 to find and produce the oil you'll need... and for new plants and equipment to serve our customers better in an expanding economy. Next year we expect to expand a like amount, because the future of a growing America will demand more and more oil. The best estimates indicate use of motor gasoline in the West, for example, will rise nearly 4% in 1961 over 1960. That $400,000,000 is a practical measure of our confidence in the future.

ACTION IN HAWAII New landmark in Hawaii's economy is Standard's refinery... opening next month. Creating new jobs, new payrolls and products "made in Hawaii," this huge plant will cost $65,000,000—new progress for the islands.

ACTION IN ALASKA Oil is on the horizon—the first commercial production. To speed it to market, Standard participated in construction of the just-completed 22-mile pipeline. Standard's investment in the last two years has been three times what the U.S. paid for Alaska in 1957.

ACTION IN RESEARCH How far can science and imagination commercially "stretch" the molecule of oil? Into colored plastic highways? Into a new wear-defying fiber for clothing? We're backing our research staff—1400 strong—with $20,000,000 in 1960... to find new ideas and practical answers in this age of action.

Here's Why Goose Season Opened Early

Opening goose season along with ducks October 11 by the Idaho Fish and Game Commission would have cost the goose hunters four full days of shooting in a year when Idaho goose populations are at a high level.

"The Fish and Game Commission has the prerogative for establishing the dates and regulations for waterfowl within the framework outlined by the Fish and Wildlife Service," he pointed out. "In fact, even the commission has very little latitude in the establishment of seasons for the taking of waterfowl."

Leonard pointed out that the objective of the commission is to provide as much hunting as the regulated source will stand and still be perpetuated in abundance.

"We have always favored as long a season as possible in Idaho because of the difference in topography, geography and climatic conditions," Leonard continued. "For instance, the sportsmen of southeastern counties have consistently requested a much earlier opening on geese than they have been allowed. Geese which are hatched and raised in Bonneville, Caribou, and Bear Lake counties, because of the early winter conditions in that area, often migrate southward by the third week of October."

"The sportsmen living along the Snake river from American Falls to Lewiston always request the commission and the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service to allow the season to extend as far into January as the international zone allows. But the federal agency will not allow us to zone the state, that is, to have different seasons in different parts of the state."

Leonard explained that a split season is unwanted because, in addition to penalizing the hunter ten days of shooting time it also would penalize the hunters in north Idaho because the split would occur generally in November during some of the best shooting days.

"To accept the split season option and close the season for a period of time during November also is a gamble because it is possible that weather conditions which will have the greatest influence upon the movement of waterfowl map be sure that the 'great northern flight' could go clear through our state during the closed period between the two parts of the split season," he added.

Checklist for Traffic Safety Given

The Idaho Traffic Safety Division receives many letters, telephone calls and verbal offers such as "What can we do to prevent traffic accidents?" All of them are asked in sincerity and indicate and improved attitude over such questions as "Why don't you do something about traffic accidents?"

- Here's a checklist for all citizens:
1. Are you willing to believe that you are as likely to have an accident as anyone else?
 2. Do you tell your best friend that he deserves the traffic ticket he got for speeding when he complains about the injustice of it all?
 3. Do you refuse a cocktail because you are driving and do you call a cab for a friend who has had too many?
 4. Are you willing to admit you make mistakes in traffic and that you drive by habit, that your attention wanders while you're driving?
 5. Do you advocate and help support your community safety council?
 6. Are you willing to go to a city council meeting and stand up to say you believe the police force should be fully supported in traffic law enforcement even if the tax rate must be increased to pay for it?
 7. Are you willing to act for safety if you're not willing to act for safety, then you have no right to ask for safety.

Idaho Fish and Game Department conservation officers are holding pheasants and other upland game birds individually responsible for punching big game tags in three places as illustrated on the tag for the month and day of the kill and the sex of the animal. These tags must be punched with knife, pencil or some other means in the three places, then wired or otherwise fastened to the carcass immediately after the kill has been made. Although tags are made of tough fabric, it is suggested that they be wired inside the rib cage or securely to a hook to prevent the possibility of dragging it off when travelling through brush or rough country. The hunter report card is to be torn from the tag along perforated line, filled out to provide biological data and mailed to the department as soon as possible.

Statewide Harmony Goal Of Sportsmen Council

By Jim Humbird
Idaho Fish and Game Department

Most Idaho stockmen and ranchers are happy to accommodate the state's big game and bird hunters again this fall when they show due regard to safety standards and common courtesy.

That is the opinion of Ross Leonard, director of the Fish and Game Department. It is based on the state's experience and shared by Don Fredericksen, rancher and state senator from Gooding, who presides over the Idaho Landholder-Sportsmen Council.

"We landholders are happy to have people hunting on our property if they'll just take the time to let us know who they are and when they arrive, so we'll be able to give them directions," Fredericksen says.

The Landholder-Sportsmen Council sponsors free "hunting by permission" signs and hunter "pledge" cards which Fredericksen believes have served good purposes. It also holds state and district meetings where farmers and sportsmen are invited to bring their grievances.

"When hunters check in at the ranch house, it gives the landholder an opportunity to tell them where his livestock is and to direct them to areas where game is most likely to be found."

Leonard said that much of the criticism is directed against the few hunters who are careless about leaving gates open, cutting fences or driving over soft, rain-soaked ground. Cruising at random over pastures or alfalfa fields also can be highly destructive to grass and hay stands under both wet and dry conditions.

"We've made a lot of progress in cutting livestock losses and in reducing the irritation caused by a few thoughtless hunters," Leonard added, "and the Landholder-Sportsmen Council deserves much of the credit."

Volunteer Work Wins Driver Award

Work three months a year, college the other nine months and helping others all 12 months have been converged on an intense interest in traffic safety and the September selection of Idaho's Driver of the Month.

Miss Winnie Stanley, 20, of Rexburg received the Idaho First National Bank's $100 savings account and the Department of Law Enforcement's safe driver award after she was named from among candidates proposed by Idaho State Police in all parts of the state.

State Police Officer Adrian Smith of St. Anthony cited two recent instances in which Miss Stanley rendered valuable service to prompt her consideration for the award. "I was called to investigate a serious two-car accident on Highway 191 late at night and Miss Stanley helped in supplying blankets for the injured. After everyone else had left, she remained and assisted in returning the borrowed equipment, such as flares, blankets and lights," Smith reported.

Less than two weeks later at approximately the same place and again after nightfall a similar accident occurred. "When I arrived at the scene of this crash I found the same girl had the traffic moving through and had protected skid marks for our use, had taken pictures of the accident and had located the only eye-witness to the collision," the police officer said.

In Officer Smith's tribute to Miss Stanley it was stated, "This girl's help in obtaining witnesses of the first accident was of tremendous help. Had not this traffic problem been taken care of at once, the results do doubt would have been worse and at least one life might have been lost."

Miss Stanley is a student at Utah State University at Logan, majoring in physical education, and she spent the past summer as a waitress at Island Park Lodge in Fremont Co.

Fall is the best time to plant the spring-flowering bulbs, reminds Tony Horn, horticulturist at the University of Idaho extension service. Correct depths and fertility are essential to satisfactory bloom.

HUNTING BY PERMISSION

Hunting on Private Lands is a Privilege—Not a Right

DO NOT ABUSE IT

Idaho Landholder-Sportsmen Council activities this fall include free distribution of "hunting by permission" signs in cooperation with the state Department of Fish and Game. Replicas of sign above stresses that hunting on private lands is a privilege—not a right—and the adminis-

Law Requires Permission To Hunt On Private Land

Fish and Game Director Ross Leonard said this week that Idaho hunters fishermen and trappers may travel navigable streams from the high water mark on one side to the high water mark on the other side, but—

1. Any person who trespasses upon real property in Idaho is civilly liable to the owner or occupant for nominal damages despite the absence of actual damages.
2. Any person who trespasses upon real property in Idaho is civilly liable to the owner or occupant for the actual damage resulting from the trespass.
3. Any person who trespasses upon real property in Idaho, causing damage by acts of the trespasser, attended by willful malice, fraud or gross negligence, is civilly liable to the owner or occupant for punitive damages.
4. Any person who trespasses upon real property in Idaho which has been fenced and who goes through cultivated crops thereon which have not been harvested or who does actual damage to any property within the enclosure is guilty of a misdemeanor and criminally punishable therefore.
5. Any hunter or trapper who trespasses on enclosed real property in Idaho which has been posted at least every 80 yards is guilty of a misdemeanor and criminally punishable therefore.
6. Any hunter or trapper who trespasses upon enclosed, cultivated real property in Idaho in which the occupant or owner lives is guilty of a misdemeanor and criminally punishable therefore, although the premises were not posted.

Leonard said cultivated lands in the meaning of this rule are lands of which at least 50 per cent of the area within the enclosure is used for cultivated crop purposes and/or artificially irrigated pastures. He stated that a stream is navigable within the meaning of this rule when a six inch log can be floated to market or other place of use during high water season.

This abstract of Idaho laws pertaining to the rights of fishermen, hunters and trappers in relation to the rights of private property owners was made by Assistant Attorney General Edward J. Aschenbrenner several years ago, Leonard added.

A New Zealander who set a world record in shearing 456 sheep in nine hours was recently honored by Queen Elizabeth.

Pullet Cannibalism Can Be Checked

The cannibal pullet-problem child to poultrymen can be reformed.

Charlie F. Peterson, poultry husbandman at the University of Idaho says reforming the cannibal before she becomes a costly nuisance is done but cutting off one-third to one-half of her upper beak. "Debeaking" is the term for the operation. Incidentally it's a painless as filing fingernails. And it's best done as the pullets are moved into the laying house at this time of year.

Before moving the pullets in, the laying house must be swept thoroughly—ceiling, floor and walls. Peterson suggests disinfecting with a solution of 1 pound lye to 5 gallons of water, or with some of the cresote products.

Early fall equipment checks save trouble later on. The checks include repairing equipment for water, feed, and ventilation systems and installing fan ventilation and automatic water supply if these are not already available.

For a clean, dry, warm house, a litter of chopped straw or dry wood shavings 4 to 6-inches deep makes a good "floor." More is added every few weeks until the depth reaches 8 to 12-inches, Peterson said.

To maintain the litter and keep it dry, the poultry husbandman suggests that all water and some or all of the feed be placed on the roosting rack and that damp spots in the litter be cleaned with 1 pound lime added to every 3 to 5 square feet of floor space. Regulated ventilation of the laying house, coupled with frequent stirring of litter, keeps a warm, dry cushion under the layer's feet.

Nests treated with carbolineum remain free of mites or lice. One nest for not more than four or five hens prevents broken eggs.

Young pullets should be moved to the laying house a few at a time to allow adjustment to the new surroundings, Peterson warned.

AUTUMN REVERIE

When Indian-paint-brush fires the mountainside hills

And mountain ash touch up the woodland ride;

They wake me—and my heart with longing fills

For sweet remembered days of autumn tide.

And in this AUTUMN REVERIE I find

A gladness that abounds with pure delight;

When happiness that I had left behind

Burgeons anew in autumn's glory bright. —Bert Gamble

More women vote than men. They outnumber the men by over 2 million in the U.S. They own 51% of the stock of all corporations. They make 85% of all the nation's retail purchases. They influence the decision of 90% of all car sales. They own 74% of the new homes and 40% of all homes. In my opinion, we better start being nicer to the women.

I am no politician, but it seems to me that the basic difference between the two candidates for president of the United States is not help for the aged, good schools, better health, more production, or national security. All of us, as well as both candidates want that. The real difference is in methods. One candidate wants to hurry things along with government spending, and if it results in heavier taxes and heavier government controls over our lives, that must be accepted. On the other hand, the other candidate would rely on the good sense and initiative of all the people. This is the difference. American pattern of individual responsibility. That is the real choice we must make at the polls.

There is a lot of talk about our economy going to pot, but did you ever stop to think that we spend $750 million on 6,000 golf courses; $1 billion on bowling, with 22 million people playing the game; 70,000 new swimming pools will be built this year, costing $800 million, and a record of 700,000 people will see Europe this year, with $78 million being spent in Hawaii alone.

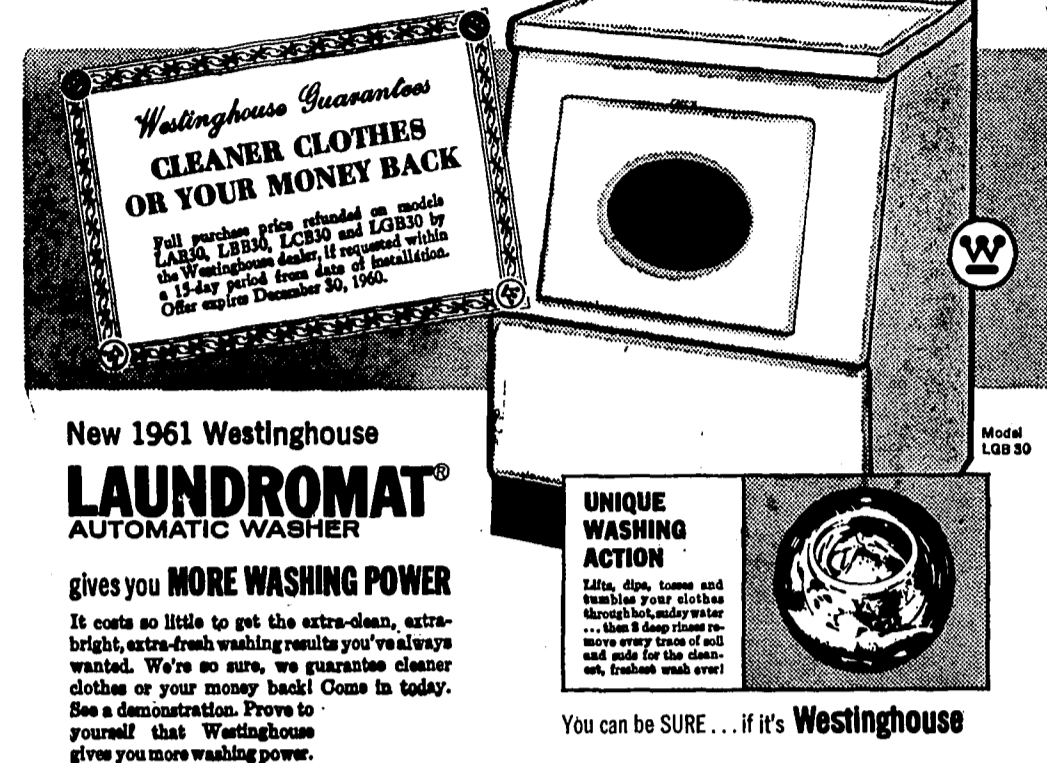

The company was founded in 1889, and since that time has built a reputation for low rates, good service, and the widest possible use of electricity. Now comes PUD promoters in Ada County, and without raising a finger to build the electric business, want to organize a PUD and then come down and take over WWPC's properties. It doesn't seem fair.

Idaho specialists in weed control recommend a fall spraying with 2,4-D on infestations of whitetail. Another spray is advocated in the spring when weeds are in the bud stage.

A pamphlet on Medusa head rye, a range weed, has been published by the University of Idaho. Copies are available in the offices of county agents.

Sales of nonfat dry milk for home use have increased from two million pounds in 1948 to about 170 million pounds, according to the department of agriculture.

FISH & GAME NEWS

Hunter Success Told

A breakdown of some 3,656 hunter report cards in the Boise office by October 12 shows elk and deer kills running higher than the comparable period last year. The figures are elk—1,180 as compared to 1,002 last year; and deer—1,377 as compared to 1,215 at this time in 1959.

This year the department again is using a combination big game tag and hunter report card made of tough waterproof fabric. These must be torn along the dividing perforated line. The game tag must be punched in three places to show the month, day and kind of animal (buck, doe or fawn) and immediately wired or otherwise attached to the carcass when the kill is made. The report card should be filled out and mailed postage free to the department as soon as possible. Spaces are provided to record information regarding the location of kill, date of kill, hunter's home county and other data vital to future game management planning.

Duck Stamps Required

Migratory waterfowl hunters 16 years of age or over must carry the federal "duck stamp" in addition to regular state hunting licenses. These can be purchased at post offices and from some authorized hunting license vendors. The fee has been increased from $2 to $3 to provide additional funds for land acquisition to take care of the needs of migratory waterfowl. The 1960-61 stamp pictures two adult redhead ducks trailing by four ducklings and the 27th issue since the early 1930's when the waterfowl population had dropped to a critical level. The passing of duck hunting from the American scene seemed inevitable unless steps were taken to perpetuate the species.

Another 25,292 acres of private lands were opened to hunting by permit this year and added to some 138,913 acres under the cooperative program backed by the Idaho Fish and Game department, the Soil Conservation service and landholders in many parts of the state. The program involved the actual planting of 1,102 acres to trees and shrubs with the stipulation that hunting by permit would be allowed. Maintaining and improving living conditions for wildlife species are the purposes behind the department's habitat program. This objective is becoming more important each year with the expanding human population and increasing demands for complete utilization of all soil and water resources.

Mr. and Mrs. Herb Bridges and family and Gladys were Sunday afternoon guests of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Johnson. Monday and Tuesday guests were Mr. and Mrs. Albert Bailey and boys of Kamiah.

Mr. and Mrs. Victor Danielson and Mrs. Cherrise of Moscow and Mrs. Sanford Evans and boys. Tuesday evening callers were Mrs. Frank Reynolds and daughters, Zoe and Marie.

Report from the GOVERNOR

"Idaho Puts Its Best Foot Forward in San Francisco"

Ninety representative Idaho businessmen were busy in the San Francisco Bay area this week calling on industrial prospects and other California businessmen. They were doing what salesmen have always done. They were making calls and they were influencing people; important people, too.

The important thing about the trip was the faith that it exhibited in Idaho's future. These businessmen all paid their own way to do this chore for Idaho's people. More than thirty of our communities were represented and nearly every facet of our economic life was included in the group.

The very presence of this many representatives in San Francisco was an act of faith. These are Idahoans who really believe in Idaho, who know that we have something to sell and are willing to go out making calls to invite the world's attention to this state of ours.

In the language of Madison Avenue we are trying to use the "soft sell" during these trips. There is not much point in trying to convince hard-headed businessmen that the millennium will come for them profit wise if only they will move to Idaho. They are interested always in markets, raw materials, freight rates, availability of labor force and general community conditions. These calls give Idahoans an opportunity to discuss these issues and to point out that when the coast companies need to expand, Idaho offers some of them an excellent location near their markets and close to needed raw materials.

These discussions also permit us to show off some of our advantages in liveability, a commodity that gets to be increasingly short supply in the great coastal cities. Too often the picture of Idaho as a snow bound state is the common one. We tell them that we do have sunlight and good clear air and that Sun Valley is a summer resort as well as the world's ski capital.

Do these trips get results? This is a little hard to measure, but we think that the trip last year to Los Angeles was instrumental in bringing at least three new businesses to Boise Valley and it did secure financing for a local enterprise at another town in south Idaho. Most of the men who took part thought the investment in time and money was well worthwhile.

The most thrilling fact about the trip to me is the fact that so many of our leaders are willing to set their shoulder to the wheel to get Idaho and her assets more widely understood.

When these facts are known widely it will be easier to attract the investment capital that we need so badly, and when the time comes for expansion by some of the coastal industries we will be in a position to discuss the desirability of coming to Idaho from the sound base of already furnished information.

We will not have to start from scratch. We will have done our homework and we can go back to call on customers we already know.

Last fall in Los Angeles a gentleman came to our luncheon who had been a member of the first recruiting party sent out by the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce in 1925. They called on some aircraft people to tell them about the virtues of southern California. One of the people they talked to was named Douglas, and after awhile he came to California and stayed.

I asked this Californian if we were doing the right thing. He said, "Young man, you have to make calls if you're going to get results."

Now that we've started, Idaho will keep on calling and we will get results.

Vote Sensibly, Jaycees Advise Own Age Group

Election eve advice for their own age group was offered this week by citizenship-conscious officials of the Idaho Junior Chamber of Commerce.

"First-time voters may be fuzzy-checked but need not be fuzzy-minded," Andy Callahan, Coeur d'Alene, Idaho Jaycee governmental affairs chairman, cautions.

Callahan explains that intelligent appraisal of candidates and issues is important to make first franchise votes count for good government.

"A young voter's first ballot can be a real milestone only if he or she has assumed the responsibility or is being informed before acting," Callahan says.

Number of eligible first-time voters age-wise, among Idaho's 372,000 citizens of voting age is not known by state election officials.

"The percentage of eligibles exercising their newly-acquired privilege is very high, historically however," Callahan says. "Almost everyone votes upon coming of age."

Callahan asserts that such a vote will be a major one if the new ballot-caster has looked beyond slick campaign promises to determine what good or bad effects the candidates and issues will have upon sound, responsible government.

Concern for voting habits of still another segment of their age group is expressed by E. W. (Woody) Wayland, Longview, Washington, national governmental affairs chairman for the U. S. Junior Chamber of Commerce.

"It is the non-voting habits of the 25-to-30 age group, actually, that is my concern," Wayland says. "They are more likely to miss voting than any other age group, past performance indicates."

Wayland explains that the inactivity, poll-wise, usually is occasioned by marriage and efforts of beginning a home and family.

"Isn't it ironic that in establishing a stake in America's future this group forfeits its voice in that future?" Wayland asks. "Not only do we get the kind of government we deserve—we pay for it!"

Wayland is convinced that income tax rate reform, stimulating citizens to peak efficiency, is a key in America's growth and future.

He agrees with Callahan that uninformed voting is worse than not voting at all.

Broadened participation by citizens in all levels of government is a worthy goal only when achieved on a thoughtful, responsible basis, Wayland asserts.

"Thoughtlessness at the polls can foster the forfeiting of freedom, just as surely as revolution and mob rule," he says. "Don't use your right to vote to vote away your rights."

Unwarranted growth of government reduces individual freedoms, and the Jaycees stand for government economy with the conviction that they are entitled to those freedoms—and to full measure of value for their tax dollars, Wayland says.

AMERICA'S THRIVING AGE OF ACTION

BECAUSE OF AMERICA'S VITALITY... because the facts of growth and progress are before everyone's eyes... because the restless, creative energies of Americans have moved our economy into an age of action... life in 1960 takes on a new, exciting dimension. Here are some of the ways Standard is expanding the thriving economic fronts of today into your future.

ACTION 1960-1961 This year we're investing about $400,000,000 to find and produce the oil you'll need... and for new plants and equipment to serve our customers better in an expanding economy. Next year we expect to expend a like amount, because the future of a growing America will demand more and more oil. The best estimates indicate use of motor gasoline in the West, for example, will rise nearly 4% in 1961 over 1960. That $400,000,000 is a practical measure of our confidence in the future.

ACTION IN HAWAII New landmark in Hawaii's economy is Standard's refinery... opening next month. Creating new jobs, new payrolls and products "made in Hawaii," this huge plant will cost $65,000,000 — new progress for the islands.

ACTION IN ALASKA Oil is on the horizon — the first commercial production. To speed it to tankers, Standard participated in construction of the just-completed 22-mile pipeline. Standard's investment in the last two years has been three times what the U.S. paid for Alaska in 1967.

ACTION IN RESEARCH How far can science and imagination commercially "stretch" the molecule of oil into colored plastic highways? Into a new wear-defying fiber for clothing? We're backing our research staff — 1400 strong — with $20,000,000 in 1960... to find new ideas and practical answers in this age of action.

ACTION ON THE HIGHWAYS In 1960, under highway building programs, four billion dollars' worth of new roads will connect the nation with its future. As a major supplier of asphalt, Standard helps pave the way at lower cost. For asphalt puts down three smooth miles of highway for the cost of two in other pavements.

Here's Why Goose Season Opened Early

Opening goose season along with ducks October 11 by the Idaho Fish and Game Commission would have cost the goose hunters four full days of shooting in a year when Idaho goose populations are at a high level.

That is the explanation given this week by Director Ross Leonard for opening the goose season a half hour before daylight October 8.

He explained that geese and ducks ordinarily do not concentrate in the same areas thus early shooting at the big honkers should have little effect on the movements of other species of migratory waterfowl.

"The Fish and Game Commission has the prerogative for establishing seasons and regulations for waterfowl within the framework outlined by the Fish and Wildlife Service," he pointed out.

"In fact, even the latitude in the establishment of seasons for the taking of waterfowl.

Leonard pointed out that the objective of the commission is to provide as much hunting as the resource will stand and still be perpetuated in abundance.

"We have always favored as long a season as possible in Idaho because of the difference in topography, geography and climatic conditions," Leonard continued.

"For instance, the sportsmen of southeastern counties have consistently requested a much earlier opening on geese than they have been allowed. Geese which are hatched and raised in Bonanza, Caribou, and Bear Lake counties, because of the early winter conditions in that area, often migrate southward by the third week of October.

"The sportsmen living along the Snake river from American Falls to Lewiston always request the commission and the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service to allow the season to extend as far into January as the international treaty will permit. But the federal agency will not allow us to zone the state, that is, to have different seasons in different parts of the state."

