

YOU WILL ALSO FIND LUCRETIA ANN IN:

Lucretia Ann on the Oregon Trail

In this story Lucretia Ann crosses the plains with a covered-wagon train. Captured by Indians, she and Dimmis Greensleave undergo a GREAT ADVENTURE.

12mo, cloth bound
Illustrated by Agnes Randall Moore
$2.50

Lucretia Ann in the Golden West

When the Indians attack the tiny settlement in the Golden West, Lucretia Ann and Dimmis rush to the stockade with their families. Surprising enough, it is the two small girls who save the day.

12mo, cloth bound
Illustrated by Agnes Randall Moore
$2.50

The Caxton Printers, Ltd., Caldwell, Idaho

Lucretia Ann on the Sagebrush
Plains

PLOWHEAD

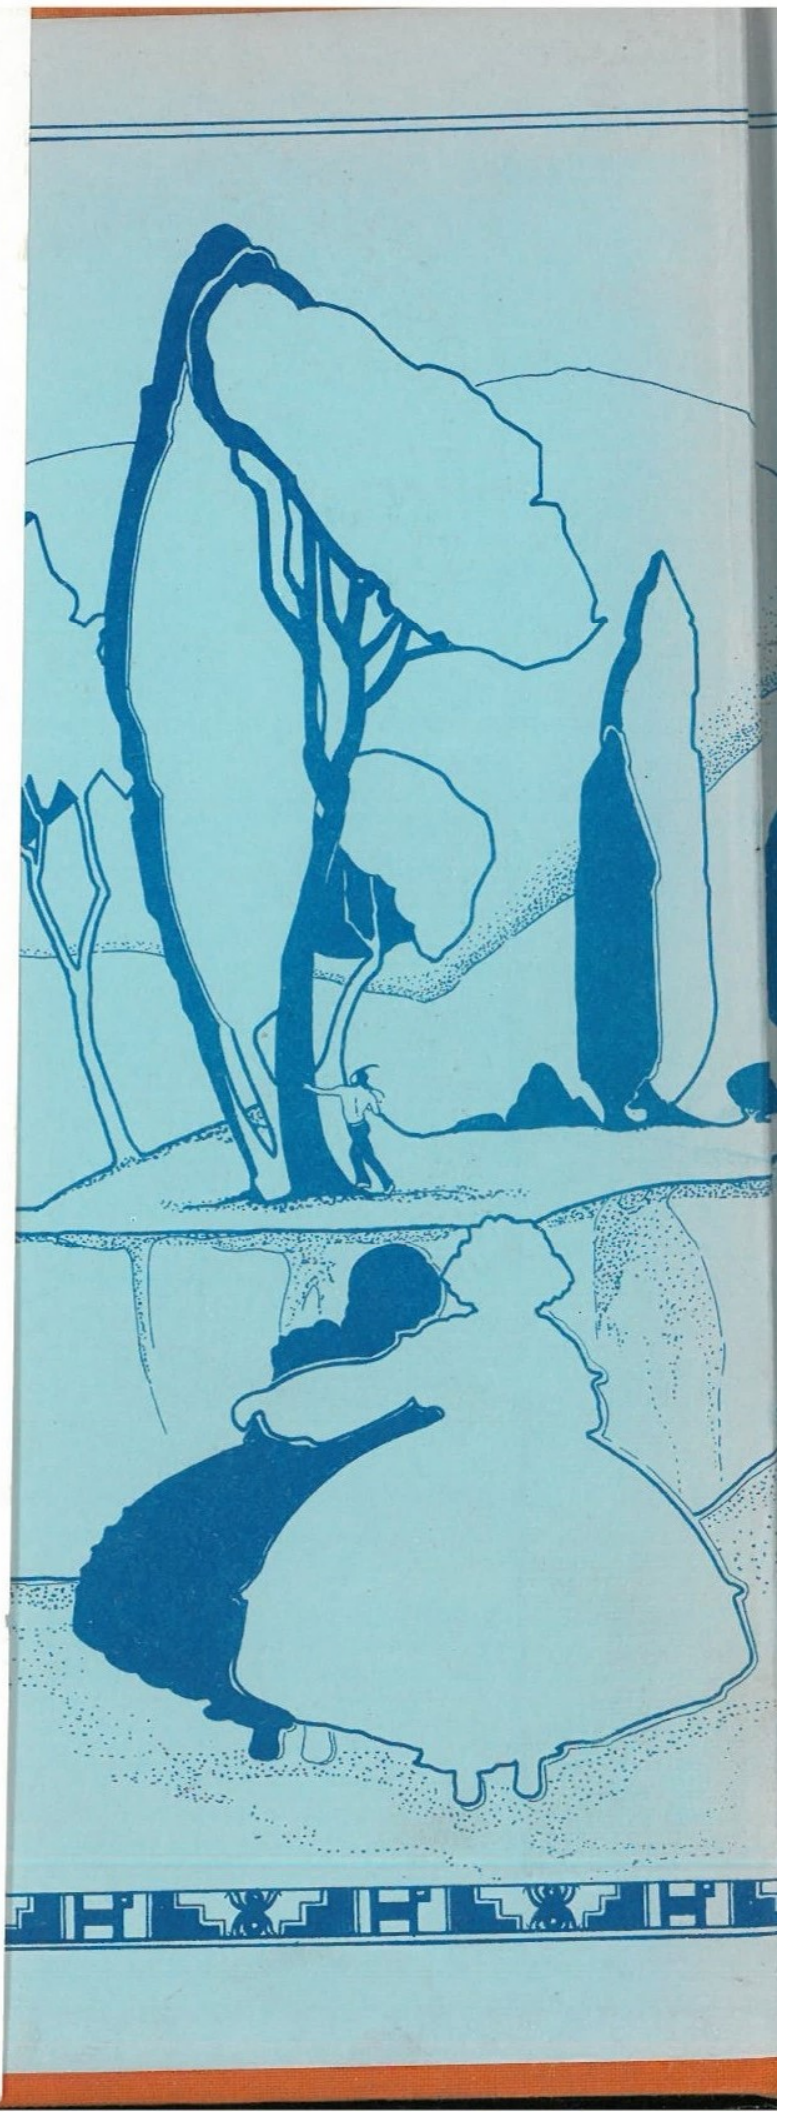

CAXTON

Lucretia Ann on the Sagebrush Plains
RUTH GIPSON PLOWHEAD

$2.50

More exciting than its gold-seekers, its scouts, or its explorers was the Golden West to little Miss Lucretia Ann Prence. A nine-year-old girl on a lonely Idaho homestead of pioneer times finds her days crammed with adventure. First, two half-starved prospectors stumble across her out in the desert, and bring with them presents of nuggets, two comical burros, Plutarch and Daniel Webster, and news of a great gold discovery. Little Miss Lucretia Ann finds herself in the midst of a gold rush, participating in the excitement in a generous-hearted manner—and in a very very secret way that brings to her the realization of one of her most cherished dreams. The book is illustrated by Agnes Randall Moore.

Ruth Gipson Plowhead, in adding Lucretia Ann on the Sagebrush Plains to the "Lucretia Ann" series, brings us again a story that will delight child readers—and give them a vivid sense of the early West. Much of the experience of Lucretia Ann and Dimmis Greenleave has been the experience of Ruth Gipson Plowhead herself. Coming to the West as a young girl, she listened to the stories of the older settlers and dreamed that like Jo in Little Women she would write someday. The West was still young enough so that she could see its earlier years distinctly. From her rich background and with an unerring sense of what a child desires in a story, she has created in the "Lucretia Ann" books a series of child classics.

