Hello! Oji-san!

We just received your letter dated Feb. 18, while waiting in line in the mess hall this evening.

I'm sorry that you worried about Jii-san, but now, he is completely well, and walking to work daily. It must have been the cold weather which affected him. About two weeks ago, every one of us got laid up with a cold.

Mama was first to get a sore throat, next Jumi-chan, then I got sick, but mine wasn't a cold. I happened to overeat and so my stomach was completely upside down for about two days, a few days later, after I got well, Miyo-chan came down with a cold. Imagine, every one of us had to stay in bed for at least 2 days. But don't worry, Oji-san, we're all well now.

Since a few days were so warm, every one thought Spring was surely coming, but ~~no~~ ^{no},

Old man Winter came around again. Not long ago, we had snow too. Today, it was quite windy, and I noticed that the dust is beginning to blow again.

In winter it's mud, in summer, it's dust. Either way is bad.

Recently, a contest was held at school to give the school's name, as well as its emblems and colors.

You see, all high schools have these 3 things. So our name is Hunt High School, our emblem, Wolverines, and our colors, Navy Blue and Gold.

Now we even have a school paper which comes out twice a month. By the way, are you still going to school everyday? You are certainly a good composition writer, and your vocabulary has increased by leaps and bounds, hasn't it? In your last letter, you used the word "propensity" which I had never heard before. There, I learned a new word. Soon, you'll be using so many words, which I may not understand, I'll have to have a dictionary in one hand while I hold your letter in the other. (Don't think I'm telling a lie)

Some time ago, you mentioned about Ke-chan being cute now? Well - - she is very, very naughty too.

She's quite spoiled, and whenever she can't have her own way, she jumps up and down and cries.

Once she starts crying, she won't stop but continues to cry for about 15 minutes, unless something stops her before that time.

She's a night owl too, and stays up 'til around 11 o'clock every night. It's a habit. She just won't go to sleep early unless she has a full tummy. If she eats a bowl of soup or something, she gets so full and sleepy, that she crawls into bed herself.

She has finally learned how to count up to ten.

She is quite a happy child, since she's always singing to herself. So far, she has never had to sleep because of a cold or anything. Quite healthy, isn't she?

Lovingly

Yoshiko.

P.S. Please take good care of yourself.