Leonard explained that a split season is unwanted because, in addition to penalizing the hunter ten days of shooting time it also would penalize the hunters in north Idaho because the split would occur generally in November during some of the best shooting days.

"To accept the split season option and close the season for a period of time during November also is a gamble because it is possible that weather conditions which have the greatest influence upon the movement of waterfowl may be such that the 'great northern flight' could go clear through our state during the closed period between the two parts of the split season," he added.

Checklist for Traffic Safety Given

The Idaho Traffic Safety Division receives many letters, telephone calls and verbal offers such as "What can we do to prevent traffic accidents?" All of them are asked in sincerity and indicate an improved attitude over such questions as "Why don't you do something about traffic accidents?"

Here's a checklist for all citizens:

1. Are you willing to believe that you are as likely to have an accident as anyone else?
2. Do you tell your best friend that he deserved the traffic ticket he got for speeding when he complains about the injustice of it all?
3. Do you refuse a cocktail because you are driving and do you call a cab for a friend who has had too many?
4. Are you willing to admit you make mistakes in traffic and that you drive by habit, that your attention wanders while you're driving?
5. Do you advocate and help support your community safety council?
6. Are you willing to go to a city council meeting and stand up to any who believe the police force should be fully supported in traffic law enforcement even if the tax rate must be increased to pay for it?
7. Are you willing to act for safety?

If you're not willing to act for safety, then you have no right to ask for safety.

You have an obligation to your household employees to report their wages correctly and on time. Their social security retirement benefits and the benefits payable to their families if they should die, will be based on the earnings you report.

Monthly social security disability benefits may continue for a year if a disabled person starts working under a program given by a State rehabilitation agency.

ROSS LEONARD, Director

Idaho Fish and Game Department conservation officers are holding hunters individually responsible for punching big game tags in three places as illustrated above to show the month and day of the kill and the sex of the animal. These tags must be punched with knife, pencil or some other means in the three places, then wired or otherwise fastened to the carcass immediately after the kill has been made. Although tags are made of tough fabric, it is suggested that they be wired inside the rib cage or securely to a hook to prevent the possibility of dragging

Idaho Fish and Game Department has provided food and cover for pheasants and other upland game birds on 128,743 acres around the state. These landowners agreed to permit "hunting by permission" on their lands, thus opening some of the best pheasant ranges to public shooting.

That is the opinion of Ross Leonard, director of the Fish and Game Department. It is based on years of experience and shared by Don Fredericksen, rancher and state senator from Gooding, who presides over the Idaho Landholder-Sportsmen Council as part of his civic responsibilities.

"We landholders are happy to have people hunting on our property if they'll just take the time to let us know who they are and when they arrive, so we'll be able to give them directions," Fredericksen says.

The Landholder-Sportsmen Council sponsors free "hunting by permission" signs and hunter "pledge" cards which Fredericksen believes have served good purposes. It also holds state and district meetings where farmers and sportsmen are invited to bring their grievances.

"When hunters check in at the ranch house, it gives the landholder an opportunity to tell them where his livestock is and to direct them to areas where game is most likely to be found," Leonard said.

Leonard said that much of the criticism is directed against the few hunters who are careless about leaving gates open, cutting fences or driving over soft, rain-soaked ground. Cruising at random over pastures or alfalfa fields also can be highly destructive to grass and hay stands under both wet and dry conditions.

"We've made a lot of progress in cutting livestock losses and in reducing the irritation caused by a few thoughtless hunters," Leonard added. "and the Landholder-Sportsmen Council deserves much of the credit."

Leonard stressed that the sportsman-landholder problem is a new one. "It's been with us in some measure since the first guest-hunter failed to exercise common sense courtesy in his landholder-host. It's the sort of situation destined to become more acute as demand outstrips supply."

Like many other problems the solution is simple enough. It's putting it into practice that's hard. What is required basically is that indifference to landholder problems be replaced by solicitous concern, that in the place of misconduct there should be exemplary behavior. In other words, access to privately held lands should be viewed as a privilege which it is, and not a right accruing from the purchase of a license. This is an attitude—a point of view—that seeks expression in the individual.

In common with other conservation problems, landholder-sportsmen tensions can be eased through educational processes. That's where organizations have a place. Programs such as the Idaho Landholder-Sportsmen Council stand to bring new understanding to overlapping interests of farmers and hunters. But it is not something a few officers and key individuals can ram-rod.

Such programs deserve and require support and participation by all those who stand to benefit. A few dedicated souls can plan, organize and direct such efforts at better understanding. But in the final analysis it's the behavior and attitude of the individual that is important in assuring places to hunt, whether upland game birds, waterfowl, or big game animals.

In cooperation with the Soil Bank program, the Fish and Game department has undertaken a tree-shrub planting program which, since 1955,

Volunteer Work Wins Driver Award

Work three months a year, college the other nine months and helping others all 12 months is what distinguished an intense interest in traffic safety and the September selection of Idaho's Driver of the Month.

Miss Winnie Stanley, 20, of Rexburg received the Idaho First National Bank's $100 savings account and the Department of Law Enforcement's safe driver award after she was named from among candidates proposed by Idaho State Police in all parts of the state.

State Police Officer Adrian Smith of St. Anthony cited two recent instances in which Miss Stanley rendered valuable services to prompt her consideration for the award. "It was called to investigate a serious two-car accident on Highway 191 late at night and Miss Stanley helped in supplying blankets for the injured. After everyone else had left, she remained and assisted in returning the borrowed equipment such as flares, blankets and lights," Smith reported.

Less than two weeks later at approximately the same place and again after nightfall a similar accident occurred. "When I arrived at the scene of this crash I found the same girl had the traffic moving through and had protected skid marks for our use, had taken pictures of the accident and had located the only eyewitness to the collision," the police officer said.

In Officer Smith's tribute to Miss Stanley it was stated, "This girl's help in obtaining witnesses of a first accident was of tremendous help. Had not this traffic problem been taken care of at once, the results do doubt would have been worse and at least one life might have been lost."

Miss Stanley is a student at Utah State University at Logan, majoring in physical education, and she spent the past summer as a waitress at Island Park Lodge in Fremont Co.

Bankers to Support 4-H's

Idaho bankers will again have an opportunity to support state and national 4-H programs through a state-wide drive during October under the leadership of Curtis Eaton, vice president of the Twin Falls Bank and Trust Company, Twin Falls.

Eaton's appointment was announced in Moscow this week by D. E. Warren state 4-H Club Leader for the University of Idaho. Warren said Eaton's appointment was made by Jesse W. Tapp, chairman of the board of the Bank of America, who heads the bank change program. Sharon Louise Schelline of Donnelly, is living and working with farm families in Nepal; David E. Kunkel of Poacello, is in Turkey.

"This campaign enables bankers to broaden their traditionally strong local support of 4-H Club work," Warren said. "The National 4-H club Foundation carries on a broad program of 'Service to Youth' activities in citizenship education, leadership development, and international understanding."

Two Idaho 4-H Club members are now in foreign countries participating in the International Farm Youth Exchange program. Sharon Louise Schelline of Donnelly, is living and working with farm families in Nepal; David E. Kunkel of Poacello, is in Turkey.

Law Requires Permission To Hunt On Private Land

Fish and Game Director Ross Leonard said this week that Idaho hunters fishermen and trappers may travel freely in Idaho which has been marked on one side to the high water mark on the other side, but—

1. Any person who trespasses upon real property in Idaho is civilly liable to the owner or occupant for nominal damages despite the absence of actual damages.
2. Any person who trespasses upon real property in Idaho is civilly liable to the owner or occupant for the actual damage resulting from the trespass.
3. Any person who trespasses upon real property in Idaho, causing damages by acts of the trespasser, attended by willful malice, fraud or gross negligence, is civilly liable to the owner or occupant for punitive damages.
4. Any person who trespasses upon real property in Idaho which has been fenced and who goes through cultivated crops thereon which have not been harvested or who does actual damage to any property within the inclosure is guilty of a misdemeanor and criminally punishable therefore.
5. Any hunter or trapper who trespasses on inclosed real property in Idaho which has been posted at least every 80 yards is guilty of a misdemeanor and criminally punishable therefore.
6. Any hunter or trapper who trespasses upon inclosed, cultivated real property in Idaho on which the occupant or owner lives is guilty of a misdemeanor and criminally punishable therefore, although the premises were not posted.

Leonard said cultivated lands in the meaning of this rule are lands which at least 50 per cent of the area within the inclosure is used for cultivated crop purposes and/or artificially irrigated pastures. He added that a stream is navigable within the meaning of this rule when a six inch log can be floated to market or other place of use during high water season.

This abstract of Idaho laws pertaining to the rights of fishermen, hunters and trappers in relation to the rights of private property owners was made by Assistant Attorney General Edward J. Aschenbrenner several years ago, Leonard added.

A New Zealander who set a world record in shearing 456 sheep in nine hours was recently honored by Queen Elizabeth.

Pullet Cannibalism Can Be Checked

The cannibal pullet-problem child to poultrymen can be reformed. Charlie F. Petersen, poultry husbandman at the University of Idaho, says reforming the cannibal before she becomes a costly nuisance is done by cutting off one-third to one-half of her upper beak. "Debeaking" is the term for the operation. Incidentally it's a painless as filing fingernails. And it's best done as the pullets are moved into the laying house at this time of year.

Before moving the pullets in the laying house must be swept thoroughly—ceiling, floor and walls. Petersen suggests disinfecting with a solution of 1 pound lye to 5 gallons of water, or with some of the cresote products.

Early fall equipment checks save trouble later on. The checks include repairing equipment for water, feed, and ventilation systems and installing fan ventilation and automatic water supply if these are not already available.

For a clean, dry, warm house, a litter of chopped straw or dry wood shavings 4 to 6-inches deep makes a good "floor." More is added every few weeks until the depth reaches 8 to 12-inches, Petersen said.

To maintain the litter and keep it dry, the poultry husbandman suggests that all water and some or all of the feed be placed on the roosting rack and that damp spots in the litter be cleaned with 1 pound lime added to every 3 to 5 square feet of floor space. Regulated ventilation of the laying house, coupled with frequent stirring of litter, keeps a warm, dry cushion under the layer's feet.

Nests treated with carbolineum remain free of mites or lice. One nest for not more than four or five hens prevents broken eggs.

Young pullets should be moved to the laying house a few at a time to allow adjustment to the new surroundings, Petersen warned.

Autumn Reverie: When Indian-paint-brush fires the wayside hills. And mountain ash touch up the woodland ride; They wake me—and my heart is with longing hills. For sweet remembered days of autumnide. And in this AUTUMN REVERIE I find A gladness that abounds with pure delight; When happiness that I had left behind. Bargeons anew in autumn's glory bright. —Bert Gamble

More women vote than men. They outnumber the men by over 2 million in the U.S. They own 51% of the stock of all corporations. They make 85% of all the nation's retail purchases. They influence the decision of 90% of all car sales. They own 74% of the new homes and 40% of all homes. In my opinion, we better start being nicer to the women.

I am no politician, but it seems to me that the basic difference between the two candidates for president of the United States is not help for the aged, good schools, better health, more production or national security. All of us, as well as both candidates want that. The real difference is in methods. One candidate wants to hurry things along with government spending, and if it results in heavier taxes and heavier government controls over our lives, that must be accepted. On the other hand, the other candidate would rely on the good sense and initiative of all the people, thus preserving the American pattern of individual responsibility. That is the real choice we must make at the polls.

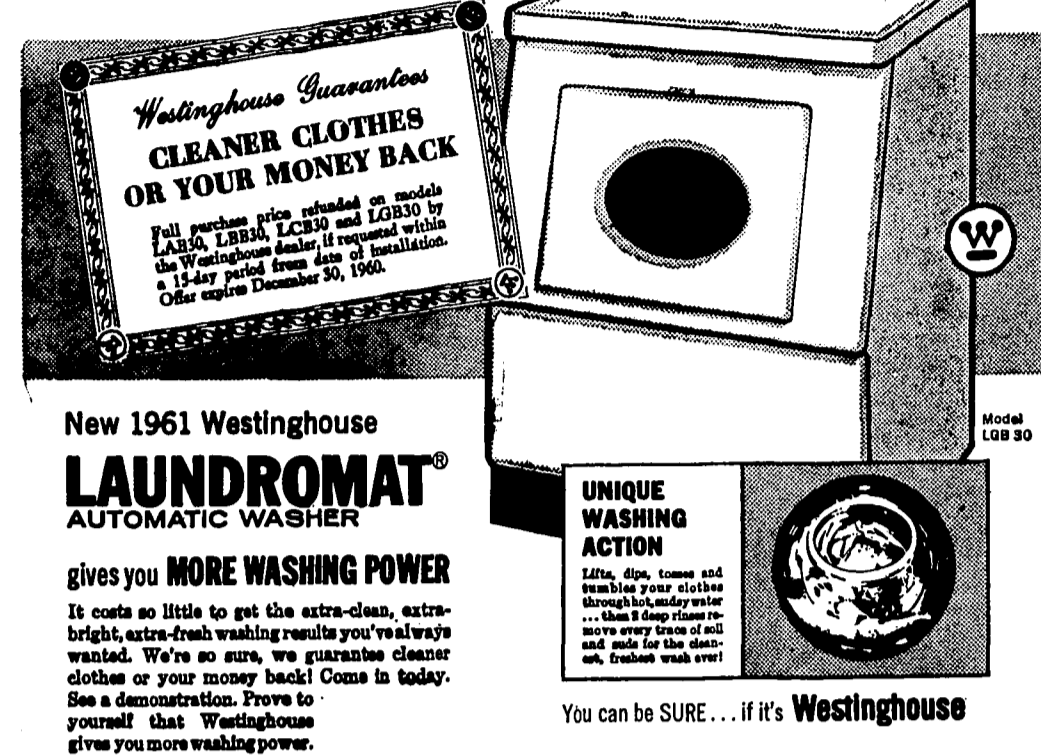

There is a lot of talk about our economy going to pot, but did you ever stop to think that we spend $760 million on 6,000 golf courses; $1 billion on bowling, with 22 million people playing the game; 70,000 new swimming pools will be built this year, costing $1 billion, and a record of 700,000 people will see Europe this year, with $78 million being spent in Hawaii alone.

Idaho specialists in weed control recommend a fall spraying with 2,4-D on infestations of whitetop. Another spray is advocated in the spring when weeds are in the bed stage.

A pamphlet on Medusa head rye, a range weed, has been published by the University of Idaho. Copies are available in the offices of county agents.

Sales of nonfat dry milk for home use have increased from two million pounds in 1948 to about 170 million pounds, according to the department of agriculture.

FISH & GAME NEWS

Hunter Success Told A breakdown of some 3,650 hunter report cards in the Boise office for October 12 shows elk and deer kills running higher than the comparable period last year. The figures are elk—1,180 as compared to 1,002 last year; and deer—1,377 as compared to 1,215 at this time in 1959.

This year the department again is using a combination big game tag and hunter report card made of tough waterproof fabric. These must be torn along the dividing perforated line. The game tag must be punched in three places to show the month, day and kind of animal (buck, doe or fawn) and immediately written on otherwise attached to the carcass when the kill is made. The report card should be filled out and mailed postage free to the department as soon as possible. Spaces are provided to record information regarding the location of kill, date of kill, hunter's home county and other data vital to future game management planning.

Duck Stamp Required Migratory waterfowl hunters 16 years of age or over must carry the Federal "duck stamp" in addition to regular state hunting licenses. These stamps can be purchased at post offices and from some authorized hunting license vendors. The fee has been increased from $2 to $3 to provide additional revenue for land acquisition to take care of the needs of migratory waterfowl. The 1960-61 stamp pictures two adult redhead ducks trailed by four ducklings and is the 27th issue since the early 1930's when the waterfowl population had dropped to a critical level. The passing of duck hunting from the American scene seemed inevitable unless steps were taken to perpetuate the species.

Hunting By Permission Another 28,292 acres of private lands were opened to hunting by permission this year and added to some 138,913 acres under the cooperative program backed by the Idaho Fish and Game department, the Soil Conservation Service and landholders in many parts of the state. The program involved the actual planting of 1,102 acres to trees and shrubs with revenue for land acquisition by permission would be allowed. Maintaining and improving living conditions for wildlife species are the purposes behind the present habitat program. This objective is becoming more important each year with the expanding human population and increasing demands for complete reforestation of all soil and water resources.

Report from the GOVERNOR

"Idaho Puts Its Best Foot Forward in San Francisco"

Ninety representative Idaho businessmen were busy in the San Francisco Bay area this week calling on industrial prospects and other California businessmen. They were doing what salesmen have always done. They were making calls and they were influencing people; important people, too.

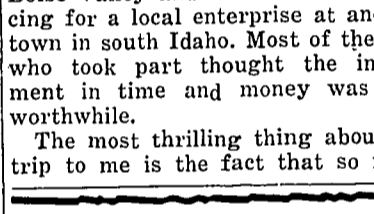

The important thing about the trip was the fact that it exhibited in Idaho's future. These businessmen all paid their own way to do this chore for Idaho's people. More than thirty of our communities were represented.

In the language of Madison Avenue we are trying to use the "soft sell" during these trips. There is not much point in trying to convince hard-headed businessmen that the millennium will come for them profit wise if only they will move to Idaho. They are interested always in markets, raw materials, freight rates, availability of labor force and general community conditions. These calls give Idahoans an opportunity to discuss these issues and to point out that when the coast companies need to expand, Idaho offers some of them an excellent location near their markets and close to needed raw materials.

These discussions also permit us to show off some of our advantages in liveability, a commodity that gets to be increasingly short supply in the great coastal cities. Too often the picture of Idaho as a snow bound state is the common one. We tell them that we have sunshine and good climate and that Sun Valley is a summer resort as well as the world's ski capital.

Do these trips get results? This is a little hard to measure but we think that the trip last year to Los Angeles was instrumental in bringing at least three new businesses to Boise Valley and it did secure financing for a local enterprise at another town in south Idaho. Most of the men who took part thought the investment in time and money was well worthwhile.

The most thrilling thing about the trip to me is the fact that so many of our leaders are willing to set their shoulder to the wheel to get Idaho and her assets more widely understood. When these facts are known widely it will be easier to attract the investment capital that we need so badly, and when the time comes for expansion by some of the coastal industries we will be in a position to discuss the desirability of coming to Idaho from the sound base of already furnished information.

We will not have to start from scratch. We will have done our homework and we can go back to call on customers we already know.

Last fall in Los Angeles a gentleman came to our luncheon who had been a member of the first recruiting party sent out by the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce in 1925. They called on some aircraft people to tell them about the virtues of southern California. One of the people they talked to was named Douglas, and after awhile he came to California.

Meet Tom Leupp: Mayor Leupp has a real concern for ALL problems of ALL the PEOPLE in Idaho's First District.

100% Honest, Reliable, and Trustworthy. You can COUNT on him. FAMILY man, CHURCH, SCHOOL, and COMMUNITY leader. FIGHTER for good government.

A YOUNG man with years of EXPERIENCE in government. Currently serving second term as MAYOR of Nampa, largest city in Idaho's First District.

Tom is a REPUBLICAN, not a MACHINE POLITICIAN! He will serve all the PEOPLE of his District.

NATIONAL and INTERNATIONAL problems demand good THINKING from EDUCATED leaders. Leupp has 7 years of college and university training (self-supporting).

Busy Clovers 4-H Club The main topic of discussion at the Busy Clovers 4-H Club meeting held at the Kasper home on October 10 was the election of officers.

The meeting opened with Linda Weber leading the flag pledge. It was moved and seconded that it be dispensed with the reading of the minutes. Roll was called by Dawn Hasfurther.

Roll call topic was to discuss the desirability of coming to Idaho from the sound base of already furnished information.

INDIAN SUMMER
Now Hawthorne bush and sumac leaves come dripping. As autumn madness sets the slopes aflame.
A phoceanus through low rustling leaf-drifts slipping
Brings greater happiness than I'll ever name.

And in this glorious INDIAN SUMMER setting, This harbinger of wild November's blast,
I still remember—and I'm not forgetting
The summer that was all too dear to last. —Bert Gamble

Final Census Count Lists Genesee at 535
An advance report on the final population count conducted this year by the Bureau of Census put Genesee's population at 535. This figure was released this week by the government offices of the Census Bureau.
If the latest population count is accurate, it would reveal that this town lost slightly in the number of residents from the 1950 census which listed Genesee at 552.
While Genesee lost in population, the rest of the county and the state of Idaho showed gains from the previous census. The official population count of the state as of April 1, 1960 was 607,191. This is a gain of 78,554 or 13.3 percent over the 528,637 inhabitants the state in 1950.

Latah County's total population is now put at 21,170 with most of the gain showing up in the city of Moscow. Potlatch also revealed a significant increase of over 200 people. Troy showed a slight gain, as did Kendrick and even Julietta. Bovill lost almost 100 people in the latest census count, with Dairy having a small increase.

Here is a breakdown of the census findings in Latah County:

Final Census Count Lists Genesee at 535
An advance report on the final population count conducted this year by the Bureau of Census put Genesee's population at 535. This figure was released this week by the government offices of the Census Bureau.
If the latest population count is accurate, it would reveal that this town lost slightly in the number of residents from the 1950 census which listed Genesee at 552.
While Genesee lost in population, the rest of the county and the state of Idaho showed gains from the previous census. The official population count of the state as of April 1, 1960 was 607,191. This is a gain of 78,554 or 13.3 percent over the 528,637 inhabitants the state in 1950.

Latah County's total population is now put at 21,170 with most of the gain showing up in the city of Moscow. Potlatch also revealed a significant increase of over 200 people. Troy showed a slight gain, as did Kendrick and even Julietta. Bovill lost almost 100 people in the latest census count, with Dairy having a small increase.

CLARKSON MAN WAS ONE OF FIRST PEOPLE TO RECEIVE SOCIAL SECURITY PAYMENTS

Mr. Albert T. Houser of Clarkston is one of the 5488 charter social security beneficiaries throughout the United States who received benefits in January 1940, the first month in which they were paid.

Mr. Houser was born in Ontario, Canada on September 28, 1873. In 1874 he came to California and lived on a ranch near Santa Rosa until he was 18. During this time he served his three years apprenticeship as a meat cutter.

GRACIE PFOST NAMED TO KENNEDY COMMITTEE

Congressman Gracie Pfost has been appointed by Senator John F. Kennedy to his Natural Resources Advisory Committee, the Democratic presidential candidate's headquarters announced here today.

"I am particularly glad to have Mr. Pfost on this Committee because of his special interest in water and conservation problems," Sen. Kennedy said.

"The Committee will have an important role in the campaign clarifying the issues in this field, which has been retarded and neglected by the Eisenhower Administration. The Committee will then make the recommendations for an action policy on natural resources for my administration."

Mrs. Pfost, of the First District, said she had discussed the water and conservation problems of Idaho and the Northwest with Senator Kennedy.

"We are both convinced," she said, "that real progress can be made toward their solution under a Democratic Administration through sound investment in our natural resources. I am pleased to serve on the Committee not only to help point up this issue during the campaign, but in order to help determine the policy of the new Administration."

Mr. Pfost, incumbent Latah County Assessor, spoke on her support of Federal Aid to education basing her case on the fact that Idaho buys products from other areas at a rate near Santa Rosa until he was 18.

IDAHOANS IN CALIFORNIA

Leading San Francisco area industrialists and business men got a thorough briefing on the Gem State's economic potential this week when 125 Idahoans were here to publicize their state.

Headed by Governor Robert E. Smylie and Louise Shaduck, Department of Commerce and Development Secretary, the Idahoans made personal calls on industrialists whose businesses could tie into Idaho's economy. On Tuesday (Oct. 18) 200 Bay area industrialists attended a luncheon at the St. Francis hotel where San Francisco's Mayor George Christopher paid tribute to the enthusiasm and energy of the Idaho group. "You Idahoans are the most charming show-offs we've ever had in San Francisco," Christopher said.

Delegation members told the industrialists they contacted that Idaho welcomes industries, and particularly those which can utilize the state's natural resources.

All of the Idahoans said that businessmen in the bay area are genuinely interested in Idaho. "We know that our message about Idaho's industrial potential made a lot of sense to California businessmen who could profitably expand into Idaho," Miss Shaduck said.

The Idahoans said they were warmly received wherever they went. "Businessmen down here were glad to listen to us and hear our reasons for their taking a good look at Idaho," one delegation member said.

Good Wild Meat Depends On Proper Field Care

By Jim Humbird Conservation officers of the Idaho Fish and Game Department have two major gripes at this time of year.

One involves the illegal bagging of a "verboten" game such as a moose through mistaken identity and leaving it to rot where it fell.

The others concern many hundred times a year when hunters spend considerable time and expense getting game, then do not exert as much effort in caring for the meat as they did in knocking it off.

The CO's have a standby question they fire at the least provocation, especially when a hunter appears to be a tenderfoot or poorly equipped for a hunt.

