SUBJECT:   Distinguished Wilderness Resource Lecture

Dear Colleagues:

Dr. John Turner has accepted our invitation to be the next distinguished wilderness resource lecturer, providing that we can reschedule the event to next year, winter or fall. I will proceed to negotiate a new date for the lecture, hopefully next winter.

Dr. Jeff Yeo has begun work as the new Taylor Range resident scientist/manager with the assignment to 1) facilitate wilderness teaching and research at Taylor Ranch by UI faculty and cooperators, 2) oversee maintenance and operation of the Taylor Range Field Station, 3) conduct research, teach and apply for grants. Dr. Yeo will report to FWR Associate Dean for Research Dr. Leon Neuenschwander in our attempt to stimulate research involving Taylor Ranch until we can get funding for the Wilderness Research Center director position. We will schedule a meeting of the WRC advisory committee later this fall or early spring semester so you can meet Dr. Yeo (if you haven't already) and we can all discuss opportunities and directions for wilderness teaching and research.

Thank you.

Sincerely,

John C. Hendee
Dean
