OOPS: Plant workers at the Moscow wastewater treatment plant had a busy Monday, when a crane tipped over trying to lift a 10-ton dome lid from the plant's secondary digester tank. The lid landed on top of the tank, and on a nearby storage building. Assistant city engineer Dean Weyer (center) is shown here helping employees of Wilbur/Fletcher Inc. of Dayton, Wash. — the crane operators — lift the tank top, which was eventually put on the ground for repairs. No damage estimates are available.