They ask, "When you get it down—what're ya gonna do with it?" Of course, the bigger the animal, the more "doing" it takes.

Elk hunts can pose some special problems in getting clean meat off the hills. Nevertheless, it seems reasonable that if an animal is close enough to a road to bring it out in one piece, the same should end up on the butcher's block a clean piece of meat.

Treks into the back country require advance planning, including the use of stock for moving both meat and gear. Then there are many other factors such as those imposed by weather, dirt, pine needles, horse sweat and flies to ruin a prime cut of venison that should have gone on the table.

One means of preventing egg clusters from being squeezed out of blow flies and becoming maggots in a few hours is a commonly used household water softener called "Borax". This effectively keeps insects away from fresh meat when sprinkled around neck joints and bullet holes in the carcass. A liberal sprinkling of black pepper on exposed parts does the same thing.

One of the most dreaded haunts of all hunters, however, is sour meat. This can be cut away and thrown in the brush like a cluster of fly eggs. It is the beginning of rotting meat. It follows the bony structure of the animal, turning tissue a slimy green as it fans out through the meat.

Body heat is the culprit. Getting the meat cooled before bacterial action can start is the most important thing to remember. Whether or not a carcass should be skinned in the field is a matter for the individual choice. It does help in cooling the meat quickly, especially on larger animals, but the hide protects it on the way back to camp.

The big thing to remember about game animals from elk on up is that they must be quartered, or, at the very least, split right down the backbone—an absolute must. Too many elk, in cold down to 20 degrees below zero, will end up as sour meat from the body heat of a carcass that was only field or hog-dressed.

Although there is nothing especially hard in dressing out a deer or elk and getting the hair out of the edible condition, there are hunters every year who do seem to have problems.

The first actual step in converting big game carcasses into steaks and roasts is to split the belly from the croch to breastbone. Having the head pointed downhill causes internal organs to slide forward into the chest cavity. Cutting a pathway through the belly and pulling the hide to the sides before slicing through the meat helps keep hair out of the meat. Inserting a finger under the sharp point of the knife—and keeping it there—prevents puncturing the "insides". Eventually the incision is extended all the way to the brisket, but usually the chest cavity is left intact until the animal has been removed back to camp.

Removal of six organs of bucks often give pause to the inexperienced—and this operation can be tricky. A simple way is to cut around the vent to free the organs of the pelvic cavity, pulling the colon out and knotting it or tying with a piece of string. This keeps excrement from spilling on the meat. When this has been done, the genital organs can be pulled forward and with the rest of the entrails. Be careful here to avoid puncturing the bladder.

At about this stage, the windpipe and gullet can be reached and cut. Then these and the heart and lungs can be removed, all on one rosy sheet separating pouch from chest wall, can be cut all along its rim of attachment and pulled out to the backbone.

At this point, all the "innards" can be rolled out of the cavity. Now the bladder is exposed lying right at the croch. By pinching its neck tightly with thumb and forefinger, the possibility of a disagreeable accident is lessened while snipping it free of the carcass.

There is a kind of seam or fault in the pelvis that a knife can find without difficulty. A sharp rap on the back of the blade with a rock or other means will send it through the bone without forcing. Then the pelvic region can be cleaned as indicated with a dry cloth.

"The no-budget promises of the Democratic party would mean—even if partially carried out—complete economic chaos and spiraling inflation," Republican congressional candidate Tom Leupp told the Caldwell P. T. A. last night.

"Sound fiscal policies and constitutional limitations of government are one of the nation's needs," he said.

YOUR Social Security? QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Question—My mother is 58 years old. My father paid into social security from 1937 up until the time he died in 1957. As my mother is now quite ill, I wonder if she could receive anything right now based on my father's earnings.

Answer—No, she could not. A widow is not able to start drawing payments on her husband's social security account until she is 62 years old—unless there are children eligible for social security payments. If your mother has ever worked in jobs where she paid social security, she might be able to start drawing social security disability payments based on her own earnings. If this is not the case, she would have to wait until she is 62 before she could receive anything.

IDAHO PRODUCES 300,000 TURKEYS EACH YEAR

The national average of turkey completion is about one bird for every three people or six pounds per person, says Robert E. Black, extension poultryman with the University of Idaho.

Idaho produces about 300,000—meeting the state consumption needs—with two-thirds or more grown in Boise and Magic Valley areas.

Nationally, portion of the surplus is purchased by the U. S. D. A. for the schools participating in the national school lunch program with the major buying season for the family still around Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Family size birds are usually the 12 to 15 pound hen, and the 25 to 30 pound males are largely purchased by the hotels and large eating places all year round.

There are two breeds of turkeys differentiated by their feather color. One, the Broad Breasted White is preferred by the processing industry over the Broad Breasted Brown, because they are easier to clean, Black explains.

A new variety on the market is the Small White Beltsville developed at the U. S. D. A. research laboratories at Beltsville, Maryland. These weigh from 8 to 10 pounds and are ideal for the small family. Black concluded another fairly recent variety is a turkey fryer which weighs from 4 to 6 pounds.

If a person receiving disability payments under social security is able to go back to work, his benefits will stop even though he doesn't actually go to work. The test is ability to work rather than actually working.

For the people their right to responsible, efficient government at every level. "And," he declared, "this can be done by voting republican."

"The no-budget promises of the Democratic party would mean—even if partially carried out—complete economic chaos and spiraling inflation," Republican congressional candidate Tom Leupp told the Caldwell P. T. A. last night.

"Sound fiscal policies and constitutional limitations of government are one of the nation's needs," he said.

Leupp, mayor of Nampa who is seeking to defeat Mrs. Gracie Pfost, incumbent, said "A democratic administration in Michigan, one of our most industrialized states, has shown the way to bankruptcy through a program of spend, promise and spend."

Leupp said "The principles of the republican party are best for the country. Therefore the republican officials are needed at every level of government. The country needs Richard M. Nixon as president, but it also needs a Republican Congress which would include Tom Leupp from Idaho's First District.

He said "This is the year to win

Inflation is a state of affairs when you never had it so good or parted with it so fast!
Two husbands were discussing their status at home. Said one: "I am the boss in my house." The other replied, for example, there was no hot water when I wanted some, so I raised the roof. And, believe me, I got lots of hot water—after a pause, he added: "I hate to wash dishes in cold water."
This week's philosophy: A lot of marriages would work better if the head of the house would remember to bring home some appliance along with the bacon.

Produce Kind of Wheat Foreign Buyers Want, is Advice

To make the most of the promising Asiatic markets for Pacific Northwest wheat, growers must produce the kind of wheats they want. The foreign markets cannot be regarded merely as "dumping grounds" for any kind of wheat this country happens to have in surplus.

Such were the opinions of Adrian Nelson, Genesee farmer and member of the Idaho state wheat commission, in his analysis of foreign markets for Pacific Northwest wheat before the University of Idaho's annual agricultural experiment station conference.

YOUR Social Security?

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

"Wheat growers are interested first of all in developing new markets on a long-range basis," Nelson explained. "We definitely are not interested in cutting back production. We want to produce right up to maximum but we want that maximum production to be on an economically sound basis."

What were the major changes in the 1960 Amendments in the old-age survivors, and disability provisions of the Social Security act?

Answer—Disability benefits can now be paid at any age; amount of social security credit required to get benefits was reduced about one-third; most beneficiaries can earn more after 1960 and still get some benefits; survivors of insured workers who died before 1 Jan. 1940 and after 3 Mar 1958 may now receive monthly benefits; some children of deceased parents will have their benefit amounts raised; dependent widowers of women who died before September 1960 may now get benefits; parents who work for sons or daughters (except household or non-business work) may get social security credits beginning in 1961; Clergymen who failed to file waiver for social security credits may do so any time before April 15, 1962.

Twin Falls Youth Named Idaho Driver of Month

Paul Logan is the first Twin Falls motorist to receive the monthly award for traffic safety. McDonald received the $100 award from the Idaho First National Bank which works in conjunction with the Traffic Enforcement of the Department of Law Enforcement to select each month a driver contributing to safety on the highway. He detained a drunken driver until police arrived to place him under arrest.

Young McDonald and two companions, Keith Olsen and Charles Ward, all of Twin Falls, were returning from a hunting trip October 16. About 10 p. m. on U. S. 30, 13 miles from Burley, a car driven by John Paul Logan, Pocatello, drove head-on toward them, almost forcing them from the highway.

The boys, assuming the driver to be either drunk or deliberately intent upon ditching them, turned their car around and gave chase. The other car stopped at the roadside about a mile from the near accident area and the driver got out—and fell to the ground, drunk. McDonald went over to him and the man asked him to drive him to Burley, offering the five dollars for the service.

McDonald agreed, slid into the driver's seat—and slipped the ignition keys from the car into his pocket. He climbed back out and shut the door and the driver, later identified as Logan, slumped across the seat.

Later he got out and tried to talk the boy into returning the keys, insisting he wasn't drunk, that he could still drive. McDonald told him if he didn't kill himself in the attempt he'd probably kill someone else, and kept the keys in his pocket.

The boys hailed a passing motorist and asked him to contact the police in Burley. That good citizen told them to "Mind your own business, the guy's just out having a good time," then drove off.

Ward later managed to get to a telephone near murtough where he called Twin Falls police, while the others held Logan. Twin Falls police in turn called the Cassia county sheriff's office. Deputy Ned Warner arrived later and made the arrest.

McDonald was nominated for the award by State Patrolman Broy Harding, Twin Falls, who noted in his recommendation that the boys spent approximately four hours of their own time assisting police in the case. "I am sure Paul McDonald should be given the safety award for the month," he wrote.

The $100 savings account was presented to McDonald by Robert Pence, president of the Idaho First National Bank of Buhl. Those selected as recipients are chosen from entries entered by Idaho State Police officers and are made on the basis of unusual acts that lead to the saving of human life on the highways, exceptional demonstrations of safe driving and extraordinary contributions to the cause of traffic safety on the highways of the Gem State.

Pence said savings accounts awards made by the bank each month, after all reports have been submitted for consideration. "These awards are a measure of our confidence in our young drivers," he said. He added that the program started Dec. 1, 1959. Presentations are made by the branch of the Idaho First National Bank nearest the home of the winner.

Good for IDAHO TAXPAYERS Good for YOU

The Brewing Industry is an important part of Idaho's growing economy. In one way or another about 4,000 Idaho families receive a substantial portion of their wages from the beer business, agriculture or manufacturing of products used by the Brewing Industry. This includes wholesalers, retailers, hop growers, malting barley growers, etc. Income tax and other taxes paid by this sector of the Gem State's economy are a big boost to the general income of Idaho.

Of added importance to Idaho's economy is the nearly $3.5 million paid annually by the Brewing Industry in Idaho to local, state and federal governments in taxes and license fees; indeed a fair share in support of the Gem State.

Grangeville Man Was Among First To Get Social Security

Mr. Edward S. Vincent is the only beneficiary in the city of Grangeville among the 5488 charter social security beneficiaries throughout the United States who received their benefits for the first time in January, 1940. W. V. Nusbauer, District Manager of the Lewiston social security district office, announced this week. Still on the social security rolls are 28,500 people from among those who became eligible for benefit payments during 1940.

Mr. Vincent was born May 6, 1874 in Lewiston, Idaho. His folks moved to Grangeville when he was 10 years old. He comes from one of the oldest pioneer families in the State of Idaho. His grandfather, Alonzo Leland, started the first newspaper in Lewiston on October 8, 1860. Both his grandfather, Alonzo Leland, and his father, Joseph K. Vincent, were in the gold stampede in Florence, Idaho, in 1861.

When Mr. Vincent was 12 years old he was taking care of the stage horses at a relay station at Mount Idaho. During the summer they could make a round trip from Lewiston to Mt. Idaho in one day. In the winter the passengers were forced to lay over in Mt. Idaho and return to Lewiston the next day.

His second job was riding a bell mare on a pack string of 100 miles which was packing supplies to the mines in the Florence and Warren area. He worked for the pack string for several years, and then ran his own pack string of 26 mules. He sold this pack string in 1898. This train went to the Klondike gold rush. Mr. Vincent remained in Grangeville area, blizzard and various other hardships like they use today, Edward Vincent owned an applejoe, and was able to pack 650 pounds on a mule. The applejoe is made of leather, and to Mr. Vincent there are none in use today.

In 1898, when the Buffalo Hump area was booming, there were more people in Grangeville than at any time. During this period Mr. Vincent ran one of the 17 saloons. Men slept in shifts, using all available beds. If you worked day shifts, when you retired the night before to work nights he came in and occupied your bed. A party by the name of Mr. Sweeney owned the Big Buffalo Mine in the Buffalo Hump area. They took out half a million dollars worth of gold in six weeks.

During this time they built snow roads to haul machinery into the Buffalo Hump area. Machinery was

WATER REHABILITATION RESTORES QUALITY ANGLING

Nearly three score and ten chemical treatment projects to restore quality trout fishing have been completed since 1948 with better than 90 per cent success, the Idaho Fish and Game department said this week.

This year, the big one was Magic reservoir north of Shoshone. Others have been Oakley, Sagehen, and C. Ben Ross reservoirs, together with Pettit and Black lakes and tributaries. Some 2 million fingerling rainbow trout will be planted next spring in the waters to Magic reservoir alone as part of the rehabilitation work. The larger lakes and reservoirs treated for trash fish eradication this fall will be closed to anglers next year, and will be reopened in 1962.

Mormon reservoir also is slated for rehabilitation this fall because its trash fish populations are a constant threat of reinfection of Big Wood river drainage and Magic reservoir. Perch and other undesirable species would have found their way to Magic through a system of canals. Plans now are to restock Mormon reservoir next year and reopen it in 1962 to year-round fishing.

August 1960 marks the 25th anniversary of the signing of the original Social Security Act. Over the years since 1940, $57.2 billion has been paid out in benefits to approximately 23 million people. The average monthly benefit payable to a retired worker in 1940 was $22.60. The amount payable to a worker retiring now is about $32.65.

The 28,500 beneficiaries who started getting monthly payments under this Federal system of social insurance have another distinction—their ages. Six of them have crossed the century mark; 2,000 are now over 90 years of age; and more than 26,000 are now in the 80's.

At the end of June 1960, 14 million men, women, and children were receiving monthly old-age, survivors, and disability insurance benefits, totaling more than $900 million a month.

Like other drought-stricken waters Magic reservoir was treated with rotenone as hundreds of boats patrolled to salvage fish. The result was a blanket of dying trash fish, mostly started perch and suckers, covering the surface of the lake.

The four-year drought had reduced the level of the reservoir from more than 50,000 acre feet to less than 1,000 acre feet at the time of the treatment. The department's prior estimate of a trout population of not more than 7 per cent of the total numbers of fish proved high on examination of the fish killed. Spot checks found family groups and others returning to their cars with one or two trout—and sometimes none at all. Others crested large perch.

Panic Is Greater Enemy of Lost Hunter Than Elements

By Jim Humbird
Idaho Fish and Game Department

Every year hundreds of persons become lost in the hills—some of them permanently—because they wander away from camp, cross a ridge into an entirely different watershed and get caught by darkness, fog or blizzard and various other hardships. Experience drives them away from any help.

For everyone using the great outdoors, the Idaho Fish and Game department has a pocket-sized leaflet called, "Mr. Hunter." It declares that anyone who becomes lost—but a smart hunter knows how not to stay lost. The department also has a 22 minute sound film on the subject available for group showings through prior arrangements. Entitled "The Lost Hunter," it shows many things a person does wrong in the mountains. How he becomes lost. Things he should do to survive. Filmed in Idaho, this popular movie is educational entertainment for both adults and the youngsters.

Adults generally fare worse than children because youngsters do not tend to panic as readily as grown-ups. When overcome by fear, the individual is his own worst enemy. Where a man or woman may become exhausted trying to find a way out, trying to find food and water, trying to keep warm, trying to "do something," a mopee seems instinctively to find the best shelter available—and stays put.

Enough food "to keep body and soul together" should be the least of the worries besetting people lost in the woods, with water a close second. Survival experiments prove that a man can live without food upwards of a month, depending on physical activity, and without water for ten days before dehydration. Besides, Idaho has an abundance of "flora and fauna" in the back country which is nutritious if not delicious.

Snow on the ground gives a plethora of water—and shelter. Far from being an enemy of mankind, the cold flakes are best insulating material known. Eskimos take this life-threatening element and use it to build homes, lining the floors with skin or pine bows, when at hand. Boulders also can be used to erect a shelter, with snow, plastering the cracks. Or if a big animal such as an elk has been downed before a blizzard strikes, the chest-abdominal cavity gives excellent cover.

The main thing to do when lost is stay put, especially during a storm or at night. If there is good reason for traveling, leave arrows and notes and never go blindly on. Hoard energy and above all avoid panic. But it's best to set up a base camp and stay there. If there is snow, tramp out an S.O.S. Keep a fire burning at all times. Have several al fires ready to light if aircraft fly over, using green boughs for smoke signals.

While food is physiologically unimportant the first few days, at least it helps keep morale at a high level. Paradoxically, the deeper a lost hunter finds himself in the back country, the better off he is because more food can be found, the more uneducated are the fish, the more plentiful the small game.

The more exotic foods among some 300 to 400 wild, edible plants in Idaho include "apples" from the Hawthorne bush, berries, cattail, water chest, blue camas, thistles and nettles—with a spot of evergreen needle tea to top it off. Cattails are 40 per cent starch, and the young shoots are an excellent substitute for asparagus. Blue camas roots formed the main staple in the diet of the Nez Perce Indians, the pulp being used as both bread and potato. Color is a good guide to the edibility of berries, with blue and black always safe, red most of the time and white never.

"If it moves—eat it," is the motto of Old Bjerke, Boise author and movie maker, who spent 43 days on a 600-mile float trip down the Salmon river from Marsh creek on the Middle Fork to Lewiston on a "survival" journey several years ago. With a buddy, he went into the Primitive Area sans food, sans matches, sans salt, sans everything except raft, knife and several fish hooks. Bjerke, who escaped from the Norwegian underground during WW II to train British commandos in ways of living off the land when dropped behind enemy lines, says that salt is of little consequence to a person lost in the hills. While the body salt balance must be maintained, the danger level is not reached ordinarily in a short time. He adds that salt can be obtained by steaming the soil dug from a big game salt lick.

He adds that the greatest danger to anyone lost in the back country comes from exhaustion resulting in aimless wandering about, and injuries which prevent self-care. Another extreme danger is drunkenness which causes the pores to open up and while a few drinks make a person feel better, he may freeze to death.

Contrary to popular misconception, Bjerke says that a sober hunter or woman will awaken before freezing to death no matter how cold the weather. He was trapped four days on an ice-flow off Greenland where the temperature was 50 degrees below zero. His shelter was the carcass of a seal.

Most auxiliary kits for wilderness hunting include the following equipment:

1. A sharp knife. While one knife is a necessity, two are even better. Why not take a good sturdy clasp knife (Swiss army type, for instance) as well as the usual sheath knife? A small whet stone also may come in handy.
2. A 20-foot length of strong nylon rope. Light and compact the extra footage is handy not only for handling big game kills but also for many other chores. A small pulley is worth its weight no matter the distance traveled.
3. A good compass. Avoid cheap models—penney-wise here is foolish.
4. A good supply of kitchen matches the area to be hunted.
5. A good supply of kitchen matches in a waterproof container.
6. Concentrated food or chocolate bars.
7. A light waterproof ground cover. This provides any number of useful functions when caught overnight in the woods away from camp. Synthetic materials supply the needed lightness.

8. A small packet containing fish hooks of various sizes, line and sinkers. Nylon line for small game snarles.

Before leaving home, describe the hunting area planned to as many people as will listen; before leaving camp discuss plans with other members of the party. Do not change these plans for any reason after striking off alone.

FISH & GAME NEWS

Year-Round Angling Although the statewide general fishing season ended October 31, as usual, there's still plenty of angling for all species in waters that never close. Several hundred of these are listed in the 1960 Idaho Fishing regulations. They are itemized in two ways. First, the waters open year-round for fishing for all species are specified. Then the streams and lakes open to fishing for certain species are listed. These are named under the six drainage areas around the state beginning in north Idaho. The Gen state is among the leaders in numbers of miles of streams and lakes, with some of the greatest fishing to be found anywhere.

In addition, a variety of animals and game birds await the hunter, including antelope and moose (by permit) along with mountain goat, sheep, elk and deer and bear. In addition to migratory waterfowl, the numerous species of ducks and geese, there are pheasant, grouse, sage hen, quail and Hungarian and chukar partridge. In other words, check the fish and game regulations regularly to be sure that some of the bountiful opportunities open to sportsmen are not inadvertently passed by. Essay Contest Deadline The Idaho Wildlife Federation announces the deadline for its essay contest for junior and senior high school students—November 30. All entries must be postmarked not later than midnight of that day. Teachers already have taken background materials back to the classrooms from institutes around the state this fall. More is available at the Boise office of the department. Cash prizes of $25, $15 and $10 will be awarded to winners in each division during the next national wildlife week, March 19-25. Three honorable mention prizes of $5 each will be given to runners up in each division. The theme for national wildlife week will be "Multiple Use—Balanced Conservation Planning for the Future."

JAPANESE NOODLE ASSN. TO WORK WITH WHEAT GROUP

The Japanese Dry Noodle Association and Western Wheat Association have concluded a formal agreement to provide a training program for Japanese noodle manufacturers in the art of making better noodles with white wheat from the United States, according to Rex Ard, Rexburg, president of the Idaho State Wheat Growers Association.

Ard, who is touring Japan and Korea with Idaho Wheat Commission administrator Harold West to inspect U. S. Wheat marketing activities in the Far East, said the training of noodle makers is a program which could promote the use of much more Idaho wheat in Japan.

"Dry noodle manufacturers in Japan uses white wheat almost exclusively," he explained, "and, of course this white wheat comes mostly from the Pacific Northwest."

He noted that Japan was a traditional rice eating country, and rice made from wheat have not been common in the Japanese diet.

"The training program specified in the agreement calls for training 1,000 noodle makers during the next fiscal year," Ard said. "These people will come from throughout the Japanese Islands and then return to their homes to acquaint the people of their localities with the use of noodles as a food."

Ard and West participated in the signing of the agreement at Tokyo headquarters of Western Wheat Association.

SMART MOTORIST GET READY FOR THE DEEP FREEZE

Winter is rough on automobiles—and it's rough on motorists too who fail to get ready for deep-freeze weather before it arrives.

A dead battery, frozen radiator, or car stuck in the snow are some of the problems car owners can avoid by proper attention to winter care.

Safety engineers at The B. F. Goodrich Company warn that some of the agony of winter driving can be caused by tires that are not suited for slippery, snow-covered roads.

Trailmaker tires with deep, sipes tread go in mud and snow without sending out an emergency call for help.

Heater hose, fan belt, and condition of the radiator should be checked when your service station man is putting in the anti-freeze. A loose hose connection, a crack in the hose, or a worn fan belt can cause a lot of trouble when winter weather adds extra strain to a car's working parts.

Windshield wiper blades, heater and defroster are other parts that should be in good working condition for safety's sake when the snow flies and windows get steamed and frosted.

Impatient drivers should be warned that snow tires are not an excuse to speed in bad weather, according to B. F. Goodrich safety engineers. People with good highway manners drive slower than normal on ice and snow.

Emergency conditions cause even the best drivers to skid on ice. Most skids can be brought under control by letting up on the gas and turning the wheels in the direction of the skid.

Elk Kills Higher

Hunter report cards received in Boise November 1 give a higher elk kill by about 15 per cent than during the same period last year. The deer kill, however, is down about five per cent, and it is believed that excellent hunting weather in the back country has caused nimrods to concentrate on elk and get their deer later. The cards report that slightly more than 10,000 deer and 3,500 elk have been taken as compared to 10,500 deer and 3,000 elk last year at this time. Big game kills reported through November 1 total 10,185 deer, 3,537 elk, 640 antelope, 54 bighorn sheep, 83 goat and 36 moose. Additional hunter report cards are received by the thousands each week from all over the state.

Pheasant Hunter Success Up

Idaho is enjoying a good pheasant hunting season year and a fine comeback from the ringneck slump of 1959. This year, 9,489 hunters appeared at check stations during the opening week end with 10,432 birds taken in 94,982 hours. This computes into an average of 1.10 pheasants per hunter at about 3.4 gun hours each.

During the bleak 1959 Idaho pheasant season, the Idaho Pheasant Association averaged 0.89 birds in 4.2 hours. The ten-year average is 1.01 birds in 3.6 hours.

This means that hunters are having 20 per cent better success than last year and ten per cent higher than the long-term average.

Report from the GOVERNOR

"He is Our President"

This is a plan for American unity as we face the future. I am writing before the election and by the time these words are published we will have chosen a new leadership for the United States and for the free world.

Some will be disappointed. Some will exult with victory. But the important thing to remember is that the people of the United States have elected a new President and for four years he will be President for all of us, and he will be our spokesman in the contest for survival between our way of life and the Communist way.

This is not to say that we should not differ with the new President about policy and the execution of policy.

We must remember, however, that the world watches what Americans do and how they behave. For that reason we need to unite behind this new leadership. It illustrates to all the world that we can close ranks as Americans after we faced the moment of truth and made our national decisions.

Abroad there are many people who do not understand the sound and fury of an American election. Somehow the fact that we can get pretty acrimonious and insulting and then put these differences behind us seems to many people in foreign lands to be almost unbelievable.

The necessity of a resurgence of national unity is that is nationally apparent is therefore most important. The world must understand clearly that we all support our government and its leaders when they speak for America at the Council Tables of the World.

Our freedom, and perhaps the fate of western civilization, may well be determined by whether the Communist leaders in Moscow and Peking fail to understand that America will back the President we picked last Tuesday.

All Idaho knows where I stood in this election. But whether the new President is John Kennedy or Richard Nixon he will be my President for the next four years.

Whoever man he is, he will carry one of the world's heaviest burdens and his leaders when they speak for America at the Council Tables of the World.

We must pray that the Lord will bless him with wisdom and that the strength of righteousness will attend his efforts in our behalf.

He is our President.

9 GUN FATALITIES, 7 INJURIES HUNTER TOLL TO DATE

The Idaho Fish and Game department said this week that there have been 16 hunting accidents since Sept. 1 and that nine of them ended in death. This compares to 23 injuries and six fatalities during the same period last year.

Commenting on the comparative hunter toll for the two seasons Director Ross Leonard said that even one accident is too many, but the state's record does not classify the sport as extremely hazardous.

"It is significant that the total number of hunting accidents this fall is 13 less than last year—particularly when it is realized that just a few inches determine the difference between an injury and death when dealing with high-powered rifle slugs," Leonard pointed out.

"The appalling thing is that most of the accidents result from careless handling of guns—and mistaken targets," Leonard said that he does not know of many striking resemblances between man and a moose, duck or deer, but mistakes continue to be made.

He stressed that hunting is rated one of the safest sports—10th in insurance claim statistics and far below swimming, boating, football and the like. But as with all sports, it still pays to play it safe.

"A hunter's chances of getting shot while hunting are fairly remote," Leonard concluded. "The national rate for fatal firearms accidents from all causes in 1957 was only 1.4 per 100,000 persons, scarcely above the 1.2 deaths from choking on food."

He stressed that while both hunting and eating are relatively safe habits, it pays to play it safe.

That way avoids the tragedies of death and injury from hunting accidents.

Many Will Get First Social Security Check

November 3 many people across the nation will receive social security benefit checks, made possible for the first time by the 1960 amendments to the social security law. Receiving checks for the first time will be working people and their dependents (and also some survivors of workers who have died) who have become eligible for benefits because of a provision reducing the amount of social security credit needed. The amount of work required to qualify for benefits has been reduced by about one-third, Mr. Nusbbaum said. Also receiving benefits for the first time will be widows whose husbands died before 1940. Before the changes in the law enacted in September, no benefits were payable to the survivors of any person dying before 1940. Now, benefits may be paid to the qualified survivors of such persons if the workers, at the time of his or her death, had credit for at least a year and a half of work under social security. If you believe you qualify for benefits under the amended law, it is not too late for you to apply and receive benefits beginning with the month of October. Additional information about this can be obtained from your local social security office. The people there will be glad to assist you in applying for benefits, and tell you what proofs you will need to establish your eligibility.

IMPORTANT FACTOR FOR BETTER DRIVERS

A renewed statewide movement which is becoming increasingly evident is to ask the next legislature to increase the age from 14 to 16 years before a youngster can apply for a driver's license.
Individuals and spokesmen for organizations are expressing strong opinions on the subject and most comments directed to the Traffic Safety Council and most of the other state 16-year-old limit—including those of many teen agers.
While the proposal is generally favored by most law enforcement officials, many of the other state fathers want the law changed for no other reason than because "junior has turned 14 and is making a name of himself about getting a driver's license without the help of the public performing as individuals.
Even though this reasoning can be precept of right and wrong, protection by law enforcement officers alone is highly inefficient. The help of the public performing as individuals.
Teaching a youngster to drive, whether through formal driver education course or by an experienced adult driver, goes far beyond the mechanical maneuvering of the car's gears and traffic laws. There is a vital need not only to know all the laws and rules of conduct are about, but why they exist and why they should be observed. Observance of laws must come about from an understanding of the difference between right and wrong and a sincere respect for the lives of others. The law is not a punishment or the loss of privileges.

Your social security is now better than ever. Because of the 1960 amendments, coverage has been extended, less work under social security is required, the principal changes are:
1. Persons who are now aged 50 years old to receive disability insurance benefits.
2. District Manager of the Lewiston Social Security Office, said this week that there have been numerous inquiries since the law was passed, "We welcome everyone who thinks he might qualify under the new law," Mr. Nusbbaum emphasized. "In fact, we're glad to see callers because it means word of the changes is getting around."
Mr. Nusbbaum suggests that everyone who answers one of the following questions "yes" get in touch with the Lewiston Social Security Office as soon as possible.
1. Have you ever had your application for social security benefits denied because you are not yet 50 years old?
2. If you are a widow, were you ever told that you couldn't qualify for benefits because your husband's social security account because he died before 1940, or had not worked long enough under social security?

Car Licenses Go On Sale December 1

Kay Pell, County Assessor today announced the 1961 vehicle license plates will go on sale December 1, 1960 and that vehicles must be licensed by January 18, 1961. She stated that there would be strict enforcement commencing January 19, 1961 for vehicles operating with expired license plates. The Commission of Law Enforcement has extended the registration time to January 18, 1961. This will allow expedited handling of all applicants at the state and county level as well as providing at least one pay period after the holidays in order that all registrants may comply before the deadline authority. The assessor advised these persons who have purchased a new vehicle during the year and have not transferred the title to do so prior to registration, as all vehicles except small wheel trailers must be titled prior to registration. The assessor asked that all passenger vehicle owners register in the county of their residence. Failure to register in your home county is a violation of the Idaho registration act. Mrs. Normie Clutter, deputy assessor in charge of licensing, reported that reservation of special numbers will continue until the December 15th deadline. "There are still many desirable numbers," she said, "and those persons who reserve plates in advance for handling charges will receive their plates in the mail very soon after the opening of the sale."
Joyce Clemmensen, Kendrick, will again supervise the sale of car and truck licenses in that area during the month of December. All titling will be done in the county court house.

DAGGER FALLS FISHWAY PROJECT COMPLETED

The Idaho Fish and Game department this week announced the completion of an $85,000 fish ladder in the upper section of the Middle Fork of the Salmon river, and the opening of a forest service road from the Bear Valley-Stanley junction to the project site.
Director Ross Leonard said the fish ladder was built to accommodate sea-run salmon and steelhead trout over the natural obstacle imposed by Dagger Falls to some of Idaho's best landlocked spawning waters upstream in Bear Valley, Elk and Marsh creeks.
Using federal funds provided by the Columbia River Development Act, the department built a vertical slot fish ladder with two entrances on the downstream side of the ladder, and one exit on the upper end of the falls. No downstream facilities are needed for the ocean-going fry next spring or in the years to come.
Leonard says the ten mile road built in connection with the fishway will be opened to the public and maintained as part of the Forest Service system. The area immediately about Dagger Falls is closed to angling, but the road will provide vehicular traffic into big game areas on the upper end of the Middle Fork.

DO YOU KNOW

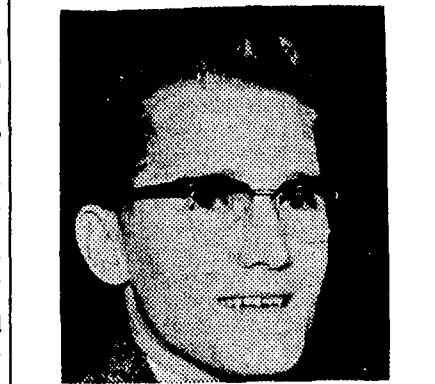

In 1930 the U.S. spent one-half billion dollars for research. In 1953, it was nearly 8 billions, and in the last year we passed the $12 billion dollar mark. Three quarters of this is being done in corporation laboratories. The price you pay for goods and services from large companies includes the cost of developing things we enjoy tomorrow.

You And Your Taxes

Just as air conditioning belies Mark Twain's contention that early birds don't talk about the weather, but nobody does much about it, so does an experience in Wichita, Kan., destroy the misconception that you can't do much about your taxes. In Wichita, average taxpayers pay $24 something about their taxes. As a result of action taken by a group of taxpayers, local government expenditures were cut more than $1,000,000 in 1959, one mill was cut from the 1960 tax levy, more reductions are forthcoming, there has been a general awakening of interest in local government, and officials have become economy-minded. All this in the face of a national trend toward rising costs and taxes at the local level. The device by which these results were accomplished was an organization known as Home Owner Tax, founded a year ago by a successful young Wichita businessman. Basically, the program involves a campaign to inform local taxpayers about local government expenditures, focus attention on constantly increasing local taxes, and induce taxpayers to demand that their views on spending and taxes to local government be heard. It is designed to help the taxpayer decide what he wants and what he does not want to buy and pay for in local government. H.O.T. organized a series of more than 600 "block meetings" in which taxpayers were given the opportunity to voice their views on the city hall. H.O.T. set as its ultimate goal a 10 per cent reduction in local government spending in Wichita. The program was adopted at the end of last year as a pro-

Home Cookin'

NEVER FAIL CAKE Here's a recipe that is right in step with the holiday season. A Never Fail Cake, easy to make and will keep well. Just the right thing to round out your Thanksgiving dinner. This week's cook is Mrs. Les (Crystal Esser) Allen. Thanks again, Crys. Combine, simmer for 5 minutes: 1 cup corned apples, 1 cup raisins, 1 cup sugar, 1 cup water. Add and cook 1/2 cup butter. Measure and sift 2 cups sifted flour, 1 tsp. salt, 1 tsp. baking soda. Add 1 cup chopped fruit mixture. Turn batter into well-greased 11x7x 1 1/2 in. pan. Bake in moderate oven 350 d. for about 65 minutes.

HIGHWAY DRIVING NOT POKER GAME

Periodic controversies about Idaho highway speed limits tend to confuse the driving public more than the law itself. Contrary to Webster's contention that the words "Speed Limit" on highway signs bearing such numerals as "50" or "60" might lead motorists to believe they are physically and legally safe in driving at all speeds up to those designations. "Limit" is defined as that which terminates or ceases at the utmost extent. Webster goes on to explain that in such games as betting, limit is the sum agreed on as the greatest number of stakes may be increased at one time. Too often, motorists seem to define gaming and driving as synonymous and are betting their lives and the lives of others on "sum" not agreed on as the greatest by which stakes may be increased. They like to play stud poker with duces wild and open tables.

The same section of the Idaho code which sets speed limits or the "sum" agreed on as the greatest by which stakes may be increased, also establishes prima facie limits by stating, "no person shall drive a vehicle on a highway at a speed greater than is reasonable and prudent under the conditions and having regard to the actual and potential hazards then existing." If there's a family rate that junior motorists must be given the right before 10 o'clock and on some specified occasion he is to be home before dark, it is hard to believe that junior motorists would be given the right to drive early-hour deadline. There is room for argument that Idaho's existing speed limit laws are unrealistic; some are entirely too low and others are too high, but that is another subject. Idaho has a law easy to understand. It should be obeyed until any necessary changes can be made. The public's respect for the law can exist only as long as those charged with its enforcement set an example by maintaining the same respect.

Thirty-one states and the District of Columbia have individual income taxes; 19 withhold all or part of the tax from wages and salaries. A 20th will begin to do so next year. Capt. Samuel Wells, commander of the British frigate Dolphin, discovered Tahiti in 1767. He has been a member of the Kamiah chamber of commerce, and he has served as commander of American Legion Post 75. He is a member of Kamiah's Masonic Lodge No. 1. Mr. Hoogland and his wife, Janette have a son.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS Question— My minor child was not eligible for benefits when his real father died because he was living with and being supported by his stepfather, my present husband. Do the 1960 amendments change that in any way? Answer— Yes, a child can now always be paid on his natural father's earning record even though living with and supported by a stepfather.

FAT IS NECESSARY IN QUALITY MEATS Fat is a necessary quality of good, tender, juicy meats for the American table. Mrs. Joyce Hofstrand, home economist researcher with the University's Agricultural Experiment Station says the housewife may be insisting on too large a proportion of lean in the meat she buys.

Outside fat or "finish" on the beef or lamb carcass is deposited prior to the desired marbling of muscle meats. Growers presently are working toward animals that will produce well marbled meats without too much of these excess finish fats, Mrs. Hofstrand says.

Herbed Beans, Idaho Style You can make a meal of Herbed Beans of recent and extend summer's barbecued meats, the roasts of winter-time. The simple ingredients are Great Northern Beans—that large white grown-in-Idaho variety, plump, tender, full-of-flavor—and a magic blending of herbs with a ham bone cooked in or meat drippings added before serving.

You'll need, for 2 substantial servings: 2 cups Idaho Great Northern (large white) dried beans, 6 cups water for soaking and cooking, 1 1/2 to 2 teaspoons salt unless ham bone or rind is used, 1 large onion stuck with 2 cloves, 1 small fish bay leaf, 2 fat cloves of garlic, fresh or dried herbs, pan juices from roast or butter.

To cook the beans: for full natural flavor and to save vitamins and minerals, use the soaking water for cooking. Place over high heat. Add 1 teaspoon butter to keep down the foam, and all ingredients except onion and drippings. Bring to boiling point; cover and reduce heat so that water will simmer. Cook beans about 2 1/2 hours or until tender but not mushy. Then stir in 2 to 4 tablespoons snipped fresh parsley and herbs of your choice, from garden or jar. Winter savory, marjoram, thyme make a good combination—about 1/4 teaspoon each dried crushed herbs, double for fresh. Or try thyme and oregano or basil. Stir in pan juices from roast leg of lamb or other roasted meat or 3 tablespoons butter. Serve piping-hot.

AG RESEARCH WORKER BECOMING MORE IMPORTANT

Both of the agricultural research worker in the development of Idaho will be even greater during the next 10 years than it has been in any comparable period of time in the past, declared D. P. Ensign, associate director of the University of Idaho agricultural experiment station at the opening session of the university's annual agricultural research conference.

Attending the research sessions, the first of two dovetailing university agricultural conferences, are about 130 research staff workers. Included are resident staff members on the campus, personnel from the seven branch experiment stations, representatives of cooperating U. S. department of agriculture agencies, extension specialists, and cooperating industry representatives. Main objective of the experiment station conference is to coordinate the university's total agricultural research program and to plan for the coming 10 years.

"Agriculture is a constantly becoming a more complicated business," said Ensign in his review of agricultural research on both a national and state basis. "Demand for research in all phases of agriculture is constantly becoming greater. Acceptance of research findings also is much greater—and faster—now than it has ever been."

Ensign also forecast greater activity in the agricultural research field by private industry. He pointed out that about two-thirds of all the research scientists at work nationally are now employed by industry. The associate director also noted that agricultural research programs everywhere have grown three-to-four fold since the end of WWII.

Following the welcome to the U. of I. campus by executive dean H. W. Stufens, Don A. Marshall, acting dean of the college of agriculture reported on the highlights of the college.

"I believe we are now entering a period of steadily increasing enrollment in agriculture," Dean Marshall explained. "Freshman, sophomore and junior classes this year are all larger than they were last year. Total enrollment in agriculture this fall is slightly better than 11 per cent above that of a year ago. Growing appreciation of agriculture as a career field with unlimited opportunities is expected to result in an even larger freshman class next year."

"Our leadership role in building Idaho" is the theme of the two agricultural conferences. Planning the program for the experiment station meeting, which continues the rest of the week, was a committee headed by Mary V. Zachring, head of home economics research. The week-long extension staff conference, starting Monday was set up by a committee headed by Mildred Haberly, state home demonstration leader.

20 PERCENT EMPLOYMENT INCREASE PREDICTED DURING NEXT DECADE

Despite short term ups and downs in employment during the 60's, overall employment should rise about 20 per cent, with service industries—trade, insurance, etc.—growing faster than production industries—manufacturing and mining—according to Changing Times, the Kiplinger Magazine. By 1970, the magazine predicts workers in service industries will account for as much as 57 per cent of the nation's entire labor force.

In a copyrighted article in the current issue of the magazine the editors note that this is a continuation of a basic change in the labor force that took place during the last decade when for the first time in history, service industries had more workers than production industries. They attribute the shift to technological advances, which make it possible to produce goods with fewer workers, and to the rising standard of living, which means that people are able and willing to pay for more services.

The article includes a breakdown of how the future looks in the various industrial segments, based on a Labor Department analysis of several factors: effects of population growth on the market for the industry's products, impact of the defense program on the industry, technological developments within the industry, and on. Predictions run as follows:

Construction. The number of workers will increase much faster than the national average—probably 30 per cent or more. Heavy demand will be created by the growing number of households, increasing outlays for schools, hospitals, highways, the rising volume of business construction, and the higher level of personal and corporate incomes. Most jobs will be for craftsmen and skilled workers.

Finance, insurance, real estate. Expansion will be rapid, 30 percent or more. Most jobs will be for clerical help, office machine operators, insurance agents. This will be a good field for women office workers.

Retail and wholesale trade. Employment is expected to rise about 25 percent. Most jobs will be in retail sales, particularly in the suburban branches of large department stores. Government services. Growth will probably be about 25 per cent or more mostly in state and local governments but the federal government will also continue to need workers. Demand will be for all types of employees. Other services. Expect a 25 per cent increase. This category includes all professional services.

Manufacturing. The rise in this largest industrial employment sector will be around the national average—20 per cent. Makers of durable goods will show a faster growth of job opportunities than manufacturers of textiles, food products and other nondurables. Best breaks will come in industries that develop new products.

Transportation and public utilities. Growth will be slower than the national average, probably 15 per cent or less. Trucking and warehousing firms as well as air transport companies, will offer good prospects; jobs in electric utilities will grow at a slower than average pace, but railroad employment will fall.

Mining. Employment growth will be less than 15 per cent. The number of bituminous coal workers will decline, but there will be a substantial increase in jobs in the crude petroleum and natural gas industries.

Agriculture. Employment will continue to drop. The farms have felt the most direct effect of the technological advances of this century. However there will continue to be opportunities for those who learn up-to-date techniques or become agricultural scientists.

Transportation and public utilities. Growth will be slower than the national average, probably 15 per cent or less. Trucking and warehousing firms as well as air transport companies, will offer good prospects; jobs in electric utilities will grow at a slower than average pace, but railroad employment will fall.

Mining. Employment growth will be less than 15 per cent. The number of bituminous coal workers will decline, but there will be a substantial increase in jobs in the crude petroleum and natural gas industries.

Agriculture. Employment will continue to drop. The farms have felt the most direct effect of the technological advances of this century. However there will continue to be opportunities for those who learn up-to-date techniques or become agricultural scientists.

Report from the GOVERNOR

Governor In South America
When this is printed Mrs. Smylie and I will be Buenos Aires and as far as the weather goes, it will be May in November.

We accepted the invitation of the Governments of the Republics of Argentina and Brazil to be the guest of the two nations at the ceremonies celebrating the 150th Anniversary of Argentine independence and the dedication of the new capital city of Brazil at Brasilia.

Early in 1960, the Argentine and Brazilian Embassies in Washington in cooperation with the United States State Department, requested the Executive Committee of the Governors' Conference to plan a visit by all Governors of the United States to Argentina and Brazil during the month of November to participate in the celebrations.

Secretary of State Christian Herter wrote the Governors' Conference that the Department of State wholly favors the proposed trip to South America," and made these points about the importance of the trip:

1. The Republics of this hemisphere are in a point of relationship to one another. The United States is important to all of Latin America as its largest buyer, the main source of foreign investment capital, and as a bastion of freedom. Our southern neighbors are equally important to us economically, politically, culturally, and militarily. No other area of the world is of more vital significance to the future of the United States.

2. The interdependence of the American Republics must be comprehended by all of us. Each should know the policies, attitudes, aspirations and capacities of the other. Fruitful abiding cooperation must be based upon a genuine mutual understanding of vital facts.

In closing, Secretary Herter declared—"I wish the Governors all success in the fulfillment of this most worthwhile mission."

Brevard Criffield, Secretary of the Governors' Conference, said, "One of the points should be mentioned. Our federal system of government has an important message for other nations. This is particularly true for such countries as Argentina and Brazil which are patterned on the federal system. "Person to person" contacts between such countries are of the essence and there is no substitute for the personal approach."

Thirty-six Governors are with us in the South American Republics, including the Governors of California, Oregon, Nevada, Washington, Arizona, Wyoming, Montana and Utah. The mission is headed by Governor Stephen L. McNichols of Colorado, the Chairman of the Governors' Conference.

Steven Kanikloberg, Bruce Scharnhorst and Stevie Odenborg. O. R. Morken left last Thursday for a few days stay on the coast, and will visit with his mother at Parkland. He is expected to return home Tuesday. Mr. and Mrs. Harold Springston of Peck, Idaho were all day visitors on Wednesday of Mr. and Mrs. Levi Rossebo. Mrs. Springston and Mrs. Rossebo are sisters.

FISH & GAME NEWS

Clearwater Salmon Experiment
An experimental project to determine whether salmon runs can be re-established in the Clearwater river system is underway with the artificial spawning of some 200 fall run chinook that were trapped recently below the middle-Snake dams. The eggs will be "eyed-up" in temporary facilities in the Brownlee dam powerhouse. These will be planted in man-made fish nests or redds in parts of the Clearwater. The fall chinook upstream migrations are not holding up too well in the Hells Canyon passage, especially in the long Brownlee reservoir, and the success of the Clearwater experiment might someday provide insurance in saving this run of fish through knowledge gained from its results.

Hen Pheasant Shooting
It has been known for many years that about seven of every ten hen pheasants available during the fall of the year never make it to another pheasant. The limited shooting of hens during the last two days of the season, November 19-20, in 17 southern and southwestern counties is an effort to learn what percentage can be safely harvested by hunters without damage to next year's breeding population.

As a general rule, game management people think that a harvest of 40 to 45 per cent of the fall population is the amount which may be taken with safety. Only a fraction of that amount will be harvested this year under Idaho's 1960 regulations of one hen in a four-bird bag limit. Biologists will use check station information during the two-day period to obtain basic data for evaluating the results of this year's limited hen hunt.

Following is a list of counties where the daily bag limit of four pheasants may include one hen: Ada, Adams, Blaine, Boise, Canyon, Cassia, Elmore, Gem, Gooding, Jerome, Lincoln, Miriudoka, Owyhee, Payette, Twin Falls, Valley and Washington.

Clearwater Steelhead Run
Although the September count of steelhead crossing the Washington Water Power dam above Lewiston was the second highest since the Indian fishing grounds at Celilo were flooded out by The Dalles dam on the Columbia river in the spring of 1957, the Clearwater andromous fish run this fall is somewhat less than last year at this time.

September's count was 3,817 steelhead, bringing the 1960 total to about 10,000, as compared to about 11,700 last year. From July, 1959, to the present, the steelhead run has been about 10,000.

Mrs. Smylie and I are honored to be invited to participate in this significant good will mission for the American people. I am most hopeful that we can do our part in strengthening the relationships between our nation and these other American Republics.

When I return on November 30 I'll hope to be able to write some of my observations in these columns.

HEN PHEASANT BECOMES LEGAL TARGET FOR HUNTERS NEXT WEEK END

By Jim Humbird
Idaho Fish and Game Department

Next week end in the counties of southeastern and southwestern Idaho pheasants no longer will be protected from shotgun pellets as they streak through cornfields and burst out the other end with a flurry of wings.

Not since the fall of 1949 has the dowdy female of the species been a legal target in this state. That year the counties of Canyon, Gem and Payette permitted the inclusion of one hen pheasant in a bag limit of three birds on the last day of the season by order of the Fish and Game Commission.

One hen will be allowed each of the final two days of the 1960 season in the 17 southern Idaho counties. The blanket prohibition against shooting hen pheasants was ordered by the commission in 1945. Beginning with the previous year and backdating to 1941, one hen was permitted in the daily bag limit statewide. The trend evidently began just 20 years ago when two hens could be taken in southeastern counties, and one in northern counties.

The first successful release of ring-necked pheasants in the United States was in 1881. From this initial stock the pheasant became so abundant that ten years later an open season was declared. Probably the earliest record of release in this country comes from New England in 1783, when several pairs from England were transported and promptly disappeared.

Like all Americans except the Indians, the ring-necked pheasant is a stranger in this land. Foreign to the rolling hills of Idaho, he came from Asia as we come from Europe. State game warden W. N. Stephens made the first official release of pheasants back in 1908 under direction of the ninth session of the legislature with 218 pheasants in Ada county near Boise. The next year about 1,000 birds were liberated in various parts of the state. The first open season on pheasants was held in 1916, and a 30-day season with a bag limit of four birds was established in 1919 in the counties of Gooding, Lincoln and Twin Falls.

To the veteran pheasant hunter who has been subjected for decades to the philosophy that he must be completely protected in order to perpetuate pheasants, the return to some harvesting of hens will come as a shock but it is based on sound research. Recent studies on population turn-over in pheasants have shown that limited hunting does not diminish an established pheasant population in any year without harm to next year's crop.

Why can some hens be harvested each year? Primarily because pheasants, as well as most other birds, are extremely short-lived. They are in effect "birds of the year." Their population turn-over is such that about two-thirds of the hens produced this year will not be around next spring to produce young. This occurs every year, regardless of whether or not pheasants are hunted. It is nature's way of creating living space for the young to be produced next year. If this did not happen, we would soon have pheasants coming out of our ears as well as robins, sparrows, titmice and most other bird life.

By limited hunting of hens, we merely substitute hunter harvest for a portion of this natural loss. "We know that a lot of pheasants die every year of natural causes, but won't hunting them merely pile an additional loss on hens?" Not so. To take a case in point, California allowed a limited hen hunting in the northern part of that state during the period 1955 through 1957. Intensive studies were conducted before, during and after the period of hen shooting to establish its effect upon the pheasant population.

These studies conclusively showed that the annual hen survival during the three-year period before hen hunting was exactly the same as during the period when the hens were hunted. The annual survival rate on hens was 35 per cent in both cases.

In other areas of California where either-sex hunting of hens has been allowed on licensed pheasant clubs for the past 18 years, wild production of birds has maintained itself on a relatively stable level despite heavy increase in hunting pressure over the past decade.

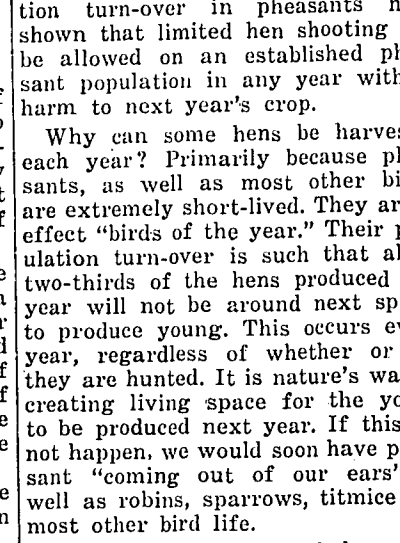

What is the objective in allowing some harvest of hens? As in all game management measures, the purpose is to provide more hunting recreation and allow fuller utilization of this resource.

The Department intends to follow the cropping of hens carefully by means of checking stations and questionnaires to evaluate the effect of hen harvest. If by gradual increase in hen take, as on one hen can be harvested for each four roosters in the bag, the increase in statewide pheasant harvest would be 25 percent. This would put at least an additional 100,000 birds on Idaho dinner tables in any given year.

It seems like pretty good business to add that much hunting recreation and food to the present take rather than donate it to the forms of natural loss which annually occurs to the pheasants.

About 26 counties are expected to take part in Japan's fourth International Trade Fair. The fair will open in Tokyo next April 17.

Potato Demand Shows Increase

BOISE — A large supply of potatoes in the United States this year is partially offset by increasing demands Wayne Robinson, Marketing Economist of the University of Idaho Extension Service, said this week in "Economic Facts for Idaho Farm Families." National production of fall potatoes is four percent larger than last year. Idaho's crop of 29,600,000 hundredweight compares with 38 million hundredweight in 1959.

Increased demand, Robinson said is due to expansion in the use of processed potatoes. "Growers in Idaho are benefitting by the increasing processor demand because of the growing number of processors in the state. Processors buy actively throughout the growing and harvesting seasons."

"Prices this year," the summary said, "have averaged well above last year for the same period. Prices for western Russets have been particularly favorable, ranging from one dollar to two dollars higher than prices of potatoes of other varieties from other areas. Maine Russets have not come on the market to any appreciable extent so it will be some time before we can determine how they will compare price-wise."

"The outlook for the rest of the marketing season is generally favorable for Idaho potatoes. On the other hand, there are some indications of over-optimism by growers. Shipments for the fresh market have been running behind last season. Some brokers are reporting that shortages of potatoes from other Idaho in light of short supplies in this state. There may be some danger of holding to long or bunching on the market. There is a possibility that an orderly flow in the market would be most advantageous for the Idaho potato industry. Orderly marketing should prevent market gluts that might reduce the prices."

OCTOBER SAVING BOND SALES

County Savings Bonds Chairman Ade Anderson today announced here that ownership of U. S. Savings Bonds has reached an all time high when the state's total sales for the month of October totaled $32,163.

State sales for the month amounted to $678,616. State-wide sales for the first ten months of this year came to $7,353,759 while sales during this same period last year were $6,587,307.

The cash worth of E and H bonds outstanding at the end of October was $42.8 billions, and represented savings of tens of millions of Americans. This is a big increase from the $39.6 billion held at the end of 1945.

The October increase was $85 million—the biggest gain in any single month since July, 1958.

Today, almost fifteen years after the end of World War II, the American people continue to buy and hold U. S. Savings Bonds. Instead of losing favor, as many expected, Savings Bonds go one selling in huge volume.

HOME-OWNERS CAN CHOOSE VARIOUS TYPES OF ELECTRIC HEATING SYSTEMS
 Resistance heating equipment accounts for an estimated 90 per cent of all electric home heating installations to date.

The simplest in operating principle of all types of heating, resistance systems carry electricity through wires or conductive particles that glow with heat like your toaster.

Different Systems
 Resistance heating assumes a number of different forms. If wires are buried in the ceiling plaster, in the walls or concrete floor, then you have electric radiant heating.

Then there are baseboard electric heaters, which circle the base of the room along the lower wall in a fashion similar to a baseboard radiator—but they have less height and bulk.

Small Units
 Or perhaps you may choose to have small units built into a wall or cabinet, some with fans, some without. Portable units also on the market can be carried from room to room and plugged into any outlet.

The manufacturer has turned out a sandwich wall panel with an aluminum screen. The screen is a heating element fused to the inner face of the panel. The panel can be installed in any wall.

New developments in the resistance heating field pop up regularly, thanks to manufacturer research and development. One of the latest is an electrically conductive plastic sheet which is easily applied to ceilings, walls or floor (beneath the finished surface, of course).

When tied into the electric service in your home, the sheet radiates a gentle warmth into the room from its entire surface. Cooper foil strips along the edges of the sheet act as conductors to carry current through the sheet.

Most resistance heaters warm the air in a room by convection, and the air in turn warms you. Radiant heating units, however, furnish reflected heat that warms anything solid that it bounces against. In the process of warming you it does not warm the surrounding air. Under genuine radiant heat, for example, you could be comfortably warm in a room where the air was at near freezing temperature.

New Jersey's first conservation law was enacted in 1975. It provided a bounty for killing predatory wolves. The word copper is derived from Cyprus, a Mediterranean island that is rich in the mineral.

Two is the least number of tropical disturbances, from which hurricanes are spawned—recorded in the Gulf-Atlantic states in one season. Don't fight a problem—work to find a solution.

Alexander Hamilton founded Paterson, N. J., in 1791 as a planned industrial city. President Thomas W. Wilson was better known by his middle name—Woodrow.

Report from the GOVERNOR

"The Biggest Turkey"

Many years ago there was a Thanksgiving Day that was etched unforgettably on the window pane of my memory. We lived in Iowa then and my Father's house was the usual bungalow that sprouted across the Iowa landscape by the hundreds in the second and third decades of the century.

There wasn't anything really special about this Thanksgiving except for the fact that we had a turkey and it was the first turkey I really remember.

Of course, there had been stories about a twenty-five pound turkey at my Uncle's house the Christmas I was two months old. And we had made the Christmas trek to Morning-side in old Sioux City to see Grandfather many times and they tell me he had turkeys for dinner in the Methodist parsonage where he lived and worked.

But somehow the 1924 turkey was the biggest and the best. Mother was a magnificent cook and when she brought this bird to the table, all golden brown and juicy, there was one small boy who knew it was the biggest thing he had ever seen.

I have no idea how big it really was but I told the McBride boy who lived over the back fence that it weighed more than fifty pounds. Of course, it didn't, but I was so impressed that cold, bright, brittle November afternoon I really believed it was the biggest turkey that had ever been roasted.

Father must have had it pretty good that fall because we had all the fixings with the turkey. There were cranberries, pumpkin pie, onion dressing, mashed potatoes and giblet gravy and a magnificent old Iowa tradition called scalloped corn and oysters. I can even remember what the tablecloth looked like. And my oldest sister had worked most of the morning building a centerpiece out of cuttings and fall leaves that had been gathered as they fell nearly a month before.

There was a trace of snow and the promise of more was on the northwest wind as the sun went down on one of that November's last bright days. I don't remember much else that happened. Dad probably repeated the program at the church later that evening.

But there was a great deal to be thankful for when I remember that day in retrospect. All of us were at home—all seven. I had a brand new wagon that had rubber tires; and in 1924 this was something. There was a new set of history books that had pictures that Dad would use in his history classes. But Sister and I could read them first before they went off to school.

But most of all there was a turkey that seemed to me small boy to be the biggest turkey the world had ever seen.

Even now, come to think of it, I've never seen a turkey that looked bigger. Happy Thanksgiving!

PINE NEEDLES FOR MULCH IN STRAWBERRY BEDS

Ponderosa pine needles are a usable winter mulch for strawberries, suggests Leif Verner, horticulturist with the University.

The needles are bulky enough so that there is little danger of their matting down to smother the plants during winter months. Verner suggests, applying the needle-mulch two inches deep over the entire area including the plants and spaces in the row between plants.

The Genesee News, Genesee, Idaho, November 25, 1960 3

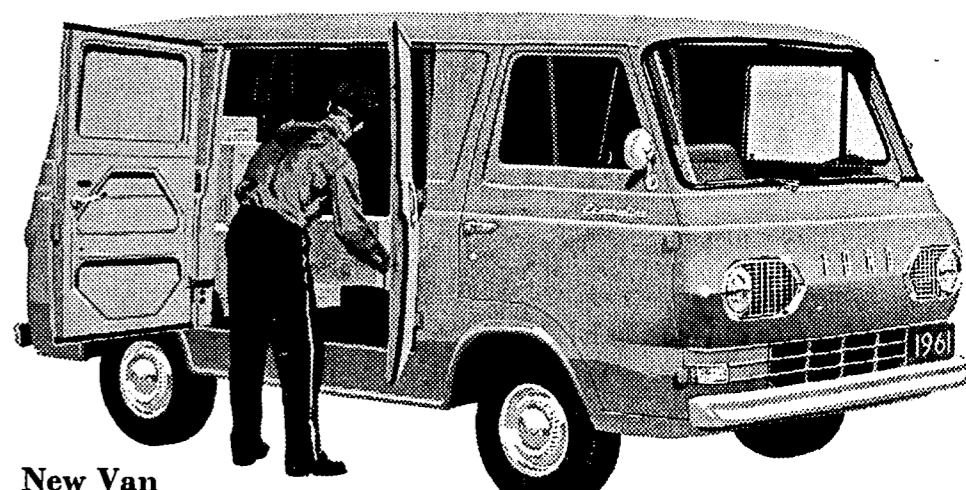

Verner explains that the mulch must be raked away from the plants in the spring before the leaves turn yellow. Leaving the mulch on the ground between the rows helps to keep the berries clean and conserve moisture during the summer.

Flowing or spading the Ponderosa pine needles under will do no harm; but, Verner warns a fairly liberal amount of nitrogen applied to the soil is necessary to help in breaking that decompose the needles.

The full name of the South American nation of Brazil is "Estados Unidos do Brazil" or United States of Brazil.

 down the old mulch. From 300 to 400 pounds of ammonium sulfate per acre will furnish essential nitrogen both for plant growth and bacteria in the soil necessary to help in breaking that decompose the needles.

November moon, it seems so good To see you through the trees; It puts me in a pensive mood With tender memories.

Composite Bond and Stock Fund directors have declared a dividend of 15 cents a share from earned investment income, payable November 30 to shareholders of record November 11. This 15-cent fourth quarter dividend, with three previous quarterly dividends of 13 cents a share each, brings to 54 cents a share the total of such dividends paid by the Fund during the present fiscal year.

Funds directors also declared a distribution of 80 cents a share from realized capital gains, with the same payment and record dates. The total amount distributed to Fund shareholders from this source on November 30 will be $318,103.

Section Of Fine Street Closed To Traffic

A section of Fine Street, from the Lew Messersmith home to the Markie Springer residence, has been closed to traffic by order of the city council. It was announced this week by city officials. This closure will remain in effect until further notice.

One of the reasons for the closure is the fact that the section of road is in poor repair and very seldom used and during the winter months and bad weather the road is often impassable. Another reason is that the street is often used by children for sledding purposes and this represents a serious hazard for drivers, to say nothing of the danger to the playing youngsters.

Report from the GOVERNOR "Commendation for Public Utilities Commission" The Idaho Public Utilities Commission is deserving of a word of commendation. This important agency of government seldom gets the recognition it should. The three members of the Commission, A. O. Sheldon, Frank Meek and Ralph Wickberg, have transformed the agency into a really effective instrument for public service.

The Commission is recognized nationally. Mr. Sheldon was recently elected President of the Mountain Pacific States Conference of Public Service Commissions. All three members have been asked by the Interstate Commerce Commission to assist in that agency's work.

For too long a time Idaho was content to rock along with a Public Utility Commission that was understaffed, under financed and unprepared. Of recent years the Legislature has rightly recognized the importance of doing this job right and has furnished more adequate appropriations.

The results have begun to show in reduced rates from North Idaho points to Pacific Coast ports and in more complete and sensitive regulation of all of our utilities.

There is still much to do. We need to enlarge the calibre of its membership at the present high level. No agency of government affects the entire economy of the state as importantly as this one does. As of us are affected by the rates we pay for power, rail transport, gas, telephone and domestic water. We are closely affected too by the kind of service the utilities render.

The Public Utilities Commission can be helpful to the economy in many ways. It can help the railroads and the shippers secure rate adjustments that will give us competitive access to add markets and the Commission can help prevent the establishment of rate structures elsewhere that discriminate against Idaho producers.

I am confident that the Legislature's new found appreciation of this important agency will continue. I certainly hope we have a strong Public Utilities Commission can do a very great deal to accelerate the growth of Idaho.

Local Post Office Advises All to Mail Early, Avoid Rush. Now that we're heading directly into the Christmas mail rush, Postmaster John Hickman put his 'Mail Early for Christmas' campaign into high gear today.

Postmaster said, "We're ready for an all time record Christmas mail this year. Every facility of the post office is being expanded to render maximum service. Extra personnel have been added and special mailing schedules will be set up to insure prompt handling of the tremendous flood of both incoming and outgoing mail."

"However," the postmaster continued, "the vast volume of Christmas mail is only part of our problem. Names and addresses are often carelessly written, many packages are poorly wrapped or have insufficient postage on them. These oversights result in delays and disappoinment most of which can be avoided if every one will follow these simple requirements:

1. Be sure your Christmas card and gifts mailing lists are up-to-date. Wrap Christmas gifts securely. Address cards and gifts correctly. Use complete addresses, including street number, rural route, or post office box number. Be sure that the name of the street is complete with avenue, parkway or drive. Avoid abbreviation of street and state names. Use zone numbers where ever possible, and be sure to include your own zone number in your return address.

J. Kanikkeberg To Head Civic Club; Genesee Airfield Discussed. Jordan Kanikkeberg, acting superintendent of the Genesee Public School system, was chosen as president of the Genesee Civic Association at a meeting of that organization held Wednesday evening, Dec. 7, in the Genesee Cafe.

President of the Civic group and Vernon Farnell, an instructor at GHS, was elected secretary-treasurer for the coming year. The officers will assume their duties with the January meeting. Kanikkeberg will name his committees for 1961 at that time.

Air Field Discussed. Following the short business meeting, Pete Fountain, well-known aviator, was introduced and the Moscow pilot explained some of his plans for an air field in Genesee.

Mr. Fountain said that he was in the process of purchasing land south of Genesee and planned to construct a landing field for his planes. He briefly told the group what the field would be like and also indicated that, with a little community help, of the possibility of entering the strip to provide definite community services.

Agricultural purposes would be the main use of the field, Fountain said. This would include spraying for insects and fertilizer application. With the construction of a landing strip, the pilot would be in a position to offer better and faster service to the farmers.

Fire protection is another service that airplanes are becoming more and more called upon to provide. With an air field near Genesee, used as a base, planes laying water and chemicals and also being used for spotting would be of more value.

Fountain added that at present, there is not another air field in Latah County except his own strip in Moscow and the State Aeronautic officials are interested in seeing a landing field being built in this section of the state. There is also a possibility of state or federal funds for this project which would help the community decide to help.

Fountain said he was going ahead with his own strip development and would construct a 3200-foot runway which will be flying off of by next spring.

Opening the concert this year, the High School Band will play Harold Walters "Christmas Suite" which features four Christmas carols from different lands. Following this number, the 47-voice Girls Chorus will sing "The Christmas Story". Also featured will be the Melodettes and the Girls Sextet.

In closing the concert, the audience and chorus will join together in singing two popular Christmas carols. A reading will be given by Stewart Sprenger during the final carol.

It is hoped that a large crowd will be present for this event. There is no admission charge.

Potlatch Tops GHS; Culesac Here Sat. Genesee's basketball season got off to a rough start Friday evening, Dec. 2, when the Bulldogs were throttled 54-31 by the Potlatch Loggers on the PHS court. This was the first game of the season for the Bulldogs and it was in trouble all the way against the taller team.

Adding their height and accuracy to the first-game jitters that the Bulldogs were experiencing, the Loggers were leading 27-14 at the end of the first half. In the second period the Loggers coasted along and stretched their margin of victory to 21 points.

Larry Feltz netted 9 points for the Bulldogs while Logger Glen LaZelle posted 13 for high point honors for the winners.

Potlatch made a clean sweep of the evening by beating the Genesee "B" team 44-11 in the curtain raiser.

Culesac Here Saturday. Local basketball fans will get their chance to see the Bulldogs in action on Saturday evening, December 10, as the Kanikkeberg Boys play host to the visiting Culesac squad. Culesac was added to the Bulldogs' schedule for the first time this season. All "B" games start at 6:45 p. m.

Skies Are Clear; Weather's Cold. Despite the bright sun and the clear, blue skies, Genesee had little difficulty in realizing that winter is here. The temperatures were the tip-off. Almost every morning this week the mercury has slipped down between 10 and 15 degrees above zero.

Although it has been cold, the weather has not been too disagreeable. The only exception was last Saturday when the merchants gathered on the streets in string the holiday lights, but the merchants are used to this sort of thing, since it always seems to be that way when it comes time to decorate the town.

Sunday the weather was clearing most of the day but there was a chilling wind present. The skies cleared early in the week and have remained that way.

Local Post Office Advises All to Mail Early, Avoid Rush. Now that we're heading directly into the Christmas mail rush, Postmaster John Hickman put his 'Mail Early for Christmas' campaign into high gear today.

Postmaster said, "We're ready for an all time record Christmas mail this year. Every facility of the post office is being expanded to render maximum service. Extra personnel have been added and special mailing schedules will be set up to insure prompt handling of the tremendous flood of both incoming and outgoing mail."

"However," the postmaster continued, "the vast volume of Christmas mail is only part of our problem. Names and addresses are often carelessly written, many packages are poorly wrapped or have insufficient postage on them. These oversights result in delays and disappoinment most of which can be avoided if every one will follow these simple requirements:

Use complete addresses, including street number, rural route, or post office box number. Be sure that the name of the street is complete with avenue, parkway or drive. THE AMERICAN WAY

No Relief in Sight

Idaho's Wildlife Picture Makes Us Grateful

If Thanksgiving Day had not been proclaimed as national festival falling on the last Thursday of Nov. by President Abraham Lincoln back in 1863, the brave new territory of Idaho probably would have adopted the traditional harvest celebration anyway from the pilgrims. History records that there was no uniformity of acceptance by early Americans of the annual thanksgiving period established by the Plymouth colony following that first dreadful winter, when half the pilgrim company perished from hardships. It ultimately was through the efforts of one woman, Mrs. Sarah Josepha Hale, editor of "Godey's Lady Book," that the first nation-wide Thanksgiving Day was set aside. She has plumped editorially for 20 years on the subject, and had written letters to each of the succession of presidents, until the day finally found favor with Lincoln. Thus Mrs. Hale became known as the "Mother of Thanksgiving," the same year Idaho became a territory. Now, nearly a century later, the day still is regarded with reverence in the state of Idaho, as elsewhere, as a family day. Thanksgiving invokes nostalgic memories of the back home, of the old farmhouse kitchen and the pantry crowded with goodies. The passing of time has been good to Idaho and its annual wildlife harvest of big game animals, migratory waterfowl, upland game birds and numerous species of fish. Today the state has more elk and deer than in the pioneer epoch, and the Salmon river still is as untamed and teeming with anadromous chinook and steelhead trout as in the days of Captains Lewis and Clark. Excerpts from monthly narrative reports to the Fish and Game department from conservation officers are revealing. A phone call to D. G. Wright of Pocatello, for example, inquired: "Where can I take my Elders quorum in the morning so we can all kill a deer?" Another report states: "On Sunday October 23, we held a checking station on the Snake river about 20 miles upstream from Lewiston. I have never seen such a variety of fish and game at any one time. At the end of day we had checked seven steelhead, six small-mouth bass, two channel cats, two sturgeon, eight chukars and 25 deer," according to Russell Hart. Conservation Officer Albert Lyle of Emmett says he has been very busy "jumping from one hunting season opening to the next, and from big game to geese to ducks to big game again—and back to the valley for pheasants, quail, chukar and Hungarian partridge—then back to big game again." Mike Wilkins writes from the little North Fork post office (Salmon river) that he "spent the month of October on general patrol checking elk, deer, steelhead and grouse. This area was hunted hard as the roads were open to cars, jeeps, tote goats and flat feet." Because of overlapping general seasons, it has been possible this fall to bag limits of ducks, geese, pheasants, chukars, quail, rabbits and, of course, deer, elk, big horn sheep, some mountain goat, and bear. By drawing permits for controlled hunts, moose, antelope and mountain goat also can ced on elk hunting in 1907, people rarely were concerned about the future of wapiti in this state. The season was cut to 3 1/2 months and one animal per person. Later many areas were closed to all elk hunting. In 1914, the biennial report of the Fish and Game department said, "We now have but a few scattered bands." In 1947 there were about 82,000 deer hunters in Idaho. That year they harvested an estimated 19,000 white-tail and muleys. In 1957 some 118,000 hunters harvested about 62,000 white-tail and muleys. In ten years the number of buckskin hunters increased 44 per cent, but the annual deer harvest more than doubled. According to Roger J. McCormack, game biologist, it is true that some areas of Idaho now have more deer than they had ten years ago. However, the main reason for the great increase in deer harvest is the more efficient us Idahoans are making of existing populations. In some areas deer harvests have been doubled and tripled as a result of growing recognition of some of the large deer populations. He added, "If the deer herds are not harvested, they may continue to build up for a few years but inevitably hard winters, lack of adequate food, or disease will thin their numbers down. It has often been said that 'deer cannot be stockpiled.' No truer words were ever spoken." So it is in Idaho. Colorful autumn presage Thanksgiving days, and the crisp bright yellow blaze of aspen and the red gold of sumac and maple splashed across the hills signal the harvest of big game, birds and fish to be taken by all those who seek them.

be taken. Many ninrads carry fishing gear along with rifles and shotguns. Even after October 31, when the statewide general fishing season ended, scores of lakes and streams remained open to year-round angling for trout, bass, crappie, perch and whitefish, among others. And the best success for big Macinaw and Kamloops rainbow trout in north Idaho's Pend Oreille and Priest lakes is in November. For example, Cecil Hulbert of Grace caught his near-record Kamloops trout last November 23—only a day before the end of the 1959 season. His fish weighed 36 pounds, 8 ounces. Several Macinaws weighing from 40 to 47 pounds were caught at Priest lake last fall. As "plus value", there is a fall run of chinook or king salmon to the Snake river gravel spawning beds below Swan Falls. Salmon angling for the most part is in pursuit of the spring-summer chinook runs in north-central Idaho along the main Salmon river and tributaries. It seems that not many people know about the Snake river run in November. It wasn't always so easy to find elk in the Idaho mountains. When the first major restrictions were pla-

CHANGES IN SOCIAL SECURITY LAW WILL BE EXPLAINED

On December 3, all people receiving old-age and survivors social security checks received a little slip in the envelope with their checks. This is one way the Social Security Administration is using to tell them of a change in the law as to how much they may earn and still receive their social security benefits. Under the old law, which will remain in effect the rest of this year, a person can earn as much as $1,200 a year and still receive all of his benefits. For each $80, or fraction of $80 he earns over that, however, one month's benefit is withheld. There are exceptions to this. Regardless of his total earnings a person may receive his benefit for any month he is over 72 or more. He may also receive his benefit for any month he neither earns more than $100 in wages nor does substantial work in self-employment. Beginning next year, a person may still earn as much as $1,200 and receive all of his benefits. When he earns between $1200 and $1500, he will have $1 in benefits withheld for each $2 he earns. For earnings of over $1500, he will have $1 in benefits withheld for each $1 of earnings. As before, though, a person may receive his benefits for any month he neither earns wages of more than $100 nor works in self-employment, regardless of his total earnings for the year. He will still receive his benefits for any month he is 72 or over, also. Your Lewiston social security office has a booklet available describing the new earnings test in more detail. If you get the chance, stop by and ask for a copy. It's free. Or, if it's easier for you, call or write the office and ask them to send you a copy. They will be glad to.

The tags show whether herd populations are increasing, declining or remaining stable, among other things. To spawn naturally have about a 35 per cent survival of downstream migrants and eyed eggs planted in man-made nests or redds sometimes with a survival rate as high as 91 per cent. While many details remain to be worked out, present plans call for planting eyed eggs from fall chinook in the Lochan and Selway rivers and their tributaries as an immediate beginning. About one-half million eyed eggs were received this month from the Spring Creek federal hatchery above Bonneville dam, and other fall chinook eggs were taken from fish trapped below Oxbow dam on the middle-Snake river. These will be eyed-up at temporary hatchery facilities now at the power house. Next spring, a temporary station for processing salmon eggs to the point where they can be planted will be built on additional land recently purchased on Lapwai creek near Lewiston. A part of the Columbia river development program for anadromous or sea-run fish, that is the first time federal funds have been approved for operational studies rather than construction projects, Director Leonard disclosed. It is hoped that two million eyed spring chinook eggs will be available for planting next year. In nature, salmon leave their ocean feeding grounds as they approach maturity and follow homing instincts back to the river system of their birth. They enter large rivers such as the Columbia several months before the actual spawning time in order to travel the hundreds of miles to their native streams. Lewiston, for example, is roughly 500 miles from the mouth of the Columbia below Astoria. After arrival, the female seeks out a suitable patch of gravel and begins to dig the nest or redd by turning on her side, vigorously beating her tail against the bottom of the stream. This action lifts some gravel which is moved downstream by the current. The activity is repeated many times in the same area until the redd is deep enough to suit the homemaker sometimes up to 18 inches. She may have several suitors, but one usually fights off the others and observes the nest-building carefully. After depositing some of her eggs, the female moves upstream and begins digging again as the male swims over and fertilizes the eggs. The current quickly covers the redd with sand and gravel. The average female chinook lays about 5,000 eggs. After spawning, all of the males

Return "ID" Tags From Bagged Game Is Plea

Hunters who have bagged deer with "ID" tags in their cars were requested this week by the Idaho Fish and Game department to return them or report the serial numbers found on the tags. Director Leonard explains that the experiments now underway are not the first attempts to restore salmon runs to the Clearwater river. Back in 1947, 16,800 hatchery reared fingerling salmon were stocked into the North Fork of the Clearwater. Six of these returned as three-year-olds in August of 1960, the first indication that such a project is feasible. Since the life cycle of chinook salmon averages four years from recruitment to return to the stream of nativity from the ocean, the Idaho Fish and Game department planted fingerling over a seven-year period as follows: 1948—36,000; 1949—31,000; 1950—60,000; 1951—69,920; 1952—11,660; 1953—29,232; and 1954—45,600. Although only 523 chinook salmon have been counted entering the Clearwater river over the Lewiston dam since 1950, the unimpressive number nevertheless does provide evidence that the chinook runs can be rebuilt in that drainage system. It is believed by department biologists that a major weakness in the earlier experiments was the relatively small number of fish per planting. If more had been planted, survival would have been greater and more would have returned to spawn. Here's an "if" question, but one worth considering for the future. If the current experiments to reestablish salmon in the Clearwater succeeded through the planting of eyed eggs in artificial nests, and if passage facilities over high dams can be perfected to insure future runs, why can't all Idaho salmon streams of long ago be restored to their species? It is known that the former distribution of chinook salmon in this state included runs up Rock creek near Twin Falls, and Salmon Falls creek, both of which are now inaccessible to salmon were the Owyhee, Payette, Salmon, Grande Ronde, Clearwater, Bruneau and the Boise. In any case, the Idaho plan for the Clearwater river is to carry the experiment through two full salmon cycles, a matter of eight years. Several basic projects will be underway at the same time. These are: 1. Introduction of spring chinook salmon into the headwaters of the Selway. 2. Introduction of fall chinook sal-

The secret of a happy marriage is simple: just keep on being as polite to each other as you are to your best friends.—Robert Quillen

German Started Montana Business

Hundreds of Montanans have taken to the woods in the last few days, all because of some German troops from the province of Hess.

It all started nearly 200 years ago when the British hired some professional German soldiers to fight against the American Colonies during the Revolution. The Germans started a practice which has helped create a growing business in western Montana—and which brings warmth and pleasure to almost every American home.

The colonist decided they liked the German practice of bringing smaller fir trees inside and decorating them at Christmas time—a practice which was started hundreds of years earlier by the Druids in western Europe.

The idea soon spread through the colonies and, by 1840, to London and Paris. By 1927 the demand for Christmas trees was widespread and Montana cut and shipped a few thousand Douglas fir trees.

Each fall since then the demand for Montana-grown Christmas trees has increased. Carloads of them have been shipped to the East and West Coast and to Hawaii and Cuba; but most of the three to four million trees cut each fall in the Treasure State end up in living rooms in the Midwest.

Montana now supplies about one-half of the nation's Douglas fir trees for Christmas. One authority has estimated that about one-fifth of the Christmas trees harvested in the United States each fall come from Montana. These trees are popular because of their branches, good shape, the climate and soil of northwestern Montana make the Douglas fir trees full and stocky.

The Christmas harvest goes on full swing after the first heavy frost of the fall. By October 10 each year hundreds of Montanans are busy cutting trees, bringing them into central Montana ready for shipment.

In the yards, the trees are graded in keeping with strict standards, baled according to size and the trunks are trimmed for shipment. By December 15 the last of the trees are cut and shipped and the harvest is over for another year.

Most of the trees—about 80 per cent—are cut on farms, ranches and other private land. State owned lands supply about 7 or 8 per cent of Montana's yearly harvest, and federal lands about 10 per cent.

Eureka in the far northwest corner of Montana advertises itself as "the Christmas Tree Capital of the World." The industry is concentrated near Eureka and Rexford, but has spread southward from Lincoln and Flathead counties into Lake, Ravalli, Granite and Silver Bow Counties.

The Kootenai National Forest in northwestern Montana is the big producer of Christmas trees among the national forests in the area. The Kootenai produced 273,420 trees last year more than ten times as many as the next largest producing national forest in the region.

The Christmas tree industry in Montana has been with us for a long time. Christmas trees are produced for years to set up standards to guarantee quality and a good market. In recent years they have succeeded in presenting standards to the Christmas tree buyer.

Deep snows may slow the harvest some years. At other times insects or "blight" will interfere by making some trees unfit for harvest.

Another problem facing the industry is the illegal, fly-by-night tree cutters.

"Production will sag some in the first few months of the year, a trend that is partly seasonal and partly a result of missing stimulants," according to the column. "Christmas business will zip things up this month, of course. It always puts a kick in year-end activity. But the zip won't last and the post-Christmas letdown may be a little more painful than normal."

The article notes that good news for shoppers is the fact that prices are under pressure and competition is feverish in many areas. This is intended to mean that January sales will feature good buys. But the important fact, noted for shoppers, is that prices won't bounce back much.

The levels will remain fairly stable. Capuling all areas of business, the editors foresee:

New products. Many are likely to be introduced before the year is out. In appliances, housewares and even clothing.

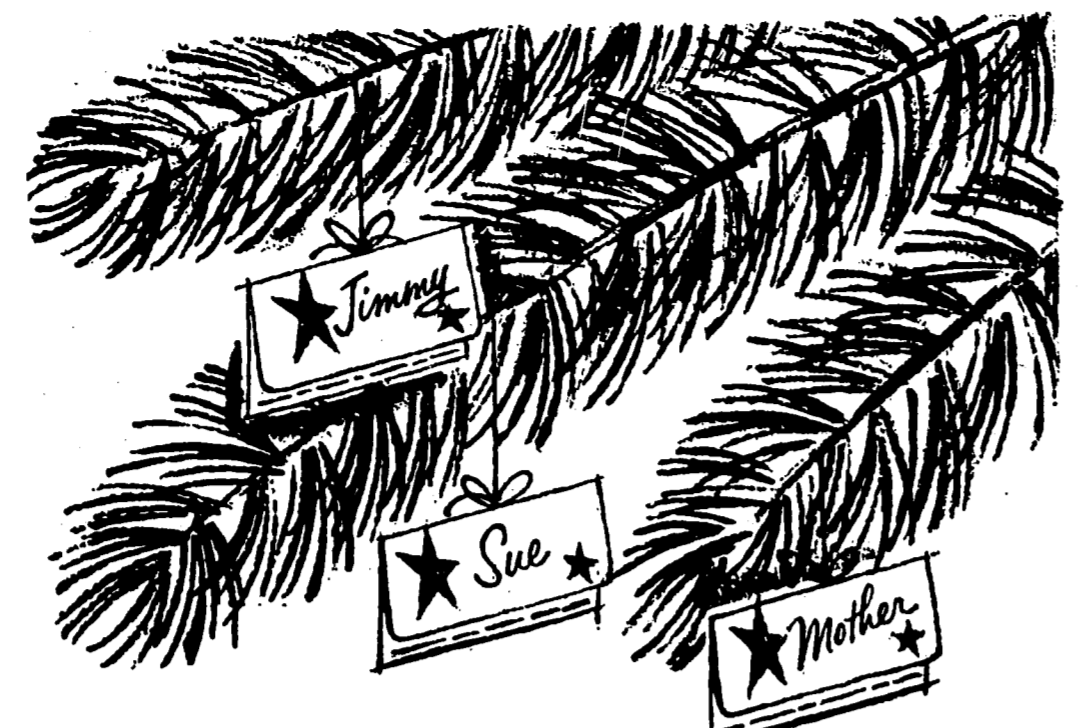

Unemployment. Currently up, but employment is high. The real picture, according to the editors, is that unemployment will go over the 6 per cent mark next year. "The paradoxical picture of high employment at a time of rising unemployment will be one of the first problems to tax the new administration."

Interest rates. Have been dropping slightly in recent months and will continue to go down next year. "This is the best news for buyers of new houses. It will also reduce the cost of financing new cars and other installment purchases."

Construction. "As of now, it looks as if the worrisome slowdown in the home-building will persist, despite easier money." The article predicts that businessmen will pull back on plans for new factories, offices and warehouses, but government construction will expand—a result of stepped-up spending for defense and other federal projects.

Some forest areas and the few regular Christmas tree farms are managed strictly for the small trees that will grow. On other areas, the harvest of Christmas trees is used to improve future stands of saw timber.

Christmas trees have become big business since the German troops from Hess introduced the idea to America. It is big enough business that the U. S. Department of Agriculture and the Forest Service have printed several pamphlets on growing and harvesting Christmas trees.

a Dog's Life

DOG DISTEMPER

By Dr. E. M. Gilford
Directions: The research kennels Many years ago the treatment for distemper was almost as painful as the disease.

When the disease is given a mixture of gunpowder and molasses, or tar was rubbed on his nose so that he'd inhale the fumes. He was at times dunked in a steaming hot bath every few hours to "sweat the poisons out."

Even worse was the early practice of bleeding... cutting the roof of the mouth, the lobes of the ears or tip of the tail to let the "bad blood" out.

Luckily for the dog population of today, we now know a great deal more about distemper than we did ever ten years ago. We know, for example, that it's an airborne, highly contagious disease caused by a virus that attacks puppies more frequently than older dogs, that the germ can be picked up from streets, lamp posts and trees, as well as directly from an infected dog.

We also know that a person nursing a dog with distemper can carry the disease on his clothes and that the home of a sick dog can harbor the germ for several months.

Luckily for the dog population of today, we now have preventive inoculations and serums which, while not perfect, are so close to it that dogs which have been properly immunized seldom get the disease.

It is vitally important that every puppy be immunized, for in spite of better knowledge of the disease, there is no sure cure once it's contracted. Therefore, as soon as a new puppy comes into your home, it is advisable to check with your veterinarian as to proper scheduling of the vaccination "shots."

There are several satisfactory and effective schedules for successful immunization of your dog. Follow your veterinarian's advice.

Feeding Tip: Feed a top quality dog food such as Friskies to ensure complete nutrition and abundant health. Both are essential before satisfactory immunization to distemper is started.

THESE I CAN'T FORGET
A child's cry in the dusk of dawning breaking,

A singing bird, it's little soft throat shaking,

A mother's voice that answers tenderly;

A singing bird, it's little soft throat shaking,

Stampering daisies on the upland lea.

Wild daffodils at Eastertide conveying

Their message of the risen living King Tall silver maples in the soft wind swaying

Budding anew with greening shoots of spring.

December snow along the moorlands lying.

The low-flying storm cloud on the mountain yet, cold in the air, Canadian hawkers in formation flying.

THESE I CAN'T FORGET. —Bert Gamble

Report from the GOVERNOR

"A Hot Wind Blows From Cuba"

Argentina and Brazil between them constitute by far the largest part of South America. This is true in terms of people, productivity and land mass.

Mrs. Smylie and I have just returned from a whirlwind two week tour of the two countries. We were the guests of the government of Argentina and Brazil from the time we left New York until we returned to the United States at New Orleans.

With other Governors we participated with the Argentine people in the celebration of the 150th anniversary of their independence.

Brasilia, new capital of Brazil, in the airplane or high central plain, was the gift of the people of Idaho and as a permanent decoration of the new capital city.

On Thanksgiving Day we took dinner with President and Mrs. Kubrick, new capital of Brazil, in the White House and attended a special Thanksgiving service which the President had asked his Chaplain to conduct for the visiting Governor.

But most importantly, Mrs. Smylie and I met many folks in both Argentina and Brazil who were just plain people. We dined in their homes, took pictures of their children and showed them pictures of our Bill and Steve without any great amount of ceremony.

These two great South American republics are friendly to the United States. They show it by the way the government officials react to North American reports and the affection they show for this northern republic by the warmth of their greeting.

The beauty of these two countries in the late spring is incomparable. We were as far south as San Carlos de Bariloche in Argentina, a ski and summer resort not unlike Sun Valley that is located about as far south as Bonners Ferry is north of the equator. In Rio the jacaranda trees were in bloom and in Buenos Aires our Mar del Plata the mimosa was a fragrance unforgettable.

Sao Paulo is a city of 5 million people; the industrial heart of Brazil. The manufacture of automobiles and nearly everything that you can imagine. They tell me that there are more than two hundred buildings which cover more than 50 stories in the air. I believe this estimate although I didn't count them. The skyline is more impressive than Chicago.

There were a few evidences of dislike for the United States. The Peronista influence still lingers in parts of Argentina and in San Paulo we saw pickets who were carrying signs that said "Viva Cuba" and "Viva Castro". These same signs are repeated many times on walls and fences throughout both countries.

And as you know everywhere in the world today, the Communists, the homegrown ones, as well as the imports from Cuba and Russia, are trying in every possible way to increase this disaffection and bring the existing governments tumbling down to be replaced by semi-satellite governments more to the liking of Moscow and Peking.

It would be unwise for the United States to underestimate the dangerous appeal which Castro and his kind have to many people in South America. While Castro may be accumulating troubles at home, he very obviously has concluded that he must export his revolution and, like any dictator, he already is trying to expand his domain. In doing this it seems to me he is the subservient agent of the Russian and Red Chinese regimes.

It is a hot wind that blows from Cuba and it reaches into the remotest corners of South America. As usual, the reasons are economic. The average per capita incomes of South Americans is less than $300 compared with our $1,000.

Hardship Extent Varies When Drivers Lose Privileges

Three contrasting hardship cases recently came to the attention of the Department of Law Enforcement.

In the first case, a driver's license was suspended for 30 days after he was convicted of reckless driving. During the period he was "grounded" the former driver underwent severe hardships by being deprived of his car to take him to and from a supervisory job where 38 people were employed. The vehicle was a vital part of the supervisor's equipment to keep operations going.

It was necessary for this man to pay one of his other employees an extra $200 a month to drive his car to and from the various operations of his business.

The driver who was originally cited for reckless driving and ultimately convicted of speeding—the fourth conviction—attained 100 demerit points under the Driver Improvement Law and had his operator's license suspended for one month, the period of time necessary for his "points" to drop below the 100 mark during a consecutive 12-month period.

He too, appealed on the basis of hardship. He had to use a bus for 30 days instead of driving his car and the bus fare was expensive.

Beer is an important part of the Idaho grocer's sales; over $11 1/4 million in annual volume. This is a big contribution to the retail grocery business which now employs nearly 4000 people in Idaho with an annual payroll in excess of $10.4 million. Of added importance to Idaho's economy is the nearly $3.5 million paid annually by the Brewing Industry in Idaho to local, state and federal governments in taxes and license fees; indeed a fair share in support of the Gem State.

As the crowded elevator descended, greying Mrs. Jones became increasingly furious with her husband, who was delighted to be pressed against a gorgeous blonde.

As the elevator stopped at the main floor, the blonde suddenly whirled, slapped Mr. Jones and said: "That will teach you to pinch."

Bewildered, Mr. Jones was halfway to the parking lot with his wife when he choked: "I didn't pinch that girl."

"Of course you didn't," said his wife consolingly. "I did."

"If you had your life to live over," the prominent octogenarian was asked by reporters, "do you think you'd make the same mistakes again."
"Certainly," said the old man, smiling reminiscently, "but I'd start sooner."

HUGE NEW GRAIN ELEVATOR FOR NORTH PACIFIC GRAIN GROWERS

A $3,200,000 bushel grain elevator and loading dock, one of the largest on the Columbia River, will be built at Port of Kalama, Washington and leased to North Pacific Grain Growers, Inc. Construction contract has been awarded to Max J. Kuncy Company and E. R. Haynes Company of Spokane. Work is under way and the approximately $6 million installation as the most modern on the Pacific Coast. It will be ready for operation by fall, 1961.

A $3.2 million dollar contract for construction of a 3,200,000 bushel grain elevator and loading dock for North Pacific Grain Growers at the Port of Kalama on the Columbia was awarded this week to Max J. Kuncy Co. and E. R. Haynes Co. of Spokane. Previous engineer estimates were as high as $4.5 million. The site of the new NPGG facility is 2 1/2 miles south of the town of Kalama, Washington.

W. A. Richards, General Manager of NPGG stated that "We believe this will be the most modern grain terminal in the West."
The elevator and dock were designed by Marshall, Barr and Associates, consulting engineers of Seattle, to fit the requirements of NPGG, after Dick Richards of North Pacific and Ed Hedrickson of the Port of Kalama agreed upon the site and a general plan.
The plant will consist of 138 concrete storage bins, 146 feet high and capable of holding a total of 2,395,580 bushels; a head house standing 245 feet high, holding 204,000 bushels; 8 steel tanks holding a total of 390,000 bushels; and a 750 ft. long dock with a loading gallery. Barges will be berthed on the shore side of the dock, which will be built far enough out into the river to admit barges between tides and the shore.

The loading gallery will be equipped with seven spouts so large ships, larger than any which now carry grain, can be loaded without shifting positions to get under the spouts. This will greatly speed up loading operations.
The head house will be equipped with four sets of scales, one for weighing bag loads, one for rail cars or trucks and two for weighing grain moved to ships. Rail cars will be spotted and unloaded in seven minutes.
Genesee Union is a member of the NPGG, an Elvon Hampton is a board member.

ter in the second quarter but was still trailing 17-13 at the half time mark.
Culdesac's offense started to slip during the third period and the Bulldogs finally pulled away at 17-11 and then again at 23-23. Genesee pushed into the lead for the first time in the game in this frame when Stewart Sprenger connected with the jumper shot that made the score 25-23. Genesee held this lead at the quarter's end.
The game was close all during the final period of play and was tied on several occasions. Free throws, which were to dominate the overtime period, also counted for many points in the last quarter.

HUNTER SAFETY TRAINING LOWERS ACCIDENT TOLL

Although the statewide hunter safety course on proper gun handling methods, now in its fourth year under the sponsorship of the Idaho Fish and Game department and sportsmen's groups, is no ironclad guarantee that a person never will be involved in a gun accident—it does help.

This is the opinion of Director Ross Leonard, and it is buttressed by the following facts: Since the beginning of the gun safety program in the public schools back in 1956, about 60,000 junior high school students have received the training. More than 4,000 additional students are getting the instruction this year.

Leonard says the voluntary statewide program to teach safe gun handling habits was adopted under the auspices of the National Rifle Association. Idaho, along with 15 other states, authorized the voluntary system, while others legislated mandatory training for everyone before hunting licenses are issued.

The course includes basic gun handling techniques, with some shooting at indoor targets, as well as indoctrination in natural resources conservation and Idaho wildlife concepts. Some local programs include range firing with 22 caliber rifles where sportsmen are cooperating.

According to Leonard, evaluation of the program is like "weighing a ton of feathers when about half of them are floating through air—but it does save lives."

What is the value of human life? He says that, while economic values cannot be used as a guide, the average earning power for a man between 35 and 65 years is $130,000, according to actuarial tables, and the average cost of a fatal accident is $10,000. Courts have awarded well over $100,000 for accidental deaths.

We had dinner with the President in the dining-drawing room of the new Palace. It is serious that President Kubitschek is proud of his achievement in building this new Capital. It has certainly focused the attention of the country and the world on the interior of Brazil and it has made Brasilia's newest achievement an international show place.

It may well be that the dream of the old Emperor, Dom Pedro the First, will come true. Brasilia may well be a new, bright and enduring flame of freedom in the heart of South America.

The twenty-eight Governors have planned the state tree of each of the American States along "Embassy Row" where the new headquarters of the United States and Great Britain are already building. By happy coincidence, these trees take up nearly all of the available area and will stand alone in this part of Brasilia as an enduring monument to the friendship of the peoples of the United States and Brazil.

The government offices can be found at what is called the Square of the Three Powers. The Brazilian Senate is shaped like a giant pleasure dome. The lower House resembles an over-turned soup bowl and the twin Congressional offices go into the air for nearly forty stories of glass and stone. The architecture of this great House of the Congress is dramatic, indeed.

On the other side of the square are rising the glass and marble palaces of the Courts and the Presidency. On the avenue leading to the square you will find the twelve story ministry buildings which will ultimately number twenty-four and the twenty-two story building of the Bank of Brazil.

CHANGES IN SOCIAL SECURITY ACT EFFECTIVE NOVEMBER 1

The provision in the Social Security Act regarding how earnings affect social security benefit payments has been changed. W. V. Nussbaum, Manager of the Lewiston office of the Social Security Administration, announced this week.

He stated that these changes, effective for 1961, will enable most beneficiaries to earn more in a given year without risking as large a loss of benefits as is the case in 1960. Specifically, he said the new rule will still permit a beneficiary to earn $1200 in a year without loss of any benefit, and if he earns between $1200 and $1500 a year, his yearly benefit will be reduced, not by a loss of a specified number of months' benefits, but rather by a dollar amount. This dollar amount of reduction is figured by deducting the total of the yearly benefit by one-half of the amount earned above $1200 and below $1500. Thus, a beneficiary earning $1500 has his yearly amount reduced by $150, or one-half of the $300 over the $1200 he earned. In other words, for each $200 earned over $1200 but under $1500, the benefit is reduced $100. The benefit is reduced dollar for dollar for all earnings over $1500.

He gave an example of how this new law differs from the old. If a beneficiary entitled to $100 a month with a wife entitled to $50 a month went back to work and earned $1800, he would have forfeited eight months of the year totaling $1800 would be reduced by $450; $150 representing one-half his earnings between $1200 and $1500, and $300 representing his earnings over $1500. The family would be paid $1350 in benefits for that year.

Under the law in existence before 1961, that beneficiary and his wife would have received eight monthly checks, or $1200, and would have been paid $600. The new law will, in this case, increase the family's income by $750.

He also said that the new law continues to authorize payment of benefits for a specific month if less than $100 is earned in that month, regardless of the amount of total earnings for the year. This provision will become increasingly important. The new law also continues the provision exempting any beneficiary aged 72 or over from the earnings test.

Mr. Nussbaum stated that he realizes the complexity of this rule and urges any beneficiary working, or intending to return to work, to contact his office at 113 Main Street, Lewiston, for a more detailed explanation.

Trumpeter Swan Comeback America's Largest Waterfowl

The majestic trumpeter swan that long was feared headed for extinction, is on the comeback trail thanks to complete protection from hunters in this and other states. Other protected species of waterfowl in Idaho include Ross's goose, brant, redhead and canvasback ducks.

A recent aerial census counted 576 trumpeter swans at their centers of abundance in Idaho, Wyoming and Montana. Many of these spend the winters on open waters in the Island Park region of eastern Idaho. There were fewer than 100 trumpeter swans in the United States, outside of Alaska, in the early 1930's when it was believed the species would go the way of the passenger pigeon and other extinct birds.

The University of Idaho college of agriculture has recently published a report on the use of stilbistol in rations to fatten steers.

CHRISTIAN SERVICE CHURCH SERVICE

The spiritual basis of true supply and abundance will be set forth at Christian Service services Sunday in the Lesson-Song and on the subject, "God the Preserver of Man."

Matthew's account of Christ Jesus feeding of the five thousand men with five loaves and two fishes (Chap. 14) will be included in the Scriptural selections.

One of the correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy states (206:15) "In the scientific relation of God to man, we find that whatever blesses one blesses all, as Jesus showed with the loaves and the fishes—Spirit, not matter, being the source of supply."

From James (1:17) the following will be read: "Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning."

Snow Deep On Moscow Mountain

The mid-December snow survey, taken by the Soil Conservation Service, on Saturday, Dec. 19 show the snow pack on Moscow Mountain snow courses to be slightly greater than two weeks ago and considerably greater than a year ago.

Moscow Mountain snow course has 22.8 inches of snow and 5.7 inches of water, as compared to 8 inches of snow, and 0.9 inches of water at this time last year. East Twin snow course has 15.4 inches of snow containing 4.4 inches of water as compared to 5 inches of snow and 0.6 inches of water at the same time last year. The other courses on Moscow Mountain also have nearly 3 times as much snow as a year ago, and at the time of the survey snow was falling. The 1957 snow readings was slightly under those made this year.

The snow survey is conducted through the cooperative efforts of Mr. W. V. Nusbbaum, director of the University of Idaho Engineering Experiment Station; the Soil Conservation Service, and the Latah Soil Conservation District supervisors, greatlyvaon,too

PROGRAM BEGINS TO RESTORE CLEARWATER RIVER SYSTEM

Fish and Game Director Ross Leonard said this week that small-scale efforts to re-introduce chinook salmon into the Clearwater river system demonstrate that spawning runs for the future can be started now.

He explained that back in 1947, some 15,000 hatchery-reared fingerlings were stocked in the North Fork of the Clearwater, and that six of these returned from the ocean as three-year-olds in August of 1950.

Continuing experiments planted the fingerling into the river system each year from 1948 through 1954.

"Although only 523 chinook salmon have been counted entering the Clearwater river at the Lewiston dam since 1950," Leonard said, "it does indicate that chinook runs can be re-established in that drainage system. Department biologists believe that a major weakness in the earlier experiments was the relatively small number of fish per planting. If more fish had been used, survival would have been greater and more adult fish eventually would have returned to the Clearwater river."

Leonard said that the new experiments will place eyed salmon eggs in man-made spawning beds in numbers expected to reach two million by spring.

The experiments will be carried through two full salmon cycles, a matter of eight years. Four basic projects will be underway at the same time. These are: (1) Planting spring Chinook salmon eggs in the Selway river; (2) Fall chinook eggs in the lower Selway and Middle Fork of the Clearwater; (3) steelhead above the power dam near Koozika; and (4) development of more efficient means of planting eyed eggs.

HERD MUST FIT RANGE, GAME DIRECTOR SAYS

Fish and Game Director Ross Leonard said this week that the "bottle-neck" in expanding Idaho big game herds to even greater numbers than ever before is the amount of winter forage available to these animals around the state.

"The amount of spring-summer-fall range available to big game animals generally exceeds the amount of winter range by several times in areas—and in par acre production of palatable, nutritious feed," Leonard explained.

"There often just isn't enough forage to go around. Some die, the very old, the young, the sick and the halt. That's nature, the facts of wildlife," He added.

Game management workers therefore have been advocating vigorous hunting of big game herds—and of the "extra" deer bonus to get gun pressure in areas that have been underharvested.

It's timely salvage to have hunters harvest surplus animals in the fall rather than have nature do the job through malnutrition and disease," Leonard stressed.

Artificial feeding of wildlife creatures has been an instinctive human urge down through the centuries, albeit expensive and futile. Marco Polo reported that fact when he returned from his travels across Asia. In Cathay, for example, he found on Kubla Khan's hunting preserves large food patches and a well-developed system of winter feeding and cover control. Because of prohibitive costs only a minimum of such work can be done in an area the size of a state.

During the more or less open winters the state has had over the past few years, big game animals have been more scattered and, except for the poorest ranges, forage has not been a serious problem. However, under-weight deer have come from the poorer ranges while deer from the heavily hunted ranges have shown the best weights year after year.

Vast Waterfowl Management Program Operates Under International Treaties

By Jim Humbird
Idaho Fish and Game Department waterfowlers mostly are interested in what they personally can get in the way of shooting from a local hunting area, caring little about the exhaustive year-round study and the field investigations extending all the way from northern South America to the Arctic.

It's the same with big game hunters and scattergunners. But sound management of wildlife resources nevertheless demands the use of facts to regulate controllable factors, whether dealing with big game, upland birds or waterfowl.

Such facts are not easy to come by, especially in the case of waterfowl, a group of species which are migratory in habit.

The mass yearly movement of the ducks across Idaho this fall shows a 23 per cent overall increase over 1959, according to counts from nine migratory waterfowl concentration points around the state as of December 3. The numbers change from day to day and are reported on the basis of actual tallies every week.

Sometimes thousands move out of a concentration area and cannot be found for days or weeks until they turn up in essentially the same numbers at another point. Late in October for example, 200,000 ducks were at the Minidoka refuge one day, gone the next. About two weeks later, the bulk of them settled on the waters of Deer Flat refuge in southwestern Idaho. Between times they loafed along the downstream rivers and duck shooting was outstanding.

Anyone who ever has looked at some of the factual background now available from banding studies and observation of the seasonal flight patterns knows that the migrations follow fairly well defined paths from breeding grounds in the north to wintering areas. These facts have resulted in the recognition of general "flyways", and management now is carried out on the basis of these administrative units.

The Pacific flyway, in which Idahoans primarily are interested, reaches from Alaska to South America. Its boundaries roughly are defined by the Pacific ocean and the continental divide. In brief, this includes Alaska, the Canadian provinces of British Columbia, Alberta, Yukon, a portion of Mackenzie district and the American states lying on the west slope of the Rockies. South of the Mexican border the flyway narrows and sharp divisions between the boundaries of the four flyways become obscure. For administrative purposes, only lower California and the west coast of Mexico lie within the Pacific flyway.

These congressional acts establish federal responsibility and authority to manage and protect migratory waterfowl. These are (1) The Migratory Bird Treaty act, which implements agreements with Great Britain and Mexico for the protection of the waterfowl in the United States, Canada and Mexico; (2) The Migratory Bird Conservation act, which establishes a system of national migratory bird sanctuaries; and (3) The Migratory Bird Hunting Stamp act, which requires all persons over 16 years of age to carry currently validated "duck stamps" costing $3.

The federal-state regulations that govern the hunting of waterfowl each year do not just appear as the result of a wish or a prayer. Accurate information on annual production, population trends and kill statistics must be obtained. The information goes back to the breeding grounds and are available for the upcoming nesting season? How many were raised last year? How many killed? How many birds were contributed from each of the far-flung breeding-nesting spots?

Birds alive at the end of next January 8, the close of the present Idaho hunting season, will represent the highest possible capital breeding stock available to begin the next season.

Therefore the winter survey, a cooperative project by the states, provinces and federal governments of Canada and the United States, is a combined aerial-ground count of the waterfowl in early January. The survey, of course, is to determine waterfowl trends in all of the important wintering areas of the continent. The states and the Fish and Wildlife Service cover the important areas in this country, and the federal facilities are used annually to fly survey routes in Mexico. Periodically, key areas in the West Indies are covered, and this winter, the coverage will be extended through Central America and into northern South America. In Idaho the West Indies are covered, and this 1954 to 1959 has averaged 455,000 birds. The January 1960 total of 549, was 21 per cent above average and 10 per cent below the record high count of 1959.

Experimental breeding ground surveys began in 1947 in the main "duck factory" of the Canadian polecat country because it was known that the winter census provided only a measure of the relative size of the population available for nesting. Since an average fall flight of most waterfowl species contains more young birds than adults, and since a failure in production can change the size of the fall flights markedly, the winter survey does not provide a reliable forecast as to what the hunting population will be the next fall. The experiment proved valuable in measuring the actual production changes and, in 1951, the breeding ground survey became a regular waterfowl management tool.

The planes, each carrying a pilot-observer and observer, fly the same straight line transects during each breeding ground survey, flying at an altitude of about 100 feet. Dictating machines are used to record numbers. In addition to those made by state-federal professional workers, Ducks Unlimited and several other private agencies and agencies conduct waterfowl production surveys as parts of their service programs. In their operations on the northern prairies, field men of the FWS, the Canadian Wildlife Service and DU work in close cooperation.

QUESTIONS
In addition to paying me cash wages, the farmer I work for furnishes me room and board. Can the value of this room and board be counted as wages toward social security?

ANSWERS
No. If you work on a farm, only wages paid in cash can be counted for social security credits.

Some farmers' income tax returns are due February 15, 1961, others on April 15, 1961. No matter what date they are due you must make a return if you clear $400 from your farm operation in 1960. This report will give you valuable social security credits. They are due you must make a return for your retirement.

STATISTICS' EFFECT LIMITED TO DESIRE FOR BETTER TRAFFIC

Cliche about statistics are as numerous as the figures they represent. It is true that anything can be proved with statistics simply by the omission of a few of the accurate figures. For that reason, the Traffic Safety prefers to call the long list of numbers "facts" and qualify each of them by referring to what they designate as facts rather than any coined terms.

Because Idaho's traffic figures represent about one half of one per cent of the nation's total, ratios and variations in the state's traffic statistics can be changed drastically by one accident. Since efforts are being made to determine factors which might cause wrecks, dogmatic assertions must be entirely avoided.

An example of sudden changes in the traffic pattern can be noted for the first nine months of 1960. During that period there were 1,256 more highway crashes than there were during the same nine months in 1959, but there were 391 fewer injured persons and only one more fatality.

That made Idaho's traffic situation look good. Knowing that a sudden change in any one of a dozen or more factors could smear the beautiful picture, there were no rash assertions that "the traffic problem is under control."

The sudden change came in October when accidents, personal injuries and fatalities were heavier than October, 1959. Fatalities shot up to the highest single month record in four years.

When this one month's statistics were added to those of the first nine months and compared with the previous, the picture was terrible.

What caused the sudden change? Theories might be gleaned from such "factors" as people, weather, road conditions, economic conditions and even the election campaign.

People are the deciding factor. They can do more than the statutes, law enforcement and statisticians to improve the record. Until there is evidence of public determination to solve the traffic problem, the patterns represented by undesirable statistics will fluctuate from month to month and from year to year and the figures will continue to become larger.

Hen Shooting Success

Hunting pressure on hens the last two days of the 30-day pheasant season in 17 southern Idaho counties was light, according to checking station reports. Actually it was about one-third as heavy as opening weekend, and the harvest of hens also was light. There were about as many roosters in the bag as hens, with the ratio being 1.1 hens per rooster.

The purpose of the first limited hen hunt in recent years was to begin harvesting a portion of the hen surplus which is otherwise lost to natural mortality during winter months.

In the Magic Valley area, hunting success was 0.5 birds per hunter—about half as good as opening weekend on pheasants for that area. In southwest Idaho, hunting success was about 75 per cent as good as opening weekend, with hunters averaging 0.9 birds each.

Many hunters reported that hens appeared to be almost as wary as cocks. There was general enthusiasm for the hen-in-the-bag innovation. Since about one-half the pheasants taken on the closing weekend were hens, the net result of the limited hen hunt was to considerably enhance the otherwise poor hunting success that usually is experienced on the final weekend of pheasant hunting.

October Arrest High

Fines levied against game law violators for the month of October totaled better than $6,800, half of which remains in the 35 counties where the convictions were obtained. Albany, there have been 930 violations of all types from the beginning of this year through October, as compared to 983 for the first ten months of 1959. There were only nine large fines ranging from $300 for killing big horn sheep downward to $100 levies. More than 100 violations were charged to the improper tagging or validating of big game tags. Cards Report Killed

More than 35,000 hunter report cards returned to the Boise office by Thanksgiving eve show almost 18,000 deer kills, 5,190 elk, 871 goat, 56 big horn sheep, 671 mountain goat and 39 moose.

Hunter cooperation in returning the cards is outstanding and deeply appreciated. By November 17 last year, about 30,000 hunter report cards had been returned, and only about 20 thousand on the comparable date for 1958.

Now that most big game seasons have ended, we urge that all cards not yet returned be mailed at once, even in cases where they must report a blank for the season.

These hunter report cards provide information which is vital to game management planning and can be obtained in no other way. It is important to the program that as large a return as possible be obtained each year.

Fines Exceed $4,000

November arrests totalled 156 cases and fines aggregated $4,224.50, one half of which remains in the 33 counties where the violations of fish and game laws occurred. Seven persons were cited to court for shooting from or across roads.

There were fewer convictions, however, than for the same time a year ago, when there were 272. The decline is attributed to the fact that hunters followed big game tag validation requirements more closely.

600 Students Write Essays

Six Idaho students from junior and senior high schools will be awarded top cash prizes as winners of the current wildlife essay contest during the 25th Wildlife Week, March 15 to 25—the first week of spring. Under the sponsorship of the Idaho Wildlife Federation, the essay contest drew entries from 31 junior and senior high schools, with more than 600 entries receiving community consideration.

Gov. Robert E. Smylie and mayors around the state are expected to issue proclamations relative to the observance.

1961 Licenses Mailed

Sportsmen wanting to get off to an early start with their hunting and fishing ventures must have licenses for the New Year. Some 34,415 of them were mailed to qualified vendors last week. While 1961 licenses are required, the federal 'duck stamp' remains valid throughout the remainder of the current migratory waterfowl season ending January 8. Except for ducks and geese, the toothsome cottontail rabbit presents the only legal game target. That season ends February 28.

Report from the GOVERNOR

"A King Is Born"

The Christmas story as St. Luke told it is a beautiful and poetic account of the single most important event in the history of the Christian world.

"And it came to pass in those days, that there went out a decree from Caesar Augustus, that all the world should be taxed.

"And this taxing was first made when Cyrenus was governor of Syria.

"And all went to be taxed, every one into his own city.

"And Joseph also went up from Galilee, out of the city of Nazareth, into Judaea, unto the city of David, which is called Bethlehem; (because he was of the house and lineage of David);

To be taxed with Mary his espoused wife, being great with child.

"And so it was, that while they were there, the days were accomplished that she should be delivered.

"And she brought forth her first-born son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger; because there was no room for them in the inn.

"And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over the flock by night.

"And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round them: and they were sore afraid.

"And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people.

"For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord.

"And this shall be a sign unto you; Ye shall see the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger.

"And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying, 'Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.'

"And the bells of Christmas ring out this joyous message for the nineteenth hundred and sixtieth time Mrs. Smylie and the boys join with me in the prayer that the good Lord will bless and keep Idaho and her people on Christmas night and throughout the year.

A VISION OF THE FIRST CHRISTMAS

Let's venture out this Christmas night.

Lift up our hearts toward heaven - and then, As we proceed 'neath crisp starlight, Assemble by the crib of Bethlehem.

Mid-creative beasts unsheltered there In a crude unholy stable, we see Joseph shielding, with loving care, Christ Child in Mary's Mother on bended knee.

The shepherds, too, tending their flocks, Alerted by a sign conveyed to them, Made their way from hills strewn with rocks To adore the Holy Babe, King of Kings.

The Magi's star-sign in the East Was an omen to inspire all men. So let us proceed to this day in glorious peace, God sent His Son to man's redemption.

The Three Kings braved the trekless waste To bring their gifts to Puer Jesu - So let us proceed to this day in haste, In contrite heart, our pledge of love renew.

In song we'll raise our voice in praise Rejoicing - with choirs of angels sing "Gloria In Excelsis Deo" Hosanna in highest to our new-born King.

Home Cooking

Your recipes for this week came from the files of Mrs. R. J. Fredrickson of Medford, Wisconsin. She says, "because I enjoy the recipes from week to week in the News, I would like to share 2 of my favorites with your readers. Thank you Mrs. Fredrickson, and I'm sure our readers appreciate your thoughtfulness and will enjoy trying your recipes."

Cub News The Cub Scouts of Den 3 held their Christmas party Monday after school at the home of Den Mother, Mrs. LeRoy Hanson. A short business meeting was conducted, then the boys wrapped their Christmas gifts they had made. A gift exchange was also held. Mrs. Wayne Hampton served refreshments, using the Christmas theme in her place settings.

Precious winter woollens can be kept moth-and-odor free if they are wrapped in plastic and stored in an electric home freezer during summer months.

HOLIDAY ENTERTAINING MEANS PLANNING AHEAD

When you plan ahead you enjoy holiday entertaining more. Start with a little list of things to do and supplies to buy, suggests Ruth Shane, county home agent. The reminder is supported by Barbara Brantthover, nutritionist of the University of Idaho extension service.

If conditions permit they suggest serving foods that can be prepared before the occasion. There are many refreshment possibilities that make use of your freezer or can be made at least a day or two ahead. The fewer last minute tasks, the more fun for the hostess.

Buffet style serving does well for family large groups. If your guests will be eating from their laps, choose hot-dish foods. There are no set rules as to what kinds of food to serve, buffet or otherwise. Sometimes a switch from the "always sweet" routine is refreshing before serving.

When it comes to stuffing the turkey the tasks of preparing the feast need not mean a worn-out homemaker. Just because a turkey shouldn't be stuffed the day before doesn't mean that everything has to be done at the last minute. Several things can be prepared in advance.

For instance, you can prepare, measure and cover the dry ingredients. Cut day-old bread into cubes and toast if necessary. Measure dry seasoning, wrap together in waxed paper and store at room temperature. Clean chop, cover and refrigerate vegetables or fruit. Prepare, measure, and refrigerate liquid and perishable ingredients. Combine all the materials on the morning of the dinner and stuff the bird. The turkey can be all ready waiting in the refrigerator. Time and effort are reduced by doing some of the work before the rush.

Guaranteed by Uncle Sam:

A retirement plan that will return $1.93 for every $1.00 you put in

Would you like to be sure that every dollar you put aside for retirement will pay you $1.93 later on? It can be done, and here's an example: Buy a $100 Savings Bond (for $75) each month for 17 years and 9 months. (This is exactly ten years longer than the official maturity period for Bonds, and means extra interest earnings.) At the end of that time, you can cash in a Bond every month for the next 17 years and 9 months, and each one of them will pay you $145.

This works out to $1.93 for every $1.00 you put in Bonds—and please note—the $75 figure is only an example. You can put as little or as much as you like into this retirement plan. See the chart.

SOME ADVANTAGES YOU MIGHT THINK ABOUT You can save automatically with the Payroll Savings Plan. Tell your company how much to set aside from your pay for Bonds. This way you won't forget to save and your savings will add up automatically.

You now get 3 1/4% interest, at maturity. This new rate, which went into effect June 1, 1959, makes your Bond money grow faster. Series E Bonds now mature 14 months earlier than before—in just 7 years, 9 months. Bonds bought before June 1, 1959, earn more, too—an extra 1/4% from then to maturity.

You can get your money, with interest, any time you want it. Bonds are a ready reserve that you can cash any time at any bank. But it pays to keep them.

You save more than money. You help save the peace with every Bond you buy. Peace costs money—money for science, education, military strength. And the money you save helps keep our nation's economy strong.

Pick the amount you would like to receive each month for 17 1/2 years

	$36 ²⁵	$72 ⁵⁰	$145 ⁰⁰	$290 ⁰⁰	$725 ⁰⁰
You save each month for 17 years, 9 months	18 ⁷⁵	37 ⁵⁰	75 ⁰⁰	150 ⁰⁰	375 ⁰⁰
At maturity, 7 years, 9 months from issue date, each bond will be worth	25 ⁰⁰	50 ⁰⁰	100 ⁰⁰	200 ⁰⁰	500 ⁰⁰
You collect each month for 17 years, 9 months	36 ²⁵	72 ⁵⁰	145 ⁰⁰	290 ⁰⁰	725 ⁰⁰

Tables based on assumption that 3-1/4% rate will be in effect 17 years 9 months from original purchase date of each Bond.

Former Residents Write Yule Letter

W. D. Riddle, former Genesee teacher, sends holiday greetings to their many friends in Genesee. The Riddles reside in Mead, Washington.

Dear Friends: Merry Christmas to one and all. Hearing from so many of our friends is one of the pleasures of the season. We have had a good year and many pleasant adventures with our growing family. As some of you know, I and Bob have a new daughter, Dixie Adell, born July 2nd. Lowell and Diane have a son, Michael Lowell, born November 19th. With these additions there are thirteen grandchildren in our family.

Early in February, we spent a few days in Yakima where Dixie attended the State Agricultural Stabilization Convention, and Gerry visited with friends. In March we traveled to St. Paul to attend the Farmers Union Central Exchange Convention. An added pleasure of the trip was seeing so many friends and relatives along the way.

Many visitors came home during the year. Our friends came from South Dakota. We introduced them to several parts of Washington, as well as Canada by way of Nelson and Trail. According to Fritz, they are used to "living on the level" in South Dakota and our hills seem to upset their equilibrium. We hope that many of you will find your way to "Riddle Retreat" in the near future. We enjoy these visits.

Another highlight of the summer was the Riddle family reunion at Elokka Lake where the F. B. Riddle's live. During the summer Gerry kept her self in "teaching form" by assisting with Bible School for two weeks. Four young Riddles helped her keep things lively there. One of them, in explaining what she had learned said, "Jesus said, 'Let the children come to Me.' Let us in the summer sit the girls - granddaughters and nieces spend a week at the farm. Other children came for a day at a time with the peak reaching fifteen. It is difficult to say whether the child is 'teaching form' or 'teaching form'."

W. W. P. Pays Taxes

Well, it's that time of year again when the tax collector comes knocking. Mr. Theriault will be reminding people of the fact that the first payment of their 1960 property tax bill is due and payable.

The county's "taxes collected" total will take a big jump on December 20 when the Washington Water Power Company delivers a check for $58,856.77 to the treasurer's office for payment of its first-half tax bill.

According to Robert T. Paine, WWP district manager, the utility's total 1960 Latah County tax bill is $117,711.52. The company's taxes have increased more than $16,000 or 16 per cent, over last year and have almost doubled in the last two years.

Washington Water Power pays property taxes in nine Idaho counties. Its first-half tax payments will total $796,824 and its total Idaho property tax bill for the year 1960 will be $1,593,628.

With one of WWP's largest hydroelectric projects, Cabinet Gorge dam, located within its boundaries, Bonanza County will be the recipient of the company's largest single Idaho tax payment with $283,286 in first-half payments and $566,570. Other first-half payments by WWP will be as follows: Clearwater county, $24,609 ($49,019); Idaho county, $83,336; Latah county, $140,004 ($280,008); Nez Perce, $138,213, ($276,426); and Shoshone County, $76,299 ($152,598).

It seemed that our first night at the Rest House was destined to hold a bit of excitement for us. The boys were securely tucked under their mosquito nets when Curtis let out a cry of alarm. "Tarantula, tarantula!" There he was, the ugly, long-legged hairy creature, carefully crawling down the wall next to his bed. Paul was soon armed with newspaper and flashlight and came down with a resounding blow. It is definitely best to hunt before the spider has had time to view the bed. The beds were held to the center of the room and every foot searched. Finally we found it covering its front legs in the bag raised to attack. So once more with mighty Casey at the bat—but that's a humiliating story! Suffice it to say he had a full inning ball game with that tarantula before he hit a scoring run! Then as if in protest a half hour but swung out from somewhere and started making near misses at us. We all finally fled to our nets.

We are looking forward to arriving at our assignment in the Northern Region of Nigeria. Paul will be Medical Director of a two-doctor hospital. It is especially thankful for the second doctor as heretofore it has only had one on its staff. This is the same hospital Paul relieved for three months during our first term in Liberia. It is definitely best to hunt before the spider has had time to view the bed. The beds were held to the center of the room and every foot searched. Finally we found it covering its front legs in the bag raised to attack. So once more with mighty Casey at the bat—but that's a humiliating story! Suffice it to say

A Subscription To The Genesee News Is A Good Investment. Children or Gerry enjoyed the "girls' camp" more - and Dixie didn't suffer too much.

In partnership with the two boys, Dixie has an acre and a half of land about 750 acres, producing hay, grain and cattle. This year, because of a wet spring and a hot, dry summer - together with root-rot and leaf rust - crops were not as good as we expected. However, wheat averaged 40-45 bushels per acre. Oats and barley averaged about one ton per acre, and hay about three tons. Plowing, planting, harvesting and marketing kept us busy most of the time. In winter we are kept busy feeding and caring for the cattle and selling hay. As are most farmers, we are feeling the effect of the farm "cost-price squeeze." We hope that within the year or so the farm picture will be brighter.

For recreation, we have taken up bowling and are quite enthusiastic about it. Our average is about 200 (combined, that is). At "extra circular" activities, Dixie serves as County ASC Committeeman, Inland Farm Board and Church Board. Gerry keeps busy with community, church and extension club work. Now, we've told you about us. How about you?

Merry Christmas and a very Happy New Year to you all!

Dixie and Gerry Riddle

CHRISTMAS GREETINGS

Mall Cards Early

Avoid the holiday season postal rush. Mail those hunter report cards now, postage free, and they won't be mislaid or deluged under a flood of Christmas mail. Getting them into the hands of game biologists early also will amount to a gift to them because of the analytical study of agent information begins early in January.

Early next year, a game harvest questionnaire will be mailed to about five per cent of hunting license holders to obtain information about the hunting of deer, elk, bear, game birds and waterfowl. This is not to be confused with hunter report cards being supplied more readily by the hunter report cards and checking stations.

Mr. Lester Thompson's Cub Scout Den met at her home Wednesday after school for their Christmas party and gift exchange. The boys also played games and sang Christmas carols. No meeting until January 4.

Driving Habits Always Change In December

Motorists' driving habits change drastically in December as do economies, social activities and the weather. For several years records have shown that accidents are more numerous during the twelfth month. Personal injury figures are among the highest of the year, but fatalities are usually "below average". December 1959, was an exception when traffic deaths totaled 25 in with June for the high death month. December's unpredictable patterns might be attributed to vastly different weather and road conditions from one year to another and to the day-to-day changes that might bring unexpected ice and snow coverings. Urban travel almost always increases as shoppers join the ranks of gift buyers who crowd the towns and shopping centers. A larger percentage of accident reports of previous year for December list inattention as a contributing factor in accidents and indicate motorists were window shopping while driving, fighting a foggy windshield or caught in abnormally heavy traffic jams. Reports of pedestrian casualties show that many failed to pay attention to the already distracted motorists. The Christmas season, when motorists are traditionally centered on children, also brings into focus the far-reaching effects of the year's traffic accidents which reach into hundreds of homes. During the first 11 months of this year 48 children under 19 years old were killed in Idaho traffic crashes, an estimated 750 others in the same age group suffered severe injuries—

Report Shows Efficiency Of Winter Tires, Chains

A University of Wisconsin researcher who has conducted winter driving tests on Wisconsin's ice and snow for the past dozen years has revealed that some winter tire advertisers occasionally "get carried away" and present misleading information which is unfair to the majority of the companies which stick to factual information. He calls attention to a national safety committee warning that misleading advertising concerning non-skid properties of tires can become an indirect cause of costly traffic tie-ups and painful accidents by leading motorists into taking risks of which they are not fully aware. He is Prof. Archie H. Easton, director of the Motor Vehicle Research Laboratory at the University of Wisconsin, who points to results of comprehensive tests by the National Safety Council's Committee on Winter Driving Hazards. He is chairman of the committee and is described as the outstanding authority on "coefficients of friction as related to winter road surfaces." Prof. Easton's favorite subject, when he isn't teaching his engineering classes at the University, is to talk about the facts of safe winter driving. He points out that during snow months rural traffic death rates are three times higher than in urban areas. Having risked his limbs and life time and time again in winter test driving, Easton can tell about hundreds of test results with all types of vehicles, tire treads and chains to reduce dangers of skidding or stalling. He recommends that all snow-belt drivers, particularly those in rural communities, study the following facts: WINTER STARTING: When it comes to starting and pulling ability on glare ice, snow tires are 28 per cent better than regular tires; regular tire chains are 231 per cent better, while reinforced tire chains are 496 per cent better. On loosely packed snow, the snow tires are 51 per cent better than regular tires, whereas reinforced tire chains provide 313 per cent better traction. STOPPING ABILITY: On glare ice at only 20 mph, braking distances for regular tires average 195 feet. Snow tires take 174 feet, regular tire chains 99 feet, and reinforced tire chains 77 feet. At 20 mph on loosely packed snow, regular tires stopped in 60 feet, snow tires 52 feet, regular tire chains 46 feet, and reinforced tire chains 38 feet.

Question— I'd like to know if it would pay me to pay into social security. I'm 53 years old and a recent widow. I've never worked since I married, but I do have a small income from rentals, stocks, etc. If it's worthwhile, I'd like to start paying premiums into social security so I could receive a payment when I reach retirement age. Answer— Unfortunately, whether it would "pay" someone doesn't enter into social security. First of all—if one is working for wages or is self-employed in a trade covered by the social security law, it is compulsory that one pay into social security—there is no choice in the matter. And, on the other hand, if one's income is not covered by the Law, there is no way that the social security tax may be paid simply to assure a payment at retirement age. In your particular case, the types of income you mention in your letter—rentals, income from stocks—are not considered as earnings from self-employment under the Social Security Law. Therefore, you would not be able to voluntarily contribute to the program. U.S. Savings Bonds — Indestructible in your letter—rentals, income from stocks—are not considered as earnings from self-employment under the Social Security Law. Therefore, you would not be able to voluntarily contribute to the program. Robert J. Strobel M. D. Eye, Ear, Nose & Throat Title Bldg. Ph. TU 2-8011 Moscow

APPRENTICESHIP— AN INVESTMENT IN THE FUTURE

Planned apprenticeship is a geared investment, not only for the employer who is trying to develop a skilled work force, but also for the employee who is trying to gain skills and knowledge with which he hopes to launch a successful career as a craftsman. The establishment of an apprentice system by an employer is the first step in long range manpower planning for the employer who hopes to expand his operations, and at the same time be assured of future skilled manpower. Today, with many new businesses starting, and established firms expanding, it is almost impossible to recruit sufficient skilled manpower which has been trained elsewhere. Apprenticeship provides not only the skilled craftsmen for expanding industries, but it will also provide the best source of supervisory personnel, such as foremen, superintendents, etc. Apprenticeship is profitable from the Labor, the customers served by the company, the industry and the Nation. Information regarding the establishing of an apprentice system, in order to solve present and future skilled manpower problems can be obtained by contacting either the Boise or Pocatello office of the Bureau of Apprenticeship and Training, U. S. Department of Labor. U.S. Savings Bonds — Indestructible in your letter—rentals, income from stocks—are not considered as earnings from self-employment under the Social Security Law. Therefore, you would not be able to voluntarily contribute to the program.

Water Pollution Blamed For East Idaho Fish Kill

FISH AND GAME department men use high-pressure pump to wash out pockets in channel to resemble salmon nests or redds in experimental projects to restore salmon runs to Clearwater river watershed in north Idaho after an absence of many years. Eyed salmon eggs from temporary hatchery will be planted in man-made depressions, then covered with small gravel during incubation period. A bulldozer dug an eight-foot channel across a sandbar in the river system, and an upstream headgate was installed to control water flow during winter months. Then ditches were dug across the artificial channel and the pockets resembling redds were made. The pump shown here simulates the hydraulic action of the female salmon's falling tail as she builds her own nests in nature. Spring freshets will flood the channel next year, washing the hatched fingerlings into the main river to grow and eventually make their way to the ocean. Game department's summary of operations for 1960, a general water quality survey was made during the past year on the more important lakes and reservoirs throughout the state. The purpose was to determine, if possible, whether there is a correlation between productivity, arbitrarily measured by the quantity of plankton present, and the chemical composition of the water. From the analysis, totally dissolved solids appear to be a fairly good index of plankton productivity. Water quality investigations also have been made on the Boise, Snake and Portneuf rivers and Georgetown creek. All were found to be heavily polluted by domestic, industrial and agricultural wastes. The three-year study of the effects of dredging on a trout stream has been completed. Not all of the data was begun. The Public Health service points out that the country as a whole is 30 years behind with sewage and industrial waste treatment construction as related to existing needs. While progress is being made under the federal Water Pollution Control Act (Public Law 660 passed by Congress in 1956), the needs continue to pyramid because of new pollution created by the explosive population increase, an unprecedented farm-to-city movement of people, and mushrooming industrial expansion. Water pollution no longer is considered wholly a public health concern. Rather all uses and users of water are considered. The Water Pollution Control act specifies "the development of comprehensive programs with due regard given to improvements which are necessary to conserve waters for public water supplies, propagation of fish and accurate life and wildlife, recreational purposes, and agriculture, industrial and other legitimate uses." Congress also expressed itself very clearly in the act to recognize, preserve and protect the primary responsibilities and rights of the states in preventing and controlling water pollution" and declared that "nothing in this act shall be construed as impairing or in any manner affecting any rights or jurisdiction of the states with respect to the waters, (including boundary waters) of such states." According to the Idaho Fish and

Raw Fur Market Stays Low

Low raw fur prices dropped the number of Idaho trapper licenses sold to only 667—less than half the state average for the past ten seasons—the Fish and Game department reported this week for the 1959-1960 seasons. The catch of most fur-bearing animals was correspondingly low, according to Director Ross Leonard. He explained that trapping interest centered on beaver during the past three years as this furbearer became available to private trappers on an open season basis for the first time in half a century. "After a record catch of 24,000 pelts during the 1957-58 season, it fell off to the former level of about 8,000 pelts per year in the next two seasons," he added. Beaver damage complaints received by conservation officers during the summer months of this year totalled 291, as compared to 256 for a like period in 1959. Both summers followed trapping seasons of "average" the season is just 15 days in several north-central counties. In setting trapping regulations, the guiding principle is to allow enough activity to harvest the annual surplus without endangering the capacity of the base population of furbearers to produce a similar crop the following season. Using beaver as an example, the 1960-61 regulations permit trapping through a long period from early fall through late spring in much of beaver-abundant eastern Idaho, but the season is just 15 days in several north-central counties.

Tree-Shrub Planting

Department personnel working in cooperation with Soil Conservation districts around the state planted more than 140,000 trees and shrubs this year to give farmers windbreaking hedges, and wildlife food and cover. This brings the total acreage of private farm lands so planted since 1953 to more than 150,200. Prior to the plantings, agreements are signed under which the landowners express willingness to permit a reasonable amount of hunting by permission.

New Licenses Needed

Idaho residents and out-of-state hunters alike must buy 1961 licenses to hunt or fish in this state on or after New Year's Day, although the current federal "duck stamp" may be used until the end of the migratory waterfowl season January 8. For regulation details, please consult the printed materials available through the department or from license vendors. Briefly, eligibility to get resident licenses depends on continuous living in Idaho for at least the past six months. Military personnel permanently stationed in Idaho may purchase resident hunting and fishing licenses without waiting the prescribed six months—but not members of their families. Non-resident children under 14 may fish without a license provided they are with a licensed angler who includes their catches in his bag and possession limits of fish.

Study Forums Slated

The adult education series of five weekly forums, developed last year by Fish and Game department cooperation educators and presented to sportsmen's groups at Marsing, Payette and Emmett, will be continued in several areas of the state this year. The Pocatello began the series this week under the sponsorship of the Southeast Idaho Rod and Gun club, with George Nichols, newly-transferred conservation educator to the eastern Idaho region, spearheading the training sessions. The public is invited to participate.

In all areas, including southwest and northern Idaho, the forum will consist of five weekly sessions covering the field of wildlife management and department policy. Wildlife is one of the state's most important resources, one that can be perpetuated indefinitely only through proper care and management.

Increasing pressures of land use for production and recreation have brought new problems. Modern wildlife management depends on research and study to obtain the facts. Then this information must be applied to present day economic conditions to arrive at the most harmonious and beneficial use of the wildlife resource.

The five-session forums cover such subjects as administrative policy and regulations in wildlife management, the biological base of the resource, and the management of game birds, animals and fish.

Middle Fork Hunting

Late deer and elk hunting will continue in the two deer units of the Middle Fork of the Salmon river through December 15, and management units 33 and 35 will reopen for the second half of a split deer season beginning December 1. This will continue until 1,500 deer have been checked out. These two units are not multiple deer areas and are not open to elk hunting.

55,000 Report Cards

Some 55,000 hunter report cards received by the Idaho department of Fish and Game to date show that more elk were harvested than last year and that hunter success was better even though somewhat fewer deer have been killed. A rate of about 1,800 cards are being received on Mondays, with a daily average ranging between 500 and 1,000 for the rest of the week.

Returns have been heavy from north Idaho since the close of the last big game season in the Panhandle country on December 11. Late hunting is important in that area and card returns are slow until season's end.

Deer harvesting was slow primarily because excellent weather caused the hunters to devote their attention to elk hunting and neglect some of the usual deer shooting—just the reverse of the situation a year ago. The major use of the cards for management purposes is in the analysis of local details. This is done in mid-winter after the bulk of the cards have been received.

Controlled Hunt Winners

Idahoans are drawing all but 3.2 per cent of the controlled hunt permits on moose, elk, antelope, goat and deer. Figures for the 1960 seasons show that there were 8,647 permits for all species, and only 118 went to non-resident hunters.

Non-residents must purchase the $75 out-of-state big game hunting license before participating in any public drawing for controlled hunt permits, and this $75 cannot be refunded.

Waterfowl Inventory Slated

The January mid-winter waterfowl inventory is scheduled to begin immediately following the close of the duck and goose seasons January 8. Since 1954, Idaho has averaged 455,000 migratory waterfowl. The total last year was 549,000 or 21 per cent above average, but 18 per cent below the record count of 1959.

There were 914 geese and 3,400 ducks banded in the state during the year at ten banding stations. This was the second highest goose banding year on record for Idaho. Plastic streamers neck markers were placed on 313 geese banded in the lower Snake river area.

Other phases of the migratory waterfowl management program include goose nesting surveys to establish production trends, duck brood count routes, fall flight censuses at concentration areas, and bag checks during the hunting season.

Report from the GOVERNOR

"ARGENTINA ECONOMY IS PROGRESSING"

The economy of the Argentine Republic was literally bled white during the regime of Juan Domingo Peron. Seven billion dollars in gold reserves were squandered or stolen between the end of World War II and the time when Peron was finally driven from power.

It is amazing therefore, that the economy of the nation has been able to make progress toward stability as rapidly as it has. The nation's export-import balance of payments is out of kilter, but the currency has been stabilized at a reasonably decent rate and commodity prices do not seem too far out of line.

President Peron is something of a political phenomena. He campaigned for election three years ago by openly courting every dissident minority in Argentina, including the Communists and the Peronists. When he came to power he promptly outlawed the Communist party, invited the opposition conservatives into his government and has furnished a relative conservative leadership to Argentina that his headed ever more effectively in the direction of economic stability.

The effect of this leadership on the economy is becoming quite apparent. The peso has ceased fluctuating wildly. Private investment in job producing enterprises is on the increase. Argentina's oil resources are in the process of development and the balance of trade shows promise of being redressed before too very long.

Plans are afoot for a vast hydro-electric irrigation development in the southern desert that would depend on the waters of the Limay and Rio Negro Rivers. The Minister of Interior talks of using programs that will be somewhat like our homestead programs of years ago in an endeavor to get these new lands settled after the project is completed.

Six million of Argentina's 22 million people live in close proximity to the Capital of Buenos Aires. It respects the main governmental problem is "How are you going to get them to back to the farm after they have seen Buenos Aires?"

The most exciting industrial development of recent times in Argentina is the organization called IKA. It is a combination of the U. S. interests and Argentine capital. Shares in the company are being spread pretty widely through the general public. The main item of manufacture is an automobile called the "Caraballo."

Portland and Mrs. Charles Foster of Clarkston were visitors at the Levi Rossebo home.

Christmas day dinner guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Neal Kinyon were Mrs. Viola Scharnhorst, Mr. and Mrs. Bertie Spence and family and Mr. and Mrs. Pete Kinyon and family of Goldendale, Wash.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Hillman and family spent Christmas Day with Mrs. Hillman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Heimgartner on Clarkston Heights. Bill Krause of the Lewiston Orchard was a few days visitor of the Hillman boys.

Mrs. Lilly Larson and Elmo were Christmas Eve guests of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Nordby in Lewiston and Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Arwin Nordby in Moscow.

Miss Ethel Johnson and Bill Posivio were dinner guests Christmas day at the Vernon Peterson home and there has been a change of dates of the Blue Bird Club. Their annual business meeting will be held Jan. 10th at 2 p. m. at the home of Mrs. Henry Flerchinger.

is the same car that Kaiser used to make in the United States under the name "Manhattan." The Willow Run plant was picked up intact and moved to Cordoba, Argentina. Production commenced five years ago and the plant has grown in size, capacity and output every year since then. The backlog of unfilled orders is nearly 150,000.

The company now has a research unit. They have moved into the production of a local version of the Volkswagen and an Italian small car modeled after the Alfa-Romeo that will be called the "Brigantoon." The local managers are mostly United States citizens, but the employment is nearly 90 percent Argentine. They started from scratch and built an automobile for the first time in the history of the country.

There have been some striking changes in Cordoba as a result. A sleepy provincial town has become a bustling industrial metropolis that could be well on its way to becoming the Detroit of Argentina. James McLeod, the manager, told me that when they first started production most of the help came to work on horseback. Two years later they rode bicycles and now the parking lot is filled with motor bikes. Next year he will have to enlarge the automobile parking lot because the number of cars work in the plant are good customers and the level of income has risen to the point that they now buy the product of the business.

The coming of Kaiser foresees the arrival of Willis-Overland. Where there were no major industrial plants now there are a dozen and more are on the way.

The agricultural story in the Argentine is important, too. But we'll wait until later to discuss that. Meanwhile, it can be said that Argentina has been making big strides in reclaiming her economy from the misaim effects of Peronism and that progress in nearly every field is striking.

These are people who are working hard to bring the twentieth century to reality in their own country. They are willing to do at least their share and they are making progress. They need our sympathetic help and understanding and they ought to receive it.

The USS Enterprise, the world's first jet-powered aircraft carrier is 1101 feet in length, 262 feet in extreme width and displaces 85,350 tons making it the largest ship in the world.

Guaranteed by Uncle Sam:

A retirement plan that will return

$1.93 for every $1.00 you put in

Would you like to be sure that every dollar you put aside for retirement will pay you $1.93 later on? It can be done, and here's an example:

Buy a $100 Savings Bond (for $75) each month for 17 years and 9 months. (This is exactly ten years longer than the official maturity period for Bonds, and means extra interest earnings.) At the end of that time, you can cash in a Bond every month for the next 17 years and 9 months, and each one of them will pay you $145.

This works out to $1.93 for every $1.00 you put in Bonds—and please note—the $75 figure is only an example. You can put as little or as much as you like into this retirement plan. See the chart.

SOME ADVANTAGES YOU MIGHT THINK ABOUT

You can save automatically with the Payroll Savings Plan. Tell your company how much to set aside from your pay for Bonds. This way you won't forget to save and your savings will add up automatically.

You now get 3% interest, at maturity. This new rate, which went into effect June 1, 1959, makes your Bond money grow faster. Series E Bonds now mature 14 months earlier than before—in just 7 years, 9 months. Bonds bought before June 1, 1959, earn more, too—an extra ¼% from then to maturity.

You can get your money, with interest, any time you want it. Bonds are a ready reserve that you can cash any time at any bank. But it pays to keep them.

Your money is guaranteed by the U.S. Government. Bonds are an absolutely riskless investment. The Government promises you that the cash value of your Bond will not drop—it can only grow.

Your money can't be lost or stolen. The Treasury will replace your Bonds, free, if anything happens to them.

You save more than money. You help save the peace with every Bond you buy. Peace costs money—money for science, education, military strength. And the money you save helps keep our nation's economy strong.

Pick the amount you would like to receive each month for 17 1/2 years

	$36 ²⁵	$72 ⁵⁰	$145 ⁰⁰	$290 ⁰⁰	$725 ⁰⁰
You save each month for 17 years, 9 months	18 ⁷⁵	37 ⁵⁰	75 ⁰⁰	150 ⁰⁰	375 ⁰⁰
At maturity, 7 years, 9 months from issue date, each bond will worth	25 ⁰⁰	50 ⁰⁰	100 ⁰⁰	200 ⁰⁰	500 ⁰⁰
You collect each month for 17 years, 9 months	36 ²⁵	72 ⁵⁰	145 ⁰⁰	290 ⁰⁰	725 ⁰⁰

Tables based on assumption that 3-1/2% rate will be in effect 17 years 9 months from original purchase date of each Bond.

FORESTERS PROMOTE HOMES FOR WILDLIFE

Definite steps to improve homes for fish and wildlife were made on national forest lands in the Northern Region during the year just ending.

The work included protection of trout streams during road construction, stream improvement, removal of spawning barriers and range and browse studies.

According to Charles L. Tebbe, regional forester, stream improvement work included removal of steelhead spawning barriers on tributaries of the Lochsa and Selway Rivers. He said work to protect badly eroded stream banks was done on the Beaver Head National Forest. This included fencing and the installation of bank protection structures.

"While the stream improvement program is small at present," Tebbe said, "it will be expanded considerably as the money becomes available."

"One of the big jobs the Forest Service is coordinating fish and wildlife needs with the management of timber, rangelands and watersheds," the forester stated. He said that protection of trout streams in road construction had been given special attention during the year, and that a good deal was accomplished. Streams on nearly all of the Region's national forests were involved. Inspections before and during road construction were made to assure that damage to fisheries was kept at a minimum.

Tebbe stated that livestock and game range analysis was emphasized during the past year, with stress on proper use of forage by both livestock and big game. The number of browse transects on important big game ranges was substantially increased during the year. Sportsmen and stockmen were encouraged to take part in the analysis programs.

"On key winter areas, maintaining the supply of browse for game animals is a primary objective," the regional forester said. "Herbicide sprays were used on such a key area last year and before in an experiment to kill back the tops of tall browse plants and cause resprouting at a level which game animals can reach." He added that the 200-acre experiment on the Fish Creek area of the Clearwater National Forest shows promise. "We hope that a suitable technique can be developed so we can do this type of browse regeneration on a wider scale," he said. Tebbe reported that prescribed burning to improve browse for game was attempted on a small scale on the Colville, St. Joe and Nez Perce National Forests.

All Aliens Must Register Before Jan. 31

Helena, Montana, R. G. Hoffeller, of the Immigration and Naturalization service reminds all aliens to again report their address during January. Federal law requires aliens to report their addresses every year. Cards on which to report are at every post office and every office of the immigration and naturalization service in the United States. The reports must be submitted during January to one of these offices.

Parents and guardians must submit reports for alien children under 14 years of age. All other aliens must report and sign their own card. Aliens who are sick and not able to get a card for any reason, should have a relative or friend get a card for them to fill out and sign, and return the completed card to the office again. The card should not be mailed in.

Information furnished by aliens on these annual reports to the government is confidential. Willful failure to report before the end of January may lead to serious penalties.

been started on the Ruby River drainage of the Beaverhead National Forest. It will serve as a pilot study area to guide management and rehabilitation on similar land in other parts of the drainage and on similar Forest Service lands.

Tebbe stated that the timing and locating of timber sales where they will produce needed forage is another potential big game management tool that needs further development.

He pointed out that the key to successful wildlife habitat management on national forest is close cooperation with the State Fish and Game Departments which have the responsibility of managing fish and game.

Besides the on-the-ground projects, there are several other items that will serve to improve national forest wildlife habitat, the forester said.

He listed a planned expansion in wildlife habitat research, wildlife habitat improvement that would result from the proposed program for the national forests, and the new national forest multiple use law that gives wildlife a legal as well as an actual place in forest resource management.

Range Conservation Stamp to Be Issued

Conservation leaders here are looking forward to issuance of the world's first range conservation postage stamp by the Post Office Department in Salt Lake City, Utah, Larry Sorensen said this week.

The commemorate 4-cent stamp, printed in 3 colors, will be issued February 2 at the American Society of Range Management's annual meeting at Salt Lake City.

The stamp will go on sale at the post office here on the following day, February 3.

The stamp is in two parts. One part is a reproduction of the famous drawing, "Trail Boss," by Charles Russell, the distinguished artist of western life. The other part shows a modern range conservation scene.

The new stamp, Sorensen said, symbolizes the development of range conservation from the pioneer days of the open range to today's scientific management techniques.

Those who are interested in a "first-day cover," a souvenir envelope can mail addressed envelopes plus a money order or certified check for the number of stamps required to the postmaster at Salt Lake City, Utah, who will place the range conservation stamp on the envelopes, cancel with a special cancellation mark used only on that day and at that place, and mail as addressed anywhere in the country, Larry pointed out.

GOODBYE OLD YEAR

Goodbye old year and may the seeds you planted

Within our hearts bloom on and on and on,

Leaving with us a garden all enchanted,

To blow and burgeon after you have gone.

Leaving with us the blessings to remember

Of daffodils and wind-sweet April rain.

Of happiness like roses in December

To comfort us until you come again.
